PREFACE.

There exist, at the present day, at least half a hundred works on Arabic Grammar,—composed chiefly in the Latin, French, or German languages. The reader may, then, not unreasonably ask—Why add one more to the number? My answer to this question is, that I believe the subject to be susceptible of a far plainer and more methodical mode of treatment than what I have yet met with in any of the works to which I have just alluded; and this desideratum I have endeavoured to supply, in the following pages, to the best of my ability.

As I lay no claim to originality in this work, with the exception of the first and last Sections, and the general arrangement of the subject throughout, it is but fair that I should name the sources from which I have drawn my materials. These are—1st, Dr. Lumsden's Arabic Grammar, Vol. I. comprising the System of Inflection—(all that has been published). folio. Calc. 1813. pp. 705; and 2nd, De Sacy's Grammaire Arabe, 2nd ed. 2 vols. 8vo. Paris, 1831. pp. 608+697. Both of these Grammars are invaluable as works of reference, but they are utterly unadapted for the use of beginners. Dr. Lumsden's Grammar, so far as it extends; is copious even to the exhaustion of the subject. De Sacy's is equally copious, but exceedingly defective with regard to methodical arrangement, as I have occasionally pointed out in the following pages. This drawback in De Sacy, however, is in a great measure compensated by the copious Indices given at the end of each of his volumes. Such Arabic Grammars as appeared before the days of Lumsden and De Saey, are of course superseded by those of the latter; and Grammars that have been published since the time of the last-mentioned masters, contain fittle or nothing that is new. I must, however, express my obligations to Rosenmüller's Grammar, 4to. Lipsiæ, 1818, which is a very judicious condensation of De Sacy's first chitton. It has, at the same time, the faults of De Sacy on the score of arrangement; and besides, it abounds in errors of the press; still, with all its defects, it is the only work of the kind that I could have hitherto conscientiously recommended to my pupils when commencing the study of Arabic.

In compiling the following Grammar, I have, upon the whole, adopted the same scale, with regard to copiousness, as that used by Rosenmüller; my object, like that of the latter, being to give the student a fair condensation of all that is important in De Sacy's and Lumsden's works. In the disposal of my materials I have ventured to differ entirely from my predecessors, as may be seen by a glance PREFACE. VII at my Table of Contents. I hold, that in works of this nature, methodical arrangement is of very great importance in assisting the student's memory. Nor is this object difficult of attainment; all that a writer has to do, is to discuss plainly and concisely every part of the subject under treatment, at the right time and in the proper place.

As the following work is intended for the use of selfinstructing students of the Arabic language, a few plain directions for the guidance of all such may not be deemed irrelevant. In the first place, then, I would advise the learner to peruse such parts only of this Grammar as are printed in the larger type, for his elementary study; and I think he may even omit Sections IV. and IX. altogether. After that let him exercise himself in reading and translating the first seven pages of Mr. Schalch's Arabic Selections, 4to. East India College, 1830; or the first Tale in the Chrestomathia Arabica of Kosegarten, 8vo. Lipsice, 1828. Both of these works are furnished with copious vocabularies, and the extracts I have mentioned are pointed in full. Secondly, let him, after that, read over the whole of this Grammar, including of course, all the portions of it printed in smaller type, and marked a, b, etc.; after which let him finish the perusal of the two reading-books above mentioned. This we may call a fair elementary course, or Little-go, in the study of the language; and it has this solid advantage, that it does not encroach very heavily on the learner's finances.

viii Preface.

The preceding economical course will prove highly serviceable to three classes of self-instructing students.—First, To young and middle-aged clergymen, stationed throughout the country, who may wish to acquire a moderate knowledge of Arabic, as a valuable auxiliary to the study of Hebrew; for it is now an acknowledged fact, that a man can no more be a thorough Hebrew scholar without Arabic, than he can be a Latin scholar without Greek. Secondly, To young men preparing for the East India Civil Service, to whom the above course ought to suffice for passing their examination in this country. Thirdly and lastly, To all those who intend to visit any of the extensive regions where the Muḥammadan religion prevails, or wherever the modern Arabic is generally spoken.

The Modern Arabic differs from the Ancient or Classical, chiefly in this, that the former has undergone a process of simplification, such as the rejection of the nunation, and of the final short vowels in general; also the rejection of the dual number both in nouns and verbs. In fact, the Modern is to the Ancient Arabic, what the Greek of the present day is to that of Thucydides. An elementary knowledge of the Classical Arabic will enable a traveller to acquire, with ease, and in a very short time, every dialect of the Modern Tongue spoken between the Atlantic and the Tigris.

For a second and finishing course of reading, let the student procure, in the first place, one or other of the following Dictionaries, viz.—Freytagii (Georgii Wilhelmi) Lexicon PREFACE. ix Arabico-Latinum, præsertim ex Jauharii Fīrusabādīgue et aliorum Arabum operibus desumtum, etc.; accedit Index Vocum Latinarum locupletissimus. 4 vols. 4to. Halis Saxonum, 1830-1838. This is an enlarged and vastly improved edition of the far-famed Arabic Lexicon of Golius, which used to sell for ten guineas. For ordinary purposes, the abridged edition of this work will suffice, viz.—Freytagii (G. W.) Lexicon Arabico-Latinum ex opere suo majore in usum Tironum excerptum. 4to. Halis Saxonum, 1837. By the aid of either of these Lexicons the learner may peruse such of the following works as he may find convenient; viz. - Arabic Reader, 8vo. Calcutta, 1828. Ikhwānu-s-Safā, royal 8vo. 1812. History of Tīmūr, by Ibn 'Arab Shāh, royal 8vo. 1817. Kur, an, Flügel's edition, 4to. no dateabout 1840. Concordantiæ Corani, etc., diligenter disposuit Gustavus Flügel, 4to. Lipsiæ, 1842.

M. De Sacy, viz,—Calila et Dimna en Arabe, 4to. Paris, 1816. Chrestomathie Arabe, three thick volumes 8vo. 2nd edition, Paris, 1826. This last work is invaluable on account of its numerous critical notes, and illustrations of the text. Les Seances de Hariri en Arabe avec un Commentaire, fol. Paris, 1821. To these, again, we may add several valuable works printed at Calcutta in the course of the present century, viz.—Nafhatu-l-Yaman, a Selection of Easy Stories in Prose and Verse from the best Authors. 4to. 1811. Hadīkatu-l-Afrāḥ, A Miscellany, from the Writings of the most distinguished Arabian Poets, Orators, and Historians. Royal 4to. 1813. Alf Lailah, or, Book of the Thousand and One Nights, (Arabian Nights' Entertainment). Edited by Sir W. H. Macnaghten, assisted by learned Moulavies. 4 vols. royal Svo. Calc. 1839-42. This is the most complete edition of the work. The first Fifty Nights have been translated very literally into English by H. Torrens. 8vo. London, 1838. There are two other editions of the Alf Lailah, viz.—Alf Lailah: oder Tausend und eine Nacht, Arabisch, nach eine, Handschrift aus Tunis, herausg. von M. Habicht, 12 vols. 12mo. Breslau, 1825-1843. Also, Alf Lailah, the Būlāķ edition, from different Arabic MSS., very carefully edited by some of the most learned natives of Egypt. 2 vols. 4to. Cairo, 1830. Finally, the learner should add to his Arabian library the Mu'allakāt, with commentary. royal 8vo. Calc. 1823.

To complete his knowledge of Arabic Grammar, the student should procure, if possible, the following works by M. De Sacy, viz.—Grammaire Arabe, two thick volumes 8vo. 1831. Anthologie Grammaticale Arabe, 8vo. 1829. Alfiya, by Ibn Malik, roy. 8vo. 1833. To these he may add—Lumsden's Arabic Grammar, already alluded to; and Lockett's Mi, at 'Āmil, 4to. Calcutta, 1814. The man who has gone through this second course, or even a moiety of it, may be safely left thenceforth to his own guidance.

With regard to the importance of the Arabic language to the Hebrew student, it is sufficient for me to refer him to the following works, viz.—1st. Dissertatio de Origine, etc. Linguæ Arabicæ, ejusque intima Affinitate et Convenientiâ cum Linguâ Hebraicâ, Svo. Edin. 1769, by Dr. James Robertson, of the Edinburgh University, the soundest, if not the only sound, Semitic scholar, that Scotland had till then produced. -2nd. Clavis dialecti Arabica, etc. sm. 4to. Lugduni Batavorum, 1733, by Albert Schultens. The most complete work of this nature, however, is the Origines Hebreæ, by Albert Schultens. Folio, Lugd. Batt. 1761, pp. 648, cum Indicibus. All of these are first-rate works on this particular subject; and they ought long ago to have been translated into our own vernacular, if, in our country, Semitic studies had met with that attention which their importance demands. As a valuable guide in this department I would strongly recommend the Arabic Grammar recently published by my friend William Wright, Esq., of the British Museum, formerly Professor of Arabic in the University of Dublin. 2 vols. 8vo. Leipzig and London, 1859 and 1862.

To the general scholar, the Arabic language recommends itself as the vehicle of science and civilization, between the brilliant æra of Grecian literature, and the not less brilliant dawn of the Reformation in modern Europe. This has been so well expressed by an old and esteemed pupil of mine, H. B. Beresford, Esq., late of the Bengal Civil Service, that I cannot here do better than reproduce his very words. Mr. Beresford, in the preface to a translation by him of a work on Arabic Syntax, entitled, Hidāyatu-n-Naḥwi, Svo. London, 1843, says,—"In whatever point of view we regard the xii Preface.

Arabic Language, whether as the language of a people who in the Middle Ages contributed so materially to the literature and refinement of Europe, or as the language of a religion which numbers upwards of 100,000,000 followers, and at the present day affects greater numbers of mankind than Christianity itself; or whether it be regarded as the medium for communicating sound European knowledge to the whole body of the learned Muhammadans of India, and as one of the inexhaustible fountains for enriching some of the Indian vernaculars, so as to render them competent vehicles of European science and literature to the great mass of the Muhammadan population throughout British India; under all the above, and various other points of view, Arabic may be said to be an object of deep and peculiar interest."

In conclusion, I have to acknowledge my deep obligations to my friends, Professor Francis Johnson, late of Haileybury College, Herts; and Dr. Charles Rieu, of the British Museum, Professor of Arabic in University College, London. The kindness shewn to me by these gentlemen in perusing and correcting the sheets of this work as they passed through the press, is more than I can ever adequately repay.

ARABIC GRAMMAR.

SECTION I.

Of the Letters and Symbols used in Writing.

1. The Arabs, like the ancient Phænicians, the Jews and Samaritans, write and read their letters from right to left; hence their books begin at what we should call the end. The Arabic Alphabet* consists of twenty-eight letters, all of which are considered as consonants. Most of these assume different forms (some three, and a few others four), according as they are situated at the commencement, middle, or end of a combined group of letters, as may be seen in the following Table, Column V. Thus, in a combination of three or more letters, the first of the group, on the right-hand side, will have the form marked Initial; the letter or letters between the first and last will have the form marked Medial; and the last, on the left, will have the Final form. Observe, also, that in this Table, Column I. contains the names of the letters in the Arabic character; II. the same in the Roman character; III. the detached form of the letters, which should be learned first; and IV. the corresponding English letters.

^{*} The Alphabet here described is used, generally speaking, by all those nations who have adopted the religion of Muhammad; viz., the people inhabiting the North-west, the North, and the East of Africa, the Turks, the Arabs, the Persians, the Afghāns, and the Musalmān portion of the people of India and Malacca.

- 2. Besides the foregoing twenty-eight letters there are five additional marks or symbols used in writing, viz. (—), (—), (—), (—), and (—), with which the student may here at once familiarise himself. The first is called Fatha (—) which when placed over a letter indicates the presence of the short vowel a, thus, if alack. 2nd. Kasra (—) placed under a letter and indicating a short i, as in a bihi. 3rd. Damma (—), which when placed over a letter indicates the presence of a short u, as in the word indicates that none of the three short vowels immediately follows; thus, if ard. 5th. Tashdid (—), which when placed over a letter indicates that such letter is doubled, as in the word in harr.
- 3. Perhaps the best mode of learning the Alphabet, is, First, to write out several times the detached or full forms of the letters in Column III. Secondly, to observe what changes (if any) these undergo, when combined in the formation of words, as exhibited in Column V. Lastly, to endeavour to transfer, into their corresponding English letters, the words given as exemplifications in Column VI. These words are three in number, and are to be read, of course, from right to left. They shew at once the various phases assumed by the leading letter, whether initial, medial, or final. At the same time, as an exercise for the student we have given a sprinkling of the five symbols above noticed.

Of the Sounds of the Letters.

4. The following twelve letters require very little notice as their respective sounds are sufficiently represented by the English letters opposite to each in Column IV. The letter b has the sound of our b in "ball;" th, that of our th in "thin;" th, as in "sain," th, as in "river;" th, as in "sain," th, as in "shin;" th, as in "fin;" th, as in "kin;" th, as in "land;" th, as in "man;" th, as in "hand." To these we may add the consonants, and th when beginning a word or syllable; the sound of th we being that of our th in "war," and that of th, our th in "yard." These last, however, when not initial, contribute to the formation of long vowels and diphthongs, of which we shall treat hereafter, in their proper place.

- a. There are some instances in which the letter $\int l\bar{a}m$ of the article $\int l\bar{a}l$, "the," changes its proper sound in accordance with the initial letter of the substantive to which the article is prefixed (See § 46).
- 5. We shall now endeavour to give a concise description of such Arabic letters as have no exact corresponding sound in our own language; premising, at the same time, that it is rather a difficult task to convey in writing, in such cases, a correct idea of the pronunciation of foreign letters. We can only do so approximately, by having recourse to such languages, among our neighbours, as happen to have the requisite sounds. It is highly probable, however, that the majority of students may be unacquainted with the languages employed by us as illustrations: hence, it clearly follows, as a general rule, that the correct sounds of such letters as differ from our own, must be learned by the ear—we may say, by a good ear; and, consequently, a long description is needless. The remark applies in particular to the letters ت, ح, خ, بغ, ف, من, من, د, خ, ع, من , من , ع, ف, and the various sounds assumed by the letter ن.

- 6. At the beginning of a word or syllable, the letter \ alif, like any other consonant, depends for its sound on the accompanying vowel: of itself, it is a very weak aspirate, like our h in the words herb, honour, and hour. It is still more closely identified with the spiritus lenis of the Greek, in such words as ἀπὸ, ἐπὶ, ὀρθός, where the apostrophe (') represents the alif. In fact, when we utter the syllables ab, ib, and ub, there is a slight movement of the muscles of the throat at the commencement of utterance; and the part where that movement takes place, the Oriental grammarians consider to be the makhraj, or "place of utterance" of the consonant \, as in the words \(\tilde{\sigma} \) ib, and \(\tilde{\sigma} \) ub, just the same as the lips form the makhraj of b, in the syllables \(\tilde{\sigma} \) bid, and \(\tilde{\sigma} \) bid, and \(\tilde{\sigma} \) bid, and \(\tilde{\sigma} \) bid. Finally, the \(\) may be considered as the spiritus lenis, or weak aspirate of the letter \(\tilde{\sigma} \).
- a. Strictly speaking, the initial alif in the above examples ought to have been accompanied with the symbol called hamza (See § 35) as well as the essential vowel mark; thus, ab, if ab, if, and if ub. It would be quite preposterous, however, to perplex the student at the present stage of his progress, by carrying along with us this cumbersome and useless symbol. The very best Arabic Grammar in our language, that of Dr. Lumsden, eschews throughout the use of the hamza in combination with the initial alif.
- b. The term makhraj denotes "the place of emission," or "place of utterance" of a syllable consisting of a consonant and a

- vowel. Thus, in the syllable $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $b\ddot{a}$, $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $b\ddot{\imath}$, and $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $b\ddot{\imath}$, or of $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $m\ddot{a}$, $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $m\ddot{\imath}$, and $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $m\ddot{a}$, the place of utterance is between the lips: so the makh-raj of the letters $\dot{\leftarrow}$ $h\bar{a}$, and $\dot{\leftarrow}$ 'ain is in the lower part of the throat, and their true sounds can be acquired only from the mouth of an Arab.
- 7. t. The sound of this letter is softer and more dental than that of the English t. It corresponds with the Sanskrit t; or with the t of the Italians in the words "sotto" and "petto."
- 8. ∴ th is sounded, as has been said § 4, like our th in "thin," or the θ theta of the Greeks; but the natives of Egypt and Syria frequently confound it with the letter ∴ t, just described. The Turks, Persians, and other Musalmān people to the eastward, give it the sound of s. In fact, it would appear that most nations have an aversion to the aspirate th, which to us seems such an easy sound.
- 9. $_{7}$ h is a very strong aspirate, somewhat like our h in the word "haul," but uttered by compressing the lower muscles of the throat. It will be represented in the Roman character by h.
- 10. $\frac{kh}{c}$ has a sound like the ch in the word "loch" as pronounced by the Scotch and Irish; or the final German ch, in the word "buch." It will be represented in the Roman character by kh.
- a. In an Arabic Grammar published at Vienna, in 4to. 1813, by a reverend gentleman named Antonio Aryda, who styles himself "Tripolis Syriæ Archipresbyter," we are told, sensibly enough, that "

 pronunciatur uti χ Græcorum, sen potius veluti Germanicum ch vocalem a subsequens." As if this, however, were not sufficiently explicit, the author adds, "ad amussim congruit cum sono quem, ad spuendum se præparans, elicet; uti chrr"!!!

- 11. ωd has a softer and more dental sound than our d. It corresponds to the Sanskrit ξ , or the d of most European languages except the English.
- 12. i dh is sounded like our soft th in the words "thy" or "thine." In Egypt and Syria it is sometimes sounded like d, and in Turkey, Persia, etc., like z. It bears the same relation to a d, that a th has to a l. In the Roman character we shall uniformly represent it by dh.
- a. It is a curious fact that the Anglo-Saxon Alphabet had two distinct characters corresponding exactly to the 2h and 3h of the Arabs, viz. p tha, and 3ch, respectively, which, it might have been as well if we had still retained.
- s has a stronger or more hissing sound than our s. According to Dr. Launsden it is formed by the tip of the tongue pressed against the upper gums. We represent it in the Roman character by s.
- 14. ϕ d is pronounced by the Arabs like a hard d, by pressing the tongue against the upper teeth on one side of the mouth, generally the left. In the Roman character we use for it d. The Persians, etc., sound it like z.
- 15. L t and L z. These letters are sounded somewhat like and j, or very nearly so. We represent them in the Roman character by t and z respectively.
 - 16. ¿'a, etc. The consonant ¿ has the same relation to the strong aspirate ζ , that I has to s; that is, the ξ , like the I, is a spiritus lenis or weak aspirate; but the makhraj, or place of utterance, of the ξ is lower down in the muscles of the throat than that of the alif. With this distinction, its sound, if we may use the expression, depends as in the case of the letter I, on the accompanying vowel, as in the case of the letter I, on the accompanying vowel, as in the case of the letter I, on the accompanying vowel, as in the case of the letter I, on the accompanying vowel, as in the case of the letter I, on the accompanying vowel, as in the case of the letter I, on the accompanying vowel, as in the case of the letter I, on the mouth of an Arab, are different from in the letter I, and in the mouth of a pative.

The student who has not the advantage of a competent teacher, may treat the ξ as he does the I, until he has the opportunity of learning its true sound by the ear, from the mouth of a native.

- a. Some grammarians have favoured us with descriptions, most amusingly absurd, of this indescribable letter. Meninski says that the sound of it is "instar vocis vituli matrem vocantis." Vriemoet, a Dutch savant, in his Arabic Grammar published at Tranequer, 1733, calls it an "adspiratio fortissima," and represents it by hhh!!! which I suppose means h to the third power. Most grammarians tell us that it is the same as the Hebrew y ain; but then the Hebrew ain itself is a very disputed point, even among the Jews; and most assuredly one of the sounds given to it by the latter, viz. ng, is not that of the Arabs.

r of the French when "grasseyé." We shall represent it in the Roman character by gh.

- 18. ¿ bears some resemblance to our c hard, in the words "calm," "cup;" with this difference, that the ¿ is uttered from the lower muscles of the throat. In the Roman character it will be represented by k.
- 19. ... n. This letter is variously sounded according to circumstances. 1st. When followed by a vowel or a guttural consonant, that is, by 1, 7, 5, 8, 6, or s, it is sounded exactly as in English. 2nd. When followed by any of the بف, ظ, ط, ط, ص, ص, ش, س, ن, ن, د, بث, بث, ف, ف, ف, ف, ف, ف, بث, ف, بث, بثر المراجعة المراجعة المراجعة المراجعة or \subset , it has a nasal sound like that of the French n in the words "entrez," and "rendre." 3rd. When followed by the letter it naturally becomes m, as is the case in Latin and Greek; for example, the word عُنْبر 'anbar, "amber," is pronounced as if written 'ambar; so instead of سن بيّن minbaiti, "from the house," they say mim-baiti. 4th. When the letter u is followed by any of the four liquids r, ر کر ال ال ال ال کر ال ال کر ال ال کر ال ال کر ال ال کر ال and Greek; thus ومن رَقِي min-rabbi, "from my lord," is promin-lailati becomes مِن لَيلَةُ min-lailati becomes مِن لَيلَةُ lailati, etc. Lastly, when a word ending in , n is followed by a word beginning with, w or y, the sound of the x, nis scarcely perceptible, but the, and are doubled, thus min-walidī, "from my father," becomes miwwalidī; so ان يَتَقَدَّم an-yatakaddama becomes ayyatakaddama. When, however, on in the middle of a word is followed by the con-

- sonants و w or ي y it retains its natural sound; as in the words \dot{v} \dot{v} \dot{v} it \dot{v} \dot{v}
- 20. \ddot{s} t. The letter s h, at the end of a word, is frequently marked with two dots above it, in which case it is sounded exactly like the letter \ddot{s} t. It is then what is called a servile letter, and is chiefly used to denote the feminine gender of substantives and adjectives as we shall see hereafter.
- 21. If or I $l\bar{a}$, a peculiar form of $l\bar{a}m$ and alif, is in many grammars stuck in at the end of the table of letters, with a view apparently to puzzle the student. Its purport, I believe, is to shew that the alif is a long \bar{a} or letter of prolongation (see § 27), but then any other consonant followed by alif, such as l, $b\bar{a}$, l $t\bar{a}$, etc., would have answered the purpose equally well; or it may be intended to exhibit the ordinary mode of combining the l and l in writing and printing.

Of the Primitive or Short Vowels-آلکترکات

22. The Primitive Vowels as we briefly noticed in § 2, are three in number, which are indicated by the following simple notation. The first of the primitive vowels is called simple notation. The first of the primitive vowels is called fatha, and is writen thus, (—) over the consonant to which it belongs. Its sound is that of a short a, such as we have in the word "ealamus," which is of Eastern origin, and of which the first two syllables or root, calam or kalam, are thus written, Dr. Lumsden and several eminent Oriental scholars, have considered the fatha as equivalent to our short u in the words "sun" and "summer." We have no hesitation, however, in saying that (in the Arabic language especially) our short u is not generally a true representation of fatha. In pronouncing the short u of sun, the mouth is more shut than in pronouncing the a in the words calamus and calendar; and it so happens, moreover, that the very signification of the term fatha is, "open." In such Arabic words, therefore, as we may have occasion to write in Roman characters, the a unmarked is understood always to represent the vowel fatha, and to have no other sound than that of a in "calamus" or "calendar."

- 23. The second is called kasra Dund; and is thus () written under the consonant to which it belongs. Its sound is generally that of our short i in the words "sin" and "fin," which in Arabic would be written up and up. Occasionally it has a sound like our short in the words "bed" and "fed," which words would be most nearly represented in Arabic as up and up. In general, however, the kasra has the sound of our short i: the unmarked i, therefore, in the course of this work is understood to have the sound of i in "sin" and "fin," in all Oriental words written in the Roman character.
- written over its consonant. Its sound is like that of our short u in the words "bull" and "bush," which in Arabic would be written بُش and "we have its sound also in the words "foot" and "hood," which would be written فت and مثل. Sometimes in the modern Arabic the damma has a sound approaching our short o in the word "solemn;" for example the word "albour," is pronounced shoght instead of shughl. We shall, however, in this work uniformly represent the damma by the unmarked u, which, in all Oriental words in the Roman character, is understood to have the sound of u in "bull" and "bush;" but never that of our u in such words as "usage" and "perfume," or such as our u in "sun" and "fun."

Of Tanwin or Nunation—اَلْتَنْوِينَ.

25. Sometimes the preceding short vowels are, in a peculiar manner, employed for a particular purpose on the last letter of a word, which process is called tanwin or nunation, that is, the use or application of the letter ..., n. The tanwin, which in Arabic grammar serves to mark the inflexions of a noun, is formed by doubling the vowel-point of the last letter, which indicates at once its presence and its sound; the last syllable thus becoming un, in, or an, as in the words بابُّ $b\bar{a}bu\underline{n}$, بابِ $b\bar{a}bi\underline{n}$, بابًا $b\bar{a}ba\underline{n}$. The last form, that of the vowel fatha, requires the letter I, which does not, however, prolong the sound of the final syllable. The 1 is not required when the noun ends with a hamza or the letter s, as شُنَّ shai-an, إن hikmatan; or when the word ends in ي ya, surmounted by I (in which case the I only is pronounced), as مُدىً hudan. As a general rule the termination sedenotes the Nominative case; - the Genitive, Dative, or Ablative; and 1, 5, or \$ the Accusative. In words ending in ¿, surmounted by I, without the tanwin or nunation, the alif is sounded like the alif of prolongation, § 27, as تعالى $ta'\bar{a}l\bar{a}$, غَضْبِيل ' $ukb\bar{a}$, etc. Of this, however, we shall have more to say further on.

a. In some Arabic Grammars recently printed the tunnin is said to be a nasal n! This is simply misleading the learner. The tunnin has precisely the sound of the letter $n\bar{u}n$ when final (See § 19), and is subject to exactly the same modifications as the latter under similar circumstances. In the Roman character we shall represent the $n\bar{u}n$ ation by n.

Of the Symbol F. Juzm, or Amputation.

26. When a consonant is accompanied by one of the three primitive vowels, it is said to be "muluhurrik, that is, moving or moveable by that vowel. Arabian grammarians consider a syllable as a step or move in the formation of a word or sentence; and, in their language, the first letter of a word is always accompanied, or moveable, by a vowel; but with regard to the remaining letters of the word there is no certain rule. When, in the middle or end of a word, a consonant is not accompanied by a vowel, it is said to be sākin, "resting" or "inert;" and the mark (—) called — jazm, which signifies "amputation," is placed over such consonant to shew when this is the case.

a. For example let us take the word Latabtum, "you wrote," or "you have written," the letters kāf and tā are moveable by fatha; the letter bā is sākin or inert; then the following tā is moveable by damma, and the final fetter mīm is inert. In most Arabic Grammars a letter not followed by a vowel is called quiescent: now, I object to the latter term, as it is apt to mislead the beginner, it being already applied in English Grammar in the sense of not sounded. For instance, the letter g is quiescent in the word phlegm; we cannot, however, say that m is quiescent in the same word, though we may say that it is inert. The student will be pleased to bear in mind, then, that in this work a letter is said to be inert when it is not followed by a vowel; when we call it quiescent, we mean that it is not sounded at all.

Of the Symbol Tashdīd—أَلْتُشْدِيدُ

- 27. When a letter is doubled, the mark (=) called tashdīd, which signifies corroboration, is placed over it. Thus, in the word غيدٌ shid-dat, where the first syllable ends with ع d and the next begins with ع d, instead of following the natural mode of writing, as, شدّن , the two dāls are united, and the mark = indicates this union. Hence, whenever we see a letter followed by the same one, we may rest assured that there is a vowel between them; thus the word مَدَد with the tashdīd on the dāl is sounded maddat, but the word مَدَد is promounced madad.
- a. In certain instances the symbol tashdīd is employed for the sake of euphony, when an inert letter is followed by a different letter having a cognate sound, or one which is capable of coalescing with the former, thus مُدَدَتُ is pronounced, not madadtu, but madattu, and written مُدَدَتُ in which case the final عند is marked with the tashdīd to shew that it has coalesced with the preceding a d; so labitta for labithta. In like manner the dofnite article dof, "the," coalesces with the initial letter of the substantive following when it is what is technically called a solar letter, as will be noticed hereafter when we come to treat of the Article. We have already pointed out (§ 19) the changes in sound to which the final n inert is subject, and the same rule applies to the nunation (See § 25). In some instances the final nun is changed into that which follows, as mim-man for min-man; illā for in-lā, etc. It is needless to say that this is a general rule in the composition of words in Latin and Greek.

- 28. The letters 1, 2, and 2, when inert, serve to prolong the preceding vowel, as follows: when linert is preceded by a letter moveable by fatha, the fatha and alif together form a long sound like our a in "war," or an in "haul," which in Arabic might be written in and in "on a similar principle, we may consider the unaspirated h as a letter of prolongation in the German words "wahr" and "zahl." We may also consider the second a as inert in the words "aachen" and "waal."
- 29. When the letter, inert is preceded by a consonant moveable by the vowel damma, the damma and, joined together form a sound like our oo in "tool;" which in Arabic might be written, or, which is the same thing, like our u in "rule," which the Arabs would write be preceded by a consonant moveable by fatha, the fatha and, united will form a diphthong, nearly like our ou in "sound," or ow in "town," but more exactly like au in the German word "kaum," which in Arabic might be written of sound, if the be preceded by the vowel kasra, no union takes place, and the preserves its natural sound as a consonant, as in the word is siwā. In English, the w is a letter of prolongation in many words, as "draw," "crow," etc.; it also contributes to the formation of a diphthong, as in "town," "gown," etc.

- 30. When the letter ω inert is preceded by a consonant moveable by kasra, the kasra and the unite, and form a long vowel, like our ee in "feel," which in Arabic might be written نِيْل ; or, which is the same thing, like our i in "machine," which would be written مشوري. When the letter sinert is preceded by a consonant, moveable by fatha, the fatha and the unite, and form a diphthong, like ai in the german word Kaiser, which in Arabic is written قَبْصَ This sound is really that of our own i in "wise," "size," which we are pleased to call a vowel, but which, in reality, is a diphthong. When the sis preceded by damma, no union takes place, and the e retains its usual sound as a consonant, as in the word مُيَسَّر muyassar. In English the letter y is a letter of prolongation in the words "say" and "key;" it also contributes to the formation of a diphthong in the word "buy," which in Arabic might . بَيْ be written
- a. The three letters of prolongation \, , , and ___, are occasionally liable to certain deviations from the rules above laid down. This subject will be more fully explained hereafter when we come to treat of the permutation of the infirm letters. Suffice it for us to say at present that the letters of prolongation \, , , and __, are said to possess their homogeneous or natural vowels, when fatha is placed over the consonant that precedes \, damma over that which precedes \, and hasra on that which precedes \; when this is not the case, the vowels and letters of prolongation are said to be heterogeneous or dissimilar. When a heterogeneous vowel precedes these letters, the two together either form a diphthong as we have just shown, thus, jauharun, or the last letter may remain silent, as و and مَلُوة salāt; in which two last words the عسلوة are really quiescent or not sounded.

31. It appears then, from what we have stated in the six preceding paragraphs, that the vocal sounds in Arabic are eight in number, viz., 1. three short; 2. the same three long; and 3. two diphthongs, as may be seen in the following table:

1. SHORT.			2. LONG.	3. BEPHTHONG.
			· ·	A married and and
1.	fun fin	foot	full feel fool	file foul
2.	فِن فَن	قُت	فَوْل فَيْل فَأَل	فُول فينُل
3.	fan fin	fut	ful fil ful	fail fail

Here the upper line (1) contains eight English words of common occurrence, the sounds of each of which fairly represent those of the respective Arabic words underneath. The lowest line (3) exhibits the system uniformly adhered to in the course of this work for representing Arabic words in the Roman character.

32. We have now, we trust, fully explained how the vowels are to be represented when they follow an audible consonant, such as the letter if in the foregoing list of words. In order to represent the vowels as initial or commencing a word, it will at once occur to the student that we have merely to annihilate or withdraw the letter if from the above words, leaving everything else as it stands, and the object is effected. This is precisely what we do in reality, though not in appearance. The Arabian grammarians have taken into their heads a most subtle crotehet on this point, which is, that no word or syllable can begin with a vowel.

Therefore, to represent what we call an initial vowel, that is, a vowel commencing a word or syllable, they employ the letter \(\circ alif\) (otherwise called \(hamza\) as a fulcrum for the vowel. We have already stated (\(\Sigma\) 6) that they consider the \(\circ\) as a very weak aspirate or \(spiritus\) lenis; hence its presence supports the above theory, at least to the eye, if not to the ear. In order, then, to exhibit the vowels in the preceding paragraph as initial, we must, after taking away the letter \(\cdot\) f, substitute \(\circ\) in its place, which \(\circ\) being nothing, or very nearly so, the process amounts in reality to the withdrawal of the letter \(\cdot\) f, and the substitution of what may be considered as next to nothing, thus—

	1. short.		2. LONG.			3 diphthong.
1.	un	in	ŏŏt	all	cel	óól	aisle	owl
2.	اَن	إن	اُت	آآل	إيّل	ٱوّل	اَيْل	أول
3.	° an	in	ut	$\bar{a}l$	₹l	al	ail	aul

33. If, instead of 1 in the above series, we substitute the letter ξ , we shall have virtually the same sounds, only that they must be uttered from the lower muscles of the throat, thus—

a. It appears, then, that when in Arabic a word or syllable begins with what we consider to be a vowel, such word or syllable must have the letter \ or \ \nabla \ to \ start \ with. Throughout this work, when we have occasion to write such words in the Roman character, the corresponding place of the z will be indicated by an apostrophe or spiritus lenis; thus, and, all, all, all, all, all, to distinguish the same from all asal, all all, all bad, or bad, that. In other respects the reader may view the l and z in any of the three following lights. Ist. He may consider them of the same value as the spiritus lenis (') in such Greek words as alv, ev, etc. 2ndly. He may consider them as equivalent to the letter h in the English words "hour," "herb," "honour," etc. Lastly. He may consider them as mere pegs whereupon to fix or hang the vowels requisite to the formation of the syllable. Practically speaking, then, I and z when initial, and the , and when not initial, require the beginner's strictest attention, as they all contribute in such cases to the formation of several yocal sounds.

b. In concluding our account of the general pronunciation of the Arabic consonants and vowels we are bound to acknowlege that the rules laid down are merely approximate not absolute. Composed as the language is of the dialects of various tribes, and diffused along with the Muhammadan religion, over so many regions, "omnibus in terris quae sunt a Cladibus usque Clangen et Auroram," through Mauritania, Egypt, Turkey, Persia, India, and other countries in the East, where it forms a principal branch in the education of the higher classes, it can be no wonder if a considerable disagreement should be found in the pronunciation which those nations give, in their respective tongues, to particular letters and combinations; or that an Arab of Yaman should consequently consider as barbarous those modes of pronunciation which prevail at Fez, Cairo, Aleppo, Constantinople, Ispahän, and Delhi. The rules which have been followed in general by European Lexicographers and Translators, are such as have been laid down by old Arabian Grammarians and Scholiasts; from whom, however, it is not easy to form a standard consistent in every point, as they differ in many respects from one another, and often give several opposite pronunciations to the same word, owing to the reasons we have just stated. It must be confessed, at the same time, that both the scholiasts and grammarians have laid down many a puerile and tedious rule, and added much perplexity to a language, not naturally easy, by enlarging on the minute, intricate, and unsatisfactory theory of the moveable powers of vowel points, making trifles serious, embarrassing the learner's mind, and consuming, in pursuit of objects comparatively uninteresting, that time which might be more usefully employed in smoothing the way to the essential difficulties of the study. Out of this mass of pedantry and confusion however it is but fair to state that the eminent Silvestre de Sacy has, in the First Book of his Grammaire Arabe elicited all the light and clearness that the student can desire.

Of the Symbol Madda— $5.

34. Instead of writing two alifs at the beginning of a word, to express the long ā, as in القطر, it is usual, (except in Dictionaries), to write one alif, and according to some grammarians to lay the other curved over the former; thus, I. This symbol (=) is called من madda, "extension," and denotes that the alif is sounded long, like our a in "water." M. de Sacy considers the mark madda as simply the letter mim, (the initial of the word), in a recumbent posture. Either theory is plausible, and after all the matter is of no great importance. The madda, however, is not necessarily confined to the beginning of a word; it occurs both in the middle and end of words in those instances where otherwise two alifs would come together, thus, it is for it is for it is for it is and if it is usual, (except in all it is usual, it is usual, except in and it is usual, it is usual, it is usual, except in all it is usual, it is usual, it is usual, except in all it is usual, i

a. The symbol madda is also inscribed over arithmetical signs, and likewise over certain abbreviations, said to be expressive of some mystery. A single word is represented by the first letter; as وَمَ for "just;" if there are two words, the initial letter of the first and the final of the second are used, وَمَ for عَلَيْهُ السَّلَامُ "Peace be upon him;" if three, the initial of the first, a medial of the second, and the final of the third are generally taken, as مَا اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ اعْلَمُ اللهُ اللهُ

- 35. Among Arabian grammarians the consonant alif is more commonly known by the name of hamza, which denotes "pressure" or "puncture." In books and manuscripts where the vowel-points are employed, the hamza always accompanies the vowel which attends \(\text{, and is thus marked latter, as معلى المناز ا
- a. In the following pages we intend to employ the symbol hamza only in those instances where it is essential, or where its omission would be improper. Such is the plan adopted by Dr. Lumsden in his profound and excellent work.

Of the Symbol Wasla وصل or وصلة

- 36. Wasla (~) implies conjunction, and is only inscribed over \ at the beginning of certain words to denote that such word is united with the preceding one, \ being then silent, as baitu-l-mukaddas, "the holy house;" in which expression the initial alif of the second word is not sounded, or we may say, practically, that it adopts the sound of the vowel terminating the preceding word.
- a. The wasla, as a matter of course, does not occur at the beginning of a sentence or after a pause. In other respects it is always used in the following instances, viz.—1. With the article of "the" (see § 46). 2. With the imperative of the primitive form of the verb. 3. In the preterite active, imperative, and infinitive of derived forms of the verb of the second and third class. 4. In the following ten nouns. ibn or إَبْنَ imrāt, "a woman ;" امْرَاة imrāt, "a woman إبْنَى imrā, "a man إبْنَ "a son ;" اثنان ibnat, "a daughter ;" إثنان ithnān, "two" (masculine) ; ism, "a name;" اسَّتَ الله ithnatan, "two" (feminine); إسَّم jism, "a name;" النَّلَتَان "buttocks;" اَيْمُن aimun, "an oath; "in all which cases, unless when beginning a sentence, or following the article, the initial \ is not pronounced, the subsequent letter being always inert, and united in pronunciation to the vowel with which the preceding word ends, as yad-umrātin, "the hand of a woman;" المواقة even altogether omitted, as حَدَّثَ الْحَارِثُ بَنْ هَمَّامِ Haddatha-l-hārithubnu Hammāmin, "Harith the son of Hammam related." It is also dropped when the subsequent letter has a vowel, as if for it "extend thou." If any word, whose final letter is naturally inert, precedes i, such letter is then pronounced generally with kasra, as ضربت darabat, "she whipped;" ضربت darabati-l-ummu, "the mother whipped." The affixed pronouns and and also the verbal takes fatha. Any of the letters 1, 2, and 2, terminating the preceding word, does not prevent the union, and the nunation is rarely pronounced when wasla follows. The alif of union naturally takes hasra when beginning a sentence, or after the article; excepting in the imperative, which sometimes takes dumma, and in the article, which assumes fatha, as does the single noun wash."

Classification of the Letters.

37. Arabian grammarians arrange the letters under the following heads or classes, viz.—1. Pronunciation.—Six letters are called gulturals, ۱, ح, خ, ف, غ; four labids, ب, ف, ف, ب, ف, ب و; four palatials, ج, ق, ئ, بن , ن , و ight dentals, ت , ن , بن , ن , ان , ل , ظ ,ط ,ط and six linguals, ب , , , , , , , , , ... The dentals and linguals are called solar letters, the rest lunar. Of these more hereafter when we come to treat of the Article. 2. Strength.—The three letters 1, 9, are called infirm or weak, being considered as having no sound but what they receive from the accompanying short vowels either attending themselves or the preceding letters. All others are styled firm or robust.. 3. Affinity.—Some letters are permutable, being such in general as are formed by the same organs, as with ع, which are often بي , و, با which are often substituted one for another. 4. Office.—Some are denominated radical, others servile. The radicals are twenty-one in number, بل رک رق رف رغ رع رظ رط رض رص رش رز رر رق رد رخ رح رج رب رب رب and s. They are so called, because they are never found excepting in the roots or primitive forms of Arabic words. remaining seven are called serviles, because they are employed in forming the derivatives and various inflections resulting The servile letters, however, are often emfrom the roots. ployed as radicals, particularly in the imperfect verbs; but the radicals are never used as serviles, excepting b and s which are sometimes substituted for ... 5. Association.— Some are compatible, which may follow one another in the same radical or primitive word. The others cannot, and are therefore called incompatible. These consist of the gutturals τ , $\dot{\tau}$, $\dot{\varepsilon}$, $\dot{\varepsilon}$, $\dot{\varepsilon}$ (though $\dot{\varepsilon}$ is sometimes subjoined to $\dot{\varepsilon}$); to which add the following, viz., ب with ف and ن with , ف with خ ; ک and ق , م with ج ; ف with ج , and ث , م with خ ; ک ; ل with ر ظ and ط رض رص with ن ; ن with د ; ئ with ق بق ص ; ض with ش ; ض and ص ض ; with س ; ض with ض with ف , and ظ ; ف with d and ظ ; ف with ف and ظ ; ف with ف and ف ; ف with ف and ف ; ف with ف م الم with غ and ق ; ت and ق with و with و with و with و with except ", " by no means," and ", " he manifested."

- a. The infirm letters \, \, \, \, and \, \, \, are often liable to be used for each other, especially in verbs; these permutations being considered as an infirmity or imperfection. In the beginning of a word, however, they usually retain their original sounds already described, except when, by the influence of certain prefixed inseparable particles, they virtually cease to be initial. This, however, we shall more fully discuss hereafter; to treat of the subject, as most grammarians do, at this early stage of the student's progress would be altogether out of place.
- b. The servile letters properly so called, are really seven in number, viz., الم عند , م م م م , م , and عند; these letters and none else are employed in the inflections of nouns and verbs, except that occasionally and b are substituted for ت. They are all included in the word literally "they fatten." We may here observe, in passing, that the final I is not sounded in the third person plural of the preterite and of the aorist; neither is it sounded in the second person plural of the imperative. The four letters عنى بن بن من , and المنابع , included in the word المنابع though reckoned by grammarians as serviles, are merely inseparable particles prefixed to other words; and the s or s is simply a supplementary letter added to the end of words to indicate such words to be of the feminine gender, and as a general rule mere derivatives. In fact the s is equivalent to into which it is frequently changed.

c. The servile letters alluded to in the preceding paragraphs are included as incompatibles only when they constitute part of the root of any word; for when acting as serviles, they may be joined with any letter, as "in silver;" "according to thy statement." These observations may be of some use in manuscripts, where the diacritical points are either neglected, or irregularly placed; as also in fixing ambiguous meanings; and in distinguishing pure Arabic words from such as are either corrupted or derived from foreign sources. For example, the occurrence of the letters, and discompanying each other in the word of Arabian origin.

Of the Various Arabic Handwritings.

38. The oldest Arabic handwriting with which we are at all familiar is, 1st, the Kūfie, though we read of a still more ancient character, called the Himyarie. The Kūfie was used about the time of Muḥammad and during some four centuries after. It is evidently derived from the Syriac Estrangelo, which itself was apparently derived from the ancient Phonician, the source of the Greek alphabet of Cadmus. 2nd. In the second or third centuries after Muhammad, the Kufic alphabet was simplified and rounded into the Naskhī, the form in which we now have it. At the same time it long maintained its ground in the inscriptions on coins, and in the headings of literary compositions. For instance, the author possesses a unique copy of Hakim Sanāvi, written in A.D. 1281, in which all the headings are in the finest Kūfic. In a still more recent work in his possession, the Dīwāni Kātibī transcribed in A.D. 1486, the titles or headings of the various poetical pieces are all in the Kufic character. Of the various handwritings used in the East, however, we may say that the سُخِي Naskhī (of which our extract in the larger type, § 43, of the present work, is a fair imitation), is that in which most Arabic manuscripts, and particularly those of the Kurān, are written. Owing to its round and compact form it is generally used in Europe for printing books in the Arabic, Persian, Turkish, and Hindustani languages. The Ta'līk تعليق, is also a beautiful hand, used chiefly by the Persians in disseminating copies of their more esteemed authors. We occasionally meet with some fine Arabic MSS. written in this hand chiefly transcribed in Persia.

a. There are several other hands more or less used, such as the تُلْثِي Thulthī or تُلْثِي Thulthī, adopted in the titles of books, royal edicts, diplomas, or letters of great men; answering among those nations much the same purpose as capitals amongst us, or the flourished letters in illuminated manuscripts. The Tughrā is another ornamental hand, employed like the Thulthī in expressing the titles of their princes in ceremonial letters and solemn deeds. To these we may add the مغربي Maghribī or Mauritanic, which is used by the Moors of North-western Africa, who are descendants of the Arabians. This hand differs in many respects from those above mentioned, resembling the Kufic more than any of the others. Lastly, the Shikasta or broken hand, which is used in correspondence. It is quite irregular, and unadapted for printing; but not inelegant in appearance when properly written. For a more ample account of this subject, see "Essai de Calligraphie Orientale," in the Appendix to Herbin's "Développements des Principes de la Langue Arabe," 4to. Paris, 1803. Also the 1st volume of de Sacy's "Grammaire Arabe," 2 vols. 8vo., Paris, 1831, in both of which works specimens of the various hands are given.

b. The term Shikasta is generally applied to the cursive or running hand used by the people of Persia and Hindustan; but the Arabs also have their own Shikasta, as well as their co-religionists to the castward, as the student will find to his cost when he comes to decypher ordinary letters on business.

Of the Numerical Value of the Letters.

39. We may here mention that the twenty-eight letters of the Arabic language are also used for the purpose of Numerical computation. The Numerical order of the Letters, however, in this case differs from that given in the Alphabet; being, in fact, the identical arrangement of the Phoenician, the Samaritan, the Syriac, and the Hebrew, so far as their alphabets extend, viz., to the letter ..., 400. The following is the order of the Numerical Alphabet with the corresponding number placed above each letter; the whole being grouped into eight unmeaning words, to serve as a memoria technica.

a. The Arabs of Mauritania arrange their الْبَجَد with the following slight differences, viz., they have مُعْفَض instead of قُرْسَت ; and خُفْف instead of مُطْف . In all other respects the two schemes agree. About or soon after the time of Muḥammad the Arabs received from the Hindūs the decimal scale of numeration, which in time they imported into Europe. The ten figures or cyphers are written from left to right and applied exactly like our own; thus—

For example the Christian year 1862 is INTT; the last half of which corresponds with the Muslim year 1279 as ITV9.

b. The dates of historical events, or the decease of illustrious personages, etc. The plan is to compose a brief sentence or verse of such a nature that the sum of all the letters shall amount to the year of the Higra in which the event took place. In Europe, during the middle ages, when Latin was the language of literature, such memorial verses were common. The Latin, however, laboured under this disadvantage, that its alphabet contained only seven numerical letters, viz., I, V, X, L, C, D, and M; whereas every one of the letters in Arabic counts for something. A curious coincidence of this kind is to be found in a line from Ovid, written more than fifteen centuries before the event to which it is applied, viz.—

"FILIVs ante DIeM patrios, InqVirit in annos."

"The son prematurely makes inquiry into the years of his father." It will be found that the sum of the numerical letters of the above line amount to 1568, the year in which Prince Charles of Spain was put to death, by the command of his stern father. Philip II., for plotting treason and rebellion. The following effusion in commemoration of the restoration of our Second Charles is the latest of the kind with which I am acquainted: "CeDant arMa oLene, paX regna screnat et agros;" where C, D, M, L, and X amount to 1660.

Of the Accent.

- 40. The rules respecting the accent in the Arabic language are much the same as those we apply to the Latin and Greek. In words of two syllables, if both short or both long, the accent is on the first; but if one be short and the other long, the long syllable naturally takes the accent. In words of three or more syllables, if the penult be long, it takes the accent, otherwise the ante-penult syllable takes it. By a long syllable we here mean one which contains a letter of prolongation, i.e., 1, 2, or inert, or a short vowel followed by two consonants of which the first is inert.
- a. The greater part of the words in Arabic generally end in a short vowel, except before a pause (§ 41) as we shall immediately shew; hence as a general rule the accent seldom falls on the very last syllable of a word. Most grammarians, apparently following each other like a string of sheep, tell us that "the accent never falls on the last syllable." The assertion is too sweeping; for example, in the first verse of the Kuran, as I have often heard it read by the Mullas, viz., بسم ٱلله الرَّحَمَن ٱلرَّحِيم bism Illāhi-r-Rahmanı-r-Raḥīm, the accent of the last word raḥīm is most assuredly on the last syllable.

Of the Pause.

- the last of a period, of a phrase, or of a proposition, makes in the manner of reading or pronouncing that word, some alterations necessary to be noticed. In general, when a pause occurs, the vowel or nūnation of the last letter is suppressed; thus, instead of saying مَرْبَدِي زَيْد "Zaid has struck me," and "Zaid has struck me," and "Abd ul Hamīd has come to me," pronouncing in the first example the nūnation of رَيْد "Zaid," and in the second the final Kasrah of العميد, we say only زيد "Zaid," and "al Hamīd." If, however, the nūnation is " as in this example "مُوَدُّ "We have not seen Muḥammad," the of the nūnation is only dropped, and the fatha followed by is preserved, thus
- a. Analogous to the preceding rule there are certain forms of the Aorist and Imperative of verbs, which, under the influence of certain particles, terminate in ... inert, in which case the ... before the pause is withdrawn in pronunciation, and the word is pronounced as if the vowel immediately preceding the ... were followed by its homogeneous letter of prolongation, thus يَكْتَبُوا ; تَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي كُتْبِي أَتْتِبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي ; أَكْتَبِي } أَكْتَبِي أَتَّتِي كُتِبِي أَتَّتِي إِكْتَبِي أَتَّتِي أَتَبِي أَتَّتِي أَتَّتِي أَتَّتِي أَتَّتِي أَتَّتِي أَكْتَبِي أَتَّتِي أَتَتِي أَتَّتِي أَتَبِي أَتَتِي أَتَّتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَّتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتِي أَتَتِي أَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتَتِي أَتَتَتَ
 - 42. Marks or symbols corresponding to our full stops,

- a. Poetic quotations are generally distinguished by having certain words prefixed, as "ich" "poetry," "distich," "hemistich," "hemistich," فتلعة "strophe," etc., the verses being closed by little curve lines resembling inverted commas, &.
- b. In the present work a system of punctuation will be adopted such as I advantageously employed in my Persian and Hindustani publications. The comma and semicolon will be represented by a small dash, thus, —; the full stop by a star, thus, *; and the symbols of interrogation and admiration by those we use in the European languages, as may be seen from the following extract to which is subjoined a transcript in the Roman character. Before trying to decypher the text, however, the student is requested to peruse what we have said on the Article, § 46.
- 43. The following Fable from Lukman, the Oriental Æsop, will serve both as an exercise in reading and as an illustration of our mode of punctuation; also of the system we have adopted for representing the Arabic character in Roman letters. It will at the same time exemplify most of the principles of orthography already discussed.

THE MAN AND THE HOG.

Dans

A man once upon a time was conveying on his quadruped a lamb, a she-goat, and a hog; and he was proceeding towards the city with a view to sell the lot. Now the lamb and the she-goat molested not the quadruped; but the pig constantly resisted, and would not be quiet. Then the man said to him, "O you most vicious of beasts! How comes it that the lamb and the goat are quiet? They give no annoyance; but you neither keep quiet nor take repose." The pig said to him, "I know that the lamb is sought after for its wool, and the goat for her milk; but I, wretched, have neither wool nor milk. On my arrival in the city I shall undoubtedly be sent to the shambles."

a. The learner is particularly requested to study the foregoing Section with the utmost attention before he proceeds further. A thorough knowledge of the elements of the language, which are here, it is to be hoped, fully and clearly explained, will enable him to advance boldly through the rest of the work both with pleasure and with profit.

SECTION II.

OF THE ARTICLE, THE SUBSTANTIVES, NUMERALS, ADJECTIVES, AND PRONOUNS.

- 44. According to the Grammarians of Arabia, as well as those of ancient Greece, there are only Three Parts of Speech—the Noun مرفق Ism, the Verb نعو Fi'l, and the Particle المعارفة ا
- a. We shall hereafter see the propriety of having discussed the Noun and Pronoun, especially the latter, before we come to the Verb. Certainly the verb has no claim in nature to rank as the leading part of speech. The vocabulary of very young children, and of savages, who are little else than in a state of nature, consists entirely of nouns and probably a few particles, in the Oriental sense of the terms. The absurdity of deriving all nouns from verbs is most glaring in the instance of 21 " (lod," said to be derived from 21 "he worshipped or adored"!!! As if the name of God did not exist before the verb " to worship."

45. The Parts of Speech in Arabic, as in English, are nine in number, viz., the Article, the Substantive, the Adjective, the Pronoun, the Verb, the Adverb, the Preposition, the Conjunction, and the Interjection.

. المعرفة - Of the Article

46. The Arabs, like the Greeks, have only the Definite Article Ji al, "the," which, however, is not, as in Greek, liable to any change on account of gender or number. If the substantive to which the article is prefixed happens to article assumes the sound of the initial letter of the noun, which is then marked with lashdid; thus, النُّور "the light," pronounced an-nuru, not al-nuru. But in these instances, although the J has altered its own sound, it must always be written in its own form. Of course, when the noun begins with J, the J of the article coincides with it without alteration, as in the words الليلة al-lailatu, " the night;" and in this latter case the J of the article is sometimes improperly omitted, and the initial lam of the noun marked by tashdid, as all al-lailatu.

- a. The من of the article is always omitted in the masculine singular of the relative pronoun "the (man) who;" the feminine singular of the same إلَّذِي أَنْ the (man) who;" the feminine singular of the same pronoun. When of have in the Dual of the same pronoun. When the particle is prefixed to a noun beginning with it, which, when definite, ought to have the article; the alif of the latter disappears, and in order to avoid the meeting of three lāms, the lām of the article is dispensed with, or, in other words, represented by tashdīd, as اللَّيْلِ for اللَّيْلِ for اللَّيْلِ to or for the night," so, اللَّهُ مِنْ الْمُنَّةُ وَالْمَنَّةُ وَالْمُنَّةُ وَالْمُنَاقُونَ وَالْمُنَاقُونَ وَالْمُنَاقُونَ وَالْمُنَاقُ وَالْمُنْ وَالْمُنَاقُونَ وَالْمُنْ وَالْمُنَاقُ وَالْمُنَاقُ وَالْمُنْ وَا
- b. In the modern dialects of Egypt and Syria the j of the article retains its natural sound before all letters, whether solar or lunar, thus they say الشّعة al-nūr, "the light," (al-shams, "the sun." The fanciful classification of the letters of the alphabet into fourteen solar and as many lunar, arose perhaps from the accidental circumstance that مُعَمَّ "the sun," begins with one of the former class, and "the moon," with one of the latter. Of course the captious critic might find a thousand equally valid reasons for calling them by any other terms, such as "gold" and "silver," "blue" and "black," etc.

Of the Substantive .

47. Arabic Substantives have only two Genders اَجْنَاسُ the Masculine اَلْمُذَكَّرُ , and the Feminine على الْمُونَّثُ. There are also several words of the common gender three Numbers أَحُدُا, the Singular الْفَرَّة, the Dual الْمَدُان, and the Plural الْمَعَالِيّة. They have generally three Cases الله in the singular, and in some of the irregular plurals, viz., the Nominative الْفَعَالِيّة (which also serves for the Dative and Ablative of the Latin by the addition of the particles على , "to," and بين , "from") and the Accusative two cases, or rather only two case terminations in the singular, which we may specify as the Nominative and the Oblique. The Dual, as in Greek, is invariably a Diptote, as we shall see when we come to the Declension. The Vocative case is either the same as the Nominative, or as the Accusative.

Of the Forms and Measures of Nouns.

48. The radical words of the Arabic language generally consist of three letters; a few there are consisting of four, and a still smaller number of five letters. The greater portion of the triliteral roots are Verbs, the rest Substantives or Adjectives. There are a few verbal roots of four letters, but none of five, the latter being all Substantives. The mode adopted for the development of the triliteral roots of the Arabic language is highly ingenious and philosophic. This consists not only in adding terminations to the simple root, but also in expanding it by means of certain letters, either prefixed or inserted somewhere between the beginning and end of a word, so as to produce certain forms, bearing in general a definite relation to the original root; and for that reason they are called servile letters. The letters thus employed are seven in number. These are, as we have already stated, 1, ω (or \ddot{s}), ω , σ , ω , σ , ω , and ω , all contained in the technical word يَتَسَمُّنُوا, literally, "they fatten." The serviles 1 and may occur either at the beginning, or in the interior, or, lastly at the end of a word (s being always found at the end), the and and either in the interior or at the end; the always at the beginning; the, is employed in the interior of a word; and the (always as the second letter of a word, and it is preceded either by for , and followed by ... example, let us take the verbal root قبل, which signifies "accepting;" we thence, by means of the servile I alone, deduce the forms قِبالٌ , قابِلٌ , وقبالٌ . Then the various forms أَسْتَقْبِلُ , مَسْتَقْبِلُ , مَعْبُولُ , مَعْبُولُ , مَعْبُولُ , مَعْبُولُ , and أَسْتِقْبِلُ , exhibit a few of the other serviles in their mode of application, of which more hereafter.

facturing their very artificial language, to have excluded the servile letters altogether from the primitive triliteral roots, Arabic would have been the most perfect of human tongues.

- 49. With a view to precision, I adopt the term form to denote the mere outward appearance of a word as consisting of so many consonants, independent of the short vowels by which such consonants may become moveable. various modifications or changes which a form may undergo by the application of the short vowels, together with the jazm, I call the measures of such form. For example, the is susceptible of twelve different measures. according as we apply the three short vowels and the jazm. Supposing then the student meets with the root and for the first time, in a book without vowel-points, he has the comfort of knowing that the word may be pronounced in twelve different ways or measures, though it remains all along under one and the same form. Thus it may be قبل or قبل , or قبل by using the jazm on the middle letter; or it may be any of the following mine measures as trisyllables, viz., قَبُل , فبل , قبل with futha on the first letter; also قبل , قبل , قبل , with kasra for the first vowel; or, lastly, it may be وَقُبِلُ, or رُقُبِلُ, or with damma on the first letter. We may at the same time are here inserted as قُبِلُ are here inserted as a matter of theory, for they do not occur in the practice of the language.
- 50. The Semitic Grammarians, both Arabs and Jews, have adopted, as a special favourite, the triliteral root نعل , with a view to exemplify the various forms and measures of their words. This root, however, is not the best adapted for Europeans, not one in a thousand of whom ever can realize the true sound of the letter ; as the middle consonant. I notwithstanding retain it as my model, generally speaking, when the object intended is merely to exemplify the form or measure of a word to the eye; but not when the word is intended to be pronounced to the ear, as in the rules of Prosody, etc. Another cogent reason for retaining it will be found in § 94 a. when we come to the Verb. But the or any other root in the فعل student must not suppose that language furnishes us with all the forms and measures we are about to detail. Some roots furnish us with a certain number of forms and measures which must be determined merely by prescription; others may give out different forms and measures, to be determined in like manner; but no single root in the language has ever furnished all the forms and measures assigned by the Grammarians to the root نعل. A similar instance occurs in the Greek Grammar, in the case of the verb τυπτω, where we are treated to some hundred different moods and tenses, etc., whilst it is perfectly understood that no single Greek verb ever exhibited the whole of them.

51. In the Arabic there are, as we have already stated, only two genders, the masculine and the feminine; together with some words that are of the common gender, such as the names of the letters of the alphabet, and some adjectives of a certain form. There are certain characteristics by which we may infer that a noun is feminine. These are to be distinguished either by signification or termination. Nouns are feminine by signification, 1st—Names of women and female appellatives, as مَرْبُ "Mary," مُرُبُ "a mother," مُرْبُ "a woman who loves her husband." This is simply the good old rule of the Latin Grammar, viz., "Esto femineum quod femina sola reposeat." 2ndly—The double members of the body, as مَرْبُ "the ear," يَذُ "the hand," مَرْبُ "the eye," مَرْبُ "the shoulder." مَرْبُ "Egypt," مُرْبُ "Cyprus," مُرُبُ "Mokhā," "قَبُولٌ "the east wind," مَرُبُ "the south wind."

- 52. Such nouns are feminine by termination as fall under the following heads: 1st—Those ending in 5, as خَالَة "magnificence," عَنَّه "a garden," خَالَتُه "darkness," a very few excepted, which we shall immediately notice. 2ndly—Those ending in 1 servile, as تَرَيَّ "pride," "red," (red," مَمْ أَنَّ عَلَى "sa old man." 3rdly—In عن servile, quiescent and pronounced like 1, as نَّ عَلَى "tūlā, "remembrance;" وَلَى تَالَةُ الْوَلَى "tūlā, "longest;" this termination is adopted by many comparatives and superlatives.
- a. To these may be added some eighty words that are feminine neither by signification nor by termination, such as آرفن "the earth," مُقَرُ "wine," بَيْنُ "a well," نَارٌ "fire," مَعْيرُ "blazing fire," مَعْيرُ "hell-fire," مَعْيرُ "a house," مَارٌ "a bucket," مَعْمَدُ "war,"

- staff," نَفْسُ "a cup," نَعْلُ "a shoe," رَبِّ "the wind," نَفْسُ "the soul," شَمْسُ "the sun," together with the rest which are to be learnt by practice and observation. (See De Sacy, Tome i., p. 347.)
- 53. All substantives and adjectives not comprised under the foregoing heads are understood to be masculine; as "ithe moon," "a house." There are, however, a few words having the feminine termination s, which are of the masculine gender, as غَلْفَةُ "a Khalif;" also some verbal adjectives to which s is added, so that they become of more emphatic or intensive signification, such as عَلَمْ "very learned;" عَلَمْ فَعَلَمْ "habituated to laugh;" مُعَولَةٌ, نَعَالَةٌ, نَعَالَةٌ, نَعَالَةٌ, though ending in s, are of both genders.
- 54. There are some forty-five words which are of the common gender; amongst the number are آزار "a veil or anything that covers nakedness;" كال "state, condition;" كَانَ "a wing;" سَيلُ "a path;" سَيلُ "a knife" (Gaelic scian); " a weapon," "armour;" سَلَمُ "peace;" سَلَمُ "a ladder;" الله "heaven;" صَلَحُ "peace;" صَلَحُ "a path or way;" الله "a neagle;" مَرْسَ "salt," etc. (See De Sacy, p. 349.)

Of the Formation of Feminine from Masculine Nouns.

55. Feminines are formed from masculines by the addition, transposition, or changing of letters; but chiefly by the addition of s, as رَجُلُهُ "a man," رَجُلَهُ "a woman," مَلِكُهُ "a queen," كَبِيرُ "great," عَبِيرُ "a young man," changes و to I before s, قَتَاةً "a young woman," as do many other nouns of this form. Some adjectives, when in the positive degree, follow the second termination (in I servile) in forming the feminine, transposing the initial I to the end, as الله from الله "white" or "splendid." In the comparative and superlative degree, however, the initial I is changed to و final, quiescent and pronounced like I, as المؤلى المعلى المعلى المعلى المعلى المعلى المعلى المعلى المعلى "intoxicated;" المعلى "iritated." المعلى "intoxicated;" المعلى الم

a. Numbers of adjectives are used both as musculines and feminines without any alteration, as "patient," "patient," "odoriferous," "odoriferous," "patient," "patien

b. On this subject the reader is referred to the excellent "Grammaire Arabe" of M. De Sacy, page 343-352 of the first volume. The limits assigned to us in the present work do not permit us to translate De Sacy's account at full length.

Of Numbers.

- 56. In Arabic the nouns have three numbers (as we have already stated), viz., the Singular, the Dual, and the Plural. The Dual is invariably a diptote, i.e., consisting of two cases, and is generally formed by suppressing the nunation of the singular, and adding المناف for the nominative, and المناف for the oblique cases; thus أَوْ "a house," dual دَارِين "two houses," دَارِين "of, to, or in two houses."
- a. When the singular noun ends in i the latter is changed in the dual to مرينة معنى madīnatun, "a city;" شرينتان madīnatāni, "two cities." Where, and ورام (or officiating for them,) are final, and quiescent, after fatha in the singular, they become what grammarians call moveable, receiving some alteration, either in the final letter or vowel-points, as وَمَعْ عُمُونُ مُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعُ وَمُعْ وَمُعُ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعُمْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعُ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعْ وَمُعُ وَمُعْ وَمُعُمْ وَمُعُمْ وَمُعُمْ وَمُعْ وَمُعُمُ وَمُعُمْ وَمُعُمْ وَمُعُ وَمُعُمُ وَ

- 57. The regular masculine plural is formed by suppressing the nūnation of the singular, and adding أوالدُونَ for the nominative and أوالدُونَ for the oblique cases; thus وَالدُونَ "a father," وَالدُونَ "assisting," "assisting," وَالدُونَ "assisting," أولدُن "assisting," وَالدُونَ "aprophet," وَالدِينَ The regular feminine plural is formed by suppressing the final of the singular, and substituting الله الله أوله أوله الله والدُن "a mother," والدُن "of, to, or by mothers;" موالدُن "a mother," والدُن "of, to, or by mothers;" so وَالدَاتِ "a cheerful woman," وَالدَاتِ "a prophetess," نَبِينًا "a prophetess," نَبِينًا "a prophetess," نَبِينًا "
- a. If a masculine noun terminates in ي inert after kasra, it is thrown away, while kasra is changed to damma, as نافي "a judge," وأفون "a judge," والمعالم "a judge," a judge, "a judge, "a

Of the Irregular or Broken Plurals.

58. Besides the regular plurals exemplified in the words and وَالِدُةُ and وَالِدُةُ, the Arabs have adopted several modes of forming artificial, or, as they call them, broken plurals, of which the following are a few specimens: 1st-From the triliteral root a plural may be formed of the measure أَفْيَالُ , by means of two alifs, thus حُكُمُ "an order," plural أَحْكَامُ "orders;" so مِلْكُ "property," plural "goods" or "chattels." 2nd-From a triliteral root, with or without the additional 3, may be formed a broken plural of the measure "mountains;" جَبَالٌ thus, ' جَبَالٌ a mountain," plural ; قِبَالُ جِصَالٌ "a man," رَجُالٌ "men;" خَصْلَةٌ "disposition," رَجُالٌ "dispositions." 3rd—From the triliteral root another plural, of frequent occurrence, may be formed on the measure : "science," عِلْمُ " kings;" so مُلُوكُ "science," عِلْمُ plural عُرُمُ "sciences." 4th—Another broken plural, of frequent occurrence, is formed on the measure تُبُلًا thus, a poet,'' plural " شَاعِرٌ sages;'' so حُكِمَاء "a poet,'' plural "poets." This form of plural arises from singular nouns of the measure قَابِلُ or تَبِيلُ. There are several other modes of forming broken plurals, which shall be fully detailed hereafter, when we come to our Section on the Derivation and Formation of Nouns.

a. De Sacy enumerates thirty-one forms of broken plurals, but several of these, especially the last seven, are of rare occurrence. In the meanwhile we subjoin a useful table of twenty-four forms of broken plurals with examples of such singulars as usually produce them.

. شُهْودٌ , شَاهِدُونَ , شَوَاهِدُ "a witness," أَبْحُرٌ , بُحُرٌ student is not to infer, however, that a singular employs indifferently all the plurals of which its form is susceptible; thus نَفْسُ does not admit مُعْبَاذُ adopt the plurals عَبْدُ nor does عَبْدُ adopt the plurals وَنُفْسَةٌ , نِفَاسٌ a " رَجُلُ netc. Sometimes one only is formed, as from عِبْدَةً , عِبَدَةً man," the only plural is رَجَالٌ, and "" an affair," "a command," makes only . These, however, are best learnt by practice. When a singular, having several meanings, admits several plurals, it will be generally found that certain plurals are peculiarly, or exclusively attached to certain specific meanings of the singular; for example, عَيْنَ signifies "the eye," "a fountain," "the substance or essence of a thing," and "a person of rank." In the plural it has عُبُونَ and The two first of these forms answer to the two first meanings of the singular respectively, and the third only to the two last. regular plurals, and those of the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth forms, are called جُمُوعُ قَلَّة plurals of paucity," in contradistinction to the other forms, which are called جُمُوعُ كَثْرَة "plurals of multitude." This observation applies, however, only to nouns having several forms of plural: when the plural of one of these four forms is its only one, it is employed indiscriminately like those of the other forms.

c. With regard to the quadriliteral nouns, all the simple ones, and many of those which are augmented, together with their feminines, form their plurals by inserting i after the second letter (the first having fatha, and the third kasra), as كُوكَاتُ from كُوكَاتُ "a star." When s happens to be the final letter of the singular, it is dropped in forming the plural, as مَرَابِلُ "a dunghill," مَرَابِلُ. "When the last radical is preceded by i, , and عن without a vowel, a remains in the plural, as a candle," عَرَقُوبُ ; سَلَطَانَ ; but I and و are changed to و (on account of the preceding hasra), as سَلَطَانَ ; سَلَطَانَ "the heel," عَرَاقِيبُ "the heel," عَرَاقِيبُ "the heel," عَرَاقِيبُ "the heel," عَرَاقِيبُ نَعْ some words, at the same time, not only follow this rule, but have another plural formed by dropping the و and taking is at the end, as "the devil," السَّمَافَ ; اَبَالسَّهُ and الْبَلِيسُ "a shoemaker," السَّمَافَ أَبَالسَّهُ and اللَّهِ مَنْ أَبَالسَّهُ اللَّهِ مَنْ أَبَالسَّهُ اللَّهِ مَنْ أَبَالسَّهُ اللَّهِ مَنْ أَبَالسَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَ

d. Nouns consisting of five or more letters (s and 1, و quiescent not being numbered as such) follow the same mode, throwing away at the same time either the last radical or the penult, as سَفَرْجَلُ "a piece of bread," "crumb," مَنْكُبُوت ; مَعْنَاكِبُ "a spider," و أَوَرُدُق و مَعْنَاكِبُ "a forming a diphthong after fatha, both the last letter and the penult remain, being changed to و on account of the preceding kasra, as فَرَاعِينُ "a crocodile," مُعْنَافِينُ . Augmented words throw away the serviles, excepting when servile along with or مَخَارِثُ "loosed," مُعْمَالِقُ "a leader," مُعْمَالِقُ .

e. Some words form their plural in a manner exceedingly irregular, as أَنْ "a mother," فَمَّ : أُمَّهَاتَ "the mouth," مَا : إِنَّسَوَانَ "water," فَمَّ : "water," وَمَيَاةٌ and يُسْوَقٌ , نِسَآءٌ "woman," امْرَأَةٌ : مِيَاةٌ for أَنَاسِيَّ for اَنَاسِيَّ for اَنَاسِيَّ the final عي being cut off on account of the frequent use made of this word.

Of the Declension of Nouns.

59. Some grammarians divide the Arabic nouns into two, if not more, declensions. I think it much better to view them under one declension, reducible to five heads or classes, according as they consist in the singular or plural, or both, of diptotes, i.e., two cases, or of triptotes, i.e., three cases. The dual is always a diptote, so that we need only to direct our attention to the singular and plural.

CLASS I.

and feminine, which form their plurals regularly, as described in § 57. They all are, as may be seen, triptotes in the singular and diptotes in the plural; thus خالف "a father."

As an example of a regular feminine noun we subjoin وَالِدُةُ a mother."

a. Under this class are included—Ist. All participles, both active and passive, masculine and feminine, derived from regular verbs (which are generally employed as substantives), as "assisting" or "assistant;" مَنْصُورَ "assisted," also a man's name. All such nouns form their feminines by changing their final nānation into عَدَ عَدَ عَلَى , etc., and are declined like عَالَ . 2nd. Nouns of the measures عَمَالُ مَعْ مَلَّا مُعَالً "a mariner," مَلَّا مُولَى "a carpenter;" plural مَلَّا مُولِي , etc. 3rd. Nouns ending in عَدَّالُ "a man of Bagdad," patronymic or possessive adjectives, as مَلَّا مُولِي "a man of Bagdad," "a man given to melancholy," "a hypochondriac;" plural مُعْدَادِيُّونَ , etc. 4th. Diminutive nouns of the measure رُجُيلُونَ , as رُجُيلُونَ , etc. 4th. Diminutive nouns of the measure رُجُيلُونَ , etc. To these we might add several others which cannot be reduced under specific heads; and must be left entirely to practice.

of. Nouns of this class, like the preceding, are triptotes in the singular and diptotes in the plural, with this difference, that the plural is broken or irregular; thus, مُسَجِدٌ "a mosque."

SINGULAR.	DUAL.	PLURAL.

CLASS III.

62. Nouns of this class are triptotes both in the singular and plural; thus, بَيْتُ "a house."

SINGULAR.	DUAL.	1	PLURAL.
N. بَيْتُ a house.	two houses. بَيْتَانِ	بُيُوتُ	houses.
of, etc. a house.	of two houses.	بُيُوتِ	of houses.
A. بَيْتًا a house.	two liouses.	بُيُوتَا	houses.

a. Of Classes II. and III. we may say in general that they include such substantives as have not been already specified under Class I.; but it is very difficult, if not impossible, to subject them to any specific rules. The student must be guided by practice alone.

CLASS IV.

63. This class consists of such adjective nouns (not being comparatives or superlatives) as are diptotes in the singular and triptotes in the plural; thus, '``red."

64. This class consists of a few substantives and such adjectives (comparatives and superlatives) as are diptotes both in the singular and plural; thus مُعَرُّ 'less.''

not bearing either dammu or kasra عَصْوَ a staff," is written for عَصَى which are رَحَي , رَحَي and رَحَي "a mill," for عَصَوًا ,عَصَو of the first class, or triptotes. قاض "a Kādī" or "judge," and قاضي and قاضي, of the same قاضي, of the same elass, بَشْرَى good news," for بُشْرَي in the nominative, and in the genitive and accusative of the last class, بُشْرَيَ or diptotes. صَحَارَي "deserts," for صَحَارَي in the nominative, and صَعَارَي in the genitive and accusative, irregular quadriliteral plural of the second class.

66. Six words have a variation of case peculiar to themselves, when in construction either with a noun or an affixed possessive pronoun, viz., ابّ "a father," أ" a brother," "the mouth," قُو or فَمْ "the mouth," هن "a thing," حَمَّ and نُو "having," "possessed of," "endowed with," which are declined as follows:

Nom. اَبُو زَيْد the father of Zaid. Gen. أبى زَيْد of the father of Zaid. Acc. ابًا زَيْدِ the father of Zaid.

his brother. of his brother. his brother.

Nom. فَمُ عُمَر the mouth of 'Umar. of the mouth of 'Umar. فِي عُمْرَ Acc. فَا عُمَرَ the mouth of 'Umar.

thy father-in-law. of thy father-in-law. thy father-in-law.

thy thing. فَوْرَتُحَمَّة endowed with compassion. Gen. فنيكث of one who is compassionate. فنيكث of thy thing. Acc. هنيكث thy thing. Acc. ذَا رَحْمَة compassionate.

- a. When these words, however, are prefixed to the pronoun of the first person there is no change of case, as أبري "my father," etc. When غنه is followed by an affixed pronoun, it varies only in the vowel-points, as نمك "your mouth," فنمك "of your mouth," فنمك "your mouth," فنمك "your mouth," فنمك "your mouth," فنمك "your mouth," لماذا لا ندخل يا ابا آليمن as in the following epithet, which the lion in the fable gives to the fox, لماذا لا ندخل يا ابا آليمن "Why do you not enter, O father of the stronghold?" i.e. "O thou endowed with strength."
- b. The accusative is substituted for the nominative when certain particles go before, as "" "indeed," "certainly," "" "that," "كُنَّ "that," "" "would to God," "كُنَّ "perhaps;" as "but the king is powerful;" no other word must intervene, however, excepting a preposition with its case, as النَّ أَلَّذَا وَ إِلَّا الْكُنَّ الْمُلِكَ فَدِيرٌ "certainly there is a man in the house." The word signifying "is not," when immediately preceding any appellative, gives it, in general, the accusative termination, as "لَ رَبُّ فَي الدَّارِ رَجُلًا كُنْ "there is no doubt of it" (or "in it"). In this case the accusative loses the nunation, but the noun must not be definite, either as a noun proper, or as an appellative limited by the article "" "" or by a word which it governs.
- 67. The vocative is expressed by the nominative without nunation, with يا أُمِيرُ "O 'Uthmān!" يَا أَمِيرُ "O prince!" except when followed by a genitive, where the accusative is employed in place of the nominative, as يَا عَبْدُ ٱللَّهِ "O servant of God."

- a. The nominative thus employed is naturally pronounced with rapidity. Hence it is that the nunation is always dropped, and that the affixed pronoun عنا قوم is sometimes cut off, as بنا قوم "O my people!" رَبّ "O my Lord!" Some words, chiefly proper names in frequent use, throw off a whole syllable at the end, as يا صَاحِي for يَا مَرُو "O my friend!" يَا مَرُو "O Mansur!" يَا مَرُو "O Marvun!" for مَنْصُور etc.
- b. On the other hand, when placed at the end of a sentence, and pronounced more strongly, the vowel is prolonged, and receives a kind of aspirate, as يَا عُلَامِ 'O my boy!" Sometimes this appears as final ā, as يَا عُلَامَاه or ah, as يَا عُلَامَاه or عَلَامِي or عُلَامِي.
- c. When the name invoked, however, bears the article آلّ , the pronoun اَیّتُهَا , اَیّهُا وَایهٔ , always comes between the name and the particle یَا اَیّهَا آلْنّاسُ as , یَا اَیّها آلْنَاسُ as , یَا اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنِیا آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اَیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْها آلْنَاسُ مِی اِیْنَاسُ مِی اِیْنَاسُ مِی اِیْنَاسُ اِیْنَاسُ مِی اِیْن
- d. In calling for help, J is often prefixed to the genitive, as الكرين "help, O Saladin!" and sometimes at is added for the same purpose, as يا صديقاء "help, O friend!" أَسَتُ help, O friend!" أَسَتُ for إِلَى "O my father!" and أُسَتُ for أُسِّتُ "O my mother."
- 68. The dual and the perfect masculine plurals in في drop that letter when followed by a noun in the genitive case, or by the affixed pronouns, as غزالا يُوسُف "two fawns, غزالا يُوسُف "the two fawns of Joseph;" فَدَمَاهُ "two feet," فَدَمَانُ "his two feet;" مُسْلِمُونَ "Musulmans," مُسْلِمُو آلْبِلَدِ "the Musulmans of the town," مُسْلِمُونَ "sons," بَنُونُ

- a. When a noun is rendered definite by prefixing the article المواقعة على المواقعة
 - b. The nunation is affected in the same manner as when under he above circumstances. It is also rejected by all those nouns called nvariable, which form their nominative in and to other cases n -, as may be observed with regard to the plurals of the 2nd and th classes of nouns.

Of the Numerals- اَسْمَا اللهُ الله

69. The Arabic Numerals hold a sort of middle rank etween the Substantives and Adjectives; consequently this the proper place wherein to introduce them. Several of 1em, as we shall see hereafter, are bonâ fide substantives, hers adjectives. Our object here is simply to exhibit them 1ch as they are; the application and use of them belong the Syntax. The following are

- 70. From eleven to nineteen inclusive, the cardinal numbers are composed of units, and of the number ten, which in the masculine is مَشْرَةً , and in the feminine مُشْرَةً , the smaller number being always put first, thus—

71. The Decades from twenty upwards are,

- a. In the numbers composed of decades and of units from twenty to ninety-nine inclusive, the conjunction j is inserted between the two numbers; the smallest number is put first, and both are declined, as اَحَدُا وَ عِشْرِينَ; genitive اَحَدُ وَ عِشْرِينَ; accusative
- ٥. The numbers for the hundreds are of both genders; thus 200; وَاللّٰهُ عَلَيْهُ وَ 200 وَاللّٰهُ وَ 100 وَاللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ وَاللّٰه
- c. The numbers for the thousands are as follows: وَالْفَانِ 1,000; الْفَانِ 2,000; مَالَّنَةُ آلَافِ 3,000; أَلَّانِكُ آلَافِكُ آلَافِ 4,000; and so on up to ten thousand. Beyond ten thousand they are, الْفَا 11,000; and so on up to ninety-nine thousand. After that they are مِائِّتًا اللهِ 100,000; مِائِّتًا اللهِ 200,000; مَائَةُ اللهِ 300,000, etc.

ORDINAL NUMBERS.

72. The ordinal numbers up to ten inclusive, have (with the exception of the first) the measure عَامِلُة for the masculine, and عَامِلُة for the feminine. The compound numbers from the 11th to the 19th inclusive are made up of the corresponding ordinals of their units with the addition of مَشَرُة for the masculine, and عَشَرَة for the feminine. When these nine compounds are indeterminate, they both end in a fatha and are not subject to declension. If, however, they have the article prefixed, the units are regularly declined like a noun of the first class, and the decades remain unaltered; thus, Nom. اَلْقَالِتُ عَشَرَ Acc. اَلْقَالِتُ عَشَرَ Acc. اَلْقَالِتُ عَشَرَ and the same rule is observed with regard to the feminine; thus, أَنْ اللهُ عَشَرَة عَشَرَة مَشَرَة عَشَرَة , and so on.

73. The twentieth and all the decades above, are expressed by the cardinal numbers; and the intermediate ones are formed by prefixing the ordinals of the units with the conjunction, between, thus—

FRACTIONAL NUMBERS.

74. In Arabic fractional numbers from one-third to one-tenth inclusive are expressed by certain words modified from the corresponding radical numbers; thus, عَنْتُ "a half," مُنْتُ "a third," ثُنْتُ "a fourth," ثُنْتُ "a fifth," ثُنْتُ "a sixth," ثُنْتُ "a seventh," ثُنْتُ "an eighth," مُنْتُ "a ninth," a tenth." Beyond the fraction لله من المناه ألم المناه أل

DISTRIBUTIVE NUMBERS.

75. Distributive numbers are expressed either by twice repeating the ordinal number, as أَحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحْدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحْدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا وَاحْدًا وَاحْ

RELATIVE NUMERALS.

76. These embrace such adjectives as denote "relating to" or "consisting of" such or such a number from one to ten; رُباَعِيٍّ "containing two," ثُلَاثِيٌّ "containing three," ثُنَائيٌّ " containing four," خُمَاسِيٌّ " containing five," etc. In like manner from the cardinal numbers are formed relative adjectives from one to ten; these present no difficulty. It must be remarked, however, that from إثْنَانِ "two," a dual of which the singular, if it could have one, would be زُنَوٌ for إِثْنَوُ which the singular, if it could have one, the relative adjective is formed by recurring to the form of the singular أَثْنِيُّ and أَنْنِيُّ , like إِلَيْمِيُّ . From eleven to nineteen, the numeratives composed of two indeclinable words, form their relative adjectives from the first word only, wholly suppressing the second; whence it follows that these adjectives exactly resemble those derived from numeratives from one to nine; thus ثُنُويُّ is the relative adjective of اثْنَان "two," and of أَثْنَا عَشَرُ is that of خُمْسِتُ "two," and of أَثْنَا عَشَرَ "five," and of مُشَةُ عُشَرَة "fifteen." From مُالَة "one hundred," is formed the relative adjective مِثُويٌّ or زَمِثْيُّ and from أَنْتُ "a thousand," أَنْتُ

PERIODIC NUMERALS.

77. Numerative words denoting a periodical return, are of the measure نِعْلُ . They are put in the accusative with or without an article, as ثِلْنًا or تُلْنًا "every three (days, months, etc.)," so الْمِثْنَا or الْمِثْنَا every eight (days, months, etc.)." When for the sake of precision the days, etc. must be specified they express the same in the following manner: " الْفَالَثُ الْفَلْثُ سَنَةٌ الْفِلْثُ سَنَةٌ الْفَلْثُ سَنَةً الْفَالْثُ سَنَةً الْفِلْثُ سَنَةً " he drinks wine once every three years."

a. Numerative words denoting "simple" or "single," "double,"
 "triple," etc., are expressed thus, مُفَاعَفُ "single," فَضَاعَفُ "double,"
 "رَبَعَةُ أَضْعَافِ "triple," وَرَبَعَةُ أَضْعَافِ "quadruple," etc.

NUMERAL ADVERBS.

- 78. Words corresponding to our "once," "twice," "thrice," etc., are generally expressed by a word denoting "time" or "turn" in the accusative case preceded by the requisite numeral, thus "once" is expressed by مُرَّقَبُنِ or تَارَقُ ; "twice" by تَلَاثَ مرَّاتِينِ, etc.
- 79. The Arabs have a curious idiom in expressing their dates and other large numbers, placing, generally, the units before the tens, the tens before the hundreds, and the hundreds before the thousands. This rule obtains strictly when the number consists of only two figures, decades and units; but if thousands and hundreds are employed, the thousands may optionally come first, then the hundreds, then the decades, and lastly the units, fhough the former mode is the more common. Thus in expressing in words the year 1862 they say "two and sixty and eight hundred and one thousand." This idiom is probably owing to the circumstance that the numerical cyphers of the Arabs, which they borrowed or adopted from the Hindūs, read contrariwise to their alphabetic characters, i.e. from right to left; so that when an Arab, in reading, comes to such a number as 1862 for example, he naturally decyphers the group of figures from right to left, for the reasons we have just stated.

Of the Adjective - الصِفة

- 80. The Adjective has two genders and generally three numbers like the substantive, but the explanation of its concord with the latter belongs more appropriately to our Section on Syntax. At present we shall confine ourselves to the mode of forming the Comparative and Superlative Degrees of Comparison.
- 81. The comparative is formed from the positive by prefixing i, as يُخير "good," الخير "better," and takes in general "thou art greater "أنت أعظمُ مِنَ ٱلمُلكُ than," after it; thus مِنَ than the king." Sometimes the mere positive with is used to express the comparative, as in the following line from the present day is better " ويُومِي خَيْرُ مِنْ أَمْسَى ; Elnawabig than the past." The particle في, however, and some others often follow the comparative in place of , so as to express either a positive or superlative degree according to circum-"more or most intrepid in war." أَشْهَرُ فِي ٱلْمَحَرَّبِ stances; us In the feminine of the comparative of quiescent after futha "greater" آکنبُر "great," کَبِيرُ great," کَبِيرُ (mase.), کَبَرَي "greater" (fem.). The particle وس does not always immediately follow the comparative; as in the following example : آعزّ عِنْدِي مِين بُوبُو عَييي Dearer to me than the apple of mine eye."

82. Without ومن the form انْعَلُ when followed by a genitive expresses the superlative degree, as "

"the best of "the best of "the best of men." It becomes superlative also where the substantive precedes the adjective, as سَعْدِي اَعْلَمُ "Sa'dī is most wise." It has likewise a superlative sense when placed absolutely with a substantive or pronoun in construction, as هُمُ ٱلْأَنْصَلُونَ بَينَ ٱلنَّاسِ "they two are the most upright;" هُمُ أَلْقَصَلُونَ بَينَ ٱلنَّاسِ "they are the most excellent among human beings." Of the comparative and superlative we shall treat more fully in our Section on Syntax.

Of the Pronoun-أَلْضُويرُ

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

- 83. These consist of two classes, viz., the Isolated and the Affixed. The Isolated are the following, viz.:—
- 1st Pers. Sing. آنَا "I." (No Dual). 1st Pers. Plur. "we." 2nd Pers. Sing. Masc. آنَتُ , Fem. "thou." Dual comm. آنَتُمَ "you two." Plur. Masc. آنَتُمَ , Fem. آنَتُنَ "you."
- كُمَا . She." Dual comm. هِيَ " she." Dual comm. هُوَ " she." Dual comm. هُمَا " they both." Plur. Masc. هُمْ , Fem. هُنَّ. " they."
- a. We may here observe that the third person masculine فَ loses its first vowel damma, and the third feminine its kasra, when preceded by either of the conjunctions , and فَ , which both denote "and;" thus, instead of وَهُمَ , they say وَهُو ; so for وَهُمَ they say . We may also observe that the Personal, Demonstrative, and Relative Pronouns have the same variation of gender and number as nouns, but they have no difference of case, with the exception of the duals of the Demonstratives and Relatives, which follow the mode of other duals, as we shall immediately see. The first person is naturally of the common gender, and wants the dual number.

- 84. We now come to the Affixed Pronouns, which occur almost in every line, and are always annexed to a verb, a noun, or a preposition. When added to verbs they are generally in the accusative case, though often in the dative, especially when another accusative comes immediately after. When joined to nouns they are possessive or relative. When affixed to a preposition they have a personal and sometimes a relative sense. The Affixed Pronouns are the following:
- 1st Pers. Sing. يي or نبي "of me" or "me." (No Dual). 1st Pers. Plur. ٽ "of us" or "us."
- 2nd Pers. Sing. Masc. کے, Fem. کئی, "of thee" or "thee." Dual (comm.) کُمّ "of you both," etc. Plur. Masc. کُمّ ; Fem. کُمّ "of you hoth," etc.
- 3rd Pers. Sing. هُ "of him" or "him;" لَمْ "of her" or "her." Dual لَمْهُ "of them both," etc. Plur. Masc. هُمْ ; Fem. هُمْ "of them
- a. We here add a few examples to illustrate the use of the affixed pronouns, premising that in all nouns the nunation disappears when the affixed نام is added; thus, کنائی "a book; کنائی "my book." The other affixes also displace the nunation, but the simple vowel remains; thus, کار "a house;" کار "his house." We must also notice a few changes or modifications which take place both in the termination of the words to which the pronoun is affixed, and also in the initial syllable of the affixes themselves.

- c. Not only the nunation vowels, as we have already stated, but also the in the duals and in the perfect masculine plurals, are dropped when followed by the affixed pronouns; as, المنابع "two books," etc. When affixed to words ending in i, they change the latter into عَمَّةٌ "an aunt," "thy aunt." In the 3rd person plural masculine of the preterites of verbs, also in the 2nd person plural masculine of the imperatives, the quiescent alif after is rejected; as, المَوْوَلُ "they assisted," نَصَرُولُ "they assisted us;" and after the verbal termination "they add "as, as, "you assisted," "you assisted," "you assisted," "wo would assisted thim." When following verbs or nouns ending in a quiescent after fatha, a either remains, or is changed to i; as, المَا يُعَالِي "his boy." In particles final a forms a diphthong with the preceding fatha; as, الله "to," الله "to him." In books where no vowel points are used is sometimes added to the 2nd person feminine singular to distinguish it from the masculine; thus, of for .

- a. Two affixes may be annexed to one word, when that of the first person is always placed before the second, and the second before the third; as, "he gave it to me" يَكْفِيكُهُمْ "he or it will, or may, or can suffice thee against them," i.e., "will protect thee from them."
- f. These pronouns may also be put separately after verbs to denote the accusative case, but with the particle اِيَّا prefixed to them; as, "he beat you;" or they may be placed before the verb in the same sense as in the following passage from the Kurān:

 "Thee we adore, and thee we call to our aid." In like manner the other affixes, as, وَايَّاتَ نَسْتَعِينُ "me;" اَيَّاكُنَ "you" (fem.); اَيَّاكُمْ "you two; "اَيَّاكُمْ "thee" (fem.); اَيَّاهُمْ "them" (fem.); اَيَّاهُمْ "them" (fem.); اَيَّاهُمْ "them" (fem.); اَيَّاهُمْ "them" (fem.);

THE DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

85 The Demonstrative pronoun, implying an object near at hand, is expressed 15 "this" (hic), and is declined as follows:

The remote demonstrative, "that" (ille) is formed from the above by adding .

رِتْلَكُ or تَالَكُ ; ذَٰلِكُ or تَالَكُ ; وَلَاكُ or تَالَكُ وَالْكُ or رَبِّلُكُ وَ وَالْكُ or رَبِّلُكُ وَ وَالْكُ or رَبِّلُكُ وَ وَالْكُ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَالْكُولُونِ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّالِي وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّالِيْلُونُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّالِيْلُولُونُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللّلَّ وَاللَّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّالِمُ وَاللّهُ وَاللَّالِمُولِ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّالِمُ وَاللَّهُ وَل

"this," is sometimes used for the personal pronoun "thou" or "you," though it is then in general expressive of contempt or detestation, as آیا طنا "O thou."

THE RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

86. The Relative "who," "which," "that," is compounded of the article لَ and لَذِي , the ل of the article being omitted in the singular and masculine plural, and the initial U of the pronoun marked by tashatal, as formerly observed under the article (§ 46 a). It is declined as follows:

PLURAL.		DU.	Δ1	SINGULAR.
OBLIGHT.	NOM.	onligit.,	NOM.
ٱلَّذِينَ	اً الدُّونَ	ٱللّذيّنِ	أللّذان	اَلَّذِي Masc.
ٱللَّايِٰي ٱللَّائِٰ ِ ٱلَّالْوَاتِي ٱلَّالَا	اللاتِي	ٱللَّتين	ٱللتان	.Fem اَلَّتي

This relative does not admit of any of the servile letters being prefixed, excepting في ل , ل , and , which, as we have already observed, we consider to be inseparable particles not serviles. The oblique cases are seldom used, and it is often construed with the affixed pronouns annexed to the subsequent word, as الَّذِي مِنْهُ ; بِاللَّذِي مَنْهُ ; بِاللَّذِي مَا اللَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ ; مِنَ ٱلَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ ; مِنَ ٱلَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ ; مِنَ ٱلَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ ; مِنَ ٱلَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ ; مَن وَاللَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ يَعَلَّلُهُ وَمَنْ اللَّذِي رَأَيْتُهُ يَعَلَّلُهُ وَمَا لَا لَيْنِي فِيهَا يُتَولُّكُ (the land, etc.) in which he was born."

87. The Pronouns بن "he who," "those who," "whoever," and "that which," or "whatsoever," "whatever," are also relatives including the antecedent, the former referring to rational beings and the latter to brutes or lifeless objects, as in the proverb: مَن ٱسَرَعَي ٱلذِّيبَ ٱلْغَنَمُ فَقَد ظَلَم "He who commits (has committed) to the care of the wolf (the pasturing of) the sheep, certainly does (has done) an injustice."

Whereupon Al Damīrī in his "History of Animals," shrewdly observed that there was a greater injustice done to the wolf than to the sheep; because, says he, "they employed him to do that which was not in his nature."

a. فرق employed interrogatively, also receives the genders, numbers, and cases; but nothing must then be added after this word. For example, should a person say to another, "Some one is come," or "I have seen somebody;" if the other should simply ask "Who?" or "Whom?" the proper word in Arabic is مَنُو , etc.

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

88. أَيْنُ feminine اَيْنُ "who?" "which?" "what?" "of what kind?" etc., is generally used interrogatively, governing the substantive in the genitive, as "what book?" "what book?" "when it is employed alone, without a substantive, it receives all the numbers and cases; thus dual, اَيْنَ , fem. اَيْنَ , plural اَيْنَ , plural اَيْنَ . The singular, as well as the plural, are declined as triptotes. It is often joined with اَيْنَ and اَيْنَ . "whosoever;" "whosoever;" "whatever;" "whatsoever; " and sometimes plurally, الْيُكِنَّ mase. اللهُ fem. " which of them?" dual اللهُ وفاد. (ete.

RECIPROCAL PRONOUNS.

- 89. Reciprocal actions are expressed by the noun "soul," "self," with the affixes, as احبَبْتُ نَفْسى "I pleased myself;" or in the following remarkable anecdote of the despotic influence which Baitina, the famous chief of the assassins, so celebrated in the history of the Crusades by the name of "the Old man of the Mountain," had over his followers. When this chieftain had become powerful and terrible to the surrounding princes, he drew at last the attention of the Sultan Jalalu-d-daula, who sending an ambassador to require his submission, he thus received him: "When the ambassador appeared in his presence, he called before him some of his people; and giving the signal to a young man among them, said to him, 'Stab yourself,' and he did so; he ordered then another to precipitate himself from the castle, which he did, and was dashed to pieces. Then he said to the Sultan's ambassador, '()f subjects such as these, seventy thousand are thus observant of me: let this be the answer.'" The words in the original are as follows: قَالَ لَهُ ٱقْتُلُ نَفْسَكُ فَفَعَلَ ـُثُمّ أَوْصَي إِلَي آخَرَ بِأَنْ يَرْمَي نَفْسَهُ مِنَ ٱلْقَلْعَةُ . ففعل و تقطع
- a. In the Lowland Scotch dialect of the Anglo-Saxon I have frequently heard the expression "the sel' o't," i.e. "the self of it," instead of "itself," which last is probably a contraction of "its self." The expressions "himself" and "themselves" are apparently incorrect, for the amendment of which the late Dr. Gilchrist laboured unsuccessfully to substitute "his self" and "their selves," so as to conform with the Arabic idiom.

b. Pronouns are seldom used in the plural to express anything rrational; but the feminine singular is substituted in the place of it; hus, هَذِهِ ٱلْكُتْبُ is the proper expression for "these books," and not أُرِلُّ ٱلْكُتْبُ. This observation applies also to nouns, as will be more ully detailed in the Syntax.

SECTION III.

Of the Verb - النَّبْعَلُ.

- 90. The theme of the Arabic verb is named اثنان "the root," which is the third person singular masculine of the Preterite tense, as of all the persons the simplest, consisting only of radical letters; the other inflexions being formed from it, by the prefixing, inserting, or adding one or more of the servile letters we have already mentioned § 48. The letters which compose the root are called "radicals;" and the seven letters comprised in the word المنتقبة ("they fatten"), are denominated زائد "serviles" or "letters of increase."
- a. It is customary with most writers on Arabic Grammar, when commencing their description of the verb, to perplex the learner with a long discussion on the formation and meaning of the various derivatives, or as they foolishly call them conjugations, which may emanate from the primitive verbal root. In this respect I differ from them in toto. I hold it to be by far the better plan, in the first place, to explain fully a single paradigm of a perfect primitive root; then the student will be enabled, with advantage, to comprehend the purport of the derivative formations.
 - 91. The verbs are either Triliteral or Quadriliteral; the the other of four, as نَعْلَ "he turned." They are also divided into Perfect, the root consisting of three strong consonants, as مَدُنَ "he spoke the truth;" "he was quiet." The only peculiarity of قَرَّ (for مُحَنَّ) which is also called a Surd verb, consists merely in the fact that the third radical is the same letter as the second, (both coalescing on certain occasions, by tashdīd —). The Perfect and Surd verbs are also called firm or robust. All other verbs which have one or more of the infirm letters 1, , and perfect, as مَا يُنَالَ "he said," etc., which will be detailed in our next Section.

- a. In triliterals the first letter is called the $\frac{1}{2}$ is $f\bar{a}$ of the root, the second the $\frac{1}{2}$ in, and the third the $\frac{1}{2}$ lām, because the verb $\frac{1}{2}$ ("he made"), as we have already stated, is usually taken as the paradigm of the regular triliteral verb. In quadriliteral roots, the model being $\frac{1}{2}$, the first letter is named $f\bar{a}$, the second 'ain, the third lām the first, and the fourth lām the second.
- 92. The Arabic Verb has only one Conjugation; and like the noun it has three numbers, the Singular, the Dual, and the Plural. They have also two genders, the Masculine and the Feminine. Their Persons, as in other languages, are three; but the third, being the root, precedes the second, and the second the first. The First Person has no Dual and both ts singular and plural are of the common gender. All this will appear sufficiently obvious from the paradigm given below under § 94, etc.

- 93. The Arabian grammarians arrange their moods and tenses differently from the Europeans, dividing their paradigm into five parts: 1st, the Preterite; 2nd, the Aorist; 3rd, the Imperative; 4th, the Participle; and 5th, the Infinitive. These, however, do not exactly correspond to our moods and tenses of those denominations; the Preterite in particular being frequently used to express the Present, while the Aorist represents both the Present and the Future, as well as the Conditional and other tenses, as will be explained more at large after the conjugation of the Perfect or Regular Verb.
- 94. We now proceed to exhibit a paradigm of a Perfect or Regular Arabic Verb, both active and passive, adopting as our model the root is "he made," "did," or "acted."

PASSIVE VOICE

95. The Passive Voice has only three parts, viz., the Preterite, the Aorist, and the Participle. It wants the imperative and infinitive; but the want of the imperative may be supplied by a modification of the aorist with the particle من prefixed, as "let him be assisted." The passive preterite differs from the active only in the vowels of the first and second radical letters; the first having always damma, and the second kasra. In the Aorist the incremental or servile letters included in the technical word, at the beginning always have damma for their vowel, and that of the second radical is always fatha, as may be seen in the following paradigm:

3rd Part-The Participle.

96. Such is the Arabic verb "pur et simple," which the student is particularly requested to commit carefully to memory before he proceeds a step farther. In order to do this the more effectually he may write out as an exercise the two following verbs, viz., "he broke;" and تَوْنَلُ "he broke;" and نَوْنُلُ in every respect. The second differs in one single instance, viz., the vowel of the middle radical of the aorist active and consequently of the imperative throughout is kasra, not fatha; thus ', يُقْرِقُ'.

etc., not يَغْرَى , as will be more fully explained hereafter. In the Passive Voice all verbs have precisely the same measure, as in فُرِقَ , فُضِحَ , thus فُرِقَ , فُضِحَ , etc.

Observations on the Tenses, of the Regular Triliteral Verb.

THE PRETERITE

- 97. The reader may have observed that the persons of the Preterite Tense are formed by adding some sort of termination after the radicals. According to the Arabian grammarians these terminations are the personal pronouns in a more or less perfect state, either expressed or understood; and that is a good reason why the learner should have mastered the pronouns before coming to the verb. The middle radical of the preterite of several verbs takes kasra, and sometimes damma, in place of fatha. Those that take kasra may be either transitive, as in the was glad," in the was sad." Such verbs as take damma for the middle radical of the preterite are always of an intransitive or neuter sense, as in the was ugly," in the was handsome."

- b. There are some verbs that have two, or even all the three vowels, for the middle radical of the Preterite; but each with a shade of difference in the signification; thus, قَنَعُ "he begged humbly;" "he was contented;" عَمَرُ "he built;" عَمَرُ "he lived long;" "it was cultivated" or "inhabited."
- c. When the third radical of the Preterite happens to be inert, and the appended termination begins with , the two similar letters naturally coalesce by tashdīd, thus شَبَتُ in the 2nd person singular is written بَنِيَ and بَنِتَ, etc. In like manner when the third radical is it unites by tashdīd with the of the termination, but the does not alter its own form: لَبُثُ makes in the 2nd person singular does not alter its own form: لَبُثُ makes in the 2nd person singular لَبُثُ. The same rule applies when the third radical is either عَبُدُتُ for مُبَدُّت for عَبُدُتُ for عَبُدُتُ for عَبُدُتُ for عَبُدُتُ for عَبُدُتُ for مُبَدُّت. If the third radical be it coalesces by tashdīd with the of the termination of 1st person plural and the 3rd person plural feminine, as أَمَنُ for أَمِنَ أَمِورَا مَا يَعْمُ وَالْعُورُا وَالْعُورُ
- d. In De Sacy's "Grammaire Arabe," we are, at this stage of the work, treated with fifty or sixty pages 8vo. on the various idiomatic uses of the Preterite and Aorist Tenses. Such a discussion is altogether preposterous; as the subject evidently belongs to the Syntax, to which we accordingly postpone it.

THE AORIST.

98. The Aorist generally corresponds to our present tense and frequently to our future. It is formed, as may be observed in the paradigm, from the preterite by prefixing to the different persons, one or other of the letters 1, ω , or ω , and by adding one or more of the same as terminations.

The prefixed serviles have constantly fatha, excepting in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd of the derivative formations of the triliteral verb, and the primitive form of the quadriliterals, where they take damma. If the second radical of the preterite has damma, it remains also damma in the Aorist; but if kasra it is changed to fatha, excepting ''it was pleasant," حَسِبَ "he thought," نَعِمَ "he despaired," يَبِسَ "it dried," فَضِلَ "he excelled," فَنِطَ "he despaired," and غَرِض "he appeared;" which may be pronounced either with fatha or kasra and even sometimes with danma, as بنعم بينعم , or يَفْضُلُ , so يَفْضُلُ , or يَفْضُلُ , فَضُلُ . But if the second radical takes fatha in the preterite it is : يَكْتُبُ "he wrote," كَتَبَ 'he wrote," : يَكْتُبُ or to kasra, as يَضْرِبُ "he struck," يَضْرِبُ ; unless the second or third radical is a guttural letter, in which case, though it is frequently changed, it sometimes remains fatha, as نَبُحُ "he barked," نَبُحُ 'he entered, يَدْبُحُ 'he occupied," أَمْنَحُ ; مَشْغُلُ "he presented," مَنْحُ ; and in the same manner without a guttural "رُكَن "he leant upon," رَكَن , and "he refused," يَابَى—The last radical has damma, but when followed by the serviles 1, e, or e, it is sometimes changed, and sometimes dropped. The Aorist, however, when preceded by certain particles, admits of several variations in the termination, which are classed under the grammatical heads of Apocope, Antithesis, and Paragoge.

a. The rules applicable to the middle vowel of the Aorist, and by consequence of the imperative, are neatly expressed in the following nemorial couplet: كَسُرُ مُسَرِّ فَتُمُ كُسُرِ فَتُمُ عَسَرِ فَتَمُ فَتَمُ كُسُرِ فَتَمُ عَسَرِ فَتَمْ عَسَرِ فَتَمُ عَسَرِ فَتَمْ عَسَرَ فَتَمْ عَسَرَ عَلَيْ عَلَيْ عَسَرَ عَلَيْكُ عَل which may be freely rendered "1. Fatha (on the medial of the preterite) may give kasra (as the medial of the acrist); 2. Fatha may give damma; 3. They may be both fathas; 4. Kasra may give fatha; 5. Kasra may give kasra; and 6. Damma gives damma; as in the six following examples:

	INPIN.	PART.	IMP.	AORIST.	PRET.
"He struck."	ضربا	فعارب	اِضْرِبّ	يَضْرِبُ	ضَرَب	1
"He assisted."	نَصْرًا	اِ نَاصِرُ	اأنفر	ا ينتصر	انَصَرَ	2

"He was generous."	كُرْمِيا	كارنم	أكرم	يكرم	كَرُمَ	6

99. Apocope, which, generally speaking, gives the Aorist a past signification, not only converts the damma of the last radical into jazm, but cuts off the final و everywhere, excepting in the feminine plural. The particles which occasion this apocope are أَ "not," لَمَا "not yet, "no, not," and لَمَا يَنْصُرُ when prefixed to the Aorist in an imperative sense: لَمُ يَنْصُرُ he did not assist," may answer as a general example.

الم ينصروا لم ينصرن	لم ينصرا لم تنصرا	8 لم ينصر لم تنصر
لم تنصروا كم تنصرن	لم تنصراً	2 لَمْ تَنْصُر لَمْ تَنْصُرِي
، به سام ب لم ننصر		1 لَم أنصر

a. To the above particles may be added the following: "if;" and عَنْ "whoever;" أَيُّ "whatever;" along with its compounds أَينَمَا and اَيْنَ , حَيْثُمُا "every time that;" كُلَّمَا ", and أَيْنَا , and أَيْنَا "wherever;" أَنَّى "howsoever;" مُهْمًا "howsoever;" أَنَّى and كُيْفُمَا "as often as;" أَيَّانَ and أَيَّانَ when," "whenever;" and in poetry اذًا "when;" provided, however, another verb in the retributive sense (as "whatever you will do, I will do") is subjoined in the same sentence. If both verbs are of a future signification, they conform to this rule; if only the first that does the same, but if the last alone is future, it follows either this, or the general rule; thus, مَا تَصْنَعْ صَنَعْتُ "; whatever you will do, I will do " مَا تَصْنَعْ أَصْنَعْ مَا صَنَعْتَ أَصْنَعُ or مَا صَنَعْتَ أَصْنَعْ "; whatever you will do, I did "whatever you did, I will do." This rule holds good also when an imperative precedes, to which the future is responsive; thus, "assist me, I will assist thee." أَنْصُرْنِي أَنْصُرُكُ on!" etc.: لَنْ يَنْصُرُ "he will by no means assist," is here put for a general example.

PLURAL.	DUAL.	SINGULAR.
ر مرام و	آن ينصرا لن تنصرا	۳ER. من
لَن تَنصُرُوا لَن تَنصرن	كن تنصرًا	2 كَن تَنْصُرَ لَنْ تَنْصُرِي
ره ۱۹۵۸ کن ننصر		1 لَن انصر

101. Paragoge adds to the Aorist را من (but this last is added only in the singular, and in the plural masculine and common) when it denotes "commanding," "wishing," "intreating," or "asking about futurity," in the manner following. For example, when preceded by the particle من , which has no equivalent in English, but corresponds to the Latin an? or num? it will be as follows:

	27.52 EX 154 I A2274
PLURAL.	DUAL.	SINGULAR.
т ч.	р Ж.	PLM. MASC.
هَلْ يَنْصُرُنَ هَلَ يَنْصُرْنَانِ	هَلَ يَنْصُرَانِّ هَلَ تَنْصُرَانِّ	هل ينصرن هل تنصرن
هَلْ تَنْصُرُنَ هَلْ تَنْصُرْنَانِ	هَلُ تَنْصُرَانِ	من ره ورق من مروق هل تنصرِن هل تنصرِن
هَلُ نَنْصُرِنَ	*	م مروق هل أنصرن

The particle "would to God," etc., requires — to be added to the singular of the Aorist and to the plural masculine and common; as "would to God he would assist," where the single "merely is added, and the damma of the last radical changed into fatha.

After this mode may be inflected لَينْصُرَنَ and لَينْصُرَنَ "let him assist;" and لَا تَنْصُرَنَّ "do not assist;" or when preceded by an oath, as "وَٱللَّهُ يَنْصُرَنَّ by God he will assist;" or or then by God we will kill."

OF THE IMPERATIVE.

103. The Imperative, which is used only in the second person, corresponds with our Imperative in affirmative commands and exhortations. Like the Aorist it sometimes adds the Paragogical nun annexed, as ٱلْتُصْرِينَ " do thou assist," etc. This mood is formed by prefixing 1, called the alif of union, and written T when another word precedes. When beginning a sentence it has always kusru, as إَخَلَمُ "know thou;" إِخَلَمُ "strike thou;" unless the vowel of the penult radical, which is always the same with that of the Atture, be damma, when ا also takes damma, as انْصُر "assist thou;" the first and last radicals being inert. The initial alif is sometimes dropped when i or are prefixed. In the formation of the genders and numbers, the final serviles 1, 0, , and are employed as in the Aorist. The Imperative being used, as we have stated, only in the second person, the other persons are supplied by the Aorist; J with a kusra being "let us assist;" لِيَنْصُرُ "let him assist;" لِيَنْصُرُ which is also sometimes the case with the second, as لتنصر "assist thou;" but the J drops kasra and becomes inert when فَ or وَ is prefixed, as لُمُنْتُعُرُ " then let him assist;" لِ itself being even then sometimes omitted. The second person singular of the Imperative of the primitive verb is sometimes represented by an indeclinable word of the form إِنِعَالِ or إِنِعَالِ or "alight, thou. " نِزَالِ or نَزَالَ alight, thou.

OF THE PARTICIPLE ACTIVE OR NOUN OF AGENCY.

104. The participle of the primitive triliteral verb in the active voice is of the form نَعْدُلُ; and in the passive of the form تَعْدُلُ. There are however many other forms; and particularly, نَعُولُ and بَعُولُ which are both active and passive.

It has been objected to these participles that they are merely verbal adjectives, conveying no idea of time. It would seem, however, that they are rather of all times, according to the context, as in the following instance, وَ ٱللّٰهُ بَصِيرٌ بِمَا يَعْمَلُونَ (God is seeing (sees) what they do," where بَصِيرٌ evidently expresses present time.

OF THE INFINITIVE OR VERBAL NOUN.

- 105. The Infinitive, in Arabic, differs somewhat from the same part of the verb in most European languages; inasmuch as it is always a verbal noun, and generally declinable in the singular as a triptote. It is used often adverbially in the accusative case, and, by a peculiar idiom, is joined sometimes in construction with its own verb, to give a greater energy to the expression, thus فَرَنَهُ فَرَبًا literally, "he struck him striking," i.e., "he struck him severely."
- a. Mr. Richardson, in his Arabic Grammar, and of course his mere copyists, say "that the Infinitive (in Arabic) differs greatly from those of all other languages!" This is too sweeping an assertion, and besides, it contains three bits of nonsense—1st, it is ungrammatical or illogical; 2nd, it is untrue; and 3rd, it is absurd in any one man to speak in this style of "all other languages." In Greek, German, and Italian, the Infinitive is frequently employed as a verbal noun—just as it is in Arabic.
- b. The Infinitives of the primitive transitive verbs are formed regularly, as فغلّ, etc., in the paradigm; but those of the intransitives are irregular, and reducible to no rule, without innumerable exceptions. Grammarians make in all thirty-six different forms, as under:

نَصِر	28	19 نُصْرَي			ر، ه نصر
ز نَجِسرَة		ر 20 نِصرِي			ه ده نصر	2
ده د نصور		21 نَصَرَي	- 1		نصر نصر
نَصُورَةٌ		22 نَصْرَانَ	, -	13	ره نِصر
نعسورة		23 نصران	تصرة	14	ه-ء نصر
۱۷۷۰ مستصو		24 نِصْرَانُ	نَعَارةً	15	رم نصر	6
ر، رره منتصرة		25 نَصَرَانَ	نْصَارةً	16	نَصَارٌ	7
ره به منتصر		20 نَصُورُ	بضارة		نُصَارٌ	8
، ، ، ، ، . منصرة	36	27 نَصِيرٌ	نصري	18	نِصَارُ	9

c. The Infinitives of the derivative intransitives are formed in a similar manner, by inserting the characteristic serviles, and observing the general rules, as in the other inflections. They are, however, subject to various irregularities, for attaining a knowledge of which, a dictionary is the simplest mode, and indeed the only proper guide.

OF THE DERIVATIVE FORMATIONS.

106. There are twelve distinct formations of verbs derived from the primitive triliteral. The last we have just detailed in full; and the derived forms, all of which bear some affinity more or less close to the primitive, are divided into three classes according as they are augmented by one, two, or three of the servile letters. The verb is "he made," is still retained as a general paradigm. It is well adapted to serve as a model, as its three radical letters are so clearly perceptible to the eye.

107. The Derivative Formations are inflected precisely on the same principles as the primitive form; the persons having the same relation to the leading word in each tense, as those in the foregoing paradigms have to يَفْعَلُ فَعَلُ and يَفْعَلُ فَعِلْ and يَفْعَلُ فَعِلْ etc. It will be only requisite, therefore, in place of swelling the grammar unnecessarily with a great number of whole length paradigms, to give the first word alone of every tense, leaving it to the learner, by way of exercise, to fill up the other persons, which he may find to be a considerable help to his memory, as tending to make a more lasting impression than several cursory readings. Of the Derivatives, the 3rd, 4th, 6th, 7th, and 9th formations in general appear to occur most frequently, and therefore ought to have the greatest attention bestowed upon them. Next to these are the 1st, 2nd, and 5th formations; whilst the other four, but more especially the two last, are more confined in their use. The 3rd, 6th, and the following formations which take servile \ in the beginning, drop that letter in the agrist and participle, as may be observed in he paradigms; and the 4th and 5th, where the initial is 5, requently omit the latter in those persons of the agrist whose haracteristic is تَنَنَّرُ for تَنَنَّرُ. We have subjoined a able of all the formations of the Derivative Verbs, in which he student will see at one view the third person singular of he preterite and agrist of each; the second person singular f the imperative as well as the participles and infinitives.

General Significations of the Derivative Verb with reference to the Primitive.

108. It remains for us now to describe briefly the nature and peculiarities of the Derivative Formations of the Verb which may be deduced from the primitive triliteral root. These are generally reckoned to be twelve in number, or, according to some Grammarians, fourteen. They have all the same terminations or inflections as the primitive verb. Grammarians very improperly call them conjugations; but this term is apt to mislead the student, whose ideas of a conjugation are already formed according to the general usage of the Latin and French grammars, etc. Let not the student be alarmed, then, when he hears of the fifteen conjugations of the Arabic language, for there is in reality but one conjugation, according to our notions of the term. Instead of conjugations, then, I have here throughout made use of the term Formations.

a. Upon the various significations of the different derived formations of the verb, some grammarians have entered into long details; but, although well worth the notice of the curious investigator, these inquiries need not long occupy the attention of the student, especially at the present stage of his studies. The brief remarks here made will not be found without use, but it is only by reading and consulting the dictionary, that a knowledge can be gained of the true significations of the various formations. However minute might be the observations made upon the different meanings of the derivatives, we should still find many exceptions, which can only be learned by use; and the same must be said as to the particular formations, in which any given verb is to be found. Some roots are to be met with in only one formation, most are in several, none in all.

- 109. The source, or third person singular, of the preterite tense of the primary verb, consists, as we have before stated, of three consonants, the first and last of which have always fatha for their vowel; and the middle letter has fatha, as a general rule, when the verb is transitive or active; and either kusra or damma when neuter or intransitive; thus, خفت "he was great."
- 110. The first derivative formation doubles the middle letter of the primitive root, and its vowels are always three futhers, as in the preceding table. If the primitive root is transitive, the first formation is causal; thus, کُنْتُ "he wrote," becomes in the first formation کتب which means "he caused to write," or "taught writing." Again, when the root is a neuter or intransitive verb, the first formation is transitive; thus, أَذُن "he was sad," أَذُن "he saddened," or "he vexed." A few verbs of this formation are derived from nouns, and signify to form or produce whatever the noun signifies; thus, from تُحَبَّرُ bread," is formed "خَبْرُ he made bread, or baked." Another peculiarity of this formation is the ascribing of the sense of the primitive root to a given object; thus, from کُفُّر 'infidelity," comes the infinitive "lying," كِذْبُ which signifies "calling one an infidel;" so from "كِذْبُ" lying," comes تكذيت "accusing one of falsehood," or "giving ene the lie."
 - a. Verbs in the first formation are frequently, however, mere synonyms of the primitive, or only distinguished by being understood as a species of intensives; as كَسَّرُ and كَسَّرُ "he broke," فَرَقَ "he separated" or "dispersed," etc.

- 111. The second formation inserts alif after the first radical, and its vowels are always three fathas, as in the table. It is generally transitive, and often denotes a reciprocal action; thus, ثُولُسُ ضَارَبَ بُطُرُسُ "Paul beat Peter," implying, at the same time, that "Peter beat Paul in return;" and, in an intransitive sense, as بُطُرُسُ قَاعَدَ بُولُسُ قَاعَدَ بُولُسُ "Peter sat down with Paul;" كَاتَبَ "he wrote to" or "corresponded with" (another person).
- 112. The third formation prefixes alif, and it has always for its vowels three fathas, as in the table. Like the first formation, it gives a causal or active signification to the primitive; thus, "he taught writing," or "he dictated," or "made another write;" so, from "he was great," comes "he deemed (another) to be great," that is, he honoured," or "he respected" (another). It will be observed, then, as a general rule, that the first and third formations are the causals of the primitive triliteral root.

- a fally, to the first formation, which prefixes the letter , with a fally, to the first formation, is generally of the passive or submissive sense of the root; thus, هَا "he knew;" أَلَّ "he taught;" أَلَّ "he was taught," or "he learned." So, from "manners," "morals," or "polite literature," comes the infinitive of the first formation تَاكُّ "teaching manners," "chastisement;" and thence the infinitive of the fourth formation "تَاكُّ "submitting to be taught manners."
- 114. The fifth formation prefixes عن , with a falla, to the second. It generally denotes reciprocity, co-partnership, or association; thus, مَعْارِبَة "beating each other;" فعارية "fighting together," etc. So "slaying each other;" معارية "fighting together," etc. So "the corresponded (by writing);" ثاتب "he played with" (some one). Lastly, it may denote "pretending," the sense of the primitive; thus, تمارض "he feigned sickness," or, as they say at sea, "he shammed Abram;" so from عمال "ignorance," comes "جاد" "pretending ignorance."
- 115. The sixth formation prefixes the syllable of to the triliteral root, which is then pronounced with three fathas, whatever it may have originally been. This formation is always of a passive signification; hence, strictly speaking, it is never used in the passive form; thus, سُمَّلُ "he broke;" الْكُسَالُ "it was broken;" so the infinitives, الْكُسَالُ "being changed," الْكُسَالُ "being broken," are altogether passive in signification.

116. The seventh formation prefixes 1, and inserts (sometimes or or b) between the first and second radical of the triliteral, as may be seen in the table. Generally speaking, it denotes the passive or reflexive sense of the primitive triliteral root; thus, ذَرَنَ "he divided;" "it went to pieces;" أَضَطَرَبَ "he beat himself" (in agitation, etc.); hence the infinitive أَضَطَرَابَ "perplexity." Sometimes it denotes reciprocity, etc., like the fifth formation; thus, الْجَتِمَاعُ "mutual contention;" الْجَتِمَاعُ "collecting together."

a. In this seventh formation the place of the servile ن is supplied by whenever the first letter in the root is على, or j; thus, for الْدَرَّ "he was repelled," is written الْدَرَّةُ; for الْدَرَّةُ "it was recorded", where the radical is changed into على, or الْدَكَرُ , where the radical is changed into على, or الْدَكَرُ , where the becomes i, or الْدَدَكُر , where both remain. When the first letter of the root is one of these, ملى, or b, or b, the ن is changed into b, as it was dyed," for الطَّلَةُ ; الْصَلَّمَةُ إِلْمُ "it was dyed," for الطَّلَةُ إِلْمُ "it was unjustly treated," for الطَّلَةُ الْمُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّ

These formations are also used for expressing deformity, as انْحَامُ or انْحَامُ or انْحَامُ "he was wry-faced," "he had a distorted face;" الْحَوْمُ "it was crooked."
- root, as shewn in the table. Its general property is, asking, wishing, or demanding, the state or action expressed by the primitive; thus, عنر "he pardoned;" "he begged pardon." This formation agrees nearly with the Latin Desiderative Verbs, formed from the second supine by adding rio, such as esurio, "I desire to eat," from esu; so canaturio, "I wish I had my supper," from canatu. For a full account of the various shades of meaning peculiar to the derivative formations of the Verb, the reader may consult Dr. Lumsden's Persian and Arabic Grammars, as well as De Sacy's Grammaire Arabe, where the subject is absolutely exhausted.
- but seldom, are only employed to heighten the energy of the primitive, as we do by adding "exceedingly," "very," or some such synonymous word; thus, from خَشُنَ "it was harsh," is formed الخَشُوشِيّ "it was very harsh;" from عَلَطُ "he adhered," comes عَلَظُ "he adhered firmly" (to the neck of his camel): hence, figuratively, "he strenuously prosecuted his undertaking."

Verbs, and for the sake of variety we will adopt as our model the verb "he assisted." It cannot now lead to any mistake, after we have fully detailed the model نَعَلَ. The student has only to bear in mind that the three letters بر من , and , have taken the place of بر من , e, and بر respectively.

On Quadriliteral Verbs.

121. Of these there are only three different formations from the primitive which itself corresponds with the primitive of the triliterals; the first Quadriliteral formation agrees with the fourth triliteral; the second with the sixth; and the third with the eighth. They are formed as follows: primitive formation عَمُونَ ; first derivative تَمُولَ ; second المُعَمَّلِ ; and third منافق . The primitive consists simply of the four radicals, as مَا مُعَمَّلُ "the turned, or revolved;" the first derived formation is augmented by one servile, as مَا الله نَا الله تَعْمَى "it was turned;" and the second and third by two, as المُعَمَّى "it was turned;" and the second and third by two, as المُعَمَّى "it was turned;" and the second and third by two, as المُعَمَّى "it was turned;" the was horror-struck," "his hair stood on end."

a. This species of verbs, however, bears a very small proportion to the triliteral, occurring but seldom. There will be no occasion therefore to detain the learner longer upon the subject than just to present him with the leading words of each tense, as in the derivative triliterals; the other persons being inflected from these on the same principles, by the addition of the servile characteristics, already described.

- 122. In concluding my description of the Perfect Arabic 7erb, I must offer a few observations on those points in which I have differed from preceding writers. In the first clace, I have deviated from them entirely in the arrangement and mode of treatment of the subject; secondly, I have disarded the term Future Tense from the paradigm, and instead hereof, have used the word Aorist as the more appropriate; and lastly, I have dismissed from my work the term Conjugation, which, in the sense hitherto employed in Arabic grammars and lexicons, is a downright absurdity; and to be tolerated only because writers on the subject have not had the moral courage to substitute a more appropriate denomination. I shall most probably be told by gentlemen of the red tape that these innovations of mine will lead to confusion in perusing the best Arabic lexicons, such as Freytag's edition of Golius, etc. I can prove to them in a moment that their objection is utterly groundless. I am the very last person to adopt an innovation of any sort unless I feel convinced that it is a rational improvement. Let us for example take the following verbal root with such of its (so-called) conjugations as are in use, slightly abridged from Freytag's edition of Golius, and partly from Schalch's Vocabulary:

"he was safe, sound, or unblemished." II. conj. "he made secure;" "he saluted." III. conj. "he made peace or friendship with another." IV. conj. "he submitted or obeyed;" "he became a Muslim." V. conj. "he accepted or received;" "he was made a Muslim." VI. conj. (dual or plur.) "they made peace one with another." VIII. conj. "he touched with his hand or lips the sacred black stone in the temple of Mecca." X. conj. "he submitted himself to the power of another;" "he gave himself up."

b. Now if I were to compile or edit an Arabic lexicon, the preceding article would stand as follows: viz. سَلَم (Aor. i.) "he constructed a bucket," etc.; سَلَم "he was safe, sound," etc.—I. forms-tion, سَالُم "he made secure," "he saluted."—II. f. سَالُم "he made peace," etc.—III. f. أَسَلُم "he submitted or obeyed," etc.—IV. f. أَسَالُم "he accepted," etc.—V. f. أَسَالُم (dual or plur.) "they mutually made peace or friendship."—VII. f. "he touched," etc.—IX. f. إستسارُ "he surrendered himself into the power of another," etc. Here the reader will observe that what Freytag and others call the Second Conjugation, I call the First Formation—and so on with the rest. In short, if you drop a unit from Freytag's Roman Numerals denoting the Conjugation, you will have my numeral which denotes the Derivative Formation; and, vice versa, if you add a unit to my numerals, you will have the good old conjugation, if you think it of any advantage to you.

c. I cannot help drawing the reader's attention to a very serious omission on the part of Freytag in his otherwise invaluable Lexicon. The work abounds in certain Latin abbreviations, such as cca. "construitur cum accusativo;" ccga. "construitur cum gemino accusativo," etc. etc.; together with some thirty or forty others. Now what I complain of is, that—at least in my copy of Freytag's Lexicon, in four quarto volumes—the learned Professor has nowhere condescended to give one scrap of information respecting the abbreviations aforesaid. Whether he has been more attentive to the learner's convenience in his abridged edition I am not able to say, as I have not got the work at hand.

Of the Surd Verb— الأصر , also called فق , i.e. "doubled."

 Arabic grammars that I have yet seen (and I have seen several), this class of verbs is, I think, very improperly placed among the irregulars. Now the seeming irregularity is really euphonic and is reducible to a few simple rules, as follows. In all the inflections where, according to the conjugation of the perfect triliteral verb, the last radical is movable the penult radical coalesces with the last by tashatad, and the vowel of the penult is then suppressed, unless the letter preceding it has jazm, for then the vowel of the penult radical is given to the latter, which would otherwise have jazm. In all the inflections where, on the contrary, the last radical has jazm, these verbs are conjugated regularly; thus in the third person singular and masculine of the preterite. — "he loved," becomes ——; but the second person singular of the same tense is regular; as ——— or ——— "thou hast loved."

a. In the third person of the singular masculine of the acrist مَعْبُرُ is contracted into مَعْبُرُ, the damma of the second radical passing to the first, in place of its jazm. If the acrist follows a particle producing jazm, or an apocope, it becomes regularly because the last radical having jazm, no contraction takes place. Under the influence of these particles, fatha or kasea may be given to the last radical in lieu of jazm; in this case the contraction returning يَعْرُ for يَعْرُ to definite tense bears damma, the same vowel may also be given to the last; thus, instead of يَعْدُ, or even يَعْدُ, or even

b. The imperative preserves its regular form. According to the rule of the Surd Verb we should write إفرة , and إفرة , and إفرة , but the reason why the rule is not here followed, is, that the alif of union is always followed by a letter bearing jazm. Beside the regular form, the imperative has another, in which the insertion of the second radical in the third does take place, except in the plural feminine. Alif of the imperative is omitted here, according to the rule, by which it is never prefixed to a letter bearing a vowel.

c. Surd Verbs follow in the passive voice the same rules as in the active; thus, فَرُ is for فُرُ, kasra being dropped, because the preceding letter already bears a vowel; in the acrist it is يُقْرَرُ for يُقْرَرُ for يُقْرَرُ for يُقْرَرُ for يُقْرَرُ for يُقْرَرُ. fatha being given to the preceding letter which before had jazm; but in the third person plural feminine without contraction . The derivative formations of Surd Verbs follow a similar rule of contractions in those forms which admit it. All the peculiarities above mentioned are fully illustrated in the following paradigm of . "he extended," and فُوْ "he fled."

The preterite of this class, with regard to the vowel points, follows the same rule with those of the perfect verbs whose middle radical is damma or kasra, as "he touched," for "thou hast touched," etc. And the norist corresponds with such as have fatha or kasra on the penult, as يَعْفَى "he will lite," for يَعْفَى "he will thee," for يَعْرُو "the will thee," for يَعْرُو "the will thee," for يَعْرُو "the hast radical takes jazm, and the whole becomes regular, as لَمُ يَعُدُّ 'it does not extend:" or if the contraction do take place, fatha or kasra are substituted for jazm, as لَمُ يَعْفَى مَا أَلُو يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ اللهُ يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ وَاللهُ يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ اللهُ يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ وَاللهُ اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ يَعْفَى اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ يَعْفَى أَلُو اللهُ اللهُ

The derivative formations have the same affinity to the primitives as those of the perfect forms have to theirs; excepting, however, the 1st, 4th, and other derived formations, which, having already one characteristic tashdid, cannot take another upon the same letter, and are conjugated therefore like the corresponding verbs of the regular system; thus, in the preterite active—مَنَا for اَلْمَدُا ; الْمُدُا أَلَّهُ أَلَّهُ اللَّهُ وَالْمُدُا أَلَّهُ اللَّهُ وَالْمُدُا أَلَّهُ اللَّهُ وَالْمُدُا أَلْمُدُا أَلْمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰ أَلْمُدُا أَلْمُدُا أَلْمُدُا أَلْمُدُا أَلْمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰ أَلْمُعُلِدُ أَلْمُعُلِدُ أَلْمُ اللّٰ اللّٰمُ اللّٰ اللّٰ اللّٰمُ اللّٰ أَلْمُ اللّٰ اللّٰمُ اللّٰ أَلْمُعُلِي اللّٰمُ الللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ الللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ الللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ

We may also observe that in the derivative formations in Table I., as in the primitive, the contraction may be preserved in the acrist, and in the imperative, whenever the third radical ought by the influence of a particle preceding, to bear the symbol jazm; thus,

SECTION IV.

Of the Infirm or Imperfect Verbs, etc.

128. With regard to these, their irregularities arise entirely from the mutable nature of the infirm letters 1, 2, and 2 when used as radicals, which are either changed from one to another, dropped altogether, or deemed quiescent, when they remain; having, in general, no sound, according to Arabian grammarians, but what they derive from the vowel of the preceding letter. These deviations, however, are subject to certain rules and principles with which it is necessary for the learner to make himself acquainted. For the satisfaction, therefore, of those who may wish for a minute investigation of the causes of these interchangeable powers, the following observations are translated from Erpenius, with corrections from De Sacy, etc. This section the former of these grammarians not inaptly styles vere aurea; and it is every way deserving of the student's strictest attention.

a. The use of the term "quiescent," or "silent," in the above paragraph is the true one, meaning "not sounded;" and it shews at the same time the aptness of what I stated on the subject in § 26, a. In the Grammars by Richardson and Stewart the term quiescent is applied to an inert letter as well as to one not sounded.

General Rules on the Nature and Permutation of the Letters 1, 2, 3 and 2.

129. The letters 1, ,, and عي, are often reciprocally substituted for one another, but never at the beginning of a word; nor in the middle or end, if preceded by jazm, in which case they always remain unchanged. When they are themselves destitute of vowels, preceded by a heterogeneous vowel (§ 30, a.), they are in that case rendered homogeneous to the preceding vowel; thus, I is changed to , as أَنْوَى 'a trench;'' I to ج, as أَنْرُ for عَلَيْنُ 'a trench;'' I to ج, as عَلَا أَنْ 'a trench ' نَوْرَ بَا أَنْ ' the roaring of a lion;'' وقاء وقاء ' ' the roaring of a lion;'' وقاء وقاء ' ' rendering certain.''

a. The letters و and و sometimes remain after fatha; in this case, if inert, they form a diphthong with the preceding fatha; as in يُومُ "a day," لَيْلُ "a night;" but if they be not inert they are pronounced as a long alif, as "رمية he throw it," like غزوة; رماة "an assault."

Rules peculiar to the Letter \ Alif.

130. The letter alif, in the middle of a word, when movable by damma is changed into ; when by kasra, into , whether pre-

 - 132. The letter 1, at the end of a word preceded by fatha, when movable by damma, is changed into ; when by kasra, into ; when by kasra, into يَفْتُ for تَفْتُ "thou shalt desist;" شني "of the leaves of senna." It is not incorrect, however, to write the leaves of senna. It is not incorrect, however, to write تَفْتَا تَعْتَا بِهُ مَا يَقْتَا بِهُ مَا يَقْتَا بِهُ مَا يَقْتَا بِهُ مَا يَقْتَا بُهُ وَمُ اللّٰهُ وَمُعْتَا بُهُ وَمُ اللّٰهُ وَمُعْتَا بُعُتُ وَمُعْتَا بُعُونُ وَمُعْتَا بُعْتَا بُعُونُ وَمُعْتَا وَمُعْتَا بُعُونُ وَمُعْتَا بُعْتَا بُعُونُ وَمُعْتَا مُعْتَاعِبُونُ وَمُعْتَا بُعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعِعُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ ومُعُمْتُهُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَاعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعْتَعُونُ وَمُعُنَاءُ وَمُعُنَاءُ وَمُعُمْتُهُ وَمُعُمْتُونُ وَمُعُمْتُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَعُمْتُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمْتُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُعُمُونُ وَمُ

Should two alif-hamzas meet together in the same word, and the first be moved by a vowel, and the second be inert, the latter loses its hamza, and becomes merely an alif of prolongation changed, if need be, into , or يَ ; thus, الله وي for الله وي "he believed." The alif of prolongation, preceded by another alif movable by fatha, is sometimes dropped; this is pointed out by the position of the fatha, which is then written perpendicularly, or by madda; thus, وَحَمَانُ "merciful:" قَيَامَةُ for
- 134. When the interrogative particle (Lat. an? or num?) is followed by alif-hamza, if the second be moved by fatha, one of them, with its vowel, is dropped, or a hamza is placed first, and then an alif with madda: thus, النُّ or النَّهُ for اللّٰهُ وَاللّٰهُ وَاللّٰهُ

Rules peculiar to the letter, Waw.

135. The letter wāw in the beginning of a word, when followed by another wāw, movable by a vowel, is changed into alif-hamza, to avoid the meeting of two wāws; thus, أُواصِلُ for وَاصِعَةُ pl. of أُواضِعُ; وَاصِلُةٌ for وَوَاضِعُ pl. of وَاصِلُةٌ for وَاصِعَةً pl. of وَاصِلَةً for يَاتِيةً of letter be two wāws at the beginning of a word and the first be movable by damma, it may be changed into hamza; thus, وُورِيَ for وُورِيَ for وُورِيَ .

136. The letter, when final, and preceded by fatha, rejecting its vowel, and throwing the nunation, if there happens to be any, on the preceding fatha, is changed to inert if it be the third letter of the word, or to if it be the fourth,

- 137. The letter, when servile at the end of certain persons of the verb (see § 37, b), is followed by silent 1; as the for $\frac{1}{2}$ where the final 1 is not sounded.
- a. When in the middle of a word there are two māms, the first movable by damma, and the second inert, if the letter preceding the first is neither inert nor silent, and the first is not doubled by tashdīd, the first, is often changed into hamza, preserving the figure of; thus, for غُرُونَة ; خُرُونَة for عُرُونَة ; خُرُونَة for عُرُونَة ; الله for عُرُونَة for عُرُونَة ; الله for عُرُونَة for عُرُونَة ; الله for عُرُونَة for عُرُونَة ; عُرُونَة for عُرُنَة for عُرُونَة for عُرُونَة for عُرُونَة for عُرُنَة

Rules peculiar to & Yā.

jas. The letter ن in the middle of a word, movable by fatha, and preceded by damma, is sometimes changed to; as رَمُوانَ for رَمُوانَ "a throw," "a shot," "darting;" but, according to De Sacy, this change is of rare occurrence. The letter ن in the middle of a word, followed by another ع inert, often expels the latter; as رَئِسُ for رَئِسُ "a governor," "prefect," "chief;" but this takes place only when the first of the two ي yās has taken the place of a hamzated alif. In all other cases the two ي yās unite by tashdīd.

- 139. The letter ي final, preceded by fatha, cannot be made movable by any short vowel, but rejecting its own vowel, and throwing back the nunation, if there is any, on fatha, it becomes quiescent like \(\frac{1}{2}\); as أُولِي "the first;" "the first;" "a youth;" أُولِي "of the first;" أُولِي "a youth." If another ي precedes, it is changed to \(\frac{1}{2}\); as a sally "gifts" (excepting a few proper names).
- 140. The letter ي final, preceded by kasra, takes neither damma nor kasra, but throwing them away is silent; as حَانِي for مَانِي and "barefoot;" and, in this instance, if there be a nunation denoting the nominative or genitive case, it is thrown back on the preceding letter, and the ي is dropped; as مَامِي and رَامِي and رَامِي and رَامِي as shooter," "a darter."
- 141. The letter ي final, preceded by damma, changes it to kasra, remaining itself unaltered; as تَمَنِّي for اَيْدُيُ "a wish;" a wish;" أيْدِ وَ ''hands;" and this rule holds also when و intervenes; as مَرْمُويٌ for مَرْمُويٌ for مَرْمُويٌ بيد ''thrown,'' "shot," or "hurled."

Rules peculiar to Waw and Ya in common.

142. The letters, and , preceded by a short vowel, and being themselves movable, followed by, or inert, are entirely dropped, rejecting the vowel, if fatha precedes (with which it forms a diphthong), or, if deanna or kasra, throwing them back, in place of the vowel of the foregoing letter; as them back, in place of the vowel of the foregoing letter; as "thou (f.) wilt be "sassaulted;" "ithey threw;" تَوْرُونَ for عَازُونَ "assailants;" يَرْمُونَ for يَرْمُونَ "they will throw." If, however, in this case, the vowel preceding be damma or kasra, it is suppressed, and replaced by the vowel belonging to the به من به which has been dropped; as غَارِيْنَ for غَارِيْنَ "assail thou;" أَغْرُى "assail thou i" أَغْرُى "assailants."

- a. The letters و and ن movable, preceded by fatha, and followed by a movable letter, are often changed into inert!; thus, قَوْمُ for فَأَمْ for سَارِ "he stood;" سَارِ "for سَارِ" he went," "set forth."
- b. The same two letters meeting in such a manner that the first has no vowel, change, to ي , both coalescing by tashdid; thus, أَيُوامُ for أَيَّامُ for كُيُّ "days:" كُونِيُ for كُيُّ
- 143. The letters, and ي final, when preceded by a servile), are changed to hanza; as آردايُ for ردايُ "a cloak;" "heaven," "the sky."
- a. When, in the foregoing rules, the letters 1., and ω are said to be preceded by any vowel, such vowel is supposed to be immediate, not in combination with a letter of prolongation, nor when jazm interposes, either expressed over an inert letter, or concealed under tashdid; for a letter marked by tashdid always contains a latent jazm; thus, $\tilde{\lambda}_{\bullet}$ is the same as $\tilde{\lambda}_{\bullet}$.
- b. Alif is considered as medial when followed by the affixed pronouns; not so , or عن ; as الله عن , من الله بالله باله not مَا َ مَا َ ' of its water ;" رَمَاهُ not رَمَاهُ not مَا َ مَا َ ' he threw or shot him ;" غَزُوهُ not غَزُاهُ ,غَزًا " he assaulted him."

- c. Where a letter is called movable in the foregoing rules, it denotes that it carries a short vowel, in opposition to inert, when it has none; where, in the language of grammar, it is said $\underline{\omega}$ final after fatha, cannot be rendered movable, it implies simply that $\underline{\omega}$ in that case cannot have a short vowel.
- 144. When the , and ي in the middle of a word bear a vowel, are preceded by jazm, and followed by a letter bearing a vowel also, they often transfer their own vowel to the letter having jazm, and become inert; thus, غَالُ for يَسْرُ "it will lengthen," so يَسْرُ for يَسْرُ "he will set forth." In this case, if the vowel is fatha, the , or changes into \; if kasra, the , changes into \; if kasra, the , changes into \; if will be afraid; "he will dread."
- a. If after alif inert, a letter bearing jazm follow, the alif is dropped, and damma or kasra substituted for the fatha preceding. Damma, when the , whose place is taken by alif, would bear damma or fatha, as طَالَتُ for طَالَتُ, regularly عَلَيْتَ. When the alif inert is in the place of ي or of , moved by kasra, the kasra is used instead of damma; as سَرَتَ, reg. سَارَتَ for سَرَتَ, reg. خَافَتَ for خَافَتَ for خَافَتَ.
- b. When, and in the middle of a word are moved by kasra, and preceded by alif inert, they are replaced by with a hamza; thus, for قَاوِلٌ "a speaker," "one who says;" قَاوِلٌ for قَاوِلٌ "inclined," etc.

Of the Hamzated Verb-

a. When I the characteristic of the imperative has damma, the hamza or radical alif is changed to ; as أُوُّ "hope thou," "hope thou," "أَهُ "he did eat;" أَهُ "he commanded," throw away not only hamza, but also the characteristical I; as عُرَّر كُلُّ , كُنَّ ; sometimes, however, though rarely, you will find أَوْكُلُّ and أَوْكُلُّ and أَوْكُلُّ and أَوْكُلُّ the imperative I being dropped, and the radical hamza returning.

لَّهُ اللَّهُ مَا أَنْوَ اللهُ عَالَمُ وَالْوَ مَا أَوْلُو مَا أَوْلُو اللهُ اللهُ

c. It is only necessary to apply the same rules to all the other derivative formations in order to find their root, when hamza is changed into وَ مَنْ . Thus, اَسْتُوْصِلَ is the passive voice of اَسْتُوْصِلَ. In the fifth formation it must be observed that the hamza, preceded by fatha, followed by alif inert, may be changed into و; thus, from تُواكلَ may be written in the fifth formation لَكُمُ مُنْ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى الل mediately preceding it; thus, in the preterite is written آلَ سِهُ for سِلْبَ; بَالْسَ for مِأْبِ ; in the aorist وَيُسَالُ ; يَسَالُ in the passive voice it is يَصَالَبُ .

- a. Verbs having hamsa for their medial radical are sometimes, though seldom, conjugated after the manner of the concave verbs, of which more anon, hamsa being then quiescent; as المال "he asked," for مال "he will ask," for مَال ; يَسَالُ "ask thou," for إِنَّالُ "where both the alifs drop; the radical hamsa, according to the preceding rules.
- 147. Bearing in mind the rules already laid down respecting \(\) alif (\§ 130, etc.), the learner will meet with no serious difficulty in the derivative formations of a primitive whose medial letter is \(\) hemover example, let us take the verb \(\) he consolidated," whose second, third, seventh, and ninth derivative formations are as follows—

INFINITIVE.	PARTICIPLE.	IMPERATIVE.	AURIST.	PRETERITE.	FORMATION.
مُالْ مُعَالَىٰ مُ	• للائم	لائم	ؠؙۘڵٲؿٞؠؙ	لَاءَمْ	II.

إستلاام	مستلقم	إستلقم	يُسْتَلِّقُمُ	استلام	IX.

148. When hamza is the last radical, it is either retained or changed into, or according to the preceding rules

- a. The quadriliteral verbs, such as أَجَاجًا وَمُرَارً , present no new difficulty; the rules are always the same: thus from مُمَانًى comes in the 3rd formation the preterite إَطْمَأَنِي ; in the acrist يَطْمُئِنَ ; and in the imperative إَطْمَأُنِي ; or by contraction إَطْمَئُنِي .
- b. Verbs that have hamza for their second radical letter, are, as we have already stated, sometimes conjugated like concave verbs, in which alif is inert, as coming from , or ي radical. This is particularly observable in the verb مَالُ "he asked," which is often written مَالُ , aorist يُسَالُ or يَسَالُ. The imperative is مَسَالُ the alifs are dropped, the radical hamza by the general rule, and the servile alif because the following letter bears a vowel. Verbs, of which the last radical is hamza, are often confounded also with verbs properly called defective, that is, such as have for their last radical or .

Of the Simile Verb.

149. The imperfect or infirm verbs are divided into three classes, which are commonly called the Simile, the Concave, and the Defective. The Simile Verb has , or ي for the first radical, and is named by the Arabians بشالٌ, implying resemblance, because in the preterite it quite resembles a perfect verb; and it differs from the latter only by throwing away, in general, the quiescent radical, in the agrist active, and in the imperative of the primitive triliteral verb, and also in the infinitive, when of the form يَمِقُ, as يُضِرَّةُ he will love," for . وَمَنْفَةٌ to love,'' for " مِقَةٌ ; إِوْمِتَى love thou," for " مِتَى ; يَوْمِقُ when ي quiescent is the radical, it is changed to و when jazmaled after ḍamma, agreeable to § 138); as أَيْسَرُ he was rich," which has in the aorist يُنْصِرُ for يُنْسِرُ , like يُنْصرُ ; and in the participle مُدْيِّرٌ for مُدْيْسِرٌ, like مُدْنِسِرٌ. In every other respect (with some very rare exceptions) both species of Simile Verbs, whether active or passive, together with their derivative formations, are regular, the 7th formation only substituting tashdīd in place of the initial infirm radicals, over its characterhe was en-' إِتَّسَرَ ; إِوْتَعَدَ he promised," for إِتَّعَدَ as riched," for اِیْتَسَرُ. These however sometimes remain, become homogeneous, or take the sound of the preceding vowel; as إِيْتَعَدَ ; مُيْتَسِرٌ for مُوتَسِرْ ; يَيْتَسِرُ for مُوتَسِرْ ; إِيْتَسَرَ for . إُوْتِعَادًا for إيتِعَادَا ; مُوتَعِدُّ ; إِوْتَعَدَ

a. When the second radical in the agrist does not bear kasra, that tense is regularly formed; as يَوْجَلُ from يَوْجُلُ from يَوْجُلُ from يُوْجُلُ he loved." When the aorist is regular, the imperative is so likewise; as أُوْجُهُ . In the last two examples, the يَدُنّ , إِيْجُلُ radical, according to the rules of permutation; thus, إِيْدُنّ imperative of يُدُدّ , is for إِيْدُنّ , is for عُرُدُدُ.

- b. Several verbs lose و in the aorist though their second radical in that tense bears fatha. These verbs are وَطِيّ "he trod under foot," which is for "it was large;" وَنَعَ "it fell or occurred;" وَضَعَ "he took leave;" وَهَبَ "he placed;" which make in the aorist وَهَبَ بَيْتُ ب
- c. The irregularity of all these verbs exists only in the active voice of the primitive form. In the passive voice of that form, and in all the derivative formations, they present no irregularity except indeed in the seventh formation, as will be observed immediately. Verbs having of for first radical, are not, properly speaking, irregular; as بَيْسِرُ, "it was dry," يُسِرُ, يَسَرُ, it must only be observed that the radical عن is changed into when it is quiescent after damma; thus, يَسِرُ makes in the aorist of the third formation يُوسِرُ, instead of يُسِرُ; the rule of permutation is merely to be observed.
- non, that in the seventh formation they change the first radical into ت, which then unites by tashdīd with the servile peculiar to that formation: hence from مُوَكُ "he promised," comes the Pret. إِوْتَعَدَّ for اِتَعَدُّ Aorist, يَوْنَعِدُ for يَتَعِدُ for اِتَعَدُّ ; Imper. إِوْنَعِدُ for يَتَعِدُ for إِوْنَعِدُ for إِوْنَعِدُ for إِوْنَعِدُ for إِوْنَعِدُ for إِوْنَعِدُ for إِنَّعَادُ In like manner from يَسَرَ he played dice," we have in the seventh formation: Pret. إِيْسَسَرُ for إِيْسَسَارً .

a. Sometimes the و and gremain unchanged into عي and adapt themselves to the preceding vowel according to the rules already laid down; thus the two verbs just specified may be conjugated as follows, viz.: Pret. إِيْقَعِدُ for اِيْتَعِدُ (اللهُ اللهُ

a. In the third persons of the preterite (except the plural feminine), the letters, and ω are changed to \inetitian inert after fatha; thus, instead of they write آزار and سَار, etc., as may be seen in the two following paradigms (§ 152).

- b. In the other persons those radicals are dropped altogether, throwing back the vowel on the preceding letter (see paradigm next page); but if that vowel is fatha, as in عَوْلُ and عَلَى above, it is changed in the concave, to damma, and in the concave so to kasra; so that in those persons Concave Verbs in, have either damma or kasra on the first radical, and those in salways kasra.
- 152. The primitive forms of the verbs "for "he said," and "in for "he went," are conjugated at full length in the two following paradigms. As verbs of this species are of frequent occurrence in the language, the student will do well to study their peculiarities very carefully.

General Remarks on the Concave Verbs.

- 153. In the active voice, if the penult vowel of the preterite is fatha, it is changed in the agrist into damma before quiescent, and to kasra before quiescent. penult is kasra, it becomes in the agrist fatha; and if damma, it remains so; throwing back the vowel to the first radical in place of jazm; if that vowel happens to be fatha, the and are changed to 1. In the feminine plural the letters and are dropped on account of the subsequent jazm; and, when the last radical is ... it coalesces, by tashdīd, with the servile in the 3rd person feminine plural of the preterite, the 3rd and 2nd plural feminine of the aorist, and the feminine plural of the imperative. The, and e are likewise thrown out every where, if an apocope takes place; as لَمْ تَسِر ; (لَمْ يَقُولُ he says not" (for لَمْ يَقُولُ she walks not;" "we fear not," etc.; the last radical, as may be observed, being then always jazmated. The imperative has no alif of union, because the first radical bears a vowel, as in نِرٌ and alif of union can only come before a letter bearing jazm.
- a. The concave radical letters are also dropped in the singular masculine and plural feminine of the imperative; the servile initial alif being also omitted in every person (see paradigms, pp. 126 and 127). But they return when the paragogical ... takes place; as قُولَنَّ "say thou;" تُولَنَّ "go thou;" خَافَتَ "fear thou."
- b. The radical alif in the participle, following the characteristical inert alif, ought to have a vowel, as two inert letters cannot meet, but hamza or movable alif is substituted for it, which (by § 130, etc.) is changed to $; thus, قَالِلُ for قَالِلُ and that for سَائِرٌ so سَائِرٌ and that again for سَائِرٌ.

- c. Verbs having و for their second radical, take damma in the aorist, when the preterite is either of the form يَقُولُ وَ عَلَى مَاكُ وَ عَلَى مَاكُ وَ عَلَى اللهُ وَ اللهُ وَاللهُ وَاللهُ
- 154. In the preterite passive, the vowel Rasra, of the middle radical, is thrown back to the first, whose own vowel is then lost; thus, قيل is for مسرَ for مسرَ for مسرَ for مسرَ are the same in the passive as the active, and are only to be distinguished by the sense of the passage.
- a. In the acrist passive, the fatha of the middle radical falling back upon the first, and ي are changed to \ inert (according to \ 142), and يُسَيرُ and يُسَارُ being for يُسَيرُ and يُسَارُ being for يُسَيرُ. There is no difference in the preterite and acrist of the passive voice, between verbs whose second radical is, or those having c for the same.
 - b. In the passive participle, the damma of the second radical being removed to the first, the original و is thrown out; thus, مَنُولُ for مَغُولُ: but in concave مسر damma is also changed to kasra; as مَسْبُورُ but in approved authors, however, particularly among the poets, many of these participles are regularly formed, as مَسْبُورُ " guarded;" but especially those of concave مَشُولُ " sewn together; " مَشُولُ " measured," etc.

155. Concave verbs whose last radical is , incorporate the same by tashdid, with the informing the second persons of the preterite, and the first person singular of the same tense; thus, from "he is dead," or "mated" (in chess), comes in the first person singular , and in the second persons مُتُّمَّا , مُثَنَّهُ. In concave verbs whose last radical is , a similar rule obtains, whenever this , being jazmated, is followed by o forming the person. Thus from مان (for (صُوَنَ) "he carefully preserved," is made in the third person plural feminine of the preterite, and in the second person plural feminine of the imperative صُنّ ; in the first person plural of the preterite مُثَّا; and in the third person plural feminine of the aorist يَصُنُّ. These observations equally apply to the derivative verbs, and are of importance in finding the root by those who are reading Arabic works written without vowel-points or orthographical signs.

Derivative Formations from Concave Roots.

156. We have already observed that amongst derivatives from concave roots, the third, sixth, seventh, and ninth only are irregular. In these derivatives no difference exists between those whose second radical is, and those where it is

. It will therefore quite suffice to give as a paradigm of these forms, the first word of each tense, as in the following paradigms:—

The learner will perceive that in the above formations the concaves in, and are conjugated alike; and that the active participles of the 6th and 7th formations are exactly the same with the passives, the difference in sense being only discoverable from the tenor of the subject. In the infinitives of the 3rd and 9th formations, and a throwing their fatha back upon the preceding letter, which otherwise would be jazmated, are changed to alif-inert; and the servile final alif (employed in forming the infinitives of the regular verbs الْسَتَعَالَةُ and السَتَعَالَةُ being for السَتَعَالَةُ and السَتَعَالَةُ . The middle radicals of the infinitives of the 6th and 7th formations, as may be observed in the paradigms, are regularly movable (i.e. have vowels); the concave however being changed to __.

Some verbs of this species however in the primitive form are conjugated regularly; thus, عَور "he was one-eyed;" Aor. عَادِر ; Imp. عَادِر ; so also عَادِر "he hunted;" Aor. عَادِر ; Imp. أَصَيد ; Part. عَادِل . a. The other derivatives are regular; it is to be observed, however, that in the passive voices of the second formation فَاعَلُ and of the fifth, مَنْاعَلُ of concave verbs, whose second radical is , that the alif characteristic of these forms, and which is changed into on account of the damma preceding, does not unite by tashdid with the radical , that follows it, thus from مَنْ (for مُورِمٌ) "he stood," we have مَنْ and not مُورِمٌ . If the second radical is يُورِمُ "he sold," we have in the second formation active بَرُيكُ which in the passive voice makes بُريكُ .

The Substantive Verb—فكان.

- 158. We here subjoin the Substantive Verb (أكونَ (for زُكُونَ) "he was;" it is conjugated as أَلَ (for نُحُونُ) "he said," already described, with this difference only, that the last radical coalesces by tashdīd with servile, in those persons where that letter forms the final characteristic agreeably to § 97, c.
- a. This verb, unless to avoid an ambiguity, is seldom used in the present tense, being then, as in the Latin, for the most part understood; as اَنَا ٱلطَرِيقُ وَالْحَقُ وَٱلْحَيْقُ الْحَيْقُ الْحَيْقُ (sum) via, veritas et vita, "I (am) the way, and the truth, and the life." The use and application of this verb will be further explained in the Syntax.

for the last radical letter; as نُونُ "he assaulted;" "he threw." They are also called أَرُ الرَّبِية '' he assaulted;" "he threw." because they have four letters in the 1st person singular of the preterite; as فَرُتُ wherein they differ from the concave verbs which have only three in the same person. The last radical undergoes changes resembling those to which the second radical is subject in concave verbs; sometimes it is changed into another letter, sometimes it disappears altogether, and sometimes its vowel passes to the preceding letter. The chief anomalies of these verbs are founded on the rules of permutation, as will be seen in the following paradigms:—

If the penult of the preterite has fatha, it here (as in the concaves) becomes damma, with quiescent, and kasra with quiescent وربي , unless the middle radical is a guttural letter, when fatha in that case remains, as in the perfect verbs; thus, رَعَي "he pastured" or "fed," وَتَعَي ; if damma is the penult vowel of the preterite, it remains regular, as يَشُو "he travels by night;" but if kasra, it is changed to fatha, as يَرْضَي "he will approve;" where و substituted for is quiescent, and is inflected as follows:—

In the plural masc. and in the 2nd pers. fem. sing. a contraction is made of the , and , when the penult of the acrist has danma, which removes all distinction between the masculine and feminine plural; as يَغُون and مَا يَعُون , and also between the 2nd persons feminine singular and plural, when either fatha or kasra happen to be the penult vowels, as مَنْ فَعَنْ لَهُ لَهُ عَلَيْهُ لَهُ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهُ لَهُ اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّ

Of Verbs Doubly Imperfect.

168. Such verbs as have any two of the infirm letters 1, 2, or 5 for their radicals, are said to be doubly imperfect. They follow the mode of the simple imperfect, according to the position of those radicals, and are divided into two classes. The first class comprehends the hamzated and inert, of which there are four subdivisions:

1. The first radical hamzated, the second inert; as آب (for أُوّب) "he returned," which is conjugated with a regard to the vowels of the first radical (here represented by madda) like أَوْمَ and with respect to the second, like قال; as

169. رأى "he saw" should be regularly conjugated; but, on account of its frequent occurence, the hamzated alif is dropped, and its vowel thrown upon the preceding letter, as often as the , is jazmated. In the primitive form, therefore, the Aorist and Imperative are inflected as follow:

Of the Negative Verb.

173. The Negative Defective Verb بَسَن, though conjugated only in the preterite, is quite unlimited in point of time, signifying "it is not," "it was not," or "it will not be," etc. It is apparently formed of the particle "not," and بَيْسَ or "exists;" and is inflected as follows:

Verbs of Praise and Consure.

Of Verbs of Admiration, or Surprise.

Like the preceding, they are rather a kind of interjectional formulæ than a particular species of verb. They are employed in two ways; the first مَا أَنْعَلَى, the form of the third person singular masculine of the preterite of the third derivative formation, preceded by the particle مَا , and followed by an accusative case. The second mode is to employ the second person singular masculine of the imperative of the third formation أَفْعِلْ , followed by the object admired having the preposition prefixed; as أَفْضِلُ بِزَيْدٍ or يُزَيْدٍ "how excellent is Zaid!" or "Zaid is very excellent." This subject will be more fully examined in the Syntax.

176. As an appropriate Appendix to our two Sections on the Verb, we here subjoin a series of useful tables which we recommend to the student's careful and frequent perusal till he has committed them all to memory. Table I., page 149, exhibits at one view the Preterite Active of the cleven species of Verbs, which we have already explained § 90 to § 167. The upper line (No. 1) shews the Regular Verb قَدَل. No. 2 shews the inflection of a Surd Verb. Nos. 3, 4 and 5 exhibit the three species of Hamzated Verbs. Nos. 6 and 7 exhibit the Simile Verbs. Nos. 8 and 9, the Concave Verbs. Lastly, Nos. 10 and 11 are examples of the Defective or Irregular Verbs. In like manner Table II. exhibits the Agrist Active of each of the foregoing species of Verbs in the same order. Table III., the Imperative, the Participle Active, the Infinitive, and the Participle Passive, which is inserted here because there is more room than we could have in either of the next two tables which exhibit the Preterite and Aorist Passive on the same plan as Fables I. and II. respectively. It has not been deemed necessary to insert in the Tables those verbs which are called the Doubly and Triply Imperfect, described from § 168 to § 172, inclusive; as they are not very numerous, and their inflection is more irregular than that of the others.

SECTION V.

Of the Indeclinable Particles - التحروف (plural of 177. Arabian grammarians designate those parts of speech which we call Prepositions, Adverbs, Conjunctions, and Interjections, under the general appellation of Particles, as we stated, § 44. In treating of these we shall commence with the Preposition, thus far differing from the arrangement usually observed in European grammars. The Prepositions, Adverbs, and Conjunctions are each divided into two classes, the Inseparable and the Separable; the first being always directly prefixed, and the other, though not joined, invariably preceding the word which they govern. One or other of them may occur in every line, and are of much consequence to a proper understanding of the language; the Inseparable Propositions, Adverbs, and Conjunctions together with the servile letters, are very apt to perplex the beginner in various ways; but more especially by fatiguing his patience in turning over, to no purpose, the leaves of a dictionary, for vocables which he can never find, till he has learned to analyse and separate those letters or particles from the words to which they are prefixed. It will be requisite for him, therefore, to pay very great attention to the observations upon them, which we are about to offer, in order that they may make a necessary impression on the memory.

a. Most of the l'articles, as we shall immediately see, are either substantives, adjectives, or verbs slightly modified; hence it often happens that the same word may belong to more than one of the subdivisions of particles; just as in Latin the word ante is either a preposition or an adverb, according to its application.

and , all of which govern the genitive case of the noun to which they are prefixed. The Preposition - has kasra for its vowel, and signifies generally "in," as بَالْمُسْجِد, "in the mosque;" so نَصَرَكُمُ ٱللَّهَ بِبَدْر God aided you (when you were) in Badr." It also denotes "with," "along with," or "together with;" as اَكَلْتُ خُبْزًا بِتَمْرِ I ate bread with dates;" so, عَنْتُ بِقَلْم "I wrote with a pen." When subjoined to verbs of "coming" and "going," it denotes "along with," and then the phrase conveys the signification of "bringing," or of "taking away;" as اُتَى بِٱلْكَتَابِ he came with the he went " فَهَبَ بِآلَنُورِ "; book," i.e. "he brought the book away with the light," i.e. "he took away the light." It sometimes denotes "compensation" or "retribution," equivalent to our words "fer," "on account of;" as follows: life for life, and an eye for an " النَّفْسُ بِالنَّفْسِ وَ الْعَيْنُ بِالْعَيْنِ a few phrases to express swearing; as مالاً "by God!" "by the Lord of the Ka'ba!" In like manner the particle, is employed, (when it is a preposition), as "by God!" "We may observe, however, that, is generally used as a conjunction denoting "and." It sometimes signifies "with," or "along with," indicating a simultaneous event or action, and in that case it governs the accusative; as "the Amīr came with the bank;"

180. The Preposition & denotes "resemblance," corresponding to our words "like," or "as," and governs the genitive; as كَرُّ "like a man." It is prefixed also to the isolated pronouns; thus, الله "like me;" الله "like thee;" كَانَت "like him;" but it is very rarely used with the affixed, though De Sacy quotes a few instances; as ين "like me," etc. The word المن composed of and of the demonstrative المن أن is considered as a noun, and if governed by a preceding word, the antecedent loses the nunation, as in the following example: المن شَبَة كَذَا مِن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة كَذَا مِن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا مِن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا مِن سَبَة عَدَا مُن سَبَة عَدَا

- a. I consider , which is generally called an adverb, to be as genuine a preposition as either or . My reasons are—1st, that it uniformly governs the genitive case like the two last particles; 2nd, that it is virtually a preposition in English, as in the phrases "like me," "like him," etc., where "like" governs the objective case, the same as any other preposition; 3rd, it is viewed as a preposition by De Sacy (Grammaire Arabe, p. 468). Lastly, it is invariably a preposition governing the dative or ablative case in the Gaelic language, whether Highland or Irish. Stewart in his Gaelic Grammar, Edinburgh, 1812, p. 126, gives mar, "like," as a preposition. So does O'Donovan in his Irish Grammar, 1845, p. 285.
- "to," the sign of the dative case as "to a master," "to a master," "praise be to God." With the affixed pronouns it bears the vowel fatha; as "to thee;" "to us," etc., with the exception of the affixed pronoun of the first person singular; as لِي "to me." It also signifies "for," "because," "on account of;" تِأَجَّبَ كَرْبِي لِمُصَابَةِ بِنَاظِرَيهِ "my grief was increased on account of what had happened to his two eyes." It sometimes expresses swearing with a mixture of surprise; as a "by God!" As a conjunction, when prefixed to a verb, it sometimes means "in order that," or "to the end that;" as إِلْتَمَسَ شَيْمًا لِيَأْكُلُهُ he sought something that he might eat it." When prefixed to the agrist it forms an imperative in the 1st and 3rd persons; as لَنْصُرُ 'let us assist;" لِيُنْصَرُ "let him be assisted." It is elegantly prefixed with fatha, by way of pleonasm, before that part of the sentence which grammarians call the Predicate (or that which is affirmed of any person or thing), especially when is placed before the subject (or the person or thing of which somewhat is affirmed); as Alexander (is) powerful," or "the powerful." When prefixed with fatha it gives to the Preterite the sense of the Optative, as more fully explained in the Syntax. Sometimes it is used idiomatically as a species of interjection expressive of "a cry for assistance;" as يَالْزَيْدِ "help, O Zaid!" When the particle (j), with a fatha, comes before the article, the latter loses its alif; as وَإِنَّهُ لَلْحَقُّ مِنْ رَبِّكُ "verily that is the truth coming from thy Lord." Here لَلْحَقُ is for اللَّحَقُ اللَّهَ اللَّهُ اللَّلْمُ اللَّهُ الل In conditional prepositions it answers to the antecedent "if not;" as لُو جِمْتَنِي لَأَكْرَمْتُكُ "if not;" as لُو جِمْتَنِي لَأَكْرَمْتُكُ to me, I will certainly honour thee," or more correctly, "hadst thou come to me, I would certainly have honoured thee."

- 183. The Separable Prepositions of the Arabic language are not very numerous. Like the Inseparable they all govern the genitive case. We here give them in their alphabetical order.
- 184. The preposition إلي indicates the terminus of an action, "to," "until;" as جاء إلي آلمدينة "he came to the city;" إلي آلان "until the present time." It also denotes "accession" or "addition;" as إلى حكمة إلى حكمة إلى على المنابعة "they added wisdom to (their) wisdom."

185. The prepositions غَدَا , and عَدَا , denote "exception;" thus, قُتِلُوا جَمِيعُهُم عَدَا زَيدِ "they were all slain except Zaid." These were originally verbs signifying "being beyond," or "being separated from."

186. The preposition حَتَّى denotes "the termination" or "extremity" of a portion of time or space, like the Latin usque ad, or our phrase "as far as;" thus, مُطْلَع الْفَجَى "as far as the place of rising of the dawn." When it is applied to time it signifies "until;" as سَارُوا حَتَّى طَلَعَتِ السَّمَكَةُ حَتَّى طَلَعَتِ السَّمَكَةُ حَتَّى رَاْسَمَكَةُ حَتَّى رَاْسَمَكَةُ وَالْعَتِ السَّمَكَةُ حَتَّى رَاْسَمَكَةُ وَالْعَتِ السَّمَكَةُ عَتَى رَاْسَمَكَةُ وَالْعَتِ السَّمَكَةُ عَتَى رَاْسَمَكَةُ وَالْعَتِ السَّمَكَةُ عَتَى رَاْسَمَكَةُ عَتَى رَاْسَمَكُةُ عَتَى رَاْسَمَكُةُ عَتَى رَاْسَمَكُهُ وَالْمُ اللّهُ وَالْمُعَالِقِي وَالْمُعَالِقُولِ وَالْمُعَالِقِي وَالْمُعَالِقُولِ وَالْمُعَالِقُولُولُولِ وَالْمُعَلِقِي وَالْمُعَالِقُولُولُولُولُولُولُولُولُولُولُولُو

187. The preposition عَلَيْ "on," "above," denotes superiority as regards space or time; as عَلَيْ "upon him;" عَلَيْ عَهْدِهِ "in," or "in the course of his time" or "reign." It sometimes denotes "against;" thus, اَسَدُ مُرَّةٌ خُرِجَ عَلَي ثُورَيْسِ a lion once upon a time went forth against two bulls." It sometimes signifies "according to;" as عَلَي عَادَة according to custom." It is idiomatically employed to express "debt" or "duty;" as عَلَيْ أَنْ ُ دِينَارٍ as عَلَيْ أَنْ ُ دِينَارٍ literally, "upon me a thousand dīnārs," i.e. "I owe a thousand dīnārs;" أَنْ نَفْعَلَ هَذَا "you ought to do this." In this latter sense عَلَيْكُ نَ نَعْدُ نَا نَعْدُ "take;" as عَلَيْكُ زَيْدًا "take Zaid," an ellipsis for عَلَيْكُ أَنْ تَأْخُذَ زَيْدًا "it is your duty to take Zaid."

a. It is a curious coincidence that the idiomatic use of the Arabic expressive of debt is also very common in the Gaelic language; thus, Tha lā faghairidh agad orm, "I owe you a day in harvest," literally, "you have a day in harvest upon me."

- 188. The preposition عَنْ signifies "separation from," "distance" or "transition;" as مَنْ الْكُوس as الْكُوس "I shot the arrow from the bow." It is sometimes used in the sense of "without;" as إِنَّ اللَّهُ غَنِيٌّ عَنِ ٱلْعَالَمِينَ as "verily God is rich enough without men." It also denotes "passing by" or "leaving behind;" as مَاتَ عَن وَلَدٍ he died leaving (behind him) a son."
- 189. The preposition في denotes "in;" with reference to time or place; as "أَلْمَالُ فِي ٱلْكَيْسِ "the money (is) in the purse." It is used idiomatically to express multiplication in arithmetic; as ثَوَتَّهُ فِي خَمْسَةُ "three multiplied by five." It sometimes answers to the preposition "with;" as follows: "need to the preposition "with;" as follows:
- 190. The prepositions الَّذِي , اللهُ , اللهُ , اللهُ , اللهُ , اللهُ , اللهُ , and الدي generally denote "to," "up to," "as far as," "nigh," etc. According to De Sacy these are all modifications of a substantive rather than prepositions.

- as عند خُروج ٱلْمَير مِن ٱلدَّارِ as عند خُروج ٱلْمَير مِن ٱلدَّارِ as عند خُروج ٱلْمَير مِن ٱلدَّارِ "when the Amīr departed from the palace." Sometimes it is used to express composition; as "man is made up of a soul and a body;" الإنسان مُرَكَّبُ مِن نفس و جَسَدِ "a garden (consisting) of palm-trees and vines." It is used in the sense of our word "than" to express the comparative degree (see § 81). In negative propositions, or interrogative propositions implying negation, it often happens that the subject, or object of the verb, instead of appearing in its proper case, is idiomatically expressed by the preposition بَمَا جَاءِني مِن رَجُل مَا لَكُمْ مِنْ إِلَٰهِ غَيْرٌ "no man came to me;" مَا جَاءِني مِن رَجُل "you have no God but him."
- 193. The rest of the prepositions are expressed by nouns substantive, employed in the accusative case, the nūnation being rejected. The principal prepositions of this sort are the following, viz., أَمَامُ "before," "in front of;" نعَدُ "after;" نعَدُ "between," "among;" نعَدُ "beneath," "under;" مَوْلَ "round," "around;" مَوْلَ "after;" مُوْلً "beneath," "under," "below;" مُوْلً "beyond;" مُوْلً "towards;" مَوْلً "beyond; "around; "around;" مَوْلً "in possession of," "near," "with" (Latin penes, apud; French chez); مُوْلً "instead of;" مَوْلً "except;" مَوْلً "above;" مُوْلً "before" (in regard to time); مُوْلً "before" (in regard to place); مُوْلً "before" (in regard to time); مُولًا "amidst," "among." All these are themselves liable to be used in the genitive case when they are preceded by a simple preposition, inseparable or separable; as "after," "in the sequel."

Adverbs.

194. The Adverbs of the Arabic language are so numerous, that it would be a useless labour to attempt detailing them in any Grammar. Every substantive, adjective, active participle, and infinitive in the language may be employed adverbially by being put in the accusative case absolutely; thus, المناه "within;" خارجًا "without;" كثيرًا "without;" كثيرًا "one day;" كُثيرًا "by night;" مُعًا "together with;" أَتَفَاقًا "by chance;" مُعَا "on the right hand;" شَمَالًا "within;" كُرهًا "withingly;" مُوعًا "eagerly;" مُوعًا "willingly;" مُغَانًا "with aversion;"

cternally," etc. These are all substantives, adjectives, or nouns of action, which being put in the accusative case become adverbs.

a. According to De Sacy, nouns thus put in the accusative case. are often found in elliptical expressions, where they depend upon a verb understood; as عَامَةُ وَطَاعَةُ "by hearing and obeying," meaning "I am ready to obey you;" سَقيًا "by watering," meaning "may God water this land;" سُبْكَانَهُ "by his praise," i.e. "may he be سَمِعْتُ سَمْعًا وَأَطَعْتُ إِطَاعَةً praised." These are elliptical expressions for سَقَاكَ آللهُ صَقْيًا "; I heard by hearing and obeyed with obedience "may God water thee by watering!" أُسْبَحُهُ سُبِحًانُهُ "I praise him with his due praise." These modes of speaking are very common in Arabic; as تَعْسًا لَکَ "may you perish!" تَعْسًا لَکَ you are welcome," literally, "at your ease and convenience;" قُمَّا وَكَامَةُ "all is at your service," literally, "with love and with respect;" or, no" لا حُبًّا وَ لاَ كَرَامَةً which is a double ellipsis for لا حُبًّا وَ لاَ كَرَامَةً love and no respect," i.c. "expect nothing from me." See De Sacy's Grammaire Arabe, Tome 1, p. 502, where the phrase is rendered "une cruche et un convercle."

195. The following list comprises the most common adverbs of the Arabic language, independent of those already referred to (§ 194). It is a translation partly from De Sacy, and partly from Rosenmüller, whose Grammar is a very useful abridgment of De Sacy's more extensive work.

أَ, this is an inseparable particle denoting interrogation, like the Latin an? num? or numquid? thus, ثَانَتُ "is he dead?" "yes," "even so," "assuredly," "verily." Rosenmüller says that it differs from نَعَمْ in this respect, أَجَلَ is a stronger affirmation than "yes," if the sentence which precedes be not interrogative; thus, if we say to a person "go away," and if he say أَجَلَ "yes," the affirmation is stronger than if he had said مَعَمْ "yes," the affirmation is you go?" مَعَمْ expresses the more emphatic assent.

إِذَا اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ إِذَا "when." إِذَا اللّٰهِ are conjunctive adverbs usually employed with a future sense. it is limited to the present, or rather it expresses the simultaneous occurrence of two events; it also signifies "seeing that," "provided that." إِذَا عَمَا اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ وَاللّٰهُ وَاللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰلّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰل of Sindbad, وَ لَولا مُصُولُكُ إِلَينا وَ اللَّ هَلَكْتَ فِي هَذَا ٱلْمَكَانِ "and had it not been (for) thy arrival amongst us, rest assured that thou wouldst have perished in this place."

الله (from إِنَّ and أَلُّ "if not," nisi, "si non," "except." لَا حُولَ وَ لا قُوَّةَ الاَّ أَبَاللَّهُ (there is no power and no strength except in God."

"whether?" (Latin num? an?) This is properly a conjunction expressive of doubt, and then signifies "or else."

- Lol (from and Lo "not") "is it not?" nonne?

"yesterday." بالأمس and أمس, "وأمس "yesterday."

إِنَّ أَنْ أَنْ يَ لَكُمُ إِلَّا لِللَّهِ When this particle is followed by إِنَّ أَنْ أَنْ بَعْنَ اللَّهُ الله " it signifies " not;" as إِنَّ أَنْ أَنْ أَنْ أَنْ أَنْ أَنْ أَلْكُ مُ إِلَّا لِللَّهُ وَالله لله وَلَا الله لله وَلَا الله الله وَلَا الله وَالله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَالله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلِي الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلِمُ الله وَلَا الله وَلَا الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ الله وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلَّا الله وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلَّا الله وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلَّا الله وَلِمُ وَلَّا اللّهُ وَلِمُ وَاللّهُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَاللّهُ وَلّهُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلّهُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلّهُ وَلِلْمُواللّهُ وَلِللّهُ وَلّهُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُواللّهُ وَلِمُواللّه

إِنَّ "assuredly," "verily," "indeed," "even so." It governs the accusative case, being one of the مِاتَّتُ عَامِلِ or "Hundred Governing Words;" thus, إِنَّ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورٌ assuredly God is forgiving."

النَّمَا أُجْرِي عَلَى ٱللَّهِ "unless," "since," "only;" as إِنَّمَا أُجْرِي عَلَى ٱللَّهِ "my reward is only with God," i.e. "I expect my reward from God, and from no one else."

"how?" "wherefore?" "whence?" أنَّى

إِيّ "yes," "verily," "even so." It is nearly equivalent to نُعْمَ but used only when a form of oath follows; thus, "verily, by the Lord it is the truth." It is equivalent to the interjection O, used in calling.

َ مَا اللَّهُ and إِيَّانِ when," " whensoever."

"whither?" إِلَي أَيْنَ "whence?" مِنْ أَيْنَ "where?" أَيْنَ "whither?" أَيْنَاً an adverb expressive of calling equivalent to our interjection O. It is used before a noun that is defined by the article; as, يَا أَيْهَا ٱلْنَاسُ or يَا أَيْهَا ٱلْنَاسُ ''O ye people!''

"hereafter." "after," "afterwards," "behind;" بَعْدُ "hereafter." When this word is used as a preposition it ceases to be indeclinable, and appears either in the accusative, or in the genitive, if preceded by the preposition مِنْ بَعْدُ , as مِنْ بَعْدُ . The phrase مِنْ بَعْدُ is commonly employed after the prefaces of books, or in letters, in order to announce the commencement of the main subject, after the author or writer has expressed the praises of God, and the eulogy of the Prophet, or the usual formula of politeness, in epistolary correspondence.

"afterwards," "thereafter," "yet;" in this last sense it is employed with a negative, and signifies "not yet," nondum.

the diminutive of the preceding, signifies "a little after."

yes," "certainly," "it is so," "in reality." This particle is used after an interrogative or negative proposition, and then it affirms the contrary of what may be asserted in such proposition.

"between;" this is merely the noun بَبّن "difference," "separation," in the accusative case.

"whilst," "meanwhile;" it sometimes denotes "between," like the preceding.

"whilst," "in the mean time," "during this."

"below," "under," "during " (when applied to time)

as نَحْتُ ليَلهُ "by night" (literally "under the night"); شَعْتُ "from below;" مِنْ تَحْتُ "a little lower."

"here," "in this place."

and ثُمْتُ "then," "afterwards;" generally viewed as a conjunction.

بَاشَا , اَشَا , اَشَا , and نَاسَا , and word appears with the nunation, it becomes an adverb; we have already described its use as a preposition. عَاشَا لِلّٰهُ or حَاشَا لِلّٰهُ or حَاشَا لِلّٰهُ " may God forbid!" خَاشَا لَكَ " far be it from thee!"

" come !" " come أَدِيٌّ هَلَا " أَدِي or أَنْ أَمَا " أَدُي مَلَا " أَدُي مَلَا " أَدُى أَمْلًا " أَدُى اللّ

نُونَى as a preposition, "except," "under," "besides." As an adverb it is used idiomatically in the sense of "seize" or "stop;" as دُونَکَ وَمَا تُرِيدُ "seize upon Zaid!" دُونَکَ وَمَا تُرِيدُ "do what thou wishest."

The particle رُبُ (also written رُبُ , الله signifies "many," "much," "often," "perhaps." It takes idiomatically an affixed pronoun; as "رُبُهُ رُجُلًا مُنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ مُنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ مِنْ إِلَٰ إِلْمُ إِلَٰ إِلْمُ إِلَٰ إِلْمُ إِلَٰ إِلْمِ إِلَٰ إِلْمُ إِلَٰ إِلْمُ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُولِ إِلْمِلْكُولِ إِلْمِلْكُولِ إِلْمِلْكُ إِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلْمِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلِمِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ مِلْكُمْ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلَٰ إِلْكُمِ and عُوْضُ; also عُوْضُ, and عُوْضُ. This adverb is always accompanied by a negation; and is only employed with a verb having a future signification. It is equivalent to our word "never."

ثَيْرَ "except," "besides." This is the accusative case of the noun غَيْرَ "change" or "difference;" it is also used adverbially; thus, لَا غَيْرُ signifying "not otherwise;" and is then indeclinable, like عُخْتُ, etc.

"far from," " much less," etc. ' فَضَلًا عَنْ and , فَضَلًا أَنَّ , فَضَلًا and فَوْقُ "above." This word is liable to the same remarks as those we made respecting بعّدُ (q.v.).

and قَبْلُ "before," "prior to." This word, like the preceding, is subject to similar rules. "before," "right in front of one's eyes." قَبْلُ diminutive of "a little before."

نَقَدُ , نَقَدُ , نَقَدُ , "certainly," "sometimes." This word is usually prefixed to verbs. Before the agrist it indicates a present or future action or event; sometimes it is equivalent to رُبَّمَا (q.v.).

أَيْظُ , ثُطَّ , ثُطَّ , ثُطَّ , "at any time." This particle is used only in company with a negation, and with a verb in the preterite; as مَا وَاللّٰهُ عَلَى اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ الله literally "I saw him not at any time," i.e. "I never saw him." If a future time is spoken of, مَوْضُ or اللّٰهُ must be used.

J. This prefix, as an adverb, has been already described under the preposition J.

آ "no," "not," "not at all," "is not." It is a negation applied to a future action or event. لَاجَرَمَ "necessarily;" لُجُرَمَ "undoubtedly."

o the aorist, to which it then gives the sense of the preterite tense. لما and ها "why?" (comp. of the or لُوْمَا "unless." Both of these adverbs are compounded of the conjunction "if," and the negative particles and نما and لاً .

"I wish" (Latin utinam), "would to God that!" أَيْتَ مُحَمَّدًا حَاضِر "I wish (or would to God) that Muhammad were present." This admits the affixed pronouns; as يَا لَبُتنِي حُرُّ I wish (or would to God) I had been a free man."

لم الكري ("I know not." It also denotes "whilst," "as long as;" thus, "as long as I remain alive." We have already explained its pronominal application.

" when?" مَتَى مَا "whenever." مَتَى or الْحَه "with," "together with," "along with." مَعَا "as often as," "as long as."

يَعْمَ , بَعْمَ , وَنِعَمَ , or نِعْمَ , "yes," "very well," "even so." It is used in confirming what another person has said, whether the statement be affirmative or negative. It also denotes "bravo!" "well done!" It is placed before the nominative case if the noun has the article prefixed, and before the accusative when it is not so restricted.

f a particle denoting admiration and approbation, "bravo!" well done!" It is properly an interjection (q.v.).

رَحْدَ This word always requires an affixed pronoun; thus, وْحْدَهُا "he alone;" وْحْدَهُا "she alone."

and وَيْكُ Adverbs of admiration or reproach.

اهُ "behold!" "seize!" "catch!" This, with the affixed pronoun of the second person, has the signification of خُدُ "take." The affixed pronoun changes, however, then into hamzu; as عَامَةُ , هَاوْمًا , هَاوْمًا , هَاوْمًا , هَاوْمًا , هَاوْمًا وماوة ; according to the variation of gender and number, for هَاكُ "take thou" (masc.); كَاكُ "take thou" (fem.); هَاكُما "take, you two," etc. (See Rosenmüller.)

هَانَذِهِ masc. "see here!" "behold!" هَانَذِهِ fem. nearly equivalent to our expressions, "there he is," and "there she is;" or the Italian eccolo and eccola.

"whether?" An interrogative adverb, an? num?

and الله "whether?" "is it not?" "well done!"

" come on!" " approach!" هَلُمْ لَكُمْ or هَلُمْ لَكُمْ and كَا مُعْلَمْ لَكَ and هُلُمْ other demonstrative adverbs are formed, in the same manner as demonstrative pronouns; as هَنَالِكَ , هُنَاكَ "there," in speaking of things at a distance; هَنَا هُنَالِكَ "here," in speaking of things at hand. هَنَالِكَ "from this place;" مِنْ هُنَالِكَ "from that place"

- "see there!" "behold!" هَا هُونا
- رَمْيَتُ , هَيْتُ , هَيْتُ , فَيْتُ , these adverbs are employed in invocation and speaking to; they are more properly interjections used when calling to a person; as "hallo!" "come hither!" "hark you!"
- يا. This particle is, strictly speaking, an interjection used to signify warning, encouraging or admiration. يَا أَيْتُهَا and are nearly of the same import. They are applied indifferently to what is remote or near; and are followed by the nominative ease.

Conjunctions.

- 196. It is with conjunctions as with adverbs, they are to be best learned by the Dictionary; but a few of the most common may be here enumerated.
- - "if not;" (Latin) nisi, (French) "si non."
- in the second member of an interrogative sentence or proposition beginning with أَ ; thus, اَ اللّٰهُ عَذَا أَمْ لا hast thou said this, or not?"
- sentence; "but," "however," "nevertheless," "notwithstanding."

ارَّيَا "or," "or else ;" فَإِنَّا "if," "but" (comp. of إِنَّا عَمْرُو). أَوَّا followed by وَإِنَّا عَمْرُو "either," "or ;" thus, وَاللَّا عَمْرُو "there came to me either Zaid or 'Amru," (I know not which).

عَجَبْتُ أَنْ بَالله "that," used both with the aorist and the preterite; as عَجَبْتُ أَنْ كَتَبَتُ "I wish that I may write;" أَرِيدُ أَنْ أَكْتُبُ "I wonder that thou hast written." أَنْ is used when immediately followed by a noun. It is often written with the affixed pronoun غ; the purpose of which addition is to remove the influence of the conjunction, which would otherwise require the accusative case after it as it is one of the hundred governing words.

"if indeed," "if at any time."

speaking it corresponds to our conjunction "and;" but it may also be occasionally translated "now," "for," "so then," etc. It is often redundant, particularly at the beginning of sentences, as is very often the case in our version of the Holy Scriptures. It is also frequently prefixed to the imperative and in that instance it generally marks the passage with a peculiar emphasis.

لَّأُصْرِبُكَ أَوْ تَتُوْبَ 'or,'' "or else," "unless," "until ;" thus, الْأَصْرِبُكَ أَوْ تَتُوبَ بكان بالله والله وال

"as if," "even as," "just as."

يَّكُي is used in the same sense and with the negative adverb أَلُكُي it becomes يَكُيُّ and يُكَيُّلُ ''lest,'' ''so as not.''

and کَی "but." The form کَی is used only before nouns and pronouns.

"if," "although;" لَوَلاَ "if not," "unless," nisi, "si non." It occasionally signifies, especially in the Kur,ān, "why not?" The affixed pronouns may also be joined to it; as "لُولاكُ مَا خَلِقْتِ ٱلدُّنيَا "were it not for thee the world had not been created."

j. This is also an inseparable conjunction, corresponding to our connective "and;" sometimes it means "but." It is closely akin to i and yet in no instance can the one be used instead of the other. The general distinction between them seems to be as follows: the conjunction is employed to connect words; as المَوْرُ وَالْمُوْرُ وَالْمُورُ وَالْمُوْرُ وَالْمُوْرُ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَلِيْعُالِمُ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَالْمُؤْمِ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَالْمُؤْمِ وَالْمُؤْمِ وَالْمُؤْمِّ وَالْمُؤْمِ وَالْمُؤْمِ

أَسْوَدُ فِي يَوْمٍ نَزَعَ ثِيابَهُ - وَأَقْبَلَ يَأْخُذُ ٱلثَّلَجَ - وَيَعْرُكُ بِهِ جِسْمَهُ * فَقْيلَ لَهُ - مَانَا تَعْرُكُ جِسْمَكُ ثِالنَّلَجِ ؟ فَقَالَ لَعَلَي أَبْيَضُ * فَأَتَّي رَجُلَ حَكِيمً وَقَالَ لَهُ - مَانَا تَعْرُكُ جِسْمُكُ يُسَوِّدَ وَقَالَ لَهُ - يَا هَٰذَا ! لَا تُتَعِبُ نَفْسَكَ - فَقَدْ يُمْكِنُ أَنْ جِسْمُكَ يُسَوِّدَ وَقَالَ لَهُ - وَهُوَ لَا يَرْتَدُ ٱلسَّوَادَ *

"A negro on a certain day took off his garments and (wa) began to take up snow, and (wa) to rub his body with it. And (fa) it was said to him, why do you rub your body with snow? And (fa) he said, peradventure I may become white. And (fa) there came by a certain man of sense, and (wa) he said to him, O such a one! torment not yourself; for (fa) truly it is possible that your body may blacken the snow; but (wa) it will not (thereby) lose its (own) blackness."

Interjections.

197. أَخُ and أَخُ an interjection expressive of pain, etc., like our words "ah!" "oh!" "alas!" "pish!" "tush!"

بَافَتُ , أَفَّ , and إِنَّ ; all these words are expressive of aversion or disgust such as our "foh!" "fie!" "away!"

مَّارَةً, also مَّا, and مَا or مِثَّا. All these are expressive of pain and sorrow, etc. (nearly the same as خِرُّا), like our "ah!" "alas!" "woe unto me!"

1, "ah!" "alas!" This exclamation may be followed by the nominative case; or, omitting the nunation it may take instead the syllable ما رَا زَيْدًا, or simply ارَا زَيْدًا, or أَوْ زَيْدًا وَ , or أَوْ زَيْدًا وَ , or أَوْ زَيْدًا وَ . When two nouns in construction follow, the syllable مَا مَا فَلُامَ وَا غُلُامَ زَيْدَاةً added to the last; as وَا غُلُامَ زَيْدَاةً at the boy or slave of Zaid!"

alas!" "woe!" This is sometimes used disjunctively; عَيْلُ " woe to him!" or conjoined, وَيْلُ لُهُ " woe to thee!" وَيْلُكُ " woe to me!" يَا وَيْلِنِي

َهُنِّكُ ,هُ هَّبُكُ , " quick!" هِیْتُ or هَیْتُ "come on!" "this way!"

يا corresponds to our interjection O used in calling or addressing. It is used before the nominative case of proper names and nouns without the article; thus, يَا زَيْدُ "O Zaid!" (§ 67.) "O Wazīr!" Before nouns having the article prefixed يَا أَيُّهَا ٱلرَّاجُلُ is employed; as يَا أَيُّهَا ٱلرَّاجُلُ is employed; as يَا أَيُّهَا ٱلرَّاجُلُ is employed;

SECTION VI.

On the Derivation and Formation of Nouns.

198. In this Section I employ the term Noun in its more extensive signification comprehending Substantives, Adjectives, Infinitives, and Participles. A primitive noun, 'solid,' is that which is not derived from any other word, whether noun or verb, such as ''flesh;'' شان "a lion;" a horse." A derivative noun (مُشَتَقُ) is that which is derived from another word (verb or noun), by means of one or more of the servile letters, such as مُعَتَّاتُ "a key," from مُعَتَّاتُ "he opened;" مُرَّسُتُنُ "a place abounding in lions," from فَرَسُنَ "a little horse," from فَرَسُنَ "a horse."

servile is employed both at the beginning, in the interior, and at the end of a word (in this latter case it is represented by ة); thus, طَوْلُ prolongation," from طالَ (for طُولُ "it lengthened ;" عَرَفَ confession," from " إَعَذِرَافَ" " he knew or confessed," etc.; مُحَمَّة "merey," from رُحِمَ "he took pity." The letter on never serves alone in the formation of a noun. It is peculiar only to verbal nouns and participles of the ninth derived formation; and always preceded by 1 or . and followed by تنتخراج as in the words "(extracting," and an extractor," both from root خَرَجَ "he went" مُسْتَخْرَجَ forth." The letter r is servile at the beginning of a word; as "he possessed;" مَلَكَ a slave," "a Mameluke," from مَلَكُ "he possessed;" sometimes, but rarely, it is added at the end of a word; as which is the same as إِبْنُتُ "a son." The servile ن is used as the second letter of a derived noun, the first being in that case either \ or . as in the verbal noun and participle of verbs of the sixth formation; thus, وُنْقِطَاعٌ "severance," from تَطُكِ "he cut short;" it serves also at the end of a word, as in عَفَرَان "pardon," from عَفَر "he forgave." The قَبُولٌ is employed only in the interior of a word; as is نَبَلَ acceptance," from نَبَلُ "he accepted." The letter نَا فَبَلُ used both in the interior and at the end of a word, as in "solar," شَمْسِيٌ "; a dog" كُلْبُ a little dog," from كُلْيَبُ from شَمْسُ "the sun;" sometimes, but very rarely, it is employed at the beginning of a word; as يَنْبُوعُ "a fountain," from نَبَع "it gushed out."

NOUNS DERIVED FROM VERBAL ROOTS

200. Of these, grammarians reckon eight classes, viz.:
1. The Abstract Verbal Noun or Infinitive. 2. The Noun of Agency or Present Participle Active. 3. The Noun expressive of the Patient, that is the Participle Passive. 4. The Noun of Time and Place. 5. Noun of Instrument. 6. Noun of Unity. 7. Noun of Specification. 8. Noun of Intensity. Of the first three classes we need not here take any further notice. We gave a table of the Infinitives of the triliteral verbal root in § 105 b; and the formation of the Participles, Active and Passive, is abundantly obvious from the various paradigms given in Sections III. and IV.

. إِسْمُ ٱلزَّمَانِ وَٱلْمَكَانِ Pluce مِنْ الْمُكَانِ Noun of Time and Pluce

201. The noun expressive of the time and place of an action, is formed from the acrist of the primitive triliteral verb, by substituting in place of the initial servile letters 1, ت, and ي, which are severally prefixed to the persons of that tense. If the penult vowel of the acrist be fatha, or kasra, they remain unchanged in the noun of time and place, if damma it is changed into fatha; thus, "the time and place of labour," from يَشْرَتُ "he labours" or "will labour; مَشْرَتُ "time or place of beating," from يَضْرِبُ "he beats" مَشْرِبُ "he beats" مَشْرَتُ "the place of writing," "a school;" we may further observe that these nouns of place take the final $\delta$; as مَشْرَقَةُ "place of burial," "a cemetery;" مَشْرَقَةُ "a place proper for a light-house." "a tower:" hence,

- "a minaret." In the quadriliteral or derivative formations the noun of time and place is exactly the same as the participle passive.
- a. There are twelve nouns of place formed by converting the damma of the aorist, not into fatha, but into kasra, viz., "نجر "the place where camels are slaughtered;" "a place on which the elbow rests;" "the place of adoration, a mosque; "the place where a thing falls;" "the place of residence," "a habitation; "the place of rising," "the east; "مَالِتُ "the place of rising (of a heavenly body); "خرت "the place of setting," "the west; "مَالِتُ "the place on the head where the hair divides;" "مَالِتُ "the place where a plant grows; "مَالِتُ "the place of breathing," "the nostril; "مَالِّتُ مَالِّتُ مَالِّتُ مَالِّتُ لَّهُ اللهُ اللهُ مَالِّتُ أَلَّهُ مَالِّتُ مَالِّتُ أَلَّهُ مَالِّتُ أَلَّهُ اللهُ ال
- b. Nouns of time and place derived from a simile verb, whose first radical is , have always kasra for the second radical, and the , is preserved, even when dropped in the aorist; thus, مُوْمِعَ "time and place of promise," from وَمُوعَ "he promised;" of which the aorist is مُوفِعٌ; so from مُوفِعٌ ; (يَفَعُ "he deposited" (aorist مُوفِعٌ ; (يَفَعُ وَاللّٰهُ وَاللّٰهُ وَاللّٰهُ لَا اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ الللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ
- c. The noun of time and place derived from concave verbs (§ 151), whose second radical in the agrist has either fatha or damma, is formed by substituting an alif inert in place of the second radical, and by carrying to the first radical the fatha which had belonged to the second; thus, from فام "he stood" (aorist (يَقُومُ), is formed عَامَ for مَعَوَمُ . If the second radical of the aorist has kasra for its vowel, it undergoes a change; thus, سَارَ "he travelled" (aorist مَسِسَرُ ; (يَسِبُرُ the place where one travels."

Noun of Instrument - قَالَ مُعْلَمُ اللَّهِ

202. Nouns expressive of the instrument employed in the performance of an action are of the forms وعُعَالٌ , وعُعَالٌ , or They are formed like the nouns of time and place with this difference, that the noun of instrument has kasra for its initial servile; thus, وعُمَّاتُ "he weighed;" فَتَلَ "a balance," from وعُمَّاتُ "he weighed;" مَنْ اللهُ "a balance," from ومُسَمَّةً "he weighed;"

"a broom," from کُسُکُ "he swept;" شاه "an iron instrument employed in cleaning cotton," from شاه "he extracted the seeds," etc.

- a. There are a few nouns of this class of the forms مُفَعُلُنَّ and '' أَخُلُ '' as مُدُتَّ '' as مَدُتَّ '' he sifted ;' مَعُعُلَةُ '' an instrument with which flax or cotton is beaten," from 'دَتَّ '' he has beaten, thumped, or pounded."
- b. Some nouns of instrument are formed on the measure فِعَالُ ; as نِعَالُ "the instrument or means of adorning," "a string of pearls;" نِظَامُ "a needle;" سِرَادٌ "a saddler's awl." There are several other forms of rare occurrence mentioned by Dr. Lumsden, p. 311.

203. This species of noun denotes one solitary action or event, and it dispenses with the use of the adjective رَاحِدَةً, which might be otherwise requisite. It is formed from the infinitive of the primitive triliteral verb, and is always of the form عَرَنَةً; as عَرَبَةً "one single victory;" عَرَبَةً "one single beating." In the derivative formations and quadriliterals the noun of unity is formed by simply adding عَرَاجَةً to the infinitive; as المَا يَعْمَلُ وَالْحِدُةً "one extraction," and المَا يُعْمَلُ وَالْحِدُةً "one revolution." In the case of verbs of the second derivative formation, whose infinitives already end in عَرَاجَةً وَالْحِدُةً وَالْحَدُةً وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحِدُةً وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحِدُةً وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُونُ وَالْحَدُونُ وَالْحَدُةُ وَالْحَدُونُ وَالْحَا as assume عَمْ for a termination; as إِمَانَةُ وَاحِدُةً وَاحِدُةً وَاحِدُةً وَاحِدُةً وَاحِدُةً (one solitary act of raising up," from أَفَامَ, third formation of قَامَ "he stood up."

204. This kind of noun serves to specify what is asserted of a person with regard to a particular act, as when we say, "he excels in writing;" هُوَ حَسَنَ كِتَبَة ; so "he excels in defending or conquering." It invariably is of the form غَلَقْتَ ; and in the derivative formations and in quadriliterals it differs in no wise from the noun of unity just described.

Noun of Intensity - يَاسَمُ مُبَالَغَة

NOUNS DERIVED FROM SUBSTANTIVES.

206. Nouns derived from substantives are not nearly so numerous in Arabic as those derived from verbs. They may be comprised under four classes, viz., 1. Noun of Abundance. 2. Noun of Singularity. 3. Noun of Capacity. 4. Diminutive Nouns.

207. Nouns indicating the place in which things abound, are nearly allied to nouns of time and place both in form and in signification. They are of the measures مُنْعَدُّهُ and مُنْعَدُّهُ . such as مُنْعَدُّهُ and "a place in which there are many lions," derived from مُنْعَدُّهُ both of which signify "a lion;" ثَمْ a field of cucumbers," from تَنْعُ "a place where wolves abound," from مُنْعَدُّةٌ "a place where wolves abound," from مُنْعَدُّةٌ "a place famed for many victories," ثَمْتُونُهُ "a place famed for many victories," from مُنْعَدُّةٌ "a place famed for many victories,"

208. This species of noun is formed from a primitive substantive by suppressing the nunation, and then adding the termination عَد. It denotes a single portion or a single individual out of a whole genus which consists of several such portions; thus from تَنَتُ "straw," is formed "a single straw;" from تَمَتُ "gold," comes "comes "a grain or small bit of gold;" from تَمَاتُ "the genus pigeon," comes "مَمَاتُ "one single pigeon." It is formed in an analogous manner to the noun of unity, as to its termination, but not necessarily on the same measure.

209. I call this species "a Noun of Capacity," from want of a better term. It denotes the vessel, case, or sheath, etc., in which things are contained or collected; thus, "a milk-pail," from منتر "milk;" "a needle case," from "a needle." It will be observed that this noun is of the same measure as the first form of the Noun of Instrument, § 202. They both differ from the Noun of Time and Place by having kasra as the vowel of the initial servile, and fatha for the middle radical.

The Diminutive Noun-الْكِسُمُ ٱلْمُصَغِّرُ-

210. From triliteral nouns the diminutive is formed, by putting damma over the first radical and by inserting the diphthong في between the second and third; thus from "a man," "a little man;" so from رُجُلُ "a hill" or "mountain," "a hillock" or "small mountain." If the primitive noun be quadriliteral the diminutive is of the form عَقْرَبُ ; thus, عَقْرَبُ "a little scorpion," from عَقْرَبُ ; thus, نُعَيْلُ ; a little scorpion," from عَقْرَبُ thus, "ثقرت a scorpion." If the primitive triliteral is of the feminine gender, the diminutive is of the form شَمْسَة ; thus, "مُنْسُ "a little sun" or "a mock sun;" أَرْفَتُ "the sun," شَمْسَة "a little sun" or "a mock sun;" أَرْفَتُ "a small tract of land."

Adjectives derived from Verbul Roots.

211. In addition to the Participles Active and Passive both of the primary verb, and of its derivative formations, derived from neuter verbs, the principal of which are the following:—1. وَعَلَى ; as بُعَلِي "difficult," from بُعَبِ وَعَلَى ; as بُعَلِي "cold," from يَعَبِ وَمَالِي "cold," from يَعَبِ وَمَالٍ وَمِنْ وَمِعَالٍ وَمَالٍ وَمَالٍ وَمَالٍ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِعَالٍ وَمَالٍ وَمِالْ وَمَالٍ وَمَالٍ وَمِنْ وَمَالٍ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمَالٍ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمَالٍ وَمِنْ وَمِلْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ وَمِنْ

- a. Many verbal adjectives, or as some call them participles, of the measures فَعِبْلُ and فَعِبْلُ derived from active verbs may have either an active or a passive signification.
- 212. Adjectives of the following measures, viz., وَغَالٌ, مِفْعَالٌ, مِفْعَالٌ, مِفْعَالٌ, مِفْعَالٌ, مِفْعَالٌ , وَعَيْلٌ are sometimes of an energetic or intensive signification; thus, نَجْيَدٌ "very boastful," etc.
- a...We stated, § 205, that the measure نَعَالُ represents both an intensive verbal adjective and a substantive indicating trade or profession, etc. As an adjective it sometimes suppresses the nunation and adds the termination \ddot{s} , even when applied to masculine nouns; as $\ddot{\tilde{s}}$ "profoundly learned." According to De Sacy this increment adds still further to the intensity of the adjective.

Adjectives derived from Substantives.

- 213. From nouns substantive are derived what we may in general terms call Relative Adjectives, expressive of "nation," "locality," "sect," "race," etc., by rejecting the nūnation or final vowel of the substantive and adding "جيّ "Egyptian," from مِصْرِبٌ "Egyptian," from مِصْرِبٌ "human," from إِنْسَانَ "human," from إِنْسَانَ "earth!" أَرْضَيَّ "earth!"
- a. If the substantive ends in غَـ or مَنْ the relative adjective is formed by rejecting these terminations and substituting بالمناه ب

- c. Some relative adjectives are formed by adding the termination ''corporeal," from بُورَانِيَّ ''the body;" so ''illumined (divinely)," from ''ilight." Adjectives of this kind are said to be used only in a metaphorical, theological, or spiritual sense, for in the ordinary sense of the words مُروي and مُروي are employed. Finally, some relative adjectives are formed in a very irregular manner; thus from '' 'the capital of Persian Irūk," is formed ''(ازيَّ a native of Rhai;" such was the celebrated physician known in mediæval Europe as Rhasis. From 'مَرُويُّ the name of a province in Persia," is formed the relative adjective ''the name of a ''draw' and province of Herat," comes ''are adjective ''a man of Herat."
 - Formation of the Broken Plurals_ جَمْعُ ٱلتَّكْسِيرِ.
 - 214. We very cursorily alluded to this important part of Arabic Grammar, in § 58 and § 59. We now proceed to fulfil our promise there given of entering into a more minute detail of the subject when we should have arrived at the proper place for so doing. It would have been utterly absurd to have embarrassed the student at an early period of his progress, with matters which he was no ways then qualified to understand. The following portion of this Section is chiefly translated from Rosenmüller, always subjected to additions and improvements from the more copious works of De Sacy and Lumsden.

- نعَلَى is formed from the singulars وَنَعَلَى , is formed from the singulars وَنَعَلَى and وَنَعَلَى , which are the feminines of adjectives of the measure تُحَفَّة ; thus, تُحَفِّة ; thus, "a present," pl. مُورَة ; كُبر "very great," pl. مُورَة ; كُبر a form or figure," pl. مُورَة ; كُبر Plurals of this species, though of rare occurrence, may also be formed from the measures فَعْلَة and قَعْلَة ; as قَرَيَة a town or village," pl. وَعَلَة (for وَعَيَة ; (قُرَيُ for وَعَيَة):
- 216. The Second Measure, نَعْلُ, is formed 1. from singular nouns of the measures إِنَّعَالُ and whose triliteral root is neither surd nor defective. It also applies to such measures as فَعُولُ , فَعَيلٌة , فَعَيلٌة , فَعَيلٌة , فَعَيلٌة , فَعَيلٌة , فَعِيلٌة , provided they do not come from defective roots, that is roots having و for their last radical; thus, " عَمُونٌ ; سُرِيرٌ ; كُتُبٌ . "a book," pl. سَرِيرٌ ; كُتُبٌ . "a throne," pl. كَتَابُ "a leaf of a book." pl. سَفِينَة ; عُمُدُ . 2. From nouns of the measures , فَعَلٌ , فِعَلٌ , فِعَلٌ , فِعَلٌ , فِعَلٌ , فِعَلُ , فِعَلُ , فِعَلُ . 2. From nouns of the measures and عَلَيْهُ; as مَمِّرٌ "a leopard," pl. مُرَّدٌ ; مُرَّدٌ "the fruit of the date tree," pl. مُسَرَّةٌ . 3. From verbal adjectives of the measures نَعْولٌ and نَعُولٌ , provided they have not a passive signification; as مَبُورٌ ; نَذُرٌ "a monitor," pl. مُبُورٌ ; نَذُرٌ . "patient," pl. مُبُورٌ .

- 217. The Third Measure, نَعْلَة, is applicable to masculine adjectives of the measure مَعْلَة and to their feminines بَعْلَة, provided they be not of the comparative or superlative degree; as مُمْرَة and مَمْرَة and مُمْرَة. "red," pl. (masc. and fem.)
- 218. The Fourth Measure, نِعَلَّ , applies to singular nouns of the measure نِعَلَّةٌ; as سِكَّتُ (a coin," pl. سِكَّتُ (a temple or church," pl. حِكْمَةٌ ; بِيَحَةً .
- 219. The Fifth Measure, فِعَالَ, applies to singulars of the measures فَعَلَ , فَعَلَ , فَعَلَ , فَعَلَ , فَعَلَ , فَعَلَ ; as "the sea," pl. عَرَّ "a a arrow," pl. وَعَالَ "a dish or saucer," ومَاحَ ; وَمَاحَ ; مَاحَ "a dish or saucer," pl. وَتَعَ ; وَجَالَ "a short letter," "a note," pl. وَتَعَ ; قِصَاعَ . 2. It applies to the measures فَعَلَ and فَعَلَ , provided they be not derived from a surd or defective root; thus, جَبلُ , provided they be not the adjectives of the measures فَعِلْ and أَعَيْلُ , provided they be not of a passive signification; thus, شَرِيفٌ , مَرْيفٌ . 4. It applies to such "noble," pl. شَرَيفٌ "noble," pl. شَرَيفٌ . 4. It applies to such adjectives, as have the measures أَعَلانَ , fem. أَعَلانَ ; or "penitent," رَعَلانَ , fem. نَعَلانَ ; thus, نعلانَ and نعلانَ "penitent," والما الما "(lean (from starvation)," pl. خماتُ . 5. Finally, it applies to many nouns of agency or verbal adjectives of the measure تَاجِر ; thus, تَعَالَ "thirsty" (applied only to a camel), pl. نهالٌ : جَمَاتُ "thirsty" (applied only to a camel), pl. نهالٌ .

221. The Seventh and Eighth Measures, فَعَالُ and (in it is apply to verbal adjectives of the measures فَعَالُ and (fem.) فَعَلِنُ and (fem.) فَعَلِنُ and (fem.) فَعَلِنُ and (fem.) فَعَلِنْ and (fem.) فَعَالِمُ "a provided they be not derived from imperfect roots; thus, "a judge," pl. حَكِم and عُلَّبُ ; عُلَّابُ "a writer," pl. عَارِيُ "a writer," pl. غَارِيُ for غَارِيُ for غَارِيُ تَعَالِبُ ; عُلَّابُ "a female camel that is turned loose," pl. بَهْلُ ; غُيَّابُ . According to De Sacy, the measure فَعَالُ بَعْلُ اللهِ اللهُ وَاللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ الله

222. The Ninth Measure, فَعَلَتْ , is applicable to such verbal adjectives as have the measure فَاعِلٌ, when applied to rational beings, and not coming from a defective root; as كَمَلَةٌ " perfect," pl. كَمَلَةٌ (for بَارِرُ for) "innocent," pl. عَرْدَةُ . A few words derived from infirm roots are somewhat irregular; or more strictly speaking, they follow the rules of permutation; thus, بَائِحٌ for مُرَدِّةً for مُرَدِّةً.

- 223. The Tenth Measure, نَعْلَةٌ, belongs almost exclusively to verbal adjectives when applicable to rational beings, and of the measure غَادِ formed from a defective root; thus, غَارٍ "a warrior," pl. غُزَادٌ (for قَاضٍ ; (غُزَوَدٌ "a Kadi or judge," pl. قُضَادٌ (for قُضَيَدٌ (for قُضَادٌ (for قُضَادٌ).
- 224. The Eleventh Measure, نُعَكُّ , is formed from substantives singular of the measure نُعَلُّ , and also from a few having the measures نُعَلُّ and نُعَلُّ ; as نُعِلُ "a bear," pl. دُبُّ ; نُعِلُ "a jug," pl. وَجَدَّ ; كُوزَة ; كُوزَة "a husband or wife," conjux, pl. قَرْدَة ; زَوَجَةٌ
- 225. The Twelfth Measure, فِعْلَةْ, applies to substantives of the measures بُعْرَرٌ , نُعْلُ , فَعَلْ , فَعَلْ , فَعَلْ , فَعَلْ ; thus, ثُوْرٌ , and وَعَيْلٌ , and ثُورٌ ; thus, ''a bull," pl. أُخَرُ (for أُخَرُ "a brother," pl. غُصَنَ ; إِخْوَةٌ "a branch," pl. غُزَلَ ; غِصَنَةٌ , غِزَلَةٌ "a gazelle or antelope," pl. عَزَلَةٌ "a boy," "a slave," pl. عَلَمْ ; غِزَلَةٌ (for عَبِيرٌ ; غِزَلَةٌ "a boy," "a slave," pl. عَبِلَمَةٌ .

226. The Thirteenth Measure, أنعل , applies to substantives of the measure نعل ; and sometimes to the measure نعل ; and whose medial letter is , provided they come not from a root whose medial letter is , or ¿; thus, "the face," pl. "a bucket," "a bucket," "a hill," pl. "a staff," pl. "a staff," pl. "a staff," pl. "a bolt (of a door)," pl. رجل (أعشو a bolt (of a door)," pl. آتفل . It is also applicable to feminine substantives of four letters, not ending in "and of which the penult is an inert !, , or ¿; thus, ﴿ أَنُورَ عَلَى "the arm," pl. أَيْمُن ; أَنُرع "an oath," pl. أَيْمُن ; أَنْرع "the arm," pl. أَيْمُن ; أَنْرع "an oath," pl. أَيْمُن ; أَنْرع "the arm," pl. أَيْمُن ; أَنْرع "a lion," pl. أَيْمُن "the day," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيُن "the day," pl. سُبُع "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيُن "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيَن "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيُن "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيُن "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيُن "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيَن "the eye," pl. مُنْر ; أَعْيُن بُلُور إِلْمُنْ إِلَى الْعَالَ فَالْمُنْ إِلْمُنْ إِلَى الْعَالَ عُنْر ; أَعْيَن أَعْيَنْ أَعْيَنْ إِلْمُعْيَنْ أَعْيَنْ أَعْيْنَا أَعْيَنْ أَعْيْنَا أَعْيَنْ أَعْيْنَ

227. The Fourteenth Measure, أَنْعَالَ, is applicable, 1. To substantives of three letters and of all measures, though seldom to the measure فعلّ , unless its middle letter be ا, و, or و; thus, مُعَلَّ "rain," pl. كَتِفَ ; أَمْطَارُ "the shoulder," pl. ثَعَلَّ "the shoulder," pl. عَينَ ; أَنْبَالُ (for عَينَ ; أَنْبَالُ ; أَكْتَافَ "the eye," الْمَابُ ; أَنْبَالُ عَينَ , when its medial consonant is a long vowel or diphthong (as already indicated), or when its initial letter is وَ الله الله ويومُ ; أَنْبَالُ . 3. It is applied, though rarely, to the measure

- ْ أَطَهَارٌ ; thus ْ طَاهِرٌ " pure," pl. أَطَهَارٌ ; also to verbal adjectives of the measure فَعِيلٌ , provided they be not of a passive signification; as شُرِيفٌ "noble," pl. أُشْرَافٌ .
- 229. The Sixteenth Measure, فَوَاعِلُ, is applicable to nouns of the measures فَاعِلُ and نَاعِلُ; thus, سَاحِلٌ "the sea shore," pl. "لم "a signet-ring," pl. خَوَاتِمُ. It is also applicable to substantives and adjectives feminine of the measures فَاعِلَةٌ thus, نَاعِلَةٌ thus, مَاعِقَةٌ , نَسُواحِلُ "lightning accompanied with thunder," pl. نَاعِلَةٌ ; صَوَاعِنُ ; وَسَوَاعِنُ ("the hole of the jerboa," pl. نَوَافِقُ .
- 230. The Seventeenth Measure, نَعْانَلُ, is applicable to substantives singular feminine, consisting of four consonants, of which the third is one of the letters of prolongation, viz., , , or عنمان , inert, each preceded by its homogeneous short vowel (§ 30, a.); thus, شَمَالُ "the north wind," pl. شَمَالُ ;

"an old woman," pl. تَصِيَّد ; عَجَائرُ "a species of poem," pl. تَصَائدُ . The same rule applies to feminine substantives of the same measure, but adding عَالِثُ at the end; as سَحَابَةُ "a cloud," pl. عَجَائِزُ ; سَحَائِزُ ; سَحَائِزُ ; سَحَائِزُ . wonder or rarity," pl. عَجَائِزُ .

- 231. The Eighteenth Measure, نِعَالُ, belongs to substantives singular of the measures أَعَالُ, نُعَالُ and نُعَلُ ; likewise to some nouns of the measures نَعْلُ , فَعَلُ , and نَاعِلُ , when derived from concave roots; as مُعَلُ , a youth," "a slave," pl. عُزَالُ ; غِلْمَانُ "a gazelle or antelope," pl. عُزَالُ ; غِلْمَانُ "a fish," pl. عُزِلُ "a erown," pl. تَيْجَانُ . This plural is also applicable to a few singulars that admit of other measures; as عَرَالُ (for صِيعًا "a brother," pl. صِيعًا "a young boy," pl. صِيعًا (for عُرَالُ) "a brother," pl. عَرَالُ ، صِيعًا في إلى عَرَالُ ، عَرَالُ . "a wall," pl. أَمَوَةُ وَصِيالُ . "a wall," pl. أَمَوَةُ . حِيطَانُ .
- مَعْلَلُ , applies to substantives وَعُعْلَلُ , applies to substantives of the measures وَعَعِلُ , فَعْلُ , فَعْلُ , فَعْلُ ; عَمْلُ "a roof," pl. "a region," "a province," pl. "قَفَانُ "a region," "a province," pl. رُغْفَانُ . It also applies to a few words of the measure فَاعِلُ when used substantively, and not derived from a concave root; as "فَارِسٌ a horseman," pl. فُرْسَانٌ .
- 233. The Twentieth Measure, نعلاً, is applied to adjectives masculine, of the measure فعيل, not having a passive sense; and to a few of the measure فَاعِلُ not derived from a concave or defective root, and significant of a rational being; thus, "a poor man," pl. أَمِر ; فُقراء "a prince," pl. غَفِر "a poet," pl. عُفِر "a poet," pl. عُفِر "a poet," pl. عُفِر "a successor," makes the plural عُلُقاء . There are a few other singular nouns, some of them derived even from a defective root, which admit of this kind of plural.

- 234. The Twenty-first Measure, أَنُعِلاً, applies to singulars of the measure نَعِيلٌ, but is principally peculiar to those whose root is a surd verb, or a concave, or a defective; thus, تُعِيبُ "a friend," "one beloved," pl. أَحِبَاءُ (contracted for أَحِبَاءُ "a rich man," pl. وَلَيْ ; أَعْنِيا وَ "a friend," pl. أَوْلِيا وَ "a friend," pl. أَصْدِقَا وَ لَا اللهُ وَاللهُ وَاللّهُ و
- 235. The Twenty-second Measure, فَعَلَى , applies to adjectives of the measure بُعِيلٌ , and sometimes, though rarely, also to بُعِيلٌ , and أَنْعَلُ , when they are expressive of "pain," "wounds," "injuries in general (of body or mind);" as هَالَكِّ ; قَتْلَى ; جَرَحِي "wounded," pl. عَيْلُ ; جَرَحِي "slain," pl. هَالِكِ ; قَتْلَى ; تَتْلَى . The same plural applies also to verbal adjectives of the measure كَسْلاًنُ , كَسْلاًنُ ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى . وَغَضْبَى . pl. فَضْبَى ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى ; كُسْلَى .
- 236. This is applicable to substantives singular, of the measures وَعَلَى , نَعَلَى , مَعَلَى , نَعَلَى , وَعَلَى بَالْمُ مِنْ مِنْ مِنْ مِنْ مِنْ مُؤْمِنُ وَمِنْ مِنْ مُؤْمِنُ وَمِنْ مُؤْمِنُ وَمُؤْمِنُ وَمُؤْمِنْ وَمُؤْمِنُ وَمُؤْمِ وَمُؤْمِنُ وَمُؤْمِ وَمُؤْمِ و also to adjectives feminine of the measures وَ فَعْلَى and وَ فُعْلَى and وَ فُعْلَى and وَ فَعْلَى and وَ فَعْلَى thus, "a plain," or "a desert," pl. عِذْرَات وَ صَحَرَات a virgin," pl. وَ فَتَاوِي the decision of a judge," pl. وَ فَتَاوِي ; فَتَاوِي pregnant," pl. حَبْلي .

- 237. The Twenty-fourth Measure, نَعَالَي , applies, in the first place, to the same class of substantives and adjectives as the preceding; thus, عَذَارَي "a virgin," pl. عَذَارَي 2nd. To adjectives of the measure سَكَارَي ; as "intoxicated," pl. سَكَارَي . In this case the first letter of the plural may take damma instead of fatha; thus, سَكَارَي and مَكَارَي are both right. The adjective كَسَالَي may have in the plural أَكُسَالَي , or كَسَالَي . Lastly, it applies to feminines of the form وَعَمِلَةٌ وَصَابَاكِي . خَطَايًا . وَسَالَي "a gift," pl. خَطَايًا . ثَعَلَاتًا "sin," pl. خَطَايًا . "غَطَايًا "sin," pl. خَطَايًا .
- 238. The Twenty-fifth Measure, وَعَيْلُ , is applicable to a few singulars of the measures وَعَالٌ , وَعَالٌ , مَعْلُ , and وَعَالٌ , thus, "a slave," pl. وَعَالٌ ; عَبِيْدٌ "a slave," pl. حَمَارٌ ; عَبِيْدٌ "a warrior," pl. عَزِيٌّ .
- 239. The Twenty-sixth Measure, فَعُولُنَّة, is of very rare occurrence, and belongs to a few singulars of the measure وَعُولُتُهُ; thus, بَعُولُمُّة "a husband," pl. عُمُّ ; بُعُولُمُّة ; "a paternal uncle," pl. عُمُومُةً.
 - 240. The Twenty-seventh Measure, فعَالَةٌ, is applicable to a few singulars of the measures فَعَلُ and فَعَلُ; thus, جُجُرٌ a stone," pl. عَجَارَةً ; مُحَارَةً acompanion," pl. عَجَارَةً ; also فَحَابَةً is to be met with.

- 241. The Twenty-eighth Measure, وَعَكَ , applies to a few singulars of the measures وَعَلَقٌ , فَعَلَةٌ , فَعَلَةٌ , نَعْلَةٌ ; thus, تَقَلَقُ ; thus, "a ring," pl. وَعَلَقٌ ; حَلَقٌ ; حَلَقٌ ; صَلَقٌ ; صَلَقٌ "one who seeks," pl. وَطَلَبُ .
- 242. We now proceed to describe the broken plurals of words consisting of four or more consonants, which we cursorily mentioned in \S 58, c and d. They are divided by grammarians into three classes of measures, which, when added to the preceding twenty-eight, furnish in all thirty-one species of broken plurals as formerly stated, \S 58, a.
- 243. The Twenty-ninth Measure, تَفَاعِلُ, أَفَاعِلُ). The first plural of these measures applies to quadriliteral nouns, the consonants of which are all radical; of course the servile final عَدْ طُوهُ لَعْ اللهُ وَمَا اللهُ وَاللهُ وَالل
 - رِمَنَاعِيلٌ , تَفَاعِيلُ , أَفَاعِيلُ) فَعَالِيلُ Measure, وَمَفَاعِيلُ , أَفَاعِيلُ أَفَاعِيلُ)

رَفُواعِيلُ and رَفُواعِيلُ. This measure applies to singular nouns consisting of five letters, of which the penult is a letter of prolongation; as, سُلْطَانَ "a sultan or emperor," pl. زَسَلْطِینُ (for سُلْطِینُ), "a dinar," denarius, pl. وَینَارُ عَالْویلُ (for مُسَلِینُ ; مَنَانِیلُ ; دَنَانِیلُ (for مُسَلِینُ), "a source or fountain head," pl. جَامُوسٌ ; یَنَابِیعُ ; قنادِیلُ (poor," pl. مِسْکِینُ ; جَوَامِیسُ (poor," pl. مِسْکِینُ ; جَوَامِیسُ . "poor," pl. مِسْکِینُ . تَصَاوِیرُ ; مَسَاکِینُ . تَصَاوِیرُ ; مَسَاکِینُ . تَصَاوِیرُ . تَصَاویرُ . تَصَاویرُ . تَصَاوِیرُ . تَصَاوِیرُ . تَصَاویرُ . تَصَا

This is a modification of the preceding measure, by suppressing the penult و of prolongation, and by adding the termination أَسَادَدُ ; thus, أَسَادَدُ ; a preceptor," pl. أَسَادُ and أَسَادُ ; أَسَادَدُ ; أَسَادِدُ أَسَادِدُ أَسَادُ أ

a. For a more detailed account of this portion of Arabic Grammar the learner is recommended to peruse the works of Lumsden and De Sacy. My object has been to observe a middle course between the profuseness of these great masters, and the meagreness of Richardson and Stewart.

The Plural of the Plural- english .

- 246. An additional plural is sometimes formed from the broken plurals of triliterals, which is called "the pl. of the plural;" thus, عَلَنْ "a dog," pl. أَكُلُبُ , and thence the plural of the plural 'أكَلْبُ ; so from ظُفْر "a finger nail," is formed the pl. أَظْفَار ; and from that, the pl. of the pl. أَظْفَار (for يَدْتُ (for يَدْتُ (for يَدْتُ (for يَدْتُ), and thence "بَالَّوْنِي (for يَدْتُ), and thence "سَوَار from أَسُورَة (for يَالِّذِي) "the hand," comes the pl. أَسُورَة (for أَسُورَة). It may be observed that the plurals of the plural agree in measure with those of quadriliteral and quinquiliteral nouns, §§ 243, 244, and 245.
- a. Broken plurals sometimes form an additional regular plural in المساقفة: thus, from رَسَالَةُ "an epistle," is formed the broken plural رَسَالَكُ "and thence the plural feminine of the plural رَسَالُكُ "a collection of letters;" so from بَيُوتَاتُ "a house," pl. بُيُوتَاتُ , and thence the pl. of the plural "بُيُوتَاتُ "a cluster of houses." According to De Sacy, these plurals can be employed only when the number is undetermined, and above nine.
- b. Sometimes a dual is formed from a broken plural; thus, أُصُلُ "a principle," or "foundation" (of a science), pl. أَصُولُ ; and thence is formed (what we may call "the dual of the plural" أُصُولُ which signifies "the principles of the two sciences," viz., Theology and Jurisprudence.
- 247. We stated briefly, § 58, b, that many Arabic nouns have more than one species of plural; the student must not, however, conclude that they are all used indiscriminately. In this case he must be guided entirely by prescription or custom. For example, on examining carefully the preceding thirty-one measures of broken plurals, he will find that no fewer than nine of them, viz., أَنْعُلُ , فِعَلَ , فَعُولٌ , فَعُولٌ , مَعُولٌ . We may here further state that "the plurals of paucity," viz., measures 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th, alluded to in § 58, b, are applied only to a number of persons or things, ranging from three to ten, both inclusive.

SECTION VII.

SYNTAX OF THE ARTICLE, SUBSTANTIVES, ADJECTIVES, AND PRONOUNS.

Analysis of Sentences.

248. In the preceding Sections we have treated of the letters, syllables, and words of the Arabic language. We now come to the most important part of our work—the construction of sentences, or, in other words, the rules for speaking and writing the language correctly. We have all along taken for granted that the student is acquainted with the ordinary terms of grammar, and is able to distinguish the various parts of speech (common to all languages) from one another. It is probable, however, that he may not have turned his attention to the analysis of sentences, which ought to form a preliminary step to the Syntax of every foreign tongue. On this account, we request his attention to the following general, or rather universal principles of language, an acquaintance with which will enable him to comprehend more fully some of the rules which we are about to state.

a.- A simple sentence consists of three parts, viz., a nominative or agent; a verb; and an attribute, predicate, or complement; thus, "Fire is hot;" "Fire consumes wood." In the first sentence, fire is the nominative, or subject of affirmation; hot is the attribute, or that which is affirmed of the subject, fire; and the verb is serves to express the affirmation. Again, in the sentence "Fire consumes wood." fire is the nominative, or agent, consumes is the verb. and mood is the object or complement. Frequently a simple sentence consists in appearance of only two words; as "winds blow;" "ships sail:" which expressions are equivalent to "winds are blowing." "ships are sailing." It appears, then, that the shortest sentence must consist of three words, expressed or understood; and it will. be found that the longest is always reducible to three distinct parts and no more. For the sake of illustration let us take the following sentence from the Letters of Junius, viz., "An unmerited outrage offered to a great or good man | naturally excites | some emotions of resentment even in hearts that have the least esteem for virtue." In this sentence the verb is "naturally excites;" what precedes the verb, is the nominative; and what follows it, is the complement.

- b. Although every simple sentence is reducible to three distinct parts, yet it is not easy to find a general term that will accurately apply to each individual part with the exception of the verb. When the sentence is expressed by means of the verb "to be," the three parts may be called the nominative or subject, the verb, and the attribute; thus, "Zaid is diligent." When the sentence is expressed by any other neuter verb, the parts may be called nominative, verb, and complement; as "Zaid went from Mecca to Isfahān." When the verb of the sentence is active or transitive, the parts are agent, rerb, and object; as "Zaid purchased a horse." Lastly, when the sentence is expressed by means of a passive verb, the three parts are nominative, verb, and agent; as "a horse was purchased by Zaid."
- c. A compound sentence, or period, consists of two or more simple sentences connected by a conjunction, expressed or understood; thus,

"Knowledge fills the mind with entertaining views; and administers to it a perpetual series of gratifications; it gives ease to solitude; fills a public station with suitable abilities; and, when it is mixed with complacency, it adds lustre to such as are possessed of it." It will be a useful exercise for the student to analyze, by himself, the above compound sentence; which consists of five simple sentences, in all of which, knowledge, or its substitute it, is the nominative. The last two clauses make but one simple sentence, for they amount merely to this: "Knowledge, mixed with complacency, adds lustre to such as are possessed of it."

249. The leading principles of Arabic Syntax do not differ upon the whole, from those that prevail in our own and other European languages. As a general rule the verb agrees with its nominative in number, gender, and person; the adjective agrees with its substantive in number, gender, and case; and the relative agrees in number and gender with its antecedent. There are, however, in the Arabic language, some exceptions to the preceding general principles, together with many idiomatic peculiarities which may startle the European student, whose notions of grammar are derived from the languages of ancient Greece and Rome.

Arrangement of the Words in a Sentence.

250. We have just shewn (§ 248, a) that a sentence consists of three distinct parts; and the attentive student will find on examination that there are six ways of arranging these parts. In Arabic prose compositions, the general rule is to put the verb first, then the nominative, and lastly the complement; thus, اَصَرَبَ وَيَدٌ عَمْرًا "Zaid struck 'Amru."

So in the following sentences, viz., غَالَ لُقُمَانُ لَآئِبهِ "Lukmān said to his son." فِي ٱلْبَدَايَةِ خَلَقَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلسَّمَاوَاتَ وَ ٱلْرَضَ "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." حَامَّ زَيْدٌ مِنَ اِصْفَهَانَ الِي بَعْدَاد "Zaid came from Iṣfahān to Baghdād." When one substantive governs another in the genitive case the governing word comes first; as حُبُ ٱلدُّنيَا وَاللهُ اللهُ اللهُ

a. Languages abounding in case terminations, such as the Sanskrit, the Latin, and the Greek, admit of any of the six modes of arrangement above alluded to; thus the simple sentence, "Cæsar vanquished Pompey," which we cannot arrange with perspicuity, except in one way, may in Latin be expressed, "Cæsar vicit Pompeium," or "Cæsar Pompeium vicit;" "vicit Cæsar Pompeium," or "vicit Pompeium Cæsar;" lastly, "Pompeium Cæsar vicit," or "Pompeium vicit Cæsar." The Arabic is more restricted in its arrangement; and it is a curious coincidence that the Gaelic exactly agrees with it; for example, the first verse of Genesis (above quoted) runs thus in Gaelic: "Anns an toiseach chruthaich Dia na neamhan agus an talamh," which corresponds word for word with the Arabic. The reader is not to infer, however, that I consider the two languages to have the least affinity with one another. I merely point out occasionally certain striking resemblances between the two, as to arrangement and idiom, which I hold to be purely accidental.

SYNTAX OF THE ARTICLE.

251. The definite article if of the Arabic generally corresponds in its use and application with the ὁ, ἡ, το of the Greek. For example, when a substantive is restricted by the article, and at the same time qualified by an adjective, the adjective as well as the substantive takes the article; thus, الكتابُ "the great (or valuable) book," ἡ βιβλος ἡ ἀξια. In like manner when the substantive is a proper name (and consequently definite in its nature), its qualifying adjective (if any) takes the article; thus, المعرفة "Abraham the faithful," Αβραὰμ ὁ πιστος. The article is always prefixed to names of peoples and sects; thus, القرش "the Christians;" القرش "the Persians." It is used also before singular nouns to express collectively a whole species; as in the following example:

a. The article is sometimes employed, as in German and French, nstead of an affixed possessive pronoun, when the possessor cannot be mistaken; thus, "By thine absence thou hast troubled me, and in my trouble my reason has departed," بالنّوي زَلْنَتني وَالْعَقَلُ فِي ٱلْزُلْزَالِ زَالَ وَالْ زَالُ employed for مَعْلَى employed for الْعَقَلُ is in other languages, per antonomasiam, as in the expressions "النّوي "the prophet," أَلْكِتَابُ "the prophet," أَلْكِتَابُ "the prophet," أَلْكِتَابُ "the prophet," أَلْكِتَابُ "the article is used as in Herman and French before nouns denoting an abstract idea in reneral, in which instances we employ no article in English; thus, الْكَسَلِ يُحَمَّلُ ٱلْثَوَابُ لَا بِالْكَسَلِ مُعَمِّلُ مُعَمِّلًا يَعْمَلُ مُعَمِّلًا الْكَسَلِ ا not by slothfulness;" it is also used before names of sciences, arts, regions, etc.; as اَلْعِرَاقُ "wisdom;" اَلْعُرَاقُ "government;" الْعِرَاقُ "Yrāk;" اَلْشَامُ "Syria," or "Damascus."

SYNTAX OF SUBSTANTIVES.

Of the Nominative Case.

252. The nominative case is often employed at the beginning of a sentence in an absolute sense, independently of any grammatical construction with what follows. For example, the sentence "To God belongs whatever is in the heavens and upon the earth," is thus expressed in Arabic, literally, "God, (or, as to God,) to him (is) whatever (is) in the heavens and upon the earth;" so, الله وسولة عندكم "As to God, his prophet is among you," i.e. "the prophet of God is among you." This use of the nominative absolute is called the inchoative case, in our modern Anglo-Saxon, both English and Scotch, as in the following couplet from the exquisite ballad of "Auld Robin Gray:"

"My heart—it said nay, for I look'd for Jamie back;
But the wind—it blew high, and the ship—it was a wrack."

a. We mentioned (158, a) that the verb "to be," is seldom used in the present tense except when its omission might occasion an ambiguity; thus, زَيدُ عَالِمٌ "Zaid is learned;" اللهُ كَرِيمٌ "God (is) bountiful;" أَلْتُ شَرِيفٌ "thou (art noble)." Here we see that the verb is entirely omitted, and both the subject and attribute put in the nominative case in the order described, § 250. In many instances it is optional to make the subject precede the attribute or vice vcrsa; thus we may say اَللهُ اَللهُ اَكْبَرُ اللهُ ال

Of the Genitive Case.

253. When in Arabic two substantives are so combined that the first, which is indefinite in its signification, is restricted by the second, such a construction is called المُنافَّةُ, which we may translate "state of regimen." The first word is termed "المُنافُ "the regent;" and the second, which is always put in the genitive case, is called المُنافُ وَاللهُ وَالل

a. Like كُلُّ are also construed the interrogative pronoun وَاللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّ

أَنْ وَ سُرَعَةُ الْعِسَابِ "quick at calculation," instead of readinces at calculation," instead of "violent in chastising," instead of وشدّة الْعِقَابِ في الْعِقَابِ وَسُرَعَةُ الْعِسَابِ وَسُرَعَةُ الْعِسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً الْعَسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً الْعَسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً الْعَسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً الْعَسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً الْعَسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً الْعَسَابِ وَسُرَعَةً وَالْعَلَابُ وَسُرَعَةً وَالْعَلَابُ وَسُرَعَةً وَالْعَلَابُ وَسُرَعَةً وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَى وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَالِيّ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَالِيّ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَالِ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَالِعُلُولُ وَالْعَلَابُ وَالْعَلَالُولُولُولُولُولُ وَالْعَلَالِ وَالْعَلَالُولُولُولُولُولُولُ وَالْعَلَالُولُولُولُ وَالْعَلَال

Of the Accusative Case.

254. We stated (§ 194) that every noun in Arabic may be converted into an adverb by being put in the accusative The accusative case in this language is frequently used adverbially in instances where the Latin would employ the ablative, or the accusative with a preposition; thus, مَاتَ جُوعًا "he perished of hunger," mortuus est do ye fast during certain specified " صُومُوا أَيَّامَا مَعَدُودَةً days," per certum dierum sputium. An adjective or participle with the accusative termination frequently corresponds with the Latin gerund in do; as جَآءَ رَاكِبًا "he came riding," venit equilando; يَاكُلُ وَاقِفًا "he eats standing," enter the gate in adoration." The accusative is sometimes equivalent to the Latin gerund in dum; as نَصَرَبْتُهُ تَأْدِيبًا ''I struck him for (the sake of) instruction,'' ad erudiendum. Finally, the accusative, pur et simple, expresses in Arabic the sense of the Latin quoad, "by reason of," "with respect to," or "as to;" thus, أَسُعَاقُ نَفْسًا "Isaac" is good with respect to his mind, or disposition," i.e. "he is well disposed; " اَللّٰهُ عَظِيمٌ نُدْرَةٌ "God is great (as to) power;" وَهِيَ كَالْحِجَارَةِ اَو أَشَدٌ قَسْوَةً "and these (hearts) are like stones, or more intense (than stones), as to hardness."

a. The predicate in the accusative is sometimes put before the subject; thus in the Kur,ān, vi. 42; الْمُعَالِّهُ الْكُلُهُ الْكُلُهُ اللهِ [He it is who hath brought forth] "the palm-tree and the corn-crop of which there is a variety of food;" where مُخْتَلُفًا أَكُلُهُ مُخْتَلُفًا أَكُلُهُ مُخْتَلُفًا "the food (resulting) from which is various." So in xxi. 3: الذِي أَكُلُهُ مُخْتَلُفًا [They listen not to the admonition of their Lord except that] "they may turn it unto sport, their hearts being taken up with delight;" where اللهِيةُ قُلُوبُهُم الهِيةُ اللهُ ال

b. The present participle put in the accusative has sometimes the effect of what in Latin is called the subjunctive mood, which in Arabic is expressed by the preterite preceded by the conjunction مَنَ عَلَيْ عَلَى الْعَارَ جَالِبًا عَلَى قَصَاءَ ٱللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى وَمَا اللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى وَمَا اللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى وَمَا اللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى قَصَاءَ ٱللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى وَمَا اللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى وَمَا اللّه مَا كَانَ جَالِبًا عَلَى وَمَاءً أَوْ جَمِيلًا مَا كَانَ قَلِيحًا أَوْ جَمِيلًا وَ حَمِيلًا مَا كَانَ قَلِيحًا أَوْ جَمِيلًا وَ وَمِمِيلًا وَمَا اللّهِ مَوْاءُ مَحَوِدٌ كَائِنًا مَا كَانَ قَلِيحًا أَوْ جَمِيلًا وَ وَمِمِيلًا وَمَا اللّهِ وَاللّهُ اللّهِ وَاللّهُ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَالْمُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ

c. In Arabic the accusative is very frequently employed where we should use the nominative, as in the following verses from the Kur,ān, ii. 242: وَلِلْمُطَلَّقَاتَ مَتَاعَ بِالْمُعُوفِ حَقًا عَلَي الْمُتَقِينَ "and to the divorced (wives is due) a reasonable provision (according to the husband's means); this is incumbent on the pious;" where we see قَا in the accusative. So also in iv. 15, we have the following: "and if there should be more (brothers or sisters) than these (two) they shall be (equal) sharers in the third part (of the estate); this is an ordinance from God;" where we see فَرِيضَةُ مِنَ اللَّهُ عَنَ اللَّهُ عَنْ اللَّهُ عَا عَنْ اللَّهُ عَا عَا

Substantives in Apposition.

255. When one substantive is subjoined to another by way of description or designation, the two are said to be in "apposition," and must agree in gender, number, and case, as in the Kur,ān, xiv. 19: "and وَيُسْقَي مِنْ مَاء صَدِيدِ "and there shall be drinking of water (which is) poison." in xxiv. 35: يُوتَدُ مِن شَجْرَة مُبَارِكَة زَيتُونَة : it (the lamp) is lighted with the oil of a blessed tree, the olive." The same rule holds when the second substantive defines the manner, measure, or quantity, of the first: thus, وَضُفَةُ "I ate half the cake," literally, "I ate the cake, the half of it." The same rule also applies to certain words added by way of "confirmation" or "corroboration" (تَوكِيدٌ), such as "the soul" or "self," and "the eye" or "essence," having subjoined to them the affixed pronoun appropriate to the first substantive. They thus become equivalent to the Latin insc. insa. and insum. They agree in gender, number, and case with the leading substantives, the forms used for both dual and plural being اَعْيُنَ and اَعْيُنَ , as may be seen in the following examples: "Zaid himself came;" كَانَتُ نَقْسُهُا "I saw Zaid himself;" رَأَيْتُ زَيْدًا نَفْسَهُ "I saw Zaid himself;" رَأَيْتُ زَيْدًا نَفْسَهُ "I saw the two princes themselves." The words عَبنَ and عَبنَ and عَبنَ and عَبنَ and be put in apposition after the affixed pronouns; for example, رَأَيْتُكَ اَنْتُ نَفْسَكَ اللهُ اللهُ

- a. In a manner similar to the foregoing are used the words کُلُّ and denoting "totality," or "universality," as also عَاصَّةُ "people in general;" as جَآءَ ٱلْجَيْشُ كُلُّهُ "the whole army came," literally, "the whole of it;" so الْقَبَيلَةُ كُلُهَا the army came, the whole of it;" so "جُآءَتِ ٱلْقَبَيلَةُ كُلُهَا tribe came;" رَأَيْتُ ٱلْقُومَ كُلُّهُمْ "I saw the multitude, all of them;" جَآءَ ٱلْجَيْشُ عَامَّتُهُ "I passed by all the women " مَرَرْتُ بِٱلنِّسَاءَ كُلِّهِنَّ "the whole army came." In order to express duality in such instances the words کِلُتا or کِلُتا, "both," are employed; as in the following examples: جَآءَ زَيْدٌ وَعَمْرُو كِلَاهُمَا both Zaid and 'Amru came;" وَأَيْتُ عَمْرًا وَعُمَرَ كِلَيْهِمَا 'I saw both 'Amru and 'Umar;" زَوْجَتُهُ زَيْنَبَ وَفَاطِمَةً كِلْتَبْهِمَا 'I gave unto him as wives both Zainab and Fatima." When the words كِلُتَا and كِلُتَا precede the substantives which they qualify they become indeclinable; thus, مَرَرْتُ بِكِلْتَا أَخْتَيْكَ "I saw both thy brothers:" رَأَيْتُ كِلَا أَخَرَيْكَ "I passed by both thy sisters."
 - b. To the word كُلُّ thus used in apposition, the words وَمُنَّ fem.

بَرُمُعَا بَ بَرَمُعَا بَ fem. بَحَمُعُ may be subjoined, agreeing in gender, number, and case with the leading word; thus, نُسَجَدُ ٱلْمُلاَئِكَةُ كُلُّهُم ٱجْمَعُونَ and all the angels did worship."

The word أَجْمُعُ thus applied is not used in the dual, either masculine or feminine.

c. The word رَبَنَا applied as above may be accompanied by one or all of the following words, which are of the same signification, viz.: ﴿ اَبْنَا وَ اَبْنَا وَ اَبْنَا وَ الْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالِي وَ الْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعُلِي وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالَى وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعَالِمُ وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلِمُ وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُوالِمُ وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعُلِّمُ وَالْمُعِلَى وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِّمِ وَالْمُعُلِّمُ وَالْمُعُلِّمُ وَالْمُعُلِّمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَالْمُعُلِمُ وَال

SYNTAX OF THE NUMERALS.

Of the Cardinal Numbers.

256. We have seen (§ 69) that the cardinal numbers from 3 to 10 inclusive have this anomaly, that when they refer to a masculine noun they assume the feminine termination خَانَةُ; whereas the feminine nouns require the same numerals to be of the masculine form; thus, اَ اَ اَ اَ اَ اللهُ الله

then govern in the genitive case; thus, سِتَّهُ ٱیّامِ "six days;" ثَمْسَةُ ٱشْهُرِ "five months." As a general rule the noun thus governed by the numerals 3 to 10 must be a broken plural.

- a. The number one, as we shewed, § 69, is expressed by the words for the وَاحِدَةً and أَحْدَي for the masculine, and by وَاحِدَةً feminine. The first form of each is used as a substantive when the object numbered is not expressed; as مَا جَاتِنِي اَحَدُّ no one (masc.) came unto me;" مَا كَانَتْ إِحْدَى "there was no one (fem.)." They may also govern a genitive case; thus, آگرجَالِ "one of the "one of the women " أَحَدْهُمْ "; one of the women " إِحْدَى ٱلنِّسَاءُ "; are adjectives, and follow their substan-". one degree " دَرَجَةٌ وَاحِدَةٌ " one object " شَيْءٌ وَاحِدٌ one degree." They may, however, be employed by themselves, still agreeing in gender with the nouns which they represent; كُلُّ وَاحِدٍ مِنْ هٰذِهِ ٱلْتُحَلَّجَانِ "each one of these gulphs (or bays);" كُلُّ وَاحِدَة مِنْ هٰذِهِ ٱلْمُدُنِ "each one of these cities." They are also used in the sense of "one" or "the one" in contrast with "the other;" thus اَلْنِصَفُ ٱلْوَاحِدُ "the one-half;" اَلْنِصَفُ ٱلْآخَرُ "the other half." When repeated and used adverbially, they imply a distribution of individuality; then, with regard to the coun- "ثُمَّ إِنَّ ٱلْوُزَرَاء جَأَوًّا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا sellors, they came one by one."
- b. The number "two," is sufficiently represented by the mere dual terminations of the objects numbered; thus, "two men;" "two men;" رُجُنَانِ "two degrees." Sometimes the numeral "two," دَرَجَنَانِ fem. وَنْنَانِ or اِثْنَانِ are employed as adjectives after nouns in the dual. In such instances the numeral "two" appears to be redundant but perhaps it adds more emphasis to the expression; for example, وَيُنْ مُنِّ كُلِّ شَيَّ ۗ وَجَمِينِ ٱتنَينِ "He created a pair of each species," where the numeral إِثْنَينِ is apparently superfluous.

257. The numerals 11 to 99, both inclusive, govern the substantive to which they refer in the accusative singular; -ninety" تِسْعُ وتِسْعُونَ نَعْجَةٌ "; eleven stars" أَحَدُ عَشَرَ كَوْكَبَا as nine sheep." The numerals 100 and 1,000, together with their multiples, govern the nouns denoting the objects numbered, in the genitive singular; thus, مِأَيَّةُ رَجُلِ a hundred men ;" أَنُّ دِينَارٍ so "three hundred men ;" so "ثَلَاثُ مِأَيَّةً رَجُل "; "a thousand dīnārs;" اَخَدَ عَشَرَ ٱلْفَ بِينَارِ "cleven thousand dīnārs." Numerals made up of decades and units, when they exceed 20, place the units first and then the tens; thus, ثَلَاثَتٌ وَثَمَانُونَ عَامًا "eighty-three years" (literally, threeand-cighty years); اَثْنَان وَعِشْرُونَ دِينَارًا ; two-and-twenty dīnārs." If a number is composed of several classes, the noun expressive of the objects numbered is put after the total number, and is governed by the concluding numeral, according to the rules already stated; thus, for example, -be" بَيْنَ ٱلْهِجْرَةِ وَبْيْنَ ٱلْطُوفَانِ ثَلَاتُهُ آلَافِ وِتِسْعُمِأَيَةٍ وَأَرْبَحْ وَسَبْعُونَ سَنَةً tween the Hijra and the Deluge (there elapsed) 3,974 years." In instances of this kind, however, the substantive may be repeated after each class of the numerals; as follows, viz., ٱلْغَرِّ بِيَّةُ مَحْصُولُهَا ٱلْفَا ٱلْفَ دِينَارِ وَمِأَيَّهُ ٱلْفِ دِينَارِ وَارْبَعَةُ وَارْبَعُونَ ٱلْفِ دِينَارِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ عَيْمَارِ اللهِ اللهُ اللهِ اللهُ اللهِ ال Egypt,) is reckoned at 2,144,080 military dīnārs."

- b. In expressing a number of thousands, ranging from three to ten, both inclusive, النّب is used in the genitive plural بنائة والله الله objects numbered follow the same in the genitive singular; thus, "three thousand men." When the thousands range from 11 to 99 (both inclusive) الفّد عَشَرَة الله والله والله الله الله والله وا
- 258. Not only the cardinal numbers from three to ten, inclusive (§ 256), but also those of a higher denomination may be employed in apposition to the nouns denoting the objects numbered, as may be seen in the following example: وَجَذَبَ ٱلسَّكَةُ إِلَى ٱلْأَرْضِ إِنَّ هِيَ مُمْتَلِيَّةٌ حِيتَانًا كِبَارًا مِأَنَّةٌ ثَلْقَةٌ وَجَمْسِينَ "and he drew the net to the land; lo, it was full of large fishes, one hundred and three-and-fifty."

- 259. When a numeral is employed to denote a certain number out of a collection, or class, or whole genus, it is usual to express the relation between the numeral and the class by means of the preposition رس "from" or "out of;" for example: تِسْعَةٌ مِنَ ٱلرَّهْطِ "nine (men) out of the family;" "three birds" i.e. "three birds from among the genus bird." It is further to be observed that the numeral in such instances, agrees in gender with the objects numbered; thus, in the expression "ثَلَاثَةُ مِنَ ٱلْغَنَم "three sheep;" the numeral is masculine because غُنَهُ as a genus, is masculine; so ثَلَاثُ مِنَ ٱلْبَطِّ 'three ducks;'' where ثَلَاثُ مِنَ ٱلْبَطِّ is feminine, because if is feminine. If an epithet indicating the gender is added immediately after the numeral, the latter agrees in gender with such epithet; thus, وَنَ ٱلْغَنَمُ وَنَ ٱلْغَنَامُ وَالْغَنَامُ وَالْغَنَامُ وَالْغَنَامُ "three females of the genus sheep;" ثَلَاتَهُ ذُكُور مِنَ آلْبَطِّ "three females of the genus sheep males from among the ducks."
 - a. Numerals used abstractedly, as in the science of arithmetic, are always put in the masculine form; thus, ثَلْتُهُ نِصَفُ سِتَّهُ "three is the half of six." When nouns of different sexes are included under one and the same numeral, the latter agrees in gender with the noun immediately following it, provided the numeral denotes a number extending from six to ten, both inclusive; as لَي تُمَانِيةُ أَعَبُد وَ إُمَاتَةُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ اللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَال

- b. When the compound numerals above ten apply to rational beings, they always take the masculine form, as in the following examples: عِنْدِي خَمْسَةٌ عَشَرَ عَبْدًا وَجَارِيَّة to me belong fifteen male slaves and [fifteen] female slaves;" عِنْدِي خَمْسَةُ عَشَرَ جَارِيَّةً وَعَبْدًا me belong fifteen female and [fifteen] male slaves." If the numerals apply to irrational beings they take the gender of the nearest substantive; thus, عَنْدِي خَمْسَةُ عَشَر جَملًا وَنَافَةً there are in my possession (chez moi,) fifteen male camels and [fifteen] she-camels;" or, by transposition, عَنْدِي خَمْسَ عَشْرَةَ نَاقَةً وَجَمَلًا I have fifteen she-camels and [fifteen] he-camels. If, however, in the case of irrational objects a qualifying word such as مَا بَيْن, etc., interposes immediately after the numerals, the latter are of the feminine form; thus for example: I possess fifteen camels, what " عِنْدِي خُمْسَ عَشْرَةً مَا بَيْنَ جَمَلٍ وَنَاقَةً between males and females," that is, "partly male and partly female:" and the same construction holds, as to the numerals if in this last expression we transpose the last two words and read نَافَةِ وَجَمَلِ.
- 260. The numerals agree in gender with that of the singular number of the objects numbered; thus, "خین "seven years;" because "a year," is feminine in the singular. So "three baths," for the singular "three baths," for the singular is masculine; and this rule holds when the name of the objects numbered is suppressed; as in the following example: منافر علم منافر علم المنافر ع devoured," where is feminine, the word "kine" being understood.

- a. When the objects numbered are of a vague or general nature, such as may apply to either sex, the numeral agrees with the same according to the grammatical gender of such objects. For example, the words شَخْصٌ and عَينَ denote "a person" or "individual," the former being masculine and the latter feminine; hence they say is used in the masculine form ثَلَاثَهُ ٱشْخُصِ ثَلَاتُ أُعَيٰن whether the objects be male or female. In like manner "three persons" or "individuals," whether applicable to females or If, however, another noun or epithet be added to such phrases as the foregoing serving to indicate the real sex of the objects numbered, the numeral will agree in gender with the word or words فَكَانَ مِجَنِّي دُونَ مَنْ أَتَّقِي ثَلَاثُ شُخُوصِ كَاعِبَانِ وَمْعُصِرُ,annexed; thus "and I had for a shield against those whom I feared two (young) maidens and a (marringeable) woman." Here we see that ثلاث fem. is used with شخوص masc. because the latter word is qualified by the epithets مُعْصَرُ and مُعْصَرُ each of which is applicable only to females. Sometimes, however, regard is had more to the signification of the objects numbered than to their strict grammatical gender; thus the word نفس "soul," is feminine; but when applied to persons of the male sex the numeral agrees with it in the masculine gender; thus, three souls" (meaning males), because in this instance " نَلاَتُهُ ٱنْفُس أَرُجُلُ has the same signification as نَعْسُ
- b. If the name of the objects numbered be suppressed and its place supplied by an epithet descriptive of its quality, the numeral agrees in gender with the noun understood; thus in the Kur,ān, vi. 160:

المثالها "he who hath done a good (deed) shall receive (as his reward) ten (times) the equivalent thereof." Here the numeral عَشُرُ is feminine, although آسَتُالُ is masculine; because the latter is considered as a mere epithet of حَسَنَةُ (plural of مَسَنَةُ understood.

- 261. The cardinal numbers may be restricted by the article according to the rules laid down, § 251. 1. When the numeral is used substantively in an abstract sense; thus, the (number) three is half of the (number) ' ٱلفَّالَاتُهُ نِصْفُ ٱلسَّتَّة six." 2. When the name of the objects numbered is understood, having been previously expressed, and hence well known; as مَرَجَعَ ٱلسَّبَعُونَ بِفَرَجَ عِهُ ''and the seventy (disciples) returned with joy." 3. When the numeral is employed in apposition as an adjective after a definite noun; for example: the five men." 4. When the numerals from " ٱلرَّجَالُ ٱلْخَمْسَةُ 3 to 10 (both inclusive) precede the objects numbered in a state of regimen, in which case the article is generally prefixed only to the latter; as نَلَاثَتُ ٱلرِّجَالِ "the three men" or "the trio of men." Occasionally, however, the numeral takes the article as well as the name of the objects numbered; as اَلسَّبْعَةُ دَعَائِمَ ٱلسَّاعَةُ دَعَائِمَ ٱلسَّاعَةُ دَعَائِمَ السَّاعَةُ عَائِمَ السَّامَةِ as the law."
- a. When the numerals from 11 to 19 (both inclusive) precede the name of the objects numbered, and as we already remarked, § 257, govern the same in the accusative singular, the article may be prefixed to the first member only or to both; thus, الْأَحُدُ عَشَرُ دِرهُما or or الْفِنَةُ عَشْرَةُ نَافَةً "the eleven dirhams;" also الْفَنَةُ الْعَشْرَةُ نَافَةً "the twelve she-camels." From 20 to 99 (both inclusive), when the numeral consists of a multiple of ten only, it takes the article; and if such multiple be combined with units they both take the article; thus, الْعَشُرُونَ نَعْجَةً (السَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعُونَ جَمَلًا "the seventy-seven camels."

b. With regard to numerals consisting of a hundred or a thousand, together with their multiples and accessories, it is optional to prefix the article either to the entire numeral, or to the name of the object numbered; for example: ثَلَامَاتُهُ الْدُمِيّٰ "the three hundred dumr.;" "the two hundred thousand dirhams;" so also, خَذُهُ الْمُلِيُّ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهُ اللهُ ا

Of the Ordinal Numbers.

262. The Ordinals are mere adjectives, and up to the nineteenth they agree in gender, number, and case with the substantives to which they relate. We stated, § 73, that "the twentieth," and all multiples of ten above that number, are expressed by the cardinals, so that they are considered to be of the common gender, as they are indeclinable. The ordinals may, or may not, be restricted by the article: as "لَوْمُولُونُ "the first year;" الْوَالَامُ الْوَالُونُ "the first year;" عَامُ الْوَلُونُ When, as in this last phrase, they take the article, they are

SYNTAX OF THE ARTICLE, SUBSTANTIVES, ADJECTIVES, AND PRONOUNS.

Analysis of Sentences.

248. In the preceding Sections we have treated of the letters, syllables, and words of the Arabic language. We now come to the most important part of our work-the construction of sentences, or, in other words, the rules for speaking and writing the language correctly. We have all along taken for granted that the student is acquainted with the ordinary terms of grammar, and is able to distinguish the various parts of speech (common to all languages) from one It is probable, however, that he may not have another. turned his attention to the analysis of sentences, which ought to form a preliminary step to the Syntax of every foreign On this account, we request his attention to the following general, or rather universal principles of language, an acquaintance with which will enable him to comprehend more fully some of the rules which we are about to state.

a. A simple sentence consists of three parts, viz., a nominative or agent; a verb; and an attribute, predicate, or complement; thus, "Fire is hot;" "Fire consumes wood." In the first sentence, fire is the nominative, or subject of affirmation; hot is the attribute, or that which is affirmed of the subject, fire; and the verb is serves to express the affirmation. Again, in the sentence "Fire consumes wood," fire is the nominative, or agent, consumes is the verb, and mood is the object or complement. Frequently a simple sentence consists in appearance of only two words; as "winds blow;" "ships sail;" which expressions are equivalent to "winds are blowing," "ships are sailing." It appears, then, that the shortest sentence must consist of three words, expressed or understood; and it will be found that the longest is always reducible to three distinct parts and no more. For the sake of illustration let us take the following sentence from the Letters of Junius, viz., "An unmerited outrage offered to a great or good man | naturally excites | some emotions of resentment even in hearts that have the least esteem for virtue." In this sentence the verb is "naturally excites;" what precedes the verb, is the nominative; and what follows it, is the complement.

- b. Although every simple sentence is reducible to three distinct parts, yet it is not easy to find a general term that will accurately apply to each individual part with the exception of the verb. When the sentence is expressed by means of the verb "to be," the three parts may be called the nominative or subject, the verb, and the attribute; thus, "Zaid is diligent." When the sentence is expressed by any other neuter verb, the parts may be called nominative, verb, and complement; as "Zaid went from Mecca to Isfahān." When the verb of the sentence is active or transitive, the parts are agent, nerb, and object; as "Zaid purchased a horse." Lastly, when the sentence is expressed by means of a passive verb, the three parts are nominative, verb, and agent; as "a horse was purchased by Zaid."
- c. A compound sentence, or period, consists of two or more simple sentences connected by a conjunction, expressed or understood; thus,

"Knowledge fills the mind with entertaining views; and administers to it a perpetual series of gratifications; it gives ease to solitude; fills a public station with suitable abilities; and, when it is mixed with complacency, it adds lustre to such as are possessed of it." It will be a useful exercise for the student to analyze, by himself, the above compound sentence; which consists of five simple sentences, in all of which, knowledge, or its substitute it, is the nominative. The last two clauses make but one simple sentence, for they amount merely to this: "Knowledge, mixed with complacency, adds lustre to such as are possessed of it."

249. The leading principles of Arabic Syntax do not differ upon the whole, from those that prevail in our own and other European languages. As a general rule the verb agrees with its nominative in number, gender, and person; the adjective agrees with its substantive in number, gender, and case; and the relative agrees in number and gender with its antecedent. There are, however, in the Arabic language, some exceptions to the preceding general principles, together with many idiomatic peculiarities which may startle the European student, whose notions of grammar are derived from the languages of ancient Greece and Rome.

Arrangement of the Words in a Sentence.

250. We have just shewn (§ 248, a) that a sentence consists of three distinct parts; and the attentive student will find on examination that there are six ways of arranging these parts. In Arabic prose compositions, the general rule is to put the verb first, then the nominative, and lastly the complement; thus, انْ خَرْبَ نَرْدُ عُمْرًا 'Zaid struck 'Amru.'

So in the following sentences, viz., غَالَ لُعْمَانُ لِآئِنهِ "Lukmān said to his son." نِي ٱلْبُدَايَةِ خَلَقَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلسَّمَاوَاتَ وَ ٱلْرَضَ "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." خَآءَ زَيْدٌ مِنْ اِصْفَهَانَ الِي بَعْدَادُ "Zaid came from Iṣfahān to Baghdād." When one substantive governs another in the genitive case the governing word comes first; as حُبُ ٱلدُّنيَا وَهُ الْعَلَى اللهُ اللهُ

a. Languages abounding in case terminations, such as the Sanskrit. the Latin, and the Greek, admit of any of the six modes of arrangement above alluded to; thus the simple sentence, "Cæsar vanquished Pompey," which we cannot arrange with perspicuity, except in one way, may in Latin be expressed, "Cæsar vicit Pompeium," or "Cæsar Pompeium vicit;" "vicit Cæsar Pompeium," or "vicit Pompeium Cæsar:" lastly, "Pompeium Cæsar vicit," or "Pompeium vicit Cæsar." The Arabic is more restricted in its arrangement; and it is a curious coincidence that the Gaelic exactly agrees with it; for example, the first verse of Genesis (above quoted) runs thus in Gaelic: "Anns an toiseach chruthaich Dia na neamhan agus an talamh," which corresponds word for word with the Arabic. The reader is not to infer, however, that I consider the two languages to have the least affinity with one another. I merely point out occasionally certain striking resemblances between the two, as to arrangement and idiom, which I hold to be purely accidental.

SYNTAX OF THE ARTICLE.

251. The definite article if of the Arabic generally corresponds in its use and application with the δ, ἡ, το of the Greek. For example, when a substantive is restricted by the article, and at the same time qualified by an adjective, the adjective as well as the substantive takes the article; thus, الْكِتَابُ "the great (or valuable) book," ἡ βιβλος ἡ ἀξια. In like manner when the substantive is a proper name (and consequently definite in its nature), its qualifying adjective (if any) takes the article; thus, الْمُرِينُ "Abraham the faithful," Αβραὰμ ὁ πιστος. The article is always prefixed to names of peoples and sects; thus, الْمُورِينُ "the Arabians;" "the Jews;" الْعُرِينُ "the Christians;" الْعُرِينُ "the Persians." It is used also before singular nouns to express collectively a whole species; as in the following example: "The dromedary is preferable to the camel."

a. The article is sometimes employed, as in German and French, instead of an affixed possessive pronoun, when the possessor cannot be mistaken; thus, "By thine absence thou hast troubled me, and in my trouble my reason has departed," بَالنَّرِي زَلْلْتَنِي وَالْعَقْلُ فِي ٱلنَّرْلِيلُ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْكُولُ وَالْ وَالْكُولُ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْ وَالْكُولُ وَالْعَقْلُ مِعْ وَالْعَقْلُ مِعْ وَالْعَقْلُ وَالْعَقْلُ عَلَيْ وَالْعَقْلُ مَعْ وَالْعَقْلُ عَلَيْ وَالْعَقْلُ مَا وَالْعَقْلُ مَا وَالْعَقْلُ عَلَيْ وَالْعَقْلُ الْعَقْلُ الْعَقْلُ الْعَقْلُ الْعَقْلُ الْعَقْلُ الْعَمْلِ مُعْقَلِعُ الْعَمْلِ مُعْقَلِعُ الْعَمْلُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَمْلُ الْعَمْلُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَمْلُ الْعَالِمُ الْعَلَامُ الْعَلَامُ الْعَالِم not by slothfulness;" it is also used before names of sciences, arts, regions, etc.; as اَلْحِرَاقُ "wisdom;" اَلْحُرُوتُ "government;" الْحِرَاقُ "Yrak;" الْعَامُ "Syria," or "Damascus."

SYNTAX OF SUBSTANTIVES.

Of the Nominative Case.

252. The nominative case is often employed at the beginning of a sentence in an absolute sense, independently of any grammatical construction with what follows. For example, the sentence "To God belongs whatever is in the heavens and upon the earth," is thus expressed in Arabic, literally, "God, (or, as to God,) to him (is) whatever (is) in the heavens and upon the earth;" so, الله وَ وَالله وَ الله وَ

"My heart—it said nay, for I look'd for Jamie back; But the wind—it blew high, and the ship—it was a wrack."

a. We mentioned (158, a) that the verb "to be," is seldom used in the present tense except when its omission might occasion an ambiguity; thus, زَيدُ عَالِمُ "Zaid is learned;" "God (is) bountiful;" أَنْتَ شَرِيفَ "thou (art noble)." Here we see that the verb is entirely omitted, and both the subject and attribute put in the nominative case in the order described, § 250. In many instances it is optional to make the subject precede the attribute or vice versa; thus we may say اَللّٰهُ اَكْبَرُ اللّٰهُ اللّٰلّٰ اللّٰمُ اللّٰمُ

Of the Genitive Case.

253. When in Arabic two substantives are so combined that the first, which is indefinite in its signification, is restricted by the second, such a construction is called أَمُنَانُ, which we may translate "state of regimen." The first word is termed "المُنَانُ "the regent;" and the second, which is always put in the genitive case, is called المُنَانُ or "the governed;" as المُنَانُ "the wisdom of God;" كَتَابُ سُلَيمَانَ "the wisdom of God; "الله ومعالى "the book of Solomon." The governing word has very frequently the effect of an adjective; as عُرَةُ النَّرَمُ "abundance of sleep," i.e. "much sleep;" عُولُ النَّجَابِ "length of experiences," i.e. "long experience." Such is uniformly the construction of the noun كُلُّ "the totality," which answers to our words "every" or "all," according as the word governed is singular or plural; thus, "كُلُّ شَيْءً "all men."

a. Like عَلَيْ are also construed the interrogative pronoun عَلَيْ and its feminine "أَيَّهُ أَسَالُهُ وَالنَّاسِ "what?" "which?" أَيَّهُ أَسَرَاةٍ "what or which men?" أَيَّهُ أَسَرَاةٍ "what woman?" A similar rule applies to the word عَيْرُ عَالَةً "for what reason?" A similar rule applies to the word عَيْرُ مَعَالُونَ وَالنَّفَاةُ وَغَيْرُهُمْ "increate; "غَيْرُ مَعَالُونِ وَالنَّفَاةُ وَغَيْرُهُمْ "the Wazīrs and Kādīs and others besides them came."

b. The state of regimen frequently expresses superiority or excellence in a superlative sense; as خَسَرُ ٱلْبَرِيةِ "the best of created things." When the governing word is an adjective the latter is sometimes restricted in its signification by the word governed; as ذو سُرَعَةُ ٱلْحِسَابِ "quick at calculation," instead of نُو سُرَعَةُ آلْحِسَابِ "violent in chastising," instead of دُو شِدَّةُ ٱلْحِقَابِ دُو شِدَّةً ٱلْحِقَابِ.

Of the Accusative Case.

254. We stated (§ 194) that every noun in Arabic may be converted into an adverb by being put in the accusative The accusative case in this language is frequently used adverbially in instances where the Latin would employ the ablative, or the accusative with a preposition; thus, مَاتَ جُوعًا "he perished of hunger," mortuus est fume; صُومُوا أَيَّامًا مَعْدُودَةً "do ye fast during certain specified days," per certum dierum spatium. An adjective or participle with the accusative termination frequently corresponds with the Latin gerund in do; as اَكِبَا "he came riding," venit equitando; يَاكُلُ وَاقِفًا "he eats standing," enter the gate in adoration." The accusative is sometimes equivalent to the Latin gerund in dum; as فَرَبْتُهُ تَأْدِيْبًا "I struck him for (the sake of) instruction," ad erudiendum. Finally, the accusative, pur et simple, expresses in Arabic the sense of the Latin quoad, "by reason of," "with respect to," or "as to;" thus, اسْعَاقُ نَفْسًا Isaac is good with respect to his mind, or disposition," i.e. "he is well disposed; " اَللّهُ عَظِيمٌ فُذْرَةً "God is great (as to) power;" وَهِيَ كَالْحِجَارَةِ اَو أَشَدٌ قَسْوَةً (and these (hearts) are like stones, or more intense (than stones), as to hardness."

- a. The predicate in the accusative is sometimes put before the subject; thus in the Kur,ān, vi. 42; الْمُعَالِّهُ الْكَاهُ [He it is who hath brought forth] "the palm-tree and the corn-crop of which there is a variety of food;" where مُحْمَلُونُهُ is equivalent to "نَافِي أَكُلُهُ مُحْمَلُونَهُ "the food (resulting) from which is various." So in xxi. 3: الذي أَكُلُهُ مُحَمَلُونَهُمْ [They listen not to the admonition of their Lord except that] "they may turn it unto sport, their hearts being taken up with delight;" where الْمِيَةُ قُلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ لَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيَةُ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيةَ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيةَ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيةَ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيةَ وَلُونِهُمْ الْمِيةَ وَلُونِهُمْ المِيةَ وَلُونِهُمْ المُعْمَلُونِهُمْ اللَّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّ
- أو جميلاً أَو جَمِيلاً مَالَ بِهِ هُواتُو كَائِناً مَا كَانَ قَبِيحاً أَوْ جَمِيلاً مَا كَانَ قَبِيحاً أَوْ جَمِيلاً وَهُ وَاتُو كُو كُائِناً مَا كَانَ قَبِيحاً أَوْ جَمِيلاً وَهُ وَمُولاً وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ وَهُ وَالْمُ وَهُ وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ وَهُ وَالْمُ وَالْمُ وَهُ وَهُ وَالْمُ وَهُ وَالْمُ وَهُ وَالْمُ وَهُ وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ مُولاً وَهُ مُولاً وَالْمُ وَالْمُوالْمُ وَالْمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُولِمُ وَالْمُ
 - c. In Arabic the accusative is very frequently employed where we should use the nominative, as in the following verses from the Kur,ān, ii. 242: وَلِلْمُطَلَّقَاتَ مَتَاعَ بِالْمَعْرُوفِ حَقّاً عَلَي الْمُتَقِينَ "and to the divorced (wives is due) a reasonable provision (according to the husband's means); this is incumbent on the pious;" where we see قَا in the accusative. So also in iv. 15, we have the following: "and if there should be more (brothers or sisters) than these (two) they shall be (equal) sharers in the third part (of the estate); this is an ordinance from God;" where we see فَرِيْضَةُ مِنَ اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى

Substantives in Apposition.

255. When one substantive is subjoined to another by way of description or designation, the two are said to be in "apposition," and must agree in gender, number, and case, as in the Kur,ān, xiv. 19: " وَيُسْفَى مِنْ مَاء صَدِيدِ and there shall be drinking of water (which is) poison." in xxiv. 35: يُوقَدُ مِن شَجْرَة مُبَارِكَة زَيتُوبَة : it (the lamp) is lighted with the oil of a blessed tree, the olive." The same rule holds when the second substantive defines the manner, measure, or quantity, of the first: thus, وَكُلْتُ ٱلرَّغِيفَ نِصْفَهُ T ate half the cake," literally, "I ate the cake, the half of it." The same rule also applies to certain words added by way of "confirmation" or "corroboration" (تَوكْيدٌ), such as "the soul" or "self," and "the eye" or "essence," having subjoined to them the affixed pronoun appropriate to the first substantive. They thus become equivalent to the Latin ipse, ipsa, and ipsum. They agree in gender, number, and case with the leading substantives, the forms used for both dual and plural being اَعْيُنَ and اَعْيُنَ , as may be seen in the following examples: 'Zaid himself came;" كَانَّتُ وَيْدًا نَفْسَهُا ''I saw Zaid himself;" وَأَيْتُ وَيْدًا نَفْسَهُ 'Zainab herself came;" وَأَيْتُ وَيْدًا نَفْسَهُ 'Zainab herself came;" وَأَيْتُ وَيْدًا نَفْسَهُمَا "I saw the wo princes themselves." The words عَينَ and عَينَ and عَينَ and وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ

a. In a manner similar to the foregoing are used the words کُلّ and denoting "totality," or "universality," as also عَاصَّةُ "people n general;" as جَآءَ ٱلْجَيْشُ كُلُّهُ "the whole army came," literally, 'the whole " جَآءَتِ آلْقَبِيلَةُ كُلُّهَا so الْقَبِيلَةُ كُلُّهَا the army came, the whole of it;" so ribe came;" رَأْيَتُ ٱلْقُومَ كُلُّهُم "I saw the multitude, all of them;" جَآءَ ٱلْجَيْشُ عَامَّتُهُ "I passed by all the women " مَرَوْتُ بٱلنّسَاءُ كُلّْهِنَّ 'the whole army came." In order to express duality in such instances the words کِلُتا or کِلُتا, "both," are employed; as in the following examples: جَآءَ زَيْدٌ وَعَمْرُو كِلَاهُمَا 'both Zaid and Amru came;" وَأَيْتُ عَمْرًا وَعُمْرَ كِلَيْهِمَا "I saw both 'Amru and Umar;" زُوَّجْتُهُ زَيْنَبَ وَفَاطِمَةَ كِلَتَيْهِمَا "I gave unto him as wives both Zainab and Fatima." When the words كلُّت and كِلُّت precede the substantives which they qualify they become indeclinable; thus, مَرَرْتُ بِكِلَتَا أُخْتَيْكَ "I saw both thy brothers:" رَأَيْتُ كِلَا أُخَوَيْك "I passed by both thy sisters."

b. To the word کُلُّ thus used in apposition, the words وَجُنَا fem.

بَرَعَا بَ بَعَا بَعَ بَعُونَ fem. بَحَمَعُ may be subjoined, agreeing in gender, number, and case with the leading word; thus, نُسَجَدُ ٱلْمَلْأَكُةُ كُلُّهُم ٱجْمَعُونَ and all the angels did worship." The word اَجْمَعُ thus applied is not used in the dual, either masculine or feminine.

c. The word جَاءَ applied as above may be accompanied by one or all of the following words, which are of the same signification, viz.: ﴿ الْبَنَعُ اللهُ ال

SYNTAX OF THE NUMERALS.

Of the Cardinal Numbers.

256. We have seen (§ 69) that the cardinal numbers from 3 to 10 inclusive have this anomaly, that when they refer to a masculine noun they assume the feminine termination ﷺ ; whereas the feminine nouns require the same numerals to be of the masculine form; thus, بَنُونَ سُلُونَ "three sons;" "three sons;" شَاتَ خَمُسُ "five daughters." As adjectives they are placed after the noun to which they belong, and agree with the same in gender and case. At the same time they may be used as substantives, and prefixed to their nouns, which they then govern in the genitive case; thus, سِتَّةُ اَيَّامٍ "six days;" خَمْسَةُ اَشْهُرِ "five months." As a general rule the noun thus governed by the numerals 3 to 10 must be a broken plural.

- a. The number one, as we shewed, § 69, is expressed by the words for the وَاحِدَةٌ and إِحْدَي for the masculine, and by وَاحِدَةً feminine. The first form of each is used as a substantive when the object numbered is not expressed; as مَا جَآءَنِي أَحَدُّ no one (masc.) came unto me;" مَا كَانَتُ إِحْدَى "there was no one (fem.)!" They may also govern a genitive case; thus, آحَدُ ٱلرَجَالِ "one of the women; أَحَدُهُمْ "; one of the women إحَّدَى ٱلنِّسَاء " The forms وَاحِدَةٌ and وَاحِدَةٌ are adjectives, and follow their substan-"one degree." دَرَجَةٌ وَاحِدَةٌ "one object;" شَيْءٌ وَاحِدٌ They may, however, be employed by themselves, still agreeing in gender with the nouns which they represent; كُلُّ وَاحِدٍ وَمِنْ هٰذِهِ ٱلْخُلْجَانِ "each one of these gulphs (or bays);" كُلُّ وَاحِدَة مِنْ هَذِهِ ٱلمُدُنِ "each one of these cities." They are also used in the sense of "one" or "the one" in contrast with "the other;" thus ٱلْنِصَفُ ٱلْوَّاحِدُ "the one-half;" النصفُ الآخرُ "the other half." When repeated and used adverbially, they imply a distribution of individuality; then, with regard to the coun- "ثُمَّ إِنَّ ٱلْوُزَرَاءَ جَآوًا وَاحِدًا وَاحِدًا sellors, they came one by one."
- b. The number "two," is sufficiently represented by the mere dual terminations of the objects numbered; thus, رُجُلُن "two men;" "two degrees." Sometimes the numeral "two," وَرُجُتَانِ fem. وَنُتَانِ or اِثْنَتَانِ are employed as adjectives after nouns in the dual. In such instances the numeral "two" appears to be redundant but perhaps it adds more emphasis to the expression; for example, بن عُلْوَ شَيْءٌ زَوَجَسِ ٱثَنَبي "He created a pair of each species," where the numeral إِنْنَينِ is apparently superfluous.

257. The numerals 11 to 99, both inclusive, govern the substantive to which they refer in the accusative singular; -ninety" تِسْتُع وتِسْعُونَ نَعْجَةٌ ";eleven stars" أَحَدُ عَشَرَ كَوْكَبَا as nine sheep." The numerals 100 and 1,000, together with their multiples, govern the nouns denoting the objects numa hundred " مِأْيَةُ رَجُلِ "a hundred men;" مِأَيَّةِ رَجُل "three hundred men;" so إِنَّكُ مِأَيَّةِ رَجُل "a thousand dīnārs;" اَخَدَ عَشَرَ ٱلْفَ دِينَارِ "cleven thousand dīnārs." Numerals made up of decades and units, when they exceed 20, place the units first and then the tens; thus, أَلْأَتُهُ وَثُمَانُونَ عَامًا ''eighty-three years'' (literally, threeand-eighty years); اَثْنَان وَعِشْرُونَ دِينَارًا ; two-and-twenty dīnārs." If a number is composed of several classes, the noun expressive of the objects numbered is put after the total number, and is governed by the concluding numeral, according to the rules already stated; thus, for example, -be" بَيْنَ ٱلْهِجْرَةِ وَبَيْنَ ٱلْطُوفَانِ ثَلَاثَةُ آلَافِ وتِسْعُمِأَيَّةٍ وَأَرْبَحْ وَسَبْعُونَ سَنَةً tween the Hijra and the Deluge (there elapsed) 3,974 years." In instances of this kind, however, the substantive may be repeated after each class of the numerals; as follows, viz., ٱلْغَرِّ بِيَّةُ مَحْصُولُهَا أَلْفَا أَلْفِ دِينَارٍ ومِأَيَّةُ أَلْفِ دِينَارِ وَارْبَعَةُ وَارْبَعُونَ أَلْفِ دِينَارٍ The revenue of Gharbiya (a province of " وَثَمَانُونَ دِينَارًا جَيْشَيَّةً Egypt,) is reckoned at 2,144,080 military dīnārs."

- a. In order to express any large number, consisting of millions (or upwards), together with hundreds, decades, and units of thousands, it is usual to repeat the word الفَّا after each class of the numerals; thus, الفَا وَ مِائْنَانِ جُملُةُ ذُلِكَ تِسْعَةُ ٱلْفَ وَ حَمْسُمانَةُ ٱلْفِ وَ أَرْبَعَةُ وَثَمَانُونَ ٱلْفَا وَ مِائْنَانِ ثَلِياراً "the amount of it (is) this, 9,584,264 dīnārs," literally, "nine hundred thousand of thousands, and five hundred of thousands, and four-and-eighty thousand, and two hundred, and four-and-sixty dīnārs."
- b. In expressing a number of thousands, ranging from three to ten, both inclusive, الْفَ is used in the genitive plural الْفَ and the objects numbered follow the same in the genitive singular; thus, "three thousand men." When the thousands range from 11 to 99 (both inclusive) الْفَ is used in the accusative singular, and the objects numbered in the genitive singular, as just stated; thus, اَحَدَ عَشَرَةَ الْفَ دِينَارِ "20,000 lbs." عِشْرُونَ الْفَ رَطْلِ 11,000 dīnārs." When the number of the thousands consists of a hundred or any multiple thereof الْفَ نَاتَ الْفَ دِينَارِ "300,000 dīnārs." and the objects numbered in the same case, as above; thus, ثَلَتُ مِأْتُ وَيَنَارِ 300,000 dīnārs.
- 258. Not only the cardinal numbers from three to ten, inclusive (§ 256), but also those of a higher denomination may be employed in apposition to the nouns denoting the objects numbered, as may be seen in the following example: رُجُذَبُ ٱلشَّبِكَةُ إِلَى ٱلْأَرْضِ إِنَّ هِيَ مُمْتَلَيَّةٌ حِيتَانًا كَبَارًا مِأْتُهُ ثَلْتَهُ رُجُمُسِين "and he drew the net to the land; lo, it was full of large fishes, one hundred and three-and-fifty."

- 259. When a numeral is employed to denote a certain number out of a collection, or class, or whole genus, it is usual to express the relation between the numeral and the class by means of the preposition , "from" or "out of;" for example: تِسْعَةٌ مِنَ ٱلرَّهْطِ "nine (men) out of the family;" "three birds" i.e. "three birds from among the genus bird." It is further to be observed that the numeral in such instances, agrees in gender with the objects num-"; three sheep " ثَلَاثَةُ مِنَ ٱلْغَنَمِ bered; thus, in the expression the numeral is masculine because عَنَمُ as a genus, is masculine; so ثَلَاثُ مِنَ ٱلْبَطِّ 'three ducks;'' where ثَلَاثُ نَا لَبُطِّ is feminine, because if is feminine. If an epithet indicating the gender is added immediately after the numeral, the latter agrees in gender with such epithet; thus, تَلَاثُ أَنَاثِ مِنَ ٱلْغَنَمَ thus, تَلَاثُ أَنَاثِ مِنَ ٱلْغَنَامَ "three females of the genus sheep;" تَلَاتَهُ ذُكُورِ مِنَ ٱلْبَطِّ "; three males from among the ducks."
 - a. Numerals used abstractedly, as in the science of arithmetic, are always put in the masculine form; thus, عَلَىٰتُ نَصْفُ سِيَّةٌ "three is the half of six." When nouns of different sexes are included under one and the same numeral, the latter agrees in gender with the noun immediately following it, provided the numeral denotes a number extending from six to ten, both inclusive; as لَيْ تَمَانِيةُ أَعَبُدٍ وَ إَمَا لَا عَبُدُ وَ الْمَا لِي ثَمَانِيةُ الْمَا لِي اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهُ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهِ اللّٰهُ اللّ

- b. When the compound numerals above ten apply to rational beings, they always take the masculine form, as in the following examples: عِندِي خَمْسَةَ عَشَرَ عَبْدًا وَجَارِيَّةُ to me belong fifteen male slaves and [fifteen] female slaves;" إِنَّهُ وَعَبْدًا "; slaves and [fifteen] female slaves me belong fifteen female and [fifteen] male slaves." If the numerals apply to irrational beings they take the gender of the nearest substantive; thus, عَنْدِي خَمْسَةَ عَشَر جَملًا وَنَافَةً there are in my possession (chez moi,) fifteen male camels and [fifteen] she-camels;" or, by transposition, عَنْدِي خَمْسَ عَشْرَةَ نَافَةً وَجَمَلًا I have fifteen she-camels and [fifteen] he-camels. If, however, in the case of irrational objects a qualifying word such as مَا بَيْنَ, etc., interposes immediately after the numerals, the latter are of the feminine form; thus for example: I possess fifteen camels, what " عِنْدِي خُمْسَ عَشْرَةً مَا بَيْنَ جَمَلِ وَنَاقَةٍ between males and females," that is, "partly male and partly female;" and the same construction holds, as to the numerals if in this last expression we transpose the last two words and read نَافَة وَجَمَل .
- 260. The numerals agree in gender with that of the singular number of the objects numbered; thus, "" فَنَتُ صَبَعُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ الللللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللل devoured," where is feminine, the word "kine" being understood.

- a. When the objects numbered are of a vague or general nature. such as may apply to either sex, the numeral agrees with the same according to the grammatical gender of such objects. For example, the words شَخْصُ and عُينَ denote "a person" or "individual," the former being masculine and the latter feminine; hence they say is used in the masculine form ثَلَاثَةُ ٱشْخُصِ "three persons," where ثَلَاثَةُ ٱشْخُصِ تُلَاثُ أَعْبَى whether the objects be male or female. In like manner "three persons" or "individuals," whether applicable to females or If, however, another noun or epithet be added to such phrases as the foregoing serving to indicate the real sex of the objects numbered, the numeral will agree in gender with the word or words فَكَانَ مِجَنِي دُونَ مَنْ أَتَّقِي نَلَاثُ شُخُوصٍ كَاعِبَانِ وَمُعْصِرُ annexed; thus, "and I had for a shield against those whom I feared two (young) maidens and a (marriageable) woman." Here we see that ثلاث fem. is used with شُخُوص masc. because the latter word is qualified by the epithets مُعْصِرُ and مُعْصِرُ cach of which is applicable only to females. Sometimes, however, regard is had more to the signification of the objects numbered than to their strict grammatical gender; thus the word نفس "soul," is feminine; but when applied to persons of the male sex the numeral agrees with it in the masculine gender; thus, three souls" (meaning males), because in this instance " ثَلَاثُنَّهُ أَنْفُس . رَجُلُ has the sume signification as نَعْسَ
- b. If the name of the objects numbered be suppressed and its place supplied by an epithet descriptive of its quality, the numeral agrees in gender with the noun understood; thus in the Kur, an, vi. 160:

he who hath done a good (deed) shall receive (as his reward) ten (times) the equivalent thereof." Here the numeral عُشُرُ is feminine, although آسَتَاتُ is masculine; because the latter is considered as a mere epithet of حَسَنَاتُ (plural of مَسَنَاتُ understood.

- 261. The cardinal numbers may be restricted by the article according to the rules laid down, § 251. 1. When the numeral is used substantively in an abstract sense; thus, the (number) three is half of the (number) ' ٱلفَّلَاتَةُ نِصْفُ آلسَّتَّة six." 2. When the name of the objects numbered is understood, having been previously expressed, and hence well known; as مُرْجَعَ ٱلسَّبَعُونَ بِفَرَجَعَ "and the seventy (disciples) returned with joy." 3. When the numeral is employed in apposition as an adjective after a definite noun; for example: the five men." 4. When the numerals from " ٱلرِّجَالُ ٱلْخَمْسَةُ 3 to 10 (both inclusive) precede the objects numbered in a state of regimen, in which case the article is generally prefixed only to the latter; as نَلَاثَةُ ٱلرِّجَالِ "the three men" or "the trio of men." Occasionally, however, the numeral takes the article as well as the name of the objects numbered; as اَلسَّامُ وَسِيَّةُ دَعَائِمَ ٱلسَّامُ وَسِيَّةً 'the seven fundamental precepts of the law."
- a. When the numerals from 11 to 19 (both inclusive) precede the name of the objects numbered, and as we already remarked, § 257, govern the same in the accusative singular, the article may be prefixed to the first member only or to both; thus, الْأَحُدُ عَشَرُ دِرْهَا or or ٱلْإِنْنَتَا عَشَرَةَ نَافَةً or "the eleven dirhams;" also الْأَنْنَا ٱلْعَشَرِ وَرَهُمَا "the twelve she-camels." From 20 to 99 (both inclusive), when the numeral consists of a multiple of ten only, it takes the article; and if such multiple be combined with units they both take the article; thus, الْعِشْرُونَ نَعْجَةً وَالسَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعَةُ وَالسَّبَعُونَ جَمَلًا "the seventy-seven camels."

b. With regard to numerals consisting of a hundred or a thousand, together with their multiples and accessories, it is optional to prefix the article either to the entire numeral, or to the name of the objects numbered; for example: تَلاَثُمُ الْدُومُ "the three hundred dīnars;" the two hundred thousand dirhams; so مَذِعُ الْأَلْفُ الْفُ دِيعَار, "the two hundred thousand dirhams;" so also, مَذِعُ الْأَلْفُ الْفُ دِيعَار this million (literally, thousand of thousands) of dīnārs." In such examples as the last, where the demonstrative pronoun is employed, the article is prefixed to the word immediately following.

Of the Ordinal Numbers.

262. The Ordinals are more adjectives, and up to the nineteenth they agree in gender, number, and case with the substantives to which they relate. We stated, § 73, that "the twentieth," and all multiples of ten above that number, are expressed by the cardinals, so that they are considered to be of the common gender, as they are indeclinable. The ordinals may, or may not, be restricted by the article; as "التَّلِيمُ الرَّلُ "the first year;" التَّلِيمُ الرَّلُ "the first year;" التَّلِيمُ الرَّلُ "the first year; "التَّلِيمُ الرَّلُ وَالْمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْلِمُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْلِمُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْلِمُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْلِمُ اللَّهُ ال connected with the sequel of the sentence, not in a state of regimen, but by means of the preposition من من في ; thus, وَلَمُ اللَّهُ وَلَدَ لَيْلَةُ ٱلْخَمِيسِ ٱلنَّالَثِ وَٱلْعَشْرِينَ مِن شَهْرِ رَبِيعِ ٱلنَّالِيَّةِ ٱلنَّاسِعَةِ ٱلنَّاسِعةِ وَالْعَامِ (Al Hākim bi-Amr-Illāhī was born on the night of Thursday, the three-and-twentieth of the month Rabī'u-l-awwal, at the ninth hour." When not accompanied by the article, the ordinals are usually put in a state of regimen with a noun or pronoun following; thus for example: وَسُلّمَ عَلَيْهُ لِلْقَاهِرَةِ بَعْدَ ٱلطّهرِ مِن يَوْمِ ٱلثَلْآلَا تَامِن وَعِشْرِينَ شَهْرِ رَمْضَانَ "He was hailed Caliph after mid-day on Wednesday, the twenty-eighth of the month of Ramadān;" وَسُلّمَ عَلَيْهُ نُودِيَ بِٱلْفَاهِرَةِ "On the twenty-third (day) of it, (viz., month), proclamation was made in Cairo."

a. An ordinal number, from the second to the tenth (both inclusive) is often found in a state of regimen with its corresponding cardinal; thus, "أَنْتَ تَانِي الْنَبِي عَشَرَةً النَبْقِ عَلَى اللَّهُ الْعَلَقِ عَلَى الْعَلَيْدَةً الْعَلَى الْعَلَقَ الْعَلَيْكَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ عَلَى الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَقَ عَلَيْكَ الْعَلَ clinable, bears a similar construction to the preceding; as هُوَ ثَالِثَ عَشَرَ عَشَرُ he is a thirteenth," i.e. "one of the thirteen."

b. There is another mode of employing the ordinal in a state of regimen, not with its own cardinal, but with the one less than the "he (forms) a third to two." هُوَ ثَالِثُ ٱثْنَينِ, latter by unity; thus, This rule holds with regard to the ordinals from the third to the ninth (both inclusive), which in fact are viewed by grammarians as the present participles of the active verbs ثلث "he made three (out of two);" ("he made four (out of three)," etc.; hence they may as nouns of agency govern the genitive as in the example above; or as active participles they may govern the accusative; thus, ثُوَ رَابِعُ ثَلَاثَة he makes three into four," literally, "he fourths "she makes three into four." هِيَ رَابِعِنَّهُ ثَلَاثًا, she makes three into four." When the compound ordinals from the eleventh to the nineteenth (both inclusive) are thus employed, the units only are declinable, he adds a thirteenth "هُو ثَالِثُ عَشَر آثَني عَشَر الله he adds a thirteenth to twelve;" so with the feminine, هِيَ ثَالِقَةُ ٱتْنَتَى عَشْرَةَ she," etc. In a similar manner are employed the numerals composed of units and decades, only that the decades are usually suppressed; thus, he makes a four-and" هُوَ رَابِع ثَلَاثَةَ وَعِشْرِينَ or هُوَ رَابِعُ ثَلَاثَةِ وَعِشْرِينَ twentieth." The multiples of ten, viz., 20, 30, etc., up to 90, are considered as modifications of quadriliteral verbs; thus, غشرين is a modification of عَشَرَى, the participle active of which is عُشَرَى, employed as above; hence, we may say, مَوْ مُعَشِّرِيَّ تِسْعَةَ عَشَر he twentifieth nineteen," which in honest plain English signifies that he is "one out of twenty."

263. In expressing the year of an æra such as the Alexandrine, the Hijra, etc., the Arabs employ the cardinal numbers as we do. The word سَنة (fem.) "year" is put in a state of regimen with the following numerals, which agree with it in gender; but in this case with does not take the article as with us. The numerals, as we stated, § 79, are arranged in the following order, viz., first the units, then the tens, etc., all connected by means of the conjunction, as in the following example: تُمُّ دَخَلَتْ سَنَةُ سِتِّ و تِسْعِسَ وَلَلشِانَةٍ "then commenced the year (of the Hijra) 396" literally "six, and ninety, and three hundred." On the other hand, in expressing the year of the age or reign of an individual the ordinal numbers, with the article, are employed precisely as فِي ٱلسَّنَةِ ٱلسَّادِسَةِ مِنْ مُلْكِ ٱلْمَلِكِ ٱلْأَشْرَفِ شَعْبَانَ. with us; thus, "in the sixth year of the reign of Al Malik Al Ashraf The following example exhibits at one view the application of both the ordinal and the cardinal numbers: فِي آلسَّنَةِ آلثَّالِثَةِ وَ ٱلْأَرْبَعُونَ مِنْ مُلْكِهِ ـ وَهِيَ سَنَةُ تِسْعٍ وَتُلْثِمِأَيَةٍ مِنْ تَارِيخٍ "In the three-and-fortieth year of his reign, and that (corresponds with) the year three hundred and nine of the æra of Alexander."

264. In expressing the day of the month, the more recent Arabian writers, like ourselves, employ the ordinal numbers, counting regularly from the first to the last day of the month. As they reckon by lunar time, the civil day naturally commences at sunset, as is still the case with the Jews, and I believe, till lately, with the Venetians. The month commences on the evening when the new moon (الْعَالَى or الْعَالَى becomes visible from the tops of minarets, etc.; hence the earlier Arabian writers reckoned, not by the day, but by the night. the first of the month Rajab, is expressed لِأُولِ لَيلَةٍ مِنْ رَجِبٍ or يُغَرَّةُ رَجِبٍ "on the first night of Rajab." The first day (viz., that immediately following the first night) is expressed thus, لِلْيَلَةِ خَلَتْ مِنْ رَجَبِ literally, "one night of Rajab having clapsed." In like manner, the second day is expressed, لَلْيَلْتَينِ خَلْتًا "two nights having elapsed;" then, "three nights having elapsed." لِثَالِثِ خَلُونَ three nights having In this last expression the word لَيْلَةٌ (pl. of لَيْلَةٌ) is understood, which if supplied would be لَتُلَاث لَيَالِ خَلُونَ مِنْ رَجَبٍ "three of the nights of Rajab having elapsed;" and this rule holds, up to the tenth, inclusive. From the eleventh to the in the singular, is لَيكة fourteenth, both inclusive, the word understood; thus, "the eleventh day of Rajab" is expressed The fifteenth day is called . لإِحْدَى عَشْرَةُ (لَيلَةً) خَلَتْ مِنْ رَجِبٍ ", denoting "half" or "middle; إِنْتِصَافَّ or , مُنْتَصَفَّ , نِصْفَّ فِي ٱلنِّصْفِ مِنْ رَجَبٍ thus, "the fifteenth of Rajab" is expressed or فِي مُنْتَصَفِ رَجَبٍ. After the fifteenth of the month the rule is to reckon, not the number of nights that have elapsed, but of those that still remain; hence the "sixteenth day" is expressed رِلْرَبَعَ عَشْرَةً (لَيْلَةٍ) بَقِيَت مِنْ رَجَبٍ, literally, "fourteen nights of Rajab still remaining;" and this rule holds, up to the nineteenth, inclusive. From the twentieth to the twentyseventh, both inclusive, the pl. لَيَالِي is understood; thus the twentieth day is expressed, بِعَيْنَ مِنْ رَجَبٍ

"ten nights of Rajab still remaining." The twenty-eighth is expressed "لَيْلَتَيْنِ بَقْيَتًا مِن رَجِبٍ "two nights of Rajab still left;" the twenty-ninth is للَيلة بقبت مِن رَجِب "one night of Rajab remaining." Finally, the thirtieth is thus expressed, السَّلَخِ رَجِب or الشَّخِ رَجِب "on the last night of Rajab;" and if the last night is elapsed the day following may be expressed السَّخِ رَجِب or لِسَلِّخِ رَجِب or finally, الشَّلِخُ رَجِب or السَّخِ رَجِب on the last day (i.e. the last twelve hours of sunlight) of Rajab."

a. The Muhammadan or lunar months are so arranged as to consist of thirty and twenty-nine days alternately, as in the following table; but in a period of thirty years, it is found necessary to intercalate the twelfth month eleven times so as to be reckoned thirty days instead of twenty-nine. The months retain their Arabian names in all Muḥammadan countries, merely omitting the nūnation, or the final short vowel.

TABLE OF THE ARABIAN MONTHS.

1.	ha أَلْمُحْرَمُ	s 30 d	lays.	7.	ha رَجَبٌ	s 30	days.

b. It is needless to add that in such months as consist of twenty-nine days, the nights and days remaining in the second half are less by unity than those we detailed respecting Rajab. For example, the 16th of Sha'būn is expressed as follows: الثلاث عَشْرَةُ بَقِيْتُ مِنْ شَعْبَانُ "thirteen nights of Sha'būn still remaining;" and the same rule holds with every other month that consists only of twenty-nine days, except the last, which, as we above stated, is liable to intercalation eleven times in thirty years.

SYNTAX OF NOUNS WITH ADJECTIVES.

Concord of Adjectives with their Substantives.

265. We have already stated, §§ 250 and 251, that, as a general rule, the substantive always precedes the adjective or epithet which is employed to qualify it; as, "خَابُ عَظِيم "an "estimable book." If, however, the substantive be restricted in its signification by being in a state of regimen, or by having the article prefixed or a pronoun affixed, the adjective or epithet will also take the article; thus, "كَتَابُ مُرْسَى ٱلْعَظِيمُ "the estimable book of Moses;" كَتَابُ الْعَظِيمُ "the great (or estimable) book;" كَتَابُ ٱلْعَظِيمُ "his estimable book." The same rule holds with regard to proper names, which, of course, are definite in their own nature; thus, "إَبْرُهِيمُ ٱلْأُرِينَ لِيَابُ الْعَلِيمُ الْأُرِينَ أَلْمُ يَعْنِينِ عَنِينِ Abraham the faithful." We may further observe that when the substantive is not restricted in its signification, as above, the epithet does not take the article; thus, "قَرَاتُ فِي كِتَابٍ عَتِينِ عَتِينِ عَتِينِ الْعَلَيْ الْعَلَيْ "I have read in (some) ancient book."

266. The adjective or epithet agrees in case with its substantive; as, مَرْتُ بِزِيْدِ ٱلْعَاقِلِ ٱلْكَرِيمِ ٱلْفَاضِلِ "I passed by Zaid, the prudent, the generous, the excellent." This agreement, however, is not a matter of necessity when the substantive is a proper name, consequently definite, and followed by several epithets, as in the preceding example; for in such instances the epithets may be put in the nominative singular, the word "who is," or "which is," being understood; thus we may say, مَرَتُ بِزِيْدِ ٱلْعَاقِلُ ٱلْكُرِيمُ ٱلْفَاضِلُ; or finally we may employ the epithets in the accusative case, the word أَخْفِي "I mean," or "I signify" being understood. If the substantive is indeterminate, as a general rule the nearest epithet agrees with it in case, and the rest may be put either in the nominative or in the accusative.

267. An adjective agrees in gender and number with its substantive if the latter be in the singular or dual number, whether it be masculine or feminine. If, however, the substantive be a broken plural and masculine, or a regular plural feminine, the qualifying adjective is usually put in the feminine singular, as in the following examples: "شَوَا لَكُ عَنْ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَالّهُ وَاللّهُ وَلّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ

however, is applicable chiefly to irrational animals, and to things without life in general; for when the substantive denotes a rational being, the adjective agrees with it according to the general rule. A substantive plural masculine, not denoting rational beings, may also have the adjective in the feminine plural; thus, أَسُونَ مَا وَاللَّهُ مَعْدُودَاتُ "destructive lions;" مُعَاتُ رَاسِيَاتُ "sharpened swords;" مَعْدُودَاتُ "days enumerated."

a. The irregular concord of adjectives with their substantives, which we have just detailed, is the more usual; but the regular mode is by no means rare. A substantive plural not unfrequently takes the adjective in the plural, whether regular or broken; thus, Kur,an, lxvi. 11: مَالَئِكُمُ غِلَامٌ "angels fierce and stern." There is this restriction, however, that the regular plural of adjectives is employed only with substantives denoting rational beings.

b. A collective noun in the singular usually takes the adjective in the plural; thus, Kur,ān, iii. 141: "Aid "Aid thou us against the unbelieving tribe." In like manner the adjective "much" or "many," though under a singular form, is often employed with a plural substantive, as in the following examples from the Kur,ān, iii. 146: كَثِيرُ عَنْ مِنْ مُنْهُمَا رِجَالًا كَثِيرًا وَنِسَاءً ''how many of the prophets have been slain, and along with them many myriads (of men)?" Also iv. 1: وَبَتُ مِنْهُمَا رِجَالًا كَثِيرًا وَنِسَاءً ''and from these two (viz. Adam and Eve) he hath disseminated many men and women." We may, however, in these expressions consider كَثِيرً as employed in apposition, § 255, with the preceding substantives.

stantive expressive of more individuals than one, be followed by adjectives, each of which has reference only to one of the individuals, each adjective must agree in gender and case with the noun to which it refers; but it must be in the singular number; thus, عَانِلُ وَجُاهِلٌ وَجَاهِلٌ وَجَاهِلٌ وَجَاهِلٌ وَجَاهِلٌ وَجَاهِلٌ وَجَاهِلٌ وَعَالَ وَجَاهِلٌ وَعَالَ وَجَاهِلٌ وَعَالْ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالْ وَعَالَ وَعَالْ وَعَالَ وَعَالْ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالْ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَلَا وَعَلَى وَعَالَ وَعَالَ وَعَالْ وَعَلَى وَعَلَى وَعَلَا وَعَلَى وَعَلَا وَعَلَى عَلَى عَلَى وَ or we may say, كَلَّمْتُ عَمْرًا وَكَتَبْتُ إِلَي زَيْدِ ٱلشَّاعِرَيْنِ. In the first of these last expressions the pronoun هُمَا they both," is understood, and the sense is, "they are the two poets;" in the second, the verb أُعني "I mean" or "I signify," is understood.

270. The verbal adjectives of the measures وَعَيِلٌ , فَعُولُ and مِفْعَالُ, are of the common gender, and sometimes assume the termination 5-, which gives them a more intensive signification; hence they apply alike to masculine or feminine nouns; thus, رُجُلُ مَلُولَة a most wearied man;" a very " رَجُلٌ مِغْدَامَةٌ "a most wearied woman;" so. إِمْرَءَةٌ مَلُولَةٌ brave man;" رَجُلُ دَاهِيَةٌ "a very cunning man." A few of these adjectives, however, assume the usual generic termina-"credulous," مِيقَانٌ ; ظَرِيفَةٌ ; طَرِيفَةٌ clegant," fom. مَيقَانٌ ; ظَرِيفَةٌ fem. عُدُون ; مِسْكِينَ ; مِسْكِينَ ; poor," fem. عُدُن ; مِسْكِينَ ; مِيقَانَة hostile," fem. Adjectives of the measure . رَحِيمَةٌ . merciful," fem. رَحِيمَ ; عَدُوَّةٌ when of a passive signification, follow a similar rule; otherwise, they are under the masculine form, common to اِنَّهَا بَقَرَةٌ لَا ذَلُولٌ تُشِيرُ ٱلْأَرَّضَ : both genders, thus, Kur,ān, ii. 66 "for she is a cow not accustomed to the yoke, nor to till the turn yourselves " تُوبُوا إِلَى آللَّهِ تَوْبَةً نَصُوحًا ؛ ground ;" also lxvi. 8 unto God with sincere repentance." Adjectives of the measure نُعِيلُ, when of a passive or neuter signification, agree alike with nouns masculine or feminine; thus, " وَأَيُّتُ آَسُوءَةٌ فَتِيلًا "I saw a woman (that had been) slain;" مَرَرُتُ بِحَارِيَةِ جَرِيحٍ "I passed by a wounded maiden." If, however, the substantive be feminine, and not expressed but understood, an adjective of the foregoing measure assumes the feminine termination; thus, Kur,ān, v. 4: ثَرَمَتُ عَلَيْكُمُ ٱلْمَيْتَةُ وَالْدَّمُ وَالنَّطِيّحَةُ وَالْكِيلُةُ ٱلسَّبِعُ وَالْكَامُ الْمَيْتَةُ وَالْدَّمُ وَالنَّطِيّحَةُ وَالْكِيلُةُ ٱلسَّبِعِ وَالْمَاءُ وَالْكَامُ وَالْكَامُ وَالنَّطِيّحَةُ وَالْكِيلُةُ ٱلسَّبِعِ وَالْمَاءُ وَالْكَامُ وَالْكُلُمُ وَالْكُلُمُ وَالْكُمُ وَالْكُلُمُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَالْكُلُمُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ

271. In Arabic the substantive is frequently omitted, and then the adjective, if it refers to a living creature, is used in the masculine form; and in the feminine, if it refers to an inanimate object; thus, سَيَّاتُكُمُ "your evils," meaning "evil deeds;" "wonders" or "wonderful things;" "خَالِبُ "the good (works)" or "virtues." Occasionally a masculine adjective is applied to a lifeless thing; as in the Kur,ān, ii. 59: "and he (who) hath done a good deed." Frequently, when the substantive is thus omitted, the adjective, or its equivalent, remains in a state of concord with the former; thus, Kur,ān, lv. 56: فَاصَاتُ السَّانُ السَّنَ السَّانُ السَّانُ is understood. So, يَرْمِي بِكُفَّيْ كَانَ مِنْ أَرْْسَي ٱلْبَشَرِ "he shoots (arrows) by the two hands (of one who is) the most expert archer of men;" where the word رَجُلِ is understood as the complement of بِكُفَّى "by the two hands."

272. A substantive instead of an adjective is not unfrequently used as an epithet; for example, عَدُلُّ justice," for just;" in which case the qualifying noun remains always in the singular, agreeing with its substantive in case. and retaining its own gender; as رُجُلُ عَدْلُ a just man ;" رِجَالٌ عَدْلٌ "two just men;" so in the plural, رِجَالٌ عَدْلٌ "just men." The epithet may also be a verb or clause of a sentence when the substantive is otherwise indeterminate; thus, مَرَرْتُ بِرَجُل يَنُومُ "I have passed by a man (who) is "sleeping." نَاثم is equivalent to يَنُومُ "sleeping." a speech familiar " قَوَّلُ مَغْرُوتٌ وَمَغُفِرَةٌ خَيْرٌ مِنْ صَدَقَة يَتْبَعُهَا أَذَي and conciliating is better than alms which offence accompanieth." Again, Kur, an, iii. 181, we have another example: If they have " إِنْ كُذَّابُوكَ مَقَدٌ كُذِّبَ رُسُلٌ مِنْ قَبْلِكَ جَآنُوا بِٱلْبَيِّنَاتِ accused thee of falsehood; verily the apostles before thee have been falsely accused, (men who) came with proofs (of their divine mission)." So in the following expression: the first temple (that) hath been built " أُوَّلُ بَيَّتٍ وُضِعَ للنَّاس for men."

a. In Arabic the relative pronoun is never used as with us in such sentences as the foregoing; for example, where the noun is inde-because اَلَّذِي يَنُومُ is equivalent to اَلْتَائُمُ. On the other hand, when the substantive has the article we then employ the relative; thus, for example: الْمُلِكُ الَّذِي يَعْدِلُ "the king who is just;" equivalent to "the king who is just;" equivalent to be accompanied by the affixed pronoun applicable to the noun qualified; thus, مَرَرَتُ بِرَجُلِ ابُوءُ نَاثُمُ الله (lit. "is sleeping"); "I have passed by a man whose father is asleep" (lit. "is sleeping"); "I have passed by a man whose father is asleep" (lit. "is sleeping"); الله عَمْرُو يُحِبُّكُ الله عَمْرُو يُحِبُّكُ الله وَمِنْ الله وَ

"And I know not whether it be distance and length of time (that) have estranged them; or the wealth (which) they have received." Here the last word أَصَابُوهُ "they have received" (for أَصَابُوهُ) omits the pronoun s, referring to مَالَ , because the omission leads to no ambiguity or obscurity.

273. When an adjective is restricted in its signification by means of a substantive that follows it, as in the phrases "a man learned in the law," "a youth fair of countenance," etc.; the Arabs have three modes of expressing the same. In the first place, the adjective (when it has not the article) retains its nūnation, and the restrictive noun or complement is put in the nominative case; as جَاتِني رَجُلُ حَسَنُ ٱلْآبُهُ "there came to me a man the father of whom is handsome;" in which expression we may also say عَرَبُ تَا بَرُجُلُ تَبِي الْرَجُهُ الْمَا يَعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يَعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يَعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يَعْمُ الْمَا يَعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمِا يُعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَا يُعْمُ الْمَاعِلُمُ الْمَاعِلُمُ الْمَاعِلُمُ الْمَاعِلُمُ الْمَاعُلُمُ الْمَاعُلُمُ الْمَاعُلُمُ where we might also say وَجَهُ Secondly, the adjective may be put in a state of regimen with the complement, as follows, جَآتِنِي رَجُلٌ حَسَنُ ٱلْوَجْهِ "there came to me a man fair of countenance;" where we may also say حَسَنُ وَجَهِم "I passed by a man of fair counten- مُرَرَّتُ بِرَجُلِ حَسَن ٱلْوَجْه ance;" where we may also say حَسَن وَجْهِه . Thirdly, the adjective (in the absence of the article) retains its nunation, and the complement is put in the accusative case; thus, there came to me a man fair as to countenance;" or with the article حَسَنَ ٱلْوَجَهَ So in the following example: مَرَرْتُ بِرَجُلِ حَسَن وَجْهَا 'I passed by a man fair as to countenance;" or with the article جَسَن ٱلْوَجْهَ In this third mode of expression the classical scholar will not fail to recognise a well-known Greek construction, which the Latin poets have, not unfrequently, imitated; thus,—"Os humerosque deo similis;" "miles fractus membra," etc. course the reader would consider a translation of these phrases as an affront.

274. In the three kinds of construction just described, the adjective may or may not have the article, according as its preceding substantive is definite or indefinite. The complement may also be definite or indefinite. It is rendered definite, I—by means of the article Ji; 2—by an additional complement having that article; 3—by an affixed pronoun; and 4—by an additional complement having an affixed pronoun. It follows as a consequence that we have a variety of different constructions, examples of which we here subjoin from De Sacy, Tome II. p. 199, differing from that writer only in our arrangement of the subject, by presenting to the reader in the first place the correct and classical modes of expression such as are to be met with in the writings of the more esteemed Arabian authors.

رَجُلُ حَسَّ وَجَهُ أَبِيهِ

A man whose father is of fair countenance.

4th-Constructions to be altogether eschewed.

- a. The adjective even when it has the article prefixed to it may also receive an affixed pronoun; as, أَلْقَبِيحُ ٱلْمَنْظُرِ ٱلشَّدِيدُ ٱلرَّأْسِ وَٱلصَّعِيرُةُ the ugly of visage, the strong of head, and the small of it," i.e. "the small of head." In this form of construction, the adjective must obey the general rule respecting the use of the article, see § 251; for example: رَجُلُ حَسَنَ ٱلْوَجَهِ "a man fair of countenance;" رَجُلُ حَسَنَ ٱلْوَجَهِ "Zaid the handsome of countenance."
- b. If the adjective has a substantive following, which it governs in the genitive case it must itself agree with the preceding substantive in gender, number, and case; thus, مَرَرْتُ بِرَجُل حَسَنَ ٱلْوَجَهُ "I passed by a man fair of countenance;" " خَاسَى صَسَنَا ٱلْوَجَهُ " there came to me two men fair of countenance." This concord of the adjective with the preceding substantive, equally holds, though the restrictive substantive may be in the accusative case; as in the following example: مَرَرَتُ بِرَجُل حَسَنِ وَجَهًا "I passed by a man handsome of countenance." If, however, the complement be put in the nominative, the adjective then agrees with the preceding substantive in case, but with the complement in gender and number; as for example:

some;" مَرَرْتُ بَامَرَةِ حَسَنِ وَجَهُهَا "I passed by a woman whose face is handsome." If the following substantive be a broken plural, the adjective is usually put in the feminine singular; as in the following examples: مَرَرُتُ بِرِجَالِ حَسَنَةَ وُجُوهُهُمْ "I passed by men whose faces are handsome;" مَرَرُتُ بِرِجَالِ حَسَنَةً وُجُوهُهُمْ "but woe be unto them whose hearts are hard!"

c. Before a substantive masculine in the plural number, the adjective is usually put in the masculine singular; as in the following example; مَرِيضَا غِلْمَانُهُ "I saw a man whose slave-boys are sick." The adjective may, however, be put in the plural, either broken or regular; as مَرِيضِينَ غِلْمَانُهُ, or رَأَيْتُ رَجُلًا مَرْضَي غِلْمَانُهُ .

Concord of the Attribute with the Subject.

275. When an adjective is employed as the attribute of a simple sentence (§ 248, b.), the general rule is to place the subject first and the attribute after it, the verb "to be," when in the present tense, being entirely omitted, as we observed in § 158, a.; thus, السُلُطَانُ مَرِيفُ "the Sultān is sick;" السُلُطَانُ مَرِيفُ "Joseph is sick." The subject, as we have just seen, may be restricted by the article, by an affixed pronoun, or by its own nature as being a proper name; whereas the attribute is not necessarily so restricted, as is the case with a mere adjective, § 251. When it so happens that the attribute has the article, the third personal pronouns à, etc. (equivalent to "he is," etc.) come in between the subject and attribute in order to avoid an ambiguity; for otherwise the phrase might be mistaken for a mere concord of an adjective with its substantive; thus, مُوْالَعُيُّ الْكُبُومُ "God, he is the living, the eternal." The attribute agrees in gender and number with the subject; thus, كَانَ أَبُوادُ مُوْمِنَسِي "his parents were true believers." If the subject be a broken plural masculine the attribute may be put in the feminine singular; thus, تَعْمَى ٱلْقُلُوبُ وَٱلْعُنُونُ لَاظِرَةً (their) hearts are blind although (their) eyes do see." So, Kur,ān, lxxix. 8: مُأُوبُ يَوْمَبُذِ وَاجِفَةً أَنْصَارُهَا خَاشِعَةً on that day (men's) hearts shall be perturbed;—their looks (shall be) cast down."

- a. When the attribute precedes the subject (which takes place in interrogative and negative propositions), then if the subject be dual or plural, the attribute is to be placed in the singular; as follows: " مَا خَارِجُ ٱلْرَجُالُ "do the two men enter?" مَا خَارِجُ ٱلْرَجُالُ "the men do not go out." When the subject is a collective noun the attribute may be put in the plural; thus, كُلُّ لَهُ فَانِتُونَ all are obedient unto him."
- b. When the subject consists of two nouns in a state of regimen, the attribute, which ought grammatically to agree with the governing noun, sometimes agrees in gender with the noun governed; thus, noun, sometimes agrees in gender with the noun governed; thus, "every living (creature shall) taste of death; " الله في المنافقة المروت (the committal of crimes is with them meritorious, and among them the avoidance of decorum is a virtue." In this last sentence, the feminine singular مَعْرُونَة agrees with the word governed الفَوَاحِشِ مُعْرُونَة وَلَا يَعْمُونَة مُعْرُونَة وَلَا يَعْمُ الله وَالْمُعْمُ وَلَا لَهُ وَالْمُعْمُ الله وَالْمُعْمُ الله وَالْمُعْمُ الله وَالْمُعْمُ الله وَالْمُعْمُ الله وَالْمُعْمُ الله وَالله وَلّه وَالله و

Of the Degrees of Comparison.

276. In § 211 we enumerated the more usual measures of verbal adjectives. The comparative and superlative degrees of all such are, as we observed in § 81, of the measure for the masculine, and فُعْلَى for the feminine. These may be prefixed to a noun in a state of regimen; or used in an absolute sense, having the article Ji before it. When in a state of regimen with an indefinite noun, the adjective always remains in the singular number and masculine gender; thus, هُوَ أَفْضَلُ رَجُّل "; she is a very excellent woman " هِيَ أَفْضَلُ امْرَ-تَه "he is a most excellent man ;" هُمْ أَعْظَمُ رِجَالِ "they are very great men." When the noun governed by the comparative adjective is definite, that is, when it has the article or an affixed pronoun, the comparative generally remains in the measure of the masculine singular, whatever may be the هِيَ أَفْضَلُ ٱلْنِسَاء gender and number of the noun following; as "she is the most excellent of women;" أَنْتُمَا أَصْدَقُ ٱلصَّادِقِينَ "you two are the most truthful of the truthful." So in Kur, an, ii. 90: لَتَجدَنُّهُمْ أَحْرَصُ ٱلنَّاس "verily thou wilt find them the most greedy of men." It not unfrequently occurs, however, that the comparative adjective is put in accordance with the following noun both in gender and in number; as in the she is a most excellent "هِيَ فُضْلَي ٱلنِّسَاء : she is a most excellent woman;" مُمَا أَنْصَلًا ٱلقَّوْم "they both are the most excellent (men) of the tribe."

277. When the comparative, having the article prefixed, is placed absolutely, it agrees in gender and number with the noun or pronoun to which it refers; thus, هُمَا ٱلْأَعْدَلُن "they two are most upright men;" هُمَا ٱلصُّغْرَيَانِ "they two are very diminutive (women)." So from the Kur, an, ix. 40: He has caused " جَعَلَ كَلِمَةَ آلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا آلسُّفْلَى وَكَلِمَة آللَّه هِيَ ٱلَّعُلَّيَا the word (viz. the power) of those who have been unbelievers to become most insignificant; but the word of God is supreme." Again, هُمُ ٱلْأَنْسَلُونَ بَيْنَ ٱلنَّاسِ "they are the most excellent among men." The plural masculine of the adjective, as in this last example, may be either of the regular form آئضَلُوں, or of the irregular or broken form إَنْصَلُون); and in like manner, the feminine may be of the regular measure فَعَلَ , or irregular, as فَعَلَ , see § 215. When the comparative adjective is neither accompanied by the article, nor in a state of regimen with the following noun, it is always employed in the form of the masculine singular; and when a comparison is made, the adjective is followed by the particle which is equivalent to our "than;" for example: 'الْفِتْنَةُ أَشُدُّ مِنَ ٱلْفَتْل 'sedition is worse than murder;'' we are more worthy of the kingdom " تَحْنُ أَحَنَّ بَالْمُلْكِ مِنْهُ than he;" أَحْمَدُ أَصْدَقُ مِنْكَ "Aḥmad is more truthful than there " مَا شَيْءٍ أَفْسَدُ لِطِبَاعِ ٱلنَّاسِ مِنْ هَذِهِ ٱلشَّجَرَةِ ٱلنَّابِيئَةِ "thou;" مَا شَيْءٍ is nothing more hurtful to the constitution of men. than this vile plant." When the comparative adjective governs another word, or is accompanied by the article, it then expresses the superlative degree; thus, اَللَّهُ أَرْحَمُ ٱلرَّاحِمِينَ "God is the most merciful of the merciful;" اَللَّهُ هُوَ آلَاكُبُرُ "God is most great."

27S. When the comparative adjective is followed by an or هُوَ أَنْصَلُ رَجُلِ or or the expression lie is most excellent as a man," the complement " هُوَ أَنْشَالُ رَجُلا must be of the same gender and number as the noun or pronoun which constitutes the subject of the proposition; thus, "they two are most excellent as men." When the substantive governed by the adjective of comparison is followed by a complement, the same is put in the accusative ease; thus, هُوَ أَفْضَلُ ٱلنَّاسِ رَجُلًا he is the most excellent of men, quoud man." In an interrogative sentence, the order of the words being a little inverted, the preposition does not follow the comparative adjective, but is prefixed to the object of comparison; as "وَسَ أَيْتَ أَنْتَ أَفْضَلُ than which of the two art زُوَّدَتْ جَنَى آلنِّخْلِ بَلْ مَا زَوِّدَتْ مِنْهُ أَطْيِبُ "thou more excellent?" "she presented (to us) the fruit of the date tree; nay, what she presented (was) better than that."

279. Between the adjective of comparison and the object compared a restrictive or complementary word may intervene; as تَعْمُو مَالا وِسَ عَمْرُ وَ اللهِ وَسَ عَمْرُ وَ اللهِ وَاللهِ وَسَ عَمْرُ وَ اللهِ وَسَ عَمْرُ وَ اللهِ وَسَ عَمْرُ وَ اللهِ وَسَ عَمْرُ وَ اللهِ وَاللهِ وَاللهُ وَالللهُ وَاللهُ وَالل

stitutes the subject of comparison be in the nominative case, it must precede the comparative adjective; as in the following example: مَرَرْتُ بِرَجُلِ أَبُوهُ أَحْسَنُ مِنْهُ I passed by a man whose father (is) handsomer than he;" but on no account ought we to say مَرْرَتُ بِرَجُلٍ أَحْسَنَ مِنْهُ أَبُوهُ though it is quite correct to say, as we formerly stated, "آبُوهُ أَبُوهُ "I passed by a man whose father is handsome." Neither would it be correct to say مُرَرَّتُ بِرَجُلِ يَحْسُنُ مِنْهُ أَبُوهُ I passed by a man whose father is fairer than he." When, as in this last sentence, the verb is made use of, the construction will run thus: " مَرَرْتُ بِرَجُلٍ يَحْسُنُ أَبُوهُ أَكْثَرَ مِنْهُ I passed by a man whose father is fair, more (or to a greater degree) than he is." When the preposition involving the comparative adjective is affirmative, but preceded by a negative preposition, the above arrangement will differ; as in the following example: I have not "ُ مَا رَأَيْتُ رَجُلًا أَحْسَنَ فِي عَبْنِهِ ٱلنُّحْلُ مِنْهُ فِي عَبْنِ زَيْدٍ seen (any) man in whose eye the collyrium is more beautiful than in that of Zaid;" and if in this last sentence we employ the verb حَسُن instead of the adjective أُحْسَن , we may for the preposition في , substitute the particle "like;" as follows: , literally, مَا رَأَيْتُ رَجُلًا يَحْسُنُ فِي عَيْنِهِ ٱلْكُعْلُ كَعُسْنِهِ فِي عَنْنِ زَيْدٍ "I have not seen (any) man in whose eye the collyrium is beautiful like the beauty of it in the eye of Zaid."

280. Verbal adjectives in the comparative state, even when derived from transitive verbs, never have the noun which they directly govern put in the accusative case. Such of them as are derived from verbs expressive of love or of aversion, are combined with the complement, denoting the object of the sentence, by means of the preposition j; and to that denoting the subject, by إلى thus, الله مِنْ نَفْسِهِ thus, إلى أَحَبُّ لِللهُ مِنْ نَفْسِهِ "the true believer loveth God more than himself;" the true believer is more beloved " آلمُومِنُ أَحَبُ إِلَى آلِلَّهِ مِن غَيْرِه of God than (any) besides him." A comparative adjective derived from a verb signifying "to know," or "to recognise," is combined with its complement by means of the preposition "I am more conversant with the "أَنَا أَعْرَفُ بِٱلْحَقِّ مِنْكُمْ , thus ; ب truth than you." When derived from a verb with any other signification, it is connected with its object by means of the preposition \downarrow ; as may be seen in the following example: he is more studious (lit. searchful) of " أهو أَطْلُبُ لِلعِلْم مِنْكُمْ knowledge than you." Comparative adjectives derived from intransitive verbs follow the construction of their roots; thus, هُو أَزْهَدُ فِي آلَدُّنْيَا وَأَسْرَعُ إِلَى آلْخِيْرِ وَأَبْعَدُ مِن آلِإِثْمَ وَأَخْرَصْ عَلَى آلْخِمْدِ "he is very abstinent in (affairs of) the world, and very swift (to follow) the good, and very far removed from crime, and most emulous of praise."

281. We may further observe, that in the employment of comparative adjectives, the construction may be somewhat elliptical; thus, هُو أَحْوَجُ إِلَيْ مِنْي إِلَيْه is more needful of me than I (am) of him;" where مِنْ إِحْتِيَاجِي is for مِنْ إِحْتِيَاجِي 'than my necessity; 'where مُنْ إِلَّهُمُ مِنْهُ بِٱلْفُرَسِ 'than my necessity; 'where مَنْهُ بِٱلْفُرَسِ أَشْبَهُ مِنْهُ بِٱلْفُرَسِ 'than my necessity; 'where is for مِنْ تَشَيَّهِ "than its resemblance." The ellipsis may extends still farther, as in the example already given: "I have not "I have not ومَنْ وَيْهِ عَيْنِهُ ٱلْكُعْلُ مِنْهُ فِي عَيْنِهِ وَيْهِ عَيْنِ وَيْهِ وَيَهُ الْكُعْلُ مِنْهُ فِي عَيْنِ وَيْهِ وَيَهُ الْكُعْلُ مِنْهُ فِي عَيْنِ وَيْهِ وَيَهُ اللّٰهِ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيْهُ وَيَهُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَهُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَهُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَهُ وَيَهُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَهُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيْهُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَالْمُعُولُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَالْمُعُولُونُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَيَعْمُوا وَالْمُعُولُونُ وَالْمُعُلِّعُ وَالْمُعُمُونُ وَيَعْمُ وَالْمُعُمُ وَالْمُعُمُونُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَالْمُعُمُونُ وَيَعْمُونُ وَالْعُمُ وَالْمُعُلِّ وَيَعْمُونُ وَالْمُعُلِّ وَالْمُعُمُونُ وَالْ

Government of Nouns.

- 282. When in Arabic one noun governs another in the genitive case, the governing word, as we stated, § 250, is put first, and is subject to the following modifications. the first place, it loses its nunation, retaining merely the simple vowels; thus, كِتَابِ, or كِتَابِ "a book," when governing another word, becomes كِتَاب, and كِتَاب, and respectively, as نِي كِتَابُ زَيدٍ "Zaid's book;" كِتَابُ زَيدٍ "in Zaid's book," etc. Secondly, if it be a dual, or a regular plural masculine, it drops its final syllable or (§ 68); as کتابا زیدِ "Zaid's two books," etc. Thirdly, if the governing word be a diptote (singular or broken plural), it then becomes a triptote, as we observed, § 68, a, with respect to the influence of the article. Lastly, when the word governed is an affixed pronoun, then the governing word undergoes some farther modifications, which we shall notice hereafter when we come to treat of the personal pronouns.
 - a. An adjective, or a participle used adjectively, when accompanied by a complement, is put in a state of construction similar to the preceding examples; as مُرَا رُسُلُ حَسَى الْوَجِهُ "a man fair of face;" a man fair of face; "a man fair of face; "(a man) striking Zaid," (lit. "striking or striker of Zaid)." The adjective thus employed remains indefinite though its complement be definite; thus. Kur,an, v. 96: هَدَى بَالْخُ ٱلْكُعْبَةُ "a gift (or victim) arriving at the Ka'ba." If the antecedent or subject is to be made definite, it of course takes the article; thus, المُقَيِّمُوا السَّارِبُ رَأْسِ الْجَانِي "those who are stedfast in prayer;" المُقَامِدُ السَّارِبُ رَأْسِ الْجَانِي "he who smites the head of the sinner;" مُعَمَّذُ ٱلْحُسَى الْوَجَهُ "Muḥammad who is fair of countenance."

- b. The adjective or noun used adjectively is not unfrequently prefixed in a state of regimen to the substantive which it serves to qualify; thus, إِلَى ٱلنَّاسِ مَا مُنِ اللَّهِ "the thing which pleases mankind the most (is) what is forbidden;" أَنْتُمْ خُيْرُ عُمَّةُ أَخْرَجَتَ للنَّاسِ "you are the best nation that has appeared among mankind;" so likewise, are the best nation that has appeared among mankind;" so likewise, إِنَّ أُول بَيْت وُضَعَ لِلنَّاسِ لَلَّذِي بِمَكَّةُ mankind (wherein to worship (fod) is that (which is) at Mecca."
- 283. We have already stated that when two substantives signify the same thing they agree in case, and are put in a state of apposition. When, however, we meet with instances where they are put in a state of regimen, we are to consider the construction as elliptical; thus, زَيْدٌ كُرُز "Zaid of the sack (or wallet)," means زَيْدٌ ٱلْمُسَمَّى بِكُرْز "Zaid nicknamed the sack;" so يَوْمُ ٱلْمُسَمَّى بِالْخَمِيس "the day of Thursday," is for صَلَادٌ ٱللَّوْلَى "the day called Thursday;" أَلَيُومُ ٱلْمُسَمَّى بِالْخَمِيس

"the prayer of صَلَاةُ ٱلسَّاعَةِ ٱلْأُولِي "the prayer of the first hour;" بَبْتُ ٱلْمُقَدَّسِ "the holy house (or temple)," is an elliptical expression for بَيْتُ ٱلْمُسَمَّى بِٱلْمُقَدَّسِ "the house called by (the epithet) holy;" which expression is by some improperly written in a state of concord; as بَيْتُ ٱلْمُفَدَّسُ .

- a. When a noun which ought logically to be in the dual number is in a state of construction with a complement which is in the dual, the noun is generally put in the plural, but it may, less elegantly, be put in the dual or singular; thus from the Kur,ān, lxvi. 4: " فَالَّ اللهُ فَقَدٌ مَغَتُ فُلُوبُكُما "if you both (wives of the prophet) turn unto God (penitently), for verily your hearts have swerved." The words كَا عَمَا (fem.) كَاتًا both," form an exception to this rule, for they can be prefixed only to nouns and pronouns of the dual number. See hereafter, § 285, c.
- 284. There are many words used only in a state of regimen, the word governed being either expressed or understood. It is always expressed after غُو "possessor;" وَوُ "possessors;" "ilkeness;" "exception." There are others after which the word governed may be omitted; in which case the governing word takes the nunation or the article; such are "the totality;" "part" or "some" and عُوْنُ "the totality;" "part" or "some" and عُوْنُ "who" etc. (see § 88), as will be seen in the following sentences from the Kur, in this, xxxvi. 40." "it is not expedient that the sun should overtake the moon, neither doth the night outstrip the day; but each (of these الستامتانية) moveth in a (peculiar) orbit;" where كُلُّهُمَا أَنَّ أَلْهُمَا لَا اللهُ ال

"Ah, many besides thee among women (have been) deluded (by me), fair ones whom I have dismissed with a divorce," where the word it though accompanied by the affixed pronoun cremains indefinite.

285. Words expressive of time or portions of time, such as and نام "time;" أَوْتَ "a day;" أَوْتَ "an hour," etc., when employed in a vague and indefinite sense are put in a state of regimen with a verbal proposition or sentence that follows; in which case they reject the nūnation and retain the single vowels; thus, from the Kur,ān, vi. 119: "لَهُ الْمُورِّ يَنْفُعُ الصَّارِقِينَ صِدَّتُهُمْ "this (is) the day (on which) their veracity shall benefit the righteous;" حَدِنَ الْمُورِ عَنْفُمُ فِي الصَّورِ "to him (shall be) the kingdom (on that) day (when) the trumpet shall be sounded." When words of time such as the foregoing refer to a past event they may be put in a state of regimen with a nominal proposition; thus, Kur,ān, xl. 16: "وَمُنَ أَنُّ مُنْ مُرْازُونَ "on the day when they came forth;" so also تَوْمَ مُنَّ الْحَجَّاجُ أَبِيرَ "at the time when Ḥajjāj (was) governor." This rule does not apply to words of time employed in a specific sense; such as تَنَا وَ مَنْ الْعَالَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَ

a. The words جِينَ , يَومَ , and such like, may also be employed as indeclinable, in which case they have always a fatha for their final vowel; thus instead of هٰذَا يَوْمُ يَنْفَعُ (as above), we may say هٰذَا يَومَ يَنْفَعُ ; in the phrase مِنْ يَومَ حَادَثَنِي from the day (when) he conversed with me," we may also say مِنْ يَومَ حَادَثَنِي .

b. There are many indeclinable words whose final vowel is damma, after which the word governed is generally suppressed. Such are "فَرَنُ "before;" عَدُرُ "sufficient;" عَدُرُ "other;" عَدُرُ "without" (sine); "وَرَاتَ "first;" أُولُ "on high;" عَدُنُ "above;" "to the right;" مَمَالُ "to the left," and such like, which are generally viewed as adverbs. When they are employed absolutely, they follow the ordinary rules of syntax; thus, عَدُنُ مَا لَا اللهُ الله the command (both) before and after (the present time);" which sentence, according to some grammarians, we might read .وسِنْ فَبْلُ وَسِنْ بَعْدِ.

c. The words الإ and (fem.) کلتا "both," or "twain," have this peculiarity, that the word which they govern must be a dual, and restricted either by the article or by an affixed pronoun, or be definite from its own nature, for instance, a proper name; thus, کلا الرَّجُلَبَی وَکِلْتَا الْاَسْرَةَ تَسِی وَکِلْتَا الْاسْرَةَ تَسِی وَکِلْتَا الْاَسْرَةَ تَسِی وَکِلْتَا الْاَسْرَةِ مَدَی وَکِلاً ذَٰلِکَ وَجَمْهُ وَفِبَلَ "We both of these men and both of these women;" کلاً الله وَالله وَاله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله

"Both my brother and my friend find in me a support in their misfortunes and adversities."

286. The governing word may be followed by more than one word governed; thus, عَالِمُ ٱلْغَيْبِ وَٱلشَّهَانَة "the knower of "the shidden and (of what is) manifest;" خَلْتُى ٱلسَّمَوَاتِ وَٱلْأَضِ وَٱلْأَضِ السَّمَوَاتِ وَاللَّمْ السَّمَةِ وَاللَّهُ السَّمَوَاتِ وَاللَّمْ السَّمَواتِ وَاللَّمُ السَّمَةُ السَّمَواتِ وَاللَّمْ السَّمَواتِ وَالسَّمَةُ السَّمَةُ وَالْعَلَى السَّمَاتِ وَالْرَاقِ السَّمَاتِ وَالْمَالِيَةُ السَّمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ السَّمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ السَّمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَالِيَّ السَّمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمِلْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمِاتِ وَالْمِلْمِ وَالْمِلْمِقِي وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِي وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمِلْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِ وَالْمَاتِي وَالْمَاتِ

"Dost thou consider every man a man? and (every) fire (shining) in the night a fire (of hospitality)?" where we find, in the second line, the word كُلُّ omitted before مَارِ omitted before كُلُّ omitted before لَمَا كَانَتِ الْأَيْلَمُ النَّاصِرِيَّةُ مُحَمَّدِ نَنِ فَلاُونَ when the Nāṣirī days of Muḥammad the son of Kalāwun arrived," which sentence, if expressed at full length, would have run as follows: لَمَا كَانَتِ الْأَيْلَمُ النَّاصِرِيَّةُ أَعْنِي أَيَّامُ النَّاصِرِ مُحَمَّدِ بَنِ فَلاُونَ when the Nāṣirī days arrived, I mean the days of Malik Alnāṣir Muḥammad the son of Kalāwun."

a. The fire alluded to in the last sentence but one is thus explained by De Sacy, viz.: "The hospitable Arabs were in the habit of lighting fires by night on elevated spots near their encampments, so that the wearied wanderer of the desert might know where to seek for shelter and hospitality."

287. As a general rule, the two nouns in a state of construction must not be separated by any intervening word. An exception may be made, however, in the case of interjectional phrases; thus, الله وَ الله وَالله وَ الله وَالله وَالله

the hand, one day, of a Jew;" هُمَا أَخُوا فِي ٱلْحُرْبِ مَنْ لاَ أَخَا لَهُ "they both are the brothers, in war, of him who has no brother."

SYNTAX OF THE PRONOUNS.

Personal Pronouns.

288. In a simple sentence the isolated personal pronouns (§ 83) placed between the subject and the attribute, supply the use of the verb "to be;" thus, اللَّهُ هُوَ ٱلْحَيُّ ٱلْقَيُّومِ God, He (is) the Living, the Eternal ;" أُولَدُكُ هُمْ وَتُودُ ٱلنَّارِ "as to those, they (are) the fuel of the fire ;" وَلَغْنُوعُ "opulence, it (is) contentment." The third personal pronouns supply the place of the verb "to be," even when the subject is a pronoun of the first or second person; as الرَّبُّ إِلَٰهُكَ I am the Lord thy God;" أَنَا هُوَ نُورُ آلْعَالَم "I am the light of the world." When the proposition begins with the particle "verily," etc., the subject is then expressed by an affixed pronoun (§ 84) in the accusative case, followed by its own isolated pronoun, which last compensates for the verb "to be;" thus, إِنَّكَ أَنْتَ ٱلْوَهَّابُ, verily thou (art) the munificent," lit. "verily as to thee, thou (art) the munificent;" so verily, I am thy lord." When the affixed " إِنِّي أَنَّا رَبُّكَ pronoun is thus employed in the genitive or accusative case (governed by a verb or particle) it is frequently accompanied, for the sake of emphasis, by its corresponding affixed pronoun in the nominative case, which, however, cannot be so translated in our idiom; thus, إِنْ تَرَنِي أَنَا أَفَلُ مِنْكَ مَالًا وَوَلَدًا subholdest me, me (I say) less than thee as to wealth and offspring; " مَا مَنْعَكُمَا أَنْتُمَا مِنْ ذَلِكَ ؟ " what hath prevented you two, you two, (I say,) from that?" مَا مَنْعَكُما أَنْتُمَا مِنْ ذَلِكَ ؟ " to whom (belongs) this book? to us, us, (I say); " thou shalt equip him, him, (I say,) and his attendants " تَجَهَرُهُ هُوَ وَأَنْبَاعَهُ " woe unto me, me, (I say,) the miserable."

- a. The isolated personal pronouns denoting the nominative case are seldom used as such, but they are sometimes added to the verb to render the expression more emphatic; thus, الله عبين أَنَا وَالله عبين أَنَا وَالله وَ الله وَالله وَالل
- 289. We slightly alluded (§§ 84 and 282) to the modifications undergone by words to which the affixed pronouns are attached, as well as to those undergone by the affixes themselves. We have now arrived at that stage of our progress where we deem it most proper to treat of the subject at full length; and we cannot do better than to lay before the student De Sacy's rules to that effect (Gr. Ar. Tom. 1er. 457). In the first place, on receiving an affixed pronoun the nunation of all the triptotes disappears and the simple vowels only remain, as we stated, § 282, with respect to the government of nouns. 2nd. The affixed pronoun of the first person displaces both the nunation and the simple vowel (§ 84, a); hence, in this instance, the distinction of the three case terminations of the noun is entirely lost, and the cases must be inferred from the context, as we do in our own language. 3rd. Nouns ending in \$\vec{s}\$, change it into ____, on receiving the affixed pronoun; as نِعْمَةُ "a benefit;" نِعْمَةُ "his benefit." 4th. The final \odot of the duals, and the final $\acute{\odot}$ of masculine plurals ending مُونَ disappear; thus, nom. dual کِتَابَانِ gen. two books," with the affixed pronoun کم become 'کتابیّن "sons," بَنُونَ and كِتَابَيْكُمْ your two books;" so, nom. pl. كِتَابَيْكُمْ gen. and accus. بَنِين, with the affixed pronoun خن, become respectively بَنُوكَ and "thy sons." 5th. Nouns ending in hamza change the same into , if its vowel be damma; and into يَسَآوِّهُ "women;" نِسَآوِّهُ "his نِسَآوِّهُ "if it be kasra; thus, يَسَآوِّهُ women;" لِنِسَآثِه "to his women." 6th. In the third person masc. pl. of verbs, the quiescent alif after و disappears; as "they threw" رَمَوًا "they assisted me;" نَصَرُونِي "they threw" or "shot;" رَحُوهُم "they threw against them." 7th. After the verbal termination , of the second person pl. masc. of the preterite, the r is made moveable by damma, followed by inert; as رَأَيَّتُمُوهُمْ "you saw;" رَأَيَّتُمُوهُمْ "you saw;" رَأَيَّتُمْ In those persons of the aorist, which end in يَكْتُبُونَ as يَكْتُبُونَ "they write;" the final . is sometimes dropped before the affixed pronouns نِي and نَا مُرُونِنِي for تَأْمُرُونِي you order me;" so تَعْلُونَنَا you hate us," for تَعْلُونَنَا. In the third person sing. masc. of the preterite of such verbs as have . for the أى the final radical, on receiving the affixed pronoun ني the final of the verb may coalesce, by tashdid, with the ... of the affix; he has rendered me powerful;" for مَكَّننِي (Kur. xviii. 94). 9th. The squiescent after fatha, may, in nouns as well as in verbs, either be retained or changed into alif; as فَتَى "a boy;" فَتَاهُ "his boy;" وَمَى "he threw;" رَمَاءُ "he threw him." 10th. In particles terminating in a quiescent after fatha, the takes jazm when followed by the affixed pronouns; as عَلَى "upon;" "towards " إِلَيْكَ "; towards " إِلَيْكَ "; upon us " عَلَيْنَا of (غُلَامَىٰ modified) عُلَامَيْنِ so, عُلَى "upon me" عَلَى "upon," عَلَى rwo slaves," مُسْلِمِبنَ "; of my two slaves " غُلاَمَتَى "(modified "of my Muslims." سُسْلِمِي "of the Muslims," سُسْلِمِي "of the Muslims," امُسَلِمِي is attached ends in, preceded by و is attached ends in. damma—that is, in long \bar{u} ,—the, is changed into ω , and the same unites by tushdīd with the affix, as in the case of the inert or quiescent; thus, مُسْلِمُونَ (nom. pl.) "the "my Muslims." مُسْلِمِيَّ becomes (مُسْلِمُو my Muslims." 2. This same affix - of the first person singular is sometimes entirely suppressed, its kasra only remaining. This often takes place when the noun is employed in a vocative sense; and almost always, when the word to which the affix is united ends in hamza, which last then becomes ; as, "my friends," for أُحِبَّائِي so أَحِبَّائِي "my friends," for أُحِبَّائِي in place of بي is used when نِي . 3 . آبَآءُ and أَحِبَّآء , from آبِرَثُي joined to active verbs, and also to particles ending in ...; such as لَكِنَّ and أَنَّ , إِنَّ , عَنْ , سِنَ and أَنَّ . The affixed pronoun here always represents an accusative case. words if and if when taking this affix of the first person singular, are written إِنَّنِي and إِنَّنِي for إِنَّنِي and إِنِّي. The same rule holds with the first pers. pl., as il and il for il and il. In like manner كَنِّ makes لَكِنَّ and لَكِنَّ 4. The affixed pronouns of the third person ، مُن , and مُن , change their damma into kasra when the word to which they are united ends in kasra or in ي inert or quiescent; thus, څارځ "his house;" in the house of them " في دَارهِمَا "in his house; " في دَاره two;" فيه "in him" or "in it;" يُومِيه "he may throw (or shoot) him;" عَلَيْهِ "on him;" عَلَيْهِم "on them," etc.

290. The principal modifications to which the affixes themselves are liable, are the following:—1. The affixed pronoun ومن of the first person singular takes the vowel fatha instead of kasra when united with any word ending in ١, ٥, or وه inert; thus, غَلْمَانِ "sins," خَطَايَا "my sins;" مُعْلَامَانِ "two slaves," modified according to § 289 into عُلَامَانِ , (by dropping the final وه), hence غُلَامَانِ "my two slaves." When the word to which the affix والمنافية is to be joined ends in والمنافية "inert or quiescent, this last is united by tashdid with the affix; as, في "in," في "in," في "in,"

- a. The affix s sometimes loses its own vowel and takes jazm; this, however, occurs only in poetry or in measured prose, such as the Kur,ān or the Makāmāt of Ḥarīrī; thus, مُوْتِكُ for يُوْتِكُ "we shall give unto him." The affixes مُعُ and مُعُ when followed by wasla, § 36, change the final jazma into damma; but when, by a rule just stated, the affix مُعُ becomes مِعَلَيْكُمُ السَّلَامُ "on you be peace;" عَلَيْكُمُ السَّلَامُ أَسَّلَامُ أَسَّلَامُ أَسَّلَامُ أَسَّلَامُ أَسَّلَامُ مَا لَكُمُ عَلَيْكُمُ السَّلَامُ مَا عَلَيْكُمُ السَّلَامُ , and even عَلَيْكُمُ , and even
- b. A transitive verb or a verbal noun, may have attached to it two different affixes, viz., an accusative and a genitive or dative, provided they be not of the same person; as "he gave it to me" (lit. "he gave to me it"); so "it will suffice thee (against) them." The two affixes, however, may be of the third person provided they be not identical, in other words they must differ in gender or in number; as "أَعَامُنَاهُ "I gave them to them to eat;" المَعَمَّةُ وَاللَّهُ اللَّهُ الل

- c. We have already stated, § 84, f. that instead of employing two affixes, that which denotes the accusative is in many instances used separately, having the particle إِنَّا prefixed. This mode of construction serves to avoid all ambiguity in instances like the preceding, where it may not, at first sight, be obvious which is the accusative and which the secondary case; hence we must not say "I gave thee to him," but أَعْمَانِينُ إِنَّاكَ اللهُ ا
- d. We remarked in § 84, d. that the affix نبي of the first person singular is added to verbs only, to denote either the accusative or dative; it is often added, however, to participles and verbal adjectives; for example; هَلُ أَنْتُمْ صَادِقُونِي "are you acting truly towards me?" شَلُ أَنْتُمْ صَادِقُونِي لِيُرْفَدَ خَائبًا "he who comes to me (that he may receive aught) shall never go away disappointed;" عَيْرُ ٱلدَّجَالِ أَخُوفُنِي عَلَيْكُمْ "another than the Antichrist inspires me with more fear for you."
- e. With verbal adjectives the affixed pronoun which serves as a complement, or the first of the affixes when there are two, may be considered as either a genitive or accusative case. With a noun of action the affixed pronoun, or the first of them if there be two, ought always to be considered as a genitive, whether it be expressive of the subject of the verb, or the complement of a verb active, or the first complement of a verb doubly transitive. When there are two affixed pronouns as complements of the same verbal adjective, or of the same noun of action, the second of them ought always to be considered as an accusative case. We have shewn, § 84, f. that when two affixes are joined to a transitive verb that which denotes the accusative may be separated in combination with the particle U_{ij} ; with the simple verb, however, it is more elegant to add the two suffixes, provided of course there occur no ambiguity. With infinitives and participles it is more correct to separate the last of the affixes or that denoting the accusative.

Demonstrative Pronouns.

- 291. As a general rule the demonstrative pronouns agree in gender and number with the nouns to which they refer, whether expressed or understood. There is, however, one notable exception, viz., a broken plural masculine or a regular feminine plural, usually takes for its demonstrative pronoun the feminine singular of the latter; for example: تَلَكُ ٱلْكُ ٱلْكُ ٱلْكُ ٱلْكُ ٱلْكُ الْكَامُ "these days;" هَذِهُ ٱلْأَلُكُ ٱلْكُ الْكُ ٱلْكُ يَعِيالِ "those armies;" هَذِهُ ٱلْأَلُكُ ٱلْكُ يَعِيالٍ "this million (lit. thousand of thousands) of dīnārs."
- a. The demonstrative pronouns, being in their nature definite words, must have the noun which they specify also definite as is often the case in Greek in such phrases as τουτο το ρημα "this saying," etc. to a proposition, however, in which the noun is the attribute, the latter may remain indefinite; as قُلُونًا مَنَا اللهُ "they say this is delusion." Sometimes the attribute is expressed by an entire phrase; thus, القَالُوم مَنَا القَالُوم فَهُذَا مَا عَلَى جَانِب بَصُر القَالُوم the shore of the sea of Kulzum (i.e. the Red Sea)." In interrogative phrases the subject is put after the attribute; thus مَنَ هُوَ ذَاكَ "who is that?" مَا هٰذَا "what is this?"

292. The remote demonstrative pronoun which is formed from the preceding by adding the affixes فراك , فرد , etc., of the second person, not only agrees in gender and number with the noun it qualifies, but the affixes themselves agree in gender and number with the person or persons addressed. For example, "that book," if you are speaking to one man, is expressed فراك ; and if to one woman فراك ; if you are addressing two men or two women you will say if you are addressing two men or two women you will say وَدُلِكُمُ ٱلْكِتَابُ if there be more than two men فراك الكِتَابُ and if more than two women, the expression is فراك الكِتَابُ without any respect to the gender and number of the persons addressed.

Of the Relative Pronouns.

being compounded of the article الذي and the demonstrative أَلَّذِي (modified into الذي (modified into الذي) must have the word to which it relates in itself definite, either by means of the article الذي or of an affixed pronoun, or by being in a state of regimen, or being a proper name; thus, Kur. iv. 21: اللَّذِي النَّامُ اللَّذِي الْفَاحِشَةُ مِنْ نِسَائِكُمُ اللَّذِي الْفَاحِشَةُ مِنْ اللَّذِي الْفَاحِشَةُ مِنْ نِسَائِكُمُ اللَّذِي الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِشَةُ مِنْ نِسَائِكُمُ اللَّذِي الْفَاحِشَةُ مِنْ اللَّهُ اللَّذِي الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدِينَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاعِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدُ الْفَاحِيْدَ الْفَاحِيْدُ الْفَاحِيْدُ الْفَاحِيْدُ الْفَاحِيْدُ الْفَاحِيْدُ الْفَاعِيْدُ ا

the feminine singular; as تَوَكَّلُوا عَلَي ٱللَّهِ فِي ٱلشَّدائِدِ ٱلَّتِي تُصِيبُكُمْ "rely upon God in the afflictions which may befal you;" also "believe in the verses of God (viz., those of the Kur,ān), which he sent down upon his prophet."

294. The relatives ٱلَّذِي, as we stated in § 86, are never employed in the oblique cases singular, and rarely in those of the dual and plural; but the omission is supplied by means of an affixed pronoun that follows; for example: the physician whose son is with " ٱلطَّبِيبُ ٱلَّذِي ٱبُّنَّهُ عِنْدِي me;" السَّارِقُ ٱلَّذِي فَتَلَهُ ٱلْبِنِي (the robber whom my son slew;" the merchant with whom " ٱلنَّاجِرُ ٱلَّذِي َ تُوجَدُ عِنْدَهُ هَذِةِ ٱلْجَارِيَةُ this maiden is found." The personal affix expressive of the accusative case is sometimes omitted when governed by a verb or participle active; as may be seen in the following example: ٱلْمَالُ ٱلَّذِي تَشْتَهِى أَنْفُسُنَا "the wealth for which our souls are longing;" where تَشْتَهِي is used elliptically for the ' ٱلرِّزْقُ آلَّذِي مُولِيكَ آللَّهُ فَضَّلُّ So in the sentence . تَشْتَهِبهِ sustenance which God bestoweth on thee is a blessing;" where مُولِيكٌ is for مُولِيكة. The same affix may also be omitted when governed by a preposition; and both affix and preposition may be omitted when the relative itself is مَرَرْتُ بَالَّذِي مَرَّ سُلْيَمَانُ governed by the same preposition; as "I passed by him whom Sulaiman passed by;" where after the complement بن is omitted. This last rule, however, does not hold when there are two distinct verbs in the sentence; as زَهَدْتُ فِي ٱلَّذِي رَغَبْتَ فِيهِ "I abstained from that from which thou desiredst me;" where we cannot say فيه آلَّذِي رَغَبْتَ by omitting the last word فِيهُ. Such construction may, however, be occasionally met with, which we are to regard as a poetic licence.

and نَنْ and أَلَّذِي of which more anon, sometimes includes the notion of an antecedent, as follows: that which I " أَلَّذِي آزْدَرَيْتُ فِيهِ هُوَ خَلَّصَنِي وَٓٱلَّذِي رَجَوْتُهُ أَهْلَكَنِي despised (would have) saved me, and that in which I confided has destroyed me." This kind of construction is adopted when the writer wishes to give an emphasis to certain words in the sentence; which will be better understood by a few examples. For instance, let us take the sentence, "The two poets sent a letter to the wazīrs." If the emphasis be on "the two poets," then the sentence will run as follows: literally, "those two who sent أَللَّذَانِ بَلُّغَا ٱلْوَٰزَرَآء رِسَالَةَ ٱلشَّاعِرَان to the wazīrs a letter, are the two poets." If the emphasis be on "the wazīrs," the construction will be as follows: they to whom the two poets " أَلَّذِينَ بَلَّغَهُمُ ٱلشَّاعِرَانِ رِسَالَةٌ ٱلْوُزَرَآء sent a letter, (the same) are the wazīrs." Lastly, if the emphasis be on the word "letter," then the sentence will run thus, أَلَّتِي بَلَّغَهَا ٱلْشَاعِرَانِ ٱلْوُزَرَآء رَسَالَةٌ. In each of these three modes of expression it will be observed, that the relative begins the sentence, and that the noun on which the emphasis is to be placed, and with which the relative agrees in gender, number, and case, is placed at the end, and in the nominative case.

- a. When, in a simple proposition, we wish to express emphatically a word having a reference to time or place, such as, "I fasted on Friday" وَمُعْتُ يُومُ الْجُمْعَةُ; if we intend to lay an emphasis on the word Friday, we must employ the preposition فِي with the affixed pronoun, and put the word denoting Friday last, in the nominative case; thus, "الذي صُمْتُ فِيهِ يَومُ الْجُمْعَةِ "that day on which I fasted (was) Friday."
- b. When a proposition includes a word expressive of "cause," "desire," or "purpose," and it is intended to render the same emphatic, the preposition with the affixed pronoun is employed in a manner similar to the preceding; thus, "I came with the desire of seeing thee;" if expressed emphatically will be, i.e., "that for which I came, was the desire of seeing thee." We may observe, however, that in a construction of this kind, if the noun is feminine, as in last example, the pronouns, both relative and affix, may be masculine. The reason is that the true antecedent is the word "the thing" or "object," which is of the masculine gender.
- 296. In a simple proposition consisting only of a subject and an attribute (the verb being understood), such as, زَيدُ أَبُوكَ "Zaid (is) thy father;" عَنْرُو قَائِمٌ "Amru is standing;" the emphasis, when required, is indicated by employing the relative الَّذِي اللهُ اللهُ together with the appropriate personal pronoun. If it be meant to place the emphasis on the attribute, the preceding phrases will run thus, أَلَّذِي هُوَ أَبُوكَ زَيْدٌ أَبُوكَ أَنِّكُ عُمْرُو "he who (is) thy father is Zaid;" الَّذِي هُوَ قَائِمٌ عَمْرُو "he who (is) standing is 'Amru." If the emphasis is to be laid on the subject, we must say, الله وَيَدُدُ أَبُوكَ هُوَ زَيْدٌ أَبُوكَ لَا شُوكَ لَا الله عُوْ زَيْدٌ أَبُوكَ لَا الله وَيَدُدُ الْمُوكَ لَا الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الْمُوكَ وَيَدُدُ أَبُوكَ وَلَا الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيُدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيَدُدُ الله وَيُودُ الله وَيُودُ الله وَيُعْلِمُ وَيَدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيَدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيَدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُودُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُعْلِمُ وَيَدُدُ الله وَيُودُ وَيُعْلِمُ وَيُع father ;" أَلَّذِي هُوَ عَمْرُو قَائِمٌ "he who (is called) 'Amru (is) standing." In each of these examples, the personal pronoun is employed (§ 288) along with the relative, the real antecedent to both being الرَّجُلُ "the man," understood.

297. The article الله sometimes supplies the place of the relative بالذي, especially in those instances where it is followed by a verb or a preposition, as in the following examples; viz., "thou art not a judge whose judgment is satisfactory;" مَنَ لا يَرَالُ شَاكِرًا عَلَى المُعَهُ "thou art not a judge whose judgment is satisfactory;" مَنَ لا يَرَالُ شَاكِرًا عَلَى المُعَهُ "he who ceaseth not to evince gratitude to those who are with him." In both of these examples الله ومناه الله عناه الله عنه "from the following phrases, viz.: مَنَ اللّهُ مِنَ اللّهُ مِنَا اللهُ عَنْ اللهُ ا

a. The article الله may further be employed instead of the relative, in combination with a participle, active or passive, when used emphatically as a substitute for a verb. For example, let us take the sentence يَقِي ٱللّهُ ٱلْبَطَلَ "God protects the brave (man);" instead of which we may say emphatically, الرَّاقِي ٱللّهُ ٱلْبَطَلُ ٱللهُ الْبَطَلُ "he who protects the brave man (is) God;" or ٱلْوَاقِيهِ ٱللهُ ٱلْبَطَلُ اللهُ الْبَطَلُ "he whom God protects (is) the brave man;" in which last phrase the personal pronoun

examples; thus, the sentence عَنَا الْمُعَلَّمِ الْمُعَلَّمِ الْمُعَلِّمِ اللهِ الْمُعلِمِينَ الْمُعَلِّمِينَ الْمُعَلِمِينَ الْمُعَلِمُعِينَ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلَى الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلَمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعَلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعِلَمِ الْمُعِلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ الْمُعْلِمُ ا

298. The pronouns مَنْ "he or she who," and نه "that which," when employed as relatives, are indeclinable. They differ from أَلَّذِي in this, that they include, absolutely, in themselves the force both of antecedent and relative; thus, "he who hath disbelieved;" مَنْ كُفُو "that which has passed." As a general rule مَنْ refers to rational beings, and to whatever is irrational or lifeless. To this rule, however, there are occasional exceptions; for instance, مَنْ may be applied to irrational or lifeless beings when the latter are personified; or when in one and the same sentence both rational and irrational beings are included; thus, for example:

"unto God those who are in the heavens and (on the earth) make adoration;" or we might say, لله يَسْجُدُ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَوَاتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلأَرْضِ "unto God that which is in the heavens and that which is (on the earth) make adoration." Again, the relative مَمْ may be applied to rational beings when we indicate a class of such beings, distinguished from others as to quality or quantity; thus, Kur,ān, iv. 3: مَثْنَى وَثُلَاثَ وَرُبَاعَ "and espouse ye whatsoever (for whomsoever) is agreeable unto you from among the women (to the number of) two, three, or four (each)."

299. The word وَأَنِيُّةُ (fom. أَنِيُّةُ) "who or whatsoever," has sometimes the effect of a relative. When so employed, it is declined in the singular as a triptote, but not in the dual or plural; thus, "أَتَّتُلُ أَيًّا حَارَبَيي "I will slay (any one) whomsoever that makes war upon me;" جَنْنِي بِأَيِّ عَصَوْا عَلَيَّ "bring unto me (lit., come unto me with) those who have rebelled against me;" إِعْرِقْنِي بِأَيِّ قَالَتْ هَذَا "inform me what (female) hath said that." We may here observe, that in such phrases as this last, it is not essential to employ the feminine بِأَيَّةِ though that would be quite correct. In certain situations becomes indeclinable; viz., when it is in a state of construction with an affixed pronoun, or any other complement which is expressed, not merely understood, and followed by a nominal proposition, the subject of which is the personal pronoun which belongs to , but which is merely understood, not expressed; then we " ثُمَّ لَنَنْزِعَنَّ عَنْ كُلِّ شِيعَةٍ أَتْهُمْ أَشَدُ عَلَي ٱلرَّحْمَٰنِ عُتِيًا ,thus, shall withdraw from the whole army whomsoever of them have been most violent in their rebellion against the Merciful;" إِذَا مَا لَفِيتَ بَنِي مَالِكِ فَسَلِّمْ عَلَى أَيُّهُمْ أَنْصَلُ "if thou shouldst meet with the children of Mālik, salute whichever of them is most virtuous." In the first of the two preceding sentences, if the personal pronoun had been expressed, or had the affix of أَتَّ been omitted, we should have to assume the regular declension of the word أَتَ تُلُمُ مُوَ أَنْصَلُ. So in the second sentence we should, under similar circumstances, have said, عَلَى الَّيْهِمْ هُوَ أَنْصَلُ.

Of the Interrogative Pronouns.

300. We have just shewn the use and application of نرق.

لم, and قُعُ as relative pronouns; we shall now briefly notice the manner in which they are employed interrogatively. In asking a question 🥳 generally applies to rational beings, and L to irrational beings and lifeless things. If the noun to which they refer accompanies them, they are not subject to any variation on account of gender, number, or case. If, however, the noun be not expressed, then is regularly declined as we showed in § 87, a. For example, A says to B, جَآءِنِي رَجُلُ "a man came to me;" then should B ask "who?" without any additional word, the expression would be مَنُو; but if he asked, "who came?" it would be مَنُو . In like manner, if A says تَتَلَّتُ رَجُلًا 'I killed a man," and B should ask "whom?" the expression is in the accusative case. If, however, B asks "whom hast thou killed?" or "whom, O youth?" مَنْ فَتَلْتَ alone is used; as مَنْ فَتَلْتَ or There are, however, some instances in which is declined under such circumstances; as in the following example: أَتُوا نَارِي فَغُلْتُ مَنُونَ أَنْتُمْ قَالُوا ٱلْجِنِّ they came to my fire (of hospitality) and I said who are you? they said, the Jinns," in which sentence we see the regular nominative plural مَنُونَ used instead of .

301. The application of أَيّة and أَيّة as interrogatives, differs from that of نمن inasmuch as if followed by the word to which they refer, the latter is put in the genitive case, as we stated in § 88. They are also subject to all the variations of number and case when used alone; as رَأَيْتُ رَجُلَيْنِ يَا صَاحِبِ "I saw two men;" and if the speaker be asked "whom?" the expression will be أَيْنِي يَا صَاحِبِي

a. The interrogative is also employed with an indefinite noun in a state of regimen, to express admiration; thus, جُلْتَنِي بِرَجُلِ أَبِي رَجُلِ أَبِي رَجُلِ "thou camest unto me with (a certain) man, what a man!" If, however, a definite noun precedes, the word $\ddot{\ddot{z}}$ is to be put adverbially in the accusative case; as, رَجُلِ أَيَّ رَجُلِ Zaid came unto me, what a man!" The noun respecting which admiration is thus expressed by means of is may be itself understood, or virtually comprised in a verb; and is then to be put in the same case as that in which the suppressed noun would have been were it expressed. For example, in the following phrase, "اَنْتَكُوْا أَيَّ نِكَايَةٍ 'they were grievously vexed, what a vexation!" أَيُّ is put in the accusative case, because the sentence, if stated in full, would have run thus, . أَنْتَكُوا نِكَانَةً أَيُّ نِكَانَة

SECTION VIII.

SYNTAX OF VERBS AND PARTICLES.

Use and Application of the Preterite Tense.

302. The Arabic preterite corresponds with what we call the indefinite past, and also with our preterperfect. the former meaning in simple narration when preceded by the adverbs مَوَّة "once on a time;" and others of the kind expressive of indefinite past time; as in the following example : أَسَدُ مَرَّةً خَرَجَ عَلَى ثَوْرَيْنِ فَآجْتَمَعًا جَمِيعًا ample : أَسَدُ مَرَّةً a time went forth against two bulls, now they (both) united together," etc. In the following sentences it corresponds with our preterperfect tense, وَزَارَةَ آلَبُاقِينَ وَزَارَةَ مَاهُنَا وِزَارَةَ آلَبُاقِينَ "verily we have described the administration of their ancestor, now we will narrate the vizīrate of those remaining;" remember" أَنْكُرُوا نِعْمَتِي آلَتِي أَنْعَمْتُ عَلَيكُمْ وَ أَنِي فَقَالَتُكُم عَلَى آلَعَالَمِينَ my benefits that I have conferred upon you, and (remember) that I have rendered you superior to (the rest of) mankind." We may here observe, that when the preterite is preceded by the particle تَدُ "now," "verily," etc., it always signifies a past time, which is by no means the case in many other respects, as we shall see immediately. The same rule holds with respect to عَبنَ and "when," and other words synonymous with them.

303. The preterite is frequently employed to express, with greater energy, present or future time, especially in correlative propositions of a general application, or proverbial sentences, such as the following: مُنْ كَتَمَ سِرَّةُ بَلَغَ مُرَادَةُ "he who conceals his secret attains his (wished for) object," literally, "he who hath concealed," etc.; so مَنْ نَعَلَ إِلَيكَ نَعَلَ عَنْكَ he who reporteth unto thee (another's secret), will report from thee (thy secret to another);" literally, "he who hath brought thee hath carried from thee." When correlative propositions of this kind—the first of which begins with or کُلَّنا "whosoever," کُلَّنا "as often as," "whithersoever," and such like—express only a particular not a general truth, the preterites in both clauses are to be translated by our future; thus, Kur, an iv. 59: as often as their skins '' كُلَّمَا نَضِجَتْ جُلُودُهُمْ بَدَّلْنَاهُمْ جُلُودًا غَيْرَهَا shall have been burnt out, we shall substitute for them other skins."

304. The pluperfect tense is formed in Arabic by employing the preterite of the verb کار (§ 158), together with the preterite of the verb to be put in the pluperfect tense; thus, "she had written;" and so on, bearing in mind that the two verbs must strictly agree in gender, number, and person throughout. When several pluperfects are to be expressed, instead of repeating کان with each, the particle نَدُ is inserted between the latter and the preterite immediately following, which serves to throw the succeeding preterites also into the pluperfect; thus, وَمَاتَ ٱلرَّشِيدُ بِطُوسَ - وَكَانَ خَرَجَ الْطَاعَةُ وَتَعَلَّبَ عَلَي سَمَرْقَنَدَ - فَتَحَرَجُ ٱلرَّشِيدُ وَمَاتَ الْطَاعَةُ وَتَعَلَّبَ عَلَي سَمَرْقَنَدَ - فَتَحَرَجُ ٱلرَّشِيدُ وَمَاتَ بِطُوسَ وَكَانَ هَذَا ٱلرَّافِعُ قَدْ خَرَجَ وَخَلَعُ ٱلطَّاعَةُ وَتَعَلَّبَ عَلَي سَمَرْقَنَدَ - فَتَحَرَجُ ٱلرَّشِيدُ وَكَانَ هَذَا ٱلرَّافِعُ قَدْ خَرَجَ وَخَلَعُ ٱلطَّاعَةُ وَتَعَلَّبَ عَلَي سَمَرَقَنَدَ - فَتَحَرَجُ ٱلرَّشِيدُ وَكَانَ هَذَا ٱلرَّافِعُ قَدْ خَرَجَ وَخَلَعُ ٱلطَّاعَةُ وَتَعَلَّبَ عَلَي سَمَرَقَنَدَ - فَتَحَرَجُ ٱلرَّشِيدُ وَكَانَ هَذَا ٱللَّهُ فَمَاتَ بِطُوسَ "and Rashīd died at Tas, indeed, had (previously) revolted, and had shaken off his obedience, and had conquered Samarkand; and Rashīd in person went forth against him, and died at Tūs." Here we see that in consequence of the particle بَدَد when it occurs for the second time in the preceding extract, throws the three following preterites جَرَجَ, مَرَجَ مَعَلَيْ into the pluperfect tense.

- a. The particle الله, when placed after كان , has a similar effect to that of قد on the preterites that follow in the same sentence; that is, it throws them all into the pluperfect tense; thus, for example: "كَانَ لَمَّا بَلَحُ صَلَاحَ الدّينِ خَبَرُ ٱلْحَدُو فَصَدِهِ عَكَّا جَمَعَ ٱلْأَمَرَاء and when the news of the march of the enemy towards 'Akkā had reached Ṣalāḥu-d-Dīn (Saladin), he had assembled the Amīrs." In such instances as these, however, the reader must be mainly guided by the purport of the context.
- 305. When the particle j "if," expressive of a supposition, is followed by two correlative sentences, each having its verb in the preterite tense, the first of such preterites is to be rendered by the pluperfect of the indicative, and the second, to which is prefixed the particle j, by the preterite of the subjunctive; as, j "if I had known this, assuredly

I should have admonished thee; " لَوْ هَدَانَا ٱللَّهُ لَهُدَيْنَاكُم "if God had directed us, assuredly we should have directed you." If, however, the second member of the sentence be negative, the aorist is used with the particle "not," which, as we explained in § 99, gives to the aorist the power of the preterite; thus, وَ اللَّهُ عَامُنَا لَمْ يَمُتُ أَخِي "if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."

a. If after والمعدد the verb of the first member of the proposition is in the aorist tense, and that of the second in the preterite, they take a future signification, and the first may be translated by the past subjunctive, and the second by the future conditional; thus, "if the miser touched the palm of Yaḥya, his soul would have become generous in bestowing gifts." After the compound particle "أَوْلًا عَلَيْ الله of the first of the correlative propositions is frequently understood, but the construction of the second clause is not thereby affected; thus, "had it not been 'Alī (i.e. for 'Alī), verily 'Umar would have perished."

306. In a correlative proposition the negative particle in not," gives to the preterite of the first clause a future signification, especially when the second clause has a subjunctive or conditional sense; as in the following example: "I will not taste of your food, unless you will promise me that you will not inconvenience yourselves on my account." The peculiar effect of is further observable in phrases expressive of a declaration on oath; as may be seen in the following sentence, viz.:

آلَيْتُ لا خَامَرَتَّنِي ٱلْخَمْرُ مَا عَلِقَت - رُوحِي بِجِسْمِي وَ أَلْفَاظِي بِاءَفْصَاحِي "I have sworn (I swear) that wine shall not disturb me, while my soul is in my body, and my words in my power of speaking."

- a. When the negative particle I has been preceded by another negative proposition in which the particles in and have been employed, the I loses all temporal influence on the following preterites; thus, بَلُوتُ مِنَ ٱلْعَجَائَبَ مَا لَمْ يَرَةُ ٱلْرَادِّنَ وَلَا رَوَاهُ ٱلْرَادِينَ "I have experienced in (things) marvellous, what no spectators have ever seen, and (what) no narrators have related." The compound particles المُولاً, and المُولاً (§ 195), in which I is the last member, have no influence on the tenses that immediately follow.
- 307. When the conditional particle "إِنْ أَنْ " precedes the preterite, the latter then acquires the force of the future or subjunctive; as, كُتِبَ عَلَيكُمْ إِذَا حَضَرَ أَحَدَكُمُ ٱلْمُوْتُ إِنْ تَرَكَ خَيرًا ٱلْوَصِيَّةُ, "it hath been written to you, that when death hath approached unto one of you, if he (shall or should) leave property (let there be) a will." If the verb كَانَ should come between إِنَّ عَمْدُ مَنْ اللهُ عَمْدُ وَمَنْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ وَجَنَيْتُ وَجَنَيْتُ وَجَنَيْتُ وَمَنْتُ أَوْ جَنَيْتُ وَعَمْدُونَ وَاللهُ إِنْ كُنْتُمْ إِيَّاهُ تَعَبُدُونَ "give thanks to God, if it be him you serve."
 - a. When the particle of comes before two correlative propositions, which the first is conditional and the second dependent on the first, ne verbs, if in the preterite, may be rendered, the first by the present abjunctive, and the second by the simple future indicative; thus, "if I do that, I shall lose my proerty; "أَنْ فَكُلْتُ ذَلِكَ ضَيَّعْتُ مَالِي "if you tell me, I will tell unto you." he same rule holds after the particle المنافقة للمنافقة للمنا

308. The particle الفاء "when" gives to the preterite a future signification; thus, اذَا جَآءَ وَعَدُ ٱلْآخِرَةِ حِينًا بِكُمْ أَفِيعًا "when the promise of the future state shall have come (to be realized), we will assemble you together." If الحَالِي be followed by two correlative clauses expressive of a general statement by means of two successive preterites, the latter, in both clauses, are to be translated by our present indicative; thus, for example: الفاء وَالْمُورِي الْمُورِي الْمُورِي "when Yaḥya undertakes the affair, the difficulty becomes easy." It is needless to add, however, that in the narration of past events (as may be known by the context), the Arabic preterite, even when preceded by افراء must necessarily be rendered into English by our simple past tense; thus, إِذَا رَأَوْا تَجَارَةً أَوْ لَهُوا آنَفَتُوا إِلَيْهَا "when they saw (a chance of) doing business, or of gambling, they dispersed themselves for that purpose."

On the Use and Application of the Aorist.

310. This tense is improperly called "the future" in most grammars and dictionaries, in imitation of the Hebrew grammarians. I consider the term Aorist (as used by De Sacy) the more appropriate, inasmuch as this tense is employed to express not only futurity, but also time past or present, according to circumstances.

- a. The aorist, as a general rule, expresses our present of the indicative, definite, or indefinite, except in such instances as we pointed out in § 99, etc. This is especially the case when it is preceded by the negative particle نَّ "not;" as, عَلَيْكُي ٱلْإِنْسَانُ بِشَهَادَةِ أَهْلِ بَيْتِهُ مِنْ الْإِنْسَانُ بِشَهَادَةِ أَهْلِ بَيْتِهُ مِنْ الْإِنْسَانُ بِشَهَادَةِ أَهْلِ بَيْتُهُ وَمَ الْإِنْسَانُ بِشَهَادَةِ الْعَلِي الْمُونِيَّمِ الْاَلْمُ مِنَ الْكِتَابِ وَ يَشْتَرُونَ بِهِ ثَمُنَا قَلِيلًا اُولائِكَ لَى الْمُونِيَّمِ اللَّهُ مِنَ ٱلْكَتَابِ وَ يَشْتَرُونَ بِهِ ثَمُنَا قَلِيلًا اُولائِكَ لَكَ اللهُ مِنَ ٱلْكَتَابِ وَ يَشْتَرُونَ بِهِ ثَمُنَا قَلِيلًا اُولائِكَ لَا اللهُ مِنَ ٱلْكَتَابِ وَ يَشْتَرُونَ بِهِ ثَمُنَا قَلِيلًا اُولائِكَ لَا اللهُ مِنَ ٱللّهُ يَوْمُ ٱلْقِيَامَةُ وَلا يُزَكِّيهِمُ اللّهُ يَوْمُ ٱلْقِيَامَةُ وَلا يُزَكِّيهِمُ اللّهُ يَوْمُ ٱلْقِيَامَةُ وَلا يُزَكِّيهِمُ اللهُ يَوْمُ ٱلْقِيَامَةُ وَلا يُزَكِّيهِمُ اللّهُ يَوْمُ ٱللّهُ يَوْمُ ٱلْقِيَامَةُ وَلا يُزَكِّيهِمُ اللّهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللّهُ يَوْمُ ٱلْقِيَامَةُ وَلا يُزَكِّيهِمُ اللّهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ الله influence of the particle $\sqrt{3}$, thus in Kur,ān, ii. 45, we have: الْقُوا يَوْمًا لَا تَجْزِي نَفْسٌ عَنْ نَفْسٍ شَيًّا وَلَا تُقْبَلُ مِنْهَا شَفَاعَةٌ (fear ye a day when (one) soul shall not in the least make satisfaction for another soul, neither shall any be accepted from them."

- 312. The aorist is frequently employed after the preterite of another verb, to which it then serves as a complement, without the intervention of any conjunction, in which case it may be translated by our infinitive, or by our subjunctive preceded by "that," "to the end that," etc.; thus, المُعَنَّ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَنْ مَا يَعْمُ اللَّهُ عَنْ اللَّهُ عَنْ مَا يَعْمُ وَاقِعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقُولُ وَاقْعُ وَاقُوا وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاقْعُ وَاق
- 313. We have shewn, § 304, that the preterite of the substantive verb غرض, when combined with that of any other verb, gives the latter the sense of a pluperfect tense. When غرض is combined with the agrist of another verb, the two together have the effect of the Latin imperfect indicative; thus, غرض نه کست "he was writing." Should the proposition, aorist عند (of عَلَى) put before any other aorist, gives to the latter a similar meaning. When one or more verbs in the preterite have gone before, they communicate that sense to the following aorist, without the intervention of عَلَى مَعْ مَعْ مُعْ وَلَى الله وَ الله وَالله و

- a. Sometimes the acrist bears the signification of the past indefinite, without being preceded by either the preterite or the acrist of the verb عَلَا وَ اللّهُ عِلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللّهُ عَلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللّهُ عِلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللّهُ عَلَى اللهُ الل
- 314. In addition to the pluperfect and imperfect, which the Arabs express by prefixing the preterite of the verb to the preterite and a rist of other verbs, they form another tense, which in our grammars is called the future perfect, by prefixing the acrist of كَانَ to a preterite, sometimes inserting the particle عَدُ between the two verbs; for example: يَعُولُونَ مَتَي هَذَا ٱلْوَعدُ إِن كُنتُمْ صَادِقِينَ قُلْ عَسَى أَنْ يَكُونَ رَدِفَ لَكُمْ بَعْضُ يَعُولُونَ مَتَي هَذَا ٱلْوَعدُ إِن كُنتُمْ صَادِقِينَ قُلْ عَسَى أَنْ يَكُونَ رَدِفَ لَكُمْ بَعْضُ 'they say, when will this menace (take effect) if you be trustworthy? Say thou perhaps somewhat of that which you wish to hasten, will have (already) mounted behind you." أَغِيرُوا عَلَي نَعَمِهمْ فَلِنَا خُذَهُ فَنكُونُ قَدْ أَخَذْنَا عِوضًا مِمَّا صُنِعَ بِنَا prefixing the acrist of two verbs; for example: يَعْمِهُ اللهُ عَلَى مَا يُعْمَلُونَ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى نَعْمِهُمْ فَلِنَا خُذَهُ فَنكُونَ قَدْ أَخَذْنَا عِوضًا مِمَّا صُنِعَ بِنَا prefixing the acrist of the two verbs; for example:

315. We have already pointed out the three modifications to which the aorist is subject in consequence of certain particles which may precede it. The aorist apocopated, which drops the vowel of the final radical, etc., § 99, is employed in conditional, hypothetic, or retributive propositions; thus, "مَن يُحُسِنُ إِلَيْك أَحْسِنَ إِلْك أَحْسِنَ إِلَيْك أَحْسِنَ إِلْك أَحْسِنَ إِلَيْك أَحْسِنَ إِلَيْك أَحْسِنَ إِلَيْك أَحْسِنَ إِلْك خَرْد أَحْسِنَ إِلْك خَرْد أَحْسِنَ إِلْك أَحْسُنَ أَخْسُ أَلْكُ أَلْم أَحْسُنَ أَحْسُنَ إِلْك أَحْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلَيْك أَحْسُ إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَعْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلَى إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلَيْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلَيْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلَيْكُ أَحْسُنَ إِلْكُ أَحْسُلُكُ أَحْسُلُكُ أَعْلَى إِلْكُ أَحْسُلُكُ أَحْسُلُكُ أَعْلَى إِلْكُ أَعْلَى إِلَيْكُ أَلْكُ أَحْسُلُكُ أَعْلَى إِلَى إِلَيْكُ أَعْلَى إِلَيْكُ أَعْلَى إِلَى إِلَيْكُ أَلِكُ أَلِكُ أ

tional future, the latter is put in the apocopated form; thus, "assist me, (and) I will assist thee."

- a. When the particle ن is prefixed to the apocopated aorist, the ter expresses command, and the i loses its vowel after the conjunctions and i. When i comes before, it denotes prohibition; thus, ن مَنْكُمُ ٱلشَّهُرَ فَلَيْتُ "and whosoever among you shall see the onth, let him fast (during) it." وَالشَّجَرَةُ الشَّجَرَةُ "approach not u (two) this tree."
- b. The aorist apocopated preceded by the particle لَمَّ "not," and لَمَّا رَامَ عَلَى "not yet," always bears a past signification; thus, for example: الْتَمَسَ شَيَّا لِيَاكُلُهُ عَلَمَ يَ "he sought for something that he might eat but found (it) not;" so, الصَّارَامَ عَلَى ٱلطَّلُوعِ لَمْ يَقْدِرٌ, so, "when he atnpted to ascend, he was not able."
- 316. The aorist antithetic, whose peculiarity is to change a damma of the third radical into fatha, and to reject the al of the terminations (except in the feminine plural)—responds to the Latin present subjunctive. In § 100 we ve given a list of such particles as require this form of a aorist after them, on the more important of which we all now add a few observations. Their general signification notes "scope," "end," "aim," or "purpose," like our njunctions "that," "in order that," "to the end that," if thus, أَحْبُ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأَكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأَكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَلَى تَعْمِي أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عِنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عَنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَأْكُلُ عَنْدِي فِي هَذِهِ ٱللَّيْلَةِ أَنْ تَعْمِي أَنْ تَعْمِي أَنْ تَعْمِي أَنْ تَعْمِي أَنْ يَالْعُونُ لَهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللللّهُ الللّهُ
- .. When the particle أَنَّ is followed by y "not," as in الله (for أَنَّ + y), it still retains its governing power, and requires the aorist antithetic after it. If the verb following أَعَلَمُ أَنْ يَنْصُرُ is intended to express simple, present, or future time, the regular form of the aorist is employed; as, "I know that he sleeps;" "I know that he will assist." After verbs expressive of "doubt," "opinion," "thinking," "considering," etc., such as زَعَمَ , حَسَبَ , ظَنَّ , etc., the regular form of the aorist is generally employed, but the antithetic form is sometimes to be met with."

- b. It sometimes happens that the particle رَاّ corresponds with our words "that not," "lest" (Lat. no). We are not to conclude, however, that أَن of itself bears a negative sense, but there may occur some word in the proposition which may imply a negation or prohibition; thus, in the Kur,ān ix. 46, we have the following example: لَا يَسْتَأَنُونُكُ ٱلَّذِينَ يُوْمِنُونَ بِاللَّهِ وَالْيَوْمِ ٱللَّهِ وَالْيَّهِ اللَّهِ وَالْيَوْمِ ٱللَّهِ وَالْيَّهِ وَالْيَقُمُ وَالْقُسِيمِ وَالْقُسِيمِ وَالْقُسِيمِ وَالْقُسِيمِ اللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهِ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ
- c. The particles رَا عَلَى عَالَى مَا رَا denoting "that," "to the end that," "in order that," invariably require the aorist antithetic; as, جَاءً كَيْ يَضْرِبُكُ "he came that he might beat thee," or "in order to beat thee." The same rule applies to the compounds المناه على "lest, as also to the conjunction إِلْكُمُ لِللهُ لَهُ اللهُ اللهُ وَمَا اللهُ اللهُولِ اللهُ ا

"inform me that I may fly away from thee;" أَسِرُ حَتَّي تَغِيبَ آلشَّمْسُ "I will march on till the sun sets."

- e. The particles إِذَنَ and إِذَا "good!" "well!" when employed in a conditional sense depending on a preceding proposition, require the antithetic aorist, which then bears a future signification. This will be best understood by the following examples, viz.: "I will come for protection to thee;" when the reply may be, الْذَنَ الْنُونَ الْنَوْنَ الْنُونَ الْنَا الْنَاسُ اللَّهُ الْنَالُونَ الْنَا الْنُونَ الْنَا الْنَاسُ الْنَا الْنَاسُ اللَّهُ الْنَالُونَ الْنَالُونَ الْنَا الْنَاسُ الْنَالُونَ الْنَا الْنَاسُ اللَّهُ الْنَاسُ اللَّهُ الْنَالُونَ الْنَالُونُ الْنَالُونَ الْنَالُونَ الْنَالُونَ الْ always requires the aorist apocopated, and gives it a future signification; thus, Kur,ān ii. 74: لَنْ تَمَسَّنَا ٱلنَّارُ إِلَّا أَيَّامًا مَعْدُودَةً "the fire (of Gehenna) shall by no means touch us, except for certain limited days."

f. When the conjunctions indicating, join two propositions, indicating, in the second, an immediate dependence on the first, of which it is a consequence, they require to be followed by the agrist antithetic; as, do not enter any" لَآتَدْ تُحُلُوا بَيتًا غَيْرَ بُيُوتِكُمْ حَتَّى تَسْتَأْنِسُوا وَ تُسَلِّمُوا عَلَى أَهْلِهِ house, except your own houses, until you ask permission, and salute مَنَعَ دُخُولَ آمْرَأَةٍ إِلَى دَارِ آلْخِلَافَةِ حَتَّى يَعْرِفَ مَنْ هِيَ "; its inhabitants "he forbade any woman entering the palace of the Caliphate until he knew who she was;" إِغْفِرْلِي يَا رَبِّي فَأَنْخُلَ ٱلْجَنَّةَ "pardon me, O is "is هَلْ زَيْدٌ فِي آلدَّارِ فَأَمْضِيَ إِلَيْهِ ":Lord! that I may enter paradise Zaid in his house, that I may go to him?" The particle , when followed by a negative imperative, corresponds with the Latin "ne," and the English "lest;" as, فَأَهْلِكَ فَأَهْلِكَ "punish me not, lest I perish." The chief difference between i and is that the former expresses the order of things, which the latter does not. When either of them is a mere connective of sentences not dependent on each other, it has no influence on the verb that follows.

317. The paragogic aorist is used always with a future signification; and is formed by affixing or simply to the aorist antithetic, as may be seen in § 101. It is employed in commanding, urging, forbidding, wishing, asking, or strongly asserting; as may be seen in the Kur,ān, cii. 6: تَرَوْنَ ٱلْجَعِيمُ ثُمَّ لَتُرُونًا عَيْنَ ٱلْيَقِينِ ثُمَّ لَتَسْفَلُنَّ يَوْمَرُفِهُ عَنِ ٱلنَّقِيمِ ye shall see hell, again (I say) ye shall surely see it with ihe eye of certainty; then shall ye be examined on that day concerning the pleasures (in which ye had indulged during life)." It is also employed after the particle إِنَّ اللهِ (compounded of إِنَّ عَا يَاتَيَنَّكُمْ رُسُلُ مِنْكُمْ : (thus, Kur. vii. 33: مَنْ أُونَا يَاتَّيَنَّكُمْ رُسُلُ مِنْكُمْ : (O children of Adam, verily apostles from among yourselves shall come unto you." It is also used when preceded by the particle فَالَ فَيعِزَّتِكَ لَأُعُويِنَّهُمْ أَجْمعِينَ "by God he will assist;" وَاللّهِ يَنْصُرَنَّ اللهُ يَنْصُرَنَّ أَلُو لَيْعِزَّتِكَ لَأُعُويِنَّهُمْ أَجْمعِينَ "he (the devil) said, verily (I swear) by thine eminence that I will deceive them all."

318. The imperative is used only in the second persons singular, dual, and plural of the active voice, as may be seen n the paradigm § 94 and in § 103. The first and third persons of the active voice are made imperative by means of the acrist as we have just shewn. In its use and application the imperative has no peculiarity beyond what we have already mentioned in § 103.

Use and Application of the Infinitive.

319. The infinitive or verbal noun, as we stated in § 105, s frequently combined in a sentence with its own verb in a dverbial sense, with a view to give additional energy of the expression; thus, مُوسَى تَكُلِيمًا "God spake into Moses saying;" so in this passage from the Kur. lii. 9: "the day on which the neavens shall be shaken with commotion, and the mountains shall utterly move away" (lit. "move away by moving"). It is also used adverbially to express "purpose," "intention," or "design," etc., like the Latin gerund in dum; as follows: "Zaid stood up for (the purpose of) doing honour to 'Amru."

- 320. When the subject of a sentence alone is expressed, or the complement alone, they may be governed in the genitive by the infinitive of a transitive verb; thus, Kur,ān ix. 115: وَكَانَ إِنْسَعْفَارُ إِنْهِمِهُ لَابِهِهِ "and there was a prayer for pardon (on the part) of Abraham for his father;" where we see that Abraham, the subject, is governed in the genitive by the infinitive and in the genitive by the infinitive of the sentence being "God," understood, which will be more manifest if we express the sentence by means of the finite verb; thus, السَّعْفَرُ الْرَهِيمُ ٱللَّهُ لَابِيهِ "Abraham begged pardon of God for his father." Again, in the Kur. xli. 49: اللهُ الْبَيهُ الْمُسْانُ مِنْ دُعَادُ ٱلْمُعْفِرُ الْرَهِيمُ ٱللهُ لَابِيهِ "man is not wearied in asking for what is good" (or "for happiness").

he ear." When both the subject and object connected with he infinitive are expressed, the subject is usually put in the enitive, and the object in the accusative; thus, for example: it was in this year that the "كَانَ فَتَلُ ٱلْخَلْبَفَةِ جَعْفَرًا فِي هَذِهُ ٱلسَّنَا aliph put Ja'far to death," literally, "the slaying Ja'far (on he part) of the Caliph took place in this year;" so, likewise a memorial of the mercy of my lord to- ' ذِكْرُ رَحْمَةِ رَبِّي عَبَّدَ vards his slave." The preceding is the most common mode of onstruction, but the following is by no means unusual; that is say, the object is put in the genitive and the subject in he nominative. This is more especially the rule when the bject is a pronoun and the subject a noun; for example: he forbade '' مَنَعَ آلنَّاسَ كَانَّةً مِنْ مُخَاطَبَتِهِ أَحَدٌ وَمُكَاتَبَتِهِ بِسَيِّدِنَا وَمَولًا nto all people whatsoever to style him our lord and our naster whether in speaking to him, or in writing to him;" a pilgrimage to the (holy) مَحْ ٱلْبَيْتِ مَن ٱسْتَطَاعَ إلَيهِ سَبِ ouse by whomsoever it is practicable."

322. Infinitives of intransitive verbs govern the subject here being no object) in the genitive case; for example: "the falling of Zaid to the earth "the falling of Zaid to the earth ook place in this manner." As a general rule the infinitives intransitive verbs follow the construction of such verbs ith regard to the use of the prepositions; as in the following samples: نَا لِي تُدُرَةٌ عَلَي ذَاك "I have not the power over nat," i.e. "I cannot do that;" مَا لِي تَدُرَةٌ عَلَي ذَاك "the expulsion its inhabitants from it." The infinitives of abstract or subantive verbs have their subject in the genitive and their attribute in the accusative; thus, كُونُ ٱلْإِنْسَانِ مَخْلُوقًا هُوَ مِنَ أُسُولِ ٱلْدِينِ that man must have been created is one of the foundations of religion." Sometimes an infinitive derived from a transitive verb is employed in a vague and indeterminate manner, without a complement; as مَدُّ عَنَ سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهِ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهِ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهِ عَنْ سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهِ عَنْ سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهُ عَنْ سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهُ عَنْ سَبِيلِ اللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهُ عَنْ سَبِيلِ اللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ ٱللَّهُ عَنْ سَبِيلِ اللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ اللَّهُ عَنْ سَبِيلِ اللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ اللَّهُ وَكُفُرُ بِهِ أَكْبَرُ عِنْدُ اللَّهُ وَلُونُ اللَّهُ وَلَا اللَّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَيْهُ وَلُو اللَّهُ وَلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلُونُ اللَّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَيْهُ وَاللَّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهِ اللّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهِ اللّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَا لَهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَيْهُ اللّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ إِلَيْهُ إِلَيْهُ وَلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ إِلَيْهُ اللّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلَا إِلّٰهُ إِلَيْهُ اللّهُ وَلَا إِلَيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلَا اللّهُ وَلَا لَا إِلَيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِيْهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلَا إِلّٰ اللّهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلَا اللّهُ وَلَا إِلْهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلَا لَهُ وَاللّهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلِي اللّهُ وَلِ

Use and Application of the Participles.

- 323. Present participles follow the construction of those verbs from which they are derived; thus, اعَمْرُو ٱلْقَاتِلُ أَبُوهُ مَحْمُودًا ''Amru whose father slew Maḥmūd;'' which is the same as if we said زَيْدٌ نَاكِحُ ٱلْبَنُهُ غَدًا زُبَيْدَة So عَمْرُو ٱللَّذِي قَدْ قَتَلَ ٱبُوهُ مَحْمُودًا Zaid whose son is to wed Zubaida to-morrow;'' which comes to the same thing as زَيْدٌ ٱلَّذِي يَنْكُمُ ٱلْبَنُهُ غَدًا زُبَيْدَة , by employing the agrist of the verb
- 324. The present participle or noun of agency of a transitive verb admits of two modes of construction. 1. It may govern the object in the accusative ease, like the verb from which it has been derived; as الكاظئون الغيط "those who control (their) anger;" مَا أَنْتَ بِتَابِعِ قِبَلَتُهُمْ "thou shalt not follow (with thy face) their Kibla. 2. It may govern the object in the genitive ease; as الناس خامع الناس "O our Lord verily thou shalt assemble mankind;" كَا نَفُسِ ذَالِقَةُ ٱلْمَرْتِ "every (creature) living shall taste of death." In this last mode the noun of agency may take the article the object or complement be also definite; thus, "آلفّارِبُ ٱلْعَبْدِ "the striker of the slave;" اَلْفَّارِبُ رَأْسِ ٱلْعَبْدِ "the striker of the head of the slave." It would be incorrect, however, here to say اَلْفَّارِبُ عَبْدِ وَالْفَارِبُ عَبْدِ وَيُدِ nor الفَّارِبُ عَبْدِ وَيُدِ nor الفَّارِبُ عَبْدِ وَيُدِ الفَّارِبُ عَبْدِ وَيُدِ اللَّهَارِبُ اللَّهُ ال

- a. When the noun of agency governs its complement in the genitive and this complement is accompanied by another noun which ought to agree with it in case, such other noun may be put in the genitive agreeably to the grammatical concord, or it may be put in the accusative as the object; thus, مَنْ عَنْ حَامِ وَمَالًا مَنْ نَهْ مَنْ "whoever rises up (to labour) is a seeker of rank or of wealth." So, Kur,ān vi. 96: إِنَّ ٱللَّهُ فَالِقُ ٱلْمُعَبِّ وَٱلنَّوْعِ بُخُرِجُ ٱلْمَيْ مِنَ ٱلْمَيْتِ وَالنَّوْمِ حُسَانًا وَالشَّمْسَ وَٱلْقَمَر حُسَانًا وَالشَّمْسَ وَالْقَمَر حُسَانًا وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَالْعَمَر حُسَانًا وَالشَّمْسَ وَالْقَمَالُ وَاللَّهُ وَالْعَمَر حُسَانًا وَاللَّهُ وَالْعَمَالُ وَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَالْعَمَالُ وَاللَّهُ وَال
- b. When the noun of agency governs the accusative case it retains its nunation in the singular as well as the final and of the dual and plural as we see in the first quoted expressions of the last paragraph. Sometimes, however, both the nunation and final are rejected, as if the two words were in a state of regimen, (vide § 282); thus, الْنَصَّارِبُوا زَيْدًا "the two (men) striking Zaid;" "the (three or more men) striking Zaid." If, however, the object thus put in the accusative be a pronoun, it may be either affixed directly to the participle, or the particle (§ 290 c), may intervene between them. When the pronoun is affixed directly, the participle loses its nunation in the singular; but may optionally retain or reject the final ن of the dual and plural; hence we may say either "الْتَصَّارِ بَاهُ or الْتَصَّارِ بُولَكُ or الْتَصَّارِ بُولَكُ or الْتَصَّارِ بُولَكُ or الْتَصَّارِ بُولَكُ "the (three or more) strikers of thee."

325. The noun of agency of a verb doubly transitive, i.e. a verb governing two accusatives, may follow the rule of the verb from which it is derived, by putting the two objects in the accusative; or it may govern the first of its complements in the genitive and the second in the accusative. أَنَا كَاْسِي زَيْدٍ ثُوَّبًا مُّفَخَّرًا or أَنَا كَاسِ زِيْدَا ثُوَّبَا مُّفَخَّرًا may say either "I have clothed Zaid with a precious garment." So we هَلْ أَنْتَ ظَانٌ عَمْرِو عَاقِلًا or هَلْ أَنْتَ ظَانٌ عَمْرًا عَاقِلًا may say either "dost thou consider 'Amru a wise man?" We may further observe that when the participle, thus doubly transitive, governs its first complement in the genitive and its second in the accusative, the latter may be placed between the participle and the word governed in the genitive; thus, refusing his bounty to him who is desti-tute." So, in Kur,ān xiv. 48: مَانِحُ فَضَالُهُ ٱلْمُحْتَاجِ "do not imagine that God will act contrary to his promise (made) to his own apostles."

326. When the present participle expresses a quality inherent in the subject, and independent of any reference to time, it may govern its subject in the genitive; thus we may say زَيْدُ ٱلْقَالِمُ ٱلْأَبِّ ٱلْأَبِّ ٱلْأَبِّ ٱلْأَبِّ ٱلْأَبِّ ٱلْأَبِّ ٱلْمَالِيَةِ تَعْلَىٰ ٱلْمُ ٱلْمُعْلِينِ "Zaid, whose father is standing." This mode of construction solder takes place, except when the participle is derived from a neuter verb. It is sometimes found, however, with participles that come from transitive verbs, when such participles are used as mere adjectives; thus, اَلَّاحِمُ الْفَلْبِ "the merciful of heart." The noun of agency accompanied by the article أَلُ is equivalent to the relative pronoun and a verb; thus, هَذَا ٱلَّذِي فَتَلَ أَبُوهُ عَمَّرًا this is he whose father killed 'Amru."

- a. The present participles of intransitive verbs are applied, with regard to the use of the prepositions, in the same manner as the verbs from which they came; thus, كُلُّ لَهُ قَانِتُونَ "all are obedient unto him;" وَمَا ٱللَّهُ بِعَافِلٍ عَمَّا تَعْمَلُونَ "God is not heedless of what ye are doing."
- 328. The construction of the passive participle, and of verbal adjectives derived from the passive voice, may be more clearly explained as follows:—1. By substituting, for the participle or adjective, the verb itself, either in the preterite or the agrist of the passive voice. 2. In restoring, if necessary, the subject or nominative which may have been understood. 3. Lastly, in substituting, for the article of, the relative pronoun آلَذِي, or if there be no article the relatives or مَن ; as may be seen in the following examples, viz., Kur. ٱلْوَالِدَاتُ يُرْضِعْنَ ۚ أَوْلَادَهُنَّ حَوْلَيْنِ كَامِلْبَنِ وَعَلَي مَوْلُودِ لَهُ رِزْقُهُنَّ : 238 ii. "the mothers shall give suck unto their children for two years entire, and it is incumbent upon the father (to con-تَلَي مَوْلُودِ لَهُ where عَلَي مَوْلُودِ لَهُ where عَلَي مَوْلُودِ لَهُ is equivalent to عَلَي ٱلرَّجُلِ ٱلَّذِي وُلِدَ لَهُ وَلَدٌ لَهُ وَلَدٌ لَهُ وَلَدٌ لَهُ وَلَدٌ Whom a child is born." So, 234 : لَا تُنْصَارُ وَالِدَةُ بِوَلَدِهَا وَلاَ مَوْلُوذَ لَهُ بِوَلَدِهِ "a mother shall not be compelled (to do what is unreasonable) on account of her child, nor shall a father be compelled on مَنْ وُلِدَ لَهُ وَلَدٌ dis equivalent to مَوْلُودٌ لَهُ account of his child;" where "he to whom a child has been born." So Kur. i. 6 and 7: إِهْدِنَا ٱلصِّرَاطَ ٱلْمُسْتَقِيمَ صِرَاطَ ٱلَّذِينَ أَنْعَمْتَ عَلَيْهِمْ غَيْرِ ٱلْمُغْصُوبِ عَلَيْهِمْ "direct us in the straight way, the way of those to whom thou hast been gracious, and who have not been subject unto thine anger." In this passage the three last words, viz., against ''آلَّذِينَ لَمْ يُغْضَبُ عَلَيْهِمْ are equivalent to غَيْرِ ٱلْمُغْصُوبِ عَلَيْهِمْ whom there has been no inveighing wrathfully;" or more exactly in Latin, contra quos non est invectum cum iracundia.

Concord of a Verb with its Nominative.

329. We have already mentioned in § 250 that, as a general rule (liable, however, to numerous exceptions), the verb, in a simple sentence or proposition comes first, then the nominative or subject, and lastly the object. When the verb thus precedes the subject, if the latter be singular and masculine, the verb always agrees with it in gender and number; thus, "أَسْسَاءُ آلشَّيْطَانُ ذِكْرَرَته Satan made him forget the naming of his Lord." If, however, the subject be a feminine singular, the verb must agree with it in number, but not necessarily in If the subject be really of the female sex, and if it immediately follow the verb, the verb must then be in the feminine; thus, قَالَتِ آمْرَءُهُ ٱلْعَزِيزِ the wife of 'Azīz said." But if, however, any word intervenes between the verb and its feminine nominative that follows it, the verb may be used in the masculine; thus, " إِنَّ آمَرَءَ غَرَّهُ فِيكُنَّ وَاحِدَةٌ verily a man whom one of you hath led astray." In such instances, however, grammarians consider it to be the more correct mode to put the verb in the feminine.

- 332. When the subject is a regular plural masculine, the verb must not be put in the feminine, but it may be so with بُنُونَ plural of إِنِّنَ "a son," and with such like words; which, though having the termination of regular masculine plurals, do not preserve the forms of their singulars, for these plurals are in fact broken ones; as تَالَتُ بَنُوا إِسْرَاتِيلُ "the children of Israel said." The verb may also be put in the feminine, and even in the plural feminine, when the noun following is a collective one; as "" a tribe" or "nation;" or when it is "bird," طَنْرُ "sheep;" غَنَمُ "bird," etc.; as تَأْكُلُ ٱلطَّبْرُ مِنْهُ "the birds eat thereof;" so, Kur. ii. 107; فَالَتِ ٱلنَّهُودُ لَيْسَتِ ٱلنَّصَارَي عَلَى شَيْءً وَقَالَتِ ٱلنَّصَارَي لَيْسَتِ ٱلْيُهُودُ عَلَى the Jews have said (that) the Christians are (grounded) شَيَّ نَامُ نُونَ on nothing; and the Christians say the Jews are grounded on nothing," i.e. "the one sect accuses the other of not possessing the true religion." If the subject be a mere grammatical or conventional feminine, or a feminine broken plural, the verb preceding it may be put in the singular feminine, or even in the singular masculine; thus, فَالَ نِسْوَةٌ فِي آلْمَدِينَةِ "women in the city said;" فَأَصَابَهُمْ سَيأتَ مَا كَسَبُوا "and the evils which they have earned assail them." Occasionally, though rarely, a regular feminine plural may have the preceding verb in the singular masculine; thus, Kur, an lx. 10: when believing women " إِذَا جَاءِكُمُ ٱلْمُؤْمِنَاتُ مُهَاجِرَاتِ فَامْتَحِنُوهُنَّ come unto you seeking refuge then plight ye faith with them."

333. The names of Arab tribes are generally of the feminine gender, but as collectives they are not unfrequently found with their preceding verb in the masculine plural; thus, نَجُمَّعَتُ عَامِرُ بَنُ صَعْصَعَةَ عُفَيْلٌ وَنُشَيْرُ وَتَشَاكُوا مَا يُلْحِقُهُمْ مِنْ سَنِف الدَّوْلَةُ "and there congregated together (the tribe of) 'Āmir son of Ṣa'ṣa', of 'Ukail, and of Kushair, and they complained one after another, of what befel them from (the conduct of) Saifu-d-Daula."

334. The dual follows the same rules of concord as the plural; thus, نَخَلُ ٱلسَّحِنَ مَعَهُ فَتَكَانِ "there entered the prison with him two youths;" فَالَتِ ٱلرَّجُلُنِ "the two men said." Although, as we have just seen, it is usual when the verb precedes the subject to put the verb in the singular, with a dual or plural subject, yet the verb may agree regularly in number and in gender with such subject; thus, رَأَيْنَ ٱلغُوانِي ٱلشَّيبَ لاَحَ بِعَارِضِي "the young damsels have seen the grey hairs glisten upon my face (or cheek)."

335. When the noun which is the subject of the proposition is put in the inchoative case, § 252, and consequently precedes the verb, the latter must agree in gender and number with the noun; thus, " اللَّهُ يُبْدِئُ ٱلْخَلْقَ ثُمَّ يُعِيدُهُ "God produces oreatures, then he gives them life;" هَذِهِ بضَاعَتُنَا رُدُّتُ إِلَيْنا "this money of ours that has been returned unto us;" have the true believing women come " هَلِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنَاتُ رَجَعْنَ back?" The same rule holds when the subject, having been previously expressed, is evidently understood; for example: فَلَمَّا فَرَغَ ٱلشَّيْخُ مِنْ دُعَاثِهِ أَجَالَ خَمْسَهُ فِي وِعَآثِهِ فَأَبْرَزَ مِنْهُ رِقَاعًا قَدْ كُتِبْنَ and when the Shaikh had ceased " بِأَلُوانِ ٱلْأَصَبَاغِ فِي أَوانِ ٱلْفَرَاغ from his prayer, he put his hand into his wallet, and he took out thence sundry papers which had been written in various colours at the time of his leisure." Here we see that the verbs أَجَالَ and أَبْرَزَ are in the singular masculine, the subject being the pronoun هُوَ referring to الشَّيْخُ understood. Again, is the plural feminine, the pronoun هُنَّ being understood, referring to رِمَاعًا "the papers."

- a. It must be observed, however, that if the subject be a broken plural, whether it come from a masculine or a feminine noun, or if it be a regular plural feminine, the verb may be, and usually is, employed in the feminine singular; as may be seen in the following example: الله يَا حَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ عَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ عَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ عَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ عَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَمَامَاتِ ٱللهُ اللهُ اللهُ
- b. If the broken plural be that of rational beings of the masculine gender, the verb may be put in the masculine plural; for example: وَمَا اللّهُ مَلَائِكَةٌ بِاللّهُ اللّهُ مِلَائِكَةٌ بِاللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ مِلَائِكَةٌ بِاللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ مِلَائِكَةٌ بِاللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ
- c. In such compound tenses as are expressed by the union of the verb كُنَ and the preterite or a orist of another verb, if the subject is put between the two verbs, the verb كُنَ follows the rules of concord of the verb which precedes its subject, and the second verb follows those of the verb placed after its subject. When the subject is a collective noun, and precedes the verb, the latter is commonly placed in the plural; thus, وَلَكِنَّ أَكْثُمُ ٱلنَّاسَ لاَ يَشْكُرُونَ "but the generality of men are not grateful;" وَلَكِنَّ أَكْثُمُ ٱلنَّاسَ لاَ يَشْكُرُونَ "some of them are afraid of men."
- 336. The rules which we have hitherto laid down respecting the concord of verbs with their nominatives apply only to

- 337. When the subject consists of several nouns or pronouns singular, the verb may precede them in the plural; as "I and thou came," literally, "we came, I and thou;" or the verb may be put in the singular and agree with the next nominative; thus, تَكُلَّمَتُ مَرْيَمُ وَهُرُونُ فِي مُوسَي "Maryam and Harūn spoke against Moses." When the subject consists of two nouns or pronouns, and precedes the verb, the latter requires the dual number; as in the following example: شَلَّعَفَاتُو وَأَرْنَبُ مَرَّةٌ تَسَابَقًا وَجَعَلًا ٱلْحَدَّ بَيْنَهُمَا ٱلْجَبَلُ "a tortoise and a hare once upon a time contended one with the other (in running) and made the mountain the goal between them." If the subject consists of more than two nouns or pronouns and precedes the verb, the latter is put in the plural; thus, البَطْنُ وَالرَّجُلُلُ تَخَاصَمُوا "the belly and the two feet (once) had a dispute."
- 338. When the subject consists of two or more nouns of different genders, and is placed before the verb, the latter is usually employed in the dual or plural, as the case may be; thus, ٱلْكُسَلُ وَكِثْرَةُ ٱلنَّوْم يُبْعِدَانِ مِنَ ٱللَّه وَيُورِثَانِ ٱلْفَقْر idleness and too much sleep withdraw (men) from God and bequeath (as an inheritance) poverty." If the subject consists of a noun in the singular and another in the plural, provided it be a broken plural, the verb is put in the dual, as in the following sentence: قَاذَا نَفُخُ فِي ٱلصَّورِ نَفَخَةٌ وَاحِدَةٌ وَحُمِلَتِ ٱلْرَضُ وَٱلْحِبَالُ فَدُكَّتَا دَكَّةً وَاحِدَةٌ وَحُمِلَتِ ٱلْرَضُ وَٱلْحِبَالُ فَدُكَّتَا دَكَّةً and when there is sounded on the trumpet a single blast, and the earth and the mountains shall be carried away and shall be broken to pieces."

- 339. When the subject consists of two nouns in a state of regimen, the verb not unfrequently agrees with the word governed, instead of the governing word, which is the general rule; thus, Kur,ān iii. 28: يَوْمَ تَجِدُ كُلُّ نَفْسٍ مَا عَمِلَتَ مِنْ خَيْرٍ ... "on the day when every soul shall find whatever it has done of good;" كُنْتُمْ خَيْرَ أُمَّةٍ أُخْرِجَتْ لِلنَّاسِ "you are the best nation that has been produced from among mankind."
- 340. The verb must always agree with its nominative in person, whether such nominative be expressed or understood, which rule also holds when there are several nominatives of the same person. If, however, the same verb has several subjects of different persons, the verb agrees in person with the nearest subject; and in such case, the first person takes precedence of the other two, and the second of the third; thus, جَمُنَا أَنَا وَأَنْتَ وَأَخَذْنَا حَاجَتَنا مِنْهُ "we have come, I and thou, and we have taken from him what may be necessary for us," where we see the verb put in the first person plural, because its nearest nominative is of that person. Again, in the example, الله مَعَ هَرُونَ بَيْنَ يَدَى الله مَعَ هَرُونَ "thou and thy multitude shall present yourselves before God (lit. between the hands of God) along with Aaron," where the nearest nominative is of the second person and the next to it of the third; hence the verb is put in the second person plural.

Government of Verbs.

- 341. A transitive verb generally governs its complement or object in the accusative case, without the intervention of any particle; as in the sentences "Zaid struck" "Zaid struck" "Amru;" مُمْرَا فَطُ "'he does not drink wine at all." When, however, by an inversion, the object of the transitive verb precedes it, the object has the preposition مِنْ اللَّهُ وِيَا تَعَبِّرُونَ اللَّهُ وَيَا تَعَبِّرُونَ ("if you will interpret the vision."

fending the cause of God and the true faith); أَخَذُرا ٱلْدِينَ لَعْبًا
"they received the (true) faith as a (matter for) jesting."
There are, however, other modes of construction applicable to this class of verbs, as may be seen by the following examples:
زَيْدٌ ظَنَنْتُ عَاقِلٌ طَنَنْتُ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ لَا للهُ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ عَاقِلٌ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ للهُ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ للهُ عَاقِلٌ اللهُ للهُ اللهُ للهُ اللهُ اللهُ

- 344. It sometimes happens that the same noun may be the subject of one proposition and the object of another that follows it. If the verb which governs the noun as its object comes first, and then the verb to which that noun is the subject, the objective case is left to be understood, and the noun appears only in the nominative; as, مُرَرَّتُ وَ مَرَّرِينِي زَيْدٌ (Zaid), and Zaid struck me; " عَمْرُوّ "I passed (by 'Amru), and 'Amru passed by me." It is permitted, however, according to some grammarians, to give an affixed pronoun as its object to the first verb; thus, غَرَبْتُهُ وَ ضَرَبْتِي زَيْدٌ . If the verb to which the noun is the subject comes first, and then that which governs the object, the latter is in like manner suppressed, and the usual rules are observed in the agreement of the first verb with the subject; thus, فَرَبْتُ وَ ضَرَبْتُ زَيْدُانِ the two Zaids struck me, and I struck (them)."

345. The noun may also be put in the accusative case, the first verb having the termination that indicates its agreement with the understood pronoun, which represents that noun in the nominative case; as, فَرَبُونِي وَ ضَرَبْتُ ٱلزَّيْدِينَ for ٱلزَّيْدِينَ for ٱلزَّيْدِينَ وَ ضَرَبْتُ ٱلزَّيْدِينَ struck them." If such a verb be employed as requires a subject and an attribute, like کاری and شار he" or "it was," or "became;" and if that attribute be common to two propositions, such as "I was ill, and Zaid was ill," the attribute may be given only once, or may be represented by a separate pronoun; as, كُنْتُ وَكَانَ زَيْدٌ مَرِيضًا "I was (ill,) and Zaid was, ill," or, كُنْتُ إِنَّاهُ وَ كَانَ زَيِّدٌ مَرِيضًا "I was so, and Zaid was ill," or الله عنه الله عنه 'I was, and Zaid was, ill ;" that is, "I was ill, and so was Zaid." The first of these three methods is the one most in use; but all of them require that the two subjects should be of the same gender and number, otherwise the attribute must be repeated.

- 346. The same rule takes place with such verbs as نَارَةُ 'he believed, or deemed;" - "he supposed," when governing a complete proposition, formed by means of a subject and attribute both in the accusative case; as, اَنْدُا عَالِمًا "I believed Zaid (to be) learned." The attribute may be common to two propositions, and, of course, to two different subjects; and the noun, which in one of the propositions is the subject of the verb "to believe," may, in the other, be the subject of the proposition which is governed by that verb; thus, "Zaid has believed me learned, and I have believed Zaid he has believed me, and I" ظَنَّنِي وَ ظَنَنْتُ زَيْدًا عَالِمًا ٪learned.' ظَنَّنِي إِيَّاهُ وَ ظَنَنْتُ زَيْدًا عَالِمًا or أَوْ المَعْتَ وَظَنَنْتُ زَيْدًا عَالِمًا "he has believed me so, and I have believed Zaid learned;" or ظُنَّنِي وَظَنَنْتُ زَيْدًا عَالِمًا إِيَّاهُ he has believed me, and I have believed Zaid learned;" that is, "I have believed Zaid to be learned, and he has believed me to be so." The first is the method most approved of by grammarians. If the subject be of different genders and numbers, the attribute must be repeated; thus, أَظُنُّ وَ يَظُنَّانِي أَخًا زَيْدًا وَ عَمْرًا أَخَوَيْنِ I regard Zaid and 'Amru as (my) two brothers, and they (two) regard me as a brother."
- a. For a more detailed account of such peculiarities of Arabic Grammar as have been treated of in the four preceding paragraphs, the reader is referred to De Sacy's Grammaire Arabe, Tome ii. p. 246 to p. 252. From that excellent work the four paragraphs here alluded to have been abridged.

Of Abstract or Substantive Verbs.

347. The verb کَانَ "he (or it) was," expressing the existence of the subject of a proposition, and its relation to the attribute, takes the subject in the nominative case, and its attribute in the accusative; as الله كَانَ رَحِيماً "God is merciful;" "God is merciful;" شَكُونُ الْحُكِيمُ حَكِيماً حَتَّي يَغْلِبَ جَمِيحَ شَهُواتِهِ "the sage will not be a (true) sage until he shall have subdued all his passions;" he who has greediness for his steed will have poverty for his companion;" الله مَا كَانَ الْعَقُرُ لَهُ صَاحِبًا الله مَا كَانَ مَكْتُومًا فِي الصَّدرِ "there is no (real) science except what is concealed in the breast;" لا عِلْمَ اللّا مَا كَانَ مَكْتُومًا فِي الصَّدرِ "be ye (either) stones or iron." The same rule holds when the attribute precedes كَبِرًا كَانَ أَوْ صَغِيرًا كَانَ أَوْ صَعَيرًا كَانَ أَوْ صَعَيرًا كَانَ أَوْ صَعَيرًا كَانَ أَوْ صَعَالَ أَلَانَ مَا لَا لَا لَهُ عَلَى اللّهُ عَلَى عَلَى اللّهُ عَلَى اللّ atled by grammarians أَخُواتُ "the sisters of kāna," which are construed like the latter, such are أَنَى and أَنَى "it became," or "eame to pass;" عَان "it returned," etc.; "it was" or "happened at eve; "أَنَّى "it was or came to pass on the morning," etc. To these we might add many more which are best acquired by practice. All of them, however, like والما يعمل الله إخوانًا "Zaid has become rich;" وَيَدْ صَارَ عَنِيمًا الله إِخْوَانًا "Zaid has become brethren;" وَيَدْ صَارَ عَنِيمًا مَسَيْتُ أَخُوانًا "Ye are by the favour of God become brethren;" مَارَ وَجَهُهُ مُسُودًا "T have become the brother of poverty;" أَنَّ مَارَ وَجَهُهُ مُسُودًا "Yaid has become the brother of poverty;"

face became black;" أَصْحَى ٱلْحُرُّ مُحْرِفًا "the heat became scorching;" مَا زَالَتُ ٱلْفُصِيلَةُ مَمْدُوحَةً "virtue never ceases to be worthy of praise;" سِبرُوا مَا دَامَ ٱلنَّهَارُ مَوْجُودًا "march ye whilst daylight continues."

349. The verb كَانَ is employed along with the preposition to denote possession, in a manner similar to the Latin rule, est pro habeo; the Arabic language not possessing any word that corresponds exactly with our verb "to have," or with the Latin habere. This mode of construction will be obvious from the following examples, viz., "a king had a minister," literally, "a king, there was to him a minister;" again, الله عَمَالُ الله عَمَالُهُ كَانَ تَاجِرُوكَانَ لِلْهُ وَلَكَ الله عَمَالُ الله عَمَالُ الله عَمَالُه الله الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله الله عَمَالُه عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه الله عَمَالُه عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالْهُ عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالله عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُه عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُه عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ عَمَالُهُ

350. The preterite of the verb کان که is often employed in a general sense denoting mere existence, without any reference to time, and serving as a copula or connective between a subject and an attribute; thus, اَرُفِکَ مَا كَانَ لَهُمْ أَنْ يَدْخُلُوهَا إِلَّا خَاتِفِينَ. those (people), it is not for them that they should enter it unless with fear." In a similar manner the negative verb "he or it is not," (§ 173) requires its attribute to be put in the accusative. Sometimes, however, for the sake of emphasis, the attribute is combined with the subject by means of the preposition بَيْسَ ٱللَّهُ بِطَالِمٍ (God is not (assuredly) unjust." When the exceptive particle "unless," "except," intervenes between the subject and the attribute, the latter is put in the nominative; thus, لَيسَ ٱلْحَبُوتُ إِلَّا خَيَالٌ زَائِلٌ "the (present) life is nothing but a transitory pageant." Sometimes لَيسَ is employed, without any variation, in the third person singular masculine with the affixed pronouns; thus, "it is not he;" لَيسَيُّم "it is not she;" لَيسَيُّم "it is not she;" لَيسَةُ "it is not she;" لَيسَةُ "it is not she;" لَيسَةُ "the latter is a put in the latter is Verbs of Praise and Censure.

351. Verbs of praise and censure are very restricted in their inflection, being principally employed in the third person singular masculine of the preterite, and occasionally in the third person singular feminine of that tense. very rarely used in the dual or plural. The principal verbs of this kind are, as we stated, § 174, نِعِمَ (sometimes نِعِمَ , or نِعِمَ , or he or it is bad;" to which we "بُنْسُ "he or it is bad;" to which we may add ا حَبَّ (made up of خَبُّ + خَبُّ this is delightful." When the noun that is the object of praise or censure is accompanied by the article if it is put in the nominative case; as يُعْمَ ٱلنَّصِيرُ he is an excellent assistant ;" بنِّسَ ٱلْمِهَانُ "it is a bad dwelling." When the same noun is without the article it is put in the accusative; thus, نِعْمَ رَجُلًا زَيْدٌ "an excellent man is Zaid;" بِنْسَ عَبْدًا عَبْدُك "a bad servant thy servant is." Akin to بنُّسَ is بنُّسَ ''it is bad,'' which is construed in the same manner; thus, سَآءَ ٱلرَّجُلُ زَيْدٌ wicked is the man Zaid;" or without the article. مُنْ اَ اَلَٰهُ عَلَى "a bad man is Zaid."

Verbs of Admiration and Surprise.

- a. Sometimes the noun or pronoun which is the object of admiration is omitted; but this very rarely happens, and only in such instances as lead to no obscurity in the sense. Between the verb of admiration and the object admired, it is allowed to admit words expressive of time or place, an adverb or a word in the vocative case; for example:

Inchoative and Approximate Verbs.

*353. The peculiarity of these verbs is, that of themselves they convey merely a vague sense, and require another verb after them in the agrist, as a complement, with or without the conjunction أَ "that." Among the inchoatives are أَخَذَ , إِبْتَدَأً , أَخَلَ , أَنْشَأً , أَغَبَلَ . All of these denote beginning the action or state expressed by the following aorist, which will be best illustrated by a few examples; thus, جَعَلَ يَتَشَاجَرَان they two began to dispute one with the other; "جَعَلَ يَتَشَاجَرَان يَقُولُ يَا مُوسَى الرَّحِمْنِي وَ مُوسَى يَقُولُ يَا أَرْضُ خُذِيهِمْ (Korah) began to say, O Moses pity me! and Moses (began) to say, O earth! receive them!"

it nearly hap- "it nearly hap-"little was wanting that " فَرُبَ and كَادَ , أَوْشَكَ "little was wanting that " (Lat. parum abfuit quin). The verbs عَسَى and قُرُبَ are used only in the preterite, in which case they assume the meaning of our adverbs "perhaps," "it may be." A few examples will show the use of these better than a long description; thus, غَسَي زَيْدٌ أَنْ يَخْرُج ''perhaps Zaid may go out;" perhaps the wayfarer may see thy fire " عَسَى يَرَي نَارَكَ مَنْ يَمُرُّ the lightning very " يَكَادُ " ٱلْبَرْقُ يَخْطَفُ أَبْصَارَهُمْ " " (of hospitality) " the spirit " كَادَتِ ٱلنَّقْسُ تَزْهَقُ " "the spirit was nearly departing." All of these rarely require the interposition of غَسَى; the verb عَسَى, however, when expressive of apprehension of any thing, and which may then be considered as an impersonal verb, requires the conjunction if; thus, عَسَى أَنْ تَكْرَهُوا شَيْأٌ وَهُوَ خَيْرٌ لَكُمْ it may happen that you dislike a thing, and (nevertheless) it may be good for you."

355. There are several other verbs whose mode of construction is similar to the preceding. Such are—1. Verbs expressive of entering or tending towards a place; such as he went or preceded;" thus, " مُضَى "he entered;" نَخُلُ he entered into a certain cave that " ذَخَلَ إِلَى بَغْضِ ٱلْمَغَائر يَتَظَلَّلُ بِهَا he might enjoy the shade in it;" فَمَضَوًّا إِلَى ٱلْشِعَالِبِ يَسُومُونَ مِنْهُمُ ٱلْحِلْفَ "then they went to the foxes that they might enter into a league with them." 2. Verbs expressive of "continuing," "persisting," "remaining," or "persevering;" such as بَقِيَ and بَقِىَ زَيْثُةً يُرَاسِلُ آبَنَ بُوَيْدِ he continued" or "persevered ;" as" أَفَامَ "Zaid continued sending to Ibn Buwaih." The same rule applies to the verb رُسَا "he was firm" or "unmoved;" غَادَ "he was accustomed;" غُلُّ "he continued," "he ceased not (during the day);" بات "he remained or put up (during the night)." So the verbs negative, زال "he ceased not;" he failed not," i.e. "he per- مَا فَتَرَ , مَا نَزَى , مَا نَرَ severed (until the end of the period indicated in the proposition)."

a. When a negation is employed in such propositions as the foregoing, the same must be put before the first verb; thus, لَا يَكَادُ يُسَيِّنُ مَّا عَسَيْتُمْ أَنَ تَفْعَلُوا "; he is hardly able to speak plainly "مَا عَسَيْتُمْ أَنَ تَفْعَلُوا "perhaps you will not do (it)."

Syntax of Indeclinable Particles.

356. In Section V. we treated of most of the indeclinable particles of the Arabic language; and in the present section we have occasionally noticed the mode in which some of them influence the tenses of the verb, more especially the agrist.

We shall now conclude with a few additional remarks on the same subject, observing the order adopted in Section V. abovementioned.

357. All prepositions, whether separable or inseparable (§ 178, etc.), govern the genitive case; thus, عَلَى "in God;" فِي ٱلدَّارِ "; to God;" فِي ٱلدَّارِ "; under the heavens " فِي ٱلدَّارِ "; from the quarter of the south to the quarter of the north."

a. We have already stated, § 341, that, as a general rule, transitive verbs govern the accusative case direct, without the aid or intervention of any particle. This rule, however, is liable to some exceptions; for instance, the phrase رَمَي جَجَرُ "he threw a stone," may also be expressed عَلَمَهُ "he threw (or shot) with a stone;" so عَلَمَهُ and "he knew it." The latter phrase, however, may be rendered "he was conversant with it."

with their complements by means of a preposition; thus, الكور الكور "he came to a fountain of water." When, however, an intransitive verb governs a complete proposition, either verbal or nominal, beginning with the conjunction أَنَّ بَا اللهُ ال

"he ordered him that he should not grant permission to any one," instead of بِأَلَّا يَأْذَنَ لِأَحْدِ ; the last example is particularly remarkable, as it is only by means of the preposition بَعْدَمَ that بَعْدَمَ signifies "he ordered."

however, be repeated before each noun, it may influence each of the nouns in the accusative case, or it may influence only one of them, no matter whether the first or last, or, finally, it may influence neither, both nouns being used in the nominative case; thus, we may say, عَامُ اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ الْمُرَاءَةُ فِي الدَّارِ الْمُرَاءَةُ فِي الدَّارِ الْمُرَاءَةُ وَلاَ الْمُراءَةُ وَلاَ اللهُ اللهُ or finally, لَا اللهُ formula of exclamation frequently used by good Musalmans when anything surprising or extraordinary occurs to them; viz., لا حَوْلُ وَلاَ قُونَةُ اللَّا بِاللّهُ وَلاَ قُونَةً إِلّا بِاللهُ وَلاَ قُونَةً إِلّا بِاللهُ وَلاَ قُونَةً إِلّا بِاللهُ وَلاَ اللهُ وَلاَ اللهُ اللهُ إِلّا اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ وَلاً اللهُ ال

- a. If the subject of negation be qualified by an adjective the expression admits of three varieties; thus we may say لَا رَجُلَ نَاثِمَ فِي ٱلدَّارِ وَاللَّهُ مَا وَاللَّهُ مَا اللَّهُ مَا لَا رَجُلَ نَائِمًا or لَا رَجُل نَائِمً "there is no man sleeping in the house."
- 360. The negative particles i and i, when prefixed to a simple proposition, whose verb is نار understood, require the attribute to be put in the accusative; thus, الْ رَجُلُ حَاضِرًا "there is no man present;" مَا زَيدٌ قَائِمًا "Zaid is not standing." In order that this rule may hold, however, it is necessary, Ist, that the attribute should follow the subject; 2nd, that between the subject and attribute the particle "except," may not intervene; 3rd, that the particle is may not have the particle "if (in a negative sense) combined with it: and lastly, when آ is used, the subject, if an appellative noun, must be indefinite. Should any of these four conditions be wanting, the particle آ and أَ lose their influence on the attribute which is then used in the nominative case; thus, attribute which is then used in the nominative case; thus, "Zaid is not liar;" مَا زَيْدٌ إِلَّا كَاذِبٌ "Zaid is nothing but a liar;" مَا زَيْدٌ إِلَّا كَاذِبُ "Muḥammad is not asleep;" مَا اللَّهُ كَاذِبُ " (God is not a liar; " مَرينَ اللَّهُ كَاذِبُ " (the secret trusted to them is not betrayed; " لَا اللَّهُ كَاذِبُ السَّالَ بَاقِبًا "Zaid is not ill." With an indefinite noun we should say " السَّالَ بَاقِبًا "there is no man immortal."

- 361. The interrogative particles مَا عَلَيْنَ مَ كَأَيْنَ مَ مَا "how much?" "how many?" govern the accusative; for example: "how many dirhams?" كَمْ دِرْهُمَا "how many men?" If a preposition be prefixed to these particles they govern the genitive; thus, بكم دِرْهُم "by" or "for how many dirhams (hast thou bought this)?" They also govern the genitive when not used interrogatively but merely as part of a narrative; thus, لَا أَدْرِي كُمْ رِجَالٍ فَتَلْتَ I know not how many men thou mayest have killed."
- 362. The exceptive conjunction \mathring{y} (رُبِّ + \mathring{y}) "except," "besides," etc., governs the person or thing excepted in the accusative, when the proposition is affirmative; for example: "the men came to me except Zaid." When the proposition is negative, and the person or thing excepted is expressed, the latter may be put either in the accusative case, or it may agree with the subject from which the exception is made; thus, مَا كَلَّمَنِي أَحَدُ إِلَّا زَيْدًا no one has accosted me except Zaid;" in which sentence we may optionally substitute إِلَّا زَيْدٌ; so also مَا أَتَيْتُ بِالْكُتُبِ إِلَّا ٱلتَّوْرَيَةُ so also إِلَّا زَيْدٌ I have not brought the books, except the Pentateuch;" where instead of اَلتَّوْرَيَةُ we may substitute كُتُب in the same case as كُتُب.

363. If the person or thing from which the exception is made, be not expressed, but understood, the object excepted must be in the same case in which would have been the unexpressed subject; thus, مَا يَعْلَمُ تَأْوِيلَهُ إِلَّا ٱللَّهُ no one knows the interpretation of it except God," where أَحَدُّ is understood; so أَحَدًا I saw no one except Zaid," where أَحَدًا is understood; lastly, مَا مَرَرْتُ إِلَّا بِجَعَفَمُ "I passed not (by any one) except by Ja'far," where we have بِأَحَدِ understood. When the word which precedes it is the subject, and that which follows it the attribute of a proposition, the two words must be in the nominative; as مَا جَعْفَرٌ إِلَّا كَاذِبٌ Ja'far is not but a verily '' إِنَّ ٱلْكَافِرُونَ إِلَّا مَلْعُونُونَ أَنْ verily '' إِنَّ ٱلْكَافِرُونَ إِلَّا مَلْعُونُونَ أَنْ the unbelievers are but accursed." If the person or thing excepted be not of the nature of that comprised in the general subject, the noun following I must be in the accusative case; thus, "مَا جَاءِنِي أَحَدُ إِلَّا فَرَسًا no one (creature) came to me except a horse."

a. When the particle is repeated, forming fresh exceptions, and not merely used for the purpose of greater energy, the general subject being understood, and not expressed, the name of the first thing excepted is put in the nominative case, and the others in the accusative; thus, الله عَدَّال الله وسود Sa'īd, except Muḥammad. If the general idea be expressed, and the proposition should be affirmative, all the exceptions are put in the accusative case; thus, الله عَدَّا الله عَدَّا الله عَدَّا الله عَدَّا الله عَدَّا الله وسود slain except Zaid, except 'Umar, except 'Amru." If the general idea be expressed, and the proposition negative, and if there should be an inversion, the same rule holds; thus, عَدَّا الله الله عَدَّا الله الله الله الله الله وسود الله الله الله الله الله وسود الله الله وسود الله وسود الله الله وسود الل take after them, indifferently, the accusative, the genitive, or even the nominative, according to the light in which we view them. If we consider them as active verbs, then they naturally govern the accusative; thus, مَاتُوا حَاشًا زَيْدٌ "they are dead except Zaid." If we view them as prepositions, then they of course govern the genitive; as prepositions, then they of course govern the genitive; as مَاتُوا حَاشًا زَيدٍ and lastly, as mere adverbs, they may be followed by the nominative; as مَاتُوا حَاشًا زَيدٌ When, however, the expressions مَاتُوا حَاشًا زَيدٌ "what goes beyond," are employed, the object excepted must be put in the accusative case; thus, المَا تَعْالَوُهُمْ مَا خَلاً عَبَّاسًا (and they made them alight excepting 'Abbās."

365. The exceptive particles سُوَى رسِوَى , بَبْدٌ , غَيْرٌ and عَرَاثُ and عَرَاثُ and عَرَاثُ ... all of which are, in reality, substantives, signifying "difference," govern the person or thing excepted in the genitive: and are themselves always put in the same case in which the person or thing excepted would be, if the particle i had been used; thus, مَا كَلَّمَنِي أَحَدُّ غَبَّرَ زَيْدٍ or عَنُّرُ زَيْدٍ "no one has spoken to me except Zaid ;" غَيْرِ ٱلتَّوْرَيةِ or مَا أَتَيْتُ بِٱلْكُتُبِ غَيْرَ ٱلتَّوْرَيةِ "; to me except Zaid have not brought the books except the Pentateuch;" "; the men came to me except Zaid " جَاءً مِي ٱلْنَاسُ غَبَّر زَيْد "ino one came to me except Ja'far;" مَا جَاءِنِي غَيْرُ جَعْفَرِ "I have passed by no one except Ja'far;" مَا مَرَرْتُ بِغَيْرِ جَعْفَرً "I have struck no one except Ja'far;" لَمْ أَضْرِبْ غَيْرَ جَعْفُر no one (creature) came to me except " مَا جَاءَنِي أَحَدُّ غَيْرَ فَرَسِ a horse." It is to be observed, however, that the particles being indeclinable, or rather having their three سَوَى and سَوَى cases alike, follow the preceding rule, only virtually, though not apparently.

366. The exceptive compound particle آوَنَّ "if not," "unless" (nisi or si non), has no influence on the subject of the sentence to which it is prefixed; and the verb of the hypothetic proposition that follows takes the particle فَيُ before it; thus, ﴿ وَالْمُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللللَّهُ الللْ times the affirmative part of a hypothetic sentence of this kind is omitted, when it may be easily inferred from the context; thus, Kur. xxiv. 10: لَوْلاَ نَصْلُ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْهِمْ وَرَحْمَتُهُ وَإِنَّ ٱللَّهُ تَوَّالِثُ حَكِيمٌ

"had not the clemency of God (been) upon them, and also his mercy [verily he would have punished the perjurers], for verily God is gracious (and) wise."

a. When the subject of the proposition following the particle الْولاً is a pronoun it is generally used in the affixed form; as in the following example: الْوَلاَءُ لَمْ تَخْرُجِ ٱلدُّنْيَا مِن ٱلْعَدَم "if it had not been for him the world would not have come out of nothing." Sometimes, however, the isolated pronoun is employed; thus, from the Kurān xxxiv. 30: الْوَلاَ ٱلنَّمُ لَكُنَّا مُؤْمِنِينَ 'had it not been for you, verily we should have been (true) believers."

367. The particles إِنَّ or الله verily," "indeed;" أَنَّ or "that," "with regard to," "anent;" أَكُنَّ "like as;" "كُنَّ "that," "with regard to," "anent;" "like as;" "but;" "wish," "would it were!" (utinam) عَلَّ and "perhaps," "peradventure" (§ 66, b), have this peculiarity, that they require the noun that follows them to be put in the accusative case; thus, إِنَّ ٱللَّهُ عَفُورٌ رَحِبمٌ "verily God is forgiving (and) merciful;" إِنَّ ٱللَّهُ عَفُورٌ رَحِبمٌ أَمَدًا بَعِيدًا "she desires that between herself and him there should be a wide space;" تَوْدُ لُو أَنَّ بِيَنَهُ أَمِدًا أَمَدُ تَكِنَّ مُعَمَّدًا جَالِسُ "Zaid is standing, but Muḥammad is sitting;" يَنْدُا أَمَدُ "would that Muḥammad were present!" لَا مُعَمَّدًا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ " يَعَمَّدًا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمَّدًا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمَدًا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمَّدًا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمَدًا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمَدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلْمُعْمَدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلبُومُ وَ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلْمُعْمُ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلْمُومُ وَ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ ٱلْمُؤْمِ وَ الْمُعْمُدُا رَاجِعُ الْمُعْمُ وَ الْمُعْمُومُ وَ الْمُعْمُومُ وَالْمُعُمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُعْمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُعْمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُعُمُومُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُعْمُ وَالْمُ

day." That these particles, however, may retain their governing power, it is necessary that no other word should intervene between the particle and the noun, with the exception, perhaps, of a preposition with the noun it governs; as إِنَّ فِي ذَلِكَ أَيْنَا الله الله والله و

368. In § 197 we noticed the more ordinary interjections. Of these the most frequent of occurrence is , corresponding to our "O," used in addressing or calling a person; and it takes after it the nominative case, and occasionally the accusative, there being no distinct form of a vocative case in the Arabic language. An exclamation is sometimes made use of elliptically, as in our own language; thus, المُعَمَّدُ "the lion! the lion!" that is, "beware of the lion!" so المُعَمَّدُ "the enemy!" For a more detailed account of the vocative case, or rather of its substitutes, the student is referred to § 67.

SECTION IX.

369. The prosody of the Arabs, from which is derived that of the Persians, the Turks, and the Musalmans of India, is founded on the following simple principles. In the first place, every word in the language begins with a consonant, which consonant is moveable by one or other of the three primitive vowels (§ 22). Secondly, a syllable consisting of merely one consonant, moveable by a primitive vowel, is naturally short; but if such syllable be followed by an inert. consonant, the primitive vowel becomes long by position. For the sake of simplicity and perspicuity, we intend in this Section to make a free use of the Roman character; and in so doing let it be observed that the three vowels a, i, and u, when unaccented, represent the fatha -, kasra -, and damma - respectively. These vowels are, as we have just said, naturally short when followed, in the next syllable, by a single moveable consonant, and they become long by position when followed by an inert letter; hence it will not be necessary for us to perplex the student with a superfluity of long and short marks, very ridiculously applied, as they are, in every work on Eastern Prosody which we have yet seen. The accented vowels \bar{a} , $\bar{\imath}$, and \bar{u} , are always understood to be long, as they are the representatives of the three letters of prolongation l alif, ω $y\bar{a}$, and ω $v\bar{a}v$, respectively.

a. In the present Section, with a view to "make assurance doubly sure," the short vowels are marked in those few instances where one foot happens to have the same vowels as another foot, but of different quantities; thus, in the Anapæstus فَاصَلُن Fādilun, the first vowel is made to bear the short mark, to distinguish it from the Amphimacer فَاصَلُن Fādilun. In the tables representing the sixteen metres, pp. 328 and 329, we have also marked the short vowels as well as the long, except when two consonants follow the former, or a single consonant at the end of a hemistich.

adopted the verbal root نعل with its various modifications, as a mere formula for representing the various forms and measures of nouns and verbs. This is not all, however: they have applied the same root together with its formations, as models for exemplifying the أَجَزَلُ or metrical feet in prosody. Thus, instead of saying that the word جَالًا, for example, is an Iambus, they simply say that it is of the measure بَعُولُ, and a similar rule applies to all the other feet. The Arabian method, then, of exhibiting the various poetic feet is exceedingly clear and simple, as it appeals at once to the ear and to the eye. The only objection to the employment of the root is, is, as we formerly stated, that it is altogether unsuitable to European students, however satisfactory it may prove to the Arabs. We here, therefore, select as our formula the root فضل, which bears a close resemblance in form to فعل, with the important advantage of its having for its middle consonant a letter whose sound a European ear can easily realize.

- a. The structure of the Arabic language differs most widely from that of the ancient tongues of Greece and Rome in one particular, viz., in Arabic we never meet with a concourse of two or more vowels such as we have in Πηληιάδεω Άχιλῆος. Hence our classical rule that, "a vowel before another vowel is short," can have no place here. All the three languages, however, have the following rule in common, viz.. "a vowel naturally short, if followed by two consonants becomes long by position." The last syllable of every foot ending with a consonant is always long in Arabic verse. The reason is, that the foot following must begin with a consonant (§ 369). This rule does not hold in Latin and Greek, for an equally obvious reason, viz., the foot following may, and often does, begin with a vowel. Finally, another classical rule, viz., "Ultima cujusque est communis syllaba versûs," does not apply in Arabic: for in the latter tongue, the last syllable of a verse must be either absolutely long, by position, or if naturally short, it is artificially prolonged.
- 371. The Perfect or Standard feet عَالِمَا عَلَى sālimāt in Arabic are eight in number. Of these, two are quinqueliteral, each consisting of three syllables; four are septiliteral, each consisting of four syllables; and the remaining two are also septiliteral, but consisting each of five syllables.

All of these, with their measures, and their corresponding Latin names, may be seen in the subjoined Table of several modifications, either by the addition or abstraction of one or more letters or syllables. This result is called منافقة عناسة والمعافقة وا

The Imperfect Feet of ordinary occurrence may be reckoned at about nineteen in number; but to these the native grammarians add several more; which, however, being matters rather of curiosity than of practical utility, are here passed over.

a. It may be observed that the preceding list of metrical feet, regular and irregular, corresponds, very nearly, both as regards number and quality, with those in use among the Greeks and Romans of old. The Arabs, however, have neither the Tribrachys nor the Dactylus in their list, so far as I have been able to ascertain. This is the more surprising, as the greater part of the verbal roots in the language consists, theoretically, of three short syllables.

373. We shall now proceed to lay before the reader a Table of the Sixteen Standard Metres employed in Arabian verse. These, it may be observed, are wholly composed of perfect feet, and are thence called perfect metres; but, as we have shewn in the last paragraph, § 372, since there are a great number of imperfect feet, so there are numerous imperfect or secondary metres. Here again the distinction is whimsical and useless; for the great body of the poetry of the language, especially poems of any length, are found to admit of imperfect metre, probably because the perfect would prove too monotonous by long continuance. It would have occupied too much of our space to have inserted, in our Table, the translation of the Arabic names of the various metres; nor would it be of any great use if we did, for in most instances the aptness of the name is not very perceptible. We also in this Section dispense with giving the equivalent of the nunation in all Arabic technical terms when printed in the Roman character. Of such terms, however, we shall make a sparing use, as our object is to explain clearly the principles of the art, not to enlarge upon its dry technicalities. We are nowise ambitious of

a. The Arabs consider a verse to consist of two equal members; in fact, what we call a couplet is, with them, viewed as a single verse, which they call wit, i.e. "a tent" or "a house;" as will be seen in the following extract (a little corrected) from Gladwin, viz., "It is generally allowed that a bait, or verse, cannot consist of less than two hemistichs; and each of these hemistichs is called مِصْرَاع misrā' or misra', a word which literally signifies " one of the two folds of a door;" and the resemblance between a distich and a door of two folds, consists in this, that in the same manner as with a door of two folds you may open or shut which you please without the other: and when you shut both together it is still but one door; so also of a distich, you may scan which of the hemistichs you please without the other, and when you read both together they will form but one The first foot of the first hemistich, in a poetical composition, is called مَدُونَ sadr, and the last foot thereof مَدُونَ 'arūd. Of the second hemistich, the first foot is called اِبْتِدُ ibtidā, and the last أَوْتُ darb or عَجْزُ 'ajz. The intermediate feet of both have the general name خَسُّرُ hashw. The meaning of sadr is the "first" or "chief," and ibtida signifies "commencement;" the first beginning the distich, as the other does the second hemistich. The last foot of the first hemistich is called 'arūd, as signifying the "pole of a tent;" for, as the pole is the support of the tent, so is the distich supported on this prop; and until this foot is determined, the hemistich is not complete, nor its measure known. The last foot of the second hemistich is called darb, i.e. "of one kind," or "alike," it resembling the 'arūd inasmuch as both are at the end of a hemistich. Hashw signifies, literally, "the stuffing of a cushion," and on account of their situation in filling up the interior of each hemistich the intermediate feet are so called."

CLASS V.—Hemistich of Four Feet, each Three Syllables.

330 PROSODY.

374. In the general treatment of the various metres I have adopted an entirely new plan of my own, which, I flatter myself, will be found far more perspicuous than the clumsy method followed by the native grammarians and their servile imitators in Europe. In the first place, I have adopted the Roman character throughout, which is a great saving of space. Secondly, I have carefully marked the quantities of the vowels, but only in those cases where there might possibly occur a mistake. For instance, when a vowel is followed by two consonants, or by a single consonant at the end of a word, as in the foot Mustafdilun, it is quite superfluous to mark the quantities of the first, second, and fourth vowels, and to write the word Mūstāſdilūn, or, still more absurdly, Mūstūfilūn, as we have seen it figure in some recent works on the subject. It would be equally superfluous to have marked the third vowel of this foot as short, because we at once see that it is followed by a single moveable consonant, and consequently it is short by rule (see § 369). Lastly, by our adopting the various modifications of the root فضل as our standard of measure, we are enabled to explain, in a satisfactory manner, the subject of Arabian Prosody, in accordance with its true principles.

a. If proof be required to shew the inadequacy of employing the modifications of the root فعل , in the Roman character, the reader will find it in the second vol. of De Sacy's Grammar, p. 618, where the eight Perfect feet are thus represented, viz., Fā-vā-lōn, Mē-fā-ī-lōn, Mē-fā-ī-lōn, Fā-ī-lā-tōn, Fā-ī-lōn, Mōs-tāf-ī-lōn, Mōs-tē-fā-ī-lōn, and Mēf-oū-lā-tō. The grand defect here is, that we have no representative of the nondescript consonant ξ , which is altogether ignored; the consequence is that the learner is not only perplexed, but utterly misled. The proper course would clearly have been, either to have eschewed the Roman character entirely, or to have employed a more appropriate Arabic root for the purpose of illustration.

375. With a view to exhibit, in the clearest manner, the affinity or relationship that holds between the various metres of each class, I have made use of the straight line, which leads more directly to the point, than the circles used by the Prosodians of the East. Let us, for instance, examine Class I.: where we see at a glance that, by taking away the first two syllables of the metre Tawil from the beginning of the hemistich, and by transferring the same to the end, we have the metre Madid, which comes next. In like manner, if we transfer the first three syllables of the Madid from the beginning to the end of the hemistich, we have the metre Basit, and so on with all the rest. In Class IV. I have slightly altered the usual arrangement, by placing the Sarī' metre at the end of the class, rather than at the beginning, as it is formed by transferring the first three syllables of the Mujtathth from the beginning of the latter to its close. We may further observe that all the metres of Class IV. consist only of two out of the four Epitriti feet of the ancients, variously arranged.

a. What we have here denominated the Five Classes of metres, are, by the Arabs, called the Five Circles; because they describe the relationship of the metres in each by means of circles, of which the reader may see specimens in p. 9 of Clerk, and in p. 147 of Freytag.

The first circle they call the Discordant; the second, the Associated;

the third, the Extracted, its feet being taken from the first circle; the fourth they call the Resembling or Similar; and the fifth, the Concordant. The first two circles are peculiar to the Arabs; the rest are common to the Arabs and Persians, with this difference, however, that with the former the Hexametric form (See § 376) is preferred when they employ the third circle.

376. The student will bear in mind that throughout the foregoing Tables we have given only the first hemistich of each stanza or verse, the second hemistich being a mere repetition of the first; consequently every complete verse must consist of an even number of feet. A verse consisting of eight feet, as in the metres of Class I., is said to be Mulhamman or Octameter; if it be of six feet, like those in Class IV. it is called Musaddas or Hexameter. Some of the metres are used in both forms, as we shall see hereafter; and some of the Hexametric metres, by dropping a foot in each hemistich become what is called Murabba' or Tetrameter.

377. We shall now proceed to offer a few brief and plain observations on such metres only as are of most frequent occurrence. These are the Tawīl, the Basīţ, the Wāfīr, the Kāmīl, the Khafīf, the Sarī, the Mutaķārīb and the Rajaz. The remaining metres are of comparatively rare usage, especially among the older writers. We have already observed (§ 373), that we should make a sparing use of the technicalities of the "Ars Metrica." There are, however, a few terms, such as the 'Arūḍ, the Darb, and the Hashw (See § 373, a) which we must here employ for the sake. of conciseness. Those who have a taste for additional matters of this sort may consult Freytag, in whose copious work he will find at least three hundred of them, more or less.

Of the Metre Tawil, or the Long.

Standard, Fadūlun, Mafādīlun, Fadūlun, Mafādīlun, (twice).

- 378. This is a favourite metre among the older Arabian poets. It is Octameter, and subject to one deviation (ziḥāf) in the last foot or 'Arūḍ of the first hemistich, which may become Mafāḍilun instead of Mafāḍilun. In the Darb or final foot of the second hemistich it admits of two deviations, viz., Mafāḍilun and Mafāḍi instead of Mafāḍilun. Occasionally the intermediate feet or Ḥashw of each hemistich may deviate into Mafāḍilun and Fadūlu respectively.
- a. Of the seven famous Arabian poems called the Mu'allakāt, composed about, or a little previous to, the time of Muḥammad, the first three, viz., that of Amru-l-Kais, of Tarafat, and of Zuhair, are in the metre Tanīl. The Mu'allakāt are what we may call the "Competition Poems" of Arabia; and they derive their title from the circumstance of having had the high honour of being written in letters of gold, and suspended for public perusal in the portico of the temple of Mecca.

Of the Metre Basit, or the Extended.

Standard, Mustafdilun, Fādilun, Mustafdilun, Fādilun, (twice).

379. This, like the preceding, is a favourite metre with the older poets. It admits of one deviation in the 'Arūd, viz.,

Fădilun instead of Fādilun; and in the Darb, it admits both Fădilun and Fadlun, for Fādilun. By omitting the fourth foot in each hemistich, the verse becomes a Hexameter, in which case the 'Arūd may be Mustafdil instead of Mustafdilun; and the Darb may deviate from Mustafdilun into Mustafdilān or Mustafdil. Finally, all the feet in this metre admit of several deviations. For instance, Mustafdilun may, in addition to those we have mentioned, become Mutafdilun, Mutadilun, or Mutadilān.

Of the Metre Wafir, or the Exuberant.

Standard, Mafādilatun, Mufādilatun, Mufādilatun, (twice).

380. This metre is occasionally (though very rarely) employed as an Octameter by an additional Mafādilatun in each hemistich. Its general form, however, is Hexameter; in which case both the 'Arūd and the Darb generally admit of the deviation Mafādil instead of Mafādilatun. By withdrawing Mafādilatun from each hemistich of the Hexameter, it is occasionally employed as a Tetrameter; and in such case, the Darb or last foot of the verse may deviate from Mafādilatun into Mafādiltun. The fifth poem of the Seven Mu'allakāt, by 'Amru the son of Kulthūm, is composed in the Hexametric form of this metre. The poet lived, in "the days of ignorance" as the Arabs express it, which means that he flourished before the time of Muhammad.

Of the Metre Kāmil, or the Perfect.

Standard, Mutafādilun, Mutafādilun, Mutafadilun, (twice).

381. This metre, like the preceding, with which it is closely allied, is employed occasionally as an Octameter; but most commonly as a Hexameter or Tetrameter. As a Hexameter it admits of one deviation in the 'Arūd, viz., Mutafā for Mutafādilun. In the Darb it may deviate from the regular foot into Mutafā or Mutafādil. The fourth of the Mu'allakāt by Labīd, and the sixth by 'Antarah, are composed in the Hexametric form of this metre.

Of the Metre Khafif, or the Nimble.

Standard, Fādilātun, Mustafdilun, Fādilātun, (twice).

382. This metre is of frequent occurrence both as a Hexameter and as a Tetrameter, the former being the more common. It admits of one deviation, both in the 'Arūd and Darb of the Hexameter, by dropping the last syllable of Fādilātun. In the Tetrameter, the Darb, or last foot of the verse, may deviate into Mutafdil in lieu of Mustafdilun. The seventh and last of the Mu'allakāt by Hārith, the son of Hillazah, is composed in the Hexametric form of the Khafīf. This metre is also a great favourite with the Persian poets, who generally employ (as the Arabs sometimes do) Mafādilun instead of Mustafdilun, as the middle foot of the hemistich.

Of the Metre Sari', or the Rapid.

Standard, Mustafdilun, Mustafdilun, Mafdūlātu, (twice).

383. This metre is a favourite with the earlier Arabian poets. It is employed only in the Hexametric form; and admits of several deviations both in the 'Arud and Darb of the verse. In the former, $Mafd\bar{u}l\bar{a}tu$ may become $Mafd\bar{u}l\bar{a}$, $Mafd\bar{u}l\bar{a}$, or $Mafd\bar{u}l\bar{a}$; and in the latter it may deviate into $Mafdul\bar{a}t$, $Mafd\bar{u}l\bar{a}t$, or $Mafd\bar{u}l$. With the Persian poets the Sarī' is of very frequent occurrence, only the last foot of the hemistich generally deviates into $F\bar{a}dil\bar{a}t$, $Fud\bar{u}lun$, $F\bar{a}dilun$, or Fad, instead of $Mafd\bar{u}l\bar{a}tu$.

Of the Metre Mutaķārib, or the Proximate.
Standard, Fadūlun, Fadūlun, Fudūlun, Fadūlun (twice).

384. This metre is generally employed as an Octameter, in which case the Darb may deviate into Fadūl, Fadū, or Fad, instead of Fadūlun. It is occasionally used as a Hexameter, in which form both the 'Arūd and the Darb admit of the deviation of Fadūlun into Fadū. As an Octameter it is a great favourite with the Persian poets who generally change the last foot of each hemistich into Fadūl, Fadū, or Fadūl.

Of the Metre Rajaz, or the Tremulous.

Standard, Mustafdilun, Mustafdilun, Mustafdilun, Mustafdilun (twice).

385. This is a favourite metre both with the Arabs and Persians, the former preferring the Hexametric form, as we intimated in § 375, a. It admits of several deviations in all the feet, in consequence of which it is almost as easy to compose in it as if it were plain prose; hence it is generally employed when didactic or scientific subjects of any length are treated of in verse. Of works of this nature we may mention the Alfiya (or Quintessence of Arabic Grammar), by Jamālu-d-

Dīn, commonly called Ibn Mālik. The Rajaz has another peculiarity in which it differs from the rest of the Arabian metres—viz., the first hemistich of each verse generally rhymes with the second as in our heroic metre; and the Parb of each verse does not, as is usual, necessarily rhyme with that of the verse following, though there is no rule to the contrary. The deviations to which the standard foot Mustafdilun is liable are, Mutafdilun, Muftadilun, and Mutadilun. In the Parb or last foot of the second hemistich, Mustafdilun may deviate into Mustafdil. This metre is also a favourite with the poets of Persia who employ it both as an Octameter and as a Hexameter.

a. The eight metres which we have just noticed are those of most frequent occurrence among the oldest Arabian poets whose works have come down to us, such as the collection of poetical fragments entitled the Ḥamāsah, to which we may add the Mu'allakāt, already alluded to, and the Dīwān of 'Alī Bin Abī Tālib, the son-in-law of Muḥammad. Our limited space does not permit us to notice the remaining eight metres. Suffice it to say that they are all subject to some such deviations as we have above enumerated, chiefly in the 'Arād and Darb of the verse, but occasionally deviations are to be met with in the Ḥashw or interior part of a verse. The classical student will at once perceive that most of the Zihāfāt or deviations of the Arabian verse, are similar in principle to those that occur in the Iambic metre of the Greek tragedians.

Of the Rhyme اَلْقَافِيَةُ (pl. اَلْقَافِيةُ).

386. The rhyme of the Arabs agrees, at least, virtually, with that of other nations, viz., the last syllable of one verse corresponds in pronunciation with the last syllable of the verse following. There is this peculiarity, however, in the poems of the Arabs, that with the exception of the species called شركون muzdavaj, "paired" or "wedded" (See § 390), the same rhyme is continued in the Darb of each verse throughout the piece. When the verse ends with a consonant the rhyme is said to be مُقَيَّدُةٌ muḥaiyadah, "fettered," and when it ends with a vowel, it is said to be عُلَقَةُ mutlakah, "free." The last consonant of a verse constitutes the essential part of the rhyme, and is called the رَدِيّ rawī, "that which binds" or "unites." The species of poem called تُصِيدُة kaṣīdah (See § 389), may be further qualified by a relative adjective formed from the letter constituting the rawi. For example, if the rawī be the letter م mīm, with or without a vowel, the poem is called قَصِيدَةٌ مِيْمِيَّةٌ, and so on with regard to any other letter, with the exception of 1, , and _ inert, when preceded by their homogeneous short vowels, in which case, the consonant bearing the short vowel is the rawi. When the last consonant of a verse is moveable by a short vowel, such vowel is theoretically lengthened, the same as if it were followed by the letter of prolongation with which it is homogeneous; and this easily accounts for what we have just stated respecting the letters 1, ,, and , as not constituting the rawi of a verse; for virtually their presence does not affect the quantity of the final syllable.

Of the Different Kinds of Poems.

387. The poetical compositions of the Arabs, like those of other nations, are called by various names, conformable to their subject, the manner of treating the subject, and their form. Of these the principal species are, the قَصِيدَةُ kiṭʾah, the مُزَدُرَجُ kaṣīdah, and the مُزَدُرُجُ muzdawaj; each of which we shall here briefly describe.

388. This species of poem appears to have been extensively in use among the Arabs previous to the time of Muhammad. The collection of ancient fragments of poetry called the Hamāsah is chiefly, if not entirely, of this form. The Kit'ah, according to native writers, must consist of not fewer than two verses, or, as we should call them, couplets, nor does it admit of more than one hundred and seventy-five. The difference as to form, between the Kit'ah and Kasīdah is merely this—that the two hemistichs of the first couplet do not necessarily rhyme in the Kit'ah, but whatever may be the rhyme of the second hemistich of the first couplet, the same must be continued in the second hemistich of every succeeding couplet. In conclusion, we may observe, that both the Kasidah and the Kit'ah may be composed in any metre which the poet may choose; though those of most frequent occurrence are the seven metres we briefly noticed from § 378 to § 384, both inclusive.

389. This kind of poem resembles the Idyllium of the reeks. Its subjects, generally, are praise of great perceases, living or deceased; satire; elegy; also moral and eligious reflections. In the first verse, or as we should say, uplet, of the Kasīdah, the 'Arūd must always rhyme with the Durb, and, as in the case of the Kit'ah, that identical rhyme must continue in the second hemistich of each verse to the end of the poem. When the subject of the Kasīdah is panegyric, the poet generally finishes with a benediction or prayer for the health and prosperity of the person addressed, such as, "May thy life, health, and prosperity endure as long as the sun and moon revolve!" According to the author of the Chār Gulzār, a valuable treatise on Arabian and Persian Prosody, the Kasīdah must consist of not fewer than twenty-five couplets, nor must it extend to more than one hundred and seventy-five. This statement, however, appears to have been made without due consideration; for, in the first place, there are numerous Kasidahs of fewer than twenty-five couplets. Secondly, the same author further states, that, among the Arabians, the Kasīdah seems to have been unlimited as to length, as they have sometimes made it exceed five hundred couplets. This last assertion, also, may be true, for ought I know to the contrary, but I have never yet seen a Kasīdah of this extreme length. The Mu'allakāt, or seven Arabian prize poems, suspended of old in the temple of Mecca, to which we formerly alluded, are all of the Kasidah species.

a. There are two other species of poetical composition derived from the Kuṣīdah, which we may here briefly notice, viz., the رُبُاعِيُ Kuba'ī, and the عَزَلُ Chazal. The Kubā'ī, as its name imports, consists of four hemistichs, of which the first, second, and fourth must have the same rhyme, but not necessarily the third. In fact if we take the first two stanzas out of the Kaṣīdah we have the Rubā'ī, which nearly corresponds with the epigram of the ancients both in its form and in the mode of its application. It is more especially employed in order to express the date of any event by the imode of numeration. (See § 39.)

b. The Ghazal is a short poem consisting, at an average, of five to twelve stanzas. As in the Kasīdah, the first two hemistichs must rhyme, and that same rhyme is continued in the Darb of each stanza to the end of the composition. The ordinary subjects of a Ghazal are extravagant descriptions of the beauty of a mistress, and the sufferings of a lover (from the cruelty of the former); to which we may add the commendation of wine and hilarity. From what we have just stated then, it will be obvious that the Ghazal differs in no respect from the Kasīdah, except in regard to length. In fact the fifth of the Mu'allaķāt, by 'Amru the son of Kulthūm is to all intents and purposes a Ghazal, so far as the subject of it is concerned; it merely differs as to form. The Rubā'ī and the Ghazal are more in use among the Persian poets than they are among the Arabs.

is generally applied to compositions of greater extent than those we have already described. It is unrestricted as to length—from three couplets upwards to any number, according to the nature of the subject. It consists of a succession of stanzas or couplets, all of the same metre, and the second hemistich of each stanza must rhyme with the first; but the stanzas themselves do not necessarily rhyme with one another, as in the Kit'ah and Kasīdah. The metre generally assigned to the Muzdawaj is the Rajaz, or some of its numerous modifications, as we intimated in § 385; hence such compositions are frequently denominated by the general term

- أراجيزُ). The Muzdawaj in Arabic corresponds with the hexametric poems of the Greek and Latin, or with such of our own poems as are composed in the Iambic metre of ten syllables, with rhyme.
- a. Most Arabian poems fall under one or other of the three general classes described from § 388-390. A poem, however, may have a still more restricted denomination, according to the subject of which it treats; thus, if the subject be eulogy, or the praise of any person, place, or thing, the composition is called (pl. مَدَا أَنَا وَ الْعَامِينَ). A satiric poem is called أَصَابِهُ أَنْ (pl. مَرَاتُ). An elegy is called مَرَاتُ وَالْمُ اللهُ وَاللهُ وَاللّهُ وَالللهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَالل

Poetic Licence.

391. The poets of Arabia appear to have availed themselves of the Licentia Vatum much more freely than their tuneful brethren of Europe ever did, with the exception, perhaps, of the poets of modern Italy. The Arabs, like the Italians, may be said to possess a language peculiar to poetry, and not amenable to the strict grammatical rules that apply to plain prose. The principal licences that obtain in Arabian poetry may be classed under the following species; viz. 1. The shortening of long vowels in the middle or end of a word by suppressing the letters of prolongation. 2. By a contrary processe, they may lengthen a short vowel either by adding to it the homogeneous letter of prolongation, or by doubling the following letter according to certain rules. 3. They may, in certain triliteral words, altogether suppress the short vowel of the middle letter, and substitute jazma instead of it. 4. They may add a short vowel (generally a kasra) to certain verbal terminations, in a manner similar to what we stated respecting the symbol waşla, § 36, a. Lastly, they take considerable liberties with the nūnation and other case terminations of the nouns, both in the singular, dual, and plural. All these peculiarities, however, I do not here enter into at greater length, for reasons mentioned in our concluding paragraph which immediately follows.

392. In conclusion, I have only to observe that my object in this last Section has been merely to explain the true and simple principles on which the prosody of the Arabs is founded. It would have occupied too much space in an elementary Grammar like the present to have treated the subject at greater length. The student who desires further information, however, may have recourse to one or other of the following works, viz., "Tractatus de Prosodia Arabica," Oxonii, 1661, 12mo. This Treatise is by Samuel Clerk, and is generally appended to a work by Edward Pocock, entitled "Carmen Tograi," etc. Clerk's work at first sight appears a little uncouth and repulsive, inasmuch as all the Arabic technical terms of the art are dignified with Latin terminations; but still a perusal of it will amply repay the student's labour. The best work, however, on Arabian Prosody is that of Dr. Freytag, entitled "Darstellung der Arabischen Verskunst," 8vo., Bonn, 1830, pp. 557. It treats the sub-344 PROSODY.

ject in a clear and satisfactory manner, illustrated throughout with numerous examples from the poets, fully pointed, and accompanied with translations. The only objection to it (if objection it be) is, that it is composed in German, a language not nearly so well known in this country as ours is throughout Germany.

a. Should the reader be possessed of the second edition of De Sacy's Grammar, a work now exceedingly scarce, he will find at the end of the second volume a very neat Treatise on Prosody. Professor Ewald, of Gottingen, also published in 1825 a small 8vo. volume on the same subject; but of the merits of this last it would be rash in me to express any opinion, as I never had sufficient perseverance to fathom that gentleman's Latinity, which differs very considerably from that of Cicero and Quintilian. So far as I can understand him, however, I am led to believe that he labours to make the metre of the Arabs square with that of the ancient Greeks and Romans. In order to effect this object, Professor Ewald is forced to set up, in every one of the sixteen metres, a standard of his own, which all preceding grammarians have considered as mere deviations from other established standards. Well, this is mere matter of careful investigation, whereupon my own experience does not authorise me to give anything like a positive opinion. If Prof. Ewald can prove that his standards of metre are the rule, and those of all others the exception, why then, he may well exclaim, once more, as he does rather prematurely in his preface, "sublimi feriam sidera vertici." Till this proof, however, is established, I prefer following in the wake of the native grammarians.
