PREFACE

IN OFFERING to the readers of Chaucer this edition, which has been the interrupted occupation of many years, I wish to make a few explanations and acknowledgments

It was my original plan, and my understanding with the publishers, that the text should be based on such manuscript materials only as were accessible in print. In previous editions, even those of Skeat (1894) and the Globe editors (1898), very incomplete account had been taken of modern investigations of Chaucer's grammar, and I felt that one of the chief services an editor could render would be in the grammatical purification of the text. Having that, perhaps, primarily in view at the outset, I proceeded to make my text afresh from the Chaucer Society's reprints of the various pieces, endeavoring, of course, at the same time to follow sound critical principles in the determination of readings. For certain works I found it necessary to supplement the printed materials by photographs or copies of unpublished manuscripts, or even to base my text (as in the case of the Boece and the Astrolabe) upon such reproductions of unprinted sources. But for most of the poems the accessible reprints and collations were either complete or extensive enough to serve as a satisfactory basis for a text.

During the progress of my work there appeared a number of important investigations of Chaucer manuscripts, of which I have made full use. Miss Hammond's study of the manuscripts of the Parlament of Fowls, for example, and the exhaustive analysis of the manuscripts of the Troilus by Professor Root and the late Sir William McCormick were both published after I had first constituted my text of those poems, and I revised my work in the light of them. More recently, the Chaucer Tradition of the late Professor Brusendorff has led to the further reconsideration of many matters. I am greatly indebted to all these studies, and to others that are cited in the textual notes.

For my text of the Canterbury Tales I used primarily the eight printed manuscripts and Thynne's edition. I collated also the Cardigan and Morgan copies, and took account of the various textual studies of Zupitza and Koch, McCormick, Tatlock, and Brusendorff. Although I knew I might have access to the photographic reproductions of manuscripts assembled by my friend Professor Manly at the University of Chicago, it did not seem to me either proper or profitable to make a partial and piecemeal use of the material which he and his associates are to publish in full. I felt, too, that the printed manuscripts represent so well the different classes of authorities that their readings, supplemented by my collations and the published reports of other copies, gave me in most cases the necessary evidence for the determination of the text. But, of course, in common with all other Chaucerians, I am eagerly awaiting the light that the Chicago edition will throw upon doubtful passages and upon the history of the composition of the tales.

I at first intended to publish a very full apparatus criticus, and collected at least four times as many variant readings of all the poems as are actually printed in the present volume. A number of considerations — chiefly limitations of space, the publication of Professor Root's Troilus with copious variants, and the announcement of Professor Manly's forthcoming edition of the Canterbury Tales — led me to change my plan and restrict my textual notes to selected variants of especial interest. I hope they will be found to include such readings as concern the student of Chaucer's poetic vocabulary or of his methods in revision. I may add that a good many readings not printed in my notes were reported to Professor Tatlock when he was preparing his Concordance, and were registered in that work.

The explanatory notes, though much more extensive than those on the text, have also been limited by considerations of space. I had very little room for purely illustrative material, for which the reader may profitably consult the previous commentaries, especially those in Skeat's Oxford Chaucer and Professor Manly's selections from the Canterbury Tales. I have also not undertaken to give the history of interpretations or to list in full the opinions of commentators, as would be done in a variorum edition. But I have meant to supply the reader, either in the notes or in the glossary, with all necessary help for the understanding of the text, and I have tried to register fully, though in brief form, such literary sources of Chaucer's writings as have been discovered. Matters of common knowledge are stated without citation of authority, or with a general acknowledgment of indebtedness to previous editors. But where special credit seems due, or further information may be desired, references are added, and doubtful interpretations or new suggestions are occasionally discussed at some length.

Both in the notes and in the introductions to the various works, besides citing Chaucer's specific sources, I have given some account of the history of his ideas and the development of the literary forms and fashions exemplified in his writings. Such indications have had to be extremely brief, and I have undoubtedly overlooked both sources and parallels for which I might well have found room, even in my limited space. But I hope that my notes may help the reader who is unfamiliar with Chaucer and his period to understand the place of his works in the history of literature. Perhaps some of the discussions will point the way to profitable investigation. And it may be convenient even for the seasoned Chaucerian and the expert in other fields of literature to have in a continuous commentary a brief digest of the results obtained in the numerous source-studies of the past forty years.

Throughout the course of my work I have been indebted to Chaucer scholars, both friends and strangers, for innumerable courtesies, and I have tried to acknowledge such obligations in the proper places. But I should like to repeat here the expression of my thanks to the authorities of the Bodleian Library for allowing me to have a photograph of a manuscript of the Astrolabe, to the late librarian of the Cambridge University Library, Mr Francis J H Jenkinson, for a photograph of the manuscript of the Boece, to Miss Belle da Costa Greene, for generously placing at my disposal the Morgan manuscript of the Canterbury Tales, to President MacCracken of Vassar College, for permitting me to collate the Cardigan manuscript of the Canterbury Tales while it was in his possession, and to Mr G A Plimpton, for giving me access to his manuscripts of the Canterbury Tales and the Astrolabe. And I see no reason why, as a member of Harvard University, I should take for granted the inestimable privileges of the Harvard Library and refrain from thanking the authorities of that institution for their constant liberality and helpfulness. I wish to thank my friends Dr Grace W Landrum, Dr J P Bethel, Dr B J Whiting, and Mr Joseph Butterworth for communicating to me the results of their unpublished investigations. In the typewriting of my manuscript and the verification of references and readings I had the assistance, in the early stages of the work, of Professor Paul F Baum, and more recently, of Dr Whiting, Dr Harold O White, Dr Mark Eccles, and Miss Laura Gustafson, from all of whom I have received information and helpful suggestions beyond the ordinary range of secretarial aid. I am particularly indebted to Dr White for his untiring assistance in the task of seeing the book through the press.

My obligations to a number of friends are so general that they could not be adequately acknowledged in special notes. In the beginning of the work I had the advantage of the advice of President W A Neilson, and I have received information and counsel, at various times, from Professors J M Manly, J S P Tatlock, and Karl Young, and Mr Henry B Hinckley, and my friends and colleagues at Harvard, Professors Lowes, Rand, Ford, and Magoun, have been constantly exposed, by near access and intimate association, to my appeals for help. In this work as in everything I have undertaken, I have owed most to Professor Kittredge, under whom I began the study of Chaucer very long ago. He has been my master since my student days, and I have drawn freely upon his learning and wisdom during a friendship of more than forty years.

Other obligations, which I shall not attempt to describe, are acknowledged in the dedication of the book to one who did not live to see it published, but who has shared and sustained all my labors.

INTRODUCTION

THE LIFE OF CHAUCER

AN eminent French critic, complaining that the biographers of men of letters have recently given more attention to their correspondence, diaries, and other intimate records than to their literary productions, expresses the fear that the present period in criticism may be remembered as "l'âge des petits papiers." The writer of the life of Chaucer is at least in no danger of going to the extreme described. He may resort too freely to conjecture, as scholars have occasionally done in the attempt to use every scrap of evidence for the reconstruction of Chaucer's life and times. But he will have no private papers to draw upon, and the public records at his disposal deal almost entirely with official appointments and business transactions — the external facts of the poet's career. In the end, for the most part, the biographer will have to let Chaucer's works speak for themselves, rather interpreting him by them than interpreting the writings by the personal experiences of the author.

Within their limited range, however, the recorded facts about Chaucer and his family are rather numerous. More than three hundred entries have been discovered, besides many relating to Thomas Chaucer, and more are constantly coming to light. But the story that they yield can be briefly recapitulated.

The year of Chaucer's birth is unknown. His own testimony, at the Scrope-Grosvenor trial in 1386, that he was then "forty years old and more" makes probable a date somewhat later than 1340. The fact that he was in military service in France in 1359 is also consistent with the assumption that he was born about 1343-44.

His father was John Chaucer and his mother probably Agnes, mentioned as John Chaucer's wife in 1349. She is described in the same document as a relative and heir of Hamo de Copton, and is to be identified, on the evidence of a recently discovered cartulary of Holy Trinity, Aldgate, with his niece Agnes, daughter of James de Copton. She cannot have been married to John Chaucer before 1323, when, according to documentary evidence, he was still single, and a date considerably later seems likely in view of the fact that she had been married earlier to a man named Northwell, kinsman of William de Northwell, keeper of the King's wardrobe, and that after John Chaucer's death, in 1366 or 1367, she became the wife of Bartholomew atte Chapel. John Chaucer, born between 1310 and 1312, was the son of Robert Chaucer, who in 1307 had married a widow, Mary Heyroun (perhaps born Stace). Robert Chaucer died before 1316, and in 1323 Mary married Richard Chaucer, perhaps a kinsman of Robert. She died before April 12, 1349, as appears from Richard's will, which was proved in July of the same year.

According to John Philpot's Visitation of Kent, Geoffrey Chaucer had a sister Catherine, who was married to Simon Manning of Codham, and through her many New England families trace a connection with the poet's line. Of other children of John Chaucer nothing is known. Elizabeth Chaucy, for whose admission to Barking Abbey John of Gaunt gave £51-8-2 in 1381, is held by some to have been a sister of Geoffrey, and by others to have been his daughter.

The name Chaucer or Chaucier (Fr. "Chaussier") would indicate that the family was once occupied with shoe-making, and their earliest known residence in London was in Cordwainers' Street. But Chaucer's immediate ancestors — his father, grandfather, and step-grandfather — were vintners or wine-merchants. They appear to have been prosperous people, with rising fortunes and some standing at court. In 1310 Robert

Chaucer was collector of customs on wines from Aquitaine John Chaucer attended Edward III in Flanders in 1338, and in 1348 he was appointed to collect the custom on cloths in certain ports He was also deputy to the King's Butler in Southampton Thus the family had made a modest beginning in the career of public service which Geoffrey Chaucer successfully continued

The earliest known records of Geoffrey Chaucer himself are in the household accounts of Elizabeth, Countess of Ulster and wife of Prince Lionel They state that in May, 1357, he received clothing from her wardrobe in London, and that in December of that year, at Hatfield in Yorkshire, he was allowed twenty shillings "for necessaries at Christmas" The same account-book records the journeys of Elizabeth to Reading, Stratford-atte-Bowe, and other places, and her attendance at several great entertainments, such as the Feast of St George, given by Edward III in 1358 to the King of France, the Queen of Scotland, the King of Cyprus, and other notables It is probable that Chaucer, as a page in the household, would have been present on many such occasions, and his acquaintance with John of Gaunt may date from Christmas, 1357, when that nobleman, then Earl of Richmond, was a guest at Hatfield

It is not known how long Chaucer was in the service of Lionel and Elizabeth In 1359-60 he was in the English army in France, and was taken prisoner near Reims On March 1, 1360, he was released for a ransom, to which the King contributed £16, and in May he returned to England Later in the year, during the peace negotiations, he was back in France and carried letters from Calais to England That he was still in Lionel's service is shown by the fact that his payment is recorded in the Prince's expense book But for the following seven years information about him is lacking, and at the end of that period he seems to have been in the service of the King On June 20, 1367, he received from Edward a pension of twenty marks for life, and was described as "dilectus vellectus noster" If he had been attached particularly to the train of Elizabeth, he may have left Lionel's household after her death in 1363, or he may have continued in the Prince's service till 1367 In any case he can hardly have been with Lionel on the occasion of the Prince's second marriage, May 28, 1368, to Violante, the daughter of Barnabo Visconti of Milan For there has recently been discovered a bill of privy seal, dated July 17, 1368, granting Chaucer a passport from Dover and an allowance of £10 for traveling expenses The purpose of his journey is entirely unknown He may have gone to join Lionel in Italy, but it seems more probable that he was traveling in the service of the King In fact this may be the first of the series of diplomatic missions that took him repeatedly to the Continent during a period of ten years If Chaucer continued to be attached to Lionel till 1366 or 1367, one other possibility must be considered It has been suggested that he spent some time with the Prince in Ireland, and it is rather striking that the gap in our records of Chaucer very nearly coincides with the period (1361-66) of Lionel's service in Ireland as the King's Lieutenant

Chaucer was probably married as early as 1366 to Philippa, daughter of Sir Payne Roet, and sister of Katherine Swynford, afterwards the third wife of John of Gaunt In that year Philippa Chaucer, in the service of the Queen, was granted an annual stipend of ten marks In 1369 both Geoffrey and Philippa received cloth for mourning after the death of Queen Philippa But Philippa Chaucer is not actually described as Geoffrey's wife until 1374, when Chaucer receives a pension of ten pounds from John of Gaunt Two years earlier the Duke had granted a similar stipend to Philippa for her services to Constance, his wife. In 1374 Chaucer received from the King an award of a daily pitcher of wine, which was commuted, in 1378, to an additional pension of twenty marks The payments of the royal pensions are recorded year by year, though with some irregularity, in Philippa's case until 1387, when she apparently died, and in Chaucer's case until May 1, 1388, when he assigned his claim to John Scalby The nature of this transaction is not quite clear. Perhaps Chaucer made over the annuity to secure ready money On the face of the royal grant it appears simply that at Chaucer's request the pension was transferred to Scalby, who is also described as a deserving subject. It is unknown how long Chaucer received the annuity from John of Gaunt. When it was granted it was said to be for life, but very few records of payments have been published, and the accounts in which they would have been entered appear to be lost. The Lancaster Register shows several payments by the Duke for New Year's gifts for Philippa — in 1373 for a silver-gilt buttoner with six buttons, and in 1380, 1381, and 1382 for silver-gilt cups.

To return to Chaucer's offices at court and in the civil service, he is enrolled, in a list apparently dating from 1368, among the Esquires of the Royal Household, and he is still called "scutifer regis" in Beverlee's accounts in 1377. In 1368, as already noted, he was abroad on unknown business. In 1369 he saw military service for the second time in France, doubtless in the campaign in Picardy conducted by John of Gaunt. In 1370 he received letters of protection from June till Michaelmas because of his absence abroad in the King's service. The business on which he was engaged is again unknown. From December 1, 1372, till May 23, 1373, he was once more on the Continent, on what is usually regarded as his first Italian journey. He was commissioned to negotiate with the Genoese about the choice of an English port for their commerce, but the records show that he visited Florence as well as Genoa. From this famous journey, which has a place in Chaucer's intellectual development comparable to that of the "Italienische Reise" in Goethe's, has usually been dated his first acquaintance with the Italian language and literature. But he may have been chosen for the mission because he already had some knowledge of Italian. It is possible, too, though not very probable, that he had been in Italy with Lionel four years before. Shortly after his return to England in 1373, according to a writ recently discovered, Chaucer was directed to investigate an affair relative to a Genoese tariff at Dartmouth. This assignment has been reasonably taken as evidence of his knowledge of Italian, but does not indicate how early he acquired it.

On May 10, 1374, Chaucer obtained rent-free from the municipality the house above Aldgate which he did not give up till 1388. This seems to fix his settlement in the City, after having lived seventeen years or more (with one interval of which we have no record) in the households of Lionel and Edward. It also marks the beginning of a long series of official and professional appointments. On June 2, 1374, he was made Controller of Customs and Subsidy of Wools, Skins, and Hides in the port of London, on condition that he should write his rolls with his own hand. The regular stipend of this office was ten pounds a year, in addition to which Chaucer seems to have received annually, as a reward for diligent service, a gift of ten marks. Such payments, to the controller are recorded as early as 1373 (before Chaucer held the office), and the entries continue with some irregularity during his term of service.

In November, 1375, Chaucer was granted the wardship of the lands and heir of Edward Staplegate, in Kent, an appointment which brought him in emoluments of £104, and in December of the same year he received the wardship of another Kentish minor, William de Solys, in the parish of Nonington. In July, 1376, he was granted the substantial sum of £71-4-6, the fine of John Kent for exporting wool without license or the payment of custom. Chaucer's receipts from these grants, it has been estimated, must have been equal to approximately five thousand pounds in modern currency. A writ of July, 1375, very recently reported, which shows Chaucer to have been manucaptor for John de Romesey, treasurer of Calais, in an action connected with the seizure of goods of Thomas Langton on a charge of felony, brings further evidence of Chaucer's standing at the time as a substantial man of affairs.

Between 1376 and 1381 Chaucer was again employed on several missions or embassies, of some of which the exact nature is unknown. In December, 1376, he received with Sir John de Burley, a sum of money for secret service to the King. But no record of this journey appears to be preserved. In February, 1377, according to the Exchequer Rolls, Chaucer was sent to Flanders with Sir Thomas Percy, again "on the King's secret affairs" Froissart says that he and Sir Guichard d'Angle and Sir Richard Stury were commissioners to treat of peace. But none of the three is mentioned in the royal commission of February 20. Chaucer's accounts show that he was away from London from February 17 to March 25, and that he actually went to Paris and Montreuil. He was in France again, between April 30 and June 26, for fourteen days, and received £26-13-4 for this service, which seems to have been connected with the second negotiations for peace. Though Chaucer is again not named in the commission directed to the Bishops of St. Davids, Hereford, and others, Stow asserts, in his Annals, that he was sent with the bishops. Because of his frequent absences in the King's service Chaucer was given permission, during that same year, to employ Thomas de Evesham, a substantial London merchant, as deputy for the controllership of wools and hides.

On June 22, 1377, Richard II became King, and he at once confirmed Chaucer in his office of controller. The following March he confirmed the annuities awarded by Edward III to both Chaucer and Philippa.

According to a record of March 6, 1381, Chaucer took part, after Richard's accession, on a commission to negotiate a marriage between the King and a daughter of the King of France. He may have accompanied the Earl of Salisbury and Sir Guichard d'Angle, who were sent to France on this business in the summer of 1377. Another commission was appointed for the same purpose in January, 1378, but Chaucer is not mentioned as a member. If he did go to France at that time, he apparently returned to England before March 9, when he became a surety for William de Beauchamp on matters pertaining to Pembroke Castle. But again in May he was sent abroad on the King's service. He went in the retinue of Sir Edward de Berkeley to Lombardy to negotiate with Bernabo Visconti, Lord of Milan, and Sir John Hawkwood "for certain affairs touching the expedition of the King's war." Chaucer was absent from May 28 to September 19. He received at the time, through Walworth and Philpot, the sum of £66-13-4 for wages and expenses. But his actual expenses exceeded his allowance by fourteen pounds, and the balance was apparently not paid him until February, 1380. During his absence on this second (or possibly third) Italian journey he left powers of attorney with John Gower, the poet, and Richard Forester.

After the year 1378 there is only one record known of Chaucer's service on a mission abroad. In July, 1387, according to an entry recently discovered, he was granted protection for a year, to go to Calais in the retinue of Sir William Beauchamp. This time again his duties are unknown, and there is no mention of him in the account of William de la Pole, Beauchamp's controller. If Chaucer was away from England for any length of time during that year, the question naturally arises (as raised by Miss Rickert, who called attention to the record) whether the date usually assumed for the beginning of the Canterbury Tales should be put somewhat later.

Except for this single mission, Chaucer's public services after 1378, so far as is known, were performed in England. In 1374, the year of his appointment as Controller of the Customs, as already noted, he had leased the house over Aldgate which he occupied for the twelve years of his service at the Custom House. His residence was of course interrupted by the foreign journeys that have been mentioned, and also, it seems, by absences on private business in 1383, when he obtained leave to appoint a deputy for four months, and in 1384, when he was granted the same privilege for a month. In 1382 he was appointed Controller of the Petty Custom on wines and other merchandise, with permission to have a permanent deputy. In February, 1385, he obtained leave to have a permanent deputy in the wool custom. But the following year his employment at the Custom House came to an end — whether through voluntary resignation, or through the hostile action of Gloucester's commission, is unknown. He gave up his house over Aldgate, which was leased in October, 1386, to Richard Forster, or Forester. He must have already retired to live in Kent, for which county he had been appointed justice of the peace in 1385, and was elected Knight of the Shire in the summer of 1386

At this point may be mentioned an incident of the period of Chaucer's controllership which has occasioned considerable discussion On May 1, 1380, a certain Cecily Chaumpaigne released Chaucer of every sort of action "tam de raptu meo, tam de alia re vel causa" It has sometimes been supposed that this referred to an act of physical rape, and Skeat even suggested that "Little Lewis," for whom Chaucer composed the Astrolabe, was Cecily's son But it is more probable, and is now generally believed, that the case was one of civil "raptus," or abduction Chaucer's own father had been abducted as a child in an attempt to force him to marry Joan de Westhale, and in 1387, Chaucer himself served on a commission to inquire into the "raptus," or abduction, of a Kentish heiress, Isabella atte Halle In the case of Cecily Chaumpaigne, the principal offender seems to have been John Grove, who entered into a bond to pay her ten pounds

On February 19, 1386, Philippa Chaucer, whose close relation to the family of John of Gaunt and Constance of Castile has already been mentioned, was admitted to the fraternity of Lincoln Cathedral, along with Henry, Earl of Derby, John Beaufort, Sir Thomas Swynford, and several members of the Duke's household In the following year she apparently died, for there is no record of the payment of her annuity after June 18, 1387

It is uncertain, as has already been remarked, whether Chaucer's retirement from the Custom House was voluntary, or was due to the hostility of Gloucester and his faction toward the King's appointees Possibly Gloucester's influence may be responsible, too, for Chaucer's failure to be reelected to Parliament, in which he sat only for the session of 1386 At any rate it was not until 1389, when Richard became of age and assumed control of affairs, that Chaucer began to receive new preferments Nothing definite is known about his financial condition in the interval But a series of writs have been discovered, issued between April and June, 1388, enjoining his attachment for debt

In 1389 Chaucer was appointed to the important and responsible office of Clerk of the King's Works, which he held for twenty-three months He had charge of buildings and repairs in the Tower, Westminster Palace, and eight other royal residences, together with lodges, mews, parks, and other belongings In 1390 he was given a special commission to attend to repairs in St George's Chapel, Windsor It was part of his business, in the same year, to construct scaffolds for two tournaments at Smithfield, and, in addition to the regular duties of his office as Clerk, he was appointed in March to a commission, headed by Sir Richard Stury, to look after the walls, bridges, sewers, and ditches along the Thames from Greenwich to Woolwich Thus during his clerkship Chaucer must have been a very active man of affairs He had the management of large numbers of workmen and very considerable sums of money He must have been obliged to travel constantly from place to place in supervising his various pieces of construction The records show that in September, 1390, he was robbed either twice or three times within four days, and on one of these occasions he was assaulted and beaten Perhaps as a result of this experience, or because he found his office routine burdensome, or wished to have leisure for writing, he gave up the clerkship in the following year The reasons for his withdrawal are a matter of conjecture Some scholars have inferred from the recorded writs requiring him to settle his accounts and turn his offices over to John Gedney, his successor, that he was forced to resign because of dilatoriness or other kind of delinquency It is even suggested that he was blamed for allowing himself to be robbed But the assault and robbery is at least equally likely to have been a reason for his voluntary resignation His accounts, moreover, when finally rendered, showed the government to be in his debt for the sum of £21, the equivalent of approximately six hundred pounds today On this score, then, also, Chaucer might have had reason for voluntarily relinquishing the office

At some date before June 22, 1391 — and perhaps before June 17, when he gave up the Clerkship of the Works — he was appointed deputy forester of the royal forest of North Petherton in Somerset. The appointment was renewed in 1398. The manor of Newton Pleyce and the forestership, which was an appurtenance thereof, belonged to the Mortimers, earls of March, from 1359 until, by the failure of the Mortimer line, they passed into the hands of the Duke of York. It has been supposed that Chaucer received his first appointment from Edward Mortimer, the third earl, and his second from Eleanor, the dowager countess. But it has been recently shown that Sir Peter Courtenay had the administration of the forestership continuously from 1382 till 1405, first as custodian during the minority of the third earl, and after 1393 as lessee. So Chaucer appears to have owed his appointments to Courtenay. Since Courtenay was Constable of Windsor Castle during the time when Chaucer was in charge of the repairs of St. George's Chapel, this Petherton appointment may have some bearing on the theory that Chaucer's services as Clerk of the Works were terminated for inefficiency. It is not known how long Chaucer continued his work as forester after the renewal of his appointment in 1398.

The Petherton forestership is the last regular office that Chaucer is known to have held. In the discharge of its duties he may have spent a good deal of time in Somerset during the last decade of his life. But his designation, in April, 1396, as a member of a board of Greenwich freeholders to represent Gregory Ballard in an action concerning real estate would indicate that he retained his residence in Kent. Occasional entries in the records give evidence of his presence in London, and show that he continued to enjoy the royal favor. In January, 1393, he received a gift of ten pounds for "good service rendered to the King during the year now present." In February, 1394, after he had received all the arrears due him as Clerk of the Works, the King granted him a new annuity of twenty pounds, equal in value to about two-thirds of the annuity of forty marks he had assigned to Scalby in 1388. It is possible that during the year 1395-96 Chaucer was in attendance upon Henry, Earl of Derby (afterwards Henry IV). For at Christmas, 1395, and again in the following February, he appears to have delivered £10 to Henry from the clerk of the wardrobe. He also received from Henry a gift of a scarlet robe trimmed with fur, valued at over eight pounds. In December, 1397, Chaucer received a further mark of the King's favor in the grant of a butt of wine yearly. The informal promise apparently made at that time was confirmed by letters patent in the following October. Henry IV, immediately after his coronation in October, 1399, renewed Richard's grants of the annuity of £20 and the hogshhead of wine, and gave Chaucer an additional annuity of forty marks.

The payments of these stipends in Chaucer's last years appear from the records to have been very irregular. From the fact that he obtained a number of advances or loans from the Exchequer it has been inferred that he was in financial need. His begging poems, the Envoy to Scogan and the Complaint to his Purse, have also been cited in support of the opinion. But the poems are not to be taken too seriously, and the records give very little evidence of poverty, though Chaucer may have been in temporary embarrassment as the result of a suit for over £14 brought against him by Isabella Bukholt. He was given letters of protection for two years, "that certain jealous persons might not interfere with his performance of the king's business." The grounds of the Bukholt claim are unknown, but since the claimant's husband had been keeper of the royal park at Clarendon and the mews at Charing Cross, and thus a subordinate of Chaucer as Clerk of the Works, it has been reasonably inferred that the suit had to do with the conduct of that office or the distribution of its perquisites.

^v On December 4, 1399, Chaucer took a long lease, for fifty-three years, of a house in the garden of Westminster Abbey. But his actual occupation of it was brief. The last recorded payment of his pension was on June 5, 1400, and according to the generally accepted date inscribed on his tomb in Westminster Abbey, he died on October 25, 1400

The foregoing summary, which has been of necessity in large part a recital of dates and figures, includes all the more significant of the recorded facts of Chaucer's life that have thus far come to light. The account has been condensed by the omission of many entries relating to gifts, loans, and payments, and other transactions of minor importance. But the substance of the story, as it is now understood, has been here related. As shown by the comments made in the course of the narrative, the records are often of uncertain interpretation. They also leave us without positive information on such important matters as the dates of the poet's birth and marriage, the circumstances of his education, or the names and history of his children. They tell us little, except by implication, about his more intimate personal life or his intellectual interests. And, far from giving any information about his literary work, the contemporary documents cited do not once betray the fact that he was a man of letters.

On some of these points, however, information is supplied by other sources, and the story has been pieced out with tradition and conjecture, especially by the earlier biographers. In fact the more critical modern historians have rejected a whole series of traditions, which make up what Lounsbury called "the Chaucer legend."

It has not been easy to separate fact from legend in the case of assertions made on entirely unknown authority. With respect to Chaucer's education, for example, the older biographers reported a tradition that he studied at one or both of the universities. But no support has been found for the statement, and it is now generally rejected. Another tradition, however, that Chaucer was a member of one of the Inns of Court, which was rejected as legendary by Lounsbury, has lately been shown to be very probably true. It rests upon the declaration of Speght that Master Buckley had seen a record of the Inner Temple to the effect that Chaucer was fined two shillings for beating a Franciscan friar in Fleet Street. The records of the Inner Temple for the period have perished or disappeared, but since Master Buckley was their keeper in the sixteenth century his testimony is entitled to respect. The story in itself is perfectly credible, even the two-shilling fine being the kind of penalty commonly exacted for such an offense as is described. Legal training, moreover, would have been a natural preparation for Chaucer's career in business and public affairs, and in his writings — though this point should not be unduly pressed as evidence — he shows considerable acquaintance with the law. His study at the Temple may have fallen between 1361 and 1367 — a period, it will be remembered, during which we have no records of his doings.

With reference to Chaucer's family very little information has been found outside the records. Mention has already been made of Catherine Chaucer, his sister, and of Elizabeth Chaucy, who may have been his daughter. The "little Lewis" for whom he composed the Astrolabe was probably his son. Reasons have been given for identifying him with the younger Lewis Clifford, who was perhaps Chaucer's godson, and could therefore have been addressed as "son" in the treatise. But the recent discovery of the name of Lewis Chaucer in a record supports the usual belief that the boy was Chaucer's own child. He may have been a namesake and godson of Sir Lewis Clifford.

It is commonly held, and is highly probable, that Thomas Chaucer, who rose to wealth and influence in the beginning of the fifteenth century, was also the poet's son. None of the rather numerous documentary records that have been preserved of both men gives direct evidence of their relationship, which is first positively asserted by Thomas Gascoigne in his Dictionarium Theologicum. But Thomas Chaucer is known to have used the poet's seal, and the arms on his tomb clearly prove his connection with the Roets, the family of Chaucer's wife. In fact it is now generally agreed that Thomas was the son of Philippa. But it has been suspected by a few investigators, and has recently been ably argued by Dr. Russell Krauss, that Thomas's father was John of Gaunt. In the lack of more positive evidence than we possess, such a theory can be neither proved nor disproved. But when all allowance is made for the laxity of standards in the English court in the fourteenth century, and for the rather helpless position of retainers or subordinates in the households of the great, and even for the notoriously loose life of John of Gaunt, it still seems improbable that he injured and humiliated Chaucer, and entered into a relation with two sisters which would have been regarded as incestuous. For it is well known that Katherine, Philippa's sister, was first his mistress and afterwards his wife. The antecedent improbability of such an action the evidence so well presented by Dr Krauss is not strong enough to overcome. Neither the Lancastrian arms on Thomas's tomb, nor John of Gaunt's gifts and favors to Philippa and her husband, and to Thomas Chaucer himself, demand the explanation assumed. Moreover, the silence of the poet's contemporaries with regard to his relationship to Thomas really proves nothing. For, by hypothesis, Thomas was the son of Geoffrey's wife. Since he bore Chaucer's name he must have passed as his son, and this apparent relationship between the two men must have been a matter of common knowledge. If it was also an open secret that Thomas was a bastard, and for that reason contemporary writers never refer to him as Geoffrey's son, it is a little strange that the fact was not disclosed by some of the scribes or chroniclers who have preserved reports of other court scandals. Moreover, Gascoigne's testimony deserves respect as coming from a man of standing and an Oxfordshire neighbor of Thomas Chaucer.

The life of Thomas Chaucer is not strictly a part of the present story. But it may be of interest to note that he was in the service of John of Gaunt and Henry IV, and received annuities, like Geoffrey Chaucer, from both Richard and Henry. About 1394-95 he married Maud Burgersh. Their daughter, Alice, was married successively to the Earl of Salisbury and William de la Pole, later Duke of Suffolk. After 1411 Thomas paid the rent on the house at Westminster which Geoffrey had occupied at the end of his life. In 1413 he became forester of North Petherton, and is often referred to as Geoffrey's successor in that office. But it is more accurate to say that he followed Courtenay in the lease of the bailwick of the forests of Somerset. Neither his occupation of the Westminster house nor his Petherton forestership proves anything with regard to his relationship to Geoffrey. His public career was distinguished. He was chief butler to Richard II and his three successors, envoy to France, member of the King's Council, and several times Speaker of the House of Commons.

To return to Geoffrey Chaucer, the life-records, of which a chronological outline has here been presented, tell a very incomplete story, but they show at least the range of his experience and acquaintance. From boyhood he had personal knowledge of the court, living in close association successively with the households of Lionel, Edward III, and John of Gaunt. His biographers disagree as to the extent of patronage and protection accorded to him by Lancaster. But the Book of the Duchesse suggests that the poet stood in some dependent relation to the Duke, to whom he was certainly indebted for important favors in the early seventies. How long they were continued is not a matter of record, and it is uncertain how far Lancaster concerned himself with Chaucer's official appointments. Chaucer's association with Henry of Derby in the annuities may have no connection with his earlier relations to Gaunt, though it indicates a continued adherence to the Lancastrian house.

It is also uncertain to what degree Chaucer enjoyed the special favor of Richard and Anne. Complimentary references to the Queen have been recognized in the Knights Tale and the Troilus, and the Legend was apparently to be presented to her, — perhaps was written at the royal command. But the evidence is not sufficient to show, what has sometimes been conjectured, that Anne intervened personally in the appointment of a deputy to relieve Chaucer in 1385. In one case the King's favor may have worked to Chaucer's disadvantage. The loss of his controllership in 1386 he may have owed to the fact that he was regarded by Gloucester's party, in Professor Tout's phrase, as "one of the King's gang."

Throughout his long public career Chaucer came into contact with most of the men of importance in London, as well as with continental diplomats and rulers. The list of those with whom he appears to have had frequent dealings includes the great merchants Sir William Walworth, Sir Nicholas Brembre, and Sir John Philipot, and a number of ambassadors and officials of various sorts — Sir William de Beauchamp, Sir Guichard d'Angle, Sir John Burley, Sir Peter Courtenay, Walter Skurley, Bishop of Durham, and the so-called Lollard Knights — at one time followers of Wyclif — Sir Lewis Clifford, Sir William Neville, Sir John Clanvowe, and Sir Richard Stury. To these men, whom the records show to have been in one way or another associated with Chaucer, may be added, on the evidence of his own writings, Sir Philip de Vache, Clifford's son-in-law, and one of the Buktons, Sir Peter or Sir Robert.

This is a brilliant circle of courtiers and men of affairs. With regard to Chaucer's literary friendships the records give little information, but it is fair to assume without documentary evidence that he would have been acquainted with all the writers of importance in London. It is known that when he went to Italy in 1378 he named John Gower as his attorney. From the dedication of the Troilus to Gower, and the complimentary lines on Chaucer in the Confessio Amantis, it has been inferred that the two poets were in friendly, if not intimate, relations. Ralph Strode — philosophical Strode, who shares with Gower the dedication of the Troilus — is also brought by at least one record into connection with Chaucer in a business transaction. Other literary friends or acquaintances were Scogan, to whom he addressed his Envoy — doubtless Henry Scogan, a younger poet and disciple, afterwards tutor to the sons of Henry IV and author of a Moral Balade, probably Otes de Granson, a French poet who lived for a time in England and to whom he makes complimentary reference in the Complaint of Venus, and certainly Eustache Deschamps, who sent Chaucer by the hand of Clifford one of his productions with a request for a critical judgment upon it. Chaucer may have seen both Deschamps and Guillaume Machaut in France, though there appears to be no record of such a meeting. In his youth he would naturally have seen Froissart, who was attached to the household of Queen Philippa. During his London life he must have come into contact with Thomas Usk, the political associate of Brembre, whose execution shortly followed Brembre's in 1388. Usk's Testament of Love, it will be remembered, is full of borrowings from Chaucer's writings. Chaucer can hardly have failed also to know Wyclif, who preached for a time at the royal court, enjoyed the protection of John of Gaunt, and numbered among his followers, as already indicated, several of Chaucer's friends.

Chaucer's literary acquaintance may well have extended beyond England and France to Italy. For it would have been possible for him, at least, on his visits to that country to see Sercambi, whose Novelle, like the Canterbury Tales, describe a pilgrimage, Giovanni da Legnano, the great jurist whom he praises in the Clerk's Prologue, and Boccaccio and Petrarch, to both of whom he is indebted for important material. But no record has been found of his meeting any of these Italians, and the passage in the Clerk's Prologue, which is often cited to prove his personal acquaintance with Petrarch, is not really valid evidence.

This survey of Chaucer's friends and associates, though it discloses little of his more intimate personal life, helps us to reconstruct the world he lived in, and makes it easier to understand how he was able to give as complete a description as he did of the England of his day. In a measure, too, it reveals the kind of man he was, and for that reason is not without bearing on the literary judgment of his works. For example, anyone who contemplates his career will be slow to follow those critics who find in his writings the quality of simple-minded naiveté. It would seem unnecessary to labor this point did not the conception of a naïf Chaucer keep reappearing in critical comment. If the term were used in the sense made familiar by Schiller in his essay Ueber Naive und Sentimentalische Dichtung, there would be no reason to object. For Chaucer may well be classified with the naïve rather than the sentimental poets. But the critics here referred to appear to have in mind not the higher naïveté of genius, but rather the lower naïveté of children and simple people. It is easy, moreover, to see some of the reasons for the persistent attribution of this quality to Chaucer. There is a real simplicity in the English language of Chaucer's period, as contrasted with modern English, and simple directness is a marked characteristic of Chaucer's individual style. He is fond, too, of using the proverbs and other formulas of common speech. The society he describes was doubtless less mature and sophisticated than that of today, though not so childlike as the condescending modern likes to suppose. Perhaps some of the ideas Chaucer expresses about science and religion make him now seem credulous and uncritical. But it is not necessarily a mark of naïveté to accept the beliefs of one's age, and as a matter of fact Chaucer often shows independence and discrimination in his comments on received opinions. In actual life he proved himself able to deal with the shrewdest and most sophisticated men of affairs, and in his writings he displays an understanding of human nature that is altogether extraordinary.

CANON AND CHRONOLOGY OF CHAUCER'S WRITINGS

The life-records, as already explained, give no direct information about Chaucer's works. For evidence about the date and authenticity of these it is necessary to go to the writings themselves, to the statements of the copyists who have preserved them, and to such testimony as can be found in the literature of the period. Chaucer's own lists in the Introduction to the Man of Law's Tale, the Prologue to the Legend, and the Retractation (if it is genuine) are of course of primary importance. The information derived from these various sources is treated with some fullness later, in the discussion of the separate works, and a brief summary statement is all that is necessary here.

In the early editions of Chaucer, even down to the middle of the last century, many writings were included, his authorship of which is either unsupported by evidence or demonstrably impossible. Some of them were not attributed to Chaucer by the first editors, but came gradually to be associated with him. They finally swelled the volume of the works which passed for his in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and they must be taken into account in any study of the opinion of Chaucer held by English poets and critics of those periods.

Skeat's Oxford Chaucer (six volumes, 1894) and the Globe Chaucer (1898) were the first modern collected editions from which such spurious works were rigorously excluded. Skeat published an additional seventh volume of Chaucerian Pieces (1897), in which a number of the most important writings of the Chaucer Apocrypha were made easily accessible. Of the pieces included in the present edition, there is no serious question of the authorship of any except the few short poems listed as doubtful (printed on pages 636-39) and the Romaunt of the Rose.

With regard to the chronological order of the works there is more uncertainty. It is perhaps surprising that hardly any of them can be dated from a connection with a definite event. Among the longer poems the Book of the Duchess is the only exception, and even in that case the traditional opinion has been called in question. But there is no strong reason for doubting that the work was composed to commemorate the death of Blanche, Duchess of Lancaster, which took place in 1369. A very few of the short pieces — the Complaint to his Purse, less positively the envoys to Bukton and Scogan, and possibly the Fortune — can be brought into association with particular occurrences.

The Astrolabe, on the evidence of one of its calculations, may be safely assigned to 1391 or 1392. A few other works, like the Knigh't's Tale, the Troilus, the Man of Law's Tale, can be approximately dated by more or less doubtful allusions. But the greater number of Chaucer's writings can be only arranged in a probable order, based partly upon their relations to one another, and partly upon the consideration of their sources. Of course Chaucer's own lists are helpful in determining their dates as well as their authenticity. The allegorical interpretations that have been proposed for several pieces — the House of Fame, the Aneida, the Parliament of Fowls, and a number of the Canterbury Tales — are too dubious to be used as evidence.

To illustrate some of the more positive data in the solution of the problem, the Palamon (the original form of the Knigh't's Tale) and the Troilus must both precede the Prologue to the Legend, in which they are mentioned, and the Legend must have been at least partly written before the Introduction to the Man of Law's Tale, which refers to it. It has not been conclusively proved whether the Knigh't's Tale or the Troilus was written first. But there is reason (in an astronomical allusion) for dating the completion of the Troilus not earlier than 1385. The Troilus appears, also, to have been followed at no long interval by the Prologue to the Legend, and the first form of that has been reasonably assigned, on the evidence of Chaucer's use of Deschamps, to the year 1386. The Palamon, therefore, should probably be put before the Troilus, and there is nothing in the two poems themselves to make this order unlikely. Some of the individual legends of Good Women look like rather early work, and may have preceded the Prologue. If the dates suggested for these various writings are accepted, the years from 1387 onward remain fairly free for Chaucer's consecutive work on the Canterbury Tales.

By the use of such evidence as has been described, supplemented by literary considerations, the following chronological table may be tentatively constructed.

Before 1372 The ABC (if composed for the Duchess Blanche), The Book of the Duchess (1369-70), and probably some of the early lyrics and complaints of the French type

1372-80 Transitional works, partly of the French tradition, but showing the beginnings of Italian influence, The House of Fame, Saint Cecilia (the Second Nun's Tale), the tragedies afterward used for the Monk's Tale, Aneida, some of the lyrics

1380-86 Works in which the Italian influence is fully assimilated, the Parliament of Fowls (possibly a little earlier), Palamon, Troilus, probably preceded shortly by the Boece, some of the short poems, probably including the Boethian group of ballades, the Legend of Good Women

1387-92 The General Prologue and the earlier Canterbury Tales, the Astrolabe (1391-92)

1393-1400 The later Canterbury Tales (including the "Marriage Group"), the latest short poems, including Scogan, Evkton, and the Complains to his Purse

Some of the minor poems of uncertain date have been omitted from the table, as has also the Romaunt of the Rose, of which Chaucer's authorship is altogether doubtful. If Fragment A is his, the style and verse-form would point to its classification with the Book of the Duchess in the French period. But Chaucer's version may have been in a different form, and the association of it with the Troilus in the Prologue to the Legend has led some scholars to put it in the decade of the eighties.

LANGUAGE AND METER

Professor Scherillo, in his history of the origins of Italian literature, commenting upon the statement frequently made that Dante created the Italian language, reminds his readers that this is claiming for the Italian poet a function like that of Adam in Eden, when he gave names to all the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air! A similar reminder might appropriately have been addressed to those writers who have called Chaucer the creator of English. Such a statement of course totally misrepresents the development of the language. Chaucer employed the London speech of his time, and a minute comparison of his usage with that of the contemporary London archives shows the two to correspond in all essentials. He not only did not invent or alter the grammatical inflections, but he also appears to have added few words to the English vocabulary. At least Mr Henry Bradley, in the light of his experience in editing the New English Dictionary, was very cautious about attributing such contributions to the poet. It is even doubtful if Chaucer had any important part in making the East Midland the dominant dialect. The speech of the capital would have become standard English if he had never written a line. But he did add greatly to its prestige and distinction. The very fact that he wrote in English instead of French was significant. He developed the resources of the language for literary use, and set an example which was followed by a long line of poets.

Chaucer's language, then, is late Middle English of the South East Midland type. As compared with Anglo-Saxon or some of the other dialects of Middle English, its inflections are simple and offer little difficulty to the reader of today. But many words retained a syllabic -e, either final or in the ending -es or -en, which afterwards ceased to be pronounced, and the vowels had in general their present continental rather than their English sound. For metrical purposes, consequently, Chaucer's language was very different from ours, and it is impossible to read his verse properly — to say nothing of appreciating it — without having some knowledge of the older pronunciation and grammatical forms. It is because this knowledge was lost from the fifteenth century down to the middle of the nineteenth that many of Chaucer's most enthusiastic admirers among English poets and critics have regarded his meter as irregular and rough.

The brief grammatical outline that follows is intended to supply the reader or student with such knowledge of Chaucer's sounds and inflections as is necessary for the intelligent reading of the verse. To save space, certain inflectional forms, such as the principal parts of strong verbs, which are registered in the Glossary, are not repeated here. The Glossary also records exceptional forms, like the contracted third singular present indicative of verbs or "petrified" datives of nouns, and it shows the nominative forms of nouns and adjectives when they are likely to give any trouble because of their unlikeness to modern English. In general, final e's that appear in the present text may be assumed to represent correct Chaucerian usage. For it has been the editor's intention to remove all the incorrect scribal e's, which abound in the manuscripts.

PRONUNCIATION

VOWELS AND DIPHTHONGS There is considerable inconsistency in the spelling of the vowels and diphthongs. Vowels are commonly, but not regularly, doubled to indicate length — not only e, as in modern English e.g. "deed," but also a and o, and rarely i.

Sound	Pronunciation	Spelling	Examples
ā	like a in "father"	a, aa	name, caas ǣ	like a in Ger "Mann"	a	can, that ē (close)	like a in "fate"	e, ee	sweete ē (open)	like e in "there"	e, ee	heeth ɛ	like e in "set"	e	tendre
e (the neutral vowel)	like a in "about"	e	yonge, sonne
i	like i in "machine"	i, y	ryden, shres ī	like i in "sit"	i, y	thus, thyng ō (close)	like o in "note"	o, oo	good, bote
ō (open)	like oa in "broad"	o, oo	holy, rood (vb)

Sound	Pronunciation	Spelling	Examples
ō	like o in "hot"	o	oft, lot
ū	like oo in "boot"	ou, ow, ogh	fowles, di oghte
ū	like u in "full"	u, o	but yong, songen (pt pl)
iū	like u in "mute"	u, eu, ew	Pruce, vertu, salewe
ī	like ē + i	ai, ay, ei, ey	sayle day, ue, cause, draughte
au	like ou in "house"	au, aw	knew ēu	like e + u	eu ew	lewed ēu	like e + u	eu ew	coy, joye oi	like oy in "boy"	oi, oy	growen ōu	like ō + u	ou, ow	knowen, sowle

ōu	like ō + u	o(u), before gh

Some of the pronunciations indicated in the preceding table are only approximate, and others are doubtful. Chaucer's close \bar{e} and \bar{o} did not quite correspond to the vowels now heard in "name" and "note," which are really diphthongal ($\bar{e} + a$ transitional \bar{e} , $\bar{o} + u$). It is hard to judge in how many cases Chaucer's \bar{a} preserved the sound of a in German "Mann," and when it had the sound of \bar{a} , as in modern English "that" (and AS "þæt"). The combinations eu, ew, represented not only the descending diphthong $\bar{e}u$, $\bar{e}u$ (as in knew, from AS cneow, lewed, AS lawed), but also the ascending diphthong iu (as probably in salewen, Fr "saluer"). The first sound ultimately developed into the second (as in modern English "knew," "lewd"), and it is uncertain just what Chaucer's pronunciation was in individual cases. Similarly, in the combinations ou, ow, the original distinction between $\bar{o}u$ (with close \bar{o}) and $\bar{q}u$ (with open \bar{q}) was apparently breaking down, and the two classes of words are not kept apart in rime. But the diphthong ou (of various origins) before gh had a different sound, which developed into the modern long vowel in "thought" and "fought." The pronunciation of the diphthongs variously spelled ai, ay, ei, ey is a matter of disagreement. The sounds concerned are of different origins, some coming from $e + i$ or $e + g$ (as in seylen, uey, counseil), others from $\bar{a} + g$ (as in day, fayn), and others from $a + i$ (as in batayle, fayle). They had all fallen together so as to rime acceptably one with another. It is doubtful whether the pronunciation was $\bar{a}i$ (as in "aisle") or $\bar{a}e$ (approaching the modern pronunciation of "way," "day"). But the latter seems the more probable.

The distinction between open and close \bar{e} and \bar{o} does not appear in Chaucer's spelling, and no simple rule can be given which will guide the reader in all cases. The modern spellings ea and oa ("heath," "boat") usually point to the broad pronunciation in Middle English, but there are many exceptions. The modern pronunciation — \bar{o} for Chaucer's \bar{q} (as in "rode") and oo (i.e., long u) for his \bar{o} (as in "noon") — is a better test in the case of \bar{o} , but it fails with \bar{e} , where the two classes of sounds have fallen together (as in "seek" and "heath"). Even the evidence of etymology is not always decisive, for special conditions sometimes affected the development of words. But as a general rule \bar{e} (close) corresponds to AS (or Old Mercian) \bar{e} , $\bar{e}o$, ON \bar{e} and \bar{e} , OF (and Anglo-Norman) \bar{e} (close), \bar{e} (open), to AS \bar{a} , ea, and \bar{e} (when lengthened in Middle English), ON \bar{a} , and OF (or Anglo-Norman) \bar{e} , \bar{o} (close), to AS \bar{o} or \bar{o} lengthened before consonantal combinations, ON \bar{o} , and OF (or Anglo-Norman) \bar{o} (close), \bar{o} (open), to AS or ON \bar{a} and \bar{o} (when lengthened before a nasal or in open syllables) and OF \bar{o} (when lengthened in open syllables). For the assistance of readers who find it difficult to apply these tests, cases of open \bar{e} and \bar{o} have been marked (\bar{e} and \bar{o}) in the Glossary of the present edition. Full treatment of the history of the sounds will of course be found in the Middle English grammars listed in the Bibliography, especially those of Luick and Jordan.

Modern English But there were no silent consonants, except h in French words like honour and g in French gn, which had the sound of single n (as in resigne, riming with medecyne) Ordinarily in the combinations gn (in native English words), kn (or cn), and wr, g, k, and w were pronounced, and l was pronounced before f, k, and m (as in half, folk, palmer) The sound of ng is held to have been regularly that of ng in "finger" Double g had sometimes the sound of dg (as in juggen), sometimes that of gg in "bigger" (as in frogges) The modern pronunciation is a safe guide ch had the English sound (as in "church"), not the French (as in "machine") The spirant gh, which became silent in later English, had the sound of the German ch in "ich" and "doch" (palatal after a front vowel, and guttural after a back vowel) r was trilled s and th ought regularly to have been unvoiced (i.e., with the sound of s in "sit" and th in "thin"), except when between vowels Between vowels they were voiced (sounded as in Mod Eng "those") But the distinction may not have been observed consistently, and the later voicing in many words (th in "these," "those," and s in "is," "was") may have begun in Chaucer's period The suffix -cion (Mod Eng -cion) had two syllables, and could rime with words in -on or in -oun The spellings of the ending in the MSS are very inconsistent For their treatment in the present edition see the introductory account of the textual method, p. xxxix, below

INFLECTIONS

The inflectional endings in Chaucer's language which differ from those in modern English can be briefly indicated for the various parts of speech In many cases they consist simply of a final -e which in later English ceased to be pronounced

NOUNS Many nouns have in the nominative case a final -e which is lost in modern English It is not strictly an inflectional ending, but usually represents a final vowel in the language from which the word descends or is derived Examples ende, from AS "ende", name, from AS "nama", some, from AS "sunu", entente, from OF "entente" When the -e does not have a corresponding vowel in the source (as in carte, from AS "cræt"), it is called unhistoric or morganic In a number of nouns Chaucer had two forms, one with and one without final -e Such words are entered in the Glossary with an -e in parenthesis — as, for example, bliss(e)

The regular inflectional endings in the great majority of Chaucerian nouns are the same as in Modern English — s or es in the genitive (or possessive) singular and in the plural But there are a few exceptional forms to be noted, all of them obvious survivals of older inflections Of course some of them, like the umlauting plurals, are familiar in modern English

Gen sg without ending a) in nouns of the AS n-declension (chirche, lady, herte), b) in nouns of the AS r-declension (fader, brother), c, in nouns with final s (Venus some)

Dat sg This is normally without ending in Chaucer (in the hous, in my lyf) But in certain stereotyped phrases the old dative ending survived Examples on lyve, a-lyve, Mod Eng "alive", on fyre, "afire", to bedde, to shippe, with childe Many of the phrases in which this so-called "petrified" dative survives are recorded in the Glossary

Plural without ending a) in AS neuter nouns, and others, which had no ending in the nom acc pl (yeer, but also yeses, deer, sheep, freend), b) nouns in -s (caas, paas), c) in umlauting nouns, which still form their plural by a change of vowel (men, gees, feet)

Plural in -en now rare, but common in AS and represented by a number of cases in Chaucer (asshen, eyen or yen, hosen, fon, pesen, been) Parallel forms in -es usually also occurred

ADJECTIVES The adjective, like the noun, sometimes has a final -e in the nominative case (swete, grene, drye) Such forms are recorded in the Glossary between the strong and the weak declensions. The latter occurs a) when the adjective follows the article, a demonstrative or possessive pronoun, or a noun in the genitive (the yonge sonne, has halve cours, Epicurus owne sone), b) when it is used with a noun in the vocative (O stronge God), c) often when it is used with proper names (farre Venus), d) perhaps in a few other cases when the adjective is used substantivally, though other explanations of the ending can usually be found (the beste, where the article precedes, by weste, perhaps a dative). The ending of the weak adjective is -e, which is also the regular ending of the strong plural. The following paradigm represents Chaucer's regular usage:

	Strong	Weak	Strong	Weak
Singular	yong	yonge	swete	swete
Plural	yonge	yonge	swete	swete

The inflectional -e, whether of the weak form or the plural, is usually not found in predicate adjectives, which are undeclined. It is also rarely pronounced, though often written, in adjectives of two syllables, where it does not fall in with the rhythm of the verse (or, probably, of prose speech). In trisyllabic adjectives, however, where it makes a fourth syllable, it is often preserved. Compare the holy blisful martir with the semelheste man, O wommanliche wyf.

In addition to the regular weak and plural endings, Chaucer's adjectives show some exceptional forms. The old strong ending of the genitive singular in -es is preserved in alleskannes, "of every kind," noskannes, "of no kind." There appear to be a very few datives in -e, survivals of the old strong dative inflection, though in most of the cases concerned other explanations of the ending are possible. Examples of olde tyme, with harde grace, of purpos grete, in salte see, by weste — some of which may be explained as extensions of the use of the weak inflection. An old accusative ending is preserved in the combination halwendel (AS "healfne dæl"). The AS strong genitive plural survives in one word aller (also aller-, alder-, in composition), from "ealra." There are a few examples of plural adjectives with the French ending -es (places delectables, houres inequales). These occur chiefly in the works translated from the French.

The regular suffixes for the comparison of adjectives are the same as in modern English, -er and -est. In Anglo-Saxon both the comparative and the superlative took the weak inflection, and the corresponding forms are often spelled with a final -e (-ere, -este) in Chaucer. But the ending is seldom pronounced in the verse except where it constitutes a second or a fourth syllable (the semelheste man). A few forms show the umlaut of the root vowel, as in Anglo-Saxon (lenger, strenger, elder, etc.), or the doubling of a final consonant (gretter, sonner). A number of adjectives are irregularly compared good, better, beste, bad, badder, or worse (worse), werste (worst), much(e), more or mo, moste (meste), lytel, lasse (lesse), leeste, etc. Such exceptional forms are registered in the Glossary.

ADVERBS. The regular endings of Chaucer's adverbs are -e and -ly or -liche (the last two coming from the adjectival ending -lich with the adverbial ending). Examples brighte, smerte, royallche or royally. There are a few adverbs in -es or -en, which correspond to AS ending in -es or -an. Examples ones, twyes, hennes, aboven, abuten. With the forms in -es, properly genitives in origin, may be compared the adverbial phrase his thankes "willingly." The exceptional form whilom appears to correspond to the AS dat. pl. hwilum, but is probably to be explained as a late modification of Middle English whalen, into which the AS form normally developed.

PRONOUNS. The pronouns are mostly like those in modern English. Exceptional forms, which might give the reader trouble, are registered in the Glossary. The following special cases may be noted here:

In the first person, ich (Northern ik) occurs beside I. The possessive adjectives my and thy take the regular -e in the plural. In the third person singular, the neuter genitive is the same as the masculine — his (not “its”) The spelling hise (“his,” “its”) is often found, in the manuscripts, with plural nouns, but the -e appears not to have been pronounced and has been struck off in the present text The plural forms of the personal pronoun in the third person were nom they, gen hire, here, dat, acc hem, (the forms “their” and “them” not having yet come into London English) In the plural possessives oure, youre, hire, the -e seems to have been regularly unpronounced

In the demonstrative thuse (these) the final -e was almost invariably silent, and usually in the plural forms some, swiche, and whiche, when used pronominally When used adjectivally these words are more likely to show an inflectional -e

VERBS Chaucer's verbs show the characteristic Germanic distinction between the weak and the strong conjugations Strong verbs, often called irregular, make their preterite tense by the change of the root vowel (ablaut), and weak verbs, by the addition of an ending (-de or -te) The principal parts of the strong verbs, which for the most part resemble those in modern English so closely as to be easily recognizable, are fully registered in the Glossary, as are also the forms of weak verbs that present any peculiarities The inflectional endings are shown in the following tables Parentheses are used to indicate alternative forms Thus n may always be dropped in the verbal ending -en, and the prefix y- may or may not be used with participles

Present tense (strong and weak alike)
Indicative	Subjunctive
Singular 1 singe	Singular singe
2 singest	Plural singe(n) 3 singeth Plural singe(n)

A number of verbs have contracted forms in the second and third singular hiz (hest), bit (biddeth), find (findeth), set (setteth), stont (stondeth), worth (wortheth) Such forms, when not easily recognizable, are recorded in the Glossary

Preterite Indicative

Strong		Weak
Singular 1	song, sang	Singular 1	wende lovede
2	song(e)	2	wendest lovedest
3	song, sang	3	wende lovede
Plural	songe(n)	Plural	wende(n) lovede(n)

The preterite subjunctive, like the present, has -e in the singular and -c(n) in the plural

Imperative

Strong		Weak
Singular 2	sing	Singular 2	loke her
Plural 2	singeth, -e	Plural 2	loketh, -e hereth, -e

Strong verbs and long-stemmed weak verbs of the first class in Anglo-Saxon have regularly no -e in the second singular, other weak verbs have -e But -e is often written in the manuscripts, and sometimes pronounced in the verse, in forms not historically entitled to it Example As sende love and pees bitwixe hem two Such forms, which appear in long-stemmed weak verbs in late Anglo-Saxon, are perhaps sometimes to be regarded as jussive subjunctives

Infinitive — The ending is -en or -e in strong and weak verbs alike singe(n), wene(n) In a very few verbs there is preserved an old gerundive or inflected infinitive with a dative -e to done, to sene, to seyne

Participles — The present active participle of all verbs, weak and strong, ends in -ing

or -inge sung(e), lovng(e) The preterite passive participle of strong verbs ends in -e(n), of weak verbs, in -d or -t Examples (y-)sunge(n), (y-)loved, (y-)taught The prefix y- (from AS ge-) is frequent with both strong and weak verbs The preterite participle is ordinarily uninflected, but in a few cases has the adjectival plural ending in -e Examples Sw they been tolde, with eres spradde

Preterite present (or strong-weak) verbs — There is a small class of verbs in the Germanic languages in which an old strong preterite came to be used as a present tense, and a new weak preterite was formed to express past time For example

Present		Preterite
Singular 1	shal	Singular 1	sholde
	2 shalt		2 sholdest
	3 shal		3 sholde
Plural	shull(en) , shal	Plural	sholde(n)

The other preterite-present verbs are can (pret kouthe, koude), dar (pret dorstie), may (pret mughte), most (pret moste), owe (pret oughte), thar (pret thurfte, but confused with dorstie), and woot (pret wiste) The peculiar forms of all these verbs are entered in the Glossary

Anomalous verbs — The following four verbs show exceptional irregularities

Goon, pret yede and wente

Doon, pret dade

Wil(e), wol(e), 2 sg wilt, wolt, 3 sg wil(e), wol(e), pl, willen, wil, wollen, wol, pret wolde The -e of the 1 and 3 sg present indicative, though apparently always silent, is often found in the manuscripts, and is historically justified (AS wile, originally subjunctive)

Been Pres ind sg am, art, is, pl been, be, rarely are(n) Pres sbj sg be, pl been, be Pret ind sg was, were, was, pl were(n) Pret sbj sg were, pl were(n) Imperative sg be, pl beeth

VERSIFICATION

The various verse-forms used by Chaucer are discussed in the introductions and notes to the separate works But a few general directions may be given here for the reading of his lines

The most important difference between Chaucer's English and modern English, for the purpose of versification, lies in the numerous final -e's and other light inflectional endings described in the preceding pages These endings are ordinarily pronounced in the verse, and indeed are essential to the rhythm They are also pronounced in rime, and Chaucer with almost complete consistency avoided riming words in -e with words not etymologically or grammatically entitled to that ending But within the verse final -e is regularly elided before an initial vowel or before an h which is either silent (as in honour) or slightly pronounced (as in he, his, her, ham, hem, hadde, and a few other words) Before initial consonants -e is ordinarily sounded, though there are cases on almost every page where it must have been either slurred or entirely apocopated These statements apply, of course, only to the light, unstressed final -e, and not to the long ē (often spelled ee) in words like majestee or charitee

Most of Chaucer's lines, if read naturally and with a proper regard to grammatical endings, have an obvious rhythm But there are many cases, apart from doubtful textual readings, where there is uncertainty as to elision or apocopation, or even a reasonable choice between two ways of rendering a line Probably no rules can ever be laid down to settle all such questions Certain characteristics of Chaucer's versification may, however, be borne in mind His lines — as contrasted, for example, with those of Gower — have great freedom and variety of movement He constantly shifts the position of the *

caesural pause He often reverses the rhythm of a foot, substituting a trochaic for an iambic movement Like most English poets, he not infrequently has an extra light syllable in a line (a trisyllabic foot in place of the regular iambus), though in such cases it is often impossible to determine whether to resort to apocopation The extra syllable seems to have been most frequent in the caesural pause One other irregularity, which some critics have condemned and the scribes themselves sometimes tried to correct by emendation, Chaucer certainly allowed himself He not infrequently omitted the unaccented syllable at the beginning of a line These headless, or nine-syllable, lines — seven-syllable in the case of the octosyllabic meter — are by no means objectionable when the initial stress falls upon an important word When a preposition or conjunction gets this initial accent, there is perhaps more reason for the objections of the critics, but the evidence of the manuscripts makes it necessary to admit many such lines to the text

In the following short passage from the General Prologue, which will serve as a specimen of scansion, the metrical stresses are marked with an accent (´), syllabic light e's have a diaeresis (¨), and elided or apocopated e's are underdotted It will be understood, of course, that the metrical accents varied in strength, unimportant words receiving only a secondary stress

THE TEXT

In the Textual Notes on the separate works will be found lists of the manuscripts and other authorities for the text, together with references to previous studies in their classification Special problems, also, are discussed in the notes on the works in connection with which they arise But here, in the introduction, may properly be given some account of the general method of the present edition

The entire text has been made afresh by the editor It is based upon his examination of all the published manuscript materials and photographs or collations of some of the more important unpublished sources Account has been taken of the numerous studies that have been made of the character and relations of the manuscripts, and it has been the editor's intention to pay due regard to critical principles In fact the text may be called a critical edition, with one reservation In the case of some of the more important works, including the Canterbury Tales, the manuscript materials accessible to the editor have not been exhaustive But the best copies of all the works have been available for use as the basis of the edition, and enough others have been compared to make possible, in the editor's belief, the establishment of trustworthy texts

The Canterbury Tales, for example, are preserved in some ninety manuscripts and early prints, complete or fragmentary. Photographs of all these copies have recently been brought together at the University of Chicago by Professor Manly and his associates, who are preparing a great critical edition. Their work, which is eagerly awaited by all Chaucerians, will shed new light on doubtful readings, and will probably make it possible for the first time to reconstruct the successive stages in the composition of the Canterbury Tales. But it does not appear likely that a text based upon the complete collation would be materially different from one that can be constructed from the eight published manuscripts which include the best copy, the Ellesmere MS, and are so distributed as to represent all the important groups of authorities. For the Pardoner's Prologue and Tale, of course, the editor has used the specimens published by the Chaucer Society, representing in all over fifty copies upon which Zupitza and Koch based their classification of the authorities, and for the Clerk's Tale he has had the published specimens from eight additional manuscripts. He has been further aided by the numerous citations of the readings of special passages printed in such textual studies as Professor Tatlock's paper on the Harleian Manuscript and the late Professor Brusendorff's Chaucer Tradition. In addition to all this printed material, the editor has collated the Cardigan MS, a superior copy which was not represented among the specimens printed by the Chaucer Society, and the Morgan MS, which is classified with those of less authority.

In textual method the present editor does not belong to the severest critical school. When the readings of the "critical text" or of a superior archetype appeared unsatisfactory or manifestly inferior, he has accepted help from other authorities more often than the strict constructionists might approve. He has seen no way of avoiding the exercise of personal judgment. But he has not practiced mere eclecticism, and in making his decisions he has endeavored to give constant attention to the relation of the manuscripts and to all relevant consideration of language, meter, and usage. Some of the problems that have arisen — and they vary considerably in the different works of Chaucer — may be briefly described.

In the Canterbury Tales, for example, as is fully set forth in the Textual Notes below, the A type of manuscripts, represented by Ellesmere, Hengwrt, Cambridge Dd, and Cambridge Gg — whether or not they all go back to a single archetype below the original — is generally accepted as of superior authority to the B type, which includes Harleian 7334, Corpus, Petworth, and Lansdowne. They are the basis of the present text, as of all recent editions. In the Pardoner's Tale, for which nearly all the authorities have been printed and compared, there seems to be no case where the reading of the more numerous manuscripts of type B is preferable. But elsewhere in the tales there are a few passages where the B readings seem to the editor superior to the A readings, and he has not hesitated to adopt them. Thus in the General Prologue, I, 510 (where, of course, only the eight published manuscripts and the Cardigan and Morgan copies were considered) chauntere (B) clearly affords a better and more Chaucerian rhythm than chauntrye (A), which Professor Liddell, in his critical edition, retained in strict adherence to his archetype. Other examples of B readings accepted in the present text are ben (A leyn), PrT, VII, 676, Odenake (A Omedake), MkT, VII, 2072, out of the yerd (A into this yerd), NPT, VII, 3422, gultelees (A gultees), FranklT, V, 1318, fayerye (A favyre), MerchT, IV, 1743.

Although some editors would follow their archetype more strictly, the readings mentioned are of course entirely defensible from the point of view of critical method, since the original of the A manuscripts need not have been at all points superior to that of type B. More serious difficulties in adhering to critical procedure arise in connection with the baffling MS Harl 7334, the peculiar relations of which are said to have deterred Mr Henry Bradshaw from editing the Canterbury Tales. Classified somewhat doubtfully by the textual critics among the manuscripts of type B the Harleian copy shows evidence of contamination with the superior type A, and has many unique readings of great interest. Some editors, among them Professor Skeat and Mr. Pollard, have held it to contain Chaucerian revisions, and they have consequently felt free to draw upon any of its readings that seem intrinsically attractive. Other scholars have doubted the special authority of the manuscript, and, in the opinion of the present editor, it has been virtually disproved by Professor Tatlock in his study on the subject. Taking the more important passages where the Harleian readings are unique among the eight published manuscripts, Mr. Tatlock collated them with some thirty-five other copies to discover how much support they might have, and then examined the readings themselves to determine their character and value. He showed that many which have been adopted by the editors were clearly scribal emendations, and in some cases very poor ones. The officious and entirely unnecessary substitution of cloysterlees for recchelees in the familiar passage of the General Prologue (I, 179) is typical of the procedure of this anonymous editor. Again, in KnT, I, 1906, the Harleian reading And westward in the mynde and in memorye may safely be regarded as the scribe's emendation of the defective reading of most manuscripts, And on (or in) the westward in memorye. Professor Tatlock in the study in which he discredited the Harleian text as a whole was inclined to accept its authority in this passage. But the reading, And on the gate westward in memorye, which has been found in a few scattered manuscripts, is more likely to have been what Chaucer wrote, and would explain easily the corrupted forms in which the line is preserved. Similarly the greater number of unique Harleian readings appear on examination to be emendations, and many of them can be traced to the scribe's dislike of headless, or nine-syllable, lines. There remain, however, a few passages in which it is hard not to follow the Harleian text. In KnT, I, 2037, where all the printed manuscripts have the obvious blunder sertres, certres (or a variant thereof), the Harleian reads correctly sterres, which all editors adopt (except Koch, who emends to cercles). Again in Gen Prolog, I, 485, And swich he was yprevod ofte sithes, all the manuscripts except the Harleian read prevod, to the decided impairment of the rhythm. In this case Professor Liddell, whose definitely announced policy was to "boycott the Harleian," adopted its reading, as he did also in KnT, I, 3104, And he hure serveth also gentilly (where all the other printed manuscripts read so). On the other hand in KnT, I, 2892, Mr. Liddell read Upon thise stedes grete and white, rejecting the relief afforded by the Harleian text (that weren grete and white), though the other reading compels us to accent upon unnaturally on the first syllable and to pronounce the final e of thise which is usually silent. Possibly the correct reading of this line is Upon thise steedes grete and lilye whyte, which is found in MS. Cardigan. Again in KnT, I, 3071, Mr. Liddell reads I rede we make of sorwes two, with objectionable rhythm and questionable hiatus, and refuses to insert that on the sole authority of the Harleian. It is difficult for any editor to proceed consistently, and improbable that any two editors would always agree, in dealing with these readings. In the present edition they are accepted sparingly, and only when the alternative readings are so unsatisfactory, or those of the Harleian manuscript so intrinsically superior, as to justify the risk. In its wholesale correction of headless lines the editor has not followed the Harleian scribe, for there is abundant evidence that Chaucer wrote them in both his decasyllabic and his octosyllabic verse. But in lines where the rhythm is otherwise objectionable or open to question the help of the Harleian manuscript has sometimes been accepted, and special considerations have sometimes entered into the editor's decision. Thus in Gen Prolog, I, 752, the Harleian reading, For to have been a marchal in an halle, has been adopted in place of the shorter For to been of the other manuscripts, not simply because of the headless line, but because of the possibility that the Harleian reading preserves, or restores, the good old use of the perfect infinitive to express action contrary to fact. In the case of all doubtful readings the editor has tried to give special consideration to old grammatical forms or idioms which might have been lost or corrupted by the scribes.

The presence of correct unique readings in the Harleian copy may be explained either on the theory of emendation, or on that of contamination with some good lost manuscript, and there is other evidence that the Harleian text is derived in part from a source which belonged to type A. It is perhaps even possible that the Harleian preserved some good readings which were coincidentally corrupted in the A manuscripts and in the remaining manuscripts of type B. But of course the chances of this are slight.

The problem of unique readings arises sometimes with superior manuscripts, like the Ellesmere copy of the Canterbury Tales or the Cambridge Gg copy of the Parliament of Fowls. In the case of Ellesmere the editor has had no such means of testing them as was afforded for the Harleian manuscript by Professor Tatlock's study. The Chicago collations, when published, will show just how much scattered support such readings may have. But from the evidence furnished by printed texts and the editor's collation of the Cardigan and Morgan manuscripts it does not appear that they are to be accepted without scrutiny on the bare authority of Ellesmere. That manuscript, though superior to all others, has its proportion of errors, some of which it shares with other manuscripts of the a group. It therefore cannot be regarded as an independent witness to the original text, nor do its peculiar readings look like revisions by the author. It does, however, preserve some lines, apparently genuine, and marginal glosses, very likely due to Chaucer, which are not found in any of the other published texts. These passages, at least, it seems to have derived from a good copy outside its immediate source and now unknown. There is consequently justification for considering its unique readings, and the editor has accepted them in a very few cases, especially where they preserve good old forms or idioms that might have been lost through scribal corruption. Examples of the cases where this consideration has affected the decision are KnT, I, 1176, wisest, KnT, I, 1573, after he (rest, afterward he, with variants), KnT, I, 1260, witen (rest, woot, wote, etc.), MLT, II, 336, hastfluche (rest, hastliche, hastily). In mere matters of orthography, when verbal variants are not involved, the Ellesmere copy has been followed, as representing a good scribal tradition. But throughout all Chaucer's works, as explained below, the spellings of the manuscripts have been corrected for grammatical accuracy and for the adjustment of rimes.

The question of the authority of a superior manuscript arises again in connection with the Parliament of Fowls. The Cambridge MS Gg 1 27, like the Ellesmere copy of the Canterbury Tales, belongs to the best group of authorities, and is commonly adopted as the basis of the text. But there are two opinions as to the value of its testimony when it stands alone or has very slight support from other manuscripts. Miss Hammond, in an admirably sound and thorough study of the manuscripts of the Parliament, granted that some of the unique Gg readings are almost certainly right, but argued that they are the result of scribal emendation, and are therefore not to be adopted by an editor without special justification in every case. Professor Koch, on the other hand, has defended the opinion that Gg goes back in some fashion to an original above the archetype of the other manuscripts, and that its variants may therefore be accepted freely in preference to readings determined by the "critical" method. It is not easy to decide this question. The present editor finds about twenty readings, either peculiar to Gg or having slight support in other manuscripts, which are clearly right or so strongly preferable to the critical text as practically to demand adoption. Some thirty-five more appear to deserve serious consideration, and a few of them have been hesitatingly adopted. Still other Gg readings would have a strong claim for adoption if the manuscript were known to be derived in any fashion from a source independent of all the rest. But the evidence of this is insufficient, and it has seemed safest to give the preference in general to a critical text, resorting to Gg only where there is special need or justification. A few of its readings have been adopted for reasons connected with grammar or meter. Gg variants in mere phraseology have been in nearly every case rejected, though some of them are tempting.

The fact that the manuscript preserves the unique copy of the revised Prologue to the Legend of Good Women makes easier the assumption that it contains the author's corrections of the text of the Parliament. But the variants themselves do not seem to bear out this theory.

A textual problem fundamentally different from that offered by the Canterbury Tales or the Parliament is presented by the Troilus. In the Canterbury Tales, although there are numerous cases of correction, cancellation, or rearrangement, there is no thoroughgoing and systematic revision. In fact, far from having prepared a second edition, Chaucer never completed a first. But in the Troilus it is agreed that the manuscripts show either two or three distinct stages of composition. Details about the classification of the authorities are given below in the Textual Notes and need not be repeated here. The essential facts are that all scholars recognize a first version, α , which stands in many respects closest to the Italian original, and a second (or third) version, γ , which is preserved in the most correct and best authenticated manuscripts. A third form of the text, preserved in manuscript not wholly distinct from those which contain α and γ , is held by Professor Root, as by his predecessor in the study of the problem, the late Sir William McCormick, to represent a separate version β , which those two scholars have conceived in different ways. McCormick, in the Globe edition, took version β (as his lettering would indicate) to be intermediate between α and γ , though the excellence of one of the β manuscripts (St John's College L. 1) led him to make considerable use of its readings. He held the γ text to have been "either carelessly corrected by the author, or collated by some hand after Chaucer's death." More recently Professor Root, who continued and completed McCormick's thorough and elaborate study of all the manuscripts, has arrived at the opinion that β represents Chaucer's final revision — that is, the third stage of his text. While he recognizes the superiority of the best γ manuscripts, he holds that to arrive at Chaucer's authoritative version an editor should correct the γ text by β readings wherever these are susceptible of sure determination. The description and classification of manuscripts by McCormick and Root the present editor has found to be thorough and trustworthy. It is, in fact, one of the most substantial achievements of Chaucerian scholarship. Professor Root's selection of the Corpus manuscript as the best basis for the text confirms the editor's choice of nearly twenty years ago. But with the preference accorded by Mr. Root to the peculiar readings of the β version he has not been able to agree. Those readings appear to him to be rather scribal than authoritative — to stand, in short, somewhat in the position of the unique readings of MS. Harleian 7334 in the Canterbury Tales. It is doubtful, as Professor Tatlock long ago argued, whether more than a single revision of the Troilus can be made out. But even if two stages are recognized, that represented by the γ manuscripts has, in the opinion of the present editor, the best authority. The β readings have consequently not been accepted in this text, which is based consistently on the γ version. The reconstruction of γ has of course not been in itself always easy, since the γ manuscripts contain errors and omissions. Exclusive γ readings have been examined with especial care because of the uncertainty whether they are due to Chaucer or a scribe. But the authority of the γ group, even when it stands alone, seems better to the present editor than it does to Mr. Root. It should be added, however, that the differences between the γ text and Mr. Root's β version are few and unimportant.

The question of revision arises in relation to several other works of Chaucer besides the Troilus, but it nowhere else presents so serious a practical problem to the editor. In the case of several of the Canterbury Tales, it has been argued that Chaucer made over early poems for use in the collection. There is no question in editing, however, of a choice between versions. Similarly in the case of passages possibly unauthentic or collected by the author, the editor has simply to decide whether and where to admit them to his text. In the Prologue to the Legend alone is there another instance of thoroughgoing revision, resulting in parallel versions, and in this case it is clear that both texts should be printed side by side, as has been done in most recent editions

An editorial problem somewhat different from those thus far discussed is raised by the Book of the Duchess and, in less degree, by the House of Fame. It may be illustrated by some account of the character of the text in the former of these works. There are only four authorities — the Fairfax, Bodley, and Tanner manuscripts, and Thynne's edition. Fairfax and Bodley are, as usual, closely related, and in this poem they offer the best text. Thynne furnishes a number of good corrections of their readings. The critical text is easy to construct, and there are very few cases where a choice of readings is difficult. But there are many cases where the authorities agree in readings unsatisfactory in sense or in meter, and it is hard to decide how far an editor should go in mending such passages. Skeat transposed or supplied words freely, with the result that he secured a fairly smooth Chaucerian movement for the lines. Mr Heath, the Globe editor, was much more conservative, retaining many words that clog the movement of the verse, and leaving many lines deficient in a syllable. This procedure seems to the present editor the safer, though no two men might agree as to the exact application of it. It may be freely admitted that the manuscripts are late and none too trustworthy. At the same time it should be remembered that some roughness of workmanship might be expected in so early a work as the Book of the Duchess and in a meter of such free traditions as the English octosyllabic couplet. Headless lines were quite as natural there as in the decasyllabic verse, and extra syllables within the line are not hard to accept, though some of them may be due to scribes who supplied words to take the place of final-e's they had wrongfully suppressed. Lines which lack an unaccented syllable in the middle are very unlikely to be right. For verses so constructed, with two abutting stresses — a metrical type sometimes called Lydgatean because of its frequent occurrence in Lydgate's poems — are almost unknown in those works of Chaucer of which a good text is preserved. All these irregularities, which occur commonly in the Book of the Duchess, are easy to remove if an editor feels at liberty to emend his manuscripts at will. The present text is less freely corrected than Skeat's, and for that reason less smooth in many places, as the editor is well aware. But one kind of emendation, the restoration of full grammatical forms apocopated in the manuscript to the detriment of the meter, is certainly justifiable and has been freely employed.

The editor of Chaucer, after he has settled the matter of authorities and readings and made his critical texts, still has to consider the question of grammatical rectification. For the best manuscripts contain many forms that are demonstrably incorrect — nouns and adjectives with meaningless final-e's, or strong preterites with the same ending incorrectly added in the singular number. These errors cannot be removed by a critical comparison of the manuscripts, they must be treated, if regulated at all, in the light of Middle English grammar. Fortunately the materials are abundant for constructing a grammar of Chaucer's dialect, and the inflections he employed are very fully and precisely known. It is therefore possible to correct with confidence most of the grammatical errors of the scribes. But the practice of editors in making such corrections has varied considerably. Skeat's general policy was to normalize both the spelling and the grammar of his texts, though he was not quite thorough or consistent in removing erroneous forms. The Globe editors differed one from another in their practice, but many incorrect endings were allowed to stand in their text. Professor Root, in his edition of the Troilus, though recognizing that numerous final-e's in his text did not represent a syllable, thought it most consistent with his purpose to follow the actual usage of his scribes. His method and that of the Globe edition is of course defensible, and it has its advantage, especially for an investigator of the history of English orthography. For many of the forms under discussion are not, strictly speaking, incorrect, but are rather specimens of a system of spelling divergent from the ordinary practice in Middle English. According to that system final -e may denote not only a pronounced final syllable but also, as in modern English, the long quantity of a preceding vowel (as in "hate," over against "hat") This principle is doubtless to be recognized in some of the spellings of the Chaucerian scribes But in a library edition, like the present one, there seems to be no purpose in preserving two inconsistent systems of orthography, or in printing final -e's which would appear to indicate incorrect endings, and so would confuse the reader or student The editor has consequently gone farther than any of his predecessors in removing such scribal, or ungrammatical, -e's In the great majority of cases the Chaucerian form or inflection is well known, and the correction of the text is easy But there are a few words, or classes of words, in which the application of the method is not so clear In a small number of nouns and adjectives it is not certain whether Chaucer's nominative form had a final -e, and in others he clearly used two forms, one with -e and one without Words of the latter sort are entered in the Glossary of this edition with a bracketed -e (e.g., bliss(e), cler(e)), and in the text the form which occurs in manuscript is usually preserved But the editor's practice has probably not been perfectly consistent in this matter, and the final -e may sometimes have been struck off when unpronounced in the verse In the case of nouns in the dative construction it is sometimes difficult to decide whether to allow the inflectional -e outside of the stereotyped or "petrified" phrases to which it is mainly restricted Its use undoubtedly spread somewhat, even to cases other than the dative, but Chaucer's dative was usually without ending, and the dative-e's have been struck off in this text unless there was special reason for supposing them to have been preserved Perhaps the inflectional form that makes most trouble with regard to this matter of final -e is the second person singular of the imperative of strong verbs and of long-stemmed weak verbs of the first Anglo-Saxon conjugation Strictly speaking these forms should have no ending (sung, send, heer, etc.) But they are commonly spelled with a final -e, and the ending is occasionally demanded by the rime or verse-rhythm It can be accounted for as a subjunctive form used in a jussive sense, or as an ending which was developed in the imperative of the verbs mentioned above because of the analogy of the subjunctive and the other weak classes in the imperative It would be defensible to keep such forms in the text when they occur in the manuscript In this edition the practice is again not wholly consistent, but in most cases the -e's have been struck off and the correct historical forms restored One other form, of frequent occurrence, may be cited to illustrate this editorial problem The possessive pronoun his, when used with a plural noun, frequently takes a final -e (hise) in the best manuscripts This is very common, almost regular, with the Ellesmere scribe But the -e is not justified by the Anglo-Saxon form (his) and appears never, or almost never, to be pronounced in Chaucer's verse It has been struck off in the present edition But since the form with -e clearly occurs in Middle English, an editor might with equal propriety allow it to stand where his manuscript has it

The examples cited will show the method of the present edition in the grammatical rectification of the text Errors and omissions excepted, incorrect final -e's (in the sense explained above) have been removed In the treatment of final -e's that are in some respect irregular but not inadmissible there has been some inconsistency during the long period of the preparation of the edition But the text throughout, it is hoped, will be found to give a true representation of Chaucer's language

In matters of spelling, apart from questions of inflections or dialect, the procedure of the editor has been conservative The lack of any autograph manuscripts leaves us without an authoritative Chaucerian standard, and any attempt to construct such a standard (like that of Professor Koch in his early edition of the Minor Poems) is sure to encounter many uncertainties The ordinary critical method fails entirely at this point, since the scribes modified spelling rather freely in copying A variety of practices is consequently open to the editor, ranging from the "diplomatic" reproduction of a given manuscript to the introduction of a new phonetic spelling of his own. For the purpose of teaching pronunciation and meter this last method would have its advantages, and it has been adopted with selected specimens of the verse (as, for example, with the whole Manciple's Tale in Dr Plessow's edition). But there are obvious objections to its use in a library edition of the entire works of the poet, and half-way normalization, like that of Skeat's edition, though in some respects convenient, is hardly worth while. The present text, therefore, in the case of those works that are preserved in the best manuscripts, follows the spelling of the scribe where it is not absolutely or probably incorrect. Final -e's omitted in the manuscripts have not been supplied if they were elided or apocoped in the verse, but they have been restored when necessary to the meter. Grammatical errors, as already explained, and dialectal spellings, where not appropriate and presumably intentional, have been mended with care. But no effort has been made to introduce uniformity in less important matters, such as the use of u and w or of i and y, or the doubling of long o and long e. Such slight modernization as has been adopted in printing will be explained below.

In the case of nearly all Chaucer's works it has been possible to follow this method of close adherence to the spelling of the manuscripts. Indeed such is the excellence and general agreement in these matters, of the Ellesmere copy of the Canterbury Tales and the Corpus and Campsall copies of the Troilus, that those manuscripts may be reasonably supposed to represent practices closely similar to Chaucer's own. But there are a few poems in which the manuscript of best verbal authority presents a dialectal or otherwise vagarious orthography. This is notably true of the Legend of Good Women, where the Cambridge Gg manuscript is the only source of the revised text of the Prologue, and the case is similar with the Parlament of Fowls and some of the short poems. Under such circumstances an editor has to choose between printing a text of strange and un-Chaucerian appearance and making the spelling conform to Ellesmere and Corpus standards. The latter method seems decidedly preferable, and the orthography of the Legend and of a number of the minor poems has accordingly been freely normalized.

In minor matters of printing — spacing, capitalization, punctuation, and the like — modern usage has been followed as far as circumstances permit. Capitals have been used at the beginning of lines of verse. Capital F has been substituted for ff, which often takes the place of a majuscular sign in the manuscripts, th for the archaic "thorn" (þ), and j for the capital I which sometimes represents it. The letters u and v have been adjusted to modern practice (use, vertu, love, for the manuscript spellings use, uertu, loue). The apostrophe has been employed with n', t', and th', when the vowel of ne, to, and the (or thee) is elided before a following initial. Contractions, like the stroke which designates a final nasal, have been silently expanded unless there was real doubt about their meaning. In the case of words in -on, -oun (nacroun, condicroun, etc.), which are spelled very inconsistently and may be pronounced with the sound of either o or ou, it has been necessary to adopt an arbitrary practice. The ending is commonly abbreviated in the manuscript, sometimes with w (n with an upper return stroke), sometimes with n̄ or ū. These signs are used inconsistently by the scribes. In the present text, when words of this class have their pronunciation determined by rime (as by such unambiguous rime-words as toun or oon), they are spelled accordingly. When two words of the nacroun (nacion) type rime with each other, n with the return stroke is expanded as n, and n or u with the makron as un. When the scribes use both abbreviations in a single pair of rime-words (nacion condicroun), as occasionally happens, both are normalized with the spelling -oun.

In spacing (which varies greatly in the manuscripts) modern usage has been followed except when Middle English appears to have had a different sense of unity. Thus upon, unto, unto, therto, theron, withoute, also, whoso, nouther, and the participial compound with y- and for- are regularly printed without spacing or hyphen. But combinations which were less clearly recognized as units (such as for sothe, but if, by cause, over al, in the sense of the German uberall) are either hyphenated or separated entirely. In this second class of words consistency of practice has been hard to attain, just as in modern spelling there is considerable variation in the use of the hyphen.

To the foregoing explanations of editorial method may be added a word about the Textual Notes in the present edition. They contain accounts of the manuscripts and other authorities for the text of each work, with information about their relations, and lists of the more important variant readings. It was the editor's original plan to register variants much more fully than he has finally done in print. But various considerations — lack of space, the appearance of Professor Root's edition of the Troilus, with full textual apparatus, and the announcement of Professor Manly's projected work on the Canterbury Tales — led him to reduce his citations to about one quarter of those originally collected. The selected list now printed is not intended to exhibit the characteristics of manuscripts or to supply adequate materials for textual investigation. Scholars having these interests in mind will naturally resort directly to the manuscripts or to complete reprints and reproductions. But it is hoped that the variants here given will be found to include such alternative readings as have any literary interest. The different versions of the Troilus have been recorded with some fullness, also rejected passages (including some that are spurious) from the Canterbury Tales. Some variants in phraseology have been registered because they have a bearing on the poet's vocabulary. Finally, in a good many cases where the readings are doubtful the editor has supplied his readers with the material for testing his decisions.

THE CANTERBURY TALES

CHAUCER's most comprehensive work, The Canterbury Tales, was without doubt largely the production of his later years. But it includes writings of his early and middle life, and cannot be given a definite place in the chronological sequence of his poems. Since it is the one of his works first approached by most readers, it may fitly stand at the beginning of an edition.

The plan of the tales was probably adopted soon after 1386, in which year there is good reason for supposing Chaucer to have composed the Prologue to the Legend of Good Women. How long he was occupied with the Legend is not definitely known. A passage in The Man of Law's headlink, written when The Canterbury Tales must have been well under way, implies that Chaucer still meant to compose additional accounts of "Good Women," and he appears to have made his revision of the Prologue to the Legend as late as 1394. For several years, then, he had both collections of tales in hand, or at least in mind. But it is clear that the rather conventional scheme of the Legend was rapidly superseded in his interest by the far more absorbing drama of the Canterbury pilgrimage.

The composition of the General Prologue to the tales is commonly associated with 1387. It has even been assumed that Chaucer himself took part in a pilgrimage in April of that year, perhaps because of the illness of his wife Philippa, who probably died a few months later. The calendar of the year, it has been shown, would provide very well for the dates mentioned in the tales. But these indications prove nothing, and, in general, it is altogether uncertain how much there is of fact, and how much of fiction, in the account of the pilgrimage. On the whole, 1387 seems a reasonable date for the General Prologue, unless Chaucer's absence in Calais (of which evidence has recently come to light) makes it necessary to assume a longer interval between the Prologue to the Legend and the Canterbury Tales.

There is also no sure indication of how long Chaucer worked on the Canterbury collection. Reasons have been found for dating certain tales in 1393 or 1394, and no tale has been definitely proved to be later. The unfinished state of the work as a whole might be taken as evidence that Chaucer was occupied with it till the very end of his life. But such an inference would not be safe in the case of the man who left successively incomplete the House of Fame, the Anelida, the Legend of Good Women, and the Astrolabe. In fact very little is positively known about the productions of Chaucer's last years.

There has been much speculation as to what suggested to Chaucer the idea of a pilgrimage. He may, of course, have been describing an actual experience, or more than one. At all events he had no occasion to resort to books for knowledge of the pilgrimage as an institution. In the general device of a frame-story, or series of tales within an enclosing narrative, it has often been thought that he imitated the Decameron. But it now appears improbable that Chaucer knew Boccaccio's great collection of novelle, and the idea of tales within a tale was so familiar that no particular model need be sought. Popular from antiquity in the orient (from which Europe derived in modern times one of the most famous examples, The Thousand and One Nights), the type was well known in classical and mediæval literature. Ovid's Metamorphoses, The Disciplina Clericalis of Peter Alphonsus, the romance of the Seven Sages, Gower's Confessio Amantis, and Chaucer's own Legend of Good Women all occur to the mind at once as illustrations, very different one from another. But the Canterbury Tales are unlike most collections of the sort in the fact that the enclosing narrative is not formal or mechanical or merely introductory, but provides, and keeps in action, a social group engaged naturally in mutual entertainment In this respect it resembles the Decameron, which, as already remarked, Chaucer is believed not to have known A little group, similarly engaged in story-telling, is represented in Ovid's account of the daughters of Minyas, in the fourth book of the Metamorphoses, and another appears in Boccaccio's prose romance, the Ameto But it may be doubted whether Chaucer owed a suggestion to either of these mere episodes A more significant parallel is afforded by the Novelle of Giovanni Sercambi, a work which actually employs the setting of a pilgrimage It was probably written about 1374, and both the collection and the author may have been known to Chaucer If so, Sercambi may have given him the hint upon which he wrote But Chaucer's debt to the Novelle, if he owed one, was for little more than the bare suggestion of the pilgrimage Sercambi's plan is very different from that of the Canterbury Tales His brigata of pilgrims is large, and wanders all over Italy The stories are told, not by the various fellow-travelers, but by the author, who, like Chaucer, represents himself as a member of the company Of the individual tales only two are analogues of those in the Canterbury collection, and neither of these appears to have been the version used by Chaucer And although in the conduct of Sercambi's pilgrims and of the Proposto, who corresponds in a way to Chaucer's Host, there are incidents which remind one of the Canterbury pilgrimage, no clear evidence has been found that Chaucer borrowed from Sercambi in matters of detail

Whatever the reason for its adoption, the device of the pilgrimage is one of the happiest ever employed in a collection of stories It afforded Chaucer an opportunity to bring together a representative group of various classes of society, united by a common religious purpose, yet not so dominated by that purpose as to be unable to give themselves over to enjoyment Whether such a company would ever have mingled as Chaucer's pilgrims do, or would have entered upon such a round of story-telling, it is idle to discuss, as idle as to question whether the speakers could have been heard from horseback on the road Lateral truth of fact the Canterbury Tales obviously do not represent In their very metrical form there is, if one chooses to be literal-minded, a convention of unreality But there is essential, poetic truth in the portrayal of the characters, in their sentiments and personal relations, and, no less, in the representation of the pilgrimage as a social assemblage

The plan of the Canterbury Tales was never brought anywhere near to completion It is provided in the Prologue that each pilgrim shall tell four tales, two on the outward and two on the homeward journey But the company never reaches Canterbury, and only twenty-three of the thirty pilgrims get their turn Some tales are left unfinished, others are manifestly unadapted to the tellers The Second Nun, for example, refers to herself as an "unworthy son of Eve," and the Shipman several times classes himself among women These and many other trifling oversights and discrepancies show that Chaucer never really prepared his text for publication Nor, apparently, did he get to the point of arranging the tales he had written They have come down in a series of fragments (usually lettered A to I), and in the best group of manuscripts some of the tales told near Canterbury precede those which are put at an earlier stage of the journey In most recent editions this inconsistency is removed, but the order they adopt is a modern arrangement due to the editor of the Six-Text reprint, and has no real authority In the present edition the inconsistent arrangement of the best manuscripts is followed, and no attempt is made to correct discrepancies left standing by the author, or to reconstruct the stages of a pilgrimage which he seems never to have completely planned

FRAGMENT I (GROUP A)

The General Prologue For the Prologue, as for the general device of the Canterbury pilgrimage, no real model has been found Individual sketches of knights or priests or peasants are common enough in the mediæval literature of France and England, and some of them — like the lazy priest in Piers Plowman, who knew his Robin Hood better than his paternoster — have often been adduced to illustrate one or another of Chaucer's characters. The allegorical writings of the age, both sacred and secular, abound in personified types — Courtesy, Gentleness, Envy, Slander, Hypocrisy — some of which Chaucer clearly imitates. Whole works, too, were devoted to the description of the various orders of society, and others to the classification of men and women by physical and temperamental characteristics. With this lore of the physiognomists and social philosophers Chaucer was doubtless familiar. But in none of his predecessors has there been found a gallery of portraits like that in the Prologue, and there is very little that is comparable in later English poetry except in Chaucer's avowed imitators. As representative figures Chaucer's portraits suggest in a way the formal "characters" of the type brought to perfection by La Bruyere. But Chaucer can hardly have known the Theophrastan tradition, and character-writing in French and English did not come into vogue until the sixteenth century.

Chaucer's pilgrims are far more vivid and personal than either the Theophrastan characters or the mediæval figures with which they have been compared. This is perhaps sufficiently accounted for by Chaucer's creative imagination. But it is hard to believe that his men and women were not in some measure drawn from life, and a number of facts confirm this suspicion. Harry Bailly, the Host, has the same name as Henricus Bailly or Bailiff, known to have been an innkeeper in Southwark and a member of Parliament from that borough. The other pilgrims are not mentioned by surname, and it would be hard to identify in records Roger, the Cook, Hubert, the Friar, or Dame Alce, the Wife of Bath. But in these and several other instances details of locality, occupation, and character are given with so much particularity that the temptation has proved irresistible to look for historical counterparts. A certain Peter Rasshenden, known to have sailed a ship "The Maudelayne," was long ago pointed out as a possible model for the Shipman. The Knight's career has been shown to correspond in part to that of a number of Chaucer's contemporaries. And recently Professor Manly has brought together a large body of interesting biographical data about men whose personal history or circumstances in life resemble those of various pilgrims. For one, at least, the Man of Law, he has found a very likely original. For the names are recorded of the small group of barristers who held the high rank of Sergeant-at-Law, and Thomas Pinchbek alone appears to fit the description. The case for the identification of other pilgrims is usually not so strong because the field of search is less precisely limited. But even where he has no individual prototypes to suggest, Professor Manly has sometimes been able to show that the localities mentioned are significant. In such identifications demonstration is not to be looked for. It is hard enough to establish them in the work of living novelists, or to induce an author to admit them. But the probability is strong that Chaucer had contemporary models for his characters. And curiosity on this subject, it is proper to add, is not merely trivial. Such inquiries and conjectures, like the search for literary sources, help toward an understanding of the poet's imagination and of the material on which it worked.

Individual as the pilgrims are, they are also representative.⁶ Many of them exhibit types of character or of professional conduct — the gentle Knight, the venal Friar, the hypocrite in the person of the Pardoner — such as were familiar in the literature of the age. And taken together, they cover nearly the whole range of life in Chaucer's England. The circle of the royalty and the higher nobility, to be sure, is not directly represented. Men of such rank and station could hardly have been included in the company. But the mind and manners of courtly society are well expressed by the Knight, who had seen honorable service at home and abroad, by his son, the Squire, the typical courtly lover, again, from a different angle, by the Prioress, who "peyned hire to countrefete chere of court", and, best of all, by Chaucer himself, the accomplished courtier and man of the world, who as author creates the atmosphere and medium of the whole narrative. The clergy, regular and secular, are included in liberal number, and there are also represented the learned professions of law and medicine, the merchants and the craftsmen of the guild, officials of the manor, the sailor, and the common peasant farmer. Possibly Chaucer did not set out deliberately to make the group so inclusive and well distributed. But whatever chance or purpose governed his choice, it would be hard to find such a description of English society between the Beowulf, with its picture of the heroic age, and the broader canvas of the Elizabethan drama.

In keeping with the miscellaneous character of the company is the wide range of tastes and interests represented by the stories they relate. The romance of chivalry, the courtly lay, the coarse realistic fabliau, the beast-epic, the legend or saint's life, the mock sermon with its illustrative exemplum — all are included, along with the moral allegory and the ethical treatise, which only by a stretch of terminology can be called a tale at all. Nearly every type of mediæval fiction appears, and appears at its best. Just as Milton, in the seventeenth century, took up one literary form after another — the masque, the pastoral elegy, the epic, the Greek drama — and gave us a supreme example of each, so Chaucer used every important narrative type of his age, and in each was unsurpassed.

In almost every case Chaucer assigned to a pilgrim a tale suited to his character and vocation. He represents the party as engaged in free and natural social intercourse, and oftener than not the tales are evoked by the talks along the way. Sometimes they are told to illustrate a point or enforce an argument, sometimes they grow out of an altercation, as when the Friar and the Summoner abuse each other's callings. Sometimes they are given simply in response to the request of the Host, who is chosen at the outset to be toastmaster, or "lord and governour." But Chaucer found ways of relieving the monotony of this procedure, and from the time when the drunken Miller insists on being heard after the Knight the company shows frequent inclination to take things into its own hands. In fact, from one point of view, the pilgrimage is a continuous and lively drama, in which the stories themselves contribute to the action. Because of this sustained dramatic interest and the vivid reality of the characters, as well as for the inclusive representation of English society, the Canterbury Tales has been called a Human Comedy. The implied comparison with Balzac's great series of stories of the life of modern France is not inappropriate. Chaucer might have used without exaggeration the words of the Frenchman, "J'aurai porté une société entière dans ma tête." Like Balzac he achieved "l'évocation vivante de tout un monde."

The Knight's Tale The Knight very properly begins the story-telling with a specimen of chivalric romance. To speak more strictly, his tale of Palamon and Arcite combines the traditions of mediæval romance and classical epic, though the ancient type is more apparent in the title and structure of the Italian original, Boccaccio's Teseide, or epic of Theseus. The classical forerunner of both poets was Statius, the author of the Thebaid, whom Chaucer, somewhat misleadingly, cites as a source. In the Knights Tale, as in the Aneida and the Troilus, he chooses to claim ancient authority for his mediæval fiction, but in all the essentials of the story he actually follows the Teseide. Even in characterization, in which he usually showed independence, he here departs very little from Boccaccio. Yet the Knights Tale is a very different poem from its Italian source. In the first place it is only about a quarter as long as the original. At the outset Chaucer strikes his pace and passes over in a dozen swift lines the campaign of Theseus against the Amazons, to which Boccaccio devotes his whole first book. And he continues to hasten the development of Boccaccio's very leisurely narrative. Nevertheless he finds room for significant additions of his own. Only about a third of the English poem is actually translated from the Italian, and some of its most memorable features — the descriptions of the temples, the account of the tournament, the passages of philosophical reflection — are in large part independent of the Teseide. By adapting both action and setting to the life of his time Chaucer made the tale more real and vivid. Its pervading humor, too, he greatly heightened, so that some critics have been led, unjustifiably, to pronounce the Knigh't's Tale a satire on chivalry or courtly love. Of course in the drastic reduction of the scale of the Italian narrative some charming descriptions and much delightful poetry had to be sacrificed. But on the whole, Chaucer improved on his original. Yet his debt to Boccaccio, both here and in the Troilus, can hardly be overstated. Professor Manly has justly observed that Chaucer did not borrow the Italian technique. But he found in the Teseide and the Filostrato examples of narrative structure far superior to most of the French and English romances and allegories that he knew in his youth. And though he always told a story in his own way, there is a vast difference between his early tales and those that he wrote after he came into contact with Italian poetry.

The Knigh't's Tale, at least in its original form, was not written for the Canterbury series. For the story of Palamon and Arcite is included among the works of Chaucer mentioned in the Prologue to the Legend of Good Women, and this first version of his translation or redaction of the Teseide is now generally assigned to the early eighties. Its precise relation to the version preserved as the Knigh't's Tale is unknown. But there is little support for the theory held by some eminent Chaucerians, that the original Palamon was in seven-line stanzas, some of which Chaucer used in the Aeneida and the Troilus before he transposed the poem into decasyllabic couplets. The Knigh't's Tale bears obvious marks of adaptation to the teller. But there is no evidence that the Palamon was seriously altered in form or substance.

The Tales of the Miller, Reeve, and Cook. In determining the order of the earlier tales in the series Chaucer was evidently governed by the principle of contrast. For the stories that follow the Knigh't's and complete Group A are of an utterly different character. They are introduced by a simple dramatic device. When the Knigh't has finished speaking, the Host turns to the Monk as a suitable personage to follow him. But the Miller insists on being heard, and the Host, seeing that he is "dronke of ale," lets him have his way. The Miller's story is at the expense of a carpenter, and the Reeve, who has followed that craft, takes offense and makes an immediate rejoinder with a story of a dishonest miller. And now that the churls have got under way, the Host makes no attempt to check the Cook, when he claims the next turn. Of the Cook's tale only a fragment was written, but enough to show that it was of the same scurrilous character as the stories of the Miller and the Reeve. All three belong to the narrative type most extensively cultivated in mediaeval France, and known as the fabliau. The term fabliau means by its derivation simply "short story," and cannot be safely given a much more precise definition. For stories of many varieties were designated by the name. But the majority were tales of the bourgeois or lower social orders, they were realistic in character, generally humorous, and often indecent, and they turned more upon plot and intrigue than upon description or sentiment. In Chaucer's hands they retain their essential character. They remain short, though the setting is somewhat elaborated, and Chaucer finds an opportunity for descriptions which might be compared to the genre painting of the Dutch artists. They remain plain-spoken and even indecent. But the emphasis in them is perhaps less on pure animalism than in the usual French fabliau, and a kind of moral quality has been observed in their tendency to emphasize poetic justice. No definite source is known for any of the three here grouped together, and the Cook's fragment is hardly long enough to disclose what the plot was to be. But for the Miller's Tale and Reeve's Tale numerous analogues have been found in various languages.

FRAGMENT II (GROUP B¹)

Man of Law's Prologue and Tale The first group of tales (A) ends with the Cook's fragment, which, because of its incompleteness, gives no indication of what was to follow. But in the regular arrangement of the rest, the next tale is that of the Man of Law, preceded by an interesting and somewhat puzzling introduction or headlink. At ten o'clock in the morning of April eighteenth (the mention of this precise date lends some color to the belief that Chaucer had in mind a real pilgrimage), the Host rerounds the pilgrims that time is passing and exhorts them to go on with their story-telling. He appeals in particular to the Man of Law to keep his contract and entertain the company. The lawyer, with some parade of technical terms which are not without bearing on the theory that Chaucer himself had a legal education, promises to fulfill his obligation. But he protests that Chaucer, "in such English as he can," has spoiled all the good stories. He mentions by name the tales of lovers in the Book of the Duchess and the Legend of Good Women (including some that are not there), gets in what appears to be a humorous fling at Gower for telling such tales as he and Chaucer do not approve, and ends by declaring that he will not court comparison with the Muses but will tell his tale in prose. Then he proceeds to relate the story of Constance in seven-line stanzas. Doubtless when Chaucer wrote the headlink, he meant to assign a prose tale to the Man of Law. But the Constance story, though not so conspicuously adapted to the teller as the tales of many of the other pilgrims, is sufficiently appropriate.

It purports to be an account of the adventures of a daughter of the Roman Emperor Tiberius Constantinus. In reality, though attached to historical characters, it is a marchen found in many forms the world over and known to students of folk-lore as the story of the Calumniated Wife. Of the special type to which Chaucer's tale belongs some sixty versions, popular and literary, have been collected. The best known Middle-English analogues are the Lay of Emare and Gower's account of Constance in the Confessio Amantis. The latter was pretty surely known to Chaucer. In fact he appears to refer to it in his version, and he and Gower used the same immediate source, Nicholas Trivet's Anglo-Norman Chronicle. But Chaucer handled the material with considerable freedom, punctuating the narrative, so to speak, with moral and philosophical reflections like those of a Greek chorus. He tells the whole story in the manner and spirit of a legend. The interest centers in the sufferings and miraculous deliverances of Constance, which are compared with those of biblical heroes or of the Christian saints. Husband, kindred, and the child Maurice are mere incidents in this spiritual life-history. And the character of Constance, in contrast to the highly realistic figures which fill most of the works of Chaucer's maturity, is drawn in the mediaeval manner. She is almost an allegorical symbol, and as Griselda in the Clerk's Tale represents Patience, so Constance is an incarnation of Fortitude.

In the best manuscripts the Man of Law's Tale constitutes a fragment by itself, and is not attached to the following story. But in a considerable number of copies it is followed by a very lively Epilogue. The Host, enthusiastic about the Man of Law's performance, calls upon the Parson, another "learned man in lore," to follow him. "Sir Parish Preest," quod he, "for Goddes bones, tel us a tale!" But the Parson takes occasion to rebuke him for his profanity, and the Host ironically calls upon the company to listen to a sermon. Thereupon another pilgrim, variously referred to in the manuscripts as the Squire, the Summoner, or the Shipman — obviously, in any case, not the Squire, but one of the ruder members of the company — springs up as a defender of the faith and protests that the Lollard Parson would corrupt their religion. So he, a plain man, with "littile Latyn in his maw," will tell a tale which, he implies, will keep them awake better than that of his predecessor. The name of the speaker is uncertain, as is also the story which the dialogue was meant to introduce. In most modern editions the speech is ascribed to the Shipman and prefixed to his tale. But the authority for this arrangement is very slight. From the fact that the Epilogue is missing in the best manuscripts it is a reasonable inference that Chaucer himself meant to cancel it. But there can be no doubt of its genuineness. It is one of the most spirited of the talks by the way and gives a picture of the Parson in his "snubbing" mood, which we should not willingly spare.

FRAGMENT III (GROUP D)

Wife of Bath's Prologue and Tale. With the third fragment (Group D in the Six-Text arrangement) begins a series of seven tales which, though not completely welded together, seem to have received something like their final arrangement at Chaucer's hands. They have been commonly known as the Marriage Group, since they were so designated by Professor Kittredge in an essay in which he pointed out the continuity which sets them apart from the rest of the Canterbury Tales. They deal — though, to be sure, with skillfully managed dramatic interruptions — with a single subject or topic, the seat and conduct of authority in married life. The wife argues for the supreme authority — the souverainetee — of a woman over her husband. The Friar and Summoner then break in with an altercation and tell their stories at each other's expense. After they have had their quarrel out, the Clerk follows with his tale of the complete subjugation of the Wife in the person of the incredibly patient Griselda. In the Merchant's Tale the tables are turned again, and the poor old dotard, January, is deceived by his young wife. Though her conduct is more than half-excused by his folly, the whole picture of matrimony is bitterly satirical. The romantic story of the Squire, though it deals also with unfaithfulness in love, does not continue the treatment of the domestic issue and may be regarded as a second interruption in the discussion. Then follows the Franklin's Tale, which, at least incidentally, provides a solution of the problem. The two morals explicitly taught in the story are the duties of "keeping truth" and practicing courtesy. But while exemplifying these virtues Arviragus and Dorigen also live in ideally harmonious relations as man and wife. Whether Chaucer wrote the tale with this fact in view has been disputed, and reasons have even been adduced for dating it, before the Canterbury series, in the period of the Knight's Tale. But there is a clear connection of thought running from the Wife's Prologue to the Franklin's Tale. The Clerk and the Merchant both refer explicitly to the Wife, and the Franklin's discussion of sovereignty, once mentioned by name, has a relevance that can hardly have been unintentional. If Chaucer did use an early composition for the Franklin's Tale, he must have adapted it to its position. It is happily placed at the end of the series, if only for the contrast it affords with the various kinds of domestic infelicity that precede. Not only are the tales of the Marriage Group bound together in subject, in the way that has been indicated, but there are also reasons for believing, at least in the case of the Wife's Prologue and Tale and the Merchant's Tale, which give the tone for the series, that they were composed at about the same time, and rather late in the Canterbury period.

The Wife of Bath's Prologue is one of the most remarkable of Chaucer's productions. It is at once a confession, an apologia, and a program of matrimonial reform. Out of a rich experience, as she herself declares, but with no lack of knowledge of the auctoritees, the "literature of her subject," she expounds and defends two theses: first, that the married state is not to be held inferior to virginity, and second, that in marriage the sovereignty should rest with the wife. She relates at length — the Friar complained that it was a long preamble of a tale — the life she has lived with her five husbands, and shows triumphantly how all went for the best when she exercised control. The character revealed in the Prologue became a type for later English literature, but in itself it is far more than a type and possesses individualizing traits which make it one of the most real and complex of all the personalities drawn by Chaucer. From another point of view th

Prologue is a most brilliant discussion of the "woman question" as it was understood in Chaucer's epoch. Nothing could be more skillful than the way in which Chaucer has put into the mouth of this "arch-wife" the confession, boastful and cynical, but none the less engaging, of all the deceits and vices charged against women in satire from antiquity down. And the author enters so dramatically into the spirit of the speaker that it might well be debated whether the Prologue is a document on the feminist or the anti-feminist side of the controversy.

The Wife's Tale is a brilliant continuation of her argument. It illustrates and confirms her doctrine, serving, as has often been noted, as a kind of exemplum in a lay sermon. She uses the familiar and widely disseminated popular tale of the Loathly Lady, skillfully adapted to the purpose in hand. In its more typical and original form a hag, the victim of enchantment, is released from her spell by the embrace of a hero, to whom she first offers the choice of having her "fair by day and foul (that is, ugly) by night" or "fair by night and foul by day." Chaucer substitutes the alternative of having her foul and faithful, or fair and free to bestow her favors where she will. The Knight, courteously — and, as it turns out, wisely — leaves the decision to her. When she is assured that she has the sovereignty securely in her hands she promises to be to him both fair and true. The moral is obvious. The story itself is one of the best of the fairy tales that have received literary treatment. In an early Irish version, with which Chaucer's has been held to be indirectly related, the hag is made to stand allegorically for Royal Rule, at first hard to obtain, but afterwards pleasant and honorable. In Gower's Confessio Amantis the same tale is told as an illustration of the virtue of Obedience. In the ballad of the Marriage of Gawain and in the romance of the Wedding of Gawain and Dame Ragnell, as in Chaucer's version, the adventure is attached to a Knight of Arthur's court. These analogues are interesting in themselves and as showing the kind of material with which Chaucer was working. But in its delightful combination of romantic adventure and fairy mythology with shrewd humor the Wife of Bath's Tale far surpasses them all.

The Friar's Tale and the Summoner's Tale — The Friar's Tale and the Summoner's Tale are both fabliaux, for which various parallels have been found. In neither case is Chaucer's source known, and its discovery would probably be unimportant. For the slight anecdotes are richly overlaid by description, characterization, and witty dialogue obviously original with the poet. The satirical account of the ecclesiastical court, the highly comical encounter of the Summoner with the diabolical "bailly," the description of the Friar's visit to the house of Thomas, the villager — all these are specimens of Chaucer's most accomplished workmanship. Though the tales contain no definite indication of date, the free handling of the material places them unquestionably at the period of the full development of Chaucer's art.

The Clerk's Tale — In the Clerk's Tale of Patient Griselda Chaucer is once again dealing with what was originally a story from folk-lore. But it had been given literary form by two of the greatest men of letters on the continent. Boccaccio, who, whatever material he had to work with, must be regarded as the creator of the character of Griselda as it is actually known to literature, included the story in his Decameron as the tenth tale of the tenth day. Then Petrarch made a Latin rendering of it; and this was Chaucer's source, as he acknowledges gracefully, and by the use of a recognized convention, when he makes the Clerk declare that he learned the story from Petrarch in Padua. In all the essentials of the narrative Chaucer's version follows its original. It is a close rendering, as poetical translations go. Though some details have been pointed out in which it resembles Boccaccio's Italian rather than Petrarch's Latin, Chaucer's knowledge and use of the Decameron remain uncertain, if not unlikely. Other small variations from Petrarch's

Latin have been shown to agree with a contemporary French translation which Chaucer may have used. In its ultimate origin the tale is related to the ancient legend of Cupid and Psyche which was somewhere combined in popular tradition with another marchen of the type represented in the ballad of Fair Annie. As narrated by Boccaccio, Petrarch, and Chaucer, it is a beautiful and sympathetic narrative of the sufferings inflicted on Griselda by her misguided husband. It is not only sympathetic but moving if we accept, as we must, the convention in conformity to which it was written. Judged by the standards of realistic fiction, the action is preposterous and the character of Griselda, in its imperturbable meekness, neither real nor admirable. Petrarch recognized this and explained, in pointing a moral which the Clerk repeats, that her behavior is meant to teach how human beings should submit to the Providence of God. Chaucer saw the absurdities of the tale just as clearly, and his humorous comment finds expression in the Clerk's rollicking envoy, in which he declares that it would be intolerable if women were like Griselda, and bids wives to stand at defense and be as "egre as is a tygre yond in Ynde." Yet Petrarch also testifies that he found an Italian, after the reading of the tale, dissolved in tears, and the primary effect of Chaucer's poem is and was unquestionably meant to be, pathetic. To accept the action calls for no more suspense of critical judgment than is required by many a myth or drama or tale of adventure. And to understand Griselda it is necessary to bear in mind that she was not drawn as a complex human creature like the Pardoner or the Prioress or the Wife of Bath. She belongs rather, like Constance in the Man of Law's Tale, with the simple, almost allegorical, types which the Middle Ages loved to contemplate. From the mediaeval character of the Clerk's Tale and Man of Law's Tale critics have inferred that both were written rather early. But such uncertain indications of date as have been noted point rather to their composition during the Canterbury period.

The Merchant's Tale In the Merchant's Tale of January and May, once again the kernel of the story is a popular marchen. It is known to folk-lorists as the "Pear-Tree Episode," and is widely disseminated in Europe and Asia. It serves the Merchant as an example of the wicked wiles of women. But the pear-tree story, which supplies the final incident of the deception of the husband, is only a small part of the Merchant's discourse. Here, as in the case of most of Chaucer's latest writings, the simple plot is richly elaborated by description, comment, and characterization. In the story itself there is introduced, with serio-comic effect, a bit of "machinery" from fairy mythology about Pluto and Proserpina. The figure of January affords one of the most vivid portrayals in literature of the type, at once amusing and repulsive, of the superannuated lover, senex amans. And the whole story is handled with great dramatic effect by the Merchant, himself unhappily mated, to give point to his bitter condemnation of matrimony and of the women to whose evil devices it exposes men.

FRAGMENT V (GROUP F)

The Squire's Tale With the Squire's Tale, as has been already remarked, Chaucer drops the theme of the marriage problem and turns to an interlude of pure romance. The Squire tells a story of adventure and enchantment, laid in the distant land of Cambyskan. It contains, to be sure, the sad history of a deserted lady, but even this is made less real by the metamorphosis of the actors into birds. The tale is a perfect expression of the joy and wonder and simple human feeling which gives enduring charm to the numerous metrical romances, many of them defective in literary form, of mediaeval Europe. It is clear that Chaucer, with all the skepticism and sophistication that have been attributed to him, could enter heartily into the spirit of this literature. He "left half-told the story of Cambuscan bold," probably because he had in mind no plan for continuing it. No definite source has been discovered for the tale, and Chaucer was not much given to inventing plots For what he did write he very likely found suggestions in the romance of Cleomades and in accounts then current of travels in the East He may have picked up some of his lore from the oral reports of the traders and sailors with whom he was in frequent contact in the port of London For it is not to be assumed that everything he used came out of books And though it is seldom possible to trace non-literary channels of information, it is interesting to speculate about them and important to recognize their existence

The Franklin's Tale is of a genre not elsewhere represented among Chaucer's writings It purports to be a "Breton lay," that is, a short romance or tale of adventure such as the "ancient gentle Britons" were believed to have composed in their Celtic tongue No poems of the exact type appear to have been preserved in early Welsh or Breton, but a number have come down in French and English The finest specimens are the lays of Marie de France, the truly British character of which — whatever exact sources lay behind them — appears in their setting, in incidents and other features paralleled in Welsh and Irish saga, in occasional traces of the Breton language, and in the delicate fancy commonly recognized as characteristic of Celtic literature Among the English lays that of Le Fraisne, translated from Marie, and that of Sir Orfeo, perhaps best illustrate the same Celtic qualities Whether Chaucer actually had a Breton lay (he would doubtless have known it in French or English) from which he derived the Franklin's Tale, is a matter of disagreement At first sight the names of Arviragus and Dorigen and the localization in Brittany seem to favor the supposition But the substance of the story is sufficiently accounted for by Boccaccio's version in the Filocolo, which was probably known to Chaucer, and it is now the prevalent opinion that he had no other source He could easily have supplied the Celtic names of persons and places, though the description of Brittany, if due to him, affords an instance of unusual care in providing an appropriate setting for a tale If he did not have a Breton lay as his source and model, he at all events knew very well what a lay ought to be The romantic theme, the resort to magic or other incidents of supernatural character, the spirit of chivalry and courtesy — all these features of the Franklin's Tale are characteristic of the poems of Marie and her successors Beyond this, in its urbanity and humor, the Franklin's Tale is both appropriate to the fictitious teller and delightfully expressive of the author It is happily placed, as has already been observed, in the sequence of the tales of the Marriage Group Thus considered in its relation to the Canterbury series, it fulfills a dramatic purpose, and considered by itself, it is an example of an interesting literary type, which it at once reproduces and transcends

FRAGMENT VI (GROUP C)

The Physician's Tale With the end of Fragment V (Group F) the continuity of the Canterbury Tales is once more broken In the best manuscripts the Franklin's Tale is followed by those of the Doctor and the Pardoner, but this pair (Group C) are not connected by genuine links with any of the other tales

The Physician's Tale is the old Roman story of Appius and Virginia It is told on the authority of Livy, but Chaucer's actual source seems clearly to have been the Roman de la Rose, from which he took even the citation of the Latin historian In the simplicity of its structure and the directness with which it follows its source the Physician's Tale differs strikingly from the tales of the Marriage Group which we have been considering, and ranges itself rather with the narratives that make up the Legend of Good Women It has even been conjectured that Chaucer originally meant the story of Virginia for that collection Like the legends, the Physician's Tale is by no means without art, but it is certainly not in what we have come to recognize as Chaucer's latest manner The composition should perhaps be assigned to the late eighties, a date which is supported by personal allusions conjecturally recognized in the tale. The narrative, in general simple and straightforward, is interrupted by a long digression on the character and education of young girls. This discussion may have been prompted by a scandalous occurrence in the family of John of Gaunt. The remarks are also not inappropriate to the Doctor, and were perhaps introduced by way of adapting the tale to the teller.

The Pardoner's Prologue and Tale. Joined to the Physician's Tale are the prologue and tale of the Pardoner, which constitute one of Chaucer's most remarkable productions. They contain no definite indication of date, but clearly belong to a time when the plan of the Canterbury Tales was fully developed. The rascally Pardoner, suitably described by Professor Kittredge as "perhaps the one lost soul on the pilgrimage," begins with a confession, or rather a boastful relation, of all his vices and fraudulent acts. Then he preaches a sample sermon, such as he is in the habit of using to extract money from his congregations. Feeling, no doubt, that in such a company of "good felawes," whatever he tells will be privileged information, he keeps nothing back, but confesses all his dishonest motives and evil practices. At last, reaching the height of insolent jocularly, he recommends his false relics to his fellow-pilgrims and invites the Host, as most "enveloped in synne," to make the first offering. Thereupon ensues a bitter quarrel which it takes the best offices of the Knight to compose.

In spite of his contemptible nature, physical and moral, the Pardoner is one of the most intellectual figures among the pilgrims and his performance is worthy of his powers. His tale has sometimes been called the best short story in existence. Embodied in the sermon as an exemplum, or illustrative example, it is the old anecdote of the three revelers who found death in a heap of gold. It has been current in Asia as a moral fable from the time of the birth-tales of the Buddha, and Mr. Kipling included a modern version in his Jungle Book. Numerous European analogues have been collected, some of which are similar to Chaucer's version, but no one of them appears to have been his source. Certainly the tale was never better told than by the Pardoner. In the management of the intrigue and the swift denouement it is a model of short-story method. In atmosphere and characterization it is vividly conceived, and in the dialogue not a word is wasted. And the Old Man, the Messenger of Death, in his mystery and moral sublimity is one of the most impressive apparitions in poetry.

FRAGMENT VII (GROUP B²)

The Pardoner's Tale ends another fragment. It is followed in the best manuscripts by the series of tales (Group B²) which in most recent editions come after that of the Man of Law. But there is no reason for supposing that Chaucer meant to put them in that position. Within the group there seems to be no principle of arrangement save that of contrast or variety.

The Shipman's Tale is a fabliau and relates how a merchant was doubly cheated by a monk, first of his wife's favors, and second of his money. The anecdote is widely dispersed in popular tradition and is still current in America, where it is told at the expense of nationalities reputed to be parsimonious. The best known literary version except Chaucer's is in Boccaccio's Decameron.

The Prioress's Tale. In complete contrast with the scandalous anecdote of the Shipman is the Tale of the Prioress which follows. Requested by the Host, in what may be called without exaggeration the politest speech in English literature, to tell her story, the Prioress first recites an Invocation to the Blessed Virgin, and then relates a legend of a little "clergeoun," or school-boy, murdered by the Jews. A vast cycle of such stories have been current since the early Christian centuries, and they still spring up when hostile feelings develop between Jews and Christians. In the special form which the legend takes in the Prioress's Tale and related versions, it is a "miracle of Our Lady," and the murdered child, by the intervention of the Virgin, is made to speak and declare the manner of his death. In most accounts of the miracle, and probably in its original form, the story ends happily with the restoration of the child to life. But Chaucer's version, and without doubt his source, have a tragic ending, probably taken over from the story of Hugh of Lincoln long familiar in popular ballads. The Prioress's Tale, though in the stanzaic form characteristic of Chaucer's middle period, is generally assigned, by reason of its flawless workmanship and its perfect adaptation to the teller, to the time of the fully developed plan of the Canterbury Tales. By a comparison of the numerous extant versions of the miracle it is possible to discover almost exactly what Chaucer had before him in his source. And we find that working here on a small scale and with almost fragile delicacy of materials he contributed the same new elements of descriptive setting and dramatic characterization which he brought to his larger works. But here, in the interest of dramatic propriety, his humor was held completely in abeyance and the story is told in a spirit of consistent pathos. Surely that criticism is perverse which maintains that Chaucer wrote the Prioress's Tale as a satire on childish legends. He is as far from showing disrespect for the story as for the devout lady who tells it. And when the miracle was related even the ruder and more boisterous members of the company were reduced to silence.

The adaptation of the story to the Prioress is almost too obvious to mention. Everywhere in it are apparent her religious devotion, her elegance and refinement, her "conscience and tendre herte" — unhappily not incompatible with a bigoted hatred for the "cursed Jewes." The story and, hardly less, the revealing introductory dialogue with the Host, serve admirably to complete the portrait of the Prioress in the Prologue.

The Rime of Sir Thopas To recall the company from the solemn mood induced by the Prioress's legend, the Host calls upon Chaucer, who looks as if he could contribute something good, for the next story. The creator of all the pilgrims modestly protests that he has nothing to offer but an old rime he learned long ago, and then launches out into the doggerel jog-trot of the stanzas of Sir Thopas. He is allowed to finish only one canto, or "fit," and begin a second, when the Host declares he can stand no more of it. Chaucer asks, with injured sensibility, why he should be stopped in his tale more than any other man, but the Host is obdurate and tells him he shall no longer rime. Chaucer obediently accepts the ruling of the "lord and governour," and tells the prose tale of Melibeé.

The rime of Sir Thopas is hardly a tale at all. It starts out, in the language and measure of the more popular minstrel romances, to recount the adventures of the paragon of knighthood whose name it bears, and before it is cut short it relates his enamourment with a fairy queen and one inglorious exploit against a giant "with hevedes three." The whole piece is preposterous in the extreme and obviously satirical in purpose. But there is some difference of opinion as to the object of the satire. It has long been recognized that the rime reproduces many of the absurd features of the poorer romances — their padded style and doggerel movement, their catalogue method of description, with endless lists of food and clothing, birds and trees, or the physical features of men and women, their stock adventures of heroes in love or war, their commonplaces of sentiment or of moral teaching. To the reader familiar with the metrical romances nearly every line of Sir Thopas recalls some figure or incident or trick of style, not necessarily absurd in itself, and makes it ridiculous. It has been commonly held that Chaucer's main purpose in the parody was to show up these defects of the romances, and some readers have drawn the unwarrantable inference that he meant to disparage the whole body of such compositions. But recent critics have seen in Sir Thopas, in addition to the literary satire, or even in place of it, social satire at the expense of the Flemish knighthood. It is clear, especially from accounts cited by Miss Winstanley and Professor Manly, that the knights of Flanders were the subject of ridicule at the French and English courts, and Sir Thopas, born at "Poperyng, in the place," was very likely intended as a representative of the type. The descriptions of his food and clothing, appearance, and behavior all seem to convey such jokes as were made by the older aristocracy in contempt for the Flemish nouveaux riches, bourgeois intruders into the circle of chivalry. This application of the satire in Sir Thopas, when once pointed out, appears altogether reasonable. But it does not exclude the older interpretation, and it is probable that we should recognize in the poem a twofold satire, literary and social. And after all, the Host's comments, which, here and elsewhere, afford some indication of Chaucer's purposes, point rather to the former. He makes no reference to Flemish or other upstart knights, but condemns Sir Thopas as a wretched rime.

The Tale of Melbeee "Cut off in the midst of Sir Thopas," one American critic observes, "Chaucer revenges himself by telling the dull tale of Melbeee." Most modern readers will doubtless agree in this appraisal of the "moral tale and virtuous" of Melibeus and Dame Prudence. Chaucer's prose, at its best, is heavy in comparison with his verse. Allegory is now out of fashion, and the moral instruction in Melbeee is commonplace and tiresomely schematic. Except for the collector of proverbs and apophthegms it has now small literary interest. Yet some allowance must undoubtedly be made for change of taste. The Host — who, to be sure, has in mind practical rather than artistic considerations — receives the tale enthusiastically. This is the more significant since he has just cut short Sir Thopas, and since the Monk's Tale, which immediately follows, is interrupted by the Knight when he can no longer endure the dismal tragedies. In so far as the pilgrims' comments are intended to represent the taste and fashion of the time, the Melbeee at least escapes condemnation. Lydgate, writing in the next generation, speaks of it with respect. Chaucer himself, too, had enough interest in the plot, slight as it is, to utilize it in the Monk's Tale. On the whole, there is no reason to suppose that he or his age thought ill of Melbeee. And the Parson's Tale, on the seven Deadly Sins, and the lost translation of Pope Innocent's De Contemptu Mundi testify to his interest in much more uninviting specimens of what Lord Bacon would call "friar's books of edification and mortification."

The Melbeee is a close translation of the French Livre de Melbé et de Dame Prudence, ascribed to Jean de Meun, and this in turn is a free rendering of the Liber Consolationis et Consiliu of Albertanus of Brescia. The date of Chaucer's version is unknown, but it probably belongs among the earlier productions of the Canterbury period.

The Monk's Tale After an extremely personal outburst, in which the Host laments that Godelief, his wife, is not more like Dame Prudence, and shows that she uses all the arguments of a Lady Macbeth to make him resort to violence against the men who have given her offense, he turns for the second time to the Monk and asks him for a tale. Presuming, it would seem, upon the jovial character of the hunting cleric, he begins in a familiar tone to ask him his name, becomes more and more personal, and ends by declaring that if he were pope such a vigorous man would not be restrained from begetting offspring. This eugenic argument, which is repeated in the canceled Epilogue to the Nun's Priest's Tale, is rather unusual in the contemporary discussions of sacerdotal celibacy. Pursuing his attack, and confident of provoking a lively response, the Host asks for an entertaining story, and in particular, for something about hunting. The Monk, unexpectedly — but, in view of the Host's rather impudent onslaught, not unnaturally — preserves the dignity of the cloth. Without taking direct offense he ignores the Host's challenging remarks and offers to relate, for the edification of the company, either a life of St. Edward or a series of "tragedies," of which he has a hundred in his cell. Then after giving, with pedantic solemnity, a dictionary definition of a tragedy, he tells a string of dismal tales of the fall of men from high estate. When he has finished some fifteen of his inexhaustible supply the Knight stops him, declaring that he cannot endure to hear any more about "wo and hevynesse." The Host gives the Monk one more chance to tell a tale which would be in character. But he refuses to play the expected part, and the Host turns to the Nun's Priest, who proves more tractable.

For the scheme of the Monk's Tale, Chaucer was indebted principally to two sources—the Roman de la Rose, which supplied him with the moral concerning Fortune and with some of the individual instances, and Boccaccio's De Casibus Virorum et Feminarum Illustrium, which gave him his sub-title and also several of the tragedies. The other examples he gathered from Boccaccio's De Mulieribus Claris, the Bible, Boethius and Dante, and in three instances — Peter of Spain, Peter of Cyprus, and Barnabo Visconti — from contemporary life. In the case of a few, which contain familiar historical information, the exact source has not been determined. The date of the collection, except for the account of Barnabo, was almost certainly early. The death of Barnabo — one of the very few contemporary events specifically mentioned by Chaucer — did not take place until December, 1385, and Chaucer's lines about it could hardly have been written before the early weeks of 1386. But the single stanza bears every indication of having been interpolated, and the rest of the work belongs to the period of transition from French to Italian influence. The early seventies seem the most reasonable date. The literary interest of the compilation is small, as was inevitable with a series of encyclopedic sketches of the "falls of princes." The Barnabo stanza has vigor and warmth of feeling, and the tragedy of Ugolino, alone perhaps, has moving power. For this deals, not with the summary of a career, but with a tragic moment which could be presented in the small compass of the poem, and Chaucer had a supremely excellent model in Dante's Inferno.

The Nun's Priest's Tale The tale of the Nun's Priest, in contrast to the apprentice work of the Monk's tragedies, shows Chaucer again at the height of his powers. It was not merely written with the Nun's Priest in mind, but was adapted with more than usual care to the character and calling of the teller. His habit of life as a preacher appears in pulpit mannerisms and in the frequent use of homiletic material. His relation to the Prioress as father confessor and spiritual adviser, and at the same time social dependant or beneficiary, seems to be reflected in the cautious protest, "I kan noon harm of no woman divyne." His own character, in its combination of modesty and good humor with quick wit and high intelligence, is one of the most vivid among the pilgrims. Yet it is revealed only as it appears dramatically in his tale, for there is no sketch of him in the General Prologue. The story itself is the familiar incident of the cock who was seized by a fox and made his escape by inducing his captor to open his mouth in speech. It is preserved both in fables and in an episode of the beast-epic known in various languages as the romance of Renard. It used to be held that Chaucer's version was derived from the fable, Dou Coc et Dou Werpil, of Marie de France. But a careful comparison of numerous forms of the story has shown that the Nun's Priest's Tale belongs rather with the epic than with the fables. The type of literature with which Chaucer was working can be best observed in the old French Roman de Renart or the Netherlandish Reinaert Vos, and it received its classic treatment in modern times in Goethe's Reinecke Fuchs. But Chaucer's source, or, for that matter, the simple incident itself which constitutes the action, counts for little in the poem compared with the brilliant presentation. In none of Chaucer's tales — perhaps in no story that could be cited — is the narrative more enlivened by variety of method, by apt description, witty dialogue, or wealth of literary allusion and philosophical comment. The cock's tragic adventure is presented, almost from the outset, against a background of universal history and divine providence. In the discussion of dreams and destiny the Priest draws upon the sermon-books, which are great treasure-houses of mediæval fiction. The catastrophe, thus prepared for, is related in the grand style, making the poem the first notable English example of mock-heroic. And this method is extended with amazing subtlety of humor, to the presentation of the characters of Chauntecleer and Pertelote. The balance is most delicately maintained between the barnyard and the boudoir — or, in contemporary language, the bower. At one moment the characters are in most physical literalness the cock and hen, and in the next Chauntecleer is an educated gentleman, quoting auctorities and translating Latin for the ladies, and Pertelote, the object of his courtly attentions, is a practical and rather disillusioned woman of the world. In her skeptical habit of mind, as Professor Kittredge long ago pointed out, she is an amusing counterpart of the tragic heroine, Criseyde.

The Nun's Priest's Tale is followed by an Epilogue which repeats in a measure the argument of the earlier words of the Host to the Monk, and which, probably for that reason, appears to have been canceled by Chaucer. Even if retained it does not furnish a definite introduction to any following tale. It therefore marks the end of the seventh fragment.

FRAGMENT VIII (GROUP G)

The Second Nun's Tale. The "nonne chapeleyne," like her superior, the Prioress, relates a Christian legend. It is the life of the famous Roman martyr, St. Cecilia, and was taken by Chaucer from the Legenda Aurea, or a version almost identical with that of Jacobus Januensis. Chaucer's text closely follows the Latin original, and is regarded by common consent as the work of his early years. The Prologue, which some scholars hold to have been composed later than the legend, is partly based upon the noble prayer of St. Bernard to the Virgin in the thirty-third canto of Dante's Paradiso. So at least that passage may be assigned to the period after Chaucer's first Italian journey, and the whole composition, along with the Monk's Tale, which also shows the beginning of Italian influence, probably belongs to the early seventies. The legend, by reason alike of subject-matter and of treatment, lacks the vivid and varied human interest of Chaucer's later writings. But with all its simplicity, it is by no means devoid of poetic beauty, and the truly reverent spirit of the narrative — which was not dramatically composed for the Nun — should be taken into account by those critics who think of Chaucer as out of sympathy with the religion of his age. To the student of literary history it is an excellent specimen of the saints' lives, which constituted a very large part of the narrative writings of the Middle Ages. It also gives, as Professor Tatlock has remarked, an expression rarely to be matched in literature, of the triumphant spirit of early Christianity.

The Canon's Yeoman's Tale. The Nun's account of the remote martyrdom of St. Cecilia is followed immediately by what is perhaps the most closely personal and contemporaneous story in the collection, the Canon's Yeoman's anecdote of a swindling alchemist. It has even been conjectured that Chaucer wrote the tale in indignation at his own treatment by a follower of the "sliding craft," and a particular canon of Windsor, William Shuchurch, known to have practiced the art, has been identified as a possible subject of the satire. Be that as it may, the tale reveals keen interest if not strong feeling, and the exposure and denunciation of the alchemist's trickery is thoroughgoing. It does not follow, of course, that Chaucer regarded alchemy as wholly an imposture. The tale shows that he had a considerable acquaintance with alchemical writings, which did have scientific standing in his age, and it would be strange if he did not recognize that there was a legitimate practice of the art.

The Yeoman is represented as overtaking the pilgrims after a mad gallop with his master, who takes abrupt leave upon discovering that his rascality is to be revealed. Whether the pair were really an afterthought with Chaucer we do not know. The device by which they are brought in may have been in his mind from the beginning. In any case it gives variety to the narrative, and provides a natural and dramatic introduction for the Yeoman's story. He begins, like the Wife of Bath and the Pardoner, with a personal confession, though in this case the speaker is not the principal culprit. He is himself the victim of his dishonest lord, from whom he set out to learn the art of "multiplying." He describes at considerable length the processes of alchemy, and then tells of a double swindling trick played by a canon upon a priest. No literary source need be sought for the anecdote, though records have been found of very similar incidents. Probably they were a matter of too common experience. They make a good story, and the Canon and his Yeoman, whether or not drawn from life, are among the most lifelike of Chaucer's characters.

FRAGMENT IX (GROUP H)

The Manciple's Prologue and Tale When overtaken by the Canon's Yeoman, the pilgrims are said to have been at "Boughton-under-Blee." In the Manciple's Prologue, which begins the next fragment, they are at Bob-up-and-Down, identified conjecturally as Harbledown, or a field in the vicinity between Boughton under Blean and Canterbury. It is usually understood that the company was now approaching Canterbury, and that the tales of the Manciple and the Parson were intended to close the outward journey. But it is entirely possible, as has been recently suggested, that Chaucer meant the Manciple's Tale to be told early on the way back to London, and that he was holding the Parson's Tale in reserve for the very end.

The subject of the Manciple's story is the Tell-tale Bird, famous in popular tradition in both orient and occident. The tale obtained wide diffusion in the Middle Ages as one of the stories in the romance of the Seven Sages, and in this form was very probably known to Chaucer. But his own version is derived rather from the Metamorphoses of Ovid, considerably elaborated by description, illustrative exempla, and other digressions. The treatment is rhetorically formal, even somewhat pedantic, and seems to indicate early composition. This supposition is supported, positively, by the extensive use of the Roman de la Rose and, negatively, by the fact that the tale bears no indication of having been written for one of the Canterbury pilgrims.

FRAGMENT X (GROUP I)

The Parson's Prologue and Tale The Parson, when called upon by the Host to play his part in the game, refuses to tell a "fable," or "idle story," but declares himself willing to speak of "moralttee and vertuuous matere." Being a Southern man, however, he cannot compose alliterative verse (which in Chaucer's century was especially cultivated in the dialects of the north and northwest), and he "holds rime but little better", so he offers to tell what he calls a "merry tale in prose." This description is so ludicrously inappropriate to the discourse that follows — a treatise on the Seven Deadly Sins — that some critics have thought that Chaucer must have meant it to introduce a different tale. They have even questioned whether he intended what is known as the Parson's Tale to be included at all in the Canterbury collection. But, after all, the treatise is exactly the kind of entertainment the Parson said he was willing to provide, and in calling it a "merry tale" he was only having his little joke — very much as Chaucer did in introducing his Melbebe. In spite of the Host's exhortation, "Beth fructuous, and that in htel space," the Parson's Tale is by far the longest in the series. Whatever claim it had to consideration in the competition of the pilgrims certainly rests rather upon "sentence" than upon "solas." It deals with the Deadly Sins according to the usual classification and by the regular method of a manual of confession. The greater part has been shown to correspond closely to a portion of the third book of the De Poenitentia of Raymond de Pennaforte. Into this has been inserted a section derived from the Summa de Vitiis of Guilielmus Peraldus. The exact form in which Chaucer had these treatises is not yet known, and it is not even possible to say whether he first made the combination. But it seems probable that he found it ready to hand in the work of a predecessor.

Chaucer's Retractions The Parson's Tale is followed by the much discussed Retractions

ciouns, or Retractions, of the author In them Chaucer revokes all his "translacions and endtynges of worldly vanitees," mentioning by name not only those Canterbury tales "that sownen into synne" but also some works which seem quite inoffensive Partly because of the inclusion among disavowed writings, of the Book of the Duchess, the House of Fame, the Parlament of Fowls, and the Legend of Good Women, some critics have denied the authenticity of the Retractions But it is to be observed that the author is repudiating not merely downright sin, but all worldly vanities, and the poems in question celebrate, in one aspect or other, romantic love To Chaucer, in the mood in which he wrote the Retractions, nothing seemed worthy except works on philosophy and religion, and he specifically excepts from his condemnation only the translation of Boethius "and other bookes of legendes of seintes, and omelies, and moralitee, and devocion" Such a repudiation of most of his life work may be deplored as weakness of mind or explained as a sign of broken health in old age But it can hardly be regarded as impossible, or even improbable Literary history affords many examples, from St Augustine down to modern times, of similar changes of heart In Chaucer's own century Boccaccio, who is so much like him in temperament, is reported, while still in middle life, to have undergone a religious experience which led him to renounce his frivolous and licentious writings in the vernacular and devote himself to learned treatises in Latin And it was not only men of letters who were moved in old age to make amends for what they regarded as sinful lives Chaucer's own friend, Sir Lewis Clifford, the Lollard Knight, was another conspicuous example It is not to be supposed that Chaucer was necessarily immune from such revulsion of feeling Moreover, many of his writings contain passages which, by the standards of any age, would be pronounced vulgar and indecent If we are more lenient toward them than was the aged author himself, it is partly because some of the "cherles tales" are examples of his most masterly narrative art, and partly because in the work of a great realist vice and depravity cannot be excluded And it may at least be said for Chaucer, in contrast to many of the modern practitioners of realism, that he is never morbid or unhealthy, and that he sees life in a true perspective

FRAGMENT I (GROUP A). GENERAL PROLOGUE

Here bygynneth the Book of the Tales of Caunterbury

Whan that Aprille with his shoures soote The droghte of March hath perced to the roote,

And bathed every veyne in swich licour
Of which vertu engendred is the flour, Whan Zephirus eek with his sweete breath 5 Inspired hath in every holt and heeth
The tendre croppes, and the yonge sonne Hath in the Ram his halve cours yronne,
And smale foweles maken melodye,
That slepen al the nyght with open ye 10 (So priketh hem nature in hir corages), Thanne longen folk to goon on pilgrimages,
And palmeres for to seken straunge strondes,

To ferne halwes, kowthe in sondry londes,
And specially from every shures ende 15
Of Engelond to Caunterbury they wende,
The hooly blisful martir for to seke, That hem hath holpen whan that they were seeke

Bifil that in that seson on a day,
In Southwerk at the Tabard as I lay 20
Redy to wenden on my pilgrymage
To Caunterbury with ful devout corage, At nyght was come into that hostelrye Wel nyne and twenty in a compaignye,
Of sondry folk, by aventure yfalle 25 In felawshipe, and pilgrimes were they
alle,

That toward Caunterbury wolden ryde
The chambres and the stables weren wyde,
And wel we weren esed atte beste 29
And shortly, whan the sonne was to reste,
So hadde I spoken with hem everichon
That I was of hir felawshipe anon,
And made forward erly for to ryse,
To takeoure wey ther as I yow devyse

But nathelees, whil I have tyme and space, 35
Er that I ferther in this tale pace,

Me thynketh it acordaunt to resoun
To telle yow al the condicioun Of ech of hem, so as it semed me, And whiche they weren, and of what degree, 40

And eek in what array that they were inne,
And at a knyght than wol I first bigynne A KNYGHT ther was, and that a worthy
man,

That fro the tyme that he first bigan
To riden out, he loved chivalrie, 45 Trouthe and honour, fredom and curteisie Ful worthy was he in his lordes werre,
And therto hadde he riden, no man ferre,
As wel in cristendom as in hethenesse,
And evere honoured for his worthynesse 50
At Ahsaundre he was whan it was wonne Ful ofte tyme he hadde the bord bigonne Aboven alle nacions in Pruce, In Lettow hadde he reysed and in Ruce,
No Cristen man so ofte of his degree 55 In Gernade at the seege eek hadde he be Of Algezar, and riden in Belmarye
At Lyeys was he and at Satalye, Whan they were wonne, and in the Grete
See

At many a noble armee hadde he be 60
At mortal batailles hadde he been fiftene,
And foughten foroure feith at Tramyssene In lystes thries, and ay slayn his foo This ilke worthy knyght hadde been also Somtyme with the lord of Palatye 65
Agayn another hethen in Turkye
And everemoore he hadde a sovereyn prys, And though that he were worthy, he was wys,

And of his port as meeke as is a mayde
He nevere yet no vileynye ne sayde 70
In al his lyf unto no maner wight
He was a verray, parfit gentil knyght
But, for to tellen yow of his array,

His hors were goode, but he was nat gay
 Of fustian he wered a gypon 75
 Al bismotered with his habergeon,
 For he was late ycome from his viage,
 And wente for to doon his pilgrymage

With hym ther was his sone, a yong SQUIER,
 A lovyere and a lusty bachelere, 80 With lokkes crulle as they were leyd in presse

Of twenty yeer of age he was, I gesse
 Of his stature he was of evene lengthe, And wonderly delyvere, and of greet strengthe

And he hadde been somtyme in chyvachie
 In Flaundes, in Artoys, and Pycardie, 86
 And born hym weel, as of so hitel space,
 In hope to stonden in his lady grace Embrouded was he, as it were a meede 89
 Al ful of fresshe floures, whyte and reede Syngynge he was, or floytynge, al the day, He was as fressh as is the month of May Short was his gowne, with slevs longe and

Wel koude he sitte on hors and faire ryde
 He koude songes make and wel endite, 95 Juste and eek daunce, and weel purtreye and write

So hoote he lovede that by nyghtertale He sleep namoore than dooth a nyghtyngale

Curtis he was, lowely, and servysable,
 And carf biforn his fader at the table 100

A YEMAN hadde he and servantz namo
 At that tyme, for hym liste ride so,
 And he was clad in cote and hood of grene
 A sheef of pecok arwes, bright and kene, Under his belt he bar ful thirftily, 105 (Wel koude he dresse his takel yemanly His arwes drouped noght with fetheres lowe)

And in his hand he baar a myghty bowe
 A not heed hadde he, with a broun visage Of wodecraft wel koude he al the usage 110

Upon his arm he baar a gay bracer,
 And by his syde a swerd and a bokeler,
 And on that oother syde a gay daggere Harnesed wel and sharp as point of spere,
 A Cristopher on his brest of silver sheene An horn he bar, the hawdryk was of
 grene,

A forster was he, soothly, as I gesse 117
 Ther was also a Nonne, a PRIORRESSE, That of hir smylyng was ful symple and coy,

Hire gretteste ooth was but by Sente Loy,
 And she was cleped madame Eglentyne Ful weel she soong the service dyvyne, 122 Entuned in hir nose ful semely,
 And Frenssh she spak ful faire and fetisly,
 After the scole of Stratford atte Bowe, 125
 For Frenssh of Farys was to hire unknowe At mete wel ytaught was she with alle
 She leet no morsel from hir lippes falle, Ne wette hir fyngres in hir sauce depe, Wel koude she carie a morsel and wel kepe
 That no drope ne file upon hire brest 131
 In curteisie was set ful muchel hir lest Hir over-lippe wyped she so clene That in hir coppe ther was no ferthyng
 sene

Of grece, whan she dronken hadde hir draughte 135

Ful semely after hir mete she raughte
 And sikerly she was of greet desport,
 And ful plesaunt, and amyable of port,
 And peyned hire to countrefete cheere
 Of court, and to been estatlich of manere,
 And to ben holden digne of reverence 141
 But, for to speken of hire conscience,
 She was so charitable and so pitous
 She wolde wepe, if that she saugh a mous Kaught in a trappe, if it were deed or bledde 145

Of smale houndes hadde she that she fedde
 With rosted flessch, or milk and wastelbreed

But soore wepte she if oon of hem were deed,

Or if men smoot it with a yerde smerte,
 And al was conscience and tendre herte Ful semyly hir wympul pynched was, 151 Hir nose tretys, hir eyen greye as glas, Hir mouth ful smal, and therto softe and reed,

But sikerly she hadde a fair forheed,
 It was almost a spanne brood, I trowe, 155
 For, hardily, she was nat undergrowe Ful fetys was hir cloke, as I was war
 Of smal coral aboute hire arm she bar
 A peire of bedes, gauded al with grene, And theron heng a brooch of gold ful sheene, 160

On which ther was first write a crowned A,
And after Amor vincit omnia

Another NONNE with hire hadde she,
That was hir chapeleyn, and preestes
thre

A MONK ther was, a fair for the maistrie, An outridere, that lovede venerie, 166 A manly man, to been an abbot able Ful many a deyntee hors hadde he in stable, And whan he rood, men myghte his brydel
heere 169

Gynglen in a whistlyng wynd als cleere And eek as loude as dooth the chapel belle Ther as this lord was kepere of the celle,
The reule of seint Maure or of seint Benet,
By cause that it was old and somdel streit
This ilke Monk leet olde thynges pace, 175
And heeld after the newe world the space
He yaf nat of that text a pulled hen,
That seith that hunters ben nat hooly men, Ne that a monk, whan he is reccheles,
Is likned til a fish that is waterles, — 180
This is to seyn, a monk out of his cloystre But thilke text heeld he nat worth an oystre,

And I seyde his opion was good What sholde he studie and make hymselfen
wood, 184

Upon a book in cloystre alwey to poure,
Or swynken with his handes, and labour, As Austyn bit? How shal the world be served?

Lat Austyn have his swynk to hym reserved!

Therefore he was a prikasour aright Grehoundes he hadde as swift as fowel in flight, 190

Of prikyng and of huntyng for the hare Was al his lust, for no cost wolde he spare
I seigh his sleeves purfild at the hond
With grys, and that the fyneste of a lond, And, for to festne his hood under his chyn, 195

He hadde of gold ywrought a ful curious pyn, A love-knotte in the gretter ende ther was His heed was balled, that shoon as any glas, 198

And eek his face, as he hadde been enoynt
He was a lord ful fat and in good poynt,
His eyen stepe, and rolyng in his heed,
That stemed as a forneys of a leed,

His bootes souple, his hors in greet estaat
Now certainly he was a fair prelaat,
He was nat pale as a forpyned goost 205
A fat swan loved he best of any roost
His palfrey was as broun as is a berye A FRERE ther was, a wantowne and a merye,

A lymytour, a ful solempne man
In alle the ordres foure is noon that kan 210
So muchel of dalhaunce and fair langage
He hadde maad ful many a mariage Of youge women at his owene cost Unto his ordre he was a noble post Ful wel biloved and famulier was he 215
With frankeleyns over al in his contree,
And eek with worthy women of the toun,
For he hadde power of confessioun,
As seyde hymself, moore than a curat,
For of his ordre he was licenciat 220
Ful swetely herde he confessioun,
And plesaunt was his absolucioun
He was an esy man to yeve penaunce, Ther as he wiste to have a good pitaunce
For unto a povre ordre for to yive 225
Is signe that a man is wel yshryve,
For if he yaf, he dorste make avaunt,
He wiste that a man was repentaunt,
For many a man so hard is of his herte,
He may nat wepe, although hym soore
smerte 230

Therefore in stede of wepyng and preyeres Men moote yeve silver to the povre freres His typet was ay farsed ful of knyves
And pynees, for to yeven faire wyves
And certainly he hadde a murye note 235
Wel koude he syng and pleyen on a rote,
Of yeddynges he baar outrely the pris
His nekke wht was as the flour-de-lys, Therto he strong was as a champioun
He knew the tavernes wel in every toun
And everich hostiler and tappestere 241 Bet than a lazor or a beggestere, For unto swich a worthy man as he Acorded nat, as by his facultee,
To have with sike lazars aqueyntaunce 245
It is nat honest, it may nat avaunce,
For to deelen with no swich poraille,
But al with riche and selleres of vitaille
And over al, ther as profit sholde arise, Curteis he was and lowely of servyse 250
Ther nas no man nowher so vertuouse
He was the beste beggere in his hous,

[And yaf a certeyn ferme for the graunt, 252^a Noon of his bretheren cam ther in his haunt,] 252^b

For thogh a wydwe hadde noght a sho,
So plesaunt was his "In principio," 254
Yet wolde he have a ferthyng, er he wente
His purchas was wel bettre than his iente
And rage he koude, as it were right a whelp
In love-dayes ther koude he muchel help,
For ther he was nat lyk a cloysterer
With a thredbare cope, as is a povre scoler,
But he was lyk a maister or a pope 261
Of double worstede was his semycope, That rounded as a belle out of the presse Somwhat he lised, for his wantownesse, To make his Englissh sweete upon his tonge, 265

And in his harpyng, whan that he hadde songe,

His eyen twynkled in his heed aryght,
As doon the sterres in the frosty nyght
This worthy lymytour was cleped Huberd A MARCEANT was ther with a forked
berd, 270

In mottelee, and hye on horse he sat,
Upon his heed a Flaundryssh bever hat,
His bootes clasped faire and fetisly His resons he spak ful solempnely, Sownyng alwey th' encrees of his wynnyng 275

He wolde the see were kept for any thyng Bitwixe Middelburgh and Orewelle Wel koude he in eschaunge sheeldes selle
This worthy man ful wel his wit bisette 279
Ther wiste no wight that he was in dette,
So estatly was he of his governaunce With his bargaynes and with his chevys-saunce

For sothe he was a worthy man with alle, But, sooth to seyn, I noot how men hym calle

A CLERK ther was of Oxenford also, 285
That unto logyk hadde longe ygo
As leene was his hors as is a rake,
And he nas nat right fat, I undertake,
But looked holwe, and therto sobrelly 289
Ful thredbare was his overeste courtepy,
For he hadde geten hym yet no benefice, Ne was so worldly for to have office For hym was levere have at his beddes heed

Twenty bookes, clad in blak or reed,

Of Aristotle and his philosophie, 295
Than robes riche, or fithele, or gay sautrie
But al be that he was a philosophe, Yet hadde he but litel gold in cofre, But al that he myghte of his freendes
hente,

On bookes and on lernyng he it spente,
And bisly gan for the soules preye 301
Of hem that yaf hym wherwith to scoleye Of studie took he moost cure and moost

Noght o word spak he moore than was neede, 304

And that was seyde in forme and reverence,
And short and quyke and ful of hy sentence, Sownyng in moral vertu was his speche,
And gladly wolde he lerne and gladly teche

A SERGEANT OF THE LAWE, war and wys, That often hadde been at the Parvys, 310
Ther was also, fulliche of excellence Discreet he was and of greet reverence —
He semed swich, his wordes weren so wise Justice he was ful often in assise, 314
By patente and by pleyn commissioun
For his science and for his heigh renoun,
Of fees and robes hadde he many oon
So greet a purchasour was nowher noon
Al was fee symple to hym in effect, 319
His purchasyng myghte nat been infect Nowher so busy a man as he ther nas,
And yet he semed bisier than he was In termes hadde he caas and doomes alle That from the tyme of kyng Wilham were
falle 324

Therto he koude endite, and make a thyng, Ther koude no wight pynche at his writ-
yng,

And every statut koude he pleyn by rote
He rood but hoomly in a medlice cote, Girt with a cent of silk, with barres smale,
Of his array telle I no lenger tale 330

A FRANKLEYN was in his compaignye Whit was his berd as is the dayesye,
Of his complexioun he was sangwyn Wel loved he by the morwe a sop in wyn,
To lyven in delit was evere his wone, 335
For he was Epicurus owene sone,
That heeld opinoun that pleyn delit Was verraily felicittee parfit An housholdere, and that a greet, was he,
Seint Juhan he was in his contree 340

His breed, his ale, was always after oon,
 A better envyned man was nowher noon Withoute bake mete was nevere his hous 343
 Of fishh and flessch, and that so plentevous,
 It snewed in his hous of mete and drynke,
 Of alle deyntees that men koude thynke
 After the sondry sesons of the yeer,
 So chaunged he his mete and his soper Ful many a fat partrich hadde he in muwe, And many a breem and many a luce in stuwe 350

Wo was his cook but if his sauce were Poynaunt and sharp, and redy al his geere His table dormant in his halle alway Stood redy covered al the longe day
 At sessiouns ther was he lord and sire, 355 Ful ofte tyme he was knyght of the shire An anlaas and a gipsy al of silk Heeng at his gurdel, whit as morne milk
 A shirreve hadde he been, and a countour Was nowher swich a worthy vavasour 360

AN HABERDASSHERE and a CARPENTER, A WEBBE, a DYERE, and a TAPYCHER, —
 And they were clothed alle in o lyveree
 Of a solempne and a greet fraternitee 364 Ful fresch and newe hir geere apiked was,

Hir knyves were chaped nocht with bras But al with silver, wroght ful clene and
 weel

Hire girdles and hir pouches everydeel Wel semed ech of hem a fair burgeys
 To sitten in a yeldehalle on a deys 370

Everich, for the wisdom that he kan,
 Was shaply for to been an alderman For catel hadde they ynogh and rente,
 And eek hir wyves wolde it wel assente,
 And elles certeyn were they to blame 375
 It is ful fair to been ycleped "madame,"
 And goon to vigilies al bifore,
 And have a mantel roialliche ybore

A Cook they hadde with hem for the nones 379

To bouille the chiknes with the marybones,
 And poudre-marchant tart and galyngale Wel koude he knowe a draughte of Lon-doun ale

He koude rooste, and sethe, and broille, and frye,

Maken mortreux, and wel bake a pye 384
 But greet harm was it, as it thoughte me, That on his shyne a mormal hadde he

For blankmanger, that made he with the
 beste

A SHIPMAN was ther, wonynge fer by weste,

For aught I woot, he was of Dertemouthe
 He rood upon a rouncy, as he kouthe, 390
 In a gowne of faldyng to the knee

A daggere hangynge on a laas hadde he Aboute his nekke, under his arm adoun The hoothe somer hadde maad his hewe al broun,

And certainly he was a good felawe 395
 Ful many a draughte of wyn had he ydrawe Fro Burdeux-ward, whil that the chapman sleep

Of nyce conscience took he no keep If that he faught, and hadde the hyer hond, By water he sente hem hoom to every lond 400

But of his craft to rekene wel his tydes,
 His stremes, and his daungers hym bisides, His herberwe, and his moone, his lodemenage,

Ther nas noon swich from Hulle to Car-tage

Hardy he was and wys to undertake, 405 With many a tempest hadde his berd been shake

He knew alle the havenes, as they were,
 Fro Gootlond to the cape of Fynystere, And every cryke in Britaigne and in Spayne 409

His barge ycleped was the Maudelayne

With us ther was a DOCTOUR OF PHISIK,
 In al this world ne was ther noon hym lik,

To speke of phisik and of surgerye,
 For he was grounded in astronomye
 He kepte his pacient a ful greet deel 415

In houres by his magyk natureel Wel koude he fortunen the ascendent

Of his ymages for his pacient
 He knew the cause of everich maladye, Were it of hoot, or coold, or moyste, or drye, 420

And where they engendred, and of what humour

He was a verray, parfit praktisour
 The cause yknowe, and of his harm the
 roote,

Anon he yaf the sike man his boote Ful redy hadde he his apothecaries 425

To sende hym drogges and his letuaries,

For ech of hem made oother for to wynne — Hir frendshipe nas nat newe to bigynne Wel knew he the olde Esculapius,
 And Deyscorides, and eek Rufus, 430 Olde Ypocras, Haly, and Galyen, Serapion, Razis, and Avycen, Averrois, Damascien, and Constantyn, Bernard, and Gatesden, and Gilbertyn
 Of his diete mesurable was he, 435
 For it was of no superfluitee,
 But of greet norissyng and digestible His studie was but litel on the Bible In sangwyn and in pers he clad was al, Lyncd with taffata and with sendal, 440
 And yet he was but esy of dispence,
 He kepte that he wan in pestilence For gold in phisik is a cordial, Therefore he lovede gold in special 444
 A good WIF was ther of biside BATHE, But she was somdel deaf, and that was scathe
 Of clooth-makyng she hadde swich an haunt,
 She passed hem of Ypres and of Gaunt In al the parisshe wif ne was ther noon That to the offrynge bifore hire sholde
 goon, 450
 And if ther dide, certeyn so wrooth was
 she,
 That she was out of alle charitee Hir coverchiefs ful fyne weren of ground,
 I dorste swere they weyeden ten pound 454
 That on a Sunday weren upon hir heed Hir hosen weren of fyn scarlet reed, Ful strete yteyd, and shoes ful moyste and
 newe Boold was hir face, and fair, and reed of hewe
 She was a worthy womman al hir lyve Housbondes at churche dore she hadde fyve, 460
 Withouten oother compaignye in youthe, —
 But therof nedeth nat to speke as nowthe And thries hadde she been at Jerusalem, 463
 She hadde passed many a straunge strem,
 At Rome she hadde been, and at Bologne,
 In Galice at Seint Jame, and at Cologne She koude muchel of wandryng by the weye
 Gat-tothed was she, soothly for to seye Upon an amblere esly she sat,

Ywympled wel, and on hir heed an hat 470
 As brood as is a bokeler or a targe,
 A foot-mantal aboute hir hipis large,
 And on hir feet a paire of spores sharpe In felawshupe wel koude she laughe and carpe 474
 Of remedies of love she knew per chaunce,
 For she koude of that art the olde daunce
 A good man was ther of religioun,
 And was a povre PERSOUN OF A TOUN, Butriche he was of hooly thought and werk
 He was also a lerned man, a clerk, 480
 That Cristes gospel trewely wolde preche, His parissshens devoutly wolde he teche Benygne he was, and wonder diligent,
 And in adversitee ful pacient,
 And swich he was ypreved ofte sithes 487
 Ful looth were hym to cursen for his tithes,
 But rather wolde he yeven, out of doute, Unto his povre parissshens aboute
 Of his offryng and eek of his substaunce
 He koude in litel thyng have suffisaunce Wyd was his parisshe, and houses fer asonder, 491
 But he ne lefte nat, for reyn ne thonder, In siknesse nor in meschief to visite
 The ferreste in his parisshe, muche and lite, Upon his feet, and in his hand a staf 497
 This noble ensample to his sheep he yaf, That first he wroughte, and afterward he taughte
 Out of the gospel he tho wordes caughte,
 And thus figure he added eek therto,
 That if gold ruste, what shal iren do? 501
 For if a preest be foul, on whom we truste,
 No wonder is a lewed man to ruste,
 And shame it is, if a preest take keep,
 A shuten shepherde and a clene sheep Wel oghte a preest ensample for to yve, By his clenness, how that his sheep sholde
 lyve 508
 He sette nat his benefice to hyre
 And leet his sheep encombred in the myre
 And ran to Londoun unto Seinte Poules
 To seken hym a chaunterie for soules, 516
 Or with a bretherhed to been withholde, But dwelte at hoom, and kepte wel his folde,
 So that the wolf ne made it nat myscarie;
 He was a shepherde and noght a mercenarie 514
 And though he hooly were and vertuous.

He was to synful men nat despitous, Ne of his speche daungerous ne digne,
 But in his techyng discreet and benygne
 To drawen folk to hevене by farnesse, By good ensample, this was his busynesse
 But it were any persone obstinat, 521
 What so he were, of heigh or lowh estat, Hym wolde he snybben sharply for the nonys

A better preest I trowe that nowher noon ys

He waited after no pompe and reverence, Ne maked him a spiced conscience, 526
 But Cristes loore and his apostles twelve He taughte, but first he folwed it hym-selve

With hym ther was a PLOWMAN, was his brother,

That hadde ylad of dong ful many a fother,
 A trewe swynkere and a good was he, 531 Lyvyng in pees and parfit charitee God loved he best with al his hoole
 herte

At alle tymes, thogh him gamed or smerte, And thanne his neighebor right as hym-selve 535

He wolde thresshe, and therto dyke and delve,

For Cristes sake, for every povre wight, Withouten hire, if it lay in his myght
 His tithes payde he ful faire and wel, Bothe of his propre swynk and his catel
 In a tabard he rood upon a mere 541

Ther was also a REVE, and a MILLERE, A SOMNOUR, and a PARDONER also,
 A MAUNCIPLE, and myself — ther were namo

The MILLERE was a stout carl for the
 nones, 545

Ful byg he was of brawn, and eek of bones

That proved wel, for over al ther he cam, At wrastlyng he wolde have alwey the ram

He was short-sholdred, brood, a thikke knarre,

Ther was no dore that he nolde heve of harre, 550

Or breke it at a rennyng with his heed
 His berd as any sowe or fox was reed, And therto brood, as though it were a spade

Upon the cop right of his nose he hade
 A werte, and theron stood a toft of herys, Reed as the brustles of a sowes erys, 556
 His nosethirles blake were and wyde
 A swerd and bokeler bar he by his syde
 His mouth as greet was as a greet forneys
 He was a jangler and a golardeys, 560
 And that was moost of synne and har-lotries

Wel koude he stelen corn and tollen thries,
 And yet he hadde a thombe of gold, pardee

A whit cote and a blew hood wered he A baggepipe wel koude he blowe and sowne, 565

And therwithal he broghte us out of towne A gentil MAUNCIPLE was ther of a temple,

Of which achatours myghte take exemple
 For to be wise in byynge of vitaille, For whether that he payde or took by taille, 570

Algate he wayted so in his achaat
 That he was ay biforn and in good staat
 Now is nat that of God a ful fair grace That swich a lewed mannes wit shal pace
 The wisdom of an heap of lerned men? 575
 Of mastres hadde he mo than thries ten,
 That weren of lawe expert and curious,
 Of which ther were a duszeyne in that hous

Worthy to been stywardes of rente and

Of any lord that is in Engelond, 580
 To make hym lyve by his propre good In honour dettelees (but if he were wood),
 Or lyve as scarsly as hym list desire,
 And able for to helpen al a shire 584

In any caas that myghte falle or happe,
 And yet this Manciple sette hir aller cappe

The REVE was a sclendre colerik man His berd was shave as ny as ever he kan,

His heer was by his erys ful round yshorn,
 His top was dokked lyk a preest biforn Ful longe were his legges and ful lene, 591 Ylyk a staf, ther was no calf ysene Wel koude he kepe a gerner and a bynne, Ther was noon audtour koude on him
 wyne

Wel wiste he by the droghte and by the reyn 595

The yeldyng of his seed and of his greyn
His lordes sheep, his neet, his dayerye, His swyn, his hors, his stoor, and his pultrye

Was hoolly in this Reves governyng,
And by his covenant yaf the rekenyng, 600
Syn that his lord was twenty yeer of age Ther koude no man bryngre hym in arrerage

Ther nas bailhf, ne huerde, nor oother hyne,

That he ne knew his sleighte and his covyne, 604

They were adrad of hym as of the deeth
His wonyng was ful faire upon an heeth,
With grene trees yshadwed was his place
He koude better than his lord purchace Ful riche he was astored pryvely

His lord wel koude he plesen subtally, 610
To yeve and lene hym of his owene good,
And have a thank, and yet a cote and hood
In youthe he hadde lerned a good myster,
He was a wel good wrighte, a carpenter

This Reve sat upon a ful good stot, 615
That was al pomely grey and highte Scot

A long surcote of pers upon he hade,
And by his syde he baar a rusty blade
Of Northfolk was this Reve of which I telle, Beside a toun men clepen Baldeswelle 620 Tukked he was as is a frere aboute,
And evere he rood the hyndreste of oure route

A SOMONOUR was ther with us in that place, 623

That hadde a fyr-reed cherubynnes face,
For saucefleem he was, with eyen narwe
As hoot he was and lecherous as a sparwe,
With scalled browes blake and piled berd
Of his visage children were aferd Ther nas quyk-silver, lytarge, ne brymstoon,

Boras, ceruce, ne oille of tartre noon, 630
Ne oynement that wolde clense and byte, That hym myghte helpen of his whelkes
white,

Ne of the knobbes sittyng on his chekes Wel loved he garleek, oynons, and eek lekes,

And for to drynken strong wyn, reed as blood, 635

Thanne wolde he speke and crie as he were
wood

And whan that he wel dronken hadde the
wyn,

Thanne wolde he speke no word but Latyn
A fewe termes hadde he, two or thre,
That he had lerned out of som decree —

No wonder is, he herde it al the day, 64
And eek ye knowen wel how that a jay Kan clepen "Watte" as wel as kan the pope

But whoso koude in oother thyng hym grope,

Thanne hadde he spent al his philosophie, Ay "Questio quid uris" wolde he crie 646

He was a gentil harlot and a kynde,
A better felawe sholde men noght fynde
He wolde suffre for a quart of wyn

A good felawe to have his concubyn 650
A twelf month, and excuse hym atte fulle,

Ful prively a fynch eek koude he pulle
And if he foond owher a good felawe,

He wolde techen him to have noon awe
In swich caas of the ercedekenes curs, 655

But if a mannes soule were in his purs, For in his purs he sholde ypunysshed be

"Purs is the ercedekenes helle," seyde he But wel I woot he lyed right in dede, 659

Of cursyng oghte ech gilti man him drede,
For curs wol slee right as assouillyng savith,

And also war hym of a Significant In daunger hadde he at his owene gise

The yonge gyles of the diocise,
And knew hir conseil, and was al hir reed

A gerland hadde he set upon his heed 666
As greet as it were for an ale-stake

A bokeleer hadde he maad hym of a cake

With hym ther rood a gentil PARDONER
Of Rouncivale, his freend and his compeer,

That streight was comen fro the court of Rome 671

Ful loude he soong "Com hider, love, to
me!"

This Somonour bar to hym a stif burdoun,

Was nevere trompe of half so greet a soun
This Pardonere hadde heer as yelow as wax,

But smothe it heeng as dooth a strike of flex, 676

By ounces henge his lokkes that he hadde,
And therwith he his shuldres overspradde,

But thynne it lay, by colpons oon and oon
But hood, for jolitee, wered he noon, 680

For it was trussed up in his walet Hym thoughte he rood al of the newe jet, Dischevelee, save his cappe, he rood al bare

Swiche glarynge eyen hadde he as an hare
 A vernycle hadde he sowed upon his cappe
 His walet lay biforn hym in his lappe, 686 Bretful of pardoun, comen from Rome al hoot

A voys he hadde as smal as hath a goot
 No berd hadde he, ne nevere sholde have,
 As smothe it was as it were late shave 690

I trowe he were a geldyng or a mare
 But of his craft, fro Berwyk into Ware, Ne was ther swich another pardoner
 For in his male he hadde a pilwe-beer,
 Which that he seyde was Oure Lady veyl
 He seyde he hadde a gobet of the seyl 696 That Seint Peter hadde, whan that he
 wente

Upon the see, til Jhesu Crist hym hente
 He hadde a croys of latoun ful of stones,
 And in a glas he hadde pigges bones 700

But with thuse relikes, whan that he fond A povre person dwellynge upon lond, Upon a day he gat hym moore moneye Than that the person gat in monthes
 tweye, 704

And thus, with feyned flaterye and japes,
 He made the person and the peple his apes
 But trewely to tellen atte laste,
 He was in churche a noble ecclesiaste Wel koude he rede a lessoun or a storie,
 But alderbest he song an offertorie, 710 For wel he wiste, whan that song was songe,

He moste preche and wel affile his tonge
 To wyne silver, as he ful wel koude, Therefore he song the murerly and loude

Now have I toold you shortly, in a clause, Th'estaat, th'array, the nombre, and eek the cause 716

Why that assembled was this compaignye
 In Southwerk at this gentil hostelrye That highte the Tabard, faste by the Belle But now is tyme to yow for to telle 720
 How that we baren us that ilke nyght, Whan we were in that hostelrye alyght,
 And after wol I telle of our viage
 And al the remenaunt of oure pilgrimage
 But first I pray yow, of youre curteasye,
 That ye n'arette it nat my vileynye, 726

Though that I pleynly speke in this mateere,
 To telle yow hir wordes and hir cheere, Ne thogh I speke hir wordes proprely
 For this ye knowen al so wel as I, 730

Whoso shal telle a tale after a man,
 He moot reherce as ny as evere he kan Everich a word, if it be in his charge, Al speke he never so rudeliche and large,
 Or ellis he moot telle his tale untrewe, 735
 Or feyne thyng, or fynde wordes newe He may nat spare, although he were his
 brother,

He moot as wel seye o word as another Crist spak hymself ful brode in hooly writ,
 And wel ye woot no vileynye is it 740
 Eek Plato seith, whoso that kan hym rede,
 The wordes moote be cosyng to the dede
 Also I prey yow to foryeve it me, Al have I nat set folk in hir degree Heere in this tale, as that they sholde
 stonde 745

My wit is short, ye may wel understonde Greet chere made oure Hoost us everi-chon,

And to the soper sette he us anon
 He served us with vitaille at the beste, Strong was the wyn, and wel to drynke us
 leste 750

A semely man OURE HOOSTE was withalle
 For to han been a marchal in an halle
 A large man he was with eyen stepe —
 A fairer burgeys is ther noon in Chepe — Boold of his speche, and wys, and wel ytaught, 755

And of manhod hym lakkede right naught Eek therto he was right a myrte man,
 And after soper pleyen he bigan, And spak of myrthe amonges othere
 thynges, 759

Whan that we hadde maad our rekenynges,
 And seyde thus "Now, lordynges, trewely, Ye been to me right welcome, hertely,
 For by my trouthe, if that I shal nat lye, I saugh nat this yeer so myrte a compaignye

Atones in this herberwe as is now 765 Fayn wolde I doon yow myrthe, wiste I how And of a myrthe I am right now bythoght, To doon yow ese, and it shal coste noght

Ye goon to Caunterbury — God yow
 speede, 769

The blisful martir quite yow youre meede!
 And wel I woot, as ye goon by the weye, Ye shapen yow to talen and to pleye,
 For trewely, confort ne myrthe is noon
 To ride by the weye doomb as a stoon, 775
 And therefore wol I maken yow disport,
 As I seyde erst, and doon yow som confort
 And if yow liketh alle by oon assent
 For to stonden at my juggement,
 And for to werken as I shal yow seye,
 To-morwe, whan ye riden by the weye, 780
 Now, by my fader soule that is deed,
 But ye be myne, I wol yeve yow myn heed!
 Hoold up youre hondes, withouten moore
 speche "

Oure conseil was nat longe for to seche Us thoghte it was noght worth to make it
 wys, 785

And graunted hym withouten moore avys,
 And bad him seye his vourdit as hym leste "Lordynges," quod he, "now herkneþ for the beste,

But taak it nought, I prey yow, in desdeyn This is the poynt, to speken short and pleyn, 790

That ech of yow, to shorte with oure weye,
 In this viage shal telle tales tweye
 To Caunterbury-ward, I mene it so,
 And homward he shal tellen oþere two,
 Of adventures that whilom han bifalle 795 And which of yow that bereth hym best of
 alle,

That is to seyn, that telleth in this caas Tales of best sentence and moost solaaes, Shal have a soper at oure aller cost Heere in this place, sittinge by this post, Whan that we come agayn fro Caunter-bury 801

And for to make yow the moore mury,
 I wol myselven goodly with yow ryde, Right at myn owene cost, and be youre gyde, 804

And whoso wole my juggement withseye Shal paye al that we spenden by the weye
 And if ye vouche sauf that it be so,
 Tel me anon, withouten wordes mo,
 And I wol erly shape me therefore "

This thyng was graunted, and oure othes swore 810

With ful glad herte, and preyden hym also That he wolde vouche sauf for to do so,
 And that he wolde been oure governour,

And of our tales juge and reportour,
 And sette a soper at a certeyn pris, 815
 And we wol reuled been at his devys
 In heigh and lough, and thus by oon assent
 We been accorded to his juggement
 And therupon the wyn was fet anon,
 We dronken, and to reste wente echon, 820 Withouten any lenger taryynge Amorwe, whan that day bigan to
 sprynge,

Up roos oure Hoost, and was oure aller cok,

And gadrede us togidre alle in a flok,
 And forth we riden a litel moore than paas Unto the wateryng of Seint Thomas, 826
 And there oure Hoost bigan his hors areste And seyde, "Lordynges, herkneþ, if yow
 leste

Ye woot youre foreward, and I it yow recorde

If even-song and morwe-song accorde, 830
 Lat se now who shal telle the firste tale
 As evere mote I drynke wyn or ale, Whoso be rebel to my juggement

Shal paye for al that by the wey is spent Now draweth cut, er that we ferrer
 twynne, 835

He which that hath the shorteste shal bigynne

Sire Knyght," quod he, "my mayster and my lord,

Now draweth cut, for that is myn accord

Cometh neer," quod he, "my lady Prior-esse

And ye, sire Clerk, lat be youre shamefast-
 nesse, 840

Ne studieþ noght, ley hond to, every
 man!"

Anon to drawn every wight bigan,
 And shortly for to tellen as it was,
 Were it by aventure, or sort, or cas,

The sothe is this, the cut fil to the Knyght, Of which ful blithe and glad was every wyght, 846

And telle he moste his tale, as was resoun,
 By foreward and by composicioun,

As ye han herd, what nedeth wordes mo?
 And whan this goode man saugh that it was so, 850

As he that wys was and obedient To kepe his foreward by his free assent,

He seyde, "Syn I shal bigynne the game,
What, welcome be the cut, a Goddes name!
Now lat us ryde, and herkneth what I
seye" 855

And with that word we ryden forth oure
weye,
And he bigan with right a myrre cheere
His tale anon, and seyde in this manere

THE KNIGHT'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Knyghtes Tale

Iamque domos patrias, Scithice post aspera gentis Prelia, laungero, &c

Whilom, as olde stories tellen us, Ther was a duc that highte Theseus, 860
Of Atthenes he was lord and governour,
And in his tyme swich a conquerour, That gretter was ther noon under the sonne 863

Ful many a riche contree hadde he wonne,
What with his wysdom and his chivalrie,
He conquered al the regne of Femenye,
That whilom was ycleped Scithia,
And weddede the queene Ypolita, And broghte hire hoom with hym in his contree 869

With muchel glorie and greet solempnytee,
And eek hir yonge suster Emelye
And thus with victorie and with melodye Lete I this noble duc to Atthenes ryde,
And al his hoost in armes hym bisyde 874

And certes, if it nere to long to heere,
I wolde have toold yow fully the manere
How wonnen was the regne of Femenye
By Theseus and by his chivalrye,
And of the grete bataille for the nones Bitwixen Atthenes and Amazones, 880

And how asseged was Ypolita,
The faire, hardy queene of Scithia,
And of the feste that was at hir weddyng,
And of the tempest at hir hoom-comyng,
But al that thyng I moot as now forbere
I have, God woot, a large feeld to ere, 886
And wayke been the oxen in my plough
The remenant of the tale is long ynough
I wol nat letten eek noon of this route, Lat every felawe telle his tale aboute, 890
And lat se now who shal the soper wyne,
And ther I lefte, I wol ayeyn bigynne

This duc, of whom I make mencion, Whan he was come almost unto the toun,

In al his wele and in his mooste pride, 880
He was war, as he caste his eye aside, Where that ther kneled in the heighe weye A compaignye of ladyes, tweye and
tweye, 898

Ech after oother, clad in clothes blake,
But swich a cry and swich a wo they make That in this world nys creature lyvyng
That herde swich another waymentyng,
And of this cry they nolde nevere stenten Til they the reynes of his brydel henten

"What folk been ye, that at myn homcomyng 895
Perturben so my feste with cryng?" Quod Theseus "Have ye so greet envye Ot myn honour, that thus compleyne and crye?"

Or who hath yow mysboden or offended?
And telleth me if it may been amended,
And why that ye been clothed thus in blak" 911

The eldeste lady of hem alle spak, Whan she hadde swowned with a deedly
cheere,

That it was routhe for to seen and heere,
And seyde, "Lord, to whom Fortune hath yiven 915

Victorie, and as a conqueror to lyven, Nat greveth us youre glorie and youre honour,

But we biseken mercy and socour 918
Have mercy on oure wo and oure distresse!
Som drope of pitee, thurgh thy gentillesse, Upon us wrecched wommen lat thou falle
For, certes, lord, ther is noon of us alle, That she ne hath been a duchesse or a queene

Now be we caytyves, as it is wel seene,

Thanked be Fortune and hire false wheel,
That noon estaat assureth to be weel 926
And certes, lord, to abyden youre presence, Heere in this temple of the goddesse Clemence

We han ben waitynge al this fourtenyght
Now help us, lord, sith it is in thy myght I, wrecche, which that wepe and wayle
thus, 931

Was whilom wyf to kyng Cappaneus, That starf at Thebes — cursed be that day! —

And alle we that been in this array
And maken al this lamentacoun, 935
We losten alle oure housbondes at that toun, Whil that the seege therabout lay
And yet now the olde Creon, weylaway!
That lord is now of Thebes the citee, Fulfid of ire and of inquitee, 940
He, for despit and for his tyrannye,
To do the dede bodyes vileynye Of alle oure lordes whiche that been yslawe,

Hath alle the bodyes on an heep ydrawe,
And wol nat suffren hem, by noon assent, Neither to been yburyed nor ybrent, 946
But maketh houndes ete hem in despit ”

And with that word, withouten moore respit,

They fillen gruf and criden pitously, “Have on us wrecched wommen som mercy, 950
And lat oure sorwe synken in thyn herte ”

This gentil duc down from his courser
sterte
With herte pitous, whan he herde hem speke

Hym thoughte that his herte wolde breke, Whan he saugh hem so pitous and so maat, 955

That whilom weren of so greet estaat,
And in his armes he hem alle up hente,
And hem conforteth in ful good entente,

And swoor his ooth, as he was trewe
knyght,

He wolde doon so ferforthly his myght 960
Upon the traunt Creon hem to wreke, That al the peple of Grece sholde speke
How Creon was of Theseus yserved As he that hadde his deeth ful wel deserved 964

And right anon, withouten moore abood,
His baner he desplayeth, and forth rood To Thebes-ward, and al his hoost beside No neer Atthenes wolde he go ne ride, Ne take his ese fully half a day,
But onward on his way that nyght he lay,
And sente anon Ypolita the queene, 971
And Emelye, hir yonge suster sheene, Unto the toun of Atthenes to dwelle,
And forth he rit, ther is namoore to telle The rede statue of Maus, with speere and targe, 975

So shyneth in his white baner lure,
That alle the feeldes glyteren up and down,
And by his baner born is his penoun
Of gold ful riche, in which ther was ybete
The Mynotaur, which that he slough in Crete 980

Thus rit this duc, thus rit this conquerour,
And in his hoost of chivalrie the flour,
Til that he cam to Thebes and alighte Faire in a feeld, ther as he thoughte to fichte

But shortly for to speken of this thyng, With Creon, which that was of Thebes
kyng, 986
He faught, and slough hym manly as a
knyght

In pleyn bataille, and putte the folk to flyght,
And by assaut he wan the citee after,
And rente adoun bothe wall and sparre and rafter, 990

And to the ladyes he restored agayn
The bones of hir housbondes that were
slayn,

To doon obseques, as was tho the gyse
But it were al to longe for to devyse 994
The grete clamour and the waymentynge
That the ladyes made at the brennyng
Of the bodies, and the grete honour
That Theseus, the noble conquerour, Dooth to the ladyes, whan they from hym
wente,

But shortly for to telle is myn entente Whan that this worthy duc, this The-seus, 1001

Hath Creon slayn, and wonne Thebes thus Stille in that feeld he took al nyght his
reste,

And dide with al the contree as hym leste
To ransake in the taas of bodyes dede,

Hem for to strepe of harneys and of wede,
The pilours didnen bisynesse and cure 1007
After the bataille and disconfiture
And so bifel that in the taas they founde, Thurgh-girt with many a grevous bloody wounde, 1010

Two yonge knyghtes liggynge by and by,
Bothe in oon armes, wrought ful richely,
Of whiche two Arcita highte that oon, 1013
And that oother knyght highte Palamon Nat fully quyke, ne fully dede they were,
But by hir cote-armures and by hir gere
The heraudes knewe hem best in special As they that weren of the blood roial
Of Thebes, and of sustren two yborn 1019
Out of the taas the pilours han hem torn,
And han hem camed softe unto the tente
Of Theseus, and he ful soone hem sente
To Athenes, to dwellen in prisoun Perpetuely, — he nolde no rounsoun 1024
And whan this worthy duc hath thus ydon,
He took his hoost, and hoom he rit anon
With laurer crowned as a conquerour, And ther he lyveth in joye and in honour

Terme of his lyf, what nedeth wordes mo?
And in a tour, in angwiss and in wo,
This Palamon and his felawe Arcite 1031 For everemoore, ther may no gold hem quite

This passeth yeer by yeer and day by
day,

Till it fil ones, in a morwe of May,
That Emelye, that fairer was to sene 1035
Than is the lylie upon his stalke grene,
And fressher than the May with floures
newe —

For with the rose colour stroof hire
hewe,

I noot which was the fyner of hem two — Er it were day, as was hir wone to do, 1040
She was arisen and al redy dight,
For May wole have no slogardie a-nyght
The sesoun priketh every gentil herte, And maketh hym out of his slep to sterte, And seith "Arys, and do thyn observ-
aunce" 1045

This maked Emelye have remembraunce
To doon honour to May, and for to ryse Yclothed was she fressh, for to devyse Hir yellow heer was broyded in a tresse
Bihynde hir bak, a yerde long, I gesse 1050

And in the gardyn, at the sonne upriste,
She walketh up and down, and as hire liste She gadereth floures, party white and
rede,

To make a subtil gerland for hire hede,
And as an aungel hevenyssshly she soong The grete tour, that was so thikke and stroong, 1058

Which of the castel was the chief dongeon, (Ther as the knyghtes weren in pri-soun

Of which I tolde yow and tellen shal)
Was evene joynant to the gardyn wal 1060 Ther as this Emelye hadde hir pleyyng Bright was the sonne and cleer that mor-wenyng,

And Palamoun, this woful prisoner,
As was his wone, by leve of his gayler, Was risen and romed in a chambre an heigh, 1065

In which he al the noble citee segh,
And eek the gardyn, ful of braunches grene, Ther as this freshe Emelye the shene 1068
Was in hire walk, and romed up and doun
This sorweful prisoner, this Palamoun, Goth in the chambre romyng to and fro,
And to hymself compleynyng of his wo
"That he was born," ful ofte he seyde,
"allas!"

And so bifel, by aventure or cas, That thurgh a wyndow, thikke of many a barre 1075

Of iren greet and square as any sparre,
He cast his eye upon Emelya,
And therwithal he bleynte and cride,
"A!" 1078

As though he stongen were unto the herte
And with that cry Arcite anon up sterte, And seyde, "Cosyn myn, what eyleth
thee,

That art so pale and deedly on to see?
Why cridestow? who hath thee doon offence?"

For Goddes love, taak al in pacience 1084 Oure prisoun, for it may noon oother be Fortune hath yeven us this adversitee
Som wikke aspect or disposicioun Of Saturne, by som constellacioun, Hath yeven us this, although we hadde it sworn,

So stode the hevене whan that we were born 1090

We moste endure it, this is the short and playn "

This Palamon answerde and seyde
agayn,

"Cosyn, for sothe, of this opinoun Thow hast a veyn ymaginacioun
This prisoun caused me nat for to crye, 1095
But I was hurt right now thurghout myn ye

Into myn herte, that wol my bane be The fairnesse of that lady that I see Yond in the gardyn romen to and fro Is cause of al my crying and my wo 1100
I noot wher she be womman or goddesse, But Venus is it soothly, as I gesse "
And therwithal on knees doun he fil,
And seyde "Venus, if it be thy wil Yow in this gardyn thus to transfigure 1105 Bfore me, sorweful, wrecched creature, Out of this prisoun help that we may scapen

And if so be my destynce be shapen
By eterne word to dyen in prisoun,
Of oure lynage have som compassoun, 1110
That is so lowe ybrought by tyrannye "
And with that word Arcite gan espye Wher as this lady romed to and fro,
And with that sighte hir beautee hurte
hym so, 1114

That, if that Palamon was wounded sore, Arcite is hurt as muche as he, or moore
And with a sigh he seyde pitously
"The freshe beautee sleeth me sodeynly Of hire that rometh in the yonder place,
And but I have hir mercy and hir grace,
That I may seen hire atte leeste weye, 1121
I nam but deed, ther nis namoore to seye "

This Palamon, whan he tho wordes
herde,

Dispitously he looked and answerde,
"Whether seastow this in earnest or in pley?" 1125

"Nay," quod Arcite, "in earnest, by my fey!

God helpe me so, me list ful yvele pleye " This Palamon gan knytte his browes
tweye

"It nere," quod he, "to thee no greet honour

For to be fals, ne for to be traitour 1130
To me, that am thy cosyn and thy brother Ysworn ful depe, and ech of us til oother,

That nevere, for to dyen in the peyne,
Til that the deeth departe shal us tweyne, Neither of us in love to hyndre oother, 1135
Ne in noon oother cas, my leeve brother,
But that thou sholdest trewely forthren me
In every cas, as I shal forthren thee, —
This was thyn ooth, and myn also, certeyn, I woot right wel, thou darst it nat with seyn 1140

Thus artow of my conseil, out of doute,
And now thow woldest falsly been aboute To love my lady, whom I love and
serve, 1143

And evere shal til that myn herte steve Nay, certes, false Arcite, thow shalt nat so I loved hire first, and tolde thee my wo As to my conseil and my brother sworn To forthre me, as I have toold biforn
For which thou art ybounden as a knyght
To helpen me, if it lay in thy myght, 1150
Or elles artow fals, I dar wel seyn "

This Arcite ful proudly spak ageyn "Thow shalt," quod he, "be rather fals than I,

And thou art fals, I telle thee outrely,
For paramour I loved hire first er thow What wiltow seyn? Thou wistest nat yet
now 1156

Whether she be a womman or goddesse!
Thyn is affeccoun of hoolynesse,
And myn is love, as to a creature,
For which I tolde thee myn aventure 1160 As to my cosyn and my brother sworn I pose that thow lovedest hire biforn, Wostow nat wel the olde clerkes sawe,
That "who shal yeve a lovere any lawe?"
Love is a gretter lawe, by my pan, 1165
Than may be yeve to any erthely man,
And therefore positif lawe and swich decree Is broken al day for love in ech degree
A man moot nedes love, maugree his heed He may nat fleen it, thogh he sholde be
deed, 1170

Al be she mayde, or wydwe, or elles wyf
And eek it is nat hlyk al thy lyf
To stonden in hir grace, namoore shal
I,

For wel thou woost thyselfen, verraaly,
That thou and I be dampned to prisoun Perpetually, us gayneth no raunsoun 1176 We stryve as dide the houndes for the boon,

They foughte al day, and yet hir part was noon

Ther cam a kyte, whil that they were so wrothe,

And baar away the boon bitwixe hem bothe 1180

And therefore, at the kynges court, my
brother,

Ech man for hymself, ther is noon oother
Love, if thee list, for I love and ay shal,

And soothly, leeve brother, this is al Heere in this prisoun moote we endure,

And everich of us take his aventure " 1186 Greet was the strif and long bitwix hem
tweye,

If that I hadde leyser for to seye,
But to th'effect It happed on a day,

To telle it yow as shortly as I may 1190
A worthy duc that highte Perotheus, That felawe was unto duc Theseus Syn thilke day that they were children lite,

Was come to Atthenes his felawe to viste,
And for to pleye as he was wont to do, 1195
For in this world he loved no man so,
And he loved hym als tendrely agayn
So wel they lovede, as olde bookes sayn, That whan that oon was deed, soothly to
telle,

His felawe wente and soughte hym down in helle, — 1200

But of that storie list me nat to write Duc Perotheus loved wel Arcite, And hadde hym knowe at Thebes yeer by yere,

And finally at requeste and preyere
Of Perotheus, withouten any raunsoun, 1205 Duc Theseus hym leet out of prisoun Frelly to goon wher that hym liste over al,
In swich a gyse as I you tellen shal

This was the forward, pleynly for t'endite,

Bitwixen Theseus and hym Arcite 1210
That if so were that Arcite were yfounde Evere in his lif, by day or nyght, oo stounde

In any contree of this Theseus,
And he were caught, it was acorded thus,
That with a swerd he sholde lese his heed Ther nas noon oother remedie ne reed, But taketh his leve, and homward he hum spedde 1217

Lat hym be war' his nekke lith to wedde
How greet a sorwe suffreth now Arcite'

The deeth he feeleth thurgh his herte smyte, 1220

He wepeth, wayleth, crieth pitously,
To sleen hymself he waiteth prively

He seyde, "Allas that day that I was born'
Now is my prisoun worse than biforn,
Now is me shape eternally to dwelle, 1225 Noght in purgatorie, but in helle Allas, that evere knew I Perotheus!
For elles hadde I dwelled with Theseus, Yfetered in his prisoun everemo Thanne hadde I been in blisse, and nat in wo 1230

Oonly the sighte of hire whom that I serve, Though that I nevere hir grace may de-
serve,

Wolde that suffid right ynough for me O deere cosyng Palamon," quod he,
"Thyn is the victorie of this aventure 1235 Ful blisfully in prison maastow dure, —
In prison? certes nay, but in paradys!
Wel hath Fortune yturned thee the dys,
That hast the sighte of hire, and I th'- absence 1239

For possible is, syn thou hast hire presence, And art a knyght, a worthy and an able,
That by som cas, syn Fortune is changeable,

Thow maist to thy desir somtyme atteyne
But I, that am exiled and bareyne Of alle grace, and in so greet disper, 1245
That ther nys erthe, water, fir, ne air, Ne creature that of hem makid is,
That may me helpe or doon confort in
this,

Wel oughite I sterve in wanhope and distresse 1249

Farwel my lif, my lust, and my gladnesse!
Allas, why pleyen folk so in commune On purveaunce of God, or of Fortune, That yeveh hem ful ofte in many a gyse Wel bettre than they kan hemself devyse?
Som man desireth for to han richesse, 1255
That cause is of his mordre or greet sik-
nesse,

And som man wolde out of his prisoun
fayn,
That in his hous is of his meynee slayn Infinite harmes been in this mateere 1259
We witen nat what thing we preyen heerc

We faren as he that dronke is as a mous
 A dronke man woot wel he hath an hous,
 But he noot which the righte wey is thider,
 And to a dronke man the wey is slider
 And certes, in this world so faren we, 1265
 We seken faste after felicittee,
 But we goon wrong ful often, trewely Thus may we seyen alle, and namely I,
 That wende and hadde a greet opinoun
 That if I myghte escapen from prisoun, Thanne hadde I been in joye and perfit heele, 1271

Ther now I am exiled fro my wele Syn that I may nat seen you, Emelye, I nam but deed, ther nys no remedye "

Upon that oother syde Palamon, 1275 Whan that he wiste Arcite was agon, Swich sorwe he maketh that the grete tour Resouneth of his youlyng and clamour
 The pure fettres on his shynes grete Weren of his bittre, salte teeres wete 1280
 "Allas," quod he, "Arcite, cosyn myn, Of al oure strif, God woot, the fruyt is thyn

Thow walkest now in Thebes at thy large,
 And of my wo thow yevest litel charge Thou mayst, syn thou hast wisdom and manhede, 1285

Assemblen alle the folk of oure kynrede,
 And make a werre so sharp on this citee,
 That by som aventure or som tretee Thow mayst have hire to lady and to wyf
 For whom that I moste nedes lese my lyf
 For, as by wey of possibilittee, 1291 Sith thou art at thy large of prisoun free,
 And art a lord, greet is thyn avauntage Moore than is myn, that sterve here in a cage 1294

For I moot wepe and wayle, whil I lyve,
 With al the wo that prison may me yive,
 And eek with peyne that love me yeveth also,

That doubleth al my torment and my wo " Therwith the fyr of jalousie up sterte Withinne his brest, and hente him by the
 herte 1300

So woodyly that he lyk was to biholde
 The boxtree or the asshen dede and colde Thanne seyde he, "O cruell goddes that governe

This world with byndyng of youre word eterne, 1304

And writen in the table of atthamaunt Youre parlement and youre eterne graunt,
 What is mankynde moore unto you holde Than is the sheep that rouketh in the folde?

For slayn is man right as another beest,
 And dwelleth eek in prison and arceest, 1310
 And hath siknesse and greet adversitee,
 And ofte tymes giltelees, pardee

What governance is in this prescience,
 That giltelees tormenteth innocence? 1314
 And yet encresseth this al my penaunce,
 That man is bounden to his observance,
 For Goddes sake, to letten of his wille, Ther as a beest may al his lust fulfillen
 And whan a beest is deed he hath no peyne, But man after his deeth moot wepe and
 pleyne, 1320

Though in this world he have care and wo Withouten doute it may stonden so The answer of this lete I to dyvynys, But wel I woot that in this world greet pyne ys

Allas, I se a serpent or a theef, 1325
 That many a trewe man hath doon mescheef,

Goon at his large, and where hym list may turne

But I moot been in prisoun thurgh Saturne, And eek thurgh Juno, jalous and eek
 wood, 1329

That hath destroyed wel ny al the blood Of Thebes with his waste walles wyde,
 And Venus sleeth me on that oother syde
 For jalousie and fere of hym Arcite "

Now wol I stynte of Palamon a lite,
 And lete hym in his prisoun stille dwelle,
 And of Arcite forth I wol yow telle 1336

The somer passeth, and the nyghtes
 longe

Encressen double wise the peynes stronge Bothe of the lovere and the prisoner
 I noot which hath the wofuller mester 1340
 For, shortly for to seyn, this Palamon Perpetually is dampned to prisoun,
 In cheynes and in fettres to been deed,
 And Arcite is exiled upon his heed
 For everemo, as out of that contree, 1345 Ne nevere mo he shal his lady see

Yow lovers axe I now this questoun, Who hath the worse, Arcite or Palamoun?
 That oon may seen his lady day by day,

But in prison he moot dwelle alway, 1350
 That oother wher hym list may ride or go,
 But seen his lady shal he nevere mo
 Now demeth as yow hste, ye that kan,
 For I wol telle forth as I bigan 1354

Explicit prima pars

Sequitur pars secunda

Whan that Arcite to Thebes comen was,
 Ful ofte a day he swelte and seyde "Allas!"
 For seen his lady shal he nevere mo
 And shortly to concluden al his wo,
 So muche sorwe hadde nevere creature That is, or shal, whil that the world may dure 1360
 His slep, his mete, his drynke, is hym braft,
 That lene he wex and drye as is a shaft,
 His eyen holwe, and grisly to biholde,
 His hewe falow and pale as asshen colde,
 And solitarie he was and evere allone, 1365 And wallynge al the nyght, makynge his mone,
 And if he herde song or instrument, Thanne wolde he wepe, he myghte nat be stent
 So feble eek were his spurtz, and so lowe,
 And chaunged so, that no man koude
 knowe 1370
 His speche nor his voys, though men it
 herde
 And in his geere for al the world he ferde, Nat oonly lik the lovers maladye Of Hereos, but rather lyk manye, Engendred of humour malencolik, 1375 Biforen, in his celle fantastik
 And shortly, turned was al up so doun Bothe habit and eek disposicioun Of hym, this woful love daun Arcite What sholde I al day of his wo endite?
 Whan he endured hadde a yeer or two 1381 This cruel torment and this peyne and
 wo,
 At Thebes, in his contree, as I seyde,
 Upon a nyght in sleep as he hym leyde, Hym thoughte how that the wynged god Mercurne 1385
 Biforn hym stood and bad hym to be murie
 His slepy verde in hond he bar uprighte, An hat he werede upon his hems brighte

Arrayed was this god, as he took keep,
 As he was whan that Argus took his sleep,
 And seyde hym thus "To Atthenes shaltou wende, 1391 Ther is thee shapen of thy wo an ende"
 And with that word Arcite wook and
 sterte
 "Now trewely, hou soore that me smerte," Quod he, "to Atthenes right now wol I fare, 1395
 Ne for the drede of deeth shal I nat spare
 To se my lady, that I love and serve In hire presence I recche nat to sterve" And with that word he caughte a greet mirour, 1399
 And saugh that chaunged was al his colour,
 And saugh his visage al in another kynde
 And right anon it ran hym in his mynde
 That, sith his face was so disfigured 1403
 Of maladye the which he hadde endured,
 He myghte wel, if that he bar hym lowe, Lyve in Atthenes everemoore unknowe,
 And seen his lady wel ny day by day
 And right anon he chaunged his array,
 And cladde hym as a povre laborer,
 And al allone, save oonly a squer 1410
 That knew his privete and al his cas, Which was disguised povrely as he was,
 To Atthenes is he goon the nexte way
 And to the court he wente upon a day,
 And at the gate he profreth his servyse To drugge and drawe, what so men wol
 devyse 1418
 And shortly of this matere for to seyn,
 He fil in office with a chamberleyn
 The which that dwellynge was with Emelye,
 For he was wys and koude soone espye 1420
 Of every servaunt which that serveth here Wel koude he hewen wode, and water bere, For he was yong and myghty for the
 nones,
 And therto he was long and big of bones
 To doon that any wight kan hym devyse
 A yeer or two he was in this servyse, 1426 Page of the chambre of Emelye the brighte,
 And Philostrate he seyde that he highte But half so wel biloved a man as he Ne was ther nevere in court of his degree,
 He was so gentil of condicioun 1431 That thurghout al the court was his renoun

They seyden that it were a charitee
 That Theseus wolde enhauncen his degree,
 And putten hym in worshipful servyse, Ther as he myghte his vertu exorcise 1436 And thus withunne a while his name is spronge,

Bothe of his dedes and his goode tonge,
 That Theseus hath taken hym so neer, That of his chambre he made hym a squer, 1440

And gaf hym gold to mayntene his degree And eek men broghte hym out of his contee,

From year to year, ful pryvely his rente,
 But honestly and slyly he it spente,
 That no man wondred how that he it
 hadde 1445

And thre year in this wise his lif he ladde,
 And bar hym so, in pees and eek in werre, Ther was no man that Theseus hath derre
 And in this blisse lete I now Arcite,
 And speke I wole of Palamon a lre 1450

In derknesse and horrible and strong prisoun

These seven year hath seten Palamoun Forpynd, what for wo and for distresse Who feeleth double soor and hevynesse
 But Palamon, that love destreyneþ so 1455
 That wood out of his wit he goth for wo?
 And eek therto he is a prisoner Perpetually, noght oonly for a yer

Who koude ryme in Englyssh proprely His martirdom? for sothe it am nat I, 1460 Therefore I passe as lightly as I may

It fel that in the seventhe yer, in May,
 The thridde nyght, (as olde bookes
 seyn,

That al this storne tellen moore pleyn)
 Were it by aventure or destynece — 1465 As, whan a thyng is shapen, it shal be —
 That soone after the mydnyght Palamoun, By helpyng of a freend, brak his prisoun

And fleeth the citee faste as he may go For he hadde yeve his gayler drynke so Of a clarree maad of a certeyn wyn, 1471
 With nercotakes and opie of Thebes fyn, That al that nyght, thogh that men wolde hum shake, 1473

The gayler sleep, he myghte nat awake,
 And thus he fleeth as faste as evere he may
 The nyght was short and faste by the day,

That nedes cost he moot hymselfen hyde,
 And til a grove faste ther busyde With dredeful foot thanne stalketh Pal-amon

For, shortly, this was his opinion, 1480
 That in that grove he wolde hym hyde al
 day,

And in the nyght thanne wolde he take his way

To Thebes-ward, his freendes for to preye

On Theseus to helpe him to werreye,
 And shortly, outhere he wolde lese his lif,
 Or wynnen Emelye unto his wyf 1486
 This is th'effect and his entente pleyn

Now wol I turne to Arcite ageyn, That litel wiste how ny that was his care Til that Fortune had broght him in the snare 1490

The busy larke, messenger of day, Salueth in hir song the morwe gray,
 And firy Phebus riseth up so bright 1493

That al the orient laugheth of the light,
 And with his stremes dryeth in the greves
 The silver dropes hangynge on the leves
 And Arcite, that in the court roial

With Theseus is squer principal, Is risen and looketh on the myre day 1499

And for to doon his observaunce to May Remembrynge on the poynt of his desir,
 He on a courser, startlynge as the fir,
 Is riden into the feeldes hym to playe,

Out of the court, were it a myle or tweye
 And to the grove of which that I yow tolde
 By aventure his way he gan to holde, 1506
 To maken hym a gerland of the greves

Were it of wodebynde or hawethorn leves,

And loude he song ayeyn the sonne shene
 "May, with alle thy floures and thy grene, Welcome be thou, faire, freshe May, 1511
 In hope that I som grene gete may"

And from his courser, with a lusty herte,
 Into the grove ful hastily he sterte,
 And in a path he rometh up and doun, 1515

Ther as by aventure this Palamoun Was in a bussh, that no man myghte hym
 se,

For soore afered of his deeth was he 1518
 No thyng ne knew he that it was Arcite, God woot he wolde have trowed it ful lite
 But sooth as seyde, go sithen many veres,

That "feeld hath eyen and the wode hath eres "

It is ful fair a man to bere hym evene,
For al day meeteth men at unset stevene Ful litel woot Arcite of his felawe, 1525

That was so ny to herkenen al his sawe,
For in the buss he sitteth now ful stille Whan that Arcite hadde romed al his file,

And songen al the roundel lustily,
Into a studie he fil sodeynly, 1530
As doon thise loveres in hur queynte geres,

Now in the crope, now doun in the breres,
Now up, now doun, as boket in a welle Right as the Friday, soothly for to telle, Now it shyneth, now it reyneth faste, 1535 Right so kan geery Venus overcaste
The hertes of hur folk, right as hur day Is gereful, right so chaungeth she array Selde is the Friday al the wowke ylike

Whan that Arcite had songe, he gan to sike, 1540

And sette hym doun withouten any moore
'Allas,' quod he, "that day that I was bore!

How longe, Juno, thurgh thy crueltee, Woltow werreyen Thebes the citee?
Allas, ybrought is to confusoun 1545
The blood rial of Cadme and Am-phioun, —

Of Cadmus, which that was the firste man That Thebes bulte, or first the toun bigan,

And of the citee first was crowned kyng
Of his lynage am I and his ofspryng 1550
By verray ligne, as of the stok roial,
And now I am so caytyf and so thral,
That he that is my mortal enemy,

I serve hym as his squer povrely 1554
And yet dooth Juno me wel moore shame,
For I dar noght biknowe myn owene name,
But ther as I was wont to highte Arcite, Now highte I Philostrate, noght worth a myte

Allas, thou felle Mars! allas, Juno! 1559 Thus hath youre ire oure lynage al fordo, Save oonly me and wrecched Palamoun,
That Theseus martireth in prisoun
And over al this, to sleeve me outrely, Love hath his firy dart so brennyngly 1564 Ystiked thurgh my trewe, careful herte,

That shapen was my deeth erst than my sherte

Ye sleen me with youre eyen, Emelye!
Ye been the cause wherfore that I
dye

Of al the remenant of myn oother care
Ne sette I nat the montance of a tare, 1570
So that I koude doon aught to youre
plesaunce "

And with that word he fil doun in a traunce
A longe tyme, and after he up sterte

This Palamoun, that thoughte that thurgh his herte 1574

He felte a cold swerd sodeynliche glyde,
For ire he quook, no lenger wolde he byde
And whan that he had herd Arcites tale, As he were wood, with face deed and pale, 1578

He stirte hym up out of the buskes thikke,
And seide "Arcite, false traytour wikke, Now artow hent, that lovest my lady so,
For whom that I have al this peyne and
wo,

And art my blood, and to my conseil
sworn,

As I ful ofte have seyde thee heerbyform,
And hast byjaped heere duc Theseus, 1585
And falsly chaunged hast thy name thus!
I wol be deed, or elles thou shalt dye Thou shalt nat love my lady Emelye,

But I wol love hire oonly and namo,
For I am Palamoun, thy mortal foo 1590 And though that I no wepene have in this
place,

But out of prison am astert by grace,
I drede noght that outhur thou shalt
dye,

Or thow ne shalt nat loven Emelye Chees which thou wolt, for thou shalt nat asterte!" 1595

This Arcite, with ful despitous herte, Whan he hym knew, and hadde his tale herd,

As fiers as leon pulled out his swerd,
And seyde thus "By God that sit above, Nere it that thou art sik and wood for love,
And eek that thow no wepene hast in this
place, 1601

Thou sholdest nevere out of this grove pace,

That thou ne sholdest dyen of myn
hond

For I defye the seurete and the bond Which that thou seist that I have maad to
thee 1605

What, verray fool, thynk wel that love is free,

And I wol love hire maugree al thy myght!
But for as muche as thou art a worthy
knyght,

And wilnest to darreyne hire by bataille, Have heer my trouthe, tomorwe I wol nat faille, 1610

Withoute wityng of any oother wight,
That heere I wol be founden as a knyght, And bryngen harneys right ynough for
thee,

And ches the beste, and leef the worste for
me

And mete and drynke this nyght wol I
brynge 1615

Ynough for thee, and clothes for thy beddyng

And if so be that thou my lady wyne,
And sle me in this wode ther I am inne, Thow mayst wel have thy lady as for
me "

This Palamon answerde, "I graunte it
thee " 1620

And thus they been departed til amorwe, Whan ech of hem had leyd his feith to borwe

O Cupide, out of alle chartee!

O regne, that wolt no felawe have with
thee!

Ful sooth is seyde that love ne lordshipe Wol noght, his thankes, have no felaweshipe 1626

Wel fynden that Arcite and Palamoun Arcite is riden anon unto the toun,
And on the morwe, er it were dayes lght, Ful prively two harneys hath he dight, 1630 Bothe suffisaunt and mete to darreyne
The bataille in the feeld bitwix hem
tweyne,

And on his hors, allone as he was born,
He carieth al the harneys hym biforn 1634
And in the grove, at tyme and place yset, This Arcite and this Palamon ben met

Tho chaungen gan the colour in hir face, Right as the hunters in the regne of Trace,

That stondeth at the gappe with a spere, Whan hunted is the leon or the bere, 1640

And hereth hym come russhyng in the greves,

And breketh bothe bowes and the leves, And thynketh, "Heere cometh my mortal enemy!"

Withoute faille, he moot be deed, or I,
For outhur I moot sleen hym at the gappe, 1645

Or he moot sleen me, if that me mys-happe," —

So ferden they in chaungyng of hir hewe,
As fer as everich of hem oother knewe

Ther nas no good day, ne no saluyng, But streight, withouten word or re-hersyng, 1650

Everich of hem heelp for to armen oother
As frendly as he were his owene brother,

And after that, with sharpe speres stronge They foynen ech at oother wonder
longe 1654

Thou myghtest wene that this Palamon
In his fightyng were a wood leon,

And as a cruel tigre was Arcite,
As wilde bores gonne they to smyte, 1658

That frothen wht as foom for ire wood
Up to the ancle foghte they in hir blood

And in this wise I lete hem fightyng dwell,

And forth I wole of Theseus yow telle
The destinee, ministre general,

That executeth in the world over al
The purveiaunce that God hath seyn biforn, 1665

So strong it is that, though the world had sworn

The contrarie of a thyng by ye or nay, Yet somtyme it shal fallen on a day

That falleth nat eft withinne a thousand yeer

For certainly, oure appetates heer, 1670
Be it of werre, or pees, or hate, or love,

Al is this reuled by the sighte above
This mene I now by myghty Theseus,

That for to huntun is so desirous,
And namely at the grete hert in May, 1674

That in his bed ther daweth hym no day
That he nys clad, and redy for to ryde

With hunte and horn and houndes hym busyde

For in his huntynge hath he swich delit
That it is al his joye and appetit 1680

To been hymself the grete hertes bane,

For after Mars he serveth now Dyane Cleer was the day, as I have toold er
 this,

And Theseus with alle joye and blis,
 With his Ypolita, the faire queene, 1685

And Emelye, clothed al in grene,
 On huntynge be they riden roially And to the grove that stood ful faste by,

In which ther was an hert, as men hym
 tolde, 1689

Duc Theseus the streighte wey hath holde
 And to the launde he rideth hym ful right, For thuder was the hert wont have his flight,

And over a brook, and so forth on his
 weye

This duc wol han a cours at hym or tweye With woundes swiche as that hym list comaunde 1695

And whan this duc was come unto the launde,

Under the sonne he looketh, and anon
 He was war of Arcite and Palamon, That foughten breame, as it were bores two
 The brighte swerdes wenten to and fro 1700
 So hidously that with the leeste strook
 It semed as it wolde felle an ook
 But what they were, no thyng he ne
 woot

This duc his courser with his spores smoot,
 And at a stert he was bitwix hem two, 1705
 And pulled out a swerd, and cride, "Hoo!
 Namooore, up peyne of lesynge of youre
 heed! 1707

By myghty Mars, he shal anon be deed
 That smyteth any strook that I may seen But telleth me what myster men ye been,
 That been so hardy for to figheten heere Withouten juge or oother officere, As it were in a lystes roially "

This Palamon answerde hastily, 1714
 And seyde, "Sire, what nedeth wordes mo'
 We have the deeth disserved bothe two Two woful wrecches been we, two cay-tyves,

That been encombred of oure owene
 lyves,

And as thou art a rightful lord and juge, Ne yif us neither mercy ne refuge, 1720
 But sle me first, for seinte charitee!
 But sle my felawe eek as wel as me,

Or sle hym first, for though thow knowest it lite,

This is thy mortal foo, this is Arcite, 1724 That fro thy lond is banysshed on his
 heed,

For which he hath deserved to be deed
 For this is he that cam unto thy gate
 And seyde that he highte Philostrate Thus hath he japed thee ful many a yer,
 And thou hast made hym thy chief squier,
 And this is he that loveth Emelye 1731
 For sith the day is come that I shal dye,
 I make pleynly my confessioun

That I am thilke woful Palamon That hath thy prisoun broken wkkedly
 I am thy mortal foo, and it am I 1736
 That loveth so hoote Emelye the brighte
 That I wol dye present in hir sighte Wherefore I axe deeth and my juwise,
 But sle my felawe in the same wise, 1740
 For bothe han we deserved to be slayn "

This worthy duc answerde anon
 agayn,

And seyde, "This is a short conclusioun Youre owene mouth, by youre confessioun, Hath dampned yow, and I wol it recorde, It nedeth noght to pyne yow with the
 corde 1746
 Ye shal be deed, by myghty Mars the
 rede!"

The queene anon, for verray womman-
 hede,

Gan for to wepe, and so dide Emelye,
 And alle the ladies in the compaignye 1750 Greet pitee was it, as it thoughte hem alle,
 That evere swich a chaunce sholde falle,
 For gentil men they were of greet estaat,
 And no thyng but for love was this debaat,

And saugh hir bloody woundes wyde and
 soore, 1755

And alle crieden, bothe lasse and moore, "Have mercy, Lord, upon us women
 alle!"

And on hir bare knees adoun they falle, And wolde have kust his feet ther as he stood,

Til at the laste aslaked was his mood, 1760
 For pitee renneth soone in gentil herte And though he first for ire quook and
 sterte,

He hath considered shortly, in a clause,

The trespas of hem bothe, and eek the cause, 1764

And although that his ire hir gilt accused, Yet in his resoun he hem bothe excused,
As thus he thoghte wel that every man Wol helpe hymself in love, if that he
kan,

And eek delhvere hymself out of prisoun
And eek his herte hadde compassioun 1770
Of women, for they wepen evere in oon,
And in his gentil herte he thoughte anon,
And softe unto hymself he seyde, "Fy Upon a lord that wol have no mercy,
But been a leon, bothe in word and dede, To hem that been in repentaunce and
drede, 1776

As wel as to a proud despitous man
That wol mayntene that he first bigan That lord hath hitel of discrecioun,
That in swich cas kan no divisoun, 1780 But weyeth pride and humbleesse after
oon "

And shortly, whan his ire is thus agoon,
He gan to looken up with eyen lighte,
And spak thus same wordes al on highte
"The god of love, a, benedicite! 1785 How myghty and how greet a lord is he!
Ayeyns his myght ther gayneth none obstacles

He may be cleped a god for his myr-acles,

For he kan maken, at his owene gyse, 1789
Of everich herte as that hym list divyse Lo heere this Arcite and thus Palamoun, That quytly weren out of my prisoun,
And myghte han lyved in Thebes roially,
And witen I am hir mortal enemy, 1794
And that hur deth lith in my myght also,
And yet hath love, maugree hir eyen two,
Brought hem hyder bothe for to dye Now looketh, is nat that an heigh folye?

Who may been a fool, but if he love?
Bihoold, for Goddes sake that sit above, Se how they blede! be they nocht wel arrayed? 1801

Thus hath hur lord, the god of love, ypayed Hir wages and hir fees for hir servyse!
And yet they wenen for to been ful wyse That serven love, for aught that may bifalle 1805

But this is yet the beste game of alle,

That she for whom they han this joltee Kan hem therefore as muche thank as me 1808

She woot namoore of al this hooote fare,
By God, than woot a cokkow or an hare!
But all moot ben assayed, hoot and coold,
A man moot ben a fool, or yong or coold, --- I woot it by myself ful yore agon,
For in my tyme a servant was I oon 1814
And therefore, syn I knowe of loves payne,
And woot hou soore it kan a man distreynen, As he that hath ben caught ofte in his laas,

I yow foryewe al hoolly this trespaa, At requeste of the queene, that kneleth
heere,

And eek of Emelye, my suster deere 1820
And ye shul bothe anon unto me swere
That nevere mo ye shal my contree cere, Ne make werre upon me nyght ne day,
But been my freendes in al that ye may I yow foryewe this trespas every deel " 1825 And they hym sworn his axyng faire and
weel,

And hym of lordshipe and of mercy preyde,
And he hem graunteth grace, and thus he
seyde

"To speke of roial lynage and richesse, Though that she were a queene or a princesse, 1830

Ech of you bothe is worthy, doutelees,
To wedden whan tyme is, but nathelees
I speke as for my suster Emelye,
For whom ye have this strif and jalousye Ye woot yourself she may nat wedden two Atones, though ye fighten everemo 1836
That oon of you, al be hym looth or hef,
He moot go pipen in an yvy leef,
This is to seyn, she may nat now han bothe,
Al be ye never so jalouse ne so wrothe 1840
And forthy I yow putte in this degree, That ech of yow shal have his destyne As hym is shape, and herkneth in what wyse,

Lo heere youre ende of that I shal devyse
My wyl is thus, for plat conclusioun, 1845 Withouten any repplicacioun, ---
If that you liketh, take it for the beste That everich of you shal goon where hym
leste

Frely, withouten raunson or daunger;
And this day fifty wykes, fer ne ner, 1850

Everich of you shal brynge an hundred knyghtes

Armed for lystes up at alle rightes, Al redy to darreyne hire by bataille
And this bihote I yow withouten faille, Upon my trouthe, and as I am a knyght, That whether of yow bothe that hath
myght,— 1856

This is to seyn, that whether he or thow
May with his hundred, as I spak of now, Sleen his contrarie, or out of lystes
dryve,

Thanne shal I yeve Emelya to wyve 1860 To whom that Fortune yeveth so fair a
grace

The lystes shal I maken in this place,
And God so wisly on my soule rewe,
As I shal evene juge been and trewe 1864
Ye shul noon oother ende with me maken, That oon of yow ne shal be deed or taken

And if yow thynketh this is weel ysayd, Seyeth youre avys, and holdeth you apayd 1868

This is your ende and youre conclusioun ”
Who looketh lightly now but Palamoun?
Who spryngeth up for joye but Arcate?

Who kouthe telle, or who kouthe it endite,
The joye that is makid in the place Whan Theseus hath doon so fair a grace?
But down on knees wente every maner
wight, 1875

And thonked hym with al hir herte and
myght,

And namely the Thebans often sithe And thus with good hope and with herte blithe

They taken hir leve, and homward gonne they ride

To Thebes, with his olde walles wyde 1880

Explicit secunda pars

Sequitur pars tercia

I trows men wolde deme it nechgence
If I foryete to tellen the dispence Of Theseus, that gooth so bisaly
To maken up the lystes roially, That swich a noble theatre as it was, 1885
I dar wel seyen in this world ther nas
The circuit a myle was aboute, Walled of stoon, and dyched al withoute Round was the shap, in manere of compas, 1889

Ful of degrees, the heichte of sixty pas,
That whan a man was set on o degree,
He letted nat his felawe for to see Estward ther stood a gate of marbul whit,

Westward right swich another in the opposit 1894

And shortly to concluden, swich a place
Was noon in erthe, as in so litel space,
For in the lond ther was no crafty man
That geometrie or ars-metrike kan, Ne portreyour, ne kervere of ymages,
That Theseus ne yaf him mete and wages,
The theatre for to maken and devyse 1901
And for to doon his ryte and sacrificise,
He estward hath, upon the gate above,
In worshippe of Venus, goddessse of love, Doon make an auter and an oratorie, 1905
And on the gate westward, in memorie Of Mars, he makid hath right swich another,

That coste largely of gold a fother
And northward, in a touret on the wal,
Of alabastre whit and reed coral, 1910
An oratorie, riche for to see,
In worshippe of Dyane of chastitee, Hath Theseus doon wrought in noble wyse

But yet hadde I foryeten to devyse 1914
The noble kervyng and the portretures,
The shap, the contenance, and the figures,
That weren in these oratories thre

First in the temple of Venus maystow se Wrought on the wal, ful pitous to biholde,
The broken sleses, and the sikes colde, 1920
The sacred teeris, and the waymentyngce,
The fry strokes of the desuryngce That loves servantz in this lyf enduren,
The othes that hir covenantz assuren, Plesaunce and Hope, Desir, Foolhardy-
nesse, 1925

Beautee and Youthe, Bauderie, Richesse, Charmes and Force, Lesynges, Flaterye, Dispense, Bisynesse, and Jalousye, That wered of yelewe gooldes a gerland,
And a cokkow sittinge on hir hand, 1930
Festes, instrumentz, caroles, daunces, Lust and array, and alle the circum staunces

Of love, which that I rekned and rekne shal

By ordre weren peynted on the wal,
 And mo than I kan make of mencoun 1935
 For soothly al the mount of Citheroun, Ther Venus hath hir principal dwellynge, Was shewed on the wal in portreyynge,
 With al the gardyn and the lustynesse Nat was foryeten the porter, Ydelnesse, Ne Narcisus the fare of yore agon, 1941
 Ne yet the folye of kyng Salomon, Ne yet the grete strengthe of Ercules — Th'enchautementz of Medea and Cir-ces —

Ne of Turnus, with the hardy fiers corage,
 The riche Cresus, kaytyf in servage 1946
 Thus may ye seen that wysdom ne richesse, Beautee ne sleighte, strengthe ne hardy-
 nesse,

Ne may with Venus holde champartie, 1949
 For as hir list the world than may she gye Lo, alle thise folk so caught were in hir las,
 'Til they for wo ful ofte seyde "allas!" Suffiseth heere ensamples oon or two,
 And though I koude rekene a thousand mo

The statue of Venus, glorious for to se, Was naked, fletynge in the large see, 1956 And fro the navele doun al covered was With wawes grene, and brighte as any glas A citole in hir right hand hadde she,
 And on hir heed, ful semely for to se, 1960
 A rose gerland, fressh and wel smellynge, Above hir heed hir dowves fikerynge Bifrom hire stood hir sone Cupido, Upon his shuldres wynges hadde he two,
 And blynd he was, as it is often seene, 1965
 A bowe he bar and arwes brighte and kene

Why sholde I nocht as wel eek telle yow al

The portreiture that was upon the wal Withinne the temple of myghty Mars the
 rede?

Al peynted was the wal, in lengthe and brede, 1970

Lyk to the estres of the grisly place That highte the grete temple of Mars in Trace,

In thilke colde, frosty regioun
 Ther as Mars hath his sovereyn mansioun

First on the wal was peynted a forest, In which ther dwelleth neither man ne
 best, 1978

With knotty, knarry, bareyne trees olde

Of stubbes sharpe and hidouse to bi-
 holde,

In which ther ran a rumbel in a swough, As though a storm sholde bresten every bough 1980

And downward from an hille, under a bente,

Ther stood the temple of Mars army-potente,

Wrought al of burned steel, of which the entree

Was long and streit, and gastly for to see And therout came a rage and swich a veze
 That it made al the gate for to rese 1986
 The northren lyght in at the dores shoon, For wyndowe on the wal ne was ther
 noon,

Thurgh which men myghten any light discerne

The dore was al of adamant eterne, 1990
 Yclenched overthwart and endelong

With iren tough, and for to make it strong,
 Every pyler, the temple to sustene,
 Was tonne greet, of iren bright and shene

Ther saugh I first the derke ymaginyng
 Of Felonye, and al the compassyng, 1997

The cruel Ire, reed as any gleede,
 The pykepurs, and eek the pale Drede,

The smylere with the knyf under the cloke
 The shepne brennyng with the blake smoke, 2000

The tresoun of the mordrynge in the
 bedde,

The open werre, with woundes al bibledde, Kontek, with blody knyf and sharp manace

Al ful of chirkyng was that sory place 2004
 The sleere of hymself yet saugh I ther, —

His herte-blood hath bathed al his heer,
 The nayl ydryven in the shode a-nyght,
 The colde deeth, with mouth gapyng upright

Amyddes of the temple sat Meschaunce, With discomfort and sory contaunce Yet saugh I Woodnesse, laughynge in his rage, 2011

Armed Complent, Outhees, and fiers Outrage,

The careyne in the busk, with throte ycorve,

A thousand slayn, and nat of qualm ystorve,

The tiraunt, with the pray by force yraft,
The toun destroyed, ther was no thyng laft 2016

Yet saugh I brent the shippes hoppesteres, The hunte strangled wi h the wilde beres,

The sowe freten the child right in the cradel,

The cook yscalded, for al his longe ladel Noght was foryeten by the infortune of Marte 2021

The cartere overryden with his carte, Under the wheel ful lowe he lay adoun Ther were also, of Martes divisoun, The barbour, and the bocher, and the smyth, 2025

That forgeth sharpe swerdes on his styth
And al above, depeynted in a tour, Saugh I Conquest, sittyng in greet
honour,

With the sharpe sward over his heed Hangynge by a soutil twynes threed 2030 Depeynted was the slaughtre of Julius,
Of grete Nero, and of Antonius, Al be that thulke tyme they were unborn,

Yet was hir deth depeynted ther-biforn
By manasyng of Mars, right by figure So was it shewed in that portreiture, 2036
As is depeynted in the sterres above Who shal be slayn or elles deed for love

Suffiseth oon ensample in stories olde, 2039
I may nat rekene hem alle though I wolde

The statue of Mars upon a carte stood Armed, and looked grym as he were wood,
And over his heed ther shynen two figures

Of sterres, that been cleped in scriptures,
That oon Puella, that oother Rubeus —
This god of armes was arrayed thus 2046
A wolf ther stood biforn hym at his feet
With eyen rede, and of a man he eet, With soutil pencil depeynted was this storie

In redoutynge of Mars and of his glorie
Now to the temple of Dyane the chaste, As shortly as I kan, I wol me haste, 2052
To telle yow al the descripsoun Depeynted been the walles up and doun
Of huntynge and of shamefast chastitee
Ther saugh I how woful Calistopee, 2056

Whan that Diane agreved was with here,
Was turned from a w. mman til a bere,
And after was she maad the loode-sterre, Thus was it peynted, I kan sey yow no ferre 2060

Hir sone is eek a sterre, as men may see Ther saugh I Dane, yturned til a tree, —
I mene nat the goddesse Diane,
But Penneus doghter, which that highte Dane

Ther saugh I Attheon an hert ymaked, 2065
For vengeaunce that he saugh Diane al naked,

I saugh how that his houndes have hym caught

And fretten hym, for that they knewe hym naught

Yet peynted was a litel forther moor
How Athalante hunted the wilde boor,
And Meleagre, and many another mo, 2071
For which Dyane wroghte hym care and
wo

Ther saugh I many another wonder storne,

The which me list nat drawn to memorie
This goddesse on an hert ful hye seet,
With smale houndes al aboute hir feet, 2076
And undernethe hir feet she hadde a moone, —

Weyngte it was and sholde wanye soone In gaude grene hir statue clothed was,
With bowe in honde, and arwes in a cas Hir eyen caste she ful lowe adoun, 2081 Ther Pluto hath his derke regioun
A womman travallynge was hire biforn,
But for hir child so longe was unborn, Ful pitously Lucyna gan she calle, 2085 And seyde, "Help, for thou mayst best of
alle!"

Wel koude he peynten lify that it wroghte,
With many a floryn he the hewes boghte Now been these lystes maad, and Theseus,

That at his grete cost arrayed thus 2090
The temples and the theatre every deel, Whan it was doon, hym lyked wonder
weel

But stynte I wole of Theseus a lite,
And speke of Palamond and of Arcite

The day approacheth of hir retourynge, That everich sholde an hundred knyghtes
brynge 2096

The bataille to darreyne, as I yow tolde And til Atthenes, hir covenant for to
holde,

Hath everich of hem broght an hundred
knyghtes,

Wel armed for the werre at alle rightes
And sikerly ther trowed many a man 2101

That nevere, sithen that the world bigan,
As for to speke of knyghthod of hir hond,

As fer as God hath maked see or lond, Nas of so fewe so noble a compaignye 2105

For every wight that lovede chivalrye, And wolde, his thankes, han a passant
name,

Hath preyed that he myghte been of that game,

And wel was hym that ther to chosen was
For if ther fille tomorwe swich a cas, 2110

Ye knowen wel that every lusty knyght That loveth paramours and hath his
myght,

Were it in Engelond or elleswhere, They wolde, hir thankes, wilnen to be there,—

To fighte for a lady, benedictee! 2115
It were a lusty sighte for to see

And right so ferden they with Palamon With hym ther wenten knyghtes many on,

Som wol ben armed in an haubergeoun,
And in a brestplate and a light gypoun,

And som wol have a paire plates large, 2121 And som wol have a Puce sheeld or a
targe,

Som wol ben armed on his legges weel,
And have an ax, and som a mace of steel —

Ther is no newe gyse that it nas old 2125 Armed were they, as I have yow told,

Everych after his opimoun Ther maistow seen, comyng with Palamoun,

Lygurge hymself, the grete kyng of Trace Blak was his berd, and manly was his face,

The cercles of his eyen in his heed, 2131
They gloweden bitwixen yelow and reed,

And lik a grifphon looked he aboute,
With kempe heeris on his browes stoute,

His lymes grete, his brawnes harde and stronge, 2135

His shuldres brode, his armes rounde and
longe,

And as the gyse was in his contree, Ful hve upon a chaar or gold stood he,

With foure white boles in the trays
In stede of cote-armure over his harnays, With nayles yelewe and brighte as any gold, 2141

He hadde a beres skyn, col-blak for old His longe heer was kembd bihynde his bak, 2143

As any ravens fethere it shoon for blak,
A wrethe of gold, arm-greet, of huge wighte,

Upon his heed, set ful of stones brighte,
Of fyne rubyes and of dyamauntz

Aboute his chaar ther wenten white alauntz,

Twenty and mo, as grete as any steer,
To hunten at the leoun or the deer, 2150

And folwed hym with mosel faste ybounde, Colered of gold, and tourettes fylled rounde

An hundred lordes hadde he in his route, Armed ful wel, with hertes stierne and stoute

With Arcita, in stories as men fynde,
The grete Emetreus, the kyng of Inde, 2156

Upon a steede bay trapped in steel, Covered in clooth of gold, dyapred
weel,

Cam ridyng lyk the god of armes, Mars
His cote-armure was of clooth of Tars 2160

Couched with perles white and rounde and
grete,

His sadel was of brend gold newe ybete,
A mantelet upon his shulder hangyng,

Bret-ful of rubyes rede as fyr spark-lyng,

His crise heer lyk rynges was yronne, 2165
And that was yelow, and glytered as the
sonne

His nose was heigh, his eyen bright cetryn, His lippes rounde, his colour was sang-
wyn,

A fewe frakenes in his face yspreynd, Bitwixen yelow and somdel blak ymeynd,

And as a leon he his lookyng caste 2171
Of fyve and twenty yeer his age I caste

His berd was wel bigonne for to spryng;
His voys was as a trompe thonder-
yng

Upon his heed he wered of laurer grene
A gerland, fressh and lusty for to sene 2176

Upon his hand he bar for his deduyt
An egle tame, as any hlye whyt

An hundred lordes hadde he with hym
there,

Al armed, save hir heddes, in al hir gere, Ful richely in alle maner thynges 2181
 For trusteth wel that dukes, erles, kynges Were gadered in this noble compaignye, For love and for encrees of chivalrye Aboute this kyng ther ran on every part Ful many a tame leon and leopart 2186
 And in this wise thise lordes, alle and some,
 Been on the Sunday to the citee come Aboute pryme, and in the toun alight

This Theseus, this duc, this worthy
 knyght, 2190

Whan he had broght hem into his citee,
 And inned hem, everich at his degree, He festeth hem, and dooth so greet labour

To esen hem and doon hem al honour,
 That yet men wenen that no mannes wit
 Of noon estaat ne koude amenden it 2196

The mynstralcye, the service at the feeste,

The grete yiftes to the meeste and leeste,
 The riche array of Theseus paleys, Ne who sat first ne last upon the deys, What ladyes fairest been or best daunsynges, 2201

Or which of hem kan dauncen best and
 synges,

Ne who moost felyngly speketh of love,
 What haukes sitten on the perche above,
 What houndes ligen on the floor adoun, —
 Of al this make I now no mencoun, 2206
 But al th'effect, that thynketh me the
 beste

Now cometh the point, and herkneth if yow leste

The Sunday nyght, er day bigan to
 sprynge,

Whan Palamon the larke herde synges, 2210 (Although it nere nat day by houres two, Yet song the larke, and Palamon also) With hooly herte and with an heigh
 corage,

He roos to wenden on his pilgrymage Unto the blisful Citherea benigne, — 2215
 I mene Venus, honourable and digne
 And in hir houre he walketh forth a pas Unto the lystes ther hire temple was,
 And doun he kneleth, and with humble
 cheere 2219

And herte soor, he seyde as ye shal heere
 "Faureste of faire, o lady myn, Venus,

Doughter to Jove, and spouse of Vulcanus,

Thow gladere of the mount of Citheron,
 For thulke love thow haddest to Adoon,
 Have pitee of my bittre teeris smerte, 2225
 And taak myn humble preyere at thyn
 herte

Allas! I ne have no langage to telle Th'effectes ne the tormentz of myn
 helle,

Myn herte may myne harmes nat biwreie,
 I am so confus that I kan noight seye 2230 But, 'Mercy, lady bright, that knowest weele

My thought, and seest what harmes that I feele!"

Considere al this and rewe upon my
 soore,

As wisly as I shal for everemoore, 2234
 Emforth my myght, thy trewe servant be,
 And holden werre alwey with chastitee That make I myn avow, so ye me helpe!
 I kepe noight of armes for to yelpe, Ne I ne axe nat tomorwe to have victorie, Ne renoun in this cas, ne veyne glorie 2240
 Of pris of armes blownen up and doun,
 But I wolde have fully possessioun Of Emelye, and dye in thy servyse Fynd thow the manere hou, and in what wyse

I recche nat but it may better be 2245
 To have victorie of hem, or they of me,
 So that I have my lady in myne armes For though so be that Mars is god of armes,

Youre vertu is so greet in hevene above
 That if yow list, I shal wel have my love Thy temple wol I worshupe everemo, 2251
 And on thyn auter, where I ride or go,
 I wol doon sacrifice and fires beete
 And if ye wol nat so, my lady sweete, Thanne preye I thee, tomorwe with a spere
 That Arcita me thurgh the herte here 2256 Thanne rekke I noight, whan I have lost
 my lyf,

Though that Arcita wyne hire to his
 wyf 2258

This is th'effect and ende of my preyere Yif me my love, thow blisful lady deere "

Whan the orison was doon of Palamon, His sacrifice he dide, and that anon,
 Ful pitoously, with alle circumstaunces, 2263

Al telle I noght as now his observaunces, But atte laste the statue of Venus shook,
 And made a signe, wherby that he took That his preyere accepted was that day
 For thogh the signe shewed a delay, Yet wiste he wel that graunted was his boone,
 And with glad herte he wente hym hoom ful soone 2270

The thridde houre mequal that Palamon Bigan to Venus temple for to gon, Up roos the sonne, and up roos Emelye,
 And to the temple of Dyane gan hye Hir maydens, that she thuder with hire ladde, 2275

Ful redily with hem the fyr they hadde, Th'encens, the clothes, and the remenant al
 That to the sacrifice longen shal, 2278
 The hornes fulle of meeth, as was the gyse Ther lakked noght to doon hir sacrifice Smokyng the temple, ful of clothes faire, Thus Emelye, with herte debonaire, Hir body wessh with water of a welle
 But hou she dide hir ryte I dar nat telle,
 But it be any thing in general, 2285

And yet it were a game to heeren al
 To hym that meneth wel it were no charge, But it is good a man been at his large Hir brighte heer was kembd, untressed al, A coroune of a grene ook cerial 2290
 Upon hir heed was set ful fair and meete
 Two fyres on the auter gan she beete, And dide hir thynges, as men may bi-
 holde

In Stace of Thebes and thise bookes olde Whan kyndled was the fyr, with pitous
 cheere 2295

Unto Dyane she spak as ye may heere
 "O chaste goddesse of the wodes grene, To whom bothe hevене and erthe and see is sene,

Queene of the regne of Pluto derk and
 lowe,
 Goddess of maydens, that myn herte hast
 knowe 2300

Ful many a yeer, and woost what I desire, As keepe me fro thy vengeaunce and thyn ire,

That Attheon aboughte cruelly Chaste goddesse, wel wostow that I Desire to ben a mayden al my lyf, 2305
 Ne nevere wol I be no love ne wyf

I am, thow woost, yet of thy compaignye,
 A mayde, and love huntynge und venerye,
 And for to walken in the wodes wilde,
 And noght to ben a wyf and be with childe Noght wol I knowe compaignye of man 2311
 Now help me, lady sith ye may and kan, For tho thre formes that thou hast in
 thee 2313

And Palamon, that hath swich love to me,
 And eek Arcite, that loveth me so soore, (This grace I preyre thee withoute moore)
 As sende love and pees bitwixe hem two,
 And fro me turne away hir hertes so That al hire hooote love and hir desir,
 And al hir bisy torment, and hir fir 2320
 Be queynt, or turned in another place
 And if so be thou wolt nat do me grace,
 Or if my destyne be shapen so

That I shal nedes have oon of hem two,
 As sende me hym that moost desureth me Bihoold, goddesse of clene chastitee, 2326
 The bittre teeris that on my chekes falle Syn thou art mayde and kepere of us
 alle,

My maydenhede thou kepe and wel conserve, 2329

And whil I lyve, a mayde I wol thee serve"
 The fires brenne upon the auter cleere, Whil Emelye was thus in hir preyere But sodeynly she saugh a sighte queynte, 2333

For right anon oon of the fyres queynte,
 And quyked agayn, and after that anon
 That oother fyr was queynt and al agon,
 And as it queynte it made a whistelynge, As doon thise wete brondes in hir brennynges,

And at the brondes ende out ran anon
 As it were bloody drops many oon, 2340
 For which so soore agast was Emelye
 That she was wel ny mad, and gan to crye,
 For she ne wiste what it signyfiyd,
 But oonly for the feere thus hath she cried,
 And weep that it was pitee for to heere And therwithal Dyane gan appeere, 2346 With bowe in honde, right as an hunter-
 esse,

And seyde, "Doghter, stynt thyn hevyn-
 nesse

Among the goddes hye it is affermed, 2349
 And by eterne word writen and confermed, Thou shalt ben wedded unto oon of tho

That han for thee so muchel care and wo, But unto which of hem I may nat
telle 2353

Farwel, for I ne may no lenger dwelle
The fires which that on myn auter brenne Shulle thee declaren, er that thou go henne, Thyn aventure of love, as in this cas "
And with that word, the arwes in the caas

Of the goddesse clateren faste and ryngge,
And forth she wente, and made a vanysshyngge, 2360

For which this Emelye astoned was,
And seyde, "What amounteth this, allas?
I putte me in thy proteccioun, Dyane, and in thy disposicion " 2364
And hoom she goth anon the nexte weye
This is th'effect, ther is namoore to seye

The nexte houre of Mars folwyngge this, Arate unto the temple walked is Of fiers Mars, to doon his sacrificise,
With alle the rytes of his payen wyse 2370
With pitous herte and heigh devocioun, Right thus to Mars he seyde his orisoun
"O stronge god, that in the regnes
colde

Of Trace honoured art and lord yholde,
And hast in every regne and every lond
Of armes al the brydel in thyn hond, 2376
And hem fortunest as thee lyst devyse, Accepte of me my pitous sacrificise
If so be that my youthe may deserve,
And that my myght be worthy for to serve Thy godhede, that I may been oon of thyne, 2381

Thanne preye I thee to rewe upon my pyne

For thilke peyne, and thilke hooite fir
In which thow whilom brendest for desir, Whan that thow usedest the beautee 2385
Of faire, yongge, fresshe Venus free,
And haddest hire in armes at thy wille —
Although thee ones on a tyme mysfille, Whan Vulcanus hadde caught thee in his las,

And foond thee lggynge by his wyf,
allas! — 2390

For thilke sorwe that was in thyn herte, Have routhe as wel upon my peynes
smerte

I am yong and unkonnyngge, as thow
woost,

And, as I trowe, with love offended moost
That evere was any lyves creature, 2396
For she that dooth me al this wo endure Ne reccheth nevere wher I synke or fleete And wel I woot, er she me mercy heete, I moot with strengthe wynne hire in the
place,

And, wel I woot, withouten help or grace Of thee, ne may my strengthe nocht availle 2401

Thanne help me, lord, tomorwe in my bataille,

For thilke fyr that whilom brente thee,
As wel as thilke fyr now brenneth me,
And do that I tomorwe have victorie 2405 Myn be the travaalle, and thyn be the glorie!

Thy sovereyn temple wol I moost hon-ouren

Of any place, and alwey moost labouren In thy plesaunce and in thy craftes
stronge, 2409

And in thy temple I wol my baner honge
And alle the armes of my compaignye,
And everemo, unto that day I dye, Eterne fir I wol bifore thee fynde
And eek to this avow I wol me bynde My beard, myn heer, that hongeth long
adoun, 2415

That nevere yet ne felte offensioun
Of rasour nor of shere, I wol thee yive,
And ben thy trewe servant whil I lyve Now, lord, have routhe upon my sorwes
soore, 2419

Yif me the victorie, I aske thee namoore "

The preyere stynt of Arata the stronge,
The rynges on the temple dore that honge,
And eek the dores, clatereden ful faste,
Of which Arata somewhat hym agaste 2424
The fyres brenden upon the auter brighte, That it gan al the temple for to lighte,
A sweete smel the ground anon up yaf,
And Arata anon his hand up haf,
And moore encens into the fyr he caste,
With other rytes mo, and atte laste 2430
The statue of Mars bigan his hauberk ryngge,

And with that soun he herde a murmuryngge Ful lowe and dym, and seyde thus,
"Victorie!"

For which he yaf to Mars honour and
glorie

And thus with joye and hope wel to fare Arcite anon unto his in is fare, 2436
As fayn as fowel is of the brighte sonne

And right anon swich strif ther is bigonne,

For thilke graunting, in the hevene above, Bitwixe Venus, the goddesse of love, 2440
And Mars, the sterne god armypotent, That Juppiter was busy it to stente, Til that the pale Saturnus the colde,
That knew so manye of adventures olde, Foord in his olde experience an art 2445
That he ful soone hath plesed every part As sooth is seyde, elde hath greet avantage, In elde is bothe wysdom and usage, Men may the olde atrenne, and noght atrede 2449

Saturne anon, to stynten strif and drede, Al be it that it is agayn his kynde,
Of al this strif he gan remedie fynde

"My deere doghter Venus," quod Saturne, 2453

"My cours, that hath so wyde for to turne, Hath moore power than woot any man Hyn is the drenchyng in the see so wan, Myn is the prison in the derke cote, Myn is the stranglyng and hangyng by the throthe,

The murmure and the cherles rebellyng,
The groynynge, and the pryvee empoynsonyng, 2460

I do vengeance and pleyn correccioun, Whil I dwelle in the signe of the leoun Myn is the ruyn of the hye halles, The fallynge of the toures and of the walles

Upon the mynour or the carpenter 2465
I slow Sampson, shakynge the piler,
And myne be the maladyes colde,
The derke tresons, and the castes olde,
My lookyng is the fader of pestilence 2469
Now weep namoore, I shal doon dyligence That Palamon, that is thyn owene knyght, Shal have his lady, as thou hast him hight Though Mars shal helpe his knyght, yet nathelees

Bitwixe yow ther moot be som tyme pees, Al be ye noght of o compleccioun, 2475
That causeth al day swich divisoun
I am thyn aiel, redy at thy wille, Weep now namoore, I wol thy lust ful-
file"

Now wol I stynten of the goddess above
Of Mars, and of Venus, goddesse of love,
And telle yow as pleynly as I kan 2481
The grete effect, for which that I bygan

(There as nede is they weren no thyng ydel), 2505

The fomy steedes on the golden brydel Gnawynge, and faste the armurers also With fyle and hamer prikyng to and fro,

Yemen on foote, and communes many oon With shorte staves, thikke as they may
goon, 2510

Pypes, trompes, nakers, clariounes,
That in the bataille blowen bloody sounes,
The paleys ful of peples up and down,

Heere thre, ther ten, holdynge hir questioun, Dyvynyng of thise Thebane knyghtes
 two 2515
 Somme seyden thus, somme seyde "it shal be so",
 Somme helden with hym with the blake
 berd, Somme with the balled, somme with the thikke herd, Somme seyde he looked grymme, and he wolde fighte,
 "He hath a sparh of twenty pound of wighte" 2520
 Thus was the halle ful of divynyng, Longe after that the sonne gan to sprynge
 The grete Theseus, that of his sleep awakad
 With mynstralcie and noyse that was maked,
 Heeld yet the chambre of his paleys riche, Til that the Thebane knyghtes, bothe yliche 2526
 Honored, were into the paleys fet Duc Theseus was at a wyndow set, Arrayed right as he were a god in trone
 The peple preesseth thuderward ful soone Hym for to seen, and doon heigh reverence, And eek to herkne his heste and his sentence 2532
 An heraud on a scaffold made an "Oo!"
 Til al the noyse of peple was ydo, And whan he saugh the peple of noyse al
 stille, 2535
 Tho shewed he the myghty dukes wille
 "The lord hath of his heigh discrecioun Considered that it were destruccioun
 To gentil bood to fighten in the gyse 2539
 Of mortal bataille now in this emprise Wherefore, to shapen that they shal nat
 dye,
 He wol his firste purpos modifye
 No man therefore, up peyne of los of lyf,
 No maner shot, ne polax, ne short knyf Into the lystes sende, or thuder brynge, Ne short swerd, for to stoke with poynt bitynge, 2546
 No man ne drawe, ne bere it by his syde Ne no man shal unto his felawe ryde
 But o cours, with a sharpe ygrounde spere, Foyne, if hym list, on foote, hymself to
 were 2550

And he that is at meschief shal be take And noght slayn, but be broght unto the stake
 That shal ben ordeyned on either syde, But thider he shal by force, and there
 abyde
 And if so falle the cheftayn be take 2555
 On outhur syde, or elles sleen his make,
 No lenger shal the turneyng laste God spede you! gooth forth, and ley on
 faste!
 With long swerd and with maces fighteth youre lile Gooth youre wey, this is the lordes
 wille" 2560
 The voys of peple touchede the hevene,
 So loude cride they with murie stevene,
 "God save swich a lord, that is so good,
 He wilneth no destruccioun of blood!"
 Up goon the trompes and the melodye, 2565
 And to the lystes rit the compaignye, By ordnance, thurghout the citee large, Hanged with clooth of gold, and nat with sarge
 Ful lik a lord this noble duc gan ryde,
 These two Thebans upon either syde, 2570
 And after rood the queene, and Emelye,
 And after that another compaignye Of oon and oother, after hir degree
 And thus they passen thurghout the citee,
 And to the lystes come they by tyme 2575
 It nas nat of the day yet fully pryme Whan set was Theseus ful riche and hye, Ypolita the queene, and Emelye,
 And othere ladys in degrees aboute Unto the seetes preesseth al the route 2580 And westward, thurgh the gates under Marte,
 Arcite, and eek the hondred of his parte,
 With baner reed is entred right anon,
 And in that selve moment Palamon Is under Venus, estward in the place, 2585 With baner whyt, and hardy chiere and face
 In al the world, to seken up and doun,
 So evene, withouten variacioun, Ther nere swiche compaignyes tweve, 2589
 For ther was noon so wys that koude seye
 That any hadde of oother avauntage Of worthynesse, ne of estaat, ne age,
 So evene were they chosen, for to gesse
 And in two renges faure they hem dresse

Whan that hir names rad were everichon,
That in hir nombre gyle were ther noon, Tho were the gates shet, and cried was loude 2597

“Do now youre devour, yonge knyghtes proude!”

The heraudes lefte hir prikyng up and
doun,

Now ryngen trompes loude and clarioun Ther is namoore to seyn, but west and est
In goon the speres ful sadly in arrest, 2602
In gooth the sharpe spore into the syde Ther seen men who kan juste and who kan

ryde, Ther shyveren shaftes upon sheeldes thikke, 2605

He feelth thurgh the herte-spoon the prykke

Up spryngen speres twenty foot on highte, Out goon the swerdes as the silver
bryghte,

The helmes they tohewen and toshrede, Out brest the blood with stierne stremes
rede, 2610

With myghty maces the bones they tobreste

He thurgh the thikkeste of the throng gan
threste,

Ther stomblen steedes stronge, and doun gooth al,

He rolleth under foot as dooth a bal, 2614
He foyneth on his feet with his tronchoun,
And he hym hurtleth with his hors adoun,
He thurgh the body is hurt and sithen take,

Maugree his heed, and broght unto the stake

As forward was, nght there he moste

Another lad is on that oother syde 2620
And som tyme dooth hem Theseus to reste, Hem to refresshe and drynken, if hem leste Ful ofte a day han thise Thebanes two Togydre ymet, and wrought his felawe wo, Unhorsed hath ech oother of hem tweye Ther nas no tygre in the vale of Galgo-pheyne, 2626

Whan that hir whelp is stole whan it is lite,
So cruuel on the hunte as is Arcite For jelous herte upon this Palamon Ne in Belmarye ther nys so fel leon, 2630
That hunted is, or for his hunger wood,

Ne of his praye desireth so the blood,
As Palamon to sleen his foo Arcite,
The jelous strokes on hir helmes byte, 2634
Out renneth blood on bothe hir sydes rede,

Som tyme an ende ther is of every dede
For er the sonne unto the reste wente,
The stronge kyng Emetreus gan hente
This Palamon, as he fught with Arcite, And made his swerd depe in his flesh to byte, 2640

And by the force of twenty is he take, Ungolden, and ydrawe unto the stake
And in the rescus of this Palamoun 2643
The stronge kyng Lygurge is born adoun,
And kyng Emetreus, for al his strengthe,
Is born out of his sadel a swerdes lengthe, So hitte him Palamoun er he were take, But al for noght, he was broght to the stake

His hardy herte myghte hym helpe naught
He moste abyde, whan that he was caught,
By force and eek by composicioun 2651

Who sorweth now but woful Palamoun, That moot namoore goon agayn to fichte?

And whan that Theseus hadde seyn this
sighte,

Unto the folk that foghten thus echon 2655
He cryde, “Hoo! namoore, for it is doon!
I wol be trewe juge, and no partie
Arcite of Thebes shal have Emelic, That by his fortune hath hire faire ywonne”

Anon ther is a noyse of peple bigonne 2660
For joye of this, so loude and heighe withalle,

It semed that the lystes sholde falle

What kan now faire Venus doon abowe?

What seith she now? What dooth this queene of love, 2664

But wepeth so, for wantynge of hir wille, Til that hir teeres in the lystes fille?

She seyde, “I am ashamed, doutelees” Saturnus seyde, “Doghter, hoold th_e pees!

Mars hath his wille, his knyght hath al his boone,

And, by myn heed, thow shalt been esch_e
soone” 2670

The trompes, with the loude mynstralcie,

The heraudes, that ful loude yelle and
crie,

Been in hire wele for joye of daun Arcite But herkneth me, and stynteth noyse a lite,

Which a myracle ther bifel anon 2675

This fierse Arcite hath of his helm ydon,
And on a courser, for to shewe his face,
He priketh endelong the large place

Lokynge upward upon this Emelye, 2679

And she agayn hym caste a freendlich ye (For women, as to speken in comune, Thei folwen alle the favour of Fortune)

And was al his chiere, as in his herte

Out of the ground a furie infernal sterte,
From Pluto sent at requeste of Saturne, 2685

For which his hors for fere gan to turne,
And leep aside, and foundred as he leep,

And er that Arcite may taken keep,
He pighte hym on the pomel of his heed,

That in the place he lay as he were deed, 2690

His brest tobrosten with his sadel-bowe

As blak he lay as any cole or crowe,
So was the blood yronnen in his face

Anon he was yborn out of the place,

With herte soor, to Theseus paleys 2695

Tho was he korven out of his harneys,
And in a bed ybrought ful faire and blyve,

For he was yet in memorie and alyve,
And alwey crynge after Emelye 2699

Duc Theseus, with al his compaignye, Is comen hoom to Atthenes his citee,

With alle blisse and greet solempnitee Al be it that this aventure was falle,

He nolde noght discomforten hem alle 2704

Men seyde eek that Arcite shal nat dye,
He shal been heeled of his maladye

And of another thyng they weren as fayn,
That of hem alle was ther noon yslayn,

Al were they soore yhurt, and namely oon,
That with a spere was thurled his brest

boon 2710

To othere woundes and to broken armes Somme hadden salves, and somme hadden charmes, Fermacies of herbes, and eek save

They dronken, for they wolde hir lymes have 2714

For which this noble duc, as he wel kan, Conforteth and honoureth every man,

And made revel al the longe nyght Unto the straunge lordes, as was right

Ne ther was holden no disconftyng
But as a justes, or a tourneyng, 2720

For soothly ther was no disconfiture For fallyng nys nat but an aventure,

Ne to be lad by force unto the stake Unyolden, and with twenty knyghtes take,

O persone allone, withouten mo, 2725

And haryed forth by arme, foot, and too, And eke his steede dryven forth with staves

With footmen, bothe yemen and eek knaves, —

It nas arretted hym no vileynye, Ther may no man clepen it cowardye 2730

For which anon duc Theseus leet crye,
To stynten alle rancour and envye,

The gree as wel of o syde as of oother,
And eyther syde ylik as ootheres brother,

And yaf hem yiftes after hir degree, 2735

And fully heeled a feeste dayes three,
And conveyed the kynges worthily

Out of his toun a journee largely And hoom wente every man the righte way

Ther was namoore but "Fare wel, have good day!" 2740

Of this bataille I wol namoore endite,
But speke of Palamon and of Arcite

Swelleth the brest of Arcite, and the
soore

Encresseth at his herte moore and moore
The clothered blood, for any lechecraft,

Corrupteth, and is in his bouk ylast, 2746

That neither veyne-blood, ne ventusyng, Ne drynke of herbes may ben his helpyng

The vertu expulsiif, or animal, Fro thilke vertu cleped natural 2750

Ne may the venym voyden ne expelle
The pipes of his longes gonne to swelle,

And every lacerte in his brest adoun Is shent with venym and corrupcioun

Hym gayneth neither, for to gete his lif, 2755

Vomyt upward, ne dounward laxatif Al is tobrosten thilke regioun,

Nature hath now no domnacioun
And certainly, ther Nature wol nat wirche,

Fare wel physik! go ber the man to chirche! 2760

This al and som, that Arcite moot dye,
For which he sendeth after Emelye,

And Palamon, that was his cosyn deere Thanne seyde he thus, as ye shal after

heere

"Naught may the woful spirit in myn
herte 2765

Declare o point of alle my sorwes smerte
To yow, my lady, that I love moost, But I biquethe the servyce of my goost
To yow aboven every creature, Syn that my lyf may no lenger dure 2770
Allas, the wo' allas, the peynes stronge,
That I for yow have suffred, and so longe' Allas, the deeth' allas, myn Emelye' Allas, departynge of oure compaigne!
Allas, myn hertes queene' allas, my wyf' Myn hertes lady, endere of my lyf' 2776
What is this world? what asketh men to have?

Now with his love, now in his colde grave

Allone, withouten any compaignye
Fare wel, my sweete foo, myn Emelye' 2780
And softe taak me in youre armes tweye,
For love of God, and herkneth what I seye

I have heer with my cosyng Palamon Had strif and rancour many a day agon
For love of yow, and for my jalousy 2785
And Juppiter so wys my soule gye,
To speken of a servaunt proprely,
With alle circumstancens trewely — That is to seyn, trouthe, honour, knyght-
hede,

Wysdom, humblesse, estaat, and heigh kynrede, 2790

Fredom, and al that longeth to that art —
So Juppiter have of my soule part,
As in this world right now ne knowe I non

So worthy to ben loved as Palamon,
That serveth yow, and wol doon al his lyf
And if that evere ye shul ben a wyf, 2796 Foryet nat Palamon, the gentil man" —
And with that word his speche faille gan,

For from his feet up to his brest was come The coold, of deeth, that hadde hym overcome, 2800

And yet mooreover, for in his armes two
The vital strengthe is lost and al ago
Only the intellect, withouten moore,
That dwelled in his herte syk and soore, Gan failen whan the herte felte deeth 2805 Dusked his eyen two, and failed breeth,
But on his lady yet caste he his ye,
His laste word was, "Mercy, Emelye!"

His spirit chaunged hous and wente
ther, 2806

As I cam nevere, I kan nat tellen wher
Therefore I stynte, I nam no divynistre, Of soules fynde I nat in this registre, Ne me ne list thilke opynions to telle Of hem, though that they writen wher they
dwelle

Arcite is coold, ther Mars his soule gye'
Now wol I speken forth of Emelye 2816 Shrighte Emelye, and howleth Palamon,
And Theseus his suster took anon Swownynge, and baar hire fro the corps away

What helpeth it to tarien forth the day To tellen how she weep bothe eve and
morwe? 2821

For in swich cas wommen have swich
sorwe,
Whan that hir housbondes ben from hem ago,

That for the moore part they sorwen so,
Or ellis fallen in swich maladye, 2825
That at the laste certainly they dye

Infinite been the sorwes and the teeres
Of olde folk, and folk of tendre yeeres,
In al the toun for deeth of this Theban For hym ther wepeth bothe child and
man, 2830

So greet a wepyng was ther noon, certayn, Whan Ector was ybrought, al fressh yslavn, To Trove Allas, the pitee that was ther,

Cracchyng of chekes, rentynge eek of heer

"Why woldestow be deed," thuse wommen
crye, 2835

"And haddest gold ynough, and Emelye?" No man myghte gladen Theseus,

Savynghe his olde fader Egeus,
That knew this worldes transmutaoun, As he hadde seyn it chaunge bothe up and
doun, 2840

Joye after wo, and wo after gladnesse,
And shewed hem ensamples and liknesse

"Right as ther dyed nevere man," quod
he,

"That he ne lyvede in erthe in som degree, Right so ther lyvede never man," he
seyde, 2845

"In al this world, that som tyme he ne
deyde

This world nys but a thurghfare ful of wo,
And we been pilgrymes, passynge to and fro

Deeth is an ende of every worldly soore "
And over al this yet seyde he muchel
moore 2850

To this effect, ful wisely to enhorte
The peple that they sholde hem reconforte

Duc Theseus, with al his busy cure, Casteth now wher that the sepulture
Of goode Arcite may best ymaked be, 2855
And eek moost honourable in his degree

And at the laste he took conclusioun That ther as first Arcite and Palamoun Hadden for love the bataille hem bitwene, That in that selve grove, swoote and
grene, 2860

Ther as he hadde his amoureuse desires, His compleynte, and for love his hote fires,

He wolde make a fyr in which the office
Funeral he myghte al accomplice 2864

And leet comande anon to hakke and hewe
The okes olde, and leye hem on a rewe In colpons wel arrayed for to brenne
His officers with swifte feet they renne
And ryde anon at his comandement
And after this, Theseus hath ysent 2870
After a beere, and it al over spradde With clooth of gold, the richeste that he
hadde

And of the same suyte he cladde Arcite, Upon his hondes hadde he gloves white, Eek on his heed a coroune of laurer
grene, 2875

And in his hond a swerd ful bright and kene

He leyde hym, bare the visage, on the
beere,

Therwith he weep that pitee was to heere
And for the peple sholde seen hym alle, Whan it was day, he broghte hym to the halle, 2880

That roreth of the crying and the soun Tho cam this woful Theban Palamoun, With fotery berd and ruggy, asshy heeres,

In clothes blake, ydropped al with teeres, And, passynge othere of wepyng, Emelye, 2885

The rewefulleste of al the compaignye In as muche as the servyce sholde be

The moore noble and riche in his degree, Duc Theseus leet forth thre steedes
brynge,

That trapped were in steel al gliter-ynge, 2890

And covered with the armes of daun Arcite Upon thise steedes, that weren grete and
white,

Ther seten folk, of whiche oon baar his sheeld,

Another his spere up on his hondes heeld,
The thridde baar with hym his bowe

Turkeys 2895 (Of brend gold was the caas and eek the harneys),

And riden forth a paas with sorweful cheere Toward the grove, as ye shul after heere The nobleste of the Grekes that the
were

Upon hir shuldres caryeden the beere, 2900
With slakke paas, and eyen rede and wete, Thurghout the citee by the maaster strete, That sprad was al with blak, and wonder hye

Right of the same is al the staete ywrye
Upon the right hond wente olde Egeus, 2905
And on that oother syde duc Theseus, With vessels in hir hand of gold ful fyn, Al ful of hony, mulk, and blood, and
wyn,

Eek Palamon, with ful greet compaignye
And after that cam woful Emelye, 2910 With fyr in honde, as was that tyme the gyse,

To do the office of funeral servyse Heigh labour and ful greet apparal-lynge

Was at the service and the fyr-makyng,
That with his grene top the heveneraughte, And twenty fadme of brede the armes straughte, 2918

This is to seyn, the bowes weren so brode Of stree first ther was leyd ful many a lode

But how the fyr was maked upon highte, Ne eek the names that the trees highte,
As ook, firre, birch, aspe, alder, holm, popler, 2921

Wylugh, elm, plane, assh, box, chasteyn, lynde, laurer,

Mapul, thorn, bech, hasel, ew, whippel-tree, —

How they weren feld, shal nat be toold for
me,

Ne hou the goddes ronnen up and doun, Disherited of hire habitacioun, 2926

In whiche they woneden in reste and pees, Nymphes, fawnes and amadrides,

Ne hou the beestes and the briddes alle Fledden for fere, whan the wode was
falle, 2930

Ne how the ground agast was of the light,
That was nat wont to seen the sonne bright,

Ne how the fyr was couched first with stree,
And thanne with drye stukkes cloven a thre,
And thanne with grene wode and spicerye, 2935

And thanne with clooth of gold and with perrye,

And gerlandes, hangynge with ful many a flour,

The mirre, th'encens, with al so greet odour,

Ne how Arcite lay among al this,
Ne what richesse aboute his body is, 2940

Ne how that Emelye, as was the gyse, Putte in the fyr of funeral servyse,

Ne how she swowned whan men made the fyr,

Ne what she spak, ne what was hir desir,
Ne what jeweles men in the fyre caste,

Whan that the fyr was greet and brente
faste, 2946

Ne how somme caste hir sheeld, and somme hir spere,

And of hire vestementz, whiche that they
were,

And coppes fille of wyn, and milk, and
blood,

Into the fyr, that brente as it were
wood, 2950

Ne how the Grekes, with an huge route, Thres riden al the fyr aboute

Upon the left hand, with a loud shoutynge,
And thres with hur speres claterynge,

And thries how the ladyes gonne crye, 2955
Ne how that lad was homward Emelye,

Ne how Arcite is brent to asshen colde, Ne how that lyche-wake was yholde

Al thilke nyght, ne how the Grekes pleye
The wake-pleyes, ne kepe I nat to seye, 2960

Who wrastleth best naked with oille enoynt,

Ne who that baar hym best, in no disjoynt I wol nat tellen eek how that they
goon

Hoom til Atthenes, whan the pley is doon, But shortly to the point thanne wol I
wende, 2965

And maken of my longe tale an ende
By processe and by lengthe of certeyn yeres,

Al stynted is the moornyng and the teres
Of Grekes, by oon general assent 2969

Thanne semed me ther was a parlement
At Atthenes, upon certein pointz and cras, Among the whiche pointz yspoken was,
To have with certein contrees alli-
aunce,

And have fully of Thebens obeisaunce
For which this noble Theseus anon 2975

Leet senden after gentil Palamon, Unwist of hym what was the cause and why,

But in his blake clothes sorwefully
He cam at his comandement in hye

Tho sente Theseus for Emelye 2980 Whan they were set, and hust was al the
place,

And Theseus abiden hadde a space
Er any word cam fram his wise brest,

His eyen sette he ther as was his lest,
And with a sad visage he siked stille, 2985

And after that right thus he seyde his wille
"The Firste Moevere of the cause above,

Whan he first made the faire cheyne of
love,

Greet was th'effect, and heigh was his entente

Wel wiste he why, and what therof he
mente, 2990

For with that faire cheyne of love he bond
The fyr, the eyr, the water, and the lond

In certeyn boundes, that they may nat flee

That same Prince and that Moevere," quod
he,

"Hath stablshsed in this wrecched world
adoun 2995

Certeyne dayes and duracioun
To al that is engendred in this place,

Over the whiche day they may nat pace,
Al mowe they yet tho dayes wel abregge

Ther nedeth noght noon auctoritee t'allegge. 3000

For it is preeved by experience,
But that me list declaren my sentence Thanne may men by this ordre wel discerne

That thulke Moevere stable is and eterne Wel may men knowe, but it be a fool, 3005
That every part dirryveth from his hool,
For nature hath nat taken his bigynnyng
Of no partie or cantel of a thyng,
But of a thyng that parfit is and stable, Descendynge so til it be corrumpable 3010
And therefore, of his wise purveiaunce,
He hath so wel biset his ordinaunce,
That spesec of thynges and progressiouns Shullen enduren by successiouns,
And nat eterne, withouten any lye 3015
This maystow understonde and seen at ye Loo the ook, that hath so long a noris-shynge

From tyme that it first bigynneth to
sprynge,

And hath so long a lif, as we may see,
Yet at the laste wasted is the tree 3020 Considereth eek how that the harde ston

Under oure feet, on which we trede and
goon,

Yet wasteth it as it lyth by the weye
The brode ryver somtyme wexeth dreye, The grete tounes se we wane and
wende 3025

Thanne may ye se that al this thyng hath
ende

Of man and womman seen we wel also That nedeth, in oon of these termes two,
This is to seyn, in youthe or elles age,
He moot be deed, the kyng as shal a page, Som in his bed, som in the depe see, 3031 Som in the large feeld, as men may see, Ther helpeth noight, al goth that ilke
weye

Thanne may I seyn that al this thyng moot deye

What maketh this but Juppiter, the
kyng, 3035
The which is prince and cause of alle
thyng,

Convertynge al unto his propre welle
From which it is dirryved, sooth to telle?
And heer-agayns no creature on lyve,
Of no degree, availleth for to stryve 3040

Thanne is it wysdom, as it thynketh me,

To maken vertu of necessitee,
And take it weel that we may nat eschue,
And namely that to us alle is due And whoso gruccheth ought, he dooth
folye, 3045

And rebel is to hym that al may gye
And certainly a man hath moost honour
To dyen in his excellence and flour, Whan he is siker of his goode name, Thanne hath he doon his freend, ne hym, no shame 3050
And gladder oghte his freend been of his deeth,

Whan with honour up yolden is his breeth,
Than whan his name apalled is for age,
For al forgotten is his vassellage Thanne is it best, as for a worthy fame,
To dyen whan that he is best of name 3055

The contrame of al this is wilfulnesse
Why grucchen we, why have we hevynesse,
That goode Arcite, of chivalrie the flour, Departed is with duetee and honour 3060
Out of this foule prison of this lyf?
Why grucchen heere his cosyng and his wyf
Of his welfare, that loved hem so weel?
Kan he hem thank? Nay, God woot never a deel,

That both his soule and eek himself offende, 3065

And yet they mowe hir lustes nat amende
What may I conclude of this longe serye,
But after wo I rede us to be merye,
And thanken Juppiter of al his grace? 3069
And er that we departen from this place I rede that we make of sorwes two O parfit joye, lastynge everemo And looketh now, wher moost sorwe is herinne,

Ther wol we first amenden and bigynne
"Suster," quod he, "this is my fulle assent, 3075

With all th'avys heere of my parlement,
That gentil Palamon, youre owene knyght, That serveth yow with wille, herte, and
myght,

And ever hath doon syn ye first hym
knewe,

That ye shul of youre grace upon hym
rewe, 3080

And taken hym for housbonde and for lord Lene me youre hond, for this is our accord Lat se now of youre wommanly pitee

He is a kynges brother sone, pardee,
 And though he were a povre bachelere, 3085
 Syn he hath served yow so many a yeer,
 And had for yow so greet adversitee,
 It moste been considered, leeveth me,
 For gentyl mercy oghte to passen right " Thanne seyde he thus to Palamon the knight 3090
 "I trowe ther nedeth litel sermonyng
 To make yow assente to this thyng Com neer, and taak youre lady by the
 hond "
 Fitwixen hem was maad anon the bond
 That highte matrimoigne or mariage, 3095
 By al the conseil and the baronage
 And thus with alle blisse and melodye

Hath Palamon ywedded Emelye And God, that al this wyde world hath wrought, Sende hym his love that hath it deere aboght, 3100
 For now is Palamon in alle wele, Lyvyng in blisse, in richesse, and in
 heele,
 And Emelye hym loveth so tendrely,
 And he hire serveth al so gentilly, That nevere was ther no word hem bi-twene 3105
 Of jalouse or any oother teene
 Thus endeth Palamon and Emelye, And God save al this faire compaignye!
 Amen

Heere is ended the Knyghtes Tale

THE MILLER'S PROLOGUE

Heere folwen the wordes bitwene the Hooste and the Millere

Whan that the Knyght had thus his tale ytoold,
 In al the route nas ther yong ne oold 3110
 That he ne seyde it was a noble storie,
 And worthy for to drawen to memorie,
 And namely the gentils everichon Oure Hooste lough and swoor, "So moot
 I gon, 3114
 This gooth aright, unboked is the male Lat se now who shal telle another tale,
 For trewely the game is wel bigonne
 Now telleth ye, sir Monk, if that ye konne Somwhat to quite with the Knyghtes tale " The Millere, that for dronken was al
 pale, 3120
 So that unnethes upon his hors he sat,
 He nolde avalen neithur hood ne hat,
 Ne abyde no man for his curtesie,
 But in Pilates voys he gan to crie, And swoor, "By armes, and by blood and
 bones, 3125
 I kan a noble tale for the nones,
 With which I wol now quite the Knyghtes tale "
 Oure Hooste saugh that he was dronks of ale,

And seyde, "Abyd, Robyn, my leeve
 brother, 3129
 Som bettre man shal telle us first another Abyd, and lat us werken thriftily "
 "By Goddes soule," quod he, "that wol nat I,
 For I wol speke, or elles go my wey " Oure Hoost answerde, "Tel on, a devel wey!
 Thou art a fool, thy wit is overcome " 3135
 "Now herkneth," quod the Millere,
 "alle and some!
 But first I make a protestacioun
 That I am dronke, I knowe it by my soun,
 And therefore if that I mysspeke or seye, Wyte it the ale of Southwerk, I you prey
 For I wol telle a legende and a lyf 3141 Bothe of a carpenter and of his wyf, How that a clerk hath set the wrightes cappe "
 The Reve answerde and seyde, "Stynt thy clappe!
 Lat be thy lewed dronken harlotrye 3145
 It is a synne and eek a greet folye
 To aperyen any man, or hym defame,
 And eek to bryngen wyves in swich fame.

Thou mayst ynogh of othere thynges
seyn "

This dronke Millere spak ful soone
ageyn 3150

And seyde, "Leve brother Osewold, Who hath no wyf, he is no cokewold
But I sey nat therfore that thou art
oon,

Ther been ful goode wyves many oon,
And evere a thousand goode ayeyns oon badde 3155

That knowestow wel thyself, but I thou madde

Why artow angry with my tale now?
I have a wyf, pardee, as wel as thow, Yet nolde I, for the oxen in my plogh, Take upon me moore than ynogh, 3160

As demen of myself that I were oon,
I wol bileve wel that I am noon
An housbonde shal nat been inquistyf Of Goddes pryvetee, nor of his wyf So he may fynde Goddes foyson
there, 3165

Of the remenant nedeth nat enquere "

What sholde I moore seyn, but this Millere

He nolde his wordes for no man forbere,
But tolde his cherles tale in his manere 3169 M'athynketh that I shal reherce it heere
And therfore every gental wight I preye, For Goddes love, demeth nat that I seye Of yvel entente, but for I moot reherce Hir tales alle, be they bettre or werse,
Or elles falsen som of my mateere 3175
And therfore, whoso list it nat yheere, Turne over the leef and chese another tale, For he shal fynde ynowe, grete and smale,

Of storial thyng that toucheth gentillesse,
And eek moralitee and hoolynesse 3180 Blameth nat me if that ye chese amys
The Millere is a cherl, ye knowe wel
this,

So was the Reve, and othere manye mo,
And harlotre they tolden bothe two 3184
Avyseth yow, and put me out of blame, And eek men shal nat maken ernest of game

THE MILLER'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Millere his tale

Whilom ther was dwellynge at Oxenford
A riche gnof, that gestes heeld to bord,
And of his craft he was a carpenter With hym ther was dwellynge a poure scoler, 3190

Hadde lerned art, but al his fantasye
Was turned for to lerne astrologye,
And koude a certeyn of conclusiouns,
To demen by interrogaciouns, 3194
If that men asked hym in certain houres Whan that men sholde have droghte or elles shoures,

Or if men asked hym what sholde bifalle
Of every thyng, I may nat rekene hem alle

This clerk was cleped hende Nicholas Of deerne love he koude and of solas, 3200
And therto he was sleigh and ful privee,
And lyk a mayden meke for to see A chambre hadde he in that hostelrye
Allone, withouten any compaignye,

Ful fetisly ydight with herbes swoote, 3205
And he hymself as sweete as is the roote
Of lycorys, or any cetewale His Almageste, and bookes grete and
smale,

His astrelabie, longynge for his art,
His augrym stones layen faire apart, 3210
On shelves couched at his beddes heed,
His presse ycovered with a faldyng reed,
And al above ther lay a gay sautrie,
On which he made a-nyghtes melodie
So swetely that all the chambre rong, 3215
And Angelus ad virginem he song,
And after that he song the kynges noote Ful often blessed was his myrie throte
And thus this sweete clerk his tyme spente
After his freends fyndyng and his rente

This carpenter hadde wedded newe a
wyf, 3221
Which that he lovede moore than his lyf,

Of eighteteene yeer she was of age Jalous he was, and heeld hire narwe in cage, For she was wyldre and yonge and he was old, 3225

And demed hymself been lik a cokewold
 He knew nat Catoun, for his wit was rude, That bad man sholde wedde his simylitude Men sholde wedden after hire estaat, 3229
 For youthe and elde is often at debaat
 But sith that he was fallen in the snare,
 He moste endure, as oother folk, his care Fair was this yonge wyf, and ther-withal

As any wezele hir body gent and smal
 A ceynt she werede, barred al of silk, 3235
 A barmclooth eek as whit as morne milk Upon hir lendes, ful of many a goore Whit was hir smok, and broyden al bi-foore

And eek bihynde, on hir coler aboute, Of col-blak silk, withinne and eek with-oute 3240

The tapes of hir white voluper
 Were of the same suyte of hir coler, Hir filet brood of silk, and set ful hie
 And sikerly she hadde a likerous ye, 3244
 Ful smale y pulled were hire browes two,
 And tho were bent and blake as any sloo
 She was ful moore blisful on to see Than is the newe pere-jonette tree,
 And softer than the wolle is of a wether
 And by hir girdel heeng a purs of lether, 3250 Tasseled with silk, and perled with latoun
 In al this world, to seken up and doun, There nys no man so wys that koude thenche

So gay a popelote or swich a wenche Ful brighter was the shynying of hir
 hewe 3255

Than in the tour the noble yforged newe
 But of hir song, it was as loude and yerne
 As any swalwe sittynge on a berne Therto she koude skippe and make game,
 As any kyde or calf folwyng his dame Hir mouth was sweete as bragot or the meeth, 3261

Or hoord of apples leyd in hey or heeth Wynsynge she was, as is a joly colt, Long as a mast, and upright as a bolt
 A brooch she baar upon hir lowe coler, 3265
 As brood as is the boos of a bokeler Hir shoes were laced on hir legges hie

She was a prymerole, a piggesnyre,
 For any lord to leggen in his bedde,
 Or yet for any good yeman to wedde 3270

Now, sire, and eft, sire, so bifel the cas,
 That on a day this hendre Nicholas Fil with this yonge wyf to rage and
 pleye,

Whil that hir housbonde was at Oseneve, As clerkes ben ful subtil and ful queynte, 3275

And prively he caughte hire by the queynte, And seyde, "Ywis, but if ich have my
 wille,

For deerne love of thee, lemman, I
 spille "

And heeld hire harde by the haunches-
 bones,

And seyde, "Lemman, love me al atones, Or I wol dyen, also God me save!" 3281
 And she sproong as a colt dooth in the trave
 And with hir heed she wryed faste away, And seyde, "I wol nat kisse thee, by my fey!

Why, lat be," quod she, "lat be, Nicholas, 3285

Or I wol crie 'out, harrow' and 'allas'!
 Do wey youre handes, for youre curteisye!"

This Nicholas gan mercy for to crye,
 And spak so faire, and profred him so faste,
 That she hir love hym graunted atte
 laste, 3290

And swoor hir ooth, by seint Thomas of Kent,

That she wol been at his comandement, Whan that she may hir leyser wel espie
 "Myn housbonde is so ful of jalousie That but ye wayte wel and been privee, I woot right wel I nam but deed," quod
 she 3295

"Ye moste been ful deerne, as in this cas."

"Nay therof care thee noight," quod
 Nicholas

"A clerk hadde litherly biset his whyle, But if he koude a carpenter bigyle " 3300
 And thus they been accorded and ysworn
 To wayte a tyme, as I have told bifore

Whan Nicholas had doon thus everideel,

And thakked hire aboute the lendes weel, He kiste hire sweete and taketh his saw-tre, 3305

And pleyeth faste, and maketh melodie

Thanne fil it thus, that to the paryssh church,

Crustes owene werkes for to wirche,
 This goode wyf went on an haliday
 Hir forheed shoon as bright as any day, 3310
 So was it wasshen whan she leet hir werk
 Now was ther of that church a parissch clerk,

The which that was ycleped Absolon
 Crul was his heer, and as the gold it shoon,
 And strouted as a fanne large and brode, 3315

Ful streight and evene lay his joly shode
 His rode was reed, his eyen greye as goos With Poules wyndow corven on his shoos,

In hoses rede he wente fetisly
 Yclad he was ful smal and proprely 3320
 Al in a kurtel of a lyght waget, Ful fare and thukke been the poyntes set
 And therupon he hadde a gay surplys
 As what as is the blomse upon the rys
 A myrne chuld he was, so God me save 3325 Wel koude he laten blood and clippe and shave,

And maken a chartre of lond or acquit-
 aunce

In twenty manere koude he trippe and
 daunce

After the scole of Oxenforde tho,
 And with his legges casten to and fro, 3330
 And pleyen songes on a smal rubible, Therto he song som tyme a loud quynnyble,
 And as wel koude he pleye on a giterne
 In al the toun nas brewhous ne tavernne
 That he ne visited with his solas, 3335
 Ther any gaylard tappestere was But sooth to seyn, he was somdeel squaymous

Of fartyng, and of speche daungerous

This Absolon, that jolif was and gay, Gooth with his sencer on the haliday, 3340
 Sensynge the wyves of the parisshe faste,
 And many a lovely look on hem he caste,
 And namely on this carpenteris wyf
 To looke on hire hym thoughte a myrne lyf,
 She was so propre and sweete and likerous 3345

I dar wel seyn, if she hadde been a mous,
 And he a cat, he wolde hire hente anon
 This parissch clerk, this joly Absolon, Hath in his herte swich a love-longynge

That of no wyf ne took he noon off-
 ryng,

For curteise, he seyde, he wolde noon
 The moone, whan it was nyght, ful brighte shoon,

And Absolon his gyterne hath ytake,
 For paramours he thoughte for to wake
 And forth he gooth, jolif and amorous, 3355
 Til he cam to the carpenteres hous

A litel after cokkes hadde ycrowe,
 And dressed hym up by a shot-wyndowe
 That was upon the carpenteris wal
 He syngeth in his voys gentil and smal,
 "Now, deere lady, if thy wille be, 3361
 I praye yow that ye wole rewe on me,"
 Ful wel acordaunt to his gyternynge

This carpenter awook, and herde hum synge,
 And spak unto his wyf, and seyde anon, 3365
 "What! Alison! herestow nat Absolon, That chaunteth thus under oure boures
 wal?"

And she answerde hir housbonde ther-
 withal,

"Yis, God woot, John, I heere it every
 deel"

This passeth forth, what wol ye bet than
 weel? 3370

Fro day to day this joly Absolon
 So woweth hire that hym is wo bigon
 He waketh al the nyght and al the day,
 He kembeth his lokkes brode, and made hym gay, 3374

He woweth hire by meenes and brocage,
 And swoor he wolde been hir owene page,
 He syngeth, brokkyng as a nyghtyngale,
 He sente hire pyment, meeth, and spiced
 ale,

And wafres, pipyng hoot out of the gleede;
 And, for she was of towne, he profred
 meede 3380

For som folk wol ben wonnen for richesse,
 And somme for strokes, and somme for gentillesse

Somtyme, to shewe his lightnesse and
 mastrye,

He pleyeth Herodes upon a scaffold hie
 But what avalleth hym as in this cas? 3385
 She loveth so this hende Nicholas
 That Absolon may blowe the bukkes horn,
 He ne hadde for his labour but a scorn
 And thus she maketh Absolon hire ape,
 And al his ernest turneth til a jape 3390

Ful sooth is this proverbe, it is no lye, Men seyn right thus, "Alwey the nye slye Maketh the ferre leewe to be looth" For though that Absolon be wood or wrooth, 3394

By cause that he fer was from hire sight,
This nye Nicholas stood in his light

Now ber thee wel, thou hende Nicholas, For Absolon may waille and synge "allas"
And so bifel it on a Saturday,
This carpenter was goon til Osenay, 3400

And hende Nicholas and Alsoun Acorded been to this conclusoun, That Nicholas shal shapen hym a wyle
This sely jalous housbonde to bigyle,

And if so be the game wente aright, 3405
She sholde slepen in his arm al nyght, For this was his desir and hire also

And right anon, withouten wordes mo,
This Nicholas no lenger wolde tarie, 3409 But dooth ful softe unto his chambre carie Bothe mete and drynke for a day or tweye, And to hire housbonde bad hire for to
seye,

If that he axed after Nicholas,
She sholde seye she nyste where he was,
Of al that day she saugh hym nat with
ye, 3415

She trowed that he was in maladye,
For for no cry hir mayde koude hym calle,
He nolde answeere for thyng that myghte
falle

This passeth forth al thilke Saturday,
That Nicholas stille in his chambre lay, 3420
And eet and sleep, or dide what hym leste, Til Sunday, that the sonne gooth to reste
This sely carpenter hath greet merveyle Of Nicholas, or what thyng myghte hym eyle,

And seyde, "I am adrad, by Seint Thomas,
It stondeh nat aright with Nicholas 3426 God shulde that he deyde sodeynly!

This world is now ful tikel, aikerly
I saugh to-day a cors yborn to churche That now, on Monday last, I saugh hym wirche 3430

"Go up," quod he unto his knave anon,
"Clepe at hus dore, or knocke with a stoon Looke how it is, and tel me boldely"

This knave gooth hym up ful sturdily, And at the chambre dore whil that he
stood, 3435

He cride and knocked as that he were
wood,
"What! how! what do ye, maister Nicho-lay?"

How may ye slepen al the longe day?"

But al for noght, he herde nat a word
An hole he foond, ful lowe upon a bord, 3440 Ther as the cat was wont in for to crepe,
And at that hole he looked in ful depe,
And at the laste he hadde of hym a sight This Nicholas sat evere capyng up-
right,

As he had kiked on the newe moone 3445
Adoun he gooth, and tolde his maister
soone

In what array he saugh this ilke man

This carpenter to blessen hym bigan,
And seyde, "Help us, seinte Frydeswyde!
A man woot litel what hym shal bityde 3450
This man is falle, with his astromye,
In som woodnesse or in som agonye I thoghte ay wel how that it sholde be!
Men sholde nat knowe of Goddes pryvetee Ye, blessed be alwey a lewed man 3455

That noght but only his bileve kan!
So ferde another clerk with astromye,
He walked in the feeldes, for to pry Upon the sterres, what ther sholde bifalle, Til he was in a marle-pit yfalle, 3460
He saugh nat that But yet, by seint

Thomas,

Me reweth soore of hende Nicholas
He shal be rated of his studyng,
If that I may, by Jhesus, hevene kyng!
Get me a staf, that I may underspore, 3465
Whil that thou, Robyn, hevest up the dore He shal out of his studyng, as I gesse" — And to the chambre dore he gan hym dresse

His knave was a strong carl for the nones,
And by the haspe he haaf it of atones, 3470
Into the floor the dore fil anon

This Nicholas sat ay as stille as stoon,
And evere caped upward into the air
This carpenter wende he were in despeir, And hente hym by the sholdres myght-ily, 3475

And shook hym harde, and cride spitously, "What! Nicholay! what, how! what, looke
adoun!

Awak, and think on Cristes passoun!
I crouche thee from elves and fro wightes

Therwith the nyght-spel seyde he anonrightes 3480
 On foure halves of the hous aboute, And on the thresshfold of the dore with-
 oute
 "Jhesu Crist and seinte Benedight, Blesse this hous from every wikked wight, For nyghtes verye, the white pater- noster! 3485
 Where westestow, seinte Petres soster?"
 And atte laste this hende Nicholas Gan for to sike soore, and seyde, "Al-las!
 Shal al the world be lost eftsoones now?"
 This carpenter answerde, "What seystow? 3490
 What! thynk on God, as we doon, men that swynke"
 This Nicholas answerde, "Fecche me
 drynke,
 And after wol I speke in pryvetee Of certeyn thyng that toucheth me and
 thee
 I wol telle it noon oother man, certeyn" This carpenter goth down, and comth
 ageyn, 3496
 And broghte of myghty ale a large quart, And whan that ech of hem had dronke his part,
 This Nicholas his dore faste shette,
 And doun the carpenter by hym he sette He seyde "John, myn hooste, hef and deere, 3501
 Thou shalt upon thy trouthe swere me
 heere
 That to no wight thou shalt this conseil wreye,
 For it is Cristes conseil that I seye, And if thou telle it man, thou art for-lore, 3505
 For this vengeaunce thou shalt han therfore,
 That if thou wreye me, thou shalt be
 wood"
 "Nay, Crist forbode it, for his hooly
 blood!"
 Quod tho this sely man, "I nam no labbe, Ne, though I seye, I nam nat hef to gabbe 3510
 Sey what thou wolt, I shal it nevere telle To child ne wyf, by hym that harwed
 helle!"

"Now John," quod Nicholas, "I wol
 nat lye,
 I have yfounde in myn astrologye,
 As I have looked in the moone bright, 3515 That now a Monday next, at quarter
 nyght,
 Shal falle a reyn, and that so wilde and
 wood,
 That half so greet was nevere Noees flood
 This world," he seyde, "in lasse than an hour Shal al be dreynt, so hidous is the shour This shal mankynde drenche, and lese hir lyf" 3521
 This carpenter answerde, "Allas, my
 wyf!
 And shal she drenche? allas, myn Alousoun!"
 For sorwe of this he fil almost adoun, And seyde, "Is ther no remedie in this cas?" 3525
 "Why, yis, for Gode," quod hende
 Nicholas,
 "If thou wolt werken after loore and reed Thou mayst nat werken after thyn owene
 heed,
 For thus seith Salomon, that was ful trewe, 'Werk al by conseil, and thou shalt nat
 rewe' 3530
 And if thou werken wolt by good conseil,
 I undertake, withouten mast and seyl, Yet shal I saven hire and thee and me Hastow nat herd hou saved was Noe, Whan that oure Lord hadde warned hym
 biforn 3535
 That al the world with water sholde be lorn?"
 "Yis," quod this Carpenter, "ful yoore
 ago"
 "Hastou nat herd," quod Nicholas,
 "also
 The sorwe of Noe with his felaweshipe, Er that he myghte gete his wyf to
 shipe? 3540
 Hym hadde be levere, I dar wel undertake,
 At thilke tyme, than alle his wetheres blake
 That she hadde had a ship hursel alone And therefore, woostou what is best to doone? 3544
 This asketh haste, and of an hastif thyng Men may nat preche or maken taryng Anon go gete us faste into this in A knedyng trogh, or ellis a kymelyn, For ech of us, but looke that they be large,

In which we mowe swymme as in a barge, 3550

And han therinne vitaille suffisant
But for a day, — fy on the remenant!
The water shal aslake and goon away Aboute pryme upon the nexte day 3554
But Robyn may nat wite of this, thy knave, Ne eek thy mayde Gille I may nat save,
Axe nat why, for though thou aske me,
I wol nat tellen Goddes pryvetee Suffiseth thee, but if thy wittes madde,
To han as greet a grace as Noe hadde 3560 Thy wyf shal I wel saven, out of doute Go now thy wey, and speed thee heeraboute

But whan thou hast, for hire and thee and me,

Ygeten us thuse knedyng tubbes thre, Thanne shaltow hange hem in the roof ful
hye, 3565

That no man of oure purveisaunce spye And whan thou thus hast doon, as I have seyd,

And hast oure vitaille faire in hem yleyd,
And eek an ax, to smyte the corde atwo, Whan that the water comth, that we may go, 3570

And broke an hole an heigh, upon the gable, Unto the gardyn-ward, over the stable,
That we may frely passen forth oure way, Whan that the grete shour is goon away, Thanne shaltou swymme as myrie, I undertake, 3575

As dooth the white doke after hire drake Thanne wol I clepe, 'How, Alison' how,
John!

Be myrie, for the flood wol passe anon?
And thou wolt seyn, 'Hayl, maister Nicholay! 3579

Good morwe, I se thee wel, for it is day'
And thanne shul we be lordes al oure lyf
Of al the world, as Noe and his wyf

But of o thyng I warne thee ful right Be wel avysed on that ilke nyght
That we ben entred into shupes bord, 3585

That noon of us ne speke nat a word, Ne clepe, ne crie, but be in his preyere,
For it is Goddes owene heeste deere

Thy wyf and thou moote hange fer atwynne,

For that bitwixe yow shal be no synne, 3590 Namore in looking than ther shal in deede,

This ordinance is seyde Go, God theespeede!
Tomorwe at nyght, whan men ben alle aslepe,

Into oure knedyng-tubbes wol we crepe,
And sitten there, abidyng Goddes
grace 3595

Go now thy wey, I have no lenger space
To make of this no lenger sermonyng Men seyn thus, 'sende the wise, and sey no
thyng'

Thou art so wys, it needeth thee nat teche Go, save oure lyf, and that I the biseche" 3600

This sely carpenter goth forth his wey Ful ofte he seide "allas" and "weylaway,"
And to his wyf he tolde his pryvetee, And she was war, and knew it bet than he, What al this queynte cast was for to
seye 3605

But nathelees she ferde as she wolde deye,
And seyde, "Allas! go forth thy wey anon, Help us to scape, or we been dede echon!
I am thy trewe, verray wedded wyf, Go, deere spouse, and help to save oure
lyf" 3610

Lo, which a greet thyng is affecioun!
Men may dyen of ymaginacioun, So depe may impressioun be take This sely carpenter bigynneth quake, Hym thynketh verraily that he may
see 3615

Noes flood come walwyng as the see
To drenchen Alisoun, his hony deere He wepeth, weyleth, maketh sory cheere,
He siketh with ful many a sory swogh,
He gooth and geteth hym a knedyng trogh, 3620

And after that a tubbe and a kymelyn, And pryvely he sente hem to his in,
And heng hem in the roof in pryvetee His owene hand he made laddres thre, To clymben by the ronges and the stalkes 3625

Unto the tubbes hangynge in the balkes,
And hem vitailed, bothe trogh and tubbe, With breed and chese, and good ale in a jubbe,

Suffisynge right ynogh as for a day 3629
But er that he hadde maad al this array,

He sente his knave, and eek his wenche
also,

Upon his nedre to London for to go And on the Monday, whan it drow to
nyght,

He shette his dore withoute candel-lyght,
And dressed alle thyng as it sholde be 3635
And shortly, up they clomben alle thre,
They seten stille wel a furlong way

"Now, Pater-noster, clom!" seyde Nicho-
lay,

And "clom," quod John, and "clom," seyde Alsoun

This carpenter seyde his devocioun, 3640
And stille he sit, and biddeth his preyere, Awatynge on the reyn, if he it heere

The dede sleep, for wery bisynesse, Fil on this carpenter right, as I gesse, Aboute corfew-tyme, or litel moore, 3645

For travaille of his goost he groneth soore,
And eft he routeth, for his heed myslay Doun of the laddre stalketh Nicholay,
And Alsoun ful softe adoun she spedde, Withouten wordes mo they goon to
bedde, 3650

Ther as the carpenter is wont to lye Ther was the revel and the melodye,
And thus lith Alison and Nicholas,
In bisynesse of myrthe and of solas,
Til that the belle of laudes gan to ryngne, 3655
And freres in the chauncel gonne syngne

This parissch clerk, this amorous Absolon,
That is for love alwey so wo bigon,
Upon the Monday was at Oseneye With compaignye, hym to disporte and
pleye, 3660

And axed upon cas a cloisterer Ful prively after John the carpenter, And he drough hym apart out of the chirche,

And seyde, "I noot, I saugh hym heere nat
wirche

Syn Saturday, I trowe that he be went 3665 For tymber, theroure abbot hath hym sent,

For he is wont for tymber for to go,
And dwellen at the grange a day or two,
Or elles he is at his hous, certeyn Where that he be, I kan nat soothly seyn "

This Absolon ful joly was and light, 3671 And thoghte, "Now is tyme wake al
nyght,

For sikurly I saugh hym nat sturyngne Aboute his dore, syn day bigan to spryngne So moot I thryve, I shal, at cokkes crowe, 3675

Ful pryvely knocken at his wyndowe
That stant ful lowe upon his boures wal To Alison now wol I tellen al
My love-longynge, for yet I shal nat mysse
That at the leeste wey I shal hire kisse 3680

Som maner confort shal I have, parfay
My mouth hath icheh al this longe day,
That is a signe of kysyng atte leeste Al nyght me mette eek I was at a feeste Therefore I wol go slepe an houre or
tweye, 3685

And al the nyght thanne wol I wake and
pleye "

Whan that the firste cok hath crowe,
anon

Up rist this joly lover Absolon,
And hym arraieth gay, at poynt-devys
But first he cheweth greyn and lycorys, 3690 To smellen sweete, er he hadde kembd his heer

Under his tonge a trewe-love he beer,
For therby wende he to ben gracious
He rometh to the carpenteres hous,
And stille he stant under the shot-wyndowe — 3695

Unto his brest it raughte, it was so lowe —
And softe he cougheth with a semysoun "What do ye, hony-comb, sweete Al-
soun,

My faire bryd, my sweete cynamome?
Awaketh, lemman myn, and speketh to
me! 3700

Wel litel thynken ye upon my wo,
That for youre love I swete ther I go No wonder is thogh that I swelte and
swete,

I moorne as dooth a lamb after the tete Ywis, lemman, I have swich love-long-
ynge, 3705

That lik a turtel trewe is my moornynge
I may nat ete na moore than a mayde "

"Go fro the wyndow, Jakke fool," she
sayde,

"As help me God, it wol nat be 'com pa
me "

I love another — and elles I were to blame — 3710

Wel bet than thee, by Jhesu, Absolon

Go forth thy wey, or I wol caste a ston,
And lat me slepe, a twenty deuel wey!"

"Allas," quod Absolon, "and weylaway, That trewe love was evere so yvel bi-set!" 3715

Thanne kysse me, syn it may be no bet,
For Jhesus love, and for the love of me"
"Wiltow thanne go thy wey therwith," quod she!

"Ye, certes, lemman," quod this Absolon

"Thanne make thee redy," quod she,
"I come anon" 3720

And unto Nicholas she seyde stille,
"Now hust, and thou shalt laughen al thy file"

This Absolon doun sette hym on his knees

And seyde, "I am a lord at alle degrees, For after this I hope ther cometh
moore" 3725

Lemman, thy grace, and sweete bryd, thyn oore!"

The wyndow she undoth, and that in haste

"Have do," quod she, "com of, and speed the faste,

lest that oure neighbores thee espie"

This Absolon gan wype his mouth ful drie" 3730

Derk was the nyght as pich, or as the cole,

And at the wyndow out she putte hir hole,
And Absolon, hym fil no bet ne wers,

But with his mouth he kiste hir naked ers ful savourly, er he were war of this" 3735

Abak he stirte, and thoughte it was amys,
For wel he wiste a womman hath no berd
He felte a thyng al rough and long yherd,
And seyde, "Fy! allas! what have I do?"

"Tehee!" quod she, and clapte the wyn-dow to," 3740

And Absolon gooth forth a sory pas

"A berd! a berd!" quod hende Nicholas, "By Goddes corpus, this goth faire and
weel"

This sely Absolon herde every deel,
And on his lippe he gan for anger byte," 3745

And to hymself he seyde, "I shal thee quyte"

Who rubbeth now, who frotheth now his lippes

With dust, with sond, with straw, with clooth, with chippes,

But Absolon, that seith ful ofte, "Allas!
My soule bitake I unto Sathanas," 3750

But me were levere than al this toun," quod he,

"Of this despit awroken for to be Allas," quod he, "allas, I ne hadde ybleynt!"

His hote love was coold and al yqueynt, For fro that tyme that he hadde kist hir ers," 3755

Of paramours he sette nat a kers,
For he was heeled of his maladie,

Ful ofte paramours he gan defie,
And weep as dooth a child that is ybete

A softe paas he wente over the strete" 3760

Until a smyth men cleped daun Gerveys, That in his forge smythed plough har-neys,

He sharpeth shaar and kultour bisly
This Absolon knokketh al esly,

And seyde, "Undo, Gerveys, and that
anon" 3765

"What, who artow?" "It am I, Ab-
solon"

"What, Absolon! for Cristes sweete tree, Why rise ye so rathe? ey, benedicutee!

What eyleth yow? Som gay gerl, God it
woot," 3769

Hath brought yow thus upon the virtoot
By sente Note, ye woot wel what I mene"

This Absolon ne roghte nat a bene Of al his pley, no word agayn he yaf,

He hadde moore tow on his distaf Than Gerveys knew, and seyde, "Freend

so deere," 3775

That hote kultour in the chymenee heere,
As lene it me, I have therwith to doone,
And I wol brynge it thee agayn ful soone"

Gerveys answerde, "Certes, were it gold,
Or in a poke nobles alle untold," 3780

Thou sholdest have, as I am trewe smyth Ey, Cristes fool! what wol ye do therwith?"

"Therof," quod Absolon, "be as be may I shal wel telle it thee to-morwe day" —

And caughte the kultour by the colde stele" 3785

Ful softe out at the dore he gan to stele,
And wente unto the carpenters wal.

He cogheth first, and knokketh ther-withal

Upon the wyndowe, right as he dide er

This Alison answerde, "Who is ther 3790 That knokketh so? I warante it a thief "

"Why, nay," quod he, "God woot, my sweete leef,

I am thyn Absolon, my deereyng Of gold," quod he, "I have thee broght a
ryng

My mooder yaf it me, so God me save, 3795 Ful fyn it is, and therto wel ygrave
This wol I yeve thee, if thou me kisse "

This Nicholas was risen for to pisse, And thoughte he wolde amenden al the jape,

He sholde kisse his ers er that he scape
And up the wyndowe dide he hastily, 3801

And out his ers he putteth pryvely
Over the buttok, to the haunche-bon,
And therwith spak this clerk, this Ab-
solon,

"Spek, sweete bryd, I noot nat where thou art " 3805

This Nicholas anon leet fle a fart,
As greet as it had been a thonder-dent, That with the strook he was almost yblent,

And he was redy with his iren hoot,
And Nicholas amydde the ers he smoot 3810

Of gooth the skyn an hande-brede
aboute,

The hote kultour brende so his toute,
And for the smert he wende for to dye
As he were wood, for wo he gan to crye, "Help! water! water! help, for Goddes
herte!" 3815

This carpenter out of his slomber sterte, And herde oon crien "water" as he were
wood,

And thoughte, "Allas, now comth Nowelis flood!"

He sit hym up withouten wordes mo,
And with his ax he smoot the corde
atwo, 3820

And doun gooth al, he foond nether to selle,

Ne breed ne ale, til he cam to the celle
Upon the floor, and ther aswowne he lay

Up starte hire Alison and Nicholay, And criden, "out" and "harrow" in the strete 3825

The neighebores, bothe smale and grete,
In ronnen for to gauren on this man, That yet aswowne lay, bothe pale and wan,

For with the fal he brosten hadde his arm But stonde he moste unto his owene harm, 3830

For whan he spak, he was anon bore doun
With hende Nicholas and Alsoun

They tolden every man that he was wood,
He was agast so of Nowelis flood

Thurgh fantasie, that of his vanytee 3835
He hadde ybought hym knedyng tubbes
thre,

And hadde hem hanged in the roof above,
And that he preyed hem, for Goddes love,
To sitten in the roof, par compaignye

The folk gan laughen at his fantasye, 3840
Into the roof they kiken and they cape,
And turned al his harm unto a jape

For what so that this carpenter answerde,
It was for nocht, no man his reson herde With othes grete he was so sworn
adoun 3845

That he was holde wood in al the toun, For every clerk anonright heeld with oother

They seyde, "The man is wood, my leeve
brother",

And every wight gan laughen at this stryf
Thus swyved was this carpenteris wyf, 3850

For al his keypyng and his jalousey,
And Absolon hath kist hir nether ye,
And Nicholas is scalded in the towte This tale is doon, and God save al the rowte!

Heere endeth the Millere his tale

THE REEVE'S PROLOGUE

The prologe of the Reves Tale

Whan folk hadde laughen at this nyce
 cas 3855
 Of Absolon and hende Nicholas, Diverse folk diversely they seyde, But for the moore part they loughed and pleyde
 Ne at this tale I saugh no man hym greve,
 But it were onoly Osewold the Reve 3860
 By cause he was of carpenteris craft,
 A litel ire is in his herte ylaft,
 He gan to grucche, and blamed it a lite
 "So theek," quod he, "ful wel koude I yow quite
 With bleryng of a proud milleres ye, 3865
 If that me liste speke of rbaudye
 But ik am oold, me list not pley for age, Gras tyme is doon, my fodder is now forage,
 This white top writeth myne olde yeris, Myn herte is also mowled as myne heris, 3870
 But if I fare as dooth an open-ers
 That ilke fruyt is ever lenger the wers, Til it be roten in mullok or in stree
 We olde men, I drede, so fare we Til we be roten, kan we nat be rype, 3875
 We hoppen alwey whil the world wol pype
 For in oure wyl ther stiketh evere a nayl,
 To have an hoor heed and a grene tayl, As hath a leek, for thogh oure myght be
 goon,
 Oure wyl desureth folke evere in oon 3880 For whan we may nat doon, than wol we
 speke,
 Yet in oure asschen olde is fyr yreke Foure gleedes han we, which I shal
 devyse, —
 Avauntynge, lying, anger, covetise,
 These foure sparkles longen unto eelde 3885 Oure olde lemes mowe wel been unweelde,
 But wyl ne shal nat failen, that is sooth
 And yet ik have alwey a coltes tooth,

As many a yeer as it is passed henne Syn that my tappe of lif bigan to renne 3890
 For sikerly, whan I was bore, anon Deeth drough the tappe of lyf and leet it
 gon,
 And ever sithe hath so the tappe yronne Til that almost al empty is the tonne
 The stream of lyf now droppeth on the chymbe 3895
 The sely tonge may wel ryngge and chymbe
 Of wrecchednesse that passed is ful voore,
 With olde folk, save dotage, is namoore!" Whan that oure Hoost hadde herd this sermonyng,
 He gan to speke as lordly as a kyng 3900
 He seide, "What amounteth al this writ?
 What shul we speke alday of hooly writ?
 The devel made a reve for to preche,
 Or of a soutere a shipman or a leche Sey forth thy tale, and tarie nat the tyme 3905
 Lo Depeford! and it is half-wey pryme Lo Grenewych, ther many a shrewe is inne!
 It were al tyme thy tale to bigynne"
 "Now, sires," quod this Osewold the Reve,
 "I pray yow alle that ye nat yow greve, 3910
 Thogh I answer, and somdeel sette his howve,
 For leveful is with force force of-showve
 This dronke Millere hath ytoold us heer
 How that bigyled was a carpenteer, Peraventure in scorn, for I am oon 3915 And, by youre leve, I shal hym quite anoon,
 Right in his cherles termes wol I speke
 I pray to God his nekke mote to-breke,
 He kan wel in myn eye seen a stalke,
 But in his owene he kan nat seen a balke 3920

THE REEVE'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Reves Tale

At Trumpyngtoun, nat fer fro Cantebrigge,
 Ther gooth a brook, and over that a brigge, Upon the whiche brook ther stant a melle,
 And this is verray sooth that I yow telle A millere was ther dwellynge many a
 day 3225
 As any pecok he was proud and gay Pipen he koude and fische, and nettes beete,
 And turne coppes, and wel wrastle and sheete,
 Ay by his belt he baar a long panade,
 And of a swerd ful trenchant was the blade 3930
 A joly poppere baar he in his pouche, Ther was no man, for peril, dorste hym touche
 A Sheffield thwitel baar he in his hose Round was his face, and camus was his nose,
 As piled as an ape was his skulle 3935
 He was a market-betere atte fulle Ther dorste no wight hand upon hym legge,
 That he ne swoor he sholde anon abegge
 A thief he was for sothe of corn and mele,
 And that a sly, and usaunt for to stele 3940
 His name was hoothe deynous Symkyn
 A wyf he hadde, ycomen of noble kyn,
 The person of the toun hir fader was With hire he yaf ful many a panne of bras, For that Symkyn sholde in his blood allye 3945
 She was yfostred in a nonnerye,
 For Symkyn wolde no wyf, as he sayde,
 But she were wel ynonrissed and a mayde,
 To saven his estaat of yomanrye And she was proud, and peert as is a pye 3950
 A ful fair sighte was it upon hem two,
 On halydayes biforn hire wolde he go
 With his typet bounden aboute his heed,
 And she cam after in a gyte of reed,
 And Symkyn hadde hosen of the same 3955 Ther dorste no wight clepen hire but
 "dame,"

Was noon so hardy that wente by the weye
 That with hire dorste rage or ones pleye,
 But if he wolde be slayn of Symkyn 3939
 With panade, or with knyf, or boidekyn For jalous folk ben perilous everemo, Algate they wolde hire wyves wenden so
 And eek, for she was somdel smoterlich,
 She was as digne as water in a dach,
 And ful of hoker and of bisemare 3965
 Hir thoughte that a lady sholde hire spare, What for hire kynrede and hir nortelrie
 That she hadde lerned in the nonnerie A doghter hadde they bitwixe hem two Of twenty yeer, withouten any mo, 3970 Savynge a child that was of half yeer age,
 In cradel it lay and was a propre page This wenche thikke and wel ygrowen was,
 With kamus nose, and eyen greye as glas,
 With buttokes brode, and brestes rounde and hye, 3975
 But right fair was hire heer, I wol nat lye
 This person of the toun, for she was fear,
 In purpos was to maken hire his heir, Bothe of his catel and his mesuage,
 And straunge he made it of hir mariage
 His purpos was for to bastowe hire hye 3981
 Into som worthy blood of auncetrye, For hooly churches good moot been de-spended
 On hooly churches blood, that is descended Therefore he wolde his hooly blood honoure, 3985
 Though that he hooly churche sholde de-voure Greet sokene hath this millere, out of
 doute,
 With whete and malt of al the land aboute,
 And nameliche ther was a greet collegge Men clepen the Soler Halle at Cantebregge, 3990
 Ther was hir whete and eek hir malt ygrowen
 And on a day it happed, in a stounde, Sik lay the maunciple on a maladye, Men wenden wisly that he sholde dye For which this millere stal bothe mele and corn 3995

An hundred tyme moore than biforn,
 For therbiforn he stal but curteisly,
 But now he was a theef outrageously,
 For which the wardeyn chidde and made
 fare

But therof sette the millere nat a tare, 4000
 He craketh boost, and swoor it was nat so Thanne were ther yonge povre scolers
 two,

That dwelten in this halle, of which I seye Testif they were, and lusty for to pleye, And, oonly for hire myrthe and rev-elrye, 4005

Upon the wardeyn bisly they crye
 To yeve hem leve, but a litel stounde, To goon to mille and seen hir corn ygrounde,

And hardly they dorste leye hir nekke
 The millere sholde not stele hem half a pekke 4010

Of corn by sleighte, ne by force hem reve,
 And at the laste the wardeyn yaf hem
 leve

John highte that oon, and Aleyn highte that oother,

Of o toum were they born, that highte Strother,

Fer in the north, I kan nat telle where 4015
 This Aleyn maketh redy al his gere,

And on an hors the sak he caste anon Forth goth Aleyn the clerk, and also John, With good swerd and with bokeler by hir
 syde

John knew the wey, — hem nedede no
 gyde, — 4020

And at the mille the sak adoun he layth Aleyn spak first, "Al hayl, Symond, y-fayth!

Hou fares thy faire doghter and thy wyf?"

"Aleyn, whyfare," quod Symkyn, "by my lyf! 4024

And John also, how now, what do ye heer?"
 "Symond," quod John, "by God, nede has na peer

Hym boes serve hymself that has na swayn,

Or elles he is a fool, as clerkes sayn Oure manuple, I hope he wil be deed, Swa werkes ay the wanges in his heed, 4030
 And forthy is I come, and eek Alayn, To grynde oure corn and carie it ham
 agayn,

I pray yow spede us heythen that ye may "
 "It shal be doon," quod Symkyn, "by my fay!

What wol ye doon whil that it is in hande?" 4035

"By God, right by the hopur wil I stande, Quod John, "and se how that the corn gas in

Yet saugh I nevere, by my fader kyn, How that the hopur wagges til and fra " Aleyn answerde, "John, and wiltow swa? 4040

Thanne wil I be byneth, by my croun,
 And se how that the mele falles doun
 Into the trough, that sal be my disport For John, y-faith, I may been of youre sort,

I is as ille a millere as ar ye " 4045
 This millere smyled of hur nycetee, And thoghte, "Al this nys doon but for a wyle

They wene that no man may hem bigyle,
 But by my thrift, yet shal I blere hur ye,
 For al the sleighte in hur philosophye 4050
 The moore queynte creakes that they make,
 The moore wol I stele whan I take In stide of flour yet wol I yeve hem bren
 "The gretteste clerkes been noght wasest men," 4054

As whilom to the wolf thus spak the mare
 Of al hir art I counte noght a tare "

Out at the dore he gooth ful pryvely, Whan that he saugh his tyme, softly
 He looketh up and doun til he hath founde
 The clerkes hors, ther as it stood ybounde 4060

Bihynde the mille, under a levesel,
 And to the hors he goth hym faire and wel,
 He strepeth of the brydel right anon

And whan the hors was loos, he gynneth
 gon 4064

Toward the fen, ther wilde mares renne, And forth with "wehec," thurgh thikke and thurgh thenne.

This millere gooth agayn, no word he
 seyde,

But dooth his note, and with the clerkes
 pleyde,

Til that hir corn was faire and weel
 ygrounde

And whan the mele is sakked and ybounde, 4070

This John goth out and fynt his hors away,
And gan to crie "Harrow!" and "Weylaway!"

Oure hors is lorn, Alayn, for Goddes banes, Step on thy feet! Com out, man, al atanes!
Allas, our wardeyn has his palfrey
lorn " 4075

This Aleyn al forgat, bothe mele and corn, Al was out of his mynde his housbondrie
"What, whilk way is he geen?" he gan to
crie

The wyf cam lepyng in ward with a ren She seyde, "Allas! youre hors goth to the fen 4080

With wilde mares, as faste as he may go Unthank come on his hand that boond
hym so,

And he that better sholde han knyght the
reyn!"

"Allas," quod John, "Aleyn, for Cristes
peyne, 4084

Lay down thy swerd, and I wil myn als wa
I is ful wight, God waat, as is a raa, By Goddes herte, he sal nat scape us bathe!

Why nadstow pit the capul in the lathe?
Ihayl! by God, Alayn thou is a fomme!"

These sely clerkes han ful faste yronne 4090

Toward the fen, bothe Aleyn and eek John And whan the millere saugh that they were gon,

He half a bussel of hir flour hath take,
And bad his wyf go knede it in a cake He seyde, "I trowe the clerkes were aferd 4095

Yet kan a millere make a clerkes berd,
For al his art, now lat hem goon hir weye!
Lo, wher they goon! ye, lat the children
pleye

They gete hym nat so lightly, by my croun " 4099

These sely clerkes rennen up and down With "Keep! keep! stand! stand! jossa, warderere,

Ga whistle thou, and I shal kepe hym
heere!"

But shortly, til that it was verray nyght, They koude nat, though they do al hir
myght, 4104

Hir capul cacche, he ran alwey so faste, Til in a dych they caughte hym atte laste

Wery and weet, as beest is in the reyn, Comth sely John, and with him comth Aleyn

"Allas," quod John, "the day that I was born! 4109

Now are we dryve til hethyng and til scorn Oure corn is stoin, men wil us foolles calle, Bathe the wardeyn and oure felawes alle,
And namely the millere, weylaway!"

Thus pleyneth John as he gooth by the
way 4114

Toward the mille, and Bayard in his hond
The millere sittyng by the fyr he fond,
For it was nyght, and forther myghte they
noght,

But for the love of God they hym bisoght
Of herberwe and of ese, as for hir peny

The millere seyde agayn, "If ther be eny, 4120

Swich as it is, yet shal ye have youre part Myn hous is streit, but ye han lerned art, Ye konne by argumentes make a place
A myle brood of twenty foot of space Lat se now if this place may suffise, 4125 Or make it rowm with speche, as is youre gise "

"Now, Symond," seyde John, "by seint Cutberd,

Ay is thou myrie, and this is faire answerd
I have herd seyde, 'man sal taa of twa
thynges

Slyk as he fyndes, or taa slyk as he brynges ' 4130

But specially I pray thee, hooste deere, Get us som mete and drynke, and make us
cheere,

And we wil payen trewely atte fulle With empty hand men may na haukes tulle, 4134

Loo, heere oure silver, redy for to spende "

This millere into toun his doghter sende
For ale and breed, and rosted hem a goos,
And boond hire hors, it sholde namoore go loos,

And in his owene chambre hem made a bed,
With sheetes and with chalons faire yspred, 4140

Noght from his owene bed ten foot or twelve

His doghter hadde a bed, al by herselfe, Right in the same chambre by and by It myghte be no bet, and cause why?

Ther was no roumer herberwe in the
place 4145

They soupen and they speke, hem to solace,

And drynken evere strong ale atte beste Aboute mydnyght wente they to reste

Wel hath this millere vernysshed his
heed, 4149

Ful pale he was for dronken, and nat reed
He yexeth, and he speketh thurgh the nose
As he were on the quakke, or on the pose To bedde he goth, and with hym goth his
wyf

As any jay she light was and jolyf,
So was hur joly whistle wel ywet 4155

The cradel at hur beddes feet is set,
To rokken, and to yeve the child to sowke And whan that dronken al was in the crowke,

To bedde wente the doghter right anon,
To bedde goth Aleyn and also John, 4160
Ther nas na moore, — hem nedede no dwale

This millere hath so wisely bibbed ale
That as an hors he snorteth in his sleep, Ne of his tayl bihynde he took no keep His wyf barhym a burdon, a fulstrong, 4165 Men myghte hir rowtyng heere two furlong,

The wenche rowteth eek, par compaignye
Aleyn the clerk, that herde this melodye, He poked John, and seyde, "Slepestow?
Herdestow evere slyk a sang er now? 4170
Lo, swilk a complyn is ymel hem alle,
A wilde fyr upon thair bodyes falle!
Wha herked evere slyk a ferly thyng?
Ye, they sal have the flour of il endyng This lange nyght ther tydes me na
reste, 4175

But yet, nafors, al sal be for the beste For, John," seyde he, "als evere moot I
thryve,

If that I may, yon wenche wil I swyve Som esement has lawe yshapen us,
For, John, ther is a lawe that says thus, 4180
That gif a man in a point be agreed,
That in another he sal be releved Oure corn is stohn, sothly, it is na nay,
And we han had an il fit al thus day,
And syn I sal have neen amendement 4185
Agayn my los, I will have esement
By Goddes sale, it sal neen other bee!"

This John answerde, "Alayn, avyse
thee!"

The millere is a perilous man," he seyde,
"And gif that he out of his sleep abreyde, 4190

He myghte doon us bathe a vileynye" Aleyn answerde, "I counte him nat a flye"

And up he rist, and by the wenche he crepte

This wenche lay uprighte, and faste slepte, Til he so ny was, er she myghte espie, 4195
That it had been to late for to crie,
And shortly for to seyn, they were aton Now pley, Aleyn, for I wol speke of
John

This John lith stille a furlong wey or two,
And to hymself he maketh routhe and
wo 4200

"Allas!" quod he, "this is a wikked jape, Now may I seyn that I is but an ape Yet has my felawe somewhat for his
harm,

He has the millers doghter in his arm
He aunted hym, and has his nedes sped, 4205

And I lye as a draf-sak in my bed,
And when this jape is tald another day,
I sal been halde a daf, a cokenay!
I wil arise and aunte it, by my fayth!
'Unhardy is unseely,' thus men savth" 4210
And up he roos, and softly he wente Unto the cradel, and in his hand it hente,
And baar it softe unto his beddes feet

Soone after this the wyf hir rowtyng leet, 4214

And gan awake, and wente hire out to pisse,
And cam agayn, and gan hur cradel mysse,
And groped heer and ther, but she foonde
noon

"Allas!" quod she, "I hadde almost mys-
goon,

I hadde almost goon to the clerkes bed Ey, benedicite! thanne hadde I foule ysped" 4220

And forth she gooth til she the cradel fonde
She gropeth alwey forther with hur hond, And foonde the bed, and thoghte nocht but good,

By cause that the cradel by it stood, 4224
And nyste wher she was, for it was derk,
But faire and wel she creep in to the clerk,

And lith ful stille, and wolde han caught a sleep
 Withinne a while this John the clerk up leep,
 And on this goode wyf he leith on soore So myrre a fit ne hadde she nat ful yooore, 4230
 He priketh harde and depe as he were mad
 This joly lyf han thise two clerkes lad Til that the thridde cok bigan to synge Aleyn wax wery in the dawenyng, 4234
 For he had swonken al the longe nyght, And seyde, "Fare weel, Malyne, sweete
 wight!
 The day is come, I may no lenger byde,
 But everemo, wher so I go or ryde,
 I is thyn awen clerk, swa have I seel!"
 "Now, deere lemman," quod she, "go, fareweel! 4240
 But er thow go, o thyng I wol thee telle Whan that thou wendest homward by the melle,
 Right at the entree of the dore bihynde Thou shalt a cake of half a busshel fynde
 That was ymaked of thyn owene mele, 4245
 Which that I heelp my sire for to stele And, goode lemman, God thee save and kepe!"
 And with that word almoost she gan to wepe Aleyn up rist, and thoughte, "Er that it dawe,
 I wol go crepen in by my felawe", 4250
 And fond the cradel with his hand anon
 "By God," thoughte he, "al wrang I have mysgon
 Myn heed is toty of my swynk to-nyght,
 That makes me that I ga nat aright 4254
 I woot wel by the cradel I have mysgo, Heere lith the millere and his wyf also "
 And forth he goth, a twenty devel way, Unto the bed ther as the millere lay He wende have copen by the felawe John,
 And by the millere in he creep anon, 4260 And caughte hym by the nekke, and softe he spak
 He seyde, "Thou John, thou swynes-heed, awak,
 For Cristes saule, and heer a noble game
 For by that lord that called is seint Jame,
 As I have thres in this shorte nyght 4265 Swyved the milleres doghter bolt upright,

Whil thow hast, as a coward, been agast "
 "Ye, false harlot," quod the millere,
 "hast?
 A, false traitour! false clerk!" quod he,
 Thow shalt be deed, by Goddes dignitee!
 Who dorste be so boold to disparage 4271
 My doghter, that is come of swich lynage? "
 And by the throte-bolle he caughte Alayn,
 And he hente hym despitously agayn,
 And on the nose he smoot hym with his fest 4275
 Doun ran the bloody stream upon his brest, And in the floor, with nose and mouth to-broke,
 They walwe as doon two pigges in a poke,
 And up they goon, and doun agayn anon,
 Til that the millere sporned at a stoon, 4280
 And doun he fil bakward upon his wyf,
 That wiste no thyng of this nyce stryf,
 For she was falle aslepe a lite wight With John the clerk, that waked hadde al
 nyght, 4284
 And with the fal out of hir sleep she breyde "Help! hooly croys of Bromeholm," she
 seyde,
In manus tuas! Lord, to thee I calle!
 Awak, Symond! the feend is on me falle Myn herte is broken, help! I nam but deed!
 Ther lyth oon upon my wombe and on myn heed 4290
 Help, Symkyn, for the false clerkes fighte!" This John stirte up as faste as ever he
 myghte,
 And graspeþ by the walles to and fro,
 To fynde a staf, and she stirte up also,
 And knew the estres bet than dide this
 John, 4295
 And by the wal a staf she foonð anon,
 And saugh a litel shymeryng of a light,
 For at an hole in shoon the moone bright;
 And by that light she saugh hem bothe
 two,
 But sikerly she nyste who was who, 4300
 But as she saugh a whit thyng in hur ye
 And whan she gan this white thyng espye, She wende the clerk hadde wered a volu-peer,
 And with the staf she drow ay neer and neer, 4304
 And wende han hit this Aleyn at the fulle,
 And smoot the millere on the pyled skulle,

That doun he gooth, and cride, "Harrow!
I dye!"
This clerkes beete hym weel and lete hym
lye,
And greythen hem, and tooke hir hors
anon,
And eek hire mele, and on hir wey they
gon 4310
And at the mille yet they tooke hir cake
Of half a bussel flour, ful wel ybake
Thus is the proude millere wel ybete, And hath ylost the gryndynge of the whete,
And payed for the soper everdeel 4315

Of Aleyn and of John, that bette hym
weel
His wyf is swyved, and his doghter als Lo, swich it is a millere to be fals!
And therefore thus proverbe is seyde ful sooth,
"Hym thar nat wene wel that yvele dooth", 4320
A gylour shal hymself bigyled be And God, that sitteth heighe in mages-tee,
Save al this compaignye, grete and smale!
Thus have I quyt the Millere in my
tale 4324

Heere is ended the Reves tale

THE COOK'S PROLOGUE

The prologe of the Cokes Tale

The Cook of Londoun, whil the Reve
spak,
For joye him thoughte he clawed hum on the bak
"Ha! ha!" quod he, "for Cristes passion, This millere hadde a sharp conclusion Upon his argument of herbergage!
Wel seyde Salomon in his langage, 4330
'Ne bryng nat every man into thyn hous',
For herberwyng by nyghte is perilous Wel oghte a man avysed for to be Whom that he broghte into his pryvete I pray to God, so yeve me sorwe and care, 4335
If evere, sitthe I highte Hogge of Ware, Herde I a millere bettre yset a-werk
He hadde a jape of malice in the derk
But God forbede that we stynte heere, And therefore, if ye vouche-sauf to
heere 4340
A tale of me, that am a povre man,
I wol yow telle, as wel as evere I kan,
A litel jape that fil in oure citee" Oure Hoost answerde and seide, "I graunte it thee 4344
Now telle on, Roger, looke that it be good,
For many a pastee hastow laten blood,

And many a Jakke of Doveze hastow soold That hath been twies hoot and twies coold
Of many a pilgrym hastow Cristes curs, For of thy percely yet they fare the wors, 4350
That they han eten with thy stubbel goos,
For in thy shoppe is many a fyve loos
Now telle on, gentil Roger by thy name But yet I pray thee, be nat wroth for
game,
A man may seye ful sooth in game and pley" 4355
"Thou seist ful sooth," quod Roger, "by my fey!
But 'sooth pley, quaad pley,' as the Flemyng seith
And therefore, Herry Bailly, by thy feith, Be thou nat wrooth, er we departen heer, Though that my tale be of an hostileer 4360
But natheless I wol nat telle it yit,
But er we parte, ywis, thou shalt be quit"
And therwithal he lough and made
cheere, 4363
And seyde his tale, as ye shul after heere.

THE COOK'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Cookes Tale

A prentys whilom dwelled in oure citee,
 And of a craft of vitalliers was hee Gaillard he was as goldfynch in the shawe, Broun as a berye, a propre short felawe,
 With lokkes blake, ykembd ful fetisly Dauncen he koude so wel and jolly 4370
 That he was cleped Perkyn Revelour
 He was as ful of love and paramour
 As is the hyve ful of hony sweete Wel was the wenche with hym myghte meete 4374
 At every bridale wolde he synge and hoppe,
 He loved bet the taverne than the shoppe
 For whan ther any ridyng was in Chepe, Out of the shoppe thider wolde he lepe — Til that he hadde al the sighte yseyne, And daunced wel, he wolde nat come ayeyn — 4380
 And gadered hym a meynee of his sort To hoppe and synge and maken swich disport,
 And ther they setten stevene for to meete,
 To playen at the dys in swich a streete
 For in the toun nas ther no prentys 4385
 That fairer koude caste a paire of dys Than Perkyn koude, and therto he was free
 Of his dispense, in place of pryvetee
 That fond his maister wel in his chaffare, For often tyme he found his box ful bare For sikerly a prentys revelour 4391
 That haunteth dys, riot, or paramour,
 His maister shal it in his shoppe abyve,

Al have he no part of the mynstralcye
 For thefte and riot, they been convertable, Al konne he playe on gyterne or ribible Revel and trouthe, as in a lowe degree, They been ful wrothe al day, as men may
 see

This joly prentys with his maister bood,
 Til he were ny out of his prentishood, 4400
 Al were he snybbed bothe erly and late,
 And somtyme lad with revel to Newegate
 But atte laste his maister hym bithoghte, Upon a day, whan he his papir soghte,
 Of a proverbe that seith thus same word,
 "Wel bet is roten appul out of hoord 4406 Than that it rotte al the remenaunt"
 So fareth it by a riotous servaunt,
 It is ful lasse harm to lete hym pace, Than he shende alle the servantz in the
 place 4410
 Therefore his maister yaf hym acqurtance, And bad hym go, with sorwe and with meschance!
 And thus this joly prentys hadde his leve
 Now lat hym rote al the nyght or leve And for ther is no theef withoute a lowke, 4415
 That helpeth hym to wasten and to sowke
 Of that he brybe kan or borwe may,
 Anon he sente his bed and his array Unto a compeer of his owene sort, 4419
 That lovede dys, and revel, and disport,
 And hadde a wyf that heeld for contenance
 A shoppe, and swyved for hir sustenance

FRAGMENT II (GROUP B)

INTRODUCTION TO THE MAN OF LAW'S TALE

The wordes of the Hooste to the compaignye

OURE HOOSTE saugh wel that the brighte
 sonne
 The ark of his artificial day hath ronne The ferthe part, and half an houre and
 moore,
 And though he were nat depe ystert in loore,
 He wiste it was the eightetethe day 5
 Of Aprill, that is messenger to May,
 And saugh wel that the shadwe of every
 tree
 Was as in lengthe the same quantitee
 That was the body erect that caused it And therefore by the shadwe he took his wit 10
 That Phebus, which that shoon so clere and brighte,
 Degrees was fyve and fourty clombe on highte,
 And for that day, as in that latitude,
 It was ten of the klokke, he gan conclude,
 And sodeynly he plighte his hors aboute
 "Lordynges," quod he, "I warne yow, al this route, 18
 The fourthe party of this day is gon
 Now, for the love of God and of Seint John, Leseth no tyme, as ferforth as ye may Lordynges, the tyme wasteth nyght and
 day, 20
 And steleth from us, what pryvely slepynge,
 And what thurgh nechgence in oure wak-
 ynge,
 As dooth the stream that turneth nevere
 agayn,
 Descendynge fro the montaigne into playn Wel kan Senec and many a philosopre 25
 Bwailen tyme moore than gold in cofre, For "los of catel may recovered be,
 But los of tyme shendeth us," quod he
 It wol nat come agayn, withouten drede, Namooore than wole Malkynes mayden-
 hede, 30
 Whan she hath lost it in hir wantownesse

Lat us nat mowlen thus in ydelnesse "Sire Man of Lawe," quod he, "so have ye blis,
 Telle us a tale anon, as forward is Ye been submytted, thurgh youre free
 assent, 35
 To stonden in this cas at my juggement Acquteth yow now of youre biheeste, Thanne have ye do youre devour atte leeste"
 "Hooste," quod he, "depardreux, ich assente,
 To breke forward is nat myn entente 40
 Biheste is dette, and I wole holde fayn Al my biheste, I kan no bettre syn For swich lawe as a man yeveth another
 wight,
 He sholde hymselfen usen it, by right, Thus wole oure text But nathelees, certeyn, 45
 I kan rght now no thrifty tale seyn
 That Chaucer, though he kan but lewedly On metres and on rymyng craftily, Hath seyde hem in swich Englissh as he kan
 Of olde tyme, as knoweth many a man, 50 And if he have noght seyde hem, leve
 brother,
 In o book, he hath seyde hem in another For he hath toold of lovers up and doun Mo than Ovide made of mencion
 In his Epistles, that been ful olde 55 What sholde I tellen hem, syn they been
 tolde?
 In youthe he made of Ceys and Alcione,
 And sitthen hath he spoken of everichone,
 These noble wyves and these lovers eke Whoso that wole his large volume seke, Cleped the Sentes Legende of Cupide, 61
 Ther may he seen the large woundes wyde
 Of Lucesse, and of Babilan Tesbee,
 The swerd of Dido for the false Enee,
 The tree of Phillis for hire Demophon, 65
 The plante of Dianre and of Hermyon, Of Adriane, and of Isiphilee,

The bareyne yle stondynge in the see,
 The dreynte Leandre for his Erro,
 The teerns of Eleyne, and eek the wo 70
 Of Brixseyde, and of the, Ladomya,
 The crueltee of the, queene Medea, Thy ltel children hangynge by the hals,
 For thy Jason, that was of love so fals!
 O Ypermystra, Penelopee, Alceste, 75 Youre wifhod he comendeth with the
 beste!

But certainly no word ne writeth he
 Of thilke wikke ensample of Canacee, That loved hir owene brother synfully, (Of swiche cursed stories I sey fy!) 80
 Or ellis of Tyro Appollonius,

How that the cursed kyng Antiochus Brafte his doghter of hir maydenhede,
 That is so horrible a tale for to rede, Whan he hir threw upon the pavement 85
 And therefore he, of ful avyusement, Nolde nevere write in none of his sermons
 Of swiche unkynde abhomynacions, Ne I wol noon reherce, if that I may

But of my tale how shal I doon this
 day? 90

Me were looth be likned, doutelees,
 To Muses that men clepe Pierdes — Methamorphosios woot what I mene,
 But nathelees, I recche noght a bene Though I come after hym with hawe-bake 95

I speke in prose, and lat him rymes make"
 And with that word he, with a sobre
 cheere,

Bigan his tale, as ye shal after heere

The prologe of the Mannes Tale of Lawe

O hateful harm, condicion of poverté!
 With thurst, with coold, with hunger so confoundid! 100

To asken help thee shameth in thyn herte, If thou noon aske, with nede artow so woundid

That verray nede unwrappeth al thy wounde hud!

Maugree thyn heed, thou most for indigence
 Or stele, or begge, or borwe thy despence!

Thow blamest Crist, and seist ful bitterly,
 He mysdeparteth richesse temporal, 107 Thy neighebor thou wytest synfully, And seist thou hast to lite, and he hath al

"Parfay," seistow, "somtyme he rekene
 shal, 110
 Whan that his tayl shal brennen in the gleede,
 For he noght helpeth needfulle in hur
 neede"

Herkne what is the sentence of the wise
 "Bet is to dyen than have indigence",
 "Thy selve neighebor wol thee despise"
 If thou be povre, farwel thy reverence! 116 Yet of the wise man take this sentence
 "Alle the dayes of povre men been wikke" Be war, therefore, er thou come to that prikke!

If thou be povre, thy brother hateth thee,
 And alle thy freendes fleen from thee,
 allas! 121

O riche marchauntz, ful of wele been yee,

O noble, o prudent folk, as in this cas!
 Youre bagges been nat fild with ambes as,

But with sys cynk, that renneth for youre
 chaunce, 125
 At Cristemasse myrie may ye daunce!

Ye seken lond and see for yowre wyn-
 nynges,

As wise folk ye knowen al th'estaat
 Of regnes, ye been fadres of tidynge
 And tales, bothe of pees and of debaat 130
 I were right now of tales desolaat, Nere that a marchant, goon is many a yeere,
 Me taughte a tale, which that ye shal
 heere

THE MAN OF LAW'S TALE

Heere begynneth the Man of Lawe his tale

In Surrye whilom dwelte a compaignye Of chapmen riche, and therto sadde and
trewe, 135

That wyde-where senten hir spicerye, Clothes of gold, and satyns riche of hewe Hir chaffare was so thrifty and so newe
That every wight hath deyntee to chaffare With hem, and eek to sellen hem hire ware 140

Now fil it that the maistres of that sort Han shapen hem to Rome for to wende, Were it for chapmanhod or for disport, Noon oother message wolde they thider
sende,

But comen hemself to Rome, this is the
ende, 145
And in swich place as thoughte hem avantage

For hire entente, they take hir herbergage

Sojourned han these marchantz in that toun

A certain tyme, as fil to hire plesance
And so bufel that th'excellent renoun 150
Of the emperoures doghter, dame Custance, Reported was, with every circumstance, Unto these Surryen marchantz in swich
wyse,
Fro day to day, as I shal yow devyse

This was the commune voys of every
man 155

"Oure Emperour of Rome — God hym
see! —

A doghter hath that, syn the world bigan,
To rekene as wel hir goodnesse as beautee, Nas nevere swich another as is shee
I prey to God in honour hire susteene, 160 And wolde she were of al Europe the
queene

"In hire is heigh beautee, withoute pride, Yowthe, withoute grenehede or folye,
To alle hire werkes vertu is hir gyde, Humbleesse hath slayn in hire al tirannye
She is mirour of alle curteisye, 168

Hir herte is verray chambre of hoolynesse, Hir hand, ministre of fredam for almesse "

And al this voys was sooth, as God is trewe
But now to purpos lat us turne agayn 170
These marchantz han doon fraught hir shippes newe,

And whan they han this blisful mayden
sayn,

Hoom to Surrye been they went ful fayn,
And doon hir nedes as they han doon
yoore,
And lyven in wele, I kan sey yow namoore

Now fil it that these marchantz stode in
grace 176

Of hym that was the Sowdan of Surrye, For whan they cam from any strange
place,

He wolde, of his benigne curteisye, Make hem good chiere, and bisily es-pye 180

Tidynges of sondry regnes, for to leere The wondres that they myghte seen or
heere

Amonges othere thynges, specially,
These marchantz han hym toold of dame
Custance

So greet noblesse in earnest, seriously, 185
That this Sowdan hath caught so greet plesance

To han hir figure in his remembrance,
That al his lust and al his busy cure
Was for to love hire while his lyf may dure.

Paraventure in thilke large book 190 Which that men clepe the hevene ywriten
was

With sterres, whan that he his birthe took,
That he for love sholde han his deeth, allas!
For in the sterres, clerer than is glas, Is writen, God woot, whoso koude it rede,
The deeth of every man, withouten drede

In sterres, many a wynter therbiforn, 197
Was writen the deeth of Ector, Achilles,

Of Pompei, Julius, er they were born,
The strif of Thebes, and of Ercules, 200
Of Sampson, Turnus, and of Socrates
The death, but mennes wittes ben so dulle
That no wight kan wel rede it atte fulle

This Sowdan for his privee conseil sente,
And, shortly of this matiere for to pace, 205
He hath to hem declared his entente, And seyde hem, certein, but he myghte have grace

To han Custance withinne a litel space,
He nas but deed, and charged hem in hye
To shapen for his lyf som remedye 210

Diverse men diverse thynges seyden,
They argumenten, casten up and down,
Many a subtil resoun forth they leyden,
They speken of magyk and abusoun
But finally, as in conclusoun, 215
They kan nat seen in that noon advantage, Ne in noon oother wey, save marriage

Thanne sawe they themne swich difficultee 218

By wey of reson, for to speke al playn,
By cause that ther was swich diversitee Bitwene hir bothe lawes, that they sayn They trowe, "that no Cristen prince wolde
fayn

Wedden his child under oure lawe sweete That us was taught by Mahoun, oure prophete " 224

And he answerde, "Rather than I lese Custance, I wol be cristned, doutelees
I moot been hres, I may noon oother chese
I prey yow hoold youre argumentz in pees, Saveth my lyf, and beth nocht recchelees
To geten hire that hath my lyf in cure, 230
For in this wo I may nat longe endure "

What nedeth gretter dilatacioun?
I seye, by tretys and embassadrie,
And by the popes mediacioun,
And al the chirche, and al the chivalrie, 235
That in destruccioun of mawmettrie,
And in increes of Cristes lawe deere,
They been acorded, so as ye shal heere

How that the sowdan and his baronage
And alle his liges sholde ycristned be, 240

And he shal han Custance in marriage,
And certein gold, I noot what quanttee,
And heer-to founden sufficient suretee This same accord was sworn on eyther
syde,
Now, faire Custance, almyghty God thee
gyde!

Now wolde som men waten, as I gesse,
That I sholde tellen al the purveiance That th'emperour, of his grete noblesse, Hath shapen for his doghter, dame Cus-tance

Wel may men knowen that so greet ordinance 250

May no man tellen in a litel clause
As was arrayed for so heigh a cause

Bisshopes been shapen with hire for to
wende,

Lordes, ladies, knyghtes of renoun,
And oother folk ynowe, this is th'ende,
And notified is thurghout the toun 256
That every wight, with greet devocoun, Sholde preyen Crist that he this marriage Receyve in gree, and spede this viage

The day is comen of hir departyng, 260
I seye, the woful day fatal is come,
That ther may be no lenger taryng, But forthward they hem dresen, alle and some Custance, that was with sorwe al overcome, 264
Ful pale arst, and dresseth hire to wende;
For wel she seeth ther is noon oother ende.

Allas! what wonder is it thogh she wepte,
That shal be sent to strange nacioun 268
Ero freendes that so tendrely hire kepte,
And to be bounden under subjeccioun Of oon, she knoweth nat his condecioun?
Housbondes been alle goode, and han ben
yoore,
That known wyves, I dar sey yow na
moore

"Fader," she seyde, "thy wrecched child
Custance, 274

Thy yonge doghter fostred up so softe,
And ye, my mooder, my soverayn plesance Over alle thyng, out-taken Crist ou-lofte,

Custance youre child hire recomandeth ofte

Unto youre grace, for I shal to Surreye, Ne shal I nevere seen yow moore with ye

"Allas! unto the Barbre nacoun 281
I moste anoon, syn that it is youre wille,
But Crist, that starf for our redempcioun
So yeve me grace his heestes to fulfill!
I, wrecche womman, no fors though I
spille! 285

Wommen are born to thraldom and penance,
And to been under mannes governance "

I trowe at Troye, whan Pirrus brak the
wal,

Or Ilion brende, at Thebes the citee, N'at Rome, for the harm thurgh Hanybal That Romayns hath venquysshed tymes
thre, 291

Nas herd swich tendre wepyng for pitee
As in the chambre was for hire departyng, But forth she moot, wher-so she wepe or syng 294

O firste moevyng! crueel firmament,
With thy diurnal swaigh that crowdest ay
And hurlest al from est til occident That naturelly wolde holde another way, Thy crowdyng set the hevene in swich array

At the bigynnyng of this fiers viage, 300
That crueel Mars hath slayn this mariage

Infortunat ascendent tortuous,
Of which the lord is helpeles falle, allas,
Out of his angle into the derkeste hous!
O Mars, o atazir, as in this cas! 305

O fieble moone, unhappy been thy paas!
Thou knytttest thee ther thou art nat receyved,

Ther thou were weel, fro thennes artow weyved

Imprudent emperour of Rome, allas!
Was ther no philosopre in al thy toun?
Is no tyme bet than oother in swich cas?
Of viage is ther noon eleccioun, 312
Namely to folk of heigh condicioun?
Noght whan a roote is of a burthe yknowe?
Allas, we been to lewed or to slowe! 315

To shippe is brought this woful faire mayde

Solempnely, with every circumstance
"Now Jhesu Crist be with yow alle!" she
sayde,

Ther nys n'noore, but "Farewel, faire
Custance!"

She peyneth hire to make good conten-
ance, 320

And forth I lete hire saille in this manere,
And turne I wole agayn to my matere

The mooder of the sowdan, welles of vices, Espied hath hir sones pley n entente,
How he wol lete his olde sacrifices, 325
And right anon she for hir conseil sente, And they been come to knowe what she
mente

And whan assembled was this folk in-feere, She sette hire doun, and seyde as ye shal
heere

"Loides" quod she, "ye knowen everi-chon, 330

How that my sone in point is for to lete
The hooly lawes of oure Alkaron, Yeven by Goddes message Makomete
But oon avow to grete God I heete,
The lyf shal rather out of my body sterte Or Makometes lawe out of myn herte! 336

"What sholde us tyden of this newe lawe
But thraldom to oure bodies and penance,
And afterward in helle to be drawe,
For we reneyed Mahoun oure creance? 340
But, lordes, wol ye maken assurance,
As I shal seyn, assentyng to my loore,
And I shal make us sauf for everemoore?"

They sworn and assenten, every man,
To lyve with hire and dyo, and by hire
stonde, 345
And everich, in the beste wise he kan,
To strengthen hire shal alle his frendes fonde,

And she hath this emprise ytake on honde,
Which ye shal heren that I shal devyse,
And to hem alle she spak right in thus wyse

"We shul first feyne us cristendom to take, — 351
Coold water shal nat greve us but a litel

And I shal swich a feeste and revel make That, as I trowe, I shal the sowdan quite For thogh his wyf be cristned never so
white, 355
She shal have nede to wasshe away the
rede, Thogh she a font-ful water with hire lede "

O sowdanesse, roote of inquitee!
Virago, thou Semyrame the secounde!
O serpent under femynnytee, 360
Lak to the serpent depe in helle ybounde!
O feyned womman, al that may confounde Vertu and innocence, thurgh thy malice, Is bred in thee, as nest of every vice!

O Sathan, envious syn thilke day 365
That thou were chased from oure heritage, Wel knowestow to wommen the olde way!
Thou madest Eva brynge us in servage, Thou wolt fordoon this Cristen marriage Thyn instrument so, weylaway the while!
Makestow of wommen, whan thou wolt bigle 371

This Sowdanesse, whom I thus blame and warye,

Leet prively hire conseil goon hire way
What sholde I in this tale lenger tarye?
She rydeth to the sowdan on a day, 375
And seyde hym that she wolde reneye hir
lay,
And cristendom of preestes handes fonge, Repentyng hire she hethen was so longe,

Bisechyng hym to doon hire that honour, That she moste han the Cristen folk to
feeste, — 380

"To plesen hem I wol do my labour " The sowdan seith, "I wol doon at youre heeste",
And knelyng thanketh hire of that re-queste

So glad he was, he nyste what to seye
She kiste hir sone, and hoom she gooth hir
weye 385

Explicit prima pars

Sequitur pars secunda

Arryved been this Cristen folk to londe
In Surrye, with a greet solempne route,

And hastifliche this sowdan sente his sonde,
First to his mooder, and al the regne
aboute,
And seyde his wyf was comen, out of
doute, 390
And preyde hire for to ryde agayn the
queene,
The honour of his regne to susteene

Greet was the prees, and riche was th'array Of Surryens and Romayns met yfeere, The mooder of the sowdan, riche and gay, Receyveth hire with also glad a cheere
As any mooder myghte hir doghter deere,
And to the nexte citee ther busyde 398
A softe paas solempnely they ryde

Noght trowe I the triumphe of Julius,
Of which that Lucan maketh swich a boost,
Was roaller ne moore curius 402 Than was th'assemblee of this blisful hoost

But this scorioun, this wikked goost,
The sowdanesse, for al hire flateryng, 405 Caste under this ful mortally to styng

The sowdan comth hymself soone after
this

So roially, that wonder is to telle,
And welcometh hire with alle joye and blis.
And thus in murthe and joye I lete hem
dwelle, 410

The fruyt of this matiere is that I telle Whan tyme cam, men thoughte it for the
beste

That revel stynte, and men goon to hir
reste

The tyme cam, this olde sowdanesse Ordeyned hath this feeste of which I tolde,
And to the feeste Cristen folk hem aresse
In general, ye, bothe yonge and olde 417
Heere may men feeste and roialtee biholde,
And deyntees mo than I kan yow devyse,
But al to deere they boghte it er they ryse.

O sodeyn wo, that evere art successour To worldly blusse, spreynd with bitter-
nesse! 422

The ende of the joye of oure worldly labour!

Wo occupieth the fyn of oure gladnesse Herke this conseil for thy sikernesse 425 Upon thy glade day have in thy mynde
The unwar wo or harm that comth bihynde

For shortly for to tellen, at o word,
The sowdan and the Cristen everichone Been al tohewe and stiked at the bord, 430
But it were only dame Custance allone
This olde sowdanesse, cursed krone, Hath with hir freendes doon this cursed dede,
For she hirself wolde al the contree lede

Ne ther was Surryen noon that was converted, 435
That of the conseil of the sowdan woot,
That he nas al tohewe er he asterted And Custance han they take anon, foot-
hoot,
And in a ship al steerelees, God woot, They han hir set, and bidde hire lerne saille 440
Out of Surrye agaynward to Ytaille

A certain tresor that she thider ladde,
And, sooth to seyn, vitaille greet plentee They han hire yeven, and clothes eek she
hadde,
And forth she sailleth in the salte see 445
O my Custance, ful of bemgnytee, O emperoures yonge doghter deere,
He that is lord of Fortune be thy steere!

She blesseth hire, and with ful pitous voys Unto the croys of Crist thus seyde she 450
"O cleere, o welful auter, hooly croys, Reed of the Lambes blood ful of pitee,
That wessh the world fro the olde inquitee, Me fro the feend and fro his clawes kepe,
That day that I shal drenchen in the depe

Victorious tree, proteccioun of trewe, 455
That only worthy were for to bere
The Kyng of Hevene with his woundes
newe,
The white Lamb, that hurt was with a spere,
Flemere of feendes out of hym and here 460
On which thy lymes feithfully extenden, Me kepe, and yif me myght my lyf t'amen-den "

Yeres and dayes fleet this creature Thurghout the See of Grece unto the Strayte
Of Marrok, as it was hire aventure 465
On many a sory meel now may she bayte, After hir deeth ful often may she wayte, Er that the wilde wawes wol hire dryve Unto the place ther she shal arryve

Men myghten asken why she was nat
slayn 470
Eek at the feeste? who myghte hir body
save?
And I answeere to that demande agayn,
Who saved Danyel in the horrible cave Ther every wight save he, maister and knaue,
Was with the leon frete er he asterte? 475
No wight but God, that he bar in his herte

God liste to shewe his wonderful myracle In hire, for we sholde seen his myghty werkis,
Crist, which that is to every harm triacle,
By certene meenes ofte, as knowen clerkis, Dooth thyng for certain ende that ful derk is 481
To mannes wit, that for oure ignorance Ne konne nocht knowe his prudent pur-veiance

Now sith she was nat at the feeste
yslawe,
Who kepte hire fro the drenchyng in the
see? 485
Who kepte Jonas in the fishes mawe Til he was spouted up at Nynyvee?
Wel may men knowe it was no wight but
he
That kepte peple Ebrayk from hir drench-
yng, 489
With drye feet thurghout the see passyng

Who bad the foure spirites of tempest That power han t'anoyen lond and see, Bothe north and south, and also west and est,
"Anoyeth neither see, ne land, ne tree"?
Soothly, the comandour of that was he 495
That fro the tempest ay thus womman kepte
As wel whan she wook as whan she slepte.

Where myghte this womman mete and drynke have Thre yeer and moore? how lasteth hire vitalle?
Who fedde the Egipcien Marie in the cave, 500
Or in desert? No wight but Crist, sanz faulle Fyve thousand folk it was as greet mervaille
With loves fyve and fisshes two to feede
God sente his foyson at hir grete neede

She dryveth forth into oure occian 505
Thurghout oure wilde see, til atte laste Under an hoold that nempnen I ne kan, Fer in Northhumberlond the wawe hire
caste,
And in the sond hir ship staked so faste
That thennes wolde it noght of al a tyde, The wyl of Crist was that she sholde
abyde

The constable of the castel doun is fare To seen this wrak, and al the ship he soghte, 513
And foond this very womman ful of care,
He foond also the tresor that she broghte
In hir langage mercy she bisoghte, 518
The lyf out of hur body for to twynne, Hire to delvere of wo that she was inne

A maner Latyn corrupt was hir speche,
But algates therby was she understonde The constable, whan hym lyst no lenger
seche, 521
This woful womman broghte he to the londe
She kneleth doun and thanketh Goddes
sonde,
But what she was she wolde no man seye,
For foul ne fair, thogh that she sholde
deye 525

She seyde she was so mazed in the see
That she forgat hir mynde, by hir trouthe
The constable hath of hire so greet pitee, And eek his wyf, that they wepen for
routhe
She was so diligent, withouten slouthe, 530
To serve and plesen everich in that place,
That alle hir loven that looken in hir face

This constable and dame Hermengyld, his wyf,
Were payens, and that contree everywhere,
But Hermengyld loved hire right as hir lyf,
And Custance hath so longe sojourned
there, 536
In orisons, with many a bitter teere, Til Jhesu hath converted thurgh his grace Dame Hermengyld, constablesse of that
place

In al that lond no Cristen dorste route, 540
Alle Cristen folk been fled fro that contree Thurgh payens, that conquereden al
aboute
The plagis of the north, by land and see
To Walys fledde the Cristyanytee Of olde Britons dwellynge in this ile, 545 Ther was hur refut for the meene while

But yet nere Cristene Britons so exiled That ther nere somme that in hir privetee Honoured Crist and hethen folk bigiled, And ny the castel swiche ther dwelten three 550
That oon of hem was blynd and myghte nat see,
But it were with thilke eyen of his mynde With whiche men seen, after that they ben blynde

Bright was the sonne as in that someres
day,
For which the constable and his wyf also
And Custance han ytake the righte way Toward the see a furlong wey or two, 557
To pleyen and to romen to and fro, And in hir walk this blynde man they
mette,
Croked and oold, with eyen faste yshette

"In name of Crist," cride this blinde Britoun, 561
"Dame Hermengyld, yif me my sighte
agayn!"

This lady weex affrayed of the soun, Lest that hir housbonde, shortly for to sayn, Wolde hire for Inesu Cristes love han
slayn, 565
Til Custance made hire boold, and bad hire wirche
The wyl of Crist, as doghter of hus church.

The constable weex abashed of that sight,
And seyde, "What amounteth al this
fare?"
Custance answerde, "Sire, it is Cristes
myght, 570
That helpeth folk out of the feendes snare "
And so ferforth she gan oure lay declare That she the constable, er that it was eve
Converted, and on Crist made hym bileve

This constable was nothyng lord of this
place 575
Of which I speke, ther he Custance fond,
But kepte it strongly many a wyntres
space
Under Alla, kyng of al Northhumbrelond, That was ful wys, and worthy of his
hond
Agayn the Scottes, as men may wel heere,
But turne I wole agayn to my mateere 581

Sathan, that evere us waiteth to bigile, Saugh of Custance al hire perfeccioun, And caste anon how he myghte quite hir
while,
And made a yong knyght that dwelte in that toun 585
Love hire so hote, of foul affeccioun, That verraily hym thoughte he sholde
spille,
But he of hire myghte ones have his wille

He woweth hire, but it avalleth nocht,
She wolde do no synne, by no weye 590
And for despit he compassed in his thoght
To maken hire on shameful deeth to deye
He wayteth whan the constable was aweye,
And pryvely upon a nyght he crepte
In Hermengyldes chambre, whil she slepte

Wery, forwaked in hire orisouns, 596 Slepeth Custance, and Hermengyld also This knyght, thurgh Sathanas tempta-ciouns,
Al softly is to the bed ygo,
And kitte the throte of Hermengyld atwo, And leyde the bloody knyf by dame Cus-
tance, 601
And wente his wey, ther God yeve hym
meschance!

Soone after cometh this constable hoom
agayn,
And eek Alla, that kyng was of that lond,
And saugh his wyf despitously yslayn, 605 For which ful ofte he weep and wroong his
hond,
And in the bed the bloody knyf he fond By Dame Custance Allas! what myghte she seye?
For verray wo hir wit was al aweye

To kyng Alla was toold al this mes chance, 610
And eek the tyme, and where, and in what wise
That in a ship was founden this Custance, As heer-biforn that ye han herd devyse
The kynges herte of pitee gan agrvse, Whan he saugh so benigne a creature 615 Falle in disese and in mysaventure

For as the lomb toward his deeth is broght,
So stant this innocent before the kyng This false knyght, that hath this tresoun wroght,
Berth hire on hond that she hath doon thys thyng 620
But natheless, ther was greet moornyng Among the peple, and seyn they kan nat
gesse
That she had doon so greet a wikkednesse,

For they han seyn hire evere so vertuous,
And lovyng Hermengyld right as hir lyf
Of this baar witnesse everich in that hous, Save he that Hermengyld slow with his knyf 627
This gentil kyng hath caught a greet motyf
Of this witnesse, and thoghte he wolde en-quere
Depper in this, a trouthe for to lere 630

Allas! Custance, thou hast no champion,
Ne fighte kanstow nocht, so weylaway!
But he that starf for our redempcioun, And boond Sathan (and yet lith ther he lay),
So be thy stronge champion this day! 635
For, but if Crist open myracle kithe, Withouten gilt thou shalt be slayn as swithe

She sette hire down on knees, and thus she
sayde,

“Immortal God, that savedest Susanne Fro false blame, and thou, merciful mayde, Marie I meene, doghter to Seint Anne, 641 Bifore whos child angeles syngge Osanne,
If I be giltyes of this felonye,
My socour be, for ellis shal I dye!” 644

Have ye nat seyn somtyme a pale
face,

Among a prees, of hym that hath be lad Toward his deeth, wher as hym gat no
grace,

And swich a colour in his face hath had,
Men myghte knowe his face that was bis-tad,

Amonges alle the faces in that route? 650
So stant Custance, and looketh hire aboute

O queenes, lyvyng in prosperitee, Duchesses, and ye ladyes everichone, Haveth som routhe on hire adversitee!
An emperoures doghter stant allone, 655
She hath no wight to whom to make hir
mone

O blood roial, that stondest in this drede, Fer been thy freendes at thy grete nede!

This Alla kyng hath swich compassioun,
As gentil herte is fulfild of pitee, 660
That from his eyen ran the water down “Now hastily do fecche a book,” quod he,
“And if this knyght wol sweren how that
she

This womman slow, yet wol we us avyse Whom that we wole that shal been oure justise ” 665

A Britoun book, written with Evaungles, Was fet, and on this book he swoor anon
She gilty was, and in the meene whiles
An hand hym smoot upon the nekke-boon,
That douh he fil atones as a stoon, 670
And douh his eyen broste out of his face
In sighte of every body in that place

A voys was herd in general audience, And seyde, “Thou hast desclaundred, giltyelees,
The doghter of hooly churche in heigh presence, 675

Thus hastou doon, and yet hoide I my
pees!”

Of this mervaille agast was al the prees,
As mazed folk they stoden everichone,
For drede of wreche, save Custance allone

Greet was the drede and eek the repentance 680

Of hem that hadden wrong suspecioun
Upon this sely innocent, Custance,
And for this miracle, in conclusioun,
And by Custances mediacioun, The kyng — and many another in that
place — 685
Converted was, thanked be Cristes grace!

This false knyght was slayn for his un-trouthe

By juggement of Alla hastily, And yet Custance hadde of his deeth greet
routhe

And after this Jhesus, of his mercy, 690
Made Alla wedden ful solempnely This hooly mayden, that is so bright and sheene,

And thus hath Crist ymaad Custance a
queene

But who was woful, if I shal nat lye,
Of this weddyng but Donegild, and namo,
The kynges mooder, ful of trannye? 695 Hir thoughte hir cursed herte brast atwo
She wolde noght hir sone had do so, Hir thoughte a despit that he sholde take So strange a creature unto his make 700

Me list nat of the chaf, ne of the stree, Maken so long a tale as of the corn
What sholde I tellen of the roaltee At marriage, or which cours goth biforn,
Who bloweth in a trumpe or in an horn?
The fruyt of every tale is for to seye 705 They ete, and drynke, and daunce, and syngge, and pleye

They goon to bedde, as it was skile and
right,

For thogh that wyves be ful hooly thynges,
They moste take in pacience at nyght 710 Swiche manere necessaries as been plesynges

To folk that han ywedded hem with rynges,

Thanne fil it thus, that to the paryssh
 churche,
 Cristes owene werkes for to wirche,
 This goode wyf went on an halday
 Hir forheed shoon as bright as any day, 3310
 So was it wasshen whan she leet hir werk
 Now was ther of that churche a parissch clerik,
 The which that was ycleped Absolon
 Crul was his heer, and as the gold it shoon,
 And strouted as a fanne large and
 brode, 3315
 Ful streight and evene lay his joly shode
 His rode was reed, his eyen greye as goos
 With Poules wyndow corven on his
 shoos,
 In hoses rede he wente fetusly
 Yclad he was ful smal and proprely 3320
 Al in a kirtel of a lyght waget, Ful faire and thikke been the poyntes set
 And therupon he hadde a gay surplys
 As whut as is the blosme upon the rys
 A myrne child he was, so God me save 3325 Wel koude he laten blood and clippe and
 shave,
 And maken a chartre of lond or acquit-
 aunce
 In twenty manere koude he trippe and
 daunce
 After the scole of Oxenforde tho,
 And with his legges casten to and fro, 3330
 And pleyen songes on a smal rubible,
 Therto he song som tyme a loud quynyble,
 And as wel koude he pleye on a giterne
 In al the toun nas brewhous ne taverne
 That he ne visited with his solas, 3335
 Ther any gaylard tappestere was But sooth to seyn, he was somdeel squay-
 mous
 Of fartyng, and of speche daungerous
 This Absolon, that jolif was and gay,
 Gooth with a sencer on the haliday, 3340
 Sensynge the wyves of the parisshe faste,
 And many a lovely look on hem he caste,
 And namely on this carpenteris wyf
 To looke on hire hym thoughte a myrne lyf,
 She was so propre and sweete and liker-
 ous 3345
 I dar wel seyn, if she hadde been a mous,
 And he a cat, he wolde hire hente anon
 This parissch clerik, this joly Absolon,
 Hath in his herte swich a love-longynge

That of no wyf ne took he noon off-
 ryngge, 3350
 For curteisie, he seyde, he wolde noon
 The moone, whan it was nyght, ful
 brighte shoon,
 And Absolon his gyterne hath ytake,
 For paramours he thoghte for to wake
 And forth he gooth, jolif and amorous, 3355
 Til he cam to the carpenteres hous
 A litel after cokkes hadde ycrowe,
 And dressed hym up by a shot-wyndowe
 That was upon the carpenteris wal
 He syngeth in his voys gentil and smal,
 "Now, deere lady, if thy wille be, 3360
 I praye yow that ye wole rewe on me,"
 Ful wel acordaunt to his gyternynge
 This carpenter awook, and herde him synge,
 And spak unto his wyf, and seyde anon, 3365
 "What! Alson! herestow nat Absolon, That chaunteth thus under oure boures
 wal?" And she answerde hur housbonde ther-
 withal,
 "Yis, God woot, John, I heere it every
 deel"
 This passeth forth, what wol ye bet than
 weel? 3370
 Fro day to day this joly Absolon
 So woweth hire that hym is wo bigon
 He waketh al the nyght and al the day,
 He kembeth his lokkes brode, and made
 hym gay, 3374
 He woweth hire by meenes and brocage,
 And swoor he wolde been hir owene page,
 He syngeth, brokkyngge as a nyghtyngale,
 He sente hire pyment, meeth, and spiced
 ale,
 And wafres, pipyng hoot out of the gleede;
 And, for she was of towne, he profred
 meede 3380
 For som folk wol ben wonnen for richesse,
 And somme for strokes, and somme for
 gentillesse
 Somtyme, to shewe his lightnesse and maistrye,
 He pleyeth Herodes upon a scaffold hye
 But what availleth hym as in this case? 3385
 She loveth so this hende Nicholas
 That Absolon may blowe the bukkes horn,
 He ne hadde for his labour but a scorn
 And thus she maketh Absolon hire ape,
 And al his earnest turneth til a jape 3390

He drank, and wel his girdel underpighte,
 He slepeth, and he snorteth in his gyse
 Al nyght, til the sonne gan aryse 791

Eft were his lettres stolen everychon, And countrefeted lettres in this wyse
 "The kng comandeth his constable anon, Up peyne of hangyng, and on heigh juyse, 795

That he ne sholde suffren in no wyse Custance in-with his reawme for t'abyde Thre dayes and o quarter of a tyde,

"But in the same ship as he hire fond, Hire, and hir yonge sone, and al hir geere, 800
 He sholde putte, and croude hire fro the
 lond,
 And chargen hire she never eft coome theree"
 O my Custance, wel may thy goost have
 feere,
 And, slepyng, in thy dreem been in penance, Whan Donegild cast al this ordnance 805

This messenger on morwe, whan he wook, Unto the castel halt the nexte way,
 And to the constable he the letre took,
 And whan that he this pitous letre say, Ful ofte he seyde "Allas! and weylaway!"
 "Lord Crist," quod he, "how may this world endure, 811
 So ful of synne is many a creature?"

"O myghty God, if that it be thy wille, Sith thou art rightful juge, how may it
 be
 That thou wolt suffren innocenz to
 spille, 815
 And wikked folk regne in prosperitee?
 O goode Custance, allas! so wo is me
 That I moot be thy tormentour, or deye On shames deeth, ther is noon oother
 weye"

Wepen bothe yonge and olde in al that
 place, 820
 Whan that the kyng this cursed letre sente,
 And Custance, with a deedly pale face,
 The ferthe day toward hir ship she wente
 But natheles she taketh in good entente

The wyl of Crist, and knelynge on the stronde, 825
 She seyde, "Lord, ay welcome be thy
 sonde!"

"He that me kepte fro the false blame
 While I was on the lond amonges yow, He kan me kepe from harm and eek fro shame
 In salte see, although I se nocht how 830
 As strong as evere he was, he is yet now
 In hym triste I, and in his mooder deere,
 That is to me my seyl and eek my steere"

Hir litel child lay wepyng in hir arm, And knelynge, pitously to hym she
 seyde, 835
 "Pees, litel sone, I wol do thee noon harm"
 With that hir coverchief of hir heed she breyde,
 And over his litel eyen she it leyde,
 And in hir arm she lulleth it ful faste,
 And into hevne hire eyen up she caste

"Mooder," quod she, "and mayde bright, Marie, 841
 Sooth is that thurgh wommanes eggement Mankynde was lorn, and damned ay to
 dye,
 For which thy child was on a croys yrent Thy blisful eyen sawe al his torment, 845 Thanne is ther no comparison bitwene Thy wo and any wo man may sustene

"Thow sawe thy child yslayn bifore thyne
 yen,
 And yet now lyveth my litel child, parfay!
 Now, lady bright, to whom alle woful cryen, 850
 Thow glorie of wommanhede, thow faire
 may,
 Thow haven of refut, brighte sterre of day,
 Rewe on my child, that of thy gentillesse, Rewest on every reweful in distresse

"O litel child, allas! what is thy gilt, That nevere wroghtest synne as yet, pardee? 856
 Why wil thyn harde fader han thee spilt?
 O mercy, deere constable," quod she,
 "As lat my litel child dwelle heer with
 thee,

And if thou darst nat saven hym, for
blame, 860
So kys hym ones in his fadres name!"

Therwith she looked bakward to the londe, And seyde, "Farewel, housbonde routhlees!"

And up she rist, and walketh doun the stronde

Toward the ship, — hir folweth al the prees, — 865

And evere she preyeth hire child to holde his pees,

And taketh hir leve, and with an hooly
entente

She blisseth hire, and into ship she wente

Vitailed was the ship, it is no drede, Habundantly for hire ful longe space, 870
And othere necessaries that sholde nede
She hadde ynogh, heryed be Goddes grace!
For wynd and weder almyghty God purchace,

And brynge hire hoom! I kan no bettere
seye,

But in the see she dryveth forth hir
weye 875

Explicit secunda pars

Sequitur pars tercia

Alla the kyng comth hoom soone after
this

Unto his castel, of the which I tolde, And asketh where his wyf and his child
is

The constable gan aboute his herte colde,
And pleynly al the manere he hym tolde
As ye han herd — I kan telle it no bettere — And sheweth the kyng his seel and eek his lettre, 882

And seyde, "Lord, as ye comanded me Up peyne of deeth, so have I doon, cer-ten"

This messenger tormented was til he 885
Moste biknowe and tellen, plat and pleyn, Fro nyght to nyght, in what place he had leynd,

And thus, by wit and sotil enquiryng, Ymaged was by whom this harm gan
sprynge

The hand was knowe that the lettre wroot, 890

And al the venym of this cursed dede,
But in what wise, certainly, I noot Th'effect is this, that Alla, out of drede, His mooder slow — that may men pleynly
rede —

For that she traitour was to hire ligeance Thus endeth olde Donegild, with meschance! 898

The sorwe that this Alla nyght and day Maketh for his wyf, and for his child
also,

Ther is no tonge that it telle may
But now wol I unto Custance go, 900
That fleteth in the see, in peyne and wo, Fyve yeer and moore, as liked Cristes
sonde,

Er that hir ship approched unto londe

Under an hethen castel, atte laste, Of which the name in my text noght I
fynde, 905
Custance, and eek hir child, the see up
caste

Almyghty God, that saveth al mankynde, Have on Custance and on hir child som
mynde,

That fallen is in hethen hand eft soone,
In point to spille, as I shal telle yow soone

Doun fro the castel comth ther many a
wight 911

To gauren on this ship and on Custance
But shortly, from the castel, on a nyght,
The lordes styward — God yeve hym
meschance! —

A thief, that hadde reneyedoure creance, Cam into ship allone, and seyde he sholde Hir lemman be, wher-so she wolde or nolde 917

Wo was this wretched womman tho
bigon,

Hir child cride, and she cride pitously
But blisful Marie heelp hire right anon,
For with hir struglyng wel and myghtily
The thief fil over bord al sodeynly, 922
And in the see he dreynthe for vengeance, And thus hath Crist unwemmed kept
Custance.

O foule lust of luxurie, lo, thyn ende!
Nat oonly that thou feynest mannes
mynde, 926
But verrally thou wolt his body shende Th'ende of thy werk, or of thy lustes
blynde,
Is compleynyng Hou many oon may men fynde
That nocht for werk somtyme, but for th'entente 930
To doon this synne, been outhr slayn or shente!

How may this wayke womman han this
strengthe
Hire to defende agayn this renegat?
O Gohas, unmesurable of lengthe, Hou myghte David make thee so maat,
So yong and of armure so desolaat? 936 Hou dorste he looke upon thy dredful face?
Wel may men seen, it nas but Goddes
grace

Who yaf Judith corage or hardynesse
To sleen hym Oloferus in his tente, 940
And to deliveren out of wretchednesse
The peple of God? I seye, for this entente, That right as God spirit of vigour sente
To hem, and saved hem out of meschance,
So sente he myght and vigour to Custance

Forth gooth hir ship thurghout the narwe mouth 946
Of Jubaltare and Septe dryvyng ay Somtyme west, and somtyme north and south,
And somtyme est, ful many a wery day, Til Cristes mooder — blessed be she ay! — Hath shapen, thurgh hir endeles good-
nesse, 951
To make an ende of al hir hevynesse

Now lat us stynte of Custance but a throwe,
And speke we of the Romayn emperour,
That out of Surrye hath by lettres knowe
The slaughtre of cristen folk, and dis-
honour 956
Doon to his doghter by a fals traytour,
I mene the cursed wikked sowdanesse That at the feeste leet sleen bothe moore and lesse.

For which this emperour hath sent anon
His senatour, with roial ordinance, 967
And outhere lordes, God woot, many oon,
On Surryens to taken heigh vengeance They brennen, sleen, and brynghe hem to
meschance
Ful many a day, but shortly, this is th'-
ende, 965
Homward to Rome they shapen hem to
wende

This senatour repaireth with victorie
To Rome-ward, saillyng ful roially, And mette the ship dryvyng, as seith the
storie,
In which Custance sit ful pitously 970 Nothyng ne knew he what she was, ne
why
She was in swich array, ne she nyl seye
Of hire estaat, although she sholde deye

He bryngeth hire to Rome, and to his wyf
He yaf hire, and hir yonge sone also, 975
And with the senatour she ladde hir lyf Thus kan Oure Lady bryngen out of wo Woful Custance, and many another mo
And longe tyme dwelled she in that place,
In hooly werkes evere, as was hir grace

The senatoures wyf hir aunte was, 981 But for al that she knew hire never the
moore
I wol no lenger tarien in this cas,
But to kyng Alla, which I spak of yore,
That for his wyf wepeth and siketh soore,
I wol retourne, and lete I wol Custance Under the senatoures governance 987

Kyng Alla, which that hadde his mooder
slayn,
Upon a day fil in swich repentance
That, if I shortly tellen shal and playn, To Rome he comth to receyven his penance, 991
And putte hym in the popes ordinance
In heigh and logh, and Jhesu Crist bisoghte Foryeve his wikked werkes that he wroghte

The fame anon thurgh Rome toun is
born, 995
How Alla kyng shal comen in pilgrymage,

By herbergeours that wenten hym biforn,
For which the senatour, as was usage,
Rood hym agayns, and many of his lynage,
As wel to shewen his heighe magnificence
As to doon any kyng a reverence 1001

Greet cheere dooth this noble senatour To kyng Alla, and he to hym also, Everich of hem dooth oother greet honour
And so bifel that in a day or two 1005
This senatour is to kyng Alla go To feste, and shortly, if I shal nat lye, Custances sone wente in his compaignye

Som men wolde seyn at requeste of Custance 1009
This senatour hath lad this child to feeste,
I may nat tellen every circumstance, —
Be as be may, ther was he at the leeste
But sooth is this, that at his moodres heeste Biforn Alla, durynge the metes space,
The child stood, lookyng in the kynges
face 1015

This Alla kyng hath of this child greet wonder,
And to the senatour he seyde anon,
"Whos is that faire child that stondesth yonder?"
"I noot," quod he, "by God, and by sent
John!
A mooder he hath, but fader hath he
noon 1020
That I of woot" — and shortly, in a
stounde,
He tolde Alla how that this child was founde

"But God woot," quod this senatour also,
"So vertuous a lyvere in my lyf Ne saugh I nevere as she, ne herde of
mo, 1025
Of worldly women, mayde, ne of wyf
I dar wel seyn hir hadde levere a knyf Thurghout hir brest, than ben a womman wikke,
There is no man koude bryngre hire to that prikke"

Now was this child as lyk unto Custance
As possible is a creature to be 1031
This Alla hath the face in remembrance

Of dame Custance, and ther on mused he If that the childes mooder were aught she That is his wyf, and pryvely he sighte, And spedde hym fro the table that he
myghte 1036

"Parfay," thoughte he, "fantome is in myn
heed!
I oghte deme, of skilful juggement,
That in the salte see my wyf is deed"
And afterward he made his argument
"What woot I if that Crist have hyder ysent 1041
My wyf by see, as wel as he hire sente To my ctree fro thennes that she
wente?"

And after noon, hoom with the senatour Goth Alla, for to seen this wonder chaunce
This senatour dooth Alla greet honour, 1046
And hastify he sente after Custaunce
But trusteth weel, hire liste nat to daunce, Whan that she wiste wherfore was that
sonde,
Unnethe upon hir feet she myghte stonde

Whan Alla saugh his wyf, fare he hire grette, 1051
And weep, that it was routhe for to see,
For at the firste look he on hire sette, He knew wel verrailly that it was she And she, for sorwe, as doumb stant as a
tree, 1055
So was hir herte shet in hir distresse, Whan she remembered his unkyndenesse

Twyes she swowned in his owene sighte,
He weep, and hym excuseth pitously
"Now God," quod he, "and alle his halwes brighte 1060
So wisly on my soule as have mercy,
That of youre harm as gilteles am I
As is Maurice my sone, so lyk youre face, Elles the feend me fecche out of this place!"

Long was the sobbyng and the bitter
peyne, 1065
Er that hir woful hertes myghte cesse, Greet was the ptee for to heere hem pleyne, Thurgh whiche pleintes gan hir wo encresse
I pray yow alle my labour to relese,

I may nat telle hir wo until to-morwe,
I am so wery for to speke of sorwe 1071

But finally, whan that the sothe is wist
That Alla gilteles was of hir wo,
I trowe an hundred tymes been they kist,
And swich a blisse is ther bitwix hem two That, save the joye that lasteth everemo, Ther is noon lyk that any creature 1077 Hath seyn or shal, whil that the world may
dure

Tho preyde she hir housbonde mekely,
In relief of hir longe, pitous pyne, 1080 That he wolde preyde hir fader specially That of his magestee he wolde enclyne To vouche sauf som day with hym to dyne
She preyde hym eek he sholde by no weye Unto hir fader no word of hire seye 1085

Som men wolde seyn how that the child Maurice

Dooth this message unto this emperour,
But, as I gesse, Alla was nat so nyce
To hym that was of so sovereyn honour
As he that is of Cristen folk the flour, 1090 Sente any child, but it is bet to deeme
He wente hymself, and so it may wel seeme

This emperour hath graunted gentlyly
To come to dyner, as he hym bisoughte,
And wel rede I he looked bisuly 1095 Upon this child, and on his doghter thoghte Alla goth to his in, and as hym oghte, Arrayed for this feste in every wise
As ferforth as his konnyng may suffice

The morwe cam, and Alla gan hym
dresse, 1100
And eek his wyf, this emperour to meete, And forth they ryde in joye and in glad-
nesse

And whan she saugh hir fader in the strete,
She lighte doun, and falleth hym to feete
"Fader," quod she, "youre yonge child
Custance 1105
Is now ful clene out of youre remembrance

I am youre doghter Custance," quod she,
"That whilom ye han sent unto Surrye
It am I, fader, that in the salte see 1109
Was put allone and dampned for to dye

Now, goode fader, mercy I yow crye!
Sende me namoore unto noon hethenesse, But thinketh my lord heere of his kynde-
nesse "

Who kan the pitous joye tellen al Bitwixe hem thre, syn they been thus ymette? 1115

But of my tale make an ende I shal,
The day goth faste, I wol no lenger lette
This glade folk to dyner they hem sette, In joye and blisse at mete I lete hem
dwelle
A thousand foold wel moore than I kan
telle 1120

This child Maurice was sithen emperour Maad by the pope, and lyved cristenly, To Cristes kirche he dide greet honour
But I lete al his storie passen by,
Of Custance is my tale specially 1125 In the olde Romayn geestes may men
fynde Maurices lyf, I bere it nocht in mynde

This kyng Alla, whan he his tyme say With his Custance, his hooly wvf so sweete, To Engelond been they come the righte
way, 1130

Wher as they lyve in joye and in quete
But litel while it lasteth, I yow heete, Joye of this world, for tyme wol nat
abyde,
Fro day to nyght it changeth as the tyde

Who lyved euere in swich delit o day 1135
That hym ne moeved outhur conscience,
Or ire, or talent, or som kynnes affray, Envye, or pride, or passion, or offence?
I ne seye but for this ende this sentence,
That litel while in joye or in plesance Lasteth the blisse of Alla with Custance

For deeth, that taketh of heigh and logh his rente, 1142

Whan passed was a yeer, evene as I gesse,
Out of this world this kyng Alla he hente, For whom Custance hath ful greet hevyn-
nesse 1145

Now lat us prayen God his soule blesse!
And dame Custance, finally to seye, Toward the toun of Rome goth hir weye

To Rome is come this hooly creature, And fyndeth hire freendes hoolle and sounde, 1150
 Now is she scaped al hire aventure
 And whan that she hir fader hath yfounde, Down on hur knees falleth she to grounde, Wepynge for tendrenesse in herte blithe, She heryeth God an hundred thousand sthe 1155

In vertu and in hooly almus-dede
 They lyven alle, and nevere asonder wende, Til deeth departeth hem, this lyf they lede
 And fareth now weel' my tale is at an ende Now Jhesu Crist, that of his myght may
 sende 1160
 Joye after wo, governe us in his grace,
 And kepe us alle that been in this place!
 Amen

Heere endeth the tale of the Man of Lawe

THE EPILOGUE OF THE MAN OF LAW'S TALE

[Owre Hoost upon his stiropes stood
 anon,
 And seyde, "Goode men, herkeneth everych on!
 This was a thrifty tale for the nones! 1165 Sir Parisshe Prest," quod he, "for Goddes
 bones,
 Telle us a tale, as was thi forward yore
 I se wel that ye lerned men in lore Can moche good, by Goddes digntee!"

The Parson hem answerde, "Benedicite!
 What eyleth the man, so synfully to swere?" 1171
 Oure Host answerde, "O Jankin, be ye
 there?
 I smelle a Lollere in the wynd," quod he "Now! goode men," quodoure Hoste,
 "herkeneth me,

Abydeth, for Goddes digne passioun, 1175
 For we schal han a predicacioun, Thus Lollere heer wil prechen us somewhat "
 "Nay, by my fader soule, that schal he nat!" Seyde the Shipman, "heer schal he nat preche, 1179
 He schal no gospel glosen here ne teche We leven alle in the grete God," quod
 he,
 "He wolde sowen som difficulte,
 Or springen cokkel in our clene corn
 And therefore, Hoost, I warne thee biforn, My joly body schal a tale telle, 1185
 And I schal clynken you so mery a belle,
 That I schal waken al this compaignie
 But it schal not ben of philosophie, Ne phislyas, ne termes quante of lawe Ther is but litel Latyn in my mawe!" 1190

FRAGMENT III (GROUP D)

THE WIFE OF BATH'S PROLOGUE

The Prologe of the Wyves Tale of Bathe

“Experience, though noon auctoritee Were in this world, is right ynogh for me To speke of wo that is in mariage, For, lordynges, sith I twelve yeer was of age,

Thonked be God that is eterne on lyve, 5 Housbondes at churche dore I have had
fyve, —

If I so ofte myghte have ywedded bee, —
And alle were worthy men in hir degree But me was toold, certeyn, nat longe agoon is,

That sith that Crist ne wente nevere but onis 10

To weddyng, in the Cane of Galilee, That by the same ensample taughte he me
That I ne sholde wedded be but ones Herkne eek, lo, which a sharp word for the nones,

Byside a welle, Jhesus, God and man, 15
Spak in repreeve of the Samaritan ‘Thou hast yhad fyve housbondes,’ quod
he,

‘And that ilke man that now hath thee Is noght thyn housbonde,’ thus seyde he
certeyn

What that he mente therby, I kan nat
seyn, 20

But that I axe, why that the fitte man Was noon housbonde to the Samaritan?
How manye myghte she have in mariage?
Yet herde I nevere tellen in myn age Upon this nombre diffinicion 25

Men may devyne and glosen, up and doun,
But wel I woot, expres, withoute lye, God bad us for to wexe and multiplye,
That gentil text kan I wel understonde Eek wel I woot, he seyde myn housbonde Sholde lete fader and mooder, and take to
me 31

But of no nombre mencion made he,
Of bigamye, or of octogamye, Why sholde men thanne speke of it vileyne?

Lo, heere the wise kyng, daun Salomon,
I trowe he hadde wyves mo than oon 36
As wolde God it were lefevel unto me To be refreshed half so ofte as he!

Which yifte of God hadde he for alle his wyvys!

No man hath swich that in this world alyve
is 40

God woot, this noble kyng, as to my wit,
The firste nyght had many a myrte fit
With ech of hem, so wel was hym on lyve Yblessed be God that I have wedded fyve! 4

Welcome the sixte, whan that evere he
shal 45

For sothe, I wol nat kepe me chaast in al Whan myn housbonde is fro the world ygon,

Som Cristen man shal wedde me anon,
For thanne, th’apostle seith that I am free To wedde, a Goddes half, where it liketh
me 50

He seith that to be wedded is no synne, Bet is to be wedded than to brynne
What rekketh me, thogh folk seye vileynye Of shrewed Lameth and his bigamye?

I woot wel Abraham was an hooly man,
And Jacob eek, as ferforth as I kan, 56
And ech of hem hadde wyves mo than two,
And many another holy man also

Wher can ye seye, in any manere age,
That hye God defended mariage 60
By expres word? I pray yow, telleth me Or where comanded he virginitee?

I woot as wel as ye, it is no drede, Th’apostel, whan he speketh of mayden-
hede,

He seyde that precept therof hadde he
noon 65

¹ ll 44a-44f

Of whiche I have pyked out the beste, Bothe of here nether purs and of here cheste
Diverse scoles maken parfyt clerkes
And diverse practyk in many sondry werkis Maketh the werkman parfyt sekirly, Of fyve husbondes scolelyng am I

Men may conseele a womman to been oon,
 But conseeillyng is no comandement
 He putte it in oure owene judgement,
 For hadde God comanded maydenhede, Thanne hadde he dampned weddyng with the dede 70

And certes, if ther were no seed ysowe, Virgintee, thanne wherof sholde it growe?
 Poul dorste nat comanden, atte leeste, A thyng of which his maister yaf noon
 heeste

The dart is set up for virgintee 75 Cacche whoso may, who renneth best lat
 see

But this word is nat taken of every
 wight,

But ther as God lust gyve it of his myght
 I woot wel that th'apostel was a mayde, But natheles, thogh that he wroot and
 sayde 80

He wolde that every wight were swich as
 he,

Al nys but conseil to virgintee
 And for to been a wyf he yaf me leve
 Of indulgence, so nys it no repreve To wedde me, if that my make dye, 85

Withouten excepcion of bigamy
 Al were it good no womman for to touche, —
 He mente as in his bed or in his couche,
 For peril is bothe fyr and tow t'assemble Ye knowe what this ensample may resemble 90

This is al and som, he heeld virgintee
 Moore parfit than weddyng in freletee Freletee clepe I, but if that he and she Wolde leden al hir lyf in chastitee

I graunte it wel, I have noon envie, 95
 Thogh maydenhede preferre bigamy
 It liketh hem to be clene, body and goost,
 Of myn estaat I nyl nat make no boost
 For wel ye knowe, a lord in his houshold,
 He nath nat every vessel al of gold, 100 Somme been of tree, and doon hir lord
 servyse

God clepeth folk to hym in sondry wyse,
 And everich hath of God a propre yifte, Som this, som that, as hym liketh shifte Virgintee is greet perfeccion, 105

And continence eek with devocion,
 But Crist, that of perfeccion is welle, Bad nat every wight he sholde go selle
 Al that he hadde, and gyve it to 'he poore

And in swich wise folwe hym and his foore
 He spak to hem that wolde lyve parfitly, And lordynges, by youre leve, that am
 nat I 112

I wol bistowe the flour of al myn age
 In the actes and in fruyt of marriage Telle me also, to what conclusion 115
 Were membres maad of generacion,
 And for what profit was a wight ywroght Trusteth right wel, they were nat maad for noht

Glose whoso wole, and seye bothe up and
 doun,

That they were maked for purgacioun 120
 Of uryne, and oure bothe thynges smaale Were eek to knowe a femele from a male,
 And for noon oother cause, — sey ye no?
 The experence woot wel it is noht so
 So that the clerkes be nat with me wrothe,
 I sey this, that they maked ben for bothe,
 This is to seye, for office, and for ese 127
 Of engendrure, ther we nat God displese
 Why sholde men elles in hir bookes sette That man shal yelde to his wyf hire dette?
 Now wherwith sholde he make his paiement, 131

If he ne used his sely instrument?
 Thanne were they maad upon a creature
 To purge uryne, and eek for engendrure But I seye noht that every wight is
 holde, 135

That hath swich harneys as I to yow tolde,
 To goon and usen hem in engendrure Thanne sholde men take of chastitee no cure

Crist was a mayde, and shapen as a man,
 And many a seint, sith that the world
 bigan, 140

Yet lyved they evere in parfit chastitee
 I nyl envye no virgintee Lat hem be breed of pured whete-seed,
 And lat us wyves hoten barly-breed,
 And yet with barly-breed, Mark telle
 kan, 145

Oure Lord Jhesu refreshed many a man In swich estaat as God hath cleped us I wol persevere, I nam nat precius In wyfthod I wol use myn instrument
 As frely as my Makere hath it sent 150
 If I be daungerous, God yeve me sorwe!
 Myn housbonde shal it have bothe eve and
 morwe,

Whan that hym list come forth and paye his dette
An housbonde I wol have, I wol nat lette, Which shal be bothe my dettour and my thral, 155
And have his tribulacion withal
Upon his flessch, whil that I am his wyf
I have the power durynge al my lyf Upon his propre body, and noght he Right thus the Apostel tolde it unto me,
And had oure housbondes for to love us
weel 161
Al this sentence me liketh every deel" —
Up sturte the Pardoner, and that anon
"Now, dame," quod he, "by God and by sent John!
Ye been a noble prechour in this cas 165
I was aboute to wedde a wyf, allas!
What sholde I bye it on my flessch so deere?
Yet hadde I levere wedde no wyf to-yeere!"
"Abyde!" quod she, "my tale is nat bigonne 169
Nay, thou shalt drynken of another tonne, Er that I go, shal savoure wors than ale And whan that I have toold thee forth my tale
Of tribulacion in marriage,
Of which I am expert in al myn age, This is to seyn, myself have been the whippe, — 175
Than maystow chese whether thou wolt sippe
Of thilke tonne that I shal abroche
Be war of it, er thou to ny approche, For I shal telle ensamples mo than ten
'Whoso that nyl be war by othere men, 180
By hym shul othere men corrected be'
The same wordes writeth Ptholomee, Rede in his Almageste, and take it there"
"Dame, I wolde praye yow, if youre wyl it were,"
Seyde thus Pardoner, "as ye bigan, 185
Telle forth youre tale, spareth for no man,
And teche us yonge men of youre praktike"
"Gladly," quod she, "sith it may yow like,
But that I praye to al this compaignye,
If that I speke after my fantasye, 190
As taketh not agrief of that I seye,
For myn entente is nat but for to pleye Now, sres, now wol I telle forth my
tale —

As evere moote I drynken wyn or ale, I shal seye sooth, tho housbondes that I
hadde, 195
As thre of hem were goode, and two were
badde
The thre were goode men, and riche, and olde, Unnethe myghte they the statut holde
In which that they were bounden unto me Ye woot wel what I meene of this, pardee! 200
As help me God, I laughe whan I thynke
How pitously a-nyght I made hem swynkel
And, by my fey, I tolde of it no stoor
They had me yeven hir lond and hir tresoor, Me neded nat do lenger diligence 205
To wyne hir love, or doon hem reverence
They loved me so wel, by God above,
That I ne tolde no deyntee of hir love!
A wys womman wol bisye hire evere in oon
To gete hire love, ther as she hath noon 210
But sith I hadde hem hoolly in myn hond,
And sith they hadde me yeven al hir lond,
What sholde I taken keep hem for to plesse,
But it were for my profit and myn ese?
I sette hem so a-werke, by my fey, 215
That many a nyght they songen 'weila-wey!'
The bacon was nat fet for hem, I trowe, That som men han in Essex at Dunmowe
I governed hem so wel, after my lawe,
That ech of hem ful blisful was and fawe
To brynge me gaye thynges fro the fayre They were ful glad whan I spak to hem faire, 222
For, God it woot, I chidde hem spitously
Now herkneth hou I baar me proprely, Ye wise wyves, that kan understonde 225 Thus shulde ye speke and bere hem wrong on honde,
For half so boldely kan ther no man Swere and lyen, as a womman kan
I sey nat thus by wyves that been wyse,
But if it be whan they hem mysavyse 230
A wys wyf shal, if that she kan hir good, Bere hym on honde that the cow is wood,
And take witnessse of hir owene mayde
Of hir assent, but herkneth how I sayde
'Sire olde kaynard, is this thyn array?
Why is my neighbores wyf so gay? 236
She is honoured over al ther she gooth,
I sitte at hoom, I have no thrifty clooth

What dostow at my neighebores hous?
Is she so fair? artow so amorous? 240
What rowne ye with oure mayde? Benedicite!

Sire olde lecchour, lat thy japes be!
And if I have a gossib or a freend, Withouten gilt, thou chidest as a feend,
If that I walke or pleye unto his hous! 245
Thou comest hoom as dronken as a mous,
And prechest on thy bench, with yvel preef!
Thou seist to me it is a greet meschief
To wedde a povre womman, for costage,
And if that she be riche, of heigh parage, Thanne seistow that it is a tormentrie 251
To soffre hire pride and hire malencolie
And if that she be fair, thou verray knave, Thou seyst that every holour wol hire have,
She may no while in chastitee abyde, 255
That is assailed upon ech a syde

Thou seyst som folk desiren us for richesse,
Somme for oure shap, and somme for oure farnesse,
And som for she kan outhur synge or
daunce, 259

And som for gentillesse and dalaunce, Som for hir handes and hir arnes smale Thus goth al to the devel, by thy tale Thou seyst men may nat kepe a castel wal,
It may so longe assailed been over al

And if that she be foul, thou seist that
she 265

Coveteth every man that she may se,
For as a spaynel she wol on hym lepe, Til that she fynde som man hire to chepe Ne noon so grey goos gooth ther in the lake
As, seistow, wol been withoute make 270
And seyst it is an hard thyng for to welde
A thyng that no man wole, his thankes, helde

Thus seistow, lorel, whan thow goost to
bedde, 273

And that no wys man nedeth for to wedde, Ne no man that entendeth unto hevене
With wilde thonder-dynt and firy leveve Moote thy welked nekke be tobroke!

Thow seyst that droppying houses, and eek smoke,

And chiding wyves maken men to flee
Out of hir owene hous, a' benedicite! 280
What gyleth swich an old man for to chide?

Thow seyst we wyves wol oure vices hide

Til we be fast, and thanne we wol hem shewe, —

Wel may that be a proverbe of a shrewel Thou seist that oven, asses, hors, and houndes, 285

They been assayed at diverse stoundes, Bacyns, lavours, er that men hem bye, Spoones and stooles, and al swich hot s bondrye,

And so been pottes, clothes, and array,
But folk of wyves maken noon assay, 290
Til they be wedded, olde dotard shrewel And thanne, seistow, we wol oure vices
shewe

Thou seist also that it displeseth me
But if that thou wolt preyse my beautee,
And but thou poure alwey upon my face
And clepe me "faire dame" in every place And but thou make a feeste on thilke
day 297

That I was born, and make me fressh and gay,

And but thou do to my norice honour,
And to my chamberere withinne my bour,
And to my fadres folk and his allyes, —
Thus seistow, olde barel-ful of lyes! 302

And yet of oure apprentice Janekyn, For his crisepe heer, shynynge as gold so fyn,

And for he squereth me bothe up and
doun, 305

Yet hastow caught a fals suspeciuon I wol hym night, thogh thou were deed tomorwe!

But tel me this why hydestow, with
sorwe,

The keyes of thy cheste away fro me?
It is my good as wel as thyn, pardee! 310 What, wenestow make an ydiot of oure dame?

Now by that lord that called is Seint Jame, Thou shalt nat bothe, thogh thou were
wood,

Be maister of my body and of my good;
That oon thou shalt forgo, maugree thyne
yen 315

What helpeth it of me to enquere or spyen?
I trowe thou woldest loke me in thy chiste!
Thou sholdest seye, "Wyf, go wher thee luste,

Taak youre disport, I wol nat leve no talys
I knowe yow for a trewe wyf, dame Alys "

We love no man that taketh kep or charge 321

Wher that we goon, we wol ben at oure large

Of alle men yblessed moot he be,
The wise astrologien, Daun Ptholome, That seith this proverbe in his Almageste 325

"Of alle men his wysdom is the hyste That rekketh nevere who hath the world in honde "

By this proverbe thou shalt understonde, Have thou ynogh, what thar thee recche or care

How myrly that othere folkes fare? 330
For, certeyn, olde dotard, by youre leve, Ye shul have queynthe right ynogh at eve
He is to greet a nygard that wolde werne
A man to lighte a candle at his lanterne,
He shal have never the lasse light, pardee Have thou ynogh, thee thar nat pleyne
thee 336

Thou seyst also, that if we make us gay
With clothyng, and with precious array, Thau it is peril of oure chastitee, And yet, with sorwe! thou most enforce
thee, 340
And seye these wordes in the Apostles
name

"In habit maad with chastitee and shame Ye wommen shul apparaille yow," quod he,
"And nocht in tressed heer and gay perree, As perles, ne with gold, ne clothes riche "
After thy text, ne after thy rubriche, 346
I wol nat wirche as muchel as a gnat

Thou seydest thus, that I was lyk a cat,
For whoso wolde senge a cattes skyn, Thanne wolde the cat wel dwellen in his
in, 350

And if the cattes skyn be slyk and gay,
She wol nat dwelle in house half a day,
But forth she wole, er any day be dawed,
To shewe hir skyn, and goon a-caterwawed
This is to seye, if I be gay, sire shrewe, 355
I wol renne out, my borel for to shewe

Sire olde fool, what helpeth thee to spyen?

Thogh thou preyre Argus with his hundred
yen

To be my warde-cors, as he kan best,
In feith, he shal nat kepe me but me lest, 360

Yet koude I make his berd, so moot I thee!
Thou seydest eek that ther been thynges
thre,

The whiche thynges troublen al this erthe,
And that no wight may endure the ferthe O leeve sire shrewe, Jhesu shorte thy
lyf! 365

Yet prechestow and seyst an hateful wyf Yrekened is for oon of these meschances Been ther none othere maner resemblances That ye may likne youre parables to,
But if a sely wyf be oon of tho? 370

Thou liknest eek wommenes love to helle, To bareyne lond, ther water may nat
dwelle

Thou liknest it also to wilde fyr,
The moore it brenneth, the moore it hath desir

To consume every thyng that brent wole
be 375

Thou seyst, right as wormes shende a tree,
Right so a wyf destroyeth hire housbonde, This knowe they that been to wyves
bonde ' 380

Lordynges, right thus, as ye have under-
stonde,

Baar I stify myne olde housbondes on
honde 380

That thus they seyden in hur dronkenesse,
And al was fals, but that I took wisse On Janekyn, and on my nece also O Lord! the peyne I dide hem and the wo, Ful gyleles, by Goddes sweete pyne! 385
For as an hors I koude byte and whyne
I koude pleyne, and yit was in the gilt, Or elles often tyme hadde I been spilt Whoso that first to mille comth, first grynt,
I pleyned first, so was oure werre ystynt
They were ful glade to excuse hem blyve Of thyng of which they nevere aglite hur
lyve 392

Of wenches wolde I beren hym on honde, Whan that for syk unnethes myghte he stonde

Yet tikled it his herte, for that he 395 Wende that I hadde of hym so greet chertee!

I swoor that al my walkyng on nyghte
Was for t'espye wenches that he dighte, Under that colour hadde I many a myrthe
For al swich wit is yeven us in oure byrthe, Decate, wepyng, spyning God hath yive

To wommen kyndely, whil that they may
lyve 402

And thus of o thyng I avaunte me, Atte ende I hadde the bettre in ech degree, By sleighte, or force, or by som maner
thyng, 405

As by contunueel murmur or grucchyng Namely abedde hadden they meschaunce Ther wolde I chide, and do hem no ples-
aunce,

I wolde no lenger in the bed abyde,
If that I felte his arm over my syde, 410
Til he had maad his raunson unto me, Thanne wolde I suffre hym do his nycetee
And therfore every man this tale I telle, Wynne whoso may, for al is for to selle,
With empty hand men may none haukes lure 415

For wynnyng wolde I al his lust endure,
And make me a feyned appetit,
And yet in bacon hadde I nevere delit, That made me that evere I wolde hem chide

For thogh the pope hadde seten hem bi-side, 420

I wolde nat spare hem at hir owene
bord,

For, by my trouthe, I quitte hem word for word

As hepe me verray God omnipotent, Though I right now sholde make my testament,

I ne owe hem nat a word that it nys quit
I broghte it so aboute by my wit 426 That they moste yeve it up, as for the
beste,

Or elles hadde we nevere been in reste
For thogh he looked as a wood leon,
Yet sholde he faille of his conclusion 430 Thanne wolde I seye, 'Goode lief, taak keep

How mekely looketh Wilkyn,oure sheep!
Com neer, my spouse, lat me ba thy cheke!
Ye sholde been al pacient and meke,
And han a sweete spiced conscience, 435 Sith ye so preche of Jobes pacience Suffreth alwey, syn ye so wel kan preche,
And but ye do, certein we shal yow teche
That it is fair to have a wyf in pees Oon of us two moste bowen, doutelees,
And sith a man is moore resonable 441
Than womman is, ye moste been suffrable

What eyleth yow to grucche thus and grone?

Is it for ye wolde have my queynte allone?
Wy, taak it al! lo, have it every deel! 445
Peter! I shrewe yow, but ye love it weel, For if I wolde selle my bele chose,
I koude walke as fressh as is a rose,
But I wol kepe it for youre owene tooth Ye be to blame, by God! I sey yow
sooth' 450

Swiche manere wordes hadde we on
honde

Now wol I speken of my fourthe housbonde
My fourthe housbonde was a revelour,
This is to seyn, he hadde a paramour,
And I was yong and ful of ragerye, 455 Stubourn and strong, and joly as a pye
How koude I daunce to an harpe smale,
And synge, ywis, as any nyghtyngale, Whan I had dronke a draughte of sweete
wyn!

Metellus, the foule cherl, the swyn, 460
That with a staf birafte his wyf hir lyf, For she drank wyn, thogh I hadde been his
wyf,

He sholde nat han daunted me fro drynke!
And after wyn on Venus moste I thynke,
For al so siker as cold engendreth hayl, 465
A likerous mouth moste han a likerous tayl
In women violent is no defence, —
This knowen lecchours by experence

But, Lord Crist! whan that it remem-breth me

Upon my yowthe, and on my jolitee, 470
It takleth me aboute myn herte roote

Unto this day it dooth myn herte boote
That I have had my world as in my tyme
But age, allas! that al wole envenyme, Hath me biraft my beautee and my pith Lat go, farewell! the devel go therwith! 476
The flour is goon, ther is namoore to telle,
The bren, as I best kan, now moste I selle,
But yet to be right myrie wol I fonde
Now wol I tellen of my fourthe housbonde

I seye, I hadde in herte greet despit 481
That he of any oother had delit
But he was quit, by God and by Seint Joco!
I made hym of the same wode a croce;
Nat of my body, in no foul manere, 485
But certeinly, I made folk swich cheere
That in his owene grece I made hym frye
For angre, and for verray jealousy 488

By God! in erthe I was his purgatorie, For which I hope his soule be in glorie
 For, God it woot, he sat ful ofte and song, Whan that his shoo ful bitterly hym wrong Ther was no wight, save God and he, that
 wiste,

In many wise, how soore I hym twiste
 He deyde whan I cam fro Jerusalem, 495
 And lith ygrave under the roode beam, Al is his tombe noght so curyus
 As was the sepulcre of hym Daryus, Which that Appelles wroghte subtilly,
 It nys but wast to burye hym preciously Lat hym fare wel, God yeve his soul
 reste! 501

He is now in his grave and in his cheste
 Now of my fifthe housbonde wol I telle God lete his soule nevere come in helle!
 And yet was he to me the mooste shrewde,
 That feele I on my ribbes al by rewe, 506
 And evere shal unto myn endyng day
 But in oure bed he was so fresch and gay,
 And therwithal so wel koude he me glose, Whan that he wolde han my bele chose, 510
 That thogh he hadde me bete on every bon,
 He koude wyne agayn my love anon I trowe I loved hym best, for that he Was of his love daungerous to me
 We wommen han, if that I shal nat lye,
 In this matere a queynte fantasye, 516 Wayte what thyng we may nat lightly
 have,

Therafter wol we crien al day and crave Forbede us thyng, and that desiren we, Preece on us faste, and thanne wol we fle 520

With daunger oute we al oure chaffare, Greet prees at market maketh deere ware,
 And to greet cheep is holde at litel prys
 This knoweth every womman that is wys My fifthe housbonde, God his soule
 blesse! 525

Which that I took for love, and no rchesse,
 He som tyme was a clerk of Oxenford, And hadde left scole, and wente at hom to bord 528

With my gossib, dwellynge in oure toun, God have hir soule! hir name was Alisoun
 She knew myn herte, and eek my pryvete, Bet than oure parisshe preest, so moot I
 thee!

To hire biwreyed I my conseil al

For hadde myn housbonde pissed on a wal, Or doon a thyng that sholde han cost his
 lyf, 535

To hire, and to another worthy wyf,
 And to my nece, which that I loved weel,
 I wolde han toold his conseil every deel
 And so I dide ful often, God it woot, That made his face ful often reed and hoot For verray shame, and blamed hymself for
 he 541

Had toold to me so greet a pryvete
 And so bifel that ones in a Lente —
 So often tymes I to my gossyb wente,
 For evere yet I loved to be gay, 545 And for to walke in March, Averill, and
 May,

Fro hous to hous, to heere sondry talys — That Jankyn clerk, and my gossyb dame Alys,

And I myself, into the feeldes wente Myn housbonde was at Londoun al that Lente, 550

I hadde the bettre leyser for to pleye,
 And for to se, and eek for to be seye
 Of lusty folk What wiste I wher my grace Was shapen for to be, or in what place?
 Therefore I made my visitaaciouns 555
 To vigilies and to processiouns,
 To prechyng eek, and to thuse pilgimages,
 To pleyes of myracles, and to mariages,
 And wered upon my gaye scarlet gytes Thuse wormes, ne thuse motthes, ne thuse mytes, 560

Upon my peril, frete hem never a deel,
 And wostow why? for they were used weel

Now wol I tellen forth what happed me I seye that in the feeldes walked we, T.l trewely we hadde swich daliance, 565
 This clerk and I, that of my purveiance I spak to hym and seyde hym how that
 he,

If I were wydwe, sholde wedde me
 For certainly, I sey for no bobance, Yet was I nevere withouten purveiance Of marriage, n'of othere thynges eek 571
 I holde a mouses herte nat worth a leek That hath but oon hole for to sterte to,
 And if that faille, thanne is al ydo

I bar hym on honde he hadde enchanted
 me, — 575

My dame taughte me that soutltee
 And eek I seyde I mette of hym al nyght,

He wolde han slayn me as I lay upright,
 And al my bed was ful of verray blood,
 But yet I hope that he shal do me good,
 For blood bitokeneth gold, as me was taught 581

And al was fals, I dremed of it right naught,
 But as I folwed ay my dames loore,
 As wel of this as of othere thynges moore But now, sire, lat me se, what I shal
 seyn? 585

A ha! by God, I have my tale ageyn Whan that my fourthe housbonde was on beere,

I weep algate, and made sory cheere,
 As wyves mooten, for it is usage,
 And with my coverchief covered my visage 590

But for that I was purveyed of a make,
 I wepte but smal, and that I undertake To churche was myn housbonde born a-morwe

With neighebores, that for hym maden
 sorwe, 594

And Jankyn, oure clerk, was oon of tho
 As help me God! whan that I saugh hym go After the beere, me thoughte he hadde a paire 597

Of legges and of feet so clene and faire
 That al myn herte I yaf unto his hooold
 He was, I trowe, a twenty wynter cold,
 And I was fourty, if I shal seye sooth,
 But yet I hadde alwey a coltes tooth Gat-tothed I was, and that bicam me weel,
 I hadde the prente of sente Venus seel
 As help me God! I was a lusty oon, 605 And faire, and riche, and yong, and wel
 bigon,
 And trewely, as myne housbondes tolde
 me,

I hadde the beste quoniam myghte be For certes, I am al Venerien
 In feelynge, and myn herte is Marcien 610 Venus me yaf my lust, my likerousnesse,
 And Mars yaf me my sturdy hardynesse, Myn ascendent was Taur, and Mars ther-
 inne

Allas! allas! that evere love was synne!
 I folwed ay myn inclinacioun 615
 By vertu of my constellacioun, That made me I koude nocht withdrawe
 My chambre of Venus from a good felawe Yet have I Martes mark upon my face,

And also in another privee place 620
 For God so wys be my savacioun,
 I ne loved nevere by no discrecioun,
 But evere folwede myn appetit,
 Al were he short, or long, or blak or whit,
 I took no kep, so that he liked me, 625
 How poore he was, ne eck of what degree

What sholde I seye? but, at the monthes
 ende,

This joly clerk, Jankyn, that was so hende, Hath wedded me with greet solempnytee,
 And to hym yaf I al the lond and fee 630
 That evere was me yeven therlifoore
 But afterward repented me ful soore,
 He nolde suffre nothyng of my list
 By God! he smoot me ones on the lyst,
 For that I rente out of his book a leef, 635
 That of the strook myn ere wax al deef Stubourn I was as is a leonesse,
 And of my tonge a verray jangleresse,
 And walke I wolde, as I had doon biforn, From hous to hous, although he had it
 sworn, 640

For which he often tymes wolde preche,
 And me of olde Romayn geestes teche,
 How he Symphicrus Gallus lefte his wyf,
 And hire forsook for terme of al his lyf, Noght but for open-heveded he hir say 645 Lookynge out at his dore upon a day

Another Romayn tolde he me by name,
 That, for his wyf was at a someres game Withouten his wityng, he forsook hire eke
 And thanne wolde he upon his Bible seke That ilke proverbe of Ecclesiaste 651
 Where he comandeth, and forbedeth faste, Man shal nat suffre his wyf go roule aboute Thanne wolde he seye right thus, with outen doute

'Whoso that buyldeth his hous al of salwes, 655
 And priketh his blynde hors over the falwes,

And suffreth his wyf to go seken halwes,
 Is worthy to been hanged on the galwes!
 But al for noght, I sette noght an hawe
 Of his proverbes n'of his olde sawe, 660 Ne I wolde nat of hym corrected be I hate hym that my vices telleth me,
 And so doo mo, God woot, of us than I
 This made hym with me wood al outrely,
 I nolde nnght forbare hym in no cas 665

Now wol I seye yow sooth, by sent Thomas,
 Why that I rente out of his book a leef,
 For which he smoot me so that I was deef He hadde a book that gladly, nyght and
 day,
 For his desport he wolde rede alway, 670
 He cleped it Valerie and Theofraste,
 At which book he lough alwey ful faste And eek ther was somtyme a clerk at Rome,
 A cardinal, that highte Seint Jerome,
 That made a book agayn Joviman, 675
 In which book eek ther was Tertulan, Crisippus, Trotula, and Helowys,
 That was abbesse nat fer fro Parys,
 And eek the Parables of Salomon, Ovides Art, and bookes many on, 680
 And alle these were bounden in o volume And every nyght and day was his custume, Whan he hadde leyser and vacacioun From oother worldly occupacioun,
 To reden on this book of wikked wyves, 685
 He knew of hem mo legendes and lyves Than been of goode wyves in the Bible For trusteth wel, it is an impossible That any clerk wol speke good of wyves,
 But if it be of hooly seintes lyves, 690
 Ne of noon oother womman never the mo Who peyntede the leon, tel me who?
 By God! if women hadde writen stories,
 As clerkes han withunne hire oratories,
 They wolde han writen of men moore wikkednesse 695
 Than al the mark of Adam may redresse
 The children of Mercurie and of Venus Been in hir wirkyng ful contrarius, Mercurie loveth wysdam and science,
 And Venus loveth ryot and dispence 700
 And, for hire diverse disposicioun, Eek falleth in othes exaltacioun
 And thus, God woot, Mercurie is desolat In Pisces, wher Venus is exaltat, And Venus falleth ther Mercurie is reysed Therefore no womman of no clerk is preyseed 706
 The clerk, whan he is oold, and may noight do
 Of Venus werkes worth his olde sho, Thanne sit he doun, and writ in his dotage
 That wommen kan nat kepe hir marriage!
 But now to purpos, why I tolde thee 71.

That I was beten for a book, pardee!
 Upon a nyght Jankyn, that was oure sire, Redde on his book, as he sat by the fire,
 Of Eva first, that for hir wikkednesse 715
 Was al mankynde broght to wretchednesse, For which that Jhesu Crist hymself was
 slayn,
 That boghte us with his herte blood agayn Lo, heere expres of womman may ye fynde,
 That womman was the los of al mankynde Tho redde he me how Sampson loste his heres 721
 Slepynge, his lemman kitte it with hir sheres, Thurgh which treson loste he bothe his
 yen
 Tho redde he me, if that I shal nat lyen,
 Of Hercules and of his Dianyre, 725
 That caused hym to sette hymself afyre
 No thyng forgat he the care and the wo That Socrates hadde with his wyves two,
 How Xantippa caste pisse upon his heed Thus sely man sat stille as he were deed, He wiped his heed, namoore dorste he
 seyn, 731
 But 'Er that thonder stynte, comth a
 rey n'
 Of Phaspha, that was the queene of Crete,
 For shrewednesse, hym thoughte the tale
 swete,
 Fy! spek namoore — it is a grisly thyng —
 Of hire horrible lust and hir likyng 736
 Of Chtermystra, for hire lecherye, That falsly made hire housbonde for to
 dye,
 He redde it with ful good devocioun
 He tolde me eek for what occasioun 740 Amphorax at Thebes loste his lyf Myn housbonde hadde a legende of his
 wyf, Eriphilem, that for an ouche of gold Hath prively unto the Grekes told Whei that hir housbonde hidde hym in a
 place, 745
 For which he hadde at Thebes sory grace Of Lyvia tolde he me, and of Lucye They bothe made hir housbondes for to
 dye, 748
 That oon for love, that oother was for hate Lyvia hir housbonde, on an even late, Emposyned hath, for that she was his fo,

Lucia, likerous, loved hire housbonde so That, for he sholde alwey upon hire thynke,
She yaf hym swich a manere love-drynke
That he was deed er it were by the morwe,
And thus algates housbondes han sorwe

Thanne tolde he me how oon Latumys Compleyned unto his felawe Arrus 758
That in his gardyn growed swich a tree
On which he seyde how that his wyves thre Hanged himself for herte despitus 761
'O levee brother,' quod this Arrus,
'Yif me a plante of thulke blussed tree,
And in my gardyn planted shal it bee'

Of latter date, of wyves hath he red 765 That somme han slayn hir housbondes in hir bed,

And lete hir lecchour dighte hire al the
nyght,

Whan that the corps lay in the floor up-
right

And somme han dryve nayles in hir brayn, Whil that they slepte, and thus they han hem slayn 770

Somme han hem yeve poysoun in hire
drynke

He spak moore harm than herte may bithynke,

And therwithal he knew of mo proverbes Than in this world ther growen gras or herbes

'Bet is,' quod he, 'thyn habitacioun 775
Be with a leon or a foul dragoun, Than with a womman usynge for to chyde'

'Bet is,' quod he, 'hye in the roof abyde, Than with an angry wyf down in the hous,
They been so wikked and contranous, 780
They haten that hir housbondes loven ay'
He seyde, a 'womman cast hir shame
away,

Whan she cast of hir smok,' and forthermo,

'A fair woman, but she be chaast also,
Is lyk a gold ryng in a sowes nose' 785
Who wolde wene, or who wolde suppose,
The wo that in myn herte was, and pyne?

And whan I saugh he wolde nevere fyne
To reden on this cursed book al nyght, Al sodeynly thre leves have I plyght 790 Out of his book, right as he radde, and eke
I with my fest so took hym on the cheke
That in oure fyr he fil bakward adoun

And he up sturte as dooth a wood leoun, And with his fest he smoot me on the heed, 795

That in the floor I lay as I were deed
And whan he saugh how stille that I lay,
He was agast, and wolde han fled his way, Til atte laste out of my swogh I breyde
'O! hastow slayn me, false theef?' I
seyde, 800

'And for my land thus hastow mordred
me?

Er I be deed, yet wol I kisse thee'
And neer he cam, and kneled faire
adoun,

And seyde, 'Deere suster Alisoun, As help me God! I shal thee nevere
smyte 805

That I have doon, it is thyself to wyte Foryeve it me, and that I thee biseke!'
And yet eftsoones I hitte hym on the cheke, And seyde, 'Theef, thus muchel am I
wreke,

Now wol I dye, I may no lenger speke' 810
But atte laste, with muchel care and wo, We fille acorded by us selven two

He yaf me al the bridel in myn hond,
To han the governance of hous and lond,
And of his tonge, and of his hond also,
And made hym brenne his book anon right tho 816

And whan that I hadde geten unto me,
By maistrie, al the soveraynetee, And that he seyde, 'Myn owene trewe
wyf,

Do as thee lust the terme of al thy lyf, Keep thyn honour, and keep eek myn estaat' — 821

After that day we hadden never debaat
God helpe me so, I was to hym as kynde
As any wyf from Denmark unto Ynde,
And also trewe, and so was he to me 825
I prey to God, that sit in magestee, So blesse his soule for his mercy deere Now wol I seye my tale, if ye wol heere "

Biholde the wordes bitwene the Somonour and the Frere

The Frere lough, whan he hadde herd al
this,

"Now dame," quod he, "so have I joye or blis, 830

This is a long preamble of a tale!"

And whan the Somonour herde the Frere
gale,

"Lo," quod the Somonour, "Goddess armes two!

A frere wol entremette hym everemo

Lo, goode men, a flye and eek a frere 835

Wol falle in every dyssh and eek mateere

What spekestow of preambulacioun?

What! amble, or trotte, or pees, or go sit
doun!

Thou letest oure disport in this manere "

"Ye, woltow so, sire Somonour?" quod
the Frere, 840

"Now, by my feath, I shal, er that I go,

Telle of a somonour swich a tale or two,

That alle the folk shal laughen in this
place "

"Now elles, Frere, I bishrewe thy face," Quod this Somonour, "and I bishrewe

me, 845

But if I telle tales two or thre

Of freres, er I come to Sidyngborne,

That I shal make thyn herte for to morne,

For wel I woot thy pacience is gon " Oure Hooste cride "Pees! and that

anon!" 850

And seyde, "Lat the womman telle hire
tale

Ye fare as folk that dronken ben of ale

Do, dame, telle forth youre tale, and that is best "

"Al redy, sire," quod she, "right as yow
lest,

If I have licence of this worthy Frere " 855

"Yis, dame," quod he, "tel forth, and I wol heere "

Heere endeth the Wyf of Bathe hir Prologe.

THE WIFE OF BATH'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Tale of the Wyf of Bathe

In th'olde dayes of the Kyng Arthour,

Of which that Britons speken greet honour,

Al was this land fulfilled of fayerye 859

The elf-queene, with hir joly compaignye,

Daunced ful ofte in many a grene mede

This was the olde opinion, as I rede,

I speke of manye hundred yeres ago

But now kan no man se none elves mo,

For now the grete charitee and prayers

Of lymytours and othere hooly freres, 866

That serchen every lond and every stream,

As thukke as motes in the sonne-beem,

Blessyng halles, chambres, kichenes,

boures,

Citees, burghes, castels, hye toures, 870

Thropes, bernes, shipnes, dayeryes —

This maketh that ther been no fayeryes

For ther as wont to walken was an elf,

Ther walketh now the lymytour hymself

In undermeles and in morwenynges, 875

And seyth his matyns and his hooly

thynges

As he gooth in his lymytacioun

Wommen may go now sauffy up and doun

In every bussh or under every tree,

Ther is noon oother incubus but he, 880

And he ne wol doon hem but dishonour

And so bifel it that this kyng Arthour

Hadde in his hous a lusty bachelere,

That on a day cam ridyng fro ryver,

And happed that, allone as she was

born, 885

He saugh a mayde walkyng hym bifore,

Of which mayde anon, maugree hir heed,

By verray force, he rafte hire maydenhed,

For which oppressoun was swich clamour

And swich pursute unto the kyng Arthour,

That dampned was thus knyght for to be

deed, 891

By cours of lawe, and sholde han lost his

heed —

Paraventure swich was the statut tho —

But that the queene and othere ladyes mo

So longe preyeden the kyng of grace, 895

Til he his lyf hym graunted in the place,

And yaf hym to the queene, al at hir wille,

To chese whether she wolde hym save or

spille

The queene thanketh the kyng with al hir myght,
 And after this thus spak she to the
 knyght, 900
 Whan that she saugh hir tyme, upon a day
 "Thou standest yet," quod she, "in swich array
 That of thy lyf yet hastow no suretee
 I grante thee lyf, if thou kanst tellen me What thyng is it that wommen moost desaren 905
 Be war, and keep thy nekke-boon from uren!
 And if thou kanst nat tellen it anon,
 Yet shal I yeve thee leve for to gon A twelf-month and a day, to seche and leere
 An answer suffisant in this mateere, 910
 And suretee wol I han, er that thou pace, Thy body for to yelden in this place" Wo was this knyght, and sorwefully he sketh,
 But what! he may nat do al as hym liketh And at the laste he chees hym for to
 wende, 915
 And come agayn, right at the yeres ende, With swich answer as God wolde hym purveye,
 And taketh his leve, and wendeth forth his weye
 He seketh every hous and every place Where as he hopeth for to fynde grace, 920
 To lerne what thyng wommen loven moost,
 But he ne koude arryven in no coost Wher as he myghte fynde in this mateere
 Two creatures accordynge in-feere Somme seyde women loven best
 richesse, 925
 Somme seyde honour, somme seyde joly-
 nesse,
 Somme riche array, somme seyden lust
 abedde,
 And oftetye to be wydwe and wedde Somme seyde that oure hertes been moost esed 929
 Whan that we been yflatered and yplesed
 He gooth ful ny the sothe, I wol nat lye
 A man shal wyne us best with flaterye,
 And with attendance, and with busynesse, Been we ylymed, bothe moore and lesse
 "And somme seyen that we loven best 935
 For to be free, and do right as us lest,

And that no man repreve us of oure vice,
 But seye that we be wise, and no thyng nyce
 For trewely ther is noon of us alle,
 If any wight wol clawe us on the galle, 940
 That we nel kike, for he seith us sooth Assay, and he shal fynde it that so dooth,
 For, be we never so vicious withinne, We wol been holden wise and clene of
 synne
 And somme seyn that greet delit han we 945
 For to been holden stable, and eek secree,
 And in o purpos stedefastly to dwelle,
 And nat biwrewe thyng that men us telle
 But that tale is nat worth a rake-stele Pardee, we wommen konne no thyng hele, 950
 Witnessse on Myda, — wol ye heere the tale?
 Ovyde, amonges othere thynges smale, Seyde Myda hadde, under his longe heres, Growynge upon his heed two asses eres,
 The whiche vice he hydde, as he best
 myghte, 955
 Ful subtlylly from every mannes sighte,
 That, save his wyf, ther wiste of it namo
 He loved hire moost, and trusted hire also,
 He preyede hire that to no creature
 She sholde tellen of his disfigure 960 She swoor him, "Nay," for al this world to wyne,
 She nolde do that vilenyne or synne,
 To make hir housbonde han so foul a name
 She nolde nat telle it for hir owene shame But nathelees, hir thoughte that she dyde, 965
 That she so longe sholde a conseil hyde, Hir thoughte it swal so soore aboute hir
 herte
 That nedely som word hire moste asterte,
 And sith she dorste telle it to no man, Doun to a mareys faste by she ran — 970
 Til she cam there, hir herte was a-fyre —
 And as a bitore bombleth in the myre,
 She leyde hir mouth unto the water doun
 "Bwrewe me nat, thou water, with thy
 soun," Quod she, "to thee I telle it and namo, 975 Myn housbonde hath longe asses erys twol
 Now is myn herte al hool, now is it oute
 I myghte no lenger kepe it, out of doute" Heere may ye se, thogh we a tyme abyde,

Yet out it moot, we kan no conseil hyde 980
 The remenant of the tale if ye wol heere, Redeth Ovyde, and ther ye may it leere This knyght, of which my tale is specially,
 Whan that he saugh he myghte nat come
 therby,
 This is to seye, what wommen love moost, Withinne his brest ful sorweful was the goost 986
 But hoom he gooth, he myghte nat so-journe,
 The day was come that homward moste he tourne
 And in his wey it happed hym to ryde,
 In al his care, under a forest syde, 990
 Wher as he saugh upon a daunce go Of ladies foure and twenty, and yet mo, Toward the whiche daunce he drow ful yerne,
 In hope that som wysdom sholde he lerne
 But certainly, er he cam fully there, 995 Vanysshed was this daunce, he nyste where No creature saugh he that bar lyf, Save on the grene he saugh sittynge a
 wyf —
 A fouler wight ther may no man devyse Agayn the knyght this olde wyf gan ryse, 1000
 And seyde, "Sire knyght, heer forth ne lith no wey
 Tel me what that ye seken, by youre fey!
 Paraventure it may the better be, These olde folk kan muchel thyng," quod
 she
 "My levee mooder," quod this knyght,
 "certeyn 1005
 I nam but deed, but if that I kan seyn What thyng it is that wommen moost desire Koude ye me wisse, I wolde wel quite youre hure"
 "Plight me thy trouthe heere in myn hand," quod she,
 "The nexte thyng that I requere thee, 1010 Thou shalt it do, if it lye in thy myght, And I wol telle it yow er it be nyght"
 "Have heer my trouthe," quod the knyght, "I grante"
 "Thanne," quod she, "I dar me wel avante

Thy lyf is sauf, for I wol stonde therby, Upon my lyf, the queene wol seye as I 1016 Lat se which is the proudeste of hem alle,
 That wereth on a coverchief or a calle,
 That dar seye nay of that I shal thee teche Lat us go forth, withouten lenger speche"
 The rowned she a pistel in his ere, 1021
 And bad hym to be glad, and have no fere Whan they be comen to the court, this
 knyght
 Seyde he had holde his day, as he hadde hight, 1024
 And redy was his answeere, as he sayde
 Ful many a noble wyf, and many a mayde, And many a wydwe, for that they been
 wise,
 The queene hirself sittynge as a justise, Assembled been, his answeere for to heere;
 And afterward this knyght was bode appeere 1030
 To every wight comanded was silence,
 And that the knyght sholde telle in audience
 What thyng that worldly wommen loven
 best This knyght ne stood nat stille as doth a
 best,
 But to his questioun anon answerde 1035
 With manly voys, that al the court it
 herde
 "My lige lady, generally," quod he,
 "Wommen desuren have sovereynetee
 As wel over hir housbond as hir love,
 And for to been in maistrie hym above This is youre mooste desir, though ye me kille 1041
 Dooth as yow list, I am heer at youre
 wille"
 In al the court ne was ther wyf, ne mayde, Ne wydwe, that contraried that he sayde,
 But seyden he was worthy han his lyf 1045
 And with that word up starte the olde wyf, Which that the knyght saugh sittynge on the grene,
 "Mercy," quod she, "my sovereyn lady
 queene!
 Er that youre court departe, do me right
 I taughte this answeere unto the knyght, For which he plighte me his trouthe
 there, 1051
 The firste thyng that I wolde hym requere,
 He wolde it do, if it lay in his myght

Bifore the court thanne preye I thee, sir
knyght,"

Quod she, "that thou me take unto thy
wyf, 1055

For wel thou woost that I have kept thy
lyf

If I seye fals, sey nay, upon thy fey!" Thus knyght answerde, "Allas! and weylawey!

I woot right wel that swich was my biheste For Goddes love, as chees a newe re-
queste! 1060

Taak al my good, and lat my body go"
"Nay, thanne," quod she, "I shrewe us bothe two!

For thogh that I be foul, and oold, and poore,

I nolde for al the metal, ne for oore,
That under erthe is grave, or lith above, But if thy wyf I were, and eek thy
love" 1066

"My love?" quod he, "nay, my dampnacioun!

Allas! that any of my nacioun Sholde evere so foule disparaged be!"
But al for noght, the ende is this, that
he 1070

Constreyned was, he nedes moste hire wedde,

And taketh his olde wyf, and gooth to bedde

Now wolden som men seye, paraventure,
That for my necligence I do no cure 1074

To tellen yow the joye and al th'array
That at the feeste was that ilke day

To which thyng shortly answeren I shal
I seye ther nas no joye ne feeste at al,

Ther nas but hevynesse and muche sorwe
For prively he wedded hire on a morwe,

And al day after hidde hym as an owle, 1081
So wo was hym, his wyf looked so foule

Greet was the wo the knyght hadde in his thought,

Whan he was with his wyf abedde ybrought,
He walweth and he turneth to and fro 1085

His olde wyf lay smylynge everemo, And seyde, "O deere housbonde, bene- diciteel

Fareth every knyght thus with his wyf as ye?

Is this the lawe of kyng Arthures hous?
Is every knyght of his so dangerous? 1090

I am youre owene love and eek youre wyf, I am she which that saved hath youre
lyf,

And, certes, yet ne dide I yow nevere un-
right,

Why fare ye thus with me this firste nyght?
Ye faren lyk a man had lost his wit 1095

What is my gilt? For Goddes love, tel me it,

And it shal been amended, if I may"
"Amended?" quod this knyght, "allas!
nay, nay!

It wol nat been amended nevere mo
Thou art so loothly, and so oold also, 1100

And therto comen of so lough a kynde, That litel wonder is thogh I walwe and wynde

So wolde God myn herte wolde breste!"
"Is this," quod she, "the cause of youre unreste?"

"Ye, certainly," quod he, "no wonder
is" 1105

"Now, sire," quod she, "I koude amende
al this,

If that me liste, er it were dayes thre,
So wel ye myghte bere yow unto me

But, for ye speken of swich gentillesse
As is descended out of old richesse, 1110

That therfore sholden ye be gentil men, Swich arrogance is nat worth an hen

Looke who that is moost vertuous alway, Pryvee and apert, and moost entendeth ay

To do the gentil dedes that he kan, 1115 Taak hym for the grettest gentil man

Crist wole we clayme of hymoure gen-tillesse,

Nat ofoure eldres for hire old richesse
For thogh they yeve us al hir heritage,

For which we clayme to been of heigh parage, 1120

Yet may they nat biquethe, for no thyng,
To noon of us hir vertuous lyvyng,

That made hem gentil men ycalled be,
And bad us folwen hem in swich degree

Wel kan the wise poete of Florence, 1125
That highte Dant, speken in this sentence

Lo, in swich maner rym is Dantes tale
'Ful selde up riseth by his branches smale

Prowesse of man, for God, of his goodnesse, Wole that of hym we claymeoure gentil-

lesse', 1130

For ofoure eldres may we no thyng clayme

But temporel thyng, that man may hurte and mayme

Eek every wight woot this as wel as I,
If gentillesse were plantid natureelly Unto a certeyn lynage doun the lyne, 1135 Pryvee and apert, thanne wolde they nevere fyne

To doon of gentillesse the faire office, They myghte do no vileynye or vice Taak fyr, and ber it in the derkeste hous Bitwix this and the mount of Kaukasous, And lat men shette the dores and go thenne, 1141

Yet wole the fyr as faire lye and brenne
As twenty thousand men myghte it bi-
holde,

His office natureel ay wol it holde,
Up peril of my lyf, til that it dye 1145

Heere may ye se wel how that gentrye Is nat annexed to possessioun, Sith folk ne doon hir operacioun Alwey, as dooth the fyr, lo, in his kynde For, God it woot, men may wel often
fynde 1150

A lordes sone do shame and vileynye,
And he that wole han pris of his gentrye,
For he was boren of a gentil hous,
And hadde his eldres noble and vertuous,
And nel hymselfen do no gentil dedis, 1155 Ne folwen his gentil auncestre that deed is,
He nys nat gentil, be he duc or erl,
For vileyns synful dedes make a cherl For gentillesse nys but renomee

Of thyne auncestres, for hire heigh bountee, 1160

Which is a strange thyng to thy persone Thy gentillesse cometh fro God alone Thanne comth oure verray gentillesse of
grace,

It was no thyng biquethe us with oure
place

Thenketh hou noble, as seith Valerius, Was thilke Tullius Hostilius, 1166
That out of poverte roos to heigh noblesse Reedeth Senek, and redeth eek Boece, Ther shul ye seen expres that it no drede is That he is gentil that dooth gentil dedis And therefore, leeve housbonde, I thus conclude 1171

Al were it that myne auncestres were rude, Yet may the hye God, and so hope I, Grante me grace to lyven vertuously

Thanne am I gentil, whan that I bigynne
To lyven vertuously and weyve synne 1176

And ther as ye of poverte me repreve,
The hye God, on whom that we bileeve,
In wilful poverte chees to lyve his lyf
And certes every man, mayden, or wyf, May understonde that Jhesus, hevene
kyng, 1181

Ne wolde nat chese a vicious lyvyng Glad poverte is an honest thyng, certeyn, This wole Senek and other clerkes seyn Whoso that halt hym payd of his poverte, I holde hym riche, al hadde he nat a
sherte 1186

He that coveteth is a povre wight,
For he wolde han that is nat in his myght,
But he that noght hath, ne coveteth have,
Is riche, although ye holde hym but a knave 1190

Verray poverte, it syngeth proprely, Juvenal seith of poverte myrily
'The povre man, whan he goth by the
weye,

Bifore the theves he may synge and pleye ' Poverte is hateful good and, as I gesse,
A ful greet bryngere out of bisynesse, 1196
A greet amendere eek of sapience
To hym that taketh it in pacience Poverte is this, although it seme alenge, Possessioun that no wight wol challenge Poverte ful ofte, whan a man is lowe, 1201 Maketh his God and eek hymself to
knowe

Poverte a spectacle is, as thynketh me, Thurgh which he may his verray freendes
see

And therefore, sure, syn that I noght yow
greve, 1205

Of my poverte namoore ye me repreve
Now, sure, of elde ye repreve me,
And certes, sure, thogh noon auctoritee
Were in no book, ye gentils of honour Seyn that men sholde an oold wight doon favour, 1210
And clepe hym fader, for youre gentil-
lesse,

And auctours shal I fynden, as I gesse
Now ther ye seye that I am foul and oold, Than drede you noght to been a cokewold,
For filthe and eelde, also moot I thee, 1215
Been grete wardeyns upon chastitee
But natheless, syn I knowe youre delit,

I shal fulfille youre worldly appetat Chese now," quod she, "oon of thise thynges tweye

To han me foul and old til that I deye, 1220
 And be to yow a trewe, humble wyf,
 And nevere yow displesse in al my lyf,
 Or elles ye wol han me yong and fair,
 And take youre aventure of the repair That shal be to youre hous by cause of
 me,

Or in som oother place, may wel be 1226 Now chese yourselven, whether that yow liketh "

This knyght avyseth hym and sore sketh,

But atte laste he seyde in this manere
 "My lady and my love, and wyf so deere,
 I put me in youre wise governance, 1231 Cheseth youreself which may be moost
 plesance,

And moost honour to yow and me also I do no fors the whether of the two,
 For as yow liketh, it suffiseth me " 1235

"Thanne have I gete of yow mastrie,"
 quod she,

"Syn I may chese and governe as me lest?"
 "Ye, certes, wyf," quod he, "I holde it best "

"Kys me," quod she, "we be no lenger
 wrothe,

For, by my trouthe, I wol be to yow
 bothe, 1240

This is to seyn, ye, bothe fair and good
 I prey to God that I moote sterven wood,
 But I to yow be also good and trewe As evere was wyf, syn that the world was
 newe

And but I be to-morn as fair to scene 1245
 As any lady, emperce, or queene,
 That is bitwixe the est and eke the west, Dooth with my lyf and deth right as yow
 lest

Cast up the curtyyn, looke how that it is "
 And whan the knyght saugh verraily al
 this, 1250

That she so fair was, and so yong therto, For joye he hente hire in his armes two,
 His herte bathed in a bath of blisse
 A thousand tyme a-rewe he gan hire kisse,
 And she obeyed hym in every thyng 1255
 That myghte doon hym plesance or likyng
 And thus they lyve unto hir lyves ende
 In parfit joye, and Jhesu Crist us sende Housbondes meeke, yonge, and fressh
 abedde, 1259

And grace t'overbyde hem that we wedde,
 And eek I praye Jhesu shorte hir lyves
 That wol nat be governed by hir wyves,
 And olde and angry nygardes of dispence, God sende hem soone verray pestilence!

Heere endeth the Wyves Tale of Bathe

THE FRIAR'S PROLOGUE

The Prologe of the Freres Tale

This worthy lymytour, this noble Frere, 1265

He made alwey a maner louryng chiere
 Upon the Somonour, but for honestee No vileyns word as yet to hym spak he But atte laste he seyde unto the wyf, "Dame," quod he, "God yeve vow right good lyf! 1270

Ye han heer touched also moot I thee,
 In scole-matere greet difficultee Ye han seyde muche thyng right wel, I seye,
 But, dame, heere as we ryde, by the weye,

Us nedeth nat to speken but of game, 1275
 And lete auctoritees, on Goddes name,
 To prechyng and to scole eek of clergye
 But if it lyke to this compaignye, 1278
 I wol yow of a somonour telle a game Pardee, ye may wel knowe by the name That of a somonour may no good be sayd,

I praye that noon of you be yeve apayd
 A somonour is a rennere up and down
 With mandementz for fornicacioun,
 And is ybet at every townes ende " 1285

Oure Hoost tho spak, "A' sure, ye sholde be hende
And curteys, as a man of youre estaat,
In compaignye we wol have no debaat Telleth youre tale, and lat the Somonour
be"
"Nay," quod the Somonour, "lat hym seye to me 1290
What so hym list, whan it comth to my lot,
By God! I shal hym quiten every grot

I shal hym tellen which a greet honour
It is to be a flaterunge lymytour,
And eek of many another manere cryme Which nedeth nat reheicen at this
tyme, 1296
And his office I shal hym telle, ywis" Oure Hoost answerde, "Pees, namoore of this!"
And after this he seyde unto the Frere,
"Tel forth youre tale, my levee maister
deere" 1300

THE FRIAR'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Freres Tale

Whlom ther was dwellynge in my contree
An erchedeken, a man of heigh degree
That boldely dide execucoun In punysshynge of fornicacioun, Of wiccheecraft, and eek of bawderye, 1305
Of diffamacoun, and avowtrye,
Of chirche reves, and of testamentz,
Of contractes and of lakke of sacramentz, Of usure, and of symonye also But certes, lecchours dide he grettest wo, They sholde syngen if that they were hent, 1311
And smale tytheres weren foule yshent,
If any persoun wolde upon hem pleyne Ther myghte asterte hym no pecunyal
peyne
For smale tithes and for smal offrynge 1315
He made the peple pitously to syng For er the bisshop caughte hem with his hook,
They weren in the erchedeknes book,
And thanne hadde he, thurgh his jurisdiccioun,
Power to doon on hem correccioun 1320
He hadde a somonour redy to his hond, A slyer boye nas noon in Engelond,
For subtilly he hadde his espiaille, That taughte hym wel wher hym myghte availe
He koude spare of lecchours oon or two,
To techen hym to foure and twenty
mo 1326

For thogh this Somonour wood were as an hare,
To telle his harlotrye I wol nat spare,
For we been out of his correccioun
They han of us no jurisdiccoun, 1330 Ne nevere shullen, terme of alle hir
lyves —
"Peter! so been the women of the styves," Quod the Somonour, "yput out of oure cure!"
"Pees! with myschance and with mysaventure!"
Thus seyde oure Hoost, "and lat hym telle his tale 1335
Now telleth forth, thogh that the Somon-our gale, Ne spareth nat, myn owene maister
deere" —
This false theef, this somonour, quod
the Frere,
Hadde alwey bawdes redy to his hond,
As any hauk to lure in Engelond, 1340 That tolde hym al the secree that they
knewe,
For hire acqueyntance was nat come of
newe
They weren his approwours prively
He took hymself a greet profit therby, His maister knew nat alwey what he wan 1345
Withouten mandement a lewed man
He koude somne, on peyne of Cristes curs,

And they were glade for to fille his purs,
 And make hym grete feestes atte nale
 And right as Judas hadde purses smale, And was a thief, right swich a thief was
 he, 1351

His maister hadde but half his duetee
 He was, if I shal yeven hym his laude,
 A thief, and eek a somnour, and a baude
 He hadde eek wenches at his retenue, 1355
 That, whether that sir Robert or sir Huwe, Or Jakke, or Rauf, or whoso that it were That lay by hem, they tolde it in his ere Thus was the wenche and he of oon assent,
 And he wolde fecche a feyned mande-
 ment, 1360

And somme hem to chapitre bothe two,
 And pile the man, and lete the wenche go Thanne wolde he seye, "Freend, I shal for thy sake

Do striken hire out of oure lettres blake, Thee thar namoore as in this cas travaille 1365

I am thy freend, ther I thee may availle" Certeyn he knew of briberyes mo Than possible is to telle in yeres two For in this world nys dogge for the bowe That kan an hurt deer from an hool yknowe 1370

Bet than this somnour knew a sly lecchour, Or an avowtier, or a paramour
 And for that was the fruyt of al his rente, Therefore on it he sette al his entente

And so bifel that ones on a day 1375
 This somnour, evere waityng on his pray, Rood for to somme an old wydwe, a ribbe, Feynyng a cause, for he wolde brybe
 And happed that he saugh bfore hym ryde
 A gay yeman, under a forest syde 1380
 A bowe he bar, and arwes brighte and
 kene,

He hadde upon a courtepy of grene,
 An hat upon his heed with frenges blake
 "Sire," quod this somnour, "hayl, and wel atake!"

"Welcome," quod he, "and every good felawe! 1385

Wher rydestow, under this grene-wode
 shawe?"

Seyde this yeman, "wiltow fer to day?"

This somnour hym answerde and seyde,

"Nay,

Heere faste by," quod he, "is myn entente

To ryden, for to reysen up a rente 1390 That longeth to my lordes duetee" "Artow thanne a bally?" "Ye,"
 quod he

He dorste nat, for verray filthe and shame Seye that he was a somonour, for the name
 "Depardieux," quod this yeman, "deere broother, 1395

Thou art a bally, and I am another
 I am unknowen as in this contree, Of thyn aqueyntance I wolde praye thee,
 And eek of bretherhede, if that yow leste
 I have gold and silver in my cheste, 1400
 If that thee happe to comen in oure shire, Al shal be thyn, right as thou wolt desre"
 "Grantmercy," quod this somonour,
 "by my feith!"

Everych in ootheres hand his trouthe leuth,
 For to be sworne bretheren til they
 deye 1405

In dalhance they ryden forth and pleye This somonour, which that was as ful of jangles,

As ful of venym been thuse waryangles,
 And evere enqueryng upon every thyng,
 "Brother," quod he, "where is now youre dwellyng, 1410

Another day if that I sholde yow seche?"
 This yeman hym answerde in softe speche, "Brother," quod he, "fer in the north
 contree,

Where-as I hope som tyme I shal thee
 see

Er we departe, I shal thee so wel wisse 1415
 That of myn hous ne shaltow nevere mysse"

"Now, brother," quod this somonour,
 "I yow preye,

Teche me, whil that we ryden by the weye, Syn that ye been a baillif as am I, Som subtiltee, and tel me feithfully 1420

In myn office how that I may moost
 wyne,

And spareth nat for conscience ne synne,
 But as my brother tel me, how do ye"

"Now, by my trouthe, brother deere," seyde he,

"As I shal tellen thee a feithful tale, 1425
 My wages been ful streite and ful smale
 My lord is hard to me and daungerous,
 And myn office is ful laborious,

And therefore by extorcions I lyve For sothe, I take al that men wol me yive 1430

Algate, by sleighte or by violence, Fro yeer to yeer I wyne al my dispence I kan no better telle, feithfully "

"Now certes," quod this Somonour, "so fare I

I spare nat to taken, God it woot, 1435
 But if it be to hevy or to hoot

What I may gete in conseil prively, No maner conscience of that have I Nere myn extorcoun, I myghte nat lyven, Ne of swiche japes wol I nat be shryven 1440

Stomak ne conscience ne knowe I noon,
 I shrewe these shrifte-fadres everychoon Wel be we met, by God and by Seint Jame!

But, leeve brother, tel me thanne thy
 name,"

Quod this somonour In this meene
 while 1445

This yeman gan a litel for to smyle
 "Brother," quod he, "wiltow that I thee
 telle?"

I am a feend, my dwellyng is in helle,
 And heere I ryde aboute my purchasyng, To wite wher men wol yeve me any
 thyng 1450

My purchas is th'effect of al my rente Looke how thou rydest for the same
 entente,

To wyne good, thou rekkest nevere how,
 Right so fare I, for ryde wolde I now Unto the worldes ende for a preye " 1455

"A!" quod this somonour, "benedicite!
 what sey ye?"

I wende ye were a yeman trewely Ye han a mannes shap as wel as I, Han ye a figure thanne determinat
 In helle, ther ye been in youre estat?" 1460

"Nay, certainly," quod he, "ther have we noon,

But whan us liketh, we kan take us oon,
 Or elles make yow seme we been shape Somtyme lyk a man, or lyk an ape,
 Or lyk an angel kan I ryde or go 1465

It is no wonder thyng thogh it be so,
 A lowsy jogelour kan deceyve thee, And pardee, yet kan I moore craft than he "

"Why," quod this somonour, "ryde ye thanne or goon

In sondry shap, and nat alwey in oon?"
 "For we," quod he, "wol us swiche formes make 1471

As moost able is oure preyes for to take "
 "What maketh yow to han al this labour?"

"Ful many a cause, leeve sere somonour," Seyde this feend, "but alle thyng hath
 tyme 1475

The day is short, and it is passed pryme,
 And yet ne wan I nothyng in this day I wol entende to wyngnyng, if I may,
 And nat entende oure wites to declare For, brother myn, thy wit is al to bare 1480 To understonde, although I tolde hem thee But, for thou axest why labouren we — For somtyme we been Goddes instru-mentz,

 And meenes to doon his comandementz, Whan that hym list, upon his creatures, 1485

In divers art and in diverse figures Withouten hym we have no myght, certayn,

If that hym list to stonden ther-agayn And somtyme, at oure prayere, han we
 leve 1489

Only the body and nat the soule greve, Witnessen on Job, whom that we didnen wo
 And somtyme han we myght of bothe two,
 This is to seyn, of soule and body eke
 And somtyme be we suffred for to seke Upon a man, and doon his soule unreste, And nat his body, and al is for the
 beste 1496

Whan he withstandeth oure temptacioun,
 It is a cause of his savacioun,
 Al be it that it was nat oure entente
 He sholde be sauf, but that we wolde hym
 hente 1500

And somtyme be we servant unto man,
 As to the archebissshop Seint Dunstan,
 And to the apostles servant eek was I "

"Yet tel me," quod the somonour,
 "feithfully,

Make ye yow newe bodies thus alway 1505
 Of elementz?" The feend answerde,
 "Nay

Somtyme we feyne, and somtyme we aryse
 With dede bodyes, in ful sondry wyse,
 And speke as renably and faire and wel
 As to the Phitonissa dide Samuel 1510

{And yet wol som men seye it was nat he, I do no fors of youre dyvynytee }

But o thyng warne I thee, I wol nat jape, — Thou wolt algates wite how we been shape, Thou shalt herafterward, my brother
deere, 1515

Come there thee nedeth nat of me to leere
For thou shalt, by thyn owene experience, Konne in a chayer rede of this sentence Bet than Virgile, while he was on lyve, Or Dant also Now lat us ryde blyve, 1520
For I wole holde compaignye with thee Til it be so that thou forsake me "

"Nay," quod this somonour, "that shal nat butyde!

I am a yeman, knowen is ful wyde,
My trouthe wol I holde, as in this cas 1525
For though thou were the devel Sathanas, My trouthe wol I holde to my brother,
As I am sworn, and ech of us til oother,
For to be trewe brother in this cas,
And bothe we goon aboutenoure purchas 1530

Taak thou thy part, what that men wol thee yive,

And I shal myn, thus may we bothe lyve And if that any of us have moore than
oother,

Lat hym be trewe, and parte it with his brother "

"I graunte," quod the devel, "by my fey " 1535

And with that word they ryden forth hir
wey

And right at the entryng of the townes
ende,

To which this somonour shoop hym for to
wende,

They saugh a cart that charged was with hey,

Which that a cartere droof forth in his
wey 1540

Deep was the wey, for which the carte
stood

The cartere smoot, and cryde as he were
wood,

"Hayt, Brok! hayt, Scot! what spare ye for the stones?

The feend," quod he, "yow fecche, body and bones,

As ferforthly as evere were ye foled, 1545
So muche wo as I have with yow thoked!

The devel have al, bothe hors and cart and
hey!"

This somonour seyde, "Heere shal we have a pley "

And near the feend he drough, as noght ne were

Ful prively, and rownded in his ere 1550
"Herkne, my brother, herkne, by thy feith!

Herestow nat how that the cartere seith?
Hent it anon, for he hath yeve it thee, Bothe hey and cart, and eek his caples
there "

"Nay," quod the devel, "God woot, never a deel! 1555

It is nat his entente, trust me weel

Axe hym thyself, if thou nat trowest me, Or elles stynt a whyle, and thou shalt see "

This cartere thakketh his hors upon the croupe,

And they bigonne to drawen and to stoupe 1560

"Heyt! now," quod he, "ther Jhesu Crist yow blesse,

And al his handwerk, bothe moore and
lesse!

That was wel twight, myn owene lyard boy
I pray God save thee, and Sente Loy!

Now is my cart out of the slow, pardee!"
"Lo, brother," quod the feend, "what tolde I thee? 1566

Heere may ye se, myn owene deere brother,
The carl spak oo thing, but he thoghte
another

Lat us go forth aboutenoure viage, Heere wynne I nothyng upon cariage " 1570

When that they coomen somewhat out of townne,

This somonour to his brother gan to rowne
"Brother," quod he, "heere woneth an old rebekke,

That hadde almost as hef to lese hire nekke

As for to yeve a peny of hir good 1575
I wole han twelf pens, though that she be
wood,

Or I wol sompne hire untooure office,
And yet, God woot, of hire knowe I no vice

But for thou kanst nat, as in this contree, Wyane thy .coot, taak heer ensample of
me " 1580

This somonour clappeth at the wydwes gate
'Com out," quod he, "thou olde virytrate!
I trowe thou hast som frere or preest with
thee"
"Who clappeth there?" seyde this wyf,
"benedictee!"
God save you, sire, what is youre sweete
wille?" 1585
"I have," quod he, "of somonce here a
bille,
Up peyne of cursyng, looke that thou be To-morn before the erchedeknes knee, T'answere to the court of certeyn thynges"
"Now, Lord," quod she, "Crist Jhesu, kyng of kynges, 1590
So wisly helpe me, as I ne may I have been syk, and that ful many a day
I may nat go so fer," quod she, "ne ryde,
But I be deed, so priketh it in my syde
May I nat axe a libel, sire somonour, 1595
And answeere there by my procoutour To swich thyng as men wole opposen me?"
"Yis," quod this somonour, "pay anon, lat se,
Twelf pens to me, and I wol thee acquite
I shal no profit han therby but lite, 1600
My maister hath the profit, and nat I Com of, and lat me ryden hastily, Yif me twelf pens, I may no lenger tarye"
"Twelf pens!" quod she, "now, lady Sainte Marie
So wisly help me out of care and synne, 1605 This wyde world thogh that I sholde
wynne,
Ne have I nat twelf pens withinne myn hoold
Ye knowen wel that I am povre and oold, Kithe youre almesse on me povre wrecche"
"Nay thanne," quod he, "the foule feend me fecche 1610
If I th'excuse, though thou shul be spilt!"
"Allas!" quod she, "God woot, I have no gilt"
"Pay me," quod he, "or by the sweete sainte Anne,
As I wol bere away thy newe panne
For dette which thou owest me of old 1615 Whan that thou madest thyn housbonde cokewold,
I payde at hoom for thy correccioun"

"Thou lxt!" quod she, "by my sava-cioun, 1618
Ne was I nevere er now, wydwe ne wyf, Somoned unto youre court in al my lyf, Ne nevere I nas but of my body trewe!
Unto the devel blak and rough of hewe Yeve I thy body and my panne also!"
And whan the devel herde hire cursen so Upon hir knees, he seyde in this manere,
"Now, Mabely, myn owene mooder
deere, 1626
Is this youre wyl in earnest that ye seye?"
"The devel," quod she, "so fecche hym er he deye,
And panne and al, but he wol hym re-pente!"
"Nay, olde stot, that is nat myn en-
tente," 1630
Quod this somonour, "for to repente me
For any thyng that I have had of thee I wolde I hadde thy smok and every clooth!"
"Now, brother," quod the devel, "be nat wrooth, Thy body and this panne been myne by
right 1635
Thou shalt with me to helle yet to-nyght, Where thou shalt knowen of oure privtee Moore than a maister of dyvynytee"
And with that word this foule feend hym
hente,
Body and soule he with the devel wente
Where as that somonours han hir heritage 1641
And God, that maked after his ymage Mankynde, save and gyde us, alle and
some,
And leve thise somonours goode men bicomel Lordynges, I koude han toold yow, quod this Frere, 1645
Hadde I had leyser for this Somnour heere, After the text of Crist, Poul, and John,
And of oure othere doctours many oon, Swiche peynes that youre hertes myghte agryse,
Al be it so no tonge may it devyse, 1650 Thogh that I myghte a thousand wynter
telle
The peynes of thilke cursed hous of helle
But for to kepe us fro that cursed place, Waketh, and preyeth Jhesu for his grace

So kepe us fro the temptour Sathanas 1655 Herketh this word! beth war, as in this cas
 "The leoun sit in his awayt alway To sle the innocent, if that he may"
 Disposeth ay youre hertes to withstonde The feend, that yow wolde make thral and
 bonde 1660

He may nat tempte yow over youre myght, For Crist wol be youre champion and
 knyght
 And prayeth that thise somonours hem repente
 Of hir mysdedes, er that the feend hem
 hente!

This Somonour in his styropes hye
 stood, 1665

Upon this Frere his herte was so wood That lyk an aspen leef he quook for ire "Lordynges," quod he, "but o thyng I
 desire,

I yow biseke that, of youre curteisye, Syn ye han herd this false Frere lye, 1670
 As suffreth me I may my tale telle
 This Frere bosteth that he knoweth helle,
 And God it woot, that it is litel wonder, Freres and feendes been but lyte asonder For, pardee, ye han ofte tyme herd
 telle 1675

How that a frere ravysshed was to helle
 In spirit ones by a visoun,
 And as an angel ladde hym up and doun,
 To shewen hym the peynes that ther were,
 In al the place saugh he nat a frere, 1680
 Of oother folk he saugh ynowe in wo Unto this angel spak the frere tho

'Now, sire,' quod he, 'han freres swich a grace
 That noon of hem shal come to this
 place?'

'Yis,' quod this angel, 'many a mil-houn!' 1685

And unto Sathanas he ladde hym doun
 'And now hath Sathanas,' seith he, 'a tayl

Brodder than of a carryk is the sayl Hold up thy tayl, thou Sathanas!' quod
 he, 1689

'Shewe forth thyn ers, and lat the frere se Where is the nest of freres in this place!'
 And er that half a furlong wey of space,
 Right so as bees out swarmen from an hyve,
 Out of the develes ers ther gonne dryve Twenty thousand freres on a route, 1695
 And thurghout helle swarmed al aboute, And comen agayn as faste as they may
 gon,

And in his ers they crepten everychon
 He clapte his tayl agayn and lay ful stille This frere, whan he looked hadde his fille 1700

Upon the tormentz of this sory place,
 His spirit God restored, of his grace, Unto his body agayn, and he awook
 But natheles, for fere yet he quook,
 So was the develes ers ay in his mynde, 1705
 That is his heritage of verray kynde God save yow alle, save this cursed Frere!
 My prologe wol I ende in this manere "

THE SUMMONER'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Somonour his Tale

Lordynges, ther is in Yorkshire, as I
gesse,
A mersshy contree called Holderneshe, 1710
In which ther wente a lymytour aboute,
To preche, and eek to begge, it is no doute
And so bifel that on a day this frere Hadde preched at a churche in his manere,
And specially, aboven every thyng, 1715 Excited he the peple in his prechyng
To trentals, and to yeve, for Goddes sake, Wherwith men myghte hooly houses make,
Ther as divine servyce is honoured,
Nat ther as it is wasted and devoured, 1720 Ne ther it nedeth nat for to be yive,
As to possessioners, that mowen lyve, Thanked be God, in wele and habun-
daunce
"Trentals," seyde he, "delveren fro penaunce 1724
Hir freendes soules, as wel olde as yonge, — Ye, whan that they been hastily ysonge, Nat for to holde a preest joly and gay,
He syngeth nat but o masse in a day Delvereth out," quod he, "anon the soules'
Ful hard it is with fleshhook or with oules 1730
To been yclawed, or to brenne or bake Now spede yow hastily, for Cristes sake!" And whan this frere had seyde al his
entente,
With qui cum patre forth his wey he wente Whan folk in churche had yeve him what hem leste, 1735
He wente his wey, no lenger wolde he reste
With scrippe and tipped staf, ytukked hye,
In every hous he gan to poure and pryde,
And beggeth mele and chese, or elles corn
His felawe hadde a staf tipped with horn,
A peyre of tables al of yvory, 1741
And a poyntel polysshed fetusly,
And wroot the names alwey, as he stood,
Of alle folk that yaf hym any good, Ascaunces that he wolde for hem
preye 1745
"Yif us a busschel whete, malt, or reye,
A Goddes kechyl, or a trype of chese,

Or elles what yow lyst, we may nat chese,
A Goddes halfpeny, or a masse peny, Or yif us of youre brawn, if ye have
eny, 1750
A dagon of youre blanket, leeve dame, Oure suster deere, — lo! heere I write youre
name, —
Bacon or beef, or swich thyng as ye
fynde"
A sturdy harlot wente ay hem bihynde, That was hir hostes man, and bar a sak, 1755
And what men yaf hem, leyde it on his bak
And whan that he was out at dore, anon
He planed away the names everichon That he biforn had writen in his tables, He served hem with nyfles and with fables 1760
"Nay, ther thou lixt, thou Somonour!" quod the Frere
"Pees," quod oure Hoost, "for Cristes mooder deere!
Tel forth thy tale, and spare it nat at al"
"So thryve I," quod this Somonour,
"so I shal!"
So longe he wente, hous by hous, til he 1765
Cam til an hous ther he was wont to be Refreshed moore than in an hundred placis Syk lay the goode man whos that the place
is,
Bedrede upon a couche lowe he lay
"Deus huc!" quod he, "o Thomas, freend,
good day!" 1770
Seyde this frere, curteisly and softe
"Thomas," quod he, "God yelde yow' ful
ofte
Have I upon this bench faren ful weel, Heere have I eten many a myrie meel" And fro the bench he droof away the cat, 1775
And leyde adoun his potente and his hat,
And eek his scrippe, and sette hym softe
adoun
His felawe was go walked into toun

Forth with his knave, into that hostelrye Where as he shoop hym thilke nyght to
lye 1780

"O deere maister," quod this sike man,
"How han ye fare sith that March bigan?" I saugh yow noght this fourtenyght or
moore "

"God woot," quod he, "laboured have I ful soore,

And specially, for thy savacion 1785
Have I seyde many a precious orison, And for oure othere freendes, God hem
blesse!

I have to day been at youre churche at messe,
And seyde a sermon after my symple wit,
Nat al after the text of hooly writ, 1790

For it is hard to yow, as I suppose,
And therefore wol I teche yow al the glose Glosynge is a glorious thyng, certeyn,
For lettre sleeth, so as we clerkes seyn There have I taught hem to be charitable, 1795

And spende hir good ther it is resonable, And there I saugh oure dame, — a' where is she?"

"Yond in the yerd I trowe that she be," Seyde this man, "and she wol come anon "

"Ey, maister, welcome be ye, by Seint
John!" 1800

Seyde this wyf, "how fare ye, hertely?"
The frere ariseth up ful curteisly,

And hire embraceth in his armes narwe, And kiste hire sweete, and churketh as a sparwe

With his lypes "Dame," quod he, "right
weel, 1805

As he that is youre servant every deel, Thanked be God, that yow yaf soule and
lyf!

Yet saugh I nat this day so fair a wyf In al the churche, God so save me!"

"Ye, God amende defautes, sire," quod
she 1810

"Algates, welcome be ye, by my fey!"
"Graunt mercy, dame, thus have I founde alwey

But of youre grete goodnesse, by youre
leve,

I wolde prey yow that ye nat yow greve,
I wole with Thomas speke a litel throwe These curatz been ful necligent and slowe 1816

To grope tendrely a conscience
In shrift, in prechyng is my diligence,
And stude in Petres wordes and in Poules I walke, and fische Cristen mennes
soules, 1820

To yelden Jhesu Crist his propre rente, To sprede his word is set al myn entente "
"Now, by youre leve, o deere sire,"
quod she,

"Chideth him weel, for seinte Trinite!
He is as angry as a pissemyre, 1825

Though that he have al that he kan desire, Though I hym wrye a-nyght and make hym warm,

And over hym leye my leg outhur myn arm,

Fe groneth lyk oure boor, lith in oure sty Cother desporth right noon of hym have I,
I may nat plesse hym in no maner cas " 1831

"O Thomas, je vous dy, Thomas!
Thomas!

Thus maketh the feend, this moste ben amended

Ire is a thyng that hye God defended,
And therof wol I speke a word or two " 1835

"Now, maister," quod the wyf, "er that I go,

What wol ye dyne? I wol go theraboute "
"Now, dame," quod he, "je vous dy sanz
doute,

Have I nat of a capon but the lyvere,
And of youre softe breed nat but a shyvere,
And after that a rosted pigges heed — 1841

But that I nolde no beest for me were
deed —

Thanne hadde I with yow hoomly suffi-
saunce

I am a man of litel sustenaunce,
My spirit hath his fostryng in the Bible

The body is ay so redy and penyble 1846
To wake, that my stomak is destroyed

I prey yow, dame, ye be nat annoyed, Though I so friendly yow my conseil
shewe 1849

By God! I wolde nat telle it but a fewe "
"Now, sire," quod she, "but o word er
I go

My child is deed withinne thise wykes two,
Soone after that ye wente out of this toun "

"His deeth saugh I by revelacioun," Seide this frere, "at hoom in oure dortour 1855

I dar wel seyn that, er that half an hour
 After his deeth, I saugh hym born to blusse In myn avision, so God me wisse!
 So dide oure sexteyn and oure fermerer,
 That han been trewe freres fifty yeer, 1860 They may now — God be thanked of his loone! —

Maken hir jubilee and walke allone
 And up I roos, and al oure covent eke,
 With many a teere trikyng on my cheke, Withouten noyse or claterynge of belles, Te Deum was oure song, and nothyng elles, 1866

Save that to Crist I seyde an orison, Thankynge hym of his revelacion
 For, sire and dame, trusteth me right weel, Oure orisons been moore effectueel, 1870
 And moore we seen of Cristes scree
 thynges,

Than burel folk, although they weren kynges

We lyve in poverte and in abstinence,
 And burell folk in richesse and despence Of mete and drynke, and in hir foul delit 1875

We han this worldes lust al in despit Lazar and Dives lyveden diversiv,
 And divers gerdon hadden they therby Whoso wol preye, he moot faste and be clene,

And fatte his soule, and make his body
 lene 1880

We fare as seith th'apostle, clooth and foode

Suffisen us, though they be nat ful goode
 The clenness and the fastynge of us freres Maketh that Crist accepteth oure preyeres Lo, Moyses forty dayes and forty
 nyght 1885

Fasted, er that the heaghe God of myght Spak with hym in the mountayne of Synay With empty wombe, fastynge many a day, Receyved he the lawe that was writen With Goddes fynger, and Elye, wel ye witen, 1890

In mount Oreb, er he hadde any speche
 With hye God, that is oure lyves leche, He fasted longe, and was in contem-plaunce

Aaron, that hadde the temple in governaunce,

And eek the othere preestes everichon, 1895

Into the temple whan they sholde gon
 To preye for the peple, and do servyse,
 They nolden drynken in no maner wyse No drynke which that myghte hem dronke
 make, 1899

But there in abstinence preye and wake, Lest that they deyden — I aak heede what I seye!

But they be sobre that for the peple preye, War that I seye — namoore, for it suf-fiseth 1903

Oure Lord Jhesu, as hooly writ devyseth, Yaf us ensample of fastynge and preyeres Therfore we mendynantz, we sely freres, Been wedded to poverte and continence,
 To charite, humblesse, and abstinence,
 To persecucioun for rightwisesse, To wepyng, misericorde, and clen-
 nesse 1910

And therefore may ye se that oure preyeres —

I speke of us, we mendynantz, we fieres —
 Been to the hye God moore acceptable Than youre, with youre feestes at the table

Fro Paradys first, if I shal nat lye, 1915
 Was man out chaced for his glotonye,
 And chaast was man in Paradys, certeyn But herkne now, Thomas, what I shal
 seyn

I ne have no text of it, as I suppose,
 But I shal fynde it in a maner glose, 1920
 That specially oure sweete Lord Jhesus Spak thus by freres, whan he seyde thus 'Blessed be they that povere in spirit been'

And so forth al the gospel may ye seen, Wher it be likker oure professioun, 1925
 Or hors that swymmen in possessioun Fy on hire pompe and on hire glotonye!
 And for hir lewednesse I hem diffive

Me thinketh they been lyk Jovinyan, Fat as a whale, and walkynge as a swan, Al vinolent as botel in the spence 1931
 Hir preyer is of ful greet reverencce, Whan they for soules seye the psalm of Davit,

Lo, 'buf!' they seye, 'cor meum eructavit!' Who folweth Cristes gospel and his
 foore, 1935

But we that humble been, and chaast, and
 poore,

Werkers of Goddes word, nat auditours?
 Therefore, right as an hauk up at a sours Up springeth into th'er, right so prayeres Of charitable and chaste bisy freres 1940 Maken hur sours to Goddes eres two Thomas! Thomas! so moote I ryde or go,
 And by that lord that clepid is Sent Yve, Nere thou oure brother, sholdestou nat
 thryve

In our chapitre praye we day and nyght To Crist, that he thee sende heele and
 myght 1946

Thy body for to weelden hastily"
 "God woot," quod he, "no thyng therof feele I!

As help me Crist, as in a fewe yeres,
 I have spent upon diverse manere freres Ful many a pound, yet fare I never the bet 1951

Certeyn, my good have I almost biset Farwel, my gold, for it is al ago!"
 The frere answerde, "O Thomas, dostow so?

What nedeth yow diverse freres seche? 1955
 What nedeth hym that hath a parfit leche
 To sechen othere leches in the toun?
 Youre inconstance is youre confusoun Holde ye thanne me, or elles oure covent,
 To praye for yow been insufficient? 1960
 Thomas, that jape nys nat worth a myte Youre maladye is for we han to lyte
 A! yif that covent half a quarter otes!
 A! yif that covent foure and twenty grotes!
 A! yif that frere a peny, and lat hym
 go! 1965

Nay, nay, Thomas, it may no thyng be so!
 What is a ferthyng worth parted in twelve?
 Lo, ech thyng that is oned in himselfe Is moore strong than whan it is toscatered Thomas, of me thou shalt nat been yflatered, 1970
 Thou woldest han oure labour al for noght
 The hye God, that al this world hath
 wrought,

Seith that the werkman worthy is his hyre Thomas, noght of youre tresor I desire As for myself, but that al oure covent 1975
 To preye for yow is ay so diligent,
 And for to buylden Cristes owene churche Thomas, if ye wol lernen for to wirche,
 Of buyldyng up of churches may ye fynde,
 If it be good, in Thomas lyf of Inde 1980

Ye lye heere ful of anger and of ire,
 With which the devel set youre herte afyre,
 And chiden heere the sely innocent, Youre wyf, that is so meke and pacient And therefore, Thomas, trowe me if thee
 leste, 1985

Ne stryve nat with thy wyf, as for thy
 beste,

And ber this word away now, by thy feith, Touchynge swich thyng, lo, what the wise seith

'Withinne thyn hous ne be thou no leon,
 To thy subgitz do noon oppression, 1990
 Ne make thyne aqueyntances nat to flee'
 And, Thomas, yet eft-soones I charge
 thee,

Be war from hire that in thy bosom slepeth,

War fro the serpent that so sily crepeth
 Under the gras, and styngeth subtilly 1995
 Be war, my sone, and herkne paciently, That twenty thousand men han lost hir
 lyves

For stryvyng with hur lemmans and hur wyves

Now sith ye han so hooly and meke a wyf, What nedeth yow, Thomas, to maken stryf? 2000

Ther nys, ywys, no serpent so cruel, Whan man tret on his tayl, ne half so fel, As womman is, whan she hath caught an
 ire,

Vengeance is thanne al that they desure
 Ire is a synne, oon of the grete of sevene, Abhomynable unto the God of hevене,
 And to hymself it is destruccion 2007

This every lewed viker or person Kan seye, how ire engendreth homycide Ire is, in sooth, executour of pryde 2010
 I koude of ire seye so muche sorwe, My tale sholde laste til to-morwe And therefore preye I God, bothe day and
 nyght,

An irous man, God sende hym litel myght!
 It is greet harm and eke greet pitee 2015
 To sette an irous man in heigh degree

Whilom ther was an irous potestat,
 As seith Senek, that, duryng his estaat, Upon a day out ryden knyghtes two,
 And as Fortune wolde that it were so, 2020 That oon of hem cam boom, that oother
 noght

Anon the knyght bifore the juge is broght, That seyde thus, 'Thou hast thy felawe
slayn,

For which I deme thee to the deeth,
certayn'

And to another knyght comanded he, 2025
'Go lede hym to the deeth, I charge thee'
And happed, as they wente by the weye Toward the place ther he sholde deye, The knyght cam which men wenden had be deed

Thanne thoughte they it were the beste
reed 2030

To lede hem bothe to the juge agayn They seiden, 'Lord, the knyght ne hath nat slayn

His felawe, heere he standeth hool alyve'
'Ye shul be deed,' quod he, 'so moot I
thryve!

That is to seyn, bothe oon, and two, and
thre!' 2035

And to the firste knyght right thus spak
he,

'I dampned thee, thou most algate be deed
And thou also most nedes lese thyn heed,
For thou art cause why thy felawe deyth'
And to the thridde knyght right thus he seith, 2040

'Thou hast nat doon that I comanded
thee'

And thus he dide doon sleen hem alle thre Irous Cambises was eek dronkelewe, And ay delited hym to been a shrewde
And so bifel, a lord of his meynee, 2045
That loved vertuous moraltee, Seyde on a day bitwix hem two right thus
'A lord is lost, if he be vicious,

And dronkenesse is eek a foul record
Of any man, and namely in a lord 2050 Ther is ful many an eye and many an ere Awaityng on a lord, and he noot where For Goddes love, drynk moore attempere!
Wyn maketh man to lesen wrecchedly His mynde and eek his lymes everichon'

'The revers shaltou se,' quod he,
'anon, 2056

And preeve it by thyn owene experience,
That wyn ne dooth to folk no swich offence Ther is no wyn breveth me my myght
Of hand ne foot, ne of myne eyen sight'
And for despit he drank ful muchel
moore, 2061

An hundred part, than he hadde don bifoore,

And right anon this irous, cursed wrecche Leet this knyghtes sone bifore hym fecche, Comandyng hym he sholde bifore hym
stonde 2065

And sodeynly he took his bowe in honde,
And up the streng he pulled to his ere,
And with an arwe he slow the child right
there

'Now whether have I a siker hand or
noon?'

Quod he, 'is al my myght and mynde
agon? 2070

Hath wyn bireved me myn eyen sight?' What sholde I telle th'answere of the
knyght?

His sone was slayn, ther is namoore to seye Beth war, therfore, with lordes how ye
pleye

Syngeth Placebo, and 'I shal, if I kan,'
But if it be unto a povre man 2076
To a povre man men sholde his vices telle, But nat to a lord, thogh he sholde go to
helle

Lo irous Cirus, thulke Percien,
How he destroyed the ryver of Gysen, 2080 For that an hors of his was dreynt
therinne,

Whan that he wente Babiloigne to wyne
He made that the ryver was so smal
That wommen myghte wade it over al Lo, what seyde he that so wel teche kan?
'Ne be no felawe to an irous man, 2086 Ne with no wood man walke by the weye, Lest thee repente,' I wol no ferther seye

Now, Thomas, leewe brother, lef thyn
ire,

Thou shalt me fynde as just as is a squyre Hoold nat the develes knyf ay at thyn
herte — 2091

Thyn angre dooth thee al to soore
smerte —

But shewe to me al thy confessioun"
'Nay,' quod the sike man, "by Seint Symoun!

I have be shryven this day at my curat
I have hym toold hoolly al myn estat, 2096 Nedeth namoore to speken of it," seith he,
"But if me list, of myn humylitee"

"Yif me thanne of thy gold, to make oure cloystre,"

Quod he, "for many a muscle and many an oystre, 2100

Whan othere men han ben ful wel at eyse, Hath been oure foode, our cloystre for to reyse

And yet, God woot, unnethe the funde-ment

Parfourned is, ne of our pavement Nys nat a tyle yet withunne oure wones By God! we owen fourty pound for stones 2106

Now help, Thomas, for hym that harwed helle!

For elles moste we oure bookes selle
And if yow lakke oure predicacioun, Thanne goth the world al to destruccioun 2110

For whoso wolde us fro this world bureve,
So God me save, Thomas, by youre leve, He wolde bureve out of this world the
sonne

For who kan teche and werchen as we konne?

And that is nat of litel tyme," quod he,
"But syn Elye was, or Elise, 2116
Han freres been, that fynde I of record,
In charitee, ythanked be oure Lord!
Now Thomas, help, for seinte charitee!" And doun anon he sette hym on his knee 2120

This sike man wax wel ny wood for ire
He wolde that the frere had been on-fire,
With his false dissymulacioun

"Swich thyng as is in my possessioun," Quod he, "that may I yeve yow, and noon
oother 2125

Ye see me thus, how that I am youre
brother?"

"Ye, certes," quod the frere, "trusteth
weel

I took oure dame oure lettre with oure seel "

"Now wel," quod he, "and somewhat shal I yive

Unto youre hooly covent whil I lyve, 2130
And in thyn hand thou shalt it have anon,
On this condicton, and oother noon,
That thou departe it so, my deere brother, That every frere have also muche as
oother

Thou shaltou swere on thy professioun, 2135 Withouten fraude or cavillacioun "

"I swere it," quod this frere, "by my feith!"

And therwithal his hand in his he leith,
"Lo, heer my feith, in me shal be no lak "

"Now thanne, put in thyn hand doun by my bak," 2140

Seyde this man, "and grope wel bihynde Byneth the my buttok there shaltow fynde
A thyng that I have hyd in pryvete "

"A!" thoghte this frere, "that shal go with me!"

And doun his hand he launcheth to the clifte, 2145

In hope for to fynde there a yifte
And whan this sike man felte this frere Aboute his tuwel grope there and heere, Amydde his hand he leet the frere a fart, Ther nys no capul, drawyng in a cart, 2150

That myghte have lete a fart of swich a
soun

The frere up stirte as dooth a wood leoun, —

"A! false cheryl," quod he, "for Goddes
bones!

This hastow for despit doon for the nones Thou shalt abyte this fart, if that I may!"

His meynee, whiche that herden this affray, 2156

Cam lepyng in and chaced out the frere,
And forth he gooth, with a ful angry
cheere,

And fette his felawe, ther as lay his stoor
He looked as it were a wilde boor, 2160

He grynte with his teeth, so was he wrooth
A sturdy paas doun to the court he gooth, Wher as ther woned a man of greet honour,

To whom that he was alwey confessor This worthy man was lord of that village 2165

This frere cam as he were in a rage,
Where as this lord sat etyng at his bord, Unnethes myghte the frere speke a word, Til atte laste he seyde, "God yow see!"

This lord gan looke, and seide, "Benedicitee!" 2170

What, frere John, what maner world is
this?

I se wel that som thyng ther is amys, Ye looken as the wode were ful of thevys Sit doun anon, and tel me what youre grief is,

And it shal been amended, if I may " 2175

"I have," quod he, "had a despit this day, God yelde yow, adoun in youre village,
 That in this world is noon so povre a page
 That he nolde have abhomynacioun
 Of that I have receyved in youre toun 2180
 And yet ne greveth me nothyng so soore,
 As that this olde cherl with lokkes hoore Blasphemed hath oure hooly covent eke"
 "Now, maister," quod this lord, "I yow biseke"
 "No maister, sre," quod he, "but servitour, 2183
 Thogh I have had in scole swich honour God liketh nat that 'Raby' men us calle, Neither in market ne in youre large halle"
 "No fors," quod he, "but tel me al youre grief"
 "Sre," quod this frere, "an odious meschief 2190
 This day bityd is to myn ordre and me,
 And so, per consequens, to ech degree Of hooly churche, God amende it soone!"
 "Sre," quod the lord, "ye woot what is to doone Distempre yow noght, ye be my con-fessour, 2195
 Ye been the salt of the erthe and the savour
 For Goddes love, youre pacience ye holde!
 Tel me youre grief", and he anon hym
 tolde,
 As ye han herd biforn, ye woot wel what
 The lady of the hous ay stille sat 2200 Til she had herd what the frere sayde
 "Ey, Goddes mooder," quod she, "Blisful
 mayde!
 Is ther oght elles? telle me feithfully" "Madame," quod he, "how thynke ye herby?"
 "How that me thynketh?" quod she,
 "so God me speede, 2205
 I seye, a cherl hath doon a cherles dede What shold I seye? God lat hym nevere
 thee!
 His sike heed is ful of vanytee,
 I holde hym in a manere frenesye" "Madame," quod he, "by God, I shal
 nat lye, 2210
 But I on oother wyse may be wreke,
 I shal disclaundre hym over al ther I speke,
 This false blasphemour, that charged me

To parte that wol nat departed be,
 To every man yliche, with meschaunce!"
 The lord sat stille as he were in a traunce, 2216
 And in his herte he rolled up and doun,
 "How hadde this cherl ymaginacioun To shewe swich a probleme to the frere" Nevere erst er now herde I of swich mateere 2220
 I trowe the devel putte it in his mynde
 In ars-metrike shal ther no man fynde, Biforn this day, of swich a queston Who sholde make a demonstracion That every man snoalde have yliche his part 2225
 As of the soun or savour of a fart?
 O nyce, proude cherl, I shrewe his face!
 Lo, sires," quod the lord, "with harde
 grace!
 Who evere herde of swich a thyng er now?
 To every man ylike, tel me how? 2230
 It is an impossible, it may nat be Ey, nyce cherl, God lete him nevere thee!
 The rumblynge of a fart, and every soun, Nis but of air reverberacioun, 2234
 And evere it wasteth litel and litel away Ther is no man kan deemen, by my fey,
 If that it were departed equally What, lo, my cherl, lo, yet how shrewedly Unto my confessor to-day he spak!
 I holde hym certeyn a demonyak! 2240 Now ete youre mete, and lat the cherl go
 pleye,
 Lat hym go hongre hymself a devel weye!"
 The wordes of the lordes squer and his kervere for departyng of the fart on twelwe
 Now stood the lordes squer at the bord That karf his mete, and herde word by word
 Of alle thynges whiche I have yow
 sayd 2245
 "My lord," quod he, "be ye nat yvele apavd,
 I koude telle, for a gowne-clooth,
 To yow, sre frere, so ye be nat wrooth, How that this fart sholde evene deled be Among youre covent, if it lyked me" 2250
 "Tel," quod the lord, "and thou shalt have anon

A gowne-clooth, by God and by Seint
John!"

"My lord," quod he, "whan that the weder is fair,

Withouten wynd or perturbynge of air, Lat brynge a cartwheel heere into this
halle, 2255

But looke that it have his spokes alle, —
Twelve spokes hath a cartwheel comunly And bryng me thanne twelve freres, woot ye why?

For thrittene is a covent, as I gesse Youre confessour heere, for his worthy-
nesse, 2260

Shal parfourne up the nombre of his covent

Thanne shal they knele doun, by oon
assent,

And to every spokes ende, in this manere, Ful sadly leye his nose shal a frere Youre noble confessour — there God hym
save! — 2265

Shal holde his nose upright under the nave Thanne shal this cherl, with bely stif and tought

As any tabour, hyder been ybrought, And sette hym on the wheel right of this cart, 2269

Upon the nave, and make hym lete a fart
And ye shul seen, up perl of my lyf,

By preeve which that is demonstratif,
That equally the soun of it wol wende,
And eke the styнк, unto the spokes ende, Save that this worthy man, youre con-fessour, 2275

By cause he is a man of greet honour, Shal have the firste fruyt, as resoun is The noble usage of freres yet is this,
The worthy men of hem shul first be served, 2279

And certainly he hath it weel disserved
He hath to-day taught us so muche good With prechyng in the pulpt ther he stood,
That I may vouche sauf, I sey for me,
He hadde the firste smel of fartes thre,
And so wolde al his covent hardily, 2285
He bereth hym so faire and hoolly "

The lord, the lady, and ech man, save
the frere,

Seyde that Jankyn spak, in this matere,
As wel as Euchde dide or Ptholomee Touchyng the cherl, they seyde, sub-tiltee 2290

And heigh wit made hvm speken as he spak,

He nys no fool, ne no demonyak
And Jankyn hath ywonne a newe gowne — My tale is doon, we been almost at towne

Heere endeth the Somonours Tale

THE CLERK'S PROLOGUE

Heere folweth the Prologe of the Clerkes Tale of Oxenford

“Sire Clerk of Oxenford,” oure Hooste
sayde,

“Ye ryde as coy and stille as dooth a mayde Were newe spoused, sittynge at the bord, Thus day ne herde I of youre tonge a word
I trowe ye studie aboute som sophyme, 5 But Salomon seith ‘every thyng hath
tyme’

For Goddes sake, as beth of bettere
cheere!

It is no tyme for to studien heere Telle us som myrie tale, by youre fey!
For what man that is entred in a pley, 10
He nedes moot unto the pley assente
But precheth nat, as freres doon in Lente,
To make us for oure olde synnes wepe, Ne that thy tale make us nat to slepe

Telle us som murie thyng of aventures 15 Yourre termes, youre colours, and youre
figures,

Keepe hem in stoor til so be that ye endite Heigh style, as whan that men to kynges write

Speketh so pleyn at this tyme, we yow
preye,

That we may understonde what ye
seye” 20

This worthy clerk benignely answerde “Hooste,” quod he, “I am under youre yerde,

Ye han of us as now the governance,
And therfore wol I do yow obeisance,
As fer as resoun axeth, hardily 25
I wol yow telle a tale which that I

Lerned at Padowe of a worthy clerk,
As preved by his wordes and his werk
He is now deed and nayled in his cheste,
I prey to God so yeve his soule reste! 30

Fraunceys Petrak, the lauriat poete, Highte this clerk, whos rethorike sweete Enlumyned al Ytaille of poetrie, As Lynyan dide of philosophie Or lawe, or oother art particuler, 35 But deeth, that wol nat suffre us dwellen
heer,

But as it were a twynklyng of an ye, Hem bothe hath slayn, and alle shul we
dye

But forth to tellen of this worthy man
That taughte me this tale, as I bigan, 40 I seye that first with heigh stile he enditeth,

Er he the body of his tale writeth, A prohemye, in the which discryveth he Pemond, and of Saluces the contree,
And speketh of Apennyn, the hilles hye, 45 That been the boundes of West Lum-bardye,

And of Mount Vesulus in special,
Where as the Poo out of a welle smal Taketh his firste spryngyng and his sours, That estward ay encresseth in his cours 50
To Emele-ward, to Ferrare, and Venyse,
The which a long thyng were to devyse
And trewely, as to my judgement, Me thynketh it a thyng impertinent,
Save that he wole conveyen his mateere, But this his tale, which that ye may
heere” 56

THE CLERK'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Tale of the Clerk of Oxenford

Ther is, right at the west syde of Ytaille, Doun at the roote of Vesulus the colde,
 A lusty playn, habundant of vitaille, Where many a tour and toun thou mayst biholde, 60
 That founded were in tyme of fadres olde,
 And many another delitable sighte,
 And Saluces this noble contree highte

A markys whilom lord was of that lond,
 As were his worthy elders hym bifore, 65
 And obeisant, ay redy to his hond, Were alle his lges, bothe lasse and moore Thus in delit he lyveth, and hath doon
 yoore,
 Biloved and drad, thurgh favour of Fortune, Bothe of his lordes and of his commune 70

Therwith he was, to speke as of lynage,
 The gentilleste yborn of Lumbardy, e, A fair persone, and strong, and yong of
 age,

And ful of honour and of curteisye, Discret ynogh his contree for to gye, 75 Save in somme thynges that he was to
 blame,
 And Walter was this yonge lordes name

I blame hym thus, that he considered
 noght
 In tyme comynge what myghte hym
 bityde,
 But on his lust present was al his thought, 80
 As for to hauke and hunte on every syde Wel ny alle othere cures leet he slyde,
 And eek he nolde — and that was worst of alle —
 Wedde no wyf, for noght that may bifalle

Only that point his peple bar so soore That flokmeele on a day they to hym
 wente, 86
 And oon of hem, that wisest was of loore —
 Or elles that the lord best wolde assente That he sholde telle hym what his peple
 mente,

Or elles koude he shewe wel swich mat-eere — 90
 He to the markys seyde as ye shul heere

“O noble markys, youre humanitee Assureth us and yeveth us hardnesse,
 As ofte as tyme is of necessitee,
 That we to yow mowe telle oure hevyn-
 nesse 95
 Accepteth, lord, now of youre gentillesse That we with pitous herte unto yow
 pleyne,
 And lat youre eres nat my voys desdeyne

“Al have I noght to doone in this mateere Moore than another man hath in this
 place, 100
 Yet for as muche as ye, my lord so deere, Han alwey shewed me favour and grace
 I dar the bettre aske of yow a space Of audience, to shewen oure requeste, And ye, my lord, to doon right as yow
 leste 105

“For certes, lord, so wel us liketh yow
 And al youre werk, and evere han doon, that we Ne koude nat us self devyssen how We myghte lyven in moore felicitye, Save o thyng, lord, if it youre wille be, 110
 That for to been a wedded man yow leste, Thanne were youre peple in sovereyn hertes reste

“Boweth youre nekke under that blisfull yok
 Of soveraynetee, noght of servyse, Which that men clepe spousaille or wed-lok, 115
 And thenketh, lord, among youre thoghtes
 wyse
 How that oure dayes passe in sondry wyse, For thogh we slepe, or wake, or rome, or
 ryde,
 Ay fleeth the tyme, it nyl no man abyde

“And thogh youre grene youthe floure as yit, 120

In crepeth age alwey, as stille as stoon,
 And deeth manaceth every age, and smyt
 In ech estaat, for ther escapeth noon,
 And al so certain as we knowe echoon That we shul deye, as uncerteyn we
 alle 125
 Been of that day whan deeth shal on us
 falle

“Accepteth thanne of us the trewe entente, That nevere yet refuseden thyn heeste,
 And we wol, lord, if that ye wole assente, Chese yow a wyf, in short tyme atte
 leeste, 130
 Born of the gentilleste and of the meeste
 Of al this land, so that it oghte seme Honour to God and yow, as we kan deeme

“Delivere us out of al this busy drede,
 And taak a wyf, for hye Goddes sake! 135
 For if it so bifelle, as God forbede, That thurgh youre deeth youre lynage sholde slake,
 And that a straunge successour sholde take Yourre heritage, O, wo were us alyve!
 Wherefore we pray you hastily to wyve ” 140

Hir meeke preyere and hir pitous cheere Made the markys herte han pitee “Ye wol,” quod he, “myn owene peple
 deere,
 To that I nevere erst thoughte streyne me
 I me rejoysed of my liberte, 145
 That seelde tyme is founde in marriage, Ther I was free, I moot been in servage

“But natheles I se youre trewe entente, And truste upon youre wit, and have doon ay,
 Wherefore of my free wyl I wole assente 150
 To wedde me, as soone as evere I may But ther as ye han profred me to-day To chese me a wyf, I yow relese That choys, and prey yow of that profre cesse

“For God it woot, that children ofte been Unlyk hir worthy eldres hem bifore, 155
 Bountee comth al of God, nat of the streen
 Of which they been engendred and ybore I truste in Goddes bountee, and therefore

My mariage and myn estaat and reste 160
 I hym bitake, he may doon as hym leste

“Lat me allone in chesyng of my wyf, —
 That charge upon my bak I wole endure But I yow preyre, and charge upon youre
 lyf,
 That what wyf that I take, ye me assure To worshupe hire, whil that hir lyf may
 dure, 166
 In word and werk, bothe heere and every-wheere,
 As she an emperoures doghter weere

“And forthermoore, this shal ye swere, that ye Agayn my choys shul neither grucche ne stryve, 170
 For sith I shal forgoon my libertee
 At youre requeste, as evere moot I thryve, Ther as myn herte is set, ther wol I wyve,
 And but ye wole assente in swich manere, I prey yow, speketh namoore of this matere ” 175

With hertely wyl they sworn and assenten
 To al this thyng, ther seyde no wight nay, Bisekyng hym of grace, er that they wenten,
 That he wolde graunten hem a certain day Of his spousaille, as soone as evere he
 may, 180
 For yet alwey the peple somewhat dredde, Lest that the markys no wyf wolde wedde

He graunten hem a day, swich as hym
 leste,
 On which he wolde be wedded sikerly, And seyde he dide al this at hir re-
 queste 185
 And they, with humble entente, buxomly, Knelyng upon hir knees ful reverently, Hym thonken alle, and thus they han an
 ende
 Of hire entente, and hoom agayn they
 wende

And heerupon he to his officeres 190 Comaundeth for the feste to purveye,
 And to his privee knyghtes and squieres Swich charge yaf as hym liste on hem leye,
 And they to his comandement obeye,

And ech of hem dooth al his diligence 195
To doon unto the feeste reverence

Explicit prima pars

Incipit secunda pars

Noght fer fro thilke paleys honourable,
Wher as this markys shoop his marriage,
There stood a throop, of site delitable,
In which that povre folk of that village 200
Hadden hir beestes and hir herbergage,
And of hire labour tooke hir sustenance,
After that the erthe yaf hem habundance

Amonges thuse povre folk ther dwelte a
man

Which that was holden povrest of hem
alle, 205

But hye God somtyme senden kan
His grace into a litel oxes stalle, Janicula men of that throop hym calle
A doghter hadde he, fair ynogh to sighte,
And Grisildis this yonge mayden lighte

But for to speke of vertuous beautee, 211 Thanne was she oon the fareste under
sonne,

For povrehche yfostred up was she No likerous lust was thurgh hire herte
yronne

Wel offer of the welle than of the tonne 215
She drank, and for she wolde vertu plesse,
She knew wel labour, but noon ydel ese

But thogh this mayde tendre were of age,
Yet in the brest of hire virginitee Ther was enclosed rype and sad corage, 220
And in greet reverence and chartee Hir olde povre fader fostred shee
A fewe sheep, spynnyng, on feeld she kepte,
She wolde noght been ydel til she slepte

And whan she homward cam, she wolde bryng 225

Wortes or othere herbes tymes ofte,
The whiche she shredde and seeth for hir lyvynge,

And made hir bed ful hard and nothyng
softe,

And ay she kepte hir fadres lyf on-lofte
With everich obeisaunce and diligence 230
That child may doon to fadres reverence

Upon Grisilde, this povre creature, Ful ofte sithe this markys sette his ye
As he on huntynge rood paraventure, And whan it fil that he myghte hire espye, 235
He noght with wantown lookyng of folye
His eyen caste on hire, but in sad wyse Upon hir chere he wolde hym ofte avyse,

Commendynge in his herte hir wom-manhede,
And eek hir vertu, passynge any wight 240
Of so yong age, as wel in chiere as dede
For thogh the peple have no greet insight In vertu, he considered ful right Hir bountee, and disposed that he wolde Wedde hire oonly, if evere he wedde sholde 245

The day of weddyng cam, but no wight
kan

Telle what womman that it sholde be,
For which merveille wondred many a man And seyden, whan they were in privetee,
"Wol natoure lord yet leve his vanytee?
Wol he nat wedde? allas, allas, the
while! 251
Why wole he thus hymself and us bigile?"

But nathelees this markys hath doon
make

Of gemmes, set in gold and in asure, Brooches and rynges, for Grisildis sake, 255
And of hir clothyng took he the mesure
By a mayde lyk to hire stature,
And eek of othere aornementes alle
That unto swich a weddyng sholde falle

The time of undren of the same day 260 Approcheth, that this weddyng sholde be;
And al the paleys put was in array, Bothe halle and chambres, ech in his degree,

Houses of office stuffed with plentee Ther maystow seen, of deyntevous vitaille 265
That may be founde as fer as last Ytaille

This roial markys, richely arrayed, Lordes and ladyes in his compaignye, The whiche that to the feeste weren yprayed,

And of his retenue the bachelrye, 270
 With many a soun of sondry melodye, Unto the village of the which I tolde,
 In this array the righte wey han holde

Grislde of this, God woot, ful innocent,
 That for hire shapen was al this array, 275
 To fecchen water at a welle is went,
 And cometh hoom as soone as ever she
 may,
 For wel she hadde herd seyde that thilke
 day
 The markys sholde wedde, and if she
 myghte,
 She wolde fayn han seyde som of that
 sighte 280

She thoghte, "I wole with othere may-dens stonde,
 That been my felawes, in oure dore and se
 The markysesse, and therefore wol I fonde To doon at hoom, as soone as it may be,
 The labour which that longeth unto me, 285
 And thanne I may at leysur hire biholde, If she thus wey unto the castel holde "

And as she wolde over hir thresshold
 gon,
 The markys cam, and gan hire for to calle,
 And she set down hir water pot anon, 290
 Biside the thresshold, in an oxes stalle,
 And down upon hir knes she gan to falle,
 And with sad contenance kneleth stille, Til she had herd what was the lordes wille

This thoughtful markys spak unto this
 mayde 295
 Ful sobrelly, and seyde in this manere "Where is youre fader, O Grisldis?" he
 sayde
 And she with reverence, in humble cheere Answerde, "Lord, he is al redy heere"
 And in she gooth withouten lenger lette,
 And to the markys she hir fader fette 301

He by the hand thanne took this olde
 man,
 And seyde thus, whan he hym hadde asyde
 "Janicula, I neither may ne kan Lenger the plesance of myn herte hyde 305
 If that thou vouche sauf, what so bytde,

Thy doghter wol I take, er that I wende,
 As for my wyf, unto hir lyves ende

"Thou lovest me, I woot it wel certeyn,
 And art my feithful lige man ybore, 310
 And al that liketh me, I dar wel seyde
 It liketh thee, and specially therfore Tel me that poynt that I have seyde before,
 If that thou wolt unto that purpos drawe,
 To take me as for thy sone-in-lawe" 315

This sodeyn cas this man astonyed so That reed he wax, abayst and al quakyng
 He stood, unnethes seyde he wordes mo, But oonly thus "Lord," quod he, "my willynge 319
 Is as ye wole, ne ayeynes youre lkyng
 I wol no thyng, ye be my lord so deere, Right as yow lust, governeth this mateere "

"Yet wol I," quod this markys softely, "That in thy chambre I and thou and she Have a collacioun, and wostow why? 325 For I wol axe if it hire wille be To be my wyf, and reule hire after me
 And al this shal be doon in thy presence, I wol nocht speke out of thyn audience "

And in the chambre, whil they were
 aboute 330
 Hir tretys, which as ye shal after heere,
 The peple cam unto the hous withoute,
 And wondred hem in how honest manere
 And tentify she kepte hir fader deere But outrely Grisldis wondre myghte, 335
 For nevere erst ne saugh she swich a sighte

No wonder is thogh that she were astoned
 To seen so greet a gest come in that place,
 She nevere was to swiche gestes woned,
 For which she looked with ful pale face 340
 But shortly forth this matere for to chace, These arn the wordes that the markys
 sayde
 To this benigne, verray, feithful mayde

"Grislde," he seyde, "ye shal wel un-derstonde
 It liketh to youre fader and to me 345 That I yow wedde, and eek it may so
 stonde,

As I suppose, ye wol that it so be But thuse demandes axe I first," quod he,
 "That, sith it shal be doon in hastif wyse, Wol ye assente, or elles yow avyse' 350

"I seye this, be ye redy with good herte
 To al my lust, and that I frely may, As me best thynketh, do yow laughe or
 smerte,

And nevere ye to grucche it, nyght ne day?
 And eek whan I sey 'ye,' ne sey nat
 'nay,' 355

Neither by word ne frownyng contenance?
 Swere this, and heere I swere oure alliance "

Wondrynge upon this word, quakyng for drede,

She seyde, "Lord, undigne and unworthy Am I to thilke honour that ye me beede, 360
 But as ye wole youreself, right so wol I And heere I swere that nevere wilyngly, In werk ne thoght, I nyl yow disobeye, For to be deed, though me were looth to
 deye "

"This is ynogh, Grisilde myn," quod
 he 365

And forth he gooth, with a ful sobre cheere, Out at the dore, and after that cam she,
 And to the peple he seyde in this manere
 "This is my wyf," quod he, "that standeth heere

Honoureth hire and loveth hire, I preye, Whoso me loveth, ther is namoore to
 seye " 371

And for that no thyng of hir olde geere
 She sholde brynge into his hous, he bad That women sholde dispoillen hire right
 there,

Of which thuse ladyes were nat right glad 375

To handle hir clothes, wherin she was clad

But natheless, this mayde bright of hewe Fro foot to heed they clothed han al newe

Hir heris han they kembd, that lay un-tressed

Ful radely, and with hir fynGRES smale 380
 A corone on hire heed they han ydressed,

And sette hire ful of nowches grete and
 smale

Of hire array what sholde I make a tale?
 Unnethe the peple hir knew for hire fairnesse,

Whan she translated was in swich rich-
 esse 385

This markys hath hire spoused with a ryng

Brought for the same cause, and thanne hire sette

Upon an hors, snow-whit and wel amblyng,
 And to his paleys, er he lenger lette, With joyful peple that hire ladde and
 mette, 390

Conveyed hire, and thus the day they spende

In revel, til the sonne gan descende

And shortly forth this tale for to chace,
 I seye that to this newe markysesse God hath swich favour sent hire of his
 grace, 395

That it ne semed nat by liklynesse
 That she was born and fed in rudenesse,
 As in a cote or in an ox-stalle,
 But norissed in an emperoures halle

To every wight she woxen is so deere 400
 And worshipful that folk ther she was bore, And from hire birthe knewe hire yeer by
 yeere,

Unnethe trowed they, — but dorste han swore —

That to Janicle, of which I spak bifore, She doghter were, for, as by conjecture, 405 Hem thoughte she was another creature

For though that evere vertuous was she,
 She was encessed in swich excellence Of thewes goode, yset in heigh bountee,
 And so discreet and fair of eloquence, 410
 So benigne and so digne of reverence,
 And koude so the peples herte embrace, That ech hire lovede that looked in hir
 face

Noght oonly of Saluces in the toun Publoed was the bountee of hir name,
 But eek biside in many a regioun, 416
 If oon seyde wel, another seyde the same,

So spradde of hire heighe bountee the fame
 That men and wommen, as wel yonge as
 olde,
 Goon to Saluce, upon hire to biholde 420

Thus Walter lowely — nay, but roially — Wedded with fortunat honestetee, In Goddes pees lyveth ful esly At hoom, and outward grace ynogh had
 he, 424
 And for he saugh that under low degree
 Was ofte vertu hid, the peple hym heelde
 A prudent man, and that is seyn ful seelde

Nat only this Grisildis thurgh hir wit Koude al the feet of wyfly hoomlinessse,
 But eek, whan that the cas required it, 430
 The commune profit koude she redresse Ther nas discord, rancour, ne hevynesse In al that land, that she ne koude apese, And wisely brynge hem alle in reste and ese

Though that hire housbonde absent were
 anon, 435
 If gental men or othere of hire contree Were wrothe, she wolde bryngen hem aton, So wise and rype wordes hadde she,
 And juggementz of so greet equitee, That she from hevene sent was, as men
 wende, 440
 Peple to save and every wrong t'amende

Nat longe tyme after that this Grisild Was wedded, she a doghter hath ybore Al had hire leveere have born a knave child, Glad was this markys and the folk therefore, 445
 For though a mayde child coome al bifore,
 She may unto a knave child atteyne
 By likihede, syn she nys nat bareyne

Explicit secunda pars

Incipit tercia pars

Ther fil, as it bifalleth tymes mo, Whan that this child had souked but a throwe, 450
 This markys in his herte longeth so To tempte his wyf, hir sadnesse for to
 knowe,

That he ne myghte out of his herte throwe
 This merveillous desir his wyf t'assaye, Nedelees, God woot, he thoghte hire for t'affraye 455

He hadde assayed hire ynogh bifore,
 And foond hire evere good, what neded it Hire for to tempte, and alwey moore and
 moore,
 Though som men preise it for a subtil wit?
 But as for me, I seye that yvele it sit 460
 To assaye a wyf whan that it is no nede,
 And putten hire in angwyssh and in drede

For which this markys wroghte in this manere
 He cam allone a-nyght, ther as she lay,
 With sterne face and with ful trouble
 cheere, 465
 And seyde thus, "Grisilde," quod ne,
 "that day
 That I yow took out of youre povere array, And putte yow in estaat of heigh no-
 blesse, —
 Ye have nat that forgeten, as I gesse? 469

"I seye, Grisilde, this present dignitee, In which that I have put yow, as I trowe, Maketh yow nat forgetful for to be That I yow took in povre estaat ful lowe, For any wele ye moot youreselfen knowe Taak heede of every word that y yow
 seye, 475
 Ther is no wight that hereth it but we
 tweye

"Ye woot youreself wel how that ye cam
 heere
 Into this hous, it is nat longe ago,
 And though to me that ye be lief and deere, Unto my gentils ye be no thyng so 480 They seyn, to hem it is greet shame and
 wo
 For to be subgetz and been in servage
 To thee, that born art of a smal village

"And namely sith thy doghter was ybore Thise wordes han they spoken, doute-lees 485
 But I desire, as I have doon bifore,
 To lyve my lyf with hem in reste and pees.
 I may nat in this caas be recchelees,

I moot doon with thy doghter for the
beste,
Nat as I wolde, but as my peple leste 490

“And yet, God woot, this is ful looth to
me,
But natheles withoute youre wityng I wol nat doon, but thus wol I,” quod he,
“That ye to me assente as in this thyng Shewe now youre pacience in youre werkynge, 495
That ye me highte and swore in youre village
That day that maked was oure marriage ”

Whan she had herd al this, she noght ameved Neither in word, or chiere, or contentaunce,
For, as it semed, she was nat agreved 500
She seyde, “Lord, al lyth in youre ples-
aunce
My child and I, with hertely obeisaunce, Been youre al, and ye mowe save or
spille
Your owene thyng, werketh after youre
wille

“Ther may no thyng, God so my soule
save, 505
Likened to yow that may displese me, Ne I desire no thyng for to have,
Ne drede for to leese, save oonly yee This wyl is in myn herte, and ay shal be, No lengthe of tyme or deeth may this deface, 510
Ne chaunge my corage to another place ”

Glad was this markys of hire answeyng
But yet he feyned as he were nat so,
Al drery was his cheere and his lookyng, Whan that he sholde out of the chambere
go 515
Soone after this, a furlong wey or two,
He prively hath toold al his entente Unto a man, and to his wyf hym sente

A maner sergeant was this privee man,
The which that feithful ofte he founden
hadde 520
In thynges grete, and eek swich folk wel
kan

Doon executioun on thynges badde
The lord knew wel that he hym loved and dradde,
And whan this sergeant wiste his lordes
wille,
Into the chambre he stalked hym ful
stille 525

“Madame,” he seyde, “ye moot for-yeve it me, Though I do thyng to which I am con-streyned
Ye been so wys that ful wel knowe ye That lordes heestes mowe nat been yfeyned,
They mowe wel been biwailed or compleyned, 530
But men moot nede unto hire lust obeye,
And so wol I, ther is namoore to seye

“This child I am comanded for to take,”—
And spak namoore, but out the child he hente
Despitously, and gan a cheere make 535
As though he wolde han slayn it er he wente
Grisildis moot al suffre and al consente,
And as a lamb she sitteth meke and stille,
And leet this cruuel sergeant doon his wille

Suspicious was the diffame of this
man, 540
Suspect his face, suspect his word also, Suspect the tyme in which he this bigan Allas! hir doghter that she loved so,
She wende he wolde han slawen it right tho
But natheles she neither weep ne syked, Conformynge hire to that the markys lyked 546

But atte laste to speken she bigan,
And mekely she to the sergeant preyde,
So as he was a worthy gentil man,
That she moste kisse hire child er that it
deyde 550
And in hir barm this litel child she leyde With ful sad face, and gan the child to kisse,
And lulled it, and after gan it blisse

And thus she seyde in hire benigne voys, “Farewel my child! I shal thee nevere
see 555

But sith I thee have marked with the croys Of thilke Fader — blessed moote he be! — That for us deyde upon a croys of tree, Thy soule, litel child, I hym bitake, For this nyght shaltow dyen for my sake” 560

I trows that to a norice in this cas
It had been hard this reuthe for to se, Wel myghte a mooder thanne han cryd
“allas!”

But natheles so sad stidefast was she
That she endured al adversitee, 565
And to the sergeant mekely she sayde, “Have heer agayn youre litel yonge
mayde

“Gooth now,” quod she, “and dooth my lordes heeste,
But o thyng wol I prey yow of youre grace,
That, but my lord forbad yow, atte
leeste 570
Burneth this litel body in som place That beestes ne no briddes it torace”
But he no word wol to that purpos seye, But took the child and wente upon his
weye 574

This sergeant cam unto his lord ageyn,
And of Grisildis wordes and hire cheere He tolde hym point for point, in short and
pleyn,
And hym presenteth with his doghter
deere Somwhat this lord hadde routhe in his
manere,
But natheles his purpos heeld he stille, 580
As lordes doon, whan they wol han hir
wille,

And bad this sergeant that he pryvely Shoide this child ful softe wynde and wrappe,
With alle circumstances tendrely,
And carne it in a cofre or in a lappe, 585
But, upon peyne his heed of for to swappe,
That no man shoide knowe of his entente, Ne whenne he cam, ne whider that he
wente,

But at Boloigne to his suster deere,
That thilke tyme of Panik was countesse,

He shoide it take, and shewe hire this
mateere, 591
Bisekyng hire to doon hire busynesse
This child to fostre in alle gentillesse, And whos child that it was he bad hire
hyde
From every wight, for oght that may
bityde 595

The sergeant gooth, and hath fulfild this thyng,
But to this markys now retourne we For now gooth he ful faste ymagynyng
If by his wyves cheere he myghte se,
Or by hire word aperceyve, that she 600 Were chaunged, but he nevere hire koude
fynde
But evere in oon ylike sad and kynde

As glad, as humble, as busy in servyse, And eek in love, as she was wont to be,
Was she to hym in every maner wyse, 605 Ne of hir doghter noght a word spak she Noon accident, for noon adversitee,
Was seyn in hire, ne nevere hir doghter
name
Ne nempned she, in ernest nor in game

Explicit tercia pars

Sequtur pars quarta

In this estaat ther passed been foure
yeer 610
Er she with childe was, but, as God wolde, A knave child she bar by this Walter,
Ful gracious and fair for to biholde
And whan that folk it to his fader tolde, Nat only he, but al his contree merye 615 Was for this child, and God they thanke and herye

Whan it was two yeer old, and fro the brest
Departed of his norice, on a day
This markys caughte yet another lest To tempte his wyf yet ofter, if he may 620
O nedeles was she tempted in assay!
But wedded men ne knowe no mesure, Whan that they fynde a pacient creature

“Wyf,” quod this markys, “ye han herd er this,

My peple sikly berth oure marriage, 625
 And namely sith my sone yboren is,
 Now is it worse than evere in al oure age
 The murmur sleeth myn herte and my corage,
 For to myne eres comth the voys so smerte
 That it wel ny destroyed hath myn
 herte 630

“Now sey they thus, ‘Whan Walter is
 agon,
 Thanne shal the blood of Janicle succede And been oure lord, for oother have we
 noon’ Swiche wordes seith my peple, out of
 drede
 Wel oughte I of swich murmur taken
 heede, 635
 For certainly I drede swich sentence, Though they nat pleyn speke in myn audience

“I wolde lyve in pees, if that I myghte, Wherefore I am disposed outrelly,
 As I his suster servede by nyghte, 640 Right so thenke I to serve hym pryvely
 This warne I yow, that ye nat sodeynly Out of youreself for no wo sholde outreye, Beth pacient, and therof I yow preye”

“I have,” quod she, “seyd thus, and evere shal 645
 I wol no thyng, ne nyl no thyng, certayn,
 But as yow list Naught greveth me at al, Though that my daughter and my sone be
 slayn, —
 At youre comandement, this is to sayn
 I have nocht had no part of children
 tweyne 650
 But first siknesse, and after wo and peyne

“Ye been oure lord, dooth with youre owene thyng
 Right as yow list, axeth no reed at me
 For as I lefte at hoom al my clothyng, Whan I first cam to yow, right so,” quod
 she, 655
 “Lefte I my wyl and al my libertee, And took youre clothyng, wherefore I yow
 preye,
 Dooth youre plesaunce, I wol youre lust obeye

“And certes, if I hadde prescience Youre wyl to knowe, er ye youre lust me
 tolde, 660
 I wolde it doon withouten necligence, But now I woot youre lust, and what ye wolde,
 Al youre plesance ferme and stable I
 holde,
 For wiste I that my deeth wolde do yow
 ese, 664
 Right gladly wolde I dyen, yow to plesse

“Deth may nocht make no comparisoun Unto youre love” And whan this markys say
 The constance of his wyf, he caste adoun His eyen two, and wondreth that she may In pacience suffre al this array, 670
 And forth he goth with dreery contenance,
 But to his herte it was ful greet plesance

This ugly sergeant, in the same wyse That he hire doghter caughte, right so he,
 Or worse, if men worse kan devyse, 675 Hath hent hire sone, that ful was of beautee
 And evere in oon so pacient was she
 That she no chiere maade of hevynesse,
 But kiste hir sone, and after gan it blesse,

Save this, she preyede hym that, if he
 myghte, 680
 Hir litel sone he wolde in erthe grave,
 His tendre lymes, delicaat to sighte, Fro foweles and fro beestes for to save But she noon answer of hym myghte have He wente his wey, as hym no thyng ne roghte, 685
 But to Boloigne he tendrely it broghte

This markys wondred, evere lenger the
 moore,
 Upon hir pacience, and if that he Ne hadde soothly knowen therbifoore That parfityl hir children loved she, 690
 He wolde have wend that of som subtiltee,
 And of malice, or for cruel corage,
 That she hadde suffred this with sad
 visage

But wel he knew that next hymself, certain,

She loved hir children best in every
wyse 695
But now of wommen wolde I axen fayn
If these assayes myghte nat suffice?
What koude a sturdy housbonde moore
devyse
To preeve hir wyfhod and hir stedefast-
nesse, 699
And he continuyng evere in sturdnesse?

But ther been folk of swich condicion That whan they have a certein purpos take,
They kan nat stynte of hire entencion,
But, right as they were bounden to a stake,
They wol nat of that firste purpos slake Right so this markys fulliche hath pur-posed 706
To tempte his wyf as he was first disposed

He waiteth if by word or contenance
That she to hym was changed of corage,
But nevere koude he fynde variance 710
She was ay oon in herte and in visage,
And ay the forther that she was in age,
The moore trewe, if that it were possible,
She was to hym in love, and moore penyble

For which it semed thus, that of hem
two 715
Ther nas but o wyl, for, as Walter leste, The same lust was hire plesance also And, God be thanked, al fil for the beste
She shewed wel, for no worldly unreste
A wyf, as of hirself, nothing ne sholde 720
Wille in effect, but as hir housbonde wolde

The sclandre of Walter ofte and wyde spradde,
That of a cruell herte he wikkedly,
For he a povre womman wedded hadde, Hath mordred bothe his children prively Swich murmur was among hem comunly
No wonder is, for to the peples ere 727 Ther cam no word, but that they mordred
were

For which, where as his peple therbifore Hadde loved hym wel, the sclandre of his diffame 730
Made hem that they hym hatede therefor
To been a mordrere is an hateful name,
But natheless, for earnest ne for game,

He of his cruell purpos nolde stente,
To tempte his wyf was set al his entente

Whan that his doghter twelve yeer was of age, 736
He to the court of Rome, in subtil wyse Enformed of his wyl, sente his message, Comaundyng hem swiche bulles to
devyse
As to his cruell purpos may suffyse, 740
How that the pope, as for his peples reste, Bad hym to wedde another, if hym leste

I seve, he bad they sholde countrefete
The popes bulles, makyng mencion
That he hath leve his firste wyf to lete, 745
As by the popes dispensacion, To stynte rancour and dissencion Bitwixe his peple and hym, thus seyde the bulle,
The which they han publiced atte fulle

The rude peple, as it no wonder is, 750 Wenden ful wel that it hadde be right so,
But whan thise tidynges came to Grisildis,
I deeme that hire herte was ful wo
But she, ylike sad for everemo, Disposed was, this humble creature, 755
The adversitee of Fortune al t'endure, Abdyng evere his lust and his plesance,

To whom that she was yeven herte and al,
As to hire verray worldly suffisance
But shortly if this storie I tellen shal, 760
This markys writen hath in special
A lettre, in which he sheweth his entente,
And secreely he to Boloigne it sente

To the Erl of Panyk, which that hadde
tho
Wedded his suster, preyde he specially 765
To bryngen hoom agayn his children two In honourable estaat al openly But o thyng he hym preyede outrely, That he to no wight, though men wolde enquere, Sholde nat telle whos children that they
were, 770

But seye, the mayden sholde ywedded be Unto the markys of Saluce anon
And as this erl was preyed, so dide he,

For at day set he on his wey is goon Toward Saluce, and lordes many oon 775
In riche array, this mayden for to gyde, Hir yonge brother ridyng hire busyde

Arrayed was toward hir marriage
This fresshe mayde, ful of gemmes cleere, Hir brother, which that seven yeer was
of age, 780

Arrayed eek ful fressh in his manere
And thus in greet noblesse and with glad
cheere,

Toward Saluces shapyng hir journey, Fro day to day they ryden in hir wey

Explicit quarta pars

Sequitur pars quinta

Among al this, after his wikke usage, 785
This markys, yet his wyf to tempte moore
To the outreste preeve of hir corage, Fully to han experience and loore
If that she were as stedefast as bifoore,
He on a day, in open audience, 790
Ful boistously hath seyde hire this sentence

“Certes, Grisilde, I hadde ynogh ples-
ance

To han yow to my wyf for youre goodnesse, As for youre trouthe and for youre obeis-sance,

Noght for youre lynage, ne for youre
richesse, 795

But now knowe I in verray soothfastnesse
That in greet lordshipe, if I wel avyse Ther is greet servitude in sondry wyse

“I may nat doon as every plowman may My peple me constreyneth for to take 800
Another wyf, and cren day by day,
And eek the pope, rancour for to slake, Consenteth it, that dar I undertake,
And trewely thus muche I wol yow seye,
My newe wyf is comyng by the weye 805

“Be strong of herte, and voyde anon hir
place,

And thilke dowere that ye broghten me,
Taak it agayn, I graunte it of my grace Retourneth to youre fadres hous,” quod
he,

“No man may alwey han prospertee. 810

With evene herte I rede yow t'endure
The strook of Fortune or of aventure ”

And she agayn answerde in pacience, “My lord,” quod she, “I woot, and wiste alway,

How that bitwixen youre magnificence 815
And my poverte no wight kan ne may Maken comparison, it is no nay
I ne heeld me nevere digne in no manere
To be youre wyf, no, ne youre chamberere

“And in this hous, ther ye me lady maade — 820

The heighe God take I for my wtnesse,
And also wysly he my soule glaade —
I nevere heeld me lady ne maistresse,
But humble servant to youre worthynesse, And evere shal, whil that my lyf may
dure, 825

Aboven every worldly creature

“That ye so longe of youre benignitee Han holden me in honour and nobleye, Where as I was noght worthy for to bee, That thanke I God and yow, to whom I
preye 830

Foryelde it yow, ther is namoore to seye Unto my fader gladly wol I wende,
And with hym dwelle unto my lyves ende

“Ther I was fostred of a child ful smal, Til I be deed my lyf ther wol I lede, 835
A wydwe clene in body, herte, and al
For sith I yaf to yow my maydenhede,
And am youre trewe wyf, it is no drede, God shilde swich a lordes wyf to take Another man to housbonde or to make! 840

“And of youre newe wyf God of his
grace

So graunte yow wele and prospertee!
For I wol gladly yelden hire my place,
In which that I was blisful wont to bee For sith it liketh yow, my lord,” quod shee, 845

“That whilom weren al myn hertes reste, That I shal goon, I wol goon whan yow
leste

“But ther as ye me profre swich dowere
As I first broghte, it is wel in my mynde

It were my wrecched clothes, nothyng
 faire, 850
 The whiche to me were hard now for to
 fynde
 O goode God! how gentil and how kynde Ye semed by youre speche and youre
 visage
 The day that makyd was oure marriage!

"But sooth is seyde — algate I fynde it
 trewe, 855

For in effect it preeved is on me —
 Love is noight cold as whan that it is newe
 But certes, lord, for noon adversitee,
 To dyen in the cas, it shal nat bee That evere in word or werk I shal re-pente 860
 That I yow yaf myn herte in hool entente

"My lord, ye woot that in my fadres
 place

Ye dide me streepe out of my povre weede,
 And richely me cladden, of youre grace To yow broghte I noight elles, out of
 drede, 865
 But feith, and nakednesse, and mayden-
 hede,
 And heere agayn your clothyng I restoore, And eek your weddingyng ryng, for evere-more

"The remenant of youre jueles redy be Inwith youre chambre, dar I saufully sayn Naked out of my fadres hous," quod
 she, 871

"I cam, and naked moot I turne agayn Al your plesance wol I folwen fayn,
 But yet I hope it be nat youre entente That I smokeles out of youre paleys
 wente 875

"Ye koude nat doon so dishonest a thyng, That thilke wombe in which youre children leye
 Sholde biforn the peple, in my walkyng, Be seyn al bare, wherfore I yow preye, Lat me nat lyk a worm go by the weye 880 Remembre yow, myn owene lord so deere,
 I was youre wyf, though I unworthy weere

"Wherfore, in gerdon of my mayden-
 hede

Which that I broghte, and noight agayn I bere,
 As voucheth sauful to yeve me, to my meede, 885
 But swich a smok as I was wont to were,
 That I therewith may wrye the wombe of here
 That was youre wyf And heer take I my leewe
 Of yow, myn owene lord, lest I yow greve "

"The smok," quod he, "that thou hast on thy bak, 890
 Lat it be stille, and bere it forth with thee "
 But wel unnethes thilke word he spak, But wente his wey, for routhe and for pitee Biforn the folk hurselven strepeth she,
 And in hir smok, with heed and foot al
 bare, 895
 Toward hur fader hous forth is she fare

The folk hire folwe, wepyng in hur weye,
 And Fortune ay they cursen as they goon,
 But she fro wepyng kepte hire eyen dreye, Ne in this tyme word ne spak she noon 900 Hir fader, that this tadyng herde anon, Curseth the day and tyme that Nature Shoop hym to been a lyves creature

For out of doute this olde poure man Was evere in suspect of hir marriage, 905
 For evere he demed, sith that it bigan, That whan the lord fulfild hadde his
 corage,
 Hym wolde thynke it were a disparage
 To his estaat so lowe for t'alighte, And voyden hire as soone as ever he
 myghte 910

Agayns his doghter hastily goth he,
 For he by noyse of folk knew hire comyng,
 And with hire olde coote, as it myghte be He covered hire, ful sorwefully wepyng But on hire body myghte he it nat
 brynge, 915
 For rude was the clooth, and moore of age
 By dayes fele than at hire marriage

Thus with hire fader, for a certeyn space, Dwelleth this flour of wyfly pacience,
 That neither by hire wordes ne hire face,

Biforn the folk, ne eek in hire absence, 921
 Ne shewed she that hire was doon offence, Ne of hire heighe estaat no remembraunce Ne hadde she, as by hire contenaunce

No wonder is, for in hire grete estaat 925 Hire goost was evere in pleyn humyltee,
 No tendre mouth, noon herte delcaat,
 No pompe, no semblant of roialtee,
 But ful of pacient benyngnytee, Discreet and pridelees, ay honourable, 930 And to hire housbonde evere meke and stable

Men speke of Job, and moost for his humblesse,
 As clerkes, whan hem list, konne wel endite,
 Namely of men, but as in soothfastnesse, Though clerkes preise wommen but a lite, 935
 Ther kan no man in humblesse hym acquite
 As womman kan, ne kan been half so trewe
 As wommen been, but it be falle of newe

[PART VI]

Fro Boloigne is this Erl of Panyk come,
 Of which the fame up sprang to moore and
 lesse, 940
 And to the peples eres, alle and some,
 Was kouth eek that a newe markysesse He with hym broghte, in swich pompe and richesse
 That nevere was ther seyn with mannes ye
 So noble array in al West Lumbardye 945

The markys, which that shoop and knew
 al this,
 Er that this erl was come, sente his message
 For thilke sely povre Grisildis,
 And she with humble herte and glad visage, Nat with no swollen thought in hire corage, Cam at his heste, and on hire knees hire
 sette, 951
 And reverently and wisely she hym grette

"Grisalde," quod he, "my wyl is outrelly, This mayden, that shal wedded been to
 me,

Received be to-morwe as roially 955
 As it possible is in myn hous to be,
 And eek that every wight in his degree
 Have his estaat, in sitting and servyse
 And heigh plessaunce, as I kan best devyse

"I have no wommen suffisaunt, certain, 960
 The chambres for t'arraye in ordinaunce
 After my lust, and therfore wolde I fayn That thyn were al swich manere governaunce
 Thou knowest eek of old al my plessaunce, Though thyn array be badde and yvel buseye, 965
 Do thou thy devoir at the leeste weye "

"Nat oonly, lord, that I am glad," quod
 she,
 "To doon youre lust, but I desire also Yow for to serve and plesse in my degree Withouten feynting, and shal everemo, Ne nevere, for no wele ne no wo, 971 Ne shal the goost withinne myn herte stente
 To love yow best with al my trewe entente "

And with that word she gan the hous
 to dighte,
 And tables for to sette, and beddes make,
 And peyned hire to doon al that she
 myghte, 976
 Preyngne the chambereres, for Goddes
 sake,
 To hasten hem, and faste swepe and shake,
 And she, the mooste servysable of alle, Hath every chambre arrayed and his
 halle 980

Abouten undren gan this erl aughte, That with hym broghte thise noble children tweye,
 For which the peple ran to seen the sighte
 Of hire array, so richely buseye, And thanne at erst amonges hem they
 seye 985
 That Walter was no fool, thogh that hym
 leste
 To change his wyf, for it was for the beste

For she is fairer, as they deemen alle,
 Than is Grisalde, and moore tendre of age,

And fairer fruyt bitwene hem sholde
falle, 990

And moore plesant, for hire heigh lynage Hir brother eek so far was of visage That hem to seen the peple hath caught
plesaunce,

Commendynge now the markys gover-
naunce —

“O stormy peple! unsad and evere untrewel’ 995

Ay undiscreet and chaungynge as a fane!
Delitynge evere in rumbul that is newe,
For lyk the moone ay weve ye and wane!
Ay ful of clappyng, deere ynogh a jane!
Youre doom is fals, youre constance yvele preeveth, 1000

A ful greet fool is he that on yow leeveth ”

Thus seyden sadde folk in that citee, Whan that the peple gazed up and down,
For they were glad, right for the noveltee,
To han a newe lady of hir toun 1005 Namoore of this make I now mencoun,
But to Grisilde agayn wol I me dresse, And telle hir constance and hir bisy-
nesse —

Ful bisy was Grisilde in every thyng
That to the feeste was apertinent 1010 Right noght was she abayst of hire cloth-
yng, Thogh it were rude and somdeel eek
torent,

But with glad cheere to the yate is went With oother folk, to greete the markysesse,
And after that dooth forth hire bisynesse

With so glad chiere his gestes she receyveth, 1016

And konnyngly, everch in his degree,
That no defaute no man aperceyveth,
But ay they wondren what she myghte bee
That in so povre array was for to see, 1020
And koude swich honour and reverence,
And worthly they preisen hire prudence

In al this meene while she ne stente This mayde and eek hir brother to commende

With al hir herte, in ful benyngne en-
tente, 1025

So wel that no man koude hir pris amende But atte laste, whan that thise lordes
wende

To sitten doun to mete, he gan to calle Grisilde, as she was bisy in his halle

“Grisilde,” quod he, as it were in his pley, 1030

“How liketh thee my wyf and hire
beautee?”

“Right wel,” quod she, “my lord, for, in good fey,

A fairer saugh I nevere noon than she I prey to God yeve hire prosperitee,
And so hope I that he wol to yow sende Plesance ynogh unto youre lyves ende 1036

“O thyng biseke I yow, and warne also,
That ye ne prikke with no tormentynge
This tendre mayden, as ye han doon mo,
For she is fostred in hire norissynge 1040
Moore tendrely, and, to my supposynge,
She koude nat adversitee endure
As koude a povre fostred creature ”

And whan thus Walter saugh hire pacience,

Hir glade chiere, and no malice at al, 1045
And he so ofte had doon to hire offence,
And she ay sad and constant as a wal, Continuyng evere hire innocence overal,
This sturdy markys gan hus herte dresse
To rewen upon hire wyfly stedfastnesse

“This is ynogh, Grisilde myn,” quod
he, 1051

“Be now namoore agast ne yvele apayed.
I have thy feith and thy benyngnytee,
As wel as evere womman was, assayed,
In greet estaat, and povrelische arrayed Now knowe I, dere wyf, thy stedfast-
nesse,” — 1056
And hire in armes took and gan hire kesse

And she for wonder took of it no keep;
She herde nat what thyng he to hire seyde,
She ferde as she had stert out of a sleep, Til she out of hire mazednesse abreyde “Grisilde,” quod he, “by God, that for us
deyde, 1062

Thou art my wyf, ne noon oother I have,
Ne nevere hadde, as God my soule save!

"This is thy doghter, which thou hast supposed 1065
To be my wyf, that oother feithfully Shal be myn heir, as I have ay disposed, Thou bare hym in thy body trewely At Bologne have I kept hem prively, Taak hem agayn, for now maystow nat
seye 1070
That thou hast lorn noon of thy children
tweye

"And folk that ootherweys han seyde of
me,
I warne hem wel that I have doon this
deede
For no malice, ne for no crueltee, But for t'assaye in thee thy womman-
heede, 1075
And nat to sleen my children — God forbeede! —
But for to kepe hem pryvely and stille, Til I thy purpos knewe and al thy wille "

Whan she this herde, aswowne doun she falleth
For pitous joye, and after hire swownyng She bothe hire yonge children to hire calleth, 1081
And in hire armes, pitously wepyng, Embraceth hem, and tendrely kysyng Ful lyk a mooder, with hire salte teeres She bathed bothe hire visage and hire
heeres 1085

O which a pitous thyng it was to se Hir swownyng, and hire humble voys to
heere!
"Grauntmercy, lord, God thanke it yow,"
quod she,
"That ye han saved me my children deere!
Now rekke I nevere to been deed right
heere, 1090
Sith I stonde in youre love and in youre
grace,
No fors of death, ne whan my spirit pace!

"O tendre, o deere, o yonge children myne!
Youre woful mooder wende stedfastly 1094
That cruel houndes or som foul vermyne Hadde eten yow, but God, of his mercy,
And youre benyngne fader tendrely

Hath doon yow kept," — and in that same stounde
Al sodeynly she swapte adoun to grounde

And in hire swough so sadly holdeth
she 1100
Hire children two, whan she gan hem t'embrace,
That with greet sleighte and greet difficultee
The children from hire arm they gonne arace
O many a teere on many a pitous face Doun ran of hem that stooden hire bisyde, 1105
Unnethe abouten hire myghte they abyde

Walter hire gladeth, and hire sorwe slaketh,
She riseth up, abayed, from hire traunce,
And every wight hire joye and feeste maketh Til she hath caught agayn hire contenaunce 1110
Walter hire dooth so feithfully plesaunce
That it was deyntee for to seen the cheere Bitwixe hem two, now they been met yfeere

Thise ladyes, whan that they hir tyme
say,
Han taken hire and into chambre gon, 1115
And strepen hire out of hire rude array,
And in a clooth of gold that brighte shoon,
With a coroune of many a riche stoon Upon hire heed, they into halle hire
broghte,
And ther she was honoured as hire oghte

Thus hath this pitous day a blisful
ende, 1121
For every man and womman dooth his
myght
This day in murthe and revel to dispende Til on the welkne shoon the sterres lyght For moore solempne in every mannes syght 1125
This feste was, and gretter of costage, Than was the revel of hire mariage

Ful many a yeer in heigh prosperitee Lyven these two in concord and in reste,

And richely his doghter maryed he 1130 Unto a lord, oon of the worthieste Of al Ytaille, and thanne in pees and reste
 His wyves fader in his court he kepeth, Til that the soule out of his body crepeth

His sone succedeth in his heritage 1135
 In reste and pees, after his fader day,
 And fortunat was eek in marriage,
 Al putte he nat his wyf in greet assay
 This world is nat so strong, it is no nay,
 As it hath been in olde tymes yoore, 1140
 And herkneth what this auctour seith therfoore

This storne is seyde, nat for that wyves
 sholde
 Folwen Grislide as in humyltee,
 For it were mportable, though they wolde,
 But for that every wight, in his degree, 1145 Sholde be constant in adversitee
 As was Grislide, therefore Petrak writeth This storne, which with heigh stail he enditeth

For, sith a womman was so pacient Unto a mortal man, wel moore us oghte Receyven al in gree that God us sent, 1151 For greet skile is, he preeve that he wroghte
 But he ne tempteth no man that he boghte,
 As seith Sent Jame, if ye his pistel rede,
 He preeveth folk al day, it is no drede, 1155

And suffreth us, as for oure exercise,
 With sharpe scourges of adversitee
 Ful ofte to be bete in sondry wise, Nat for to knowe oure wyl, for certes he,
 Er we were born, knew al oure freletee, 1160
 And for oure beste is al his governaunce Lat us thanne lyve in vertuous suffraunce

But o word, lordynges, herkneth er I go
 It were ful hard to fynde now-a-dayes
 In al a toun Grisildis thre or two, 1165
 For if that they were put to swiche assayes,
 The gold of hem hath now so badde alayes With bras, that thogh the coyne be fair at
 ye,
 It wolde rather breste a-two than plye

For which heere, for the Wyves love of Bathe — 1170

Whos lyf and al hire secte God mayntene
 In heigh maistrie, and elles were it scathe
 I wol with lusty herte, fresch and grene, Seyn yow a song to glade yow, I wene,
 And lat us stynte of earnestful matere 1175 Herkneth my song that seith in this
 manere

Lenvoy de Chaucer

Grislide is deed, and eek hire pacience,
 And bothe atones buryed in Ytaille,
 For which I crie in open audience,
 No wedded man so hardy be t'assaille 1180
 His wyves pacience in trust to fynde Grisildis, for in certein he shal faille

O noble wyves, ful of heigh prudence, Lat noon humyltee youre tonge naille, Ne lat no clerk have cause or diligence 1185
 To write of yow a storne of swich mervaille
 As of Grisildis pacient and kynde, Lest Chichevache yow swelwe in hire entralle!

Folweth Ekko, that holdeth no silence,
 But evere answereth at the countretaille Beth nat bidaffed for youre innocence, 1191
 But sharply taak on yow the governaille Emprinteth wel this lessoun in youre
 mynde,
 For commune profit sith it may availle

Ye archewyves, stondeth at defense, 1195 Syn ye be strong as is a greet camaille, Ne suffreth nat that men yow doon offense
 And sklendre wyves, fieble as in bataille, Beth egre as is a tygre yond in Ynde, Ay clappeth as a mille, I yow consaille 1200

Ne dred hem nat, doth hem no reverence
 For though thyn housbonde armed be in maille,
 The arwes of thy crabbed eloquence Shal perce his brest, and eek his aventaille
 In jalousie I rede eek thou hym bynde, 1205 And thou shalt make hym couche as doth a quaille

If thou be fair, ther folk been in presence Shewe thou thy visage and thyn apparaille,
 If thou be foul, be fre of thy dispence,
 To gete thee freendes ay do thy travaille,
 Be ay of chiere as light as leef on lynde,
 And lat hym care, and wepe, and wrynge, and waille! 1212

[The following stanza, ll 1212^a-g, seems to have been the original ending of the tale. It stands after the Envoy in most of the manuscripts which preserve it, but it may have been meant to follow l 1162 or l 1169

 This is a gentil tale for the nones,
 As to my purpos, wiste ye my wille,
 But thyng that wol nat be, lat it be stille";

THE MERCHANT'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Marchantes Tale

Whlom ther was dwellynge in Lum-
 bardye 1245
 A worthy knyght, that born was of Pavye,
 In which he lyved in greet prosperitee,
 And sixty yeer a wyfles man was hee,
 And folwed ay his bodily delyt
 On women, ther as was his appetyt, 1250
 As doon these fooles that been seculer
 And whan that he was passed sixty yeer, Were t for hoolynesse or for dotage,
 I kan nat seye, but swich a greet corage Hadde this knyght to been a wedded
 man 1255
 That day and nyght he dooth al that he
 kan T'espren where he myghte wedded be, Preyinge oure Lord to graunten him that he Mighte ones knowe of thulke blisful lyf That is bitwixe an housbonde and his
 wyf, 1260
 And for to lyve under that hooly boond
 With which that first God man and womman bond
 "Noon oother lyf," seyde he, "is worth a bene,
 For wedlok is so esy and so clene,
 That in this world it is a paradyss" 1265 Thus seyde this olde knyght, that was so
 wys
 And certainly, as sooth as God is kyng,
 To take a wyf it is a glorious thyng,
 And namely whan a man is oold and hoor, Thanne is a wyf the fruyt of his tresor 1270 Thanne sholde he take a yong wyf and a feir,
 On which he myghte engendren hym an hear,
 And lede his lyf in joye and in solas,
 Where as these bachelers synge "allas," Whan that they fynden any adversitee
 In love, which nys but chuldyssh vanytee
 And trewely it sit wel to be so, 1277
 That bachelers have often payne and wo, On brotel ground they buyde, and brotel-
 nesse
 They fynde, whan they wene sikernesse
 They lyve but as a bryd or as a beest, 1281

In libertee, and under noon arreest, Ther as a wedded man in his estaat Lyveth a lyf blisful and ordinaat, Under this yok of marriage ybounde 1285 Wel may his herte in joy and blisse
 habounde,
 For who kan be so buxom as a wyf?
 Who is so trewe, and eek so ententyf To kepe hym, syk and hool, as is his make?
 For wele or wo she wole hym nat forsake, 1290
 She nys nat wery hym to love and serve, Thogh that he lye bedrede, til he sterve
 And yet somme clerkes seyn it nys nat so,
 Of whiche he Theofraste is oon of the What force though Theofraste liste lye?
 "Ne take no wyf," quod he, "for hous-
 bondrye, 1296
 As for to spare in household thy dispence
 A trewe servant dooth moore diligence Thy good to kepe, than thyn owene wyf,
 For she wol clayme half part al hur lyf 1300
 And if that thou be syk, so God me save, Thy verray freendes, or a trewe knave, Wol kepe thee bet than she that waiteth ay
 After thy good and hath doon many a day
 And if thou take a wyf unto thyn hood, Ful lightly maystow been a coke-wold" 1306
 This sentence, and an hundred thynges worse,
 Writeth this man, ther God his bones corse!
 But take no kep of al swich vanytee, Deffie Theofraste, and herke me 1310
 A wyf is Goddes yifte verraily, Alle othere manere yiftes hardily,
 As londes, rentes, pasture, or commune,
 Or moebles, alle been yiftes of Fortune,
 That passen as a shadwe upon a wal 1315
 But drede nat, if pleynly speke I shal, A wyf wol laste, and in thyn hous endure, Wel longer than thee list, paraventure Marriage is a ful greet sacrament He which that hath no wyf, I holde hym shent, 1320
 He lyveth helplees and al desolat, —

I speke of folk in seculer estaat
 And herke why, I sey nat this for noght, That womman is for mannes helpe ywroght

The hye God, whan he hadde Adam made, 1325

And saugh him al allone, bely-naked, God of his grete goodnesse seyde than,
 "Lat us now make an helpe unto this man lyk to hymself", and thanne he made him
 Eve

Heere may ye se, and heerby may ye preve, 1330

That wyf is mannes helpe and his confort, His paradys terrestre, and his disport So buxom and so vertuou is she,
 They moste nedes lyve in unitee O fleesh they been, and o fleesh, as I

gesse, 1335
 Hath but oon herte, in wele and in dis-
 tresse

A wyf! a, Sente Marie, benedicite!
 How myghte a man han any adversitee
 That hath a wyf? Certes, I kan nat seye The blisse which that is bitwixe hem
 tweye 1340

Ther may no tonge telle, or herte thynke
 If he be povre, she helpeth hym to swynke, She kepeth his good, and wasteth never
 a deel,

Al that hire housbonde lust, hire liketh
 weel,

She seith nat ones "nay," whan he seith
 "ye," 1345

"Do this," seith he, "Al redy, sire," seith she

O blusful ordre of wedlok precious, Thou art so murye, and eek so vertuou,
 And so commended and appreveed eek That every man that halt hym worth a leek, 1350

Upon his bare knees oughte al his lyf Thanken his God that hym hath sent a
 wyf,

Or elles preye to God hym for to sende
 A wyf, to laste unto his lyves ende
 For thanne his lyf is set in sikernesse, 1355
 He may nat be deceyved, as I gesse,
 So that he werke after his wyves reed Thanne may he boldely beren up his heed, They been so trewe, and therwithal so
 wyse;

For which, if thou wolt werken as the
 wyse, 1360

Do alwey so as wommen wol thee rede
 Lo, how that Jacob, as thise clerkes rede,

By good conseil of his mooder Rebekke, Boond the kydes skyn aboute his nekke,
 For which his fadres beny son he wan 1365

Lo Judith, as the storie eek telle kan,
 By wys conseil she Goddes peple kepste,
 And slow hym Olofernus, whil he slepte

Lo Abigayl, by good conseil, how she Saved hir housbonde Nabal, whan that
 he 1370

Sholde han be slayn, and looke, Ester also By good conseil delyvered out of wo
 The peple of God, and made hym Mar-dochee

Of Assuere enhaunced for to be Ther nys no thyng in gree super-latyf, 1375

As seith Senek, above an humble wyf Suffre thy wyves tonge, as Catoun bit, She shal comande, and thou shalt suffren
 it,

And yet she wole obeye of curteasye
 A wyf is keper of thyn housbondrye, 1380
 Wel may the sike man biwalle and wepe, Ther as ther nys no wyf the hous to kepe
 I warne thee, if wisely thou wolt wirche, Love wel thy wyf, as Crist loved his
 churche

If thou lovest thyself, thou lovest thy
 wyf, 1385

No man hateth his fleesh, but in his lyf
 He fostreth it, and therefore bidde I thee, Cherisse thy wyf, or thou shalt nevere
 thee

Housbonde and wyf, what so men jape or
 pleye,

Of worldly folk holden the siker weye, 1390
 They been so knyght ther may noon harm
 bityde,

And namely upon the wyves syde
 For which this Januarie, of whom I tolde, Considered hath, inwith his dayes olde,
 The lusty lyf, the vertuou quyete, 1395
 That is in marriage hony-sweete,
 And for his freendes on a day he sente,
 To tellen hem th'effect of his entente

With face sad his tale he hath hem toold He seyde, "Freendes, I am hoor and oold, 1400

And almost, God woot, on my pittes brynke,

Upon my soule somewhat moste I thynke
I have my body folly despended, Blessed be God that it shal been amended!

For I wol be, certeyn, a wedded man, 1405
And that anon in al the haste I kan Unto som mayde fair and tendre of age,

I prey yow, shapeth for my mariage Al sodeynly, for I wol nat abyde,
And I wol fonde t'espian, on my syde, 1410

To whom I may be wedded hastily But forasmuche as ye been mo than I, Ye shullen rather swich a thyng espyen

Than I, and where me best were to allyen But o thyng warne I yow, my freendes
deere, 1415

I wol noon oold wyf han in no manere
She shal nat passe twenty yeer, certayn, Oold fissh and yong flessch wolde I have ful fayn

Bet is," quod he, "a pyk than a pykerel, And bet than old beef is the tendre veel 1420

I wol no womman thritty yeer of age,
It is but bene-straw and greet forage
And eek thise olde wydwes, God it woot,

They konne so muchel craft on Wades boot,
So muchel broken harm, whan that hem
leste, 1425

That with hem sholde I nevere lyve in
reste

For sondry scoles maken sotile clerkis, Womman of manye scoles half a clerk is But certeynly, a yong thyng may men gye,

Right as men may warm wex with handes
plye 1430

Wherfore I sey yow pleynly, in a clause, I wol noon oold wyf han right for this cause

For if so were I hadde swich myschaunce,
That I in hire ne koude han no plesaunce, Thanne sholde I lede my lyf in avoutrye,

And go straight to the devel, whan I
dye 1436

Ne children sholde I none upon hire geten, Yet were me levere houndes had me eten,
Than that myn heritage sholde falle In straunge hand, and this I telle yow
alle 1440

I dote nat, I woot the cause why

Men sholde wedde, and forthermoore woot I,

Ther speketh many a man of mariage That woot namoore of it than woot my page,

For whiche causes man sholde take a
wyf 1445

If he ne may nat lyven chaast his lyf, Take hym a wyf with greet devocoun,
By cause of leveful procreacioun

Of children, to th'onour of God above,
And nat oonly for paramour or love, 1450
And for they sholde leccherye eschue,

And yelde hir dette whan that it is due,
Or for that ech of hem sholde helpen oother
In meschief, as a suster shal the brother,
And lyve in chastitee ful holly 1455

But sres, by youre leve, that am nat I For, God be thanked! I dar make avaunt, I feele my lymes stark and suffisaunt

To do al that a man bilongeth to,
I woot myselfen best what I may do 1460
Though I be hoor, I fare as dooth a tree

That blometh er that fruyt ywoxen bee,
And blosmy tree nys neither drye ne deed.
I feele me nowhere hoor but on myn heed,

Myn herte and alle my lymes been as
grene 1465

As laurer thurgh the yeer is for to seme.
And syn that ye han herd al myn entente,
I prey yow to my wyl ye wole assente "

Diverse men diversely hym tolde
Of mariage manye ensamples olde 1470 Somme blamed it, somme preysed it,

certeyn,
But atte laste, shortly for to seyn,
As al day falleth altercacioun

Bitwixen freendes in disputisoun, Ther fil a stryf bitwixe his bretheren
two, 1475

Of whiche that oon was cleped Placebo, Justinus soothly called was that oother Placebo seyde, "O Januarie, brother,

Ful litel nede hadde ye, my lord so deere, Consel to axe of any that is heere, 1480
But that ye been so ful of sapience

That yow ne lketh, for youre heighe prudence,
To weyven fro the word of Salomon
This word seyde he unto us everychon

'Wirk alle thyng by conseil,' thus seyde
he, 1485

'And thanne shaltow nat repente thee' But though that Salomon spak swich a
word,

Myn owene deere brother and my lord,
So wysly God my soule brynge at reste, I holde youre owene conseil is the
beste 1490

For, brother myn, of me taak this motyf,
I have now been a court-man al my lyf,
And God it woot, though I unworthy be,
I have stonden in ful greet degree Abouten lordes of ful heigh estaat, 1495 Yet hadde I nevere with noon of hem
debaat

I nevere hem contramed, trewely,
I woot wel that my lord kan moore than I What that he seith, I holde it ferme and stable,

I seye the same, or elles thyng semblable 1500

A ful greet fool is any conseilour
That serveth any lord of heigh honour,
That dar presume, or elles thenken it,
That his conseil sholde passe his lordes wit Nay, lordes been no foolles, by my fay! 1505 Ye han yourelven shewed heer to-day
So heigh sentence, so holly and weel,
That I consente and conferme everydeel Your wordes alle and youre opinoun
By God, ther nys no man in al this toun, Ne in Ytaille, that koude bet han sayd!
Crist halt hym of this conseil ful wel
apayd 1512

And trewely, it is an heigh corage
Of any man that stapen is in age
To take a yong wyf, by my fader kyn, 1515 Youre herte hangeth on a joly pyn!
Dooth now in this matiere right as yow
leste,

For finally I holde it for the beste " Justinus, that ay stille sat and herde, Right in this wise he to Placebo answerde 1520

"Now, brother myn, be pacient, I preye, Syn ye han seyde, and herkneth what I seye Senek, among his othere wordes wyse, Seith that a man oghte hym right wel avyse
To whom he yeveth his lond or his catel
And syn I oghte avyse me right wel 1526
To whom I yeve my good away fro me, Wel muchel moore I oghte avysed be To whom I yeve my body for alwey

I warne yow wel, it is no childes pley 1530
To take a wyf withouten avysement Men moste enquire, this is myn assent, Wher she be wys, or sobre, or dronkelewe,
Or proud, or elles ootherweys a shrewe,
A chidestere, or wastour of thy good, 1535
Or riche, or poore, or elles mannyssh wood Al be it so that no man fynden shal Noon in this world that trotteth hool in al, Ne man, ne beest, swich as men koude
devyse,

But natheles it oghte ynough suffice 1540
With any wyf, if so were that she hadde Mo goode thewes than hire vices badde,
And al this axeth leyser for t'enquere For, God it woot, I have wept many a teere

Ful pryvely, syn I have had a wyf 1545 Preye whoso wole a wedded mannes lyf, Certein I fynde in it but cost and care
And observances, of alle blisses bare And yet, God woot, my neighebores
aboute,

And namely of wommen many a route, 1550
Seyn that I have the mooste stedefast wyf,
And eek the mekeste oon that bereth lyf, But I woot best where wryngeth me my sho

Ye mowe, for me, right as yow liketh do, Avyseth yow — ye been a man of age —
How that ye entren into mariage, 1556
And namely with a yong wyf and a fair
By hym that made water, erthe, and air,
The yongeste man that is in al this route Is busy ynough to bryngen it aboute 1560
To han his wyf allone Trusteth me, Ye shul nat plesen hire fully yeres thre,
This is to seyn, to doon hire ful plesaunce
A wyf axeth ful many an observance
I prey yow that ye be nat yvele apayd "
"Wel," quod this Januarie, "and hastow sayd? 1566

Straw for thy Senek, and for thy proverbes!
I counte nat a panyer ful of herbes
Of scole-termes Wyser men than thow, As thou hast herd, assenteden right
now 1570

To my purpos Placebo, what sey ye?"
"I seye it is a cursed man," quod he,
"That letteth matrimoigne, sikerly "
And with that word they rysen sodeynly,
And been assented fully that he sholde 1575

Be wedded whanne hym liste, and where he wolde

Heigh fantasye and curious bisynesse Fro day to day gan in the soule impresse
Of Januarie aboute his marriage 1579
Many fair shap and many a fair visage Ther passeth thurgh his herte nyght by
nyght,

As whoso tooke a mirour, polissed bryght,
And sette it in a commune market-place, Thanne sholde he se ful many a figure pace
By his mirour, and in the same wyse 1585 Gan Januarie inwith his thought devyse Of maydens whiche that dwelten hym
busyde

He wiste nat wher that he myghte abyde
For if that oon have beaute in hir face, Another stant so in the peples grace 1590
For hire sadnesse and hire benyngnytee That of the peple grettest voys hath she,
And somme were riche, and hadden badde
name

But natheless, bitwixe earnest and game,
He atte laste apoynted hym on oon, 1595
And leet alle othere from his herte goon,
And chees hire of his owene auctoritee,
For love is blynd alday, and may nat see
And whan that he was in his bed ybrought, He purtreied in his herte and in his thought 1600

Hir fresshe beautee and hir age tendre, Hir myddel smal, hire armes longe and sklendre,

Hir wise governaunce, hir gentillesse, Hir wommanly berynge, and hire sad-
nesse

And whan that he on hire was condescended, 1605

Hym thoughte hus choys myghte nat ben amended

For whan that he hymself concluded
hadde,

Hym thoughte ech oother mannes wit so
badde

That impossible it were to repplye
Agayn hus choys, this was his fantasye 1610
His freendes sente he to, at his instaunce, And preyed hem to doon hym that
plesaunce,

That hastily they wolden to hym come,
He wolde abregge hir labour, alle and
some

Nedeth namoore for hym to go ne ryde,
He was apoynted ther he wolde abyde 1615

Placebo cam, and eek his freendes soone,
And alderfirst he bad hem alle a boone,
That noon of hem none argumentes make Agayn the purpos which that he hath
take, 1620

Which purpos was pleasant to God, seyde
he,

And verray ground of his prosperitee

He seyde ther was a mayden in the toun,
Which that of beautee hadde greet renoun Al were it so she were of smal degree, 1625 Suffiseth hym hir yowthe and hir beautee Which mayde, he seyde, he wolde han to
his wyf,

To lede in ese and hoolynesse hus lyf,
And thanked God that he myghte han hire al,

That no wight his blisse parten shal 1630
And preyed hem to laboure in this nede,
And shapen that he faille nat to spede,
For thanne, he seyde, his spirit was at ese
"Thanne is," quod he, "no thyng may me displese,

Save o thyng priketh in my conscience, 1635
The which I wol reherce in youre presence

I have," quod he, "herd seyde, ful yoores
ago,

Ther may no man han parfite blisses two,
This is to seye, in erthe and eek in hevenc For though he kepe hym fro the synnc sevene, 1640

And eek from every branche of thilke tree, Yet is ther so parfite felicitee

And so greet ese and lust in marriage,
That evere I am agast now in myn age
That I shal lede now so myrre a lyf, 1645
So delicat, withouten wo and stryf, That I shal have myn hevenc in erthe
heere

For sith that verray hevenc is boght so
deere

With tribulacion and greet penaunce, How sholde I thanne, that lyve in swich
plesaunce 1650

As alle wedded men doon with hire wyvys, Come to the blisse ther Crist eterne on lyve ys?

This is my drede, and ye, my bretheren
tweye,

Assoilth me this question, I preye "

Justinus, which that hated his folye, 1655 Answerde anon right in his japerye,
 And for he wolde his longe tale abregge,
 He wolde noon auctoritee allegge,
 But seyde, "Sire, so ther be noon obstacle Oother than this, God of his hygh myracle 1660

And of his mercy may so for yow wirche
 That, er ye have youre right of hooly
 churche,

Ye may repente of wedded mannes lyf,
 In which ye seyn ther is no wo ne stryf
 And elles, God forbede but he sente 1665
 A wedded man hym grace to repente Wel ofte rather than a sengle man!
 And therefore, sire — the beste reed I kan — Dispere yow noght, but have in youre memorie,

Paraunter she may be youre purgatorie!
 She may be Goddes meene and Goddes
 whippe, 1671
 Thanne shal youre soule up to hevене skippe

Swifter than dooth an arwe out of a bowe
 I hope to God, herafter shul ye knowe That ther nys no so greet felcotee 1675
 In marriage, ne nevere mo shal bee,
 That yow shal lette of youre savacion,
 So that ye use, as skile is and reson,
 The lustes of youre wyf attemprely, 1679
 And that ye plesse hire nat to amorously, And that ye kepe yow eek from oother
 synne

My tale is doon, for my wit is thynne Beth nat agast herot, my brother deere,
 But lat us waden out of this mateere
 The Wyf of Bathe, if ye han understonde, Of marriage, which ye have on honde, 1686 Declared hath ful wel in litel space Fareth now wel, God have yow in his
 grace "

And with this word thus Justyn and his brother
 Han take hir leve, and ech of hem of
 oother 1690
 For whan they saughe that it moste nedes
 be,

They wroghten so, by sly and wys treetee,
 That she, this mayden, which that Mayus hughte,

As hastily as evere that she myghte,

I trowe it were to longe yow to tarie,
 If I yow tolde of every scrit and bond
 By which that she was feffed in his lond,
 Or for to herkennen of hur riche array
 But finally ycomen is the day 1700
 That to the churche bothe be they went For to receive the hooly sacrament Forth comth the preest, with stole aboute his nekke,

And bad hire be lyk Sarra and Rebekke
 In wysdom and in trouthe of marriage, 1705
 And seyde his orisons, as is usage, And croucheth hem, and bad God sholde hem blesse,
 And made al siker ynogh with hoolynesse Thus been they wedded with sol-empnitee,

And at the feeste sitteth he and she 1710
 With othere worthy folk upon the deys Al ful of joye and blusse is the paleys,
 And ful of instrumentz and of vitaille,
 The mooste deyntevous of al Ytaille Biforn hem stooode instrumentz of swich
 soun 1715

That Orpheus, ne of Thebes Amphion, Ne maden nevere swich a melodye At every cours thanne cam loud mynstralcye,

That nevere tromped Joab for to heere, Nor he Theodomas, yet half so cleere, 1720
 At Thebes, whan the citee was in doute Bacus the wyn hem shynketh al aboute,
 And Venus laugheth upon every wight,
 For Januarie was bicomē hir knyght,
 And wolde bothe assayen his corage 1725
 In libertee, and eek in marriage,
 And with hire fyrbrond in hire hand aboute Daunceth biforn the bryde and al the route

And certainly, I dar right wel seyn this, Ymeneus, that god of weddyng is, 1730 Saugh nevere his lyf so myrie a wedded
 man

Hoold thou thy pees, thou poete Marcian, That writest us that ilke weddyng murie Of hire Philologie and hym Meicurse,
 And of the songes that the Muses songe!
 To smal is bothe thy penne, and eek thy
 tonge, 1736

For to descryven of this marriage Whan tendre youthe hath wedded stoup-

Ther is swich myrthe that it may nat be written

Assayeth it youreself, thanne may ye
witen 1740

If that I lye or noon in this matiere Mayus, that sit with so benyngne a chiere,

Hire to biholde it semed fayerye Queene Ester looked nevere with swich an ye

On Assuer, so meke a look hath she 1745
I may yow nat devyse al hir beautee
But thus muche of hire beautee telle I may,
That she was lyk the brighte morwe of
May,

Fulfid of alle beautee and plesaunce
This Januarie is ravysshed in a traunce
At every tyme he looked on hir face, 1751
But in his herte he gan hire to manace That he that nyght in armes wolde hire streynre

Harder than evere Parys dide Eleyne
But natheles yet hadde he greet pitee 1755 That thilke nyght offenden hire moste he,
And thoughte, "Allas! O tendre creature, Now wolde God ye myghte wel endure Al my corage, it is so sharp and keene!
I am agast ye shul it nat susteene 1760
But God forbede that I dide al my myght!
Now wolde God that it were woxen nyght,
And that the nyght wolde lasten everemo
I wolde that al this peple were ago"
And finally he dooth al his labour, 1765
As he best myghte, savyng his honour,
To haste hem fro the mete in subtil wyse

The tyme cam that resoun was to ryse,
And after that men daunce and drynken
faste,
And spices al aboute the hous they
caste, 1770

And ful of joye and blisse is every man, —
Al but a squyer, highte Damyan, Which carf biforn the knyght ful many a
day

He was so ravysshed on his lady May That for the verray peyne he was ny
wood 1775

Almoost he swelte and swowned ther he
stood,
So soore hath Venus hurt hym with hire brond,
As that she bar it daunsynge in hire hond,

And to his bed he wente hym hastily Namooore of hym as at this tyme speke I, But there I lete hym wepe ynogh and
pleyne, 1781

Til fresshe May wol rewen on his peyne O perillous fyr, that in the bedstraw bredeth!

O famulher foo, that his servyce bedeth!
O servant traytour, false hoomly hewe, 1785 Lyk to the naddre in bosom sly untrewre, God shilde us alle from youre aqueyntaunce!

O Januarie, dronken in plesaunce
In mariage, se how thy Damyan, Thyn owene squer and thy borne man, 1790
Entendeth for to do thee vleynye God graunte thee thyn hoomly fo t'espye!
For in this world nys worse pestalence Than hoomly foo al day in thy presence Parfourned hath the sonne his ark diurne, 1795

No lenger may the body of hym sojurne
On th'orisonste, as in that latitude Nyght with his mantel, that is derk and rude,

Gan oversprede the hemysperie aboute,
For which departed is this lusty route 1800 Fro Januarie, with thank on every syde Hoom to hir houses lustily they ryde, Where as they doon hir thynges as hem
leste,

And whan they sye hir tyme, goon to
reste

Soone after that, this hastif Januarie 1805 Wolde go to bedde, he wolde no lenger tarye
He drynketh ypocras, clarree, and vernage Of spices hoote, t'encreessen his corage,
And many a letuarie hath he ful fyn, Swiche as the cursed monk, daun Con-stantyn, 1810

Hath written in his book De Contu,
To eten hem alle he nas no thyng eschu And to his privee freendes thus seyde he
"For Goddes love, as soone as it may be, Lat voyden al this hous in curteys wyse"
And they han doon right as he wol
devyse 1815

Men drynken, and the travers drawe anon The bryde was brought abedde as stille as stoon,
And whan the bed was with the preest yblessed,

Out of the chambre hath every wight hym dressed, 1820

And Januarie hath faste in armes take His fresshe May, his paradys, his make He lulleth hire, he kisseth hire ful ofte,
With thikke brustles of his berd unsofte, Lyk to the skyn of houndfyssh, sharp as brere — 1825

For he was shave al newe in his manere —
He rebuth hire aboute hir tendre face,
And seyde thus, "Allas! I moot trespace To yow, my spouse, and yow greetly
offende,

Er tyme come that I wil down descende But natheles, considereth this," quod
he, 1831

"Ther nys no werkman, whatsoever he be,
That may bothe werke wel and hastily,
This wol be doon at leyser parfitly
It is no fors how longe that we pleye, 1835
In trewe wedlok coupled be we tweye,
And blessed be the yok that we been inne,
For in oure actes we mowe do no synne
A man may do no synne with his wyf, Ne hurte hymselfen with his owene
knyf, 1840

For we han leve to pleye us by the lawe' Thus laboureth he til that the day gan
dawe,

And thanne he taketh a sop in fyn clarree,
And upright in his bed thanne sitteth he,
And after that he sang ful loude and cleere, 1845

And kiste his wyf, and made wantown
cheere

He was al coltassh, ful of ragerye,
And ful of jargon as a flekked pye
The slakke skyn aboute his nekke shaketh, Whil that he sang, so chaunteth he and craketh 1850

But God woot what that May thoughte in hir herte,

Whan she hym saugh up sittynge in his
sherte,

In his nyght-cappe, and with his nekke
lene,

She preyseth nat his pleyng worth a bene Thanne seide he thus, "My reste wol I
take, 1855

Now day is come, I may no lenger wake"
And doun he leyde his heed, and sleep til pryme

And afterward, whan that he saugh his
tyme,

Up ryseth Januarie, but fresshe May Heeld hire chambre unto the fourthe
day, 1860

As usage is of wyves for the beste
For every labour somtyme moot han
reste,

Or elles longe may he nat endure,
This is to sey, no lyves creature, Be it of fyssh, or bryd, or beest, or
man 1865

Now wol I speke of woful Damyan, That langwischeth for love, as ye shul
heere,

Therefore I speke to hym in this manere
I seye, "O sely Damyan, allas!
Andswere to my demaunde, as in this
cas 1870

How shaltow to thy lady, fresshe May, Telle thy wo? She wole alwey seye nay Eek if thou speke, she wol thy wo bawreye God be thyn helpe! I kan no better seye"

This sike Damyan in Venus fyr 1875
So brenneth that he dyeth for desyr,
For which he putte his lyf in aventure
No lenger myghte he in this wye endure,
But prively a penner gan he borwe,
And in a lettre wroot he al his sorwe, 1880
In manere of a compleynt or a lay, Unto his faire, fresshe lady May,
And in a purs of sylk, heng on his sherte
He hath it put, and leyde it at his herte

The moone, that at noon was thilke
day 1885

That Januarie hath wedded fresshe May In two of Tawr, was into Cancre glyden, So longe hath Mayus in hir chambre abyden,

As custume is unto thise nobles alle
A bryde shal nat eten in the halle 1890
Til dayes foure, or thre dayes atte leeste, Ypassed been, thanne lat hire go to feeste
The fourthe day compleet fro noon to
noon,

Whan that the heighe masse was ydoon,
In halle sit this Januarie and May, 1895
As fressh as is the brighte someres day.
And so bifel how that this goode man Remembred hym upon this Damyan, And seyde, "Seynte Marie! how may this
be,

That Damyan entendeth nat to me? 1900
Is he ay syk, or how may this bityde?"
His squeres, whiche that stooden ther
bisyde,

Excused hym by cause of his siknesse,
Which letted hym to doon his bisynesse, Noon oother cause myghte make hym tarye 1905

"That me forthynketh," quod this Januarie,

"He is a gentyl squer, by my trouthe!
If that he deyde, it were harm and routhe
He is as wys, discreet, and as secree
As any man I woot of his degree, 1910
And therto manly, and eek servysable, And for to been a thrifty man right able But after mete, as soone as evere I may,
I wol myself visite hym, and eek May,
To doon hym al the confort that I kan" And for that word hym blessed every
man, 1916

That of his bountee and his gentillesse
He wolde so conforten in siknesse His squer, for it was a gentyl dede "Dame," quod this Januarie, "taak good
hede, 1920

At after-mete ye with youre wommen alle, Whan ye han been in chambre out of this halle,

That alle ye go se this Damyan 1923
Dooth hym disport — he is a gentyl man,
And telleth hym that I wol hym visite,
Have I no thyng but rested me a lite,
And spede yow faste, for I wole abyde Til that ye slepe faste by my syde"

And wth that word he gan to hym to calle
A squer, that was marchal of his halle, 1930 And tolde hym certeyn thynges, what he wolde

This fresshe May hath streight hir wey yholde,

With alle hir wommen, unto Damyan Doun by his beddes syde sit she than, Confortyng hym as goodly as she may This Damyan, whan that his tyme he say, 1936

In secree wise his purs and eek his bille,
In which that he ywriten hadde his wille, Hath put into hire hand, withouten moore, Save that he siketh wonder depe and
soore, 1940

And softly to hire right thus seyde he

"Mercy! and that ye nat discovere me, For I am deed if that this thyng be kyd"
This purs hath she inwath hir bosom hyd, And wente hire wey, ye gete namoore of
me 1945

But unto Januarie ycomen is she,
That on his beddes syde sit ful softe
He taketh hire, and kisseth hire ful ofte, And leyde hym doun to slepe, and that
anon

She feyned hire as that she moste gon 1950 Ther as ye woot that every wight moot
neede,

And whan she of this bille hath taken
heede,

She rente it al to cloutes atte laste,
And in the pryvee softly it caste Who studieth now but faire fresshe
May? 1955

Adour by olde Januarie she lay, That sleep til that the coughe hath hym awaked

Anon he preyde hire strepen hire al naked, He wolde of hire, he seyde, han som
plesaunce,

And seyde hir clothes dide hym encombraunce, 1960

And she obeyeth, be hire hef or looth
But lest that precious folk be with me
wrooth,

How that he wroghte, I dar nat to yow
telle,

Or whether hire thoughte it paradys or
helle

But heere I lete hem werken in hir wyse Til evensong rong, and that they moste aryse 1966

Were it by destynes or aventure,
Were it by influence or by nature,
Or constellacion, that in swich estaat
The hevene stood, that tyme fortunaat Was for to putte a bille of Venus werkes — For alle thyng hath tyme, as seyn thuse clerkes — 1972

To any womman, for to gete hire love,
I kan nat seye, but grete God above,
That knoweth that noon act is causeless, He deme of al, for I wole holde my
pees 1976

But sooth is this, how that this fresshe
May

Hath take swich impressioun that day,

For pitee of this sike Damyan,
That from hire herte she ne dryve kan 1980
The remembrance for to doon hym ese "Certeyn," thoughte she, "whom that this thyng displese,

I rekke nocht, for heere I hym assure
To love hym best of any creature, Though he namooore hadde than his
sherte" 1985

Lo, pitee renneth soone in gentil herte!
Heere may ye se how excellent franchise In women is, when they hem narwe avyse

Som tyrant is, as ther be many oon, That hath an herte as hard as any
stoon, 1990

Which wolde han lat hym sterven in the
place

Wel rather than han graunted hym hire
grace,

And hem rejoysen in hire crueel pryde,
And rekke nat to been an homycide

This gentil May, fulfilled of pitee, 1995 Right of hire hand a lettre made she,
In which she graunteth hym hire verray
grace

Ther lakketh nocht, oonly but day and
place,

Wher that she myghte unto his lust suffise,
For it shal be right as he wole devyse 2000

And whan she saugh hir tyme, upon a day,
To visite this Damyan gooth May,
And sotilly this lettre doun she threste Under his pilwe, rede it if hym leste She taketh hym by the hand, and harde hym twiste 2005

So secretly that no wight of it wiste, And bad hym been al hool, and forth she
wente

To Januarie, whan that he for hire sente Up riseth Damyan the nexte morwe, Al passed was his siknesse and his sorwe He kembeth hym, he proyneth hym and pyketh, 2011

He dooth al that his lady lust and lyketh,
And eek to Januarie he gooth as lowe
As evere dide a dogge for the bowe

He is so plesant unto every man 2015 (For craft is al, whoso that do it kan)
That every wight is fayn to speke hym
good,

And fully in his lady grace he stood

Thus lete I Damyan aboute his nede,
And in my tale forth I wol procede 2020

Somme clerkes holden that felicittee Stant in delht, and therefore certeyn he,
This noble Januarie, with al his myght,
In honest wyse, as longeth to a knyght, Shoop hym to lyve ful deliciously 2025

His housynge, his array, as honestly
To his degree was madek as a kynges Amonges othere of his honeste thynges,
He made a gardyn, walled al with stoon,
So fair a gardyn woot I nowher noon
For, out of doute, I verrally suppose 2031 That he that wroot the Romance of the Rose

Ne koude of it the beautee wel devyse, Ne Priapus ne myghte nat suffise, Though he be god of gardyns, for to
telle 2035

The beautee of the gardyn and the welle,
That stood under a laurer alwey grene Ful ofte tyme he Pluto and his queene, Proserpina, and al hire fayerye, Disporten hem and maken melodye 2040 Aboute that welle, and daunced, as men
tolde

This noble knyght, this Januarie the olde, Swich deyntee hath in it to walke and
pleye,

That he wol no wight suffren bere the keye
Save he hymself, for of the smale wyket
He baar alwey of silver a clyket, 2046
With which, whan that hym leste, he it unshette

And whan he wolde paye his wyf hir dette
In somer seson, thuder wolde he go,

And May his wyf, and no wight but they
two, 2050
And thynges whiche that were nat doon
abedde,

He in the gardyn parfourned hem and spedde

And in this wyse, many a murye day, Lyved this Januarie and fresshe May But worldly joye may nat alwey dure 2055
To Januarie, ne to no creature

O sodeyn hap! o thou Fortune unstable!
Lyk to the scorpion so deceeyvable, That flaterest with thyn heed whan thou wolt styngge,

Thy tayl is deeth, thurgh thyn envenym-
ynge 2060

O brotil joye! o sweete venym queynte!
 O monstre, that so subtilly kanst peynte Thy yiftes under hewe of stidefastnesse, That thou deceyvest bothe moore and
 lesse!

Why hastow Januarie thus deceyved, 2065
 That haddest hym for thy fulle freend receyved?

And now thou hast biraft hym bothe his
 yen,

For sorwe of which desureth he to dyen

Allas! this noble Januarie free, Amydde his lust and his prosperitee, 2070
 Is woxen blynd, and that al sodeynly
 He wepeth and he wayleth pitously,
 And therwithal the fyr of jalousie, Lest that his wyf sholde falle in som
 folye, 2074

So brente his herte that he wolde fayn That som man bothe hire and hym had
 slayn

For neither after his deeth, nor in his lyf, Ne wolde he that she were love ne wyf,
 But evere lyve as wydwe in clothes blake, Soul as the turtle that lost hath hire
 make 2080

But atte laste, after a month or tweye,
 His sorwe gan aswage, sooth to seye,
 For whan he wiste it may noon oother be,
 He patiently took his adversitee,
 Save, out of doute, he may nat forgoon 2085
 That he nas jalous everemoore in oon, Which jalousye it was so outrageous,
 That neither in halle, n'yn noon oother
 hous,

Ne in noon oother place, neverthemo,
 He nolde suffre hire for to ryde or go, 2090
 But if that he had hond on hire alway, For which ful ofte wepeth fresshe May,
 That loveth Damyan so benyngely
 That she moot outhur dyen sodeynly,
 Or elles she moot han hym as hir leste 2095
 She wayteth whan hir herte wolde breste

Upon that oother syde Damyan Bicomen is the sorwefulleste man That evere was, for neither nyght ne day Ne myghte he speke a word to fresshe
 May, 2100

As to his purpos, of no swich mateere,
 But if that Januarie moste it heere,
 That hadde an hand upon hire everemo
 But natheless, by writyng to and fro,

And privee signes, wiste he what she
 mente, 2105

And she knew eek the fyn of his entente
 O Januarie, what myghte it thee availle, Thogh thou myghte se as fer as shuppes saalle?

For as good is blynd deceyved be
 As to be deceyved whan a man may se 2110
 Lo, Argus, which that hadde an hondred
 yen,

For al that evere he koude poure or pryen, Yet was he blent, and, God woot, so been
 mo,

That wenen wisly that it be nat so Passe over is an ese, I sey namoore 2115 This fresshe May, that I spak of so
 yoore,

In warm wex hath emprented the clyket
 That Januarie bar of the smale wyket,
 By which into his gardyn ofte he wente,
 And Damyan, that knew al hre entente,
 The clyket countrefeted pryvely 2121
 Ther nys namoore to seye, but hastily Som wonder by this clyket shal bityde, Which ye shul heeren, if ye wole abyde

O noble Ovyde, ful sooth seystou, God
 woot, 2125

What sleighte is it, thogh it be long and
 hoot,

That Love nyl fynde it out in som manere?
 By Piramus and Tesbee may men leere, Thogh they were kept ful longe strete overal,

They been accorded, rownyng thurgh a
 wal, 2130

Ther no wight koude han founde out swich a sleighte

But now to purpos er that dayes eighte
 Were passed, er the month of Juyl, bifil That Januarie hath caught so greet a wil, Thurgh eggyng of his wyf, hym for to
 pleye 2135

In his gardyn, and no wight but they
 tweye,

That in a morwe unto this May seith he
 "Rys up, my wyf, my love, my lady free!
 The turtles voys is herd, my dowve sweete,
 The wynter is goon with alle his reynes weete 2140

Com forth now, with thyne eyen col-umbyn!

How fairer been thy brestes than is wyn!

The gardyn is enclosed al aboute,
Com forth, my white spouse¹ out of doute Thou hast me wounded in myn herte, O
wyf! 2145

No spot of thee ne knew I al my lyf
Com forth, and lat us taken oure disport, I chees thee for my wyf and my confort " Swiche olde lewed wordes used he

On Damyan a signe made she, 2150
That he sholde go biforn with his chiket This Damyan thanne hath opened the wyket,

And in he sturte, and that in swich manere
That no wight myghte it se neither yheere,
And stille he sat under a bussh anon 2155

This Januarie, as blynd as is a stoon,
With Mayus in his hand, and no wight mo,
Into his fresshe gardyn is ago,
And clapte to the wyket sodeynly

"Now wyf," quod he, "heere nys but thou and I, 2160

That art the creature that I best love
For by that Lord that sit in hevene above, Levere ich hadde to dyen on a knyf,
Than thee offende, trewe deere wyf!

For Goddes sake, thank how I thee chees, Noght for no covetise, doutelees, 2166
But only for the love I had to thee And though that I be oold, and may nat
see,

Beth to me trewe, and I wol telle yow why Thre thynges, certes, shal ye wynne
therby 2170

First, love of Crist, and to youreself honour,
And al myn heritage, toun and tour,
I yeve it yow, maketh chartres as yow
leste,

This shal be doon to-morwe er sonne reste,
So wisly God my soule brynge in blisse
I prey yow first, in covenant ye me kisse, And though that I be jalous, wyte me
noght 2177

Ye been so depe enprented in my thought That, whan that I considere youre beautee,
And therwithal the unhkly elde of me, 2180
I may nat, certes, though I sholde dye, Forbere to been out of youre compaignye
For verray love, this is withouten doute Now kys me, wyf, and lat us rome aboute "

This fresshe May, whan she thise wordes
herde, 2185

Benyngnely to Januarie answerde,

But first and forward she bigan to wepe
' I have," quod she, "a soule for to kepe
As wel as ye, and also myn honour,
And of my wyfthod thilke tendre flour, 2190
Which that I have assured in youre hond, Whan that the preest to yow my body bond,

Wherefore I wole answer in this manere,
By the leve of yow, my lord so deere I prey to God that nevere dawe the day That I ne sterve, as foule as womman
may, 2196

If evere I do unto my kyn that shame,
Or elles I empeyre so my name,
That I be fals, and if I do that lak,
Do strepe me and put me in a sak, 2200
And in the nexte ryver do me drenche
I am a gentil womman and no wenche Why speke ye thus? but men been evere untrewe,

And wommen have repreve of yow ay
newe

Ye han noon oother contenance, I leeve, But speke to us of untrust and re-preeve " 2206

And with that word she saugh wher Damyan

Sat in the bussh, and coughen she bigan,
And with hir fynger signes made she That Damyan sholde clymbe upon a
tree, 2210

That charged was with fruyt, and up he
wente

For verrally he knew al hire entente,
And every signe that she koude make,
Wel bet than Januarie, hir owene make,
For in a lettre she hadde toold hym al
Of this matere, how he werchen shal 2216
And thus I lete hym sitte upon the pyrie,
And Januarie and May romynge ful myrie Bright was the day, and blew the firmament,

Phebus hath of gold his stremes down
ysent, 2220

To gladen every flour with his warmnesse
He was that tyme in Geminis, as I gesse,
But litel fro his declynacion Of Cancer, Jovis exaltacion 2224

And so bifel, that brighte morwe-tyde,
That in that gardyn, in the ferther syde, Pluto, that is kyng of Fayerye,
And many a lady in his compaignye,

Folwyngc his wyf, the queene Proserpyna,
Which that he ravysshed out of Ethna 2230 Whil that she gadered floures in the mede —

In Claudyan ye may the stories rede, How in his grisely carte he hire fette —
This kyng of Fairye thanne adoun hym sette Upon a bench of turves, fressh and grene, And right anon thus seyde he to his
queene 2236

“My wyf,” quod he, “ther may no wight seye nay,

Th'exprencse so preveth every day
The tresons whiche that wommen doon to
man

Ten hondred thousand [tales] tellen I kan Notable of youre untrouthe and brotil-
nesse 2241

O Salomon, wys, and richest of richesse, Fulfuld of sapience and of worldly glorie, Ful worthy been thy wordes to memorie To every wight that wit and reson kan Thus preiseth he yet the bountee of man 'Amonges a thousand men yet foond I
oon, 2247

But of wommen alle foond I noon ' Thus seith the kyng that knoweth youre wikkednesse

And Jhesus, filius Syrak, as I gesse, 2250
Ne speketh of yow but seelde reverence
A wyldc fyr and corrupt pestilence
So falle upon youre bodyes yet to-nyght!
Ne se ye nat this honorable knyght, By cause, allas! that he is blynd and
old, 2255

His owene man shal make hym cokewold
Lo, where he sit, the lechour, in the treel
Now wol I graunten, of my magestee, Unto this olde, blynde, worthy knyght
That he shal have ayeyn his eyen syght, Whan that his wyf wold doon hym vileynye 2261

Thanne shal he known al hire harlotrye, Bothe in repreve of hire and othere mo” “Ye shal?” quod Proserpyne, “wol ye so? 2264

Now by my moodres sires soule I swere
That I shal yeven hire suffisant answeere, And alle wommen after, for hir sake,
That, though they be in any gilt ytake,
With face boold they shulle hemself excuse,

And bere hem doun that wolden hem accuse 2270

For lak of answeere noon of hem shal dyen Al hadde man seyn a thyng with bothe his
yen,

Yit shul we wommen visage it hardily,
And wepe, and swere, and chyde subtally, So that ye men shul been as lewed as gees 2275

What rekketh me of youre auctoritees?
I woot wel that this Jew, this Salomon, Foond of us wommen foolles many oon But though that he ne foond no good womman,

Yet hath ther founde many another man Wommen ful trewe, ful goode, and vertuuous 2281

Witnesse on hem that dwelle in Cristes
hous,

With martirdom they preved hire constance

The Romayn geestes eek make remembrance

Of many a verray, trewe wyf also 2285
But, sire, ne be nat wrooth, al be it so, Though that he seyde he foond no good
womman,

I prey yow take the sentence of the man,
He mente thus, that in sovereyn bontee Nis noon but God, that sit in Trinitee 2290

Ey! for verray God, that nys but oon, What make ye so mucche of Salomon?
What though he made a temple, Goddes
hous?

What though he were riche and glorious?
So made he eek a temple of false goddis How myghte he do a thyng that moore forbode is? 2296

Pardee, as faire as ye his name emplastre,
He was a lechour and an ydolastre,
And in his elde he verray God forsook, And if that God ne hadde, as seith the book, 2300

Yspared him for his fadres sake, he sholde
Have lost his regne rather than he wolde
I sette right noght, of al the vileynye That ye of wommen write, a boterfiye!
I am a womman, nedes moot I speke, 2305
Or elles swelle til myn herte breke For sithen he seyde that we been jangleresses,

As evere hool I moote brouke my tresses,

I shal nat spare, for no curteisye, To speke hym harm that wolde us vileynye " 2310

"Dame," quod this Pluto, "be no lenger wrooth,

I yeve it up! but sith I swoor myn ooth That I wolde graunten hym his sighte
ageyn,

My word shal stonde, I warne yow certeyn
I am a kyng, it sit me noght to lye " 2315

"And I," quod she, "a queene of Fayerye!

Hir answeere shal she have, I undertake Lat us namoore wordes heerof make,
For sothe, I wol no lenger yow contrarie "

Now lat us turne agayn to Januarie, 2320
That in the gardyn with his faire May Syngeth ful murer than the papejay,

"Yow love I best, and shal, and oother
noon "

So longe aboute the aleyes is he goon, Til he was come agaynes thulke pyrie 2325
Where as this Damyan sitteth ful myrie An heigh among the fresshe leves grene

This fresshe May, that is so bright and sheene,

Gan for to syke, and seyde, "Allas, my
syde!

Now sure," quod she, "for aught that may bityde, 2330

I moste han of the peres that I see,
Or I moot dye, so soore longeth me

To eten of the smale peres grene Help, for hir love that is of hevене queene!

I telle yow wel, a womman in my plit 2335
May han to fruyt so greet an appetit That she may dyen, but she of it have "

"Allas!" quod he, "that I ne had heer a knave

That koude clymbe! Allas, allas," quod he,
"That I am blynd!" "Ye, sire, no fors,"

quod she, 2340

'But wolde ye vouche sauf, for Goddes
sake,

The pyrie inwith youre armes for to take,
For wel I woot that ye mystruste me,

Thanne sholde I clymbe wel ynogh,"
quod she,

"So I my foot myghte sette upon youre
bak " 2345

"Certes," quod he, "theron shal be no lak, Mighte I yow helpen with myn herte blood "

He stoupeth doun, and on his bak she
stood,

And caughte hire by a twiste, and up she gooth —

Ladies, I prey yow that ye be nat wrooth,
I kan nat glose, I am a rude man — 2351

And sodeynly anon this Damyan Gan pullen up the smok, and in he throng

And whan that Pluto saugh this grete wrong,

To Januarie he gaf agayn his sighte, 2355
And made hym se as wel as evere he
myghte

And whan that he hadde caught his sighte
agayn,

Ne was ther nevere man of thyng so fayn,
But on his wyf his thought was everemo

Up to the tree he caste his eyen two, 2360 And saugh that Damyan his wyf had dressed

In swich manere it may nat been expressed,
But if I wolde speke uncurteisly,

And up he yaf a roryng and a cry,
As dooth the mooder whan the child shal
dye 2365

"Out! help! allas! harrow!" he gan to crye,
"O stronge lady stoore, what dostow?"

And she answerde, "Sire, what eyleth yow?

Have pacience and resoun in youre mynde!
I have yow holpe on bothe youre eyen
blynde 2370

Up peril of my soule, I shal nat lyen,
As me was taught, to heele with youre eyen,

Was no thyng bet, to make yow to see,
Than strugle with a man upon a tree

God woot, I dide it in ful good entente "
"Strugle!" quod he, "ye, algate in it
wente! 2376

God yeve yow bothe on shames deth to dyen!

He swyved thee, I saugh it with myne
yen,

And elles be I hanged by the hals!"
"Thanne is," quod she, "my medicyne al fals, 2380

For certeinly, if that ye myghte se, Ye wolde nat seyn thuse wordes unto me

Ye han som glymsyng, and no parfit
sighte "

"I se," quod he, "as wel as evere I
myghte,

Thought be God! with bothe myne eyen
two, 2385
And by my trouthe, me thoughte he dide thee so "

"Ye maze, maze, goode s're," quod she,
"This thank have I for I have maad yow
see Allas," quod she, "that evere I was so
kynde!"

"Now, dame," quod he, "lat al passe out of mynde 2390
Com down, my hef, and if I have myssayd, God helpe me so, as I am yvele apayd
But, by my fader soule, I wende han seyn
How that this Damyan hadde by thee leyn, And that thy smok hadde leyn upon thy brest " 2395
"Ye, sure," quod she, "ye may wene as yow lest
But, s're, a man that waketh out of his sleep, He may nat sodeynly wel taken keep Upon a thyng, ne seen it parfitly, Til that he be adawed verrarly 2400

Right so a man that longe hath blynd ybe, Ne may nat sodeynly so wel yse,
First whan his sighte is newe come ageyn,
As he that hath a day or two yseyn Til that youre sighte ysatled be a while, Ther may ful many a sighte yow bigile 2406 Beth war, I prey yow, for, by hevене
kyng,
Ful many a man weneth to seen a thyng,
And it is al another than it semeth
He that mysconceyveh, he mysdemeth " 2411 And with that word she leep down fro the tree 2411
This Januarie, who is glad but he?
He kisseth hire, and chippeth hire ful ofte,
And on hire wombe he stroketh hire ful
softe,
And to his palays hoom he hath hire lad 2415
Now, goode men, I pray yow to be glad Thus endeth heere my tale of Januarie, God blesse us, and his mooder Seinte Marie!

Heere is ended the Marchantes Tale of Januarie

EPILOGUE TO THE MERCHANT'S TALE

"Ey! Goddes mercy!" seyde oure Hooste tho,
"Now swich a wyf I pray God kepe me
fro! 2420
Lo, whiche sleightes and subtiltees
In women been! for ay as busy as bees
Been they, us sely men for to deceyve,
And from the soothe evere wol they weyve,
By this Marchauntes tale it preveth weel
But doutelees, as trewe as any steel 2426
I have a wyf, though that she povre be,
But of hir tonge a labbyng shrewe is she,
And yet she hath an heap of vices mo,

Therof no fors! lat alle swiche thynges
go 2430
But wyte ye what? In conseil be it seyde, Me reweth soore I am unto hire teyd For, and I sholde rekenen every vice Which that she hath, ywis I were to nyce,
And cause why, it sholde reported be 2435 And toold to hire of somme of this meynee, —
Of whom, it nedeth nat for to declare,
Syn women konnen outen swich chaffare,
And eek my wit suffiseth nat therto,
To tellen al, wherfore my tale is do " 2440

FRAGMENT V (GROUP F)

INTRODUCTION TO THE SQUIRE'S TALE

"SQUIER, com neer, if it youre wille be,
And sey somewhat of love, for certes ye Konnen theron as muche as any man" "Nay, sire," quod he, "but I wol seye as I kan

With hertly wyl, for I wol nat rebelle 5
Agayn youre lust, a tale wol I telle Have me excused if I speke amys, My wyl is good, and lo, my tale is this "

THE SQUIRE'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Squieres Tale

At Sarray, in the land of Tartarye, Ther dwelte a kyng that werreyed Russye, 10
Thurgh which ther dyde many a doughty
man

This noble kyng was cleped Cambyuskan, Which in his tyme was of so greet renoun
That ther was nowher in no regioun

So excellent a lord in alle thyng 15
Hym lakked noght that longeth to a kyng
As of the secte of which that he was born He kepte his lay, to which that he was sworn,

And therto he was hardy, wys, and riche,
And pitous and just, alwey yliche, 20 Sooth of his word, benigne, and honourable,

Of his corage as any centre stable, Yong, fressh, and strong, in armes de-sirus

As any bachelor of al his hous
A fair person he was and fortunat, 25
And kepte alwey so wel roial estat That ther was nowher swich another man

This noble kyng, this Tartre Cambyuskan,

Hadde two sones on Elpheta his wyf,
Of whiche the eldeste highte Algarsyf, 30
That oother sone was cleped Cambalo A doghter hadde this worthy kyng also,
That yongest was, and highte Canacee
But for to telle yow al hir beautee,
It lyth nat in my tonge, n'yn my konnyng,

I dar nat undertake so heigh a thyng 36
Myn Englyssh eek is insufficient
It moste been a rethor excellent, That koude his colours longynge for that art,

If he sholde hire discryven every part 40
I am noon swich, I moot speke as I kan

And so bifel that whan this Cambyuskan Hath twenty wynter born his diademe,
As he was wont for yeer to yeer, I deme,
He leet the feeste of his nativitee 45
Doon cryen thurghout Sarray his citee,
The laste Idus of March, after the yeer Phebus the sonne ful joly was and cleer,

For he was neigh his exaltacioun
In Martes face, and in his mansioun 50
In Aries, the colerik hooete signe Ful lusty was the weder and benigne, For which the foweles, agayn the sonne
sheene,

What for the sesoun and the yonge grene, Ful loude songen hire affeccions 55
Hem semed han geten hem protecciouns Agayn the swerd of wynter, keene and
coold

This Cambyuskan, of which I have yow toold,

In roial vestment sit on his deys,
With diademe, ful heighe in his paleys, 60
And halt his feeste so solempne and so ryche

That in this world ne was ther noon it lyche,

Of which if I shal tellen al th'array, Thanne wolde it occupie a someres day,
 And eek it nedeth nat for to devyse 65
 At every cours the ordre of hire servyse
 I wol nat tellen of hur strange sewes, Ne of hur swannes, ne of hire heronsewes Eek in that lond, as tellen knyghtes olde, Ther is som mete that is ful deynte
 holde, 70

That in this lond men recche of it but smal, Ther nys no man that may reporten al
 I wol nat taryen yow, for it is pryme,
 And for it is no fruyt, but los of tyme, Unto my firste I wole have my recurs 75
 And so bifel that after the thridde cours, Whil that this kyng sit thus in his nobleye, Herknynghe his mynstralles hur thynges
 pleye

Biforn hym at the bord deliciously,
 In at the halle dore al sodeynly 80
 Ther cam a knyght upon a steede of bras,
 And in his hand a brood mirour of glas Upon his thombe he hadde of gold a ryng,
 And by his syde a naked swerd hangyng,
 And up he rideth to the heighe bord 85
 In al the halle ne was ther spoken a word For merveille of this knyght, hym to bholde

Ful bisly they wayten, yonge and olde This strange knyght, that cam thus sodeynly,

Al armed, save his heed, ful richely, 90
 Saleweth kyng and queene and lordes alle,
 By ordre, as they seten in the halle,
 With so heigh reverence and obeisaunce,
 As wel in speche as in his contenaunce,
 That Gawayn, with his olde courtesye, 95
 Though he were comen ayeyn out of Fairye, Ne koude hym nat amende with a word
 And after this, biforn the heighe bord,
 He with a manly voys seith his message,
 After the forme used in his langage, 100
 Withouten vice of silable or of lettre,
 And, for his tale sholde seme the better, Accordant to his wordes was his cheere,
 As techeth art of speche hem that it leere Al be it that I kan nat sowne his stile, 105
 Ne kan nat clymben over so heigh a style, Yet seye I this, as to commune entente, Thus muche amounteth al that evere he
 mente,

If it so be that I have it in mynde

He seyde, "The kyng of Arabe and of Inde, 110

My lige lord, on this solempne day Saleweth yow, as he best kan and may,
 And sendeth yow, in honour of youre
 feeste,

By me, that am al redy at youre heeste,
 This steede of bras, that esily and weel 115 Kan in the space of o day natureel —

This is to seyn, in foure and twenty houres —

Wher-so yow lyst, in droghte or elles
 shoures,

Beren youre body into every place
 To which youre herte wilneth for to pace, Withouten wem of yow, thurgh foul or fair, 121

Or, if yow lyst to fleen as hye in the air
 As dooth an egle, whan hym list to soore, This same steede shal bere yow evere
 moore, 124

Withouten harm, til ye be ther yow leste, Though that ye slepen on his bak or reste,
 And turne ayeyn, with writhyng of a pyn
 He that it wroghte koude ful many a gyn
 He wayted many a constellacion 125
 Er he had doon this operacion, 130 And knew ful many a seel and many a bond

This mirour eek, that I have in myn
 hond,
 Hath swich a myght that men may in it
 see

Whan ther shal fallen any adversitee
 Unto youre regne or to youreself also, 135
 And openly who is youre fieend or foo

And over al this, if any lady bright Hath set hire herte on any maner wight,
 If he be fals, she shal his tresoun see,
 His newe love, and al his subtaltee, 140

So openly that ther shal no thyng hyde Wherfore, ageyn this lusty someres tyde,
 This mirour and this ryng, that ye may see,
 He hath sent to my lady Canacee,
 Your excellente doghter that is heere 145

The vertu of the ryng, if ye wol heere, Is this, that if hire lust it for to were Upon hur thombe, or in hur purs it bere, Ther is no fowel that fleeth under the hevene

That she ne shal wel understonde his stevene, 150

And knowe his menyng openly and pleyn,
 And answer hym in his langage ageyna,
 And every gras that groweth upon roote She shal eek knowe, and whom it wol do boote,

Al be his woundes never so depe and wyde 155

This naked swerd, that hangeth by my
 syde,

Swich vertu hath that, what man so ye
 smyte,

Thurgh out his armure it wole kerve and
 byte,

Were it as thikke as is a branched ook,
 And what man that is wounded with the strook 160

Shal never be hool til that yow list, of
 grace,

To stroke hym with the plat in thulke
 place

Ther he is hurt, this is as muche to seyn, Ye moot with the platte swerd ageyn Stroke hym in the wounde, and it wol close 165

This is a verray sooth, withouten glose,
 It faulleth nat whils it is in youre hoold "

And whan this knyght hath thus his tale toold,

He rideth out of halle, and doun he lighte His steede, which that shoon as sonne
 bryghte, 170

Stant in the court as stille as any stoon
 This knyght is to his chambre lad anon,
 And is unarmed, and unto mete yset

The presentes been ful roially yfet,
 This is to seyn, the swerd and the mirour,
 And born anon into the heighe tour 176

With certeine officers ordeyned therefore,
 And unto Canacee this ryng is bore Solempny, ther she sit at the table
 But sikerly, withouten any fable, 180

The hors of bras, that may nat be re-mewed,

It stant as it were to the ground yglewed Ther may no man out of the place it dryve
 For noon engyn of wyndas or polyve, And cause why? for they kan nat the craft 185

And therefore in the place they han it left, Til that the knyght hath taught hem the
 manere

To voyden hym, as ye shal after heere

Greet was the prees that swarmeth to and fro

To gauren on this hors that stondest so,
 For it so heigh was, and so brood and
 long, 191

So wel proporcioned for to been strong,
 Right as it were a steede of Lumbardve, Therwith so horsly, and so quyk of ye,
 As it a gentil Poilleys courser were 195

For certes, fro his tayl unto his ere,
 Nature ne art ne koude hym nat amende
 In no degree, as al the peple wende But evermoore hir mooste wonder was How that it koude gon, and was of bras,
 It was of Fairye, as the peple semed 201 Diverse folk diversely they demed, As many heddes, as manye wittes ther been

They murmureden as dooth a swarm of
 been,

And maden skiles after hir fantasies, 205 Rehersynge of those olde poetries,
 And seyden it was lyk the Pegasee,
 The hors that hadde wynges for to flee,
 Or elles it was the Grekes hors Synon,
 That broghte Troie to destruccoon, 210
 As men moun in these olde geestes rede "Myn herte," quod oon, "is evermoore in drede,

I trowe som men of armes been therinne,
 That shapen hem this citee for to wynne
 It were right good that al swich thyng were knowe " 215

Another rownded to his felawe lowe,
 And seyde, "He lyeth, for it is rather lyk An apparence ymaad by som magyk,
 As jogelours pleyen at thuse feestes grete " Of sondry doutes thus they jangle and trete, 220

As lewed peple demeth comunly
 Of thynges that been maad moore subtilly Than they kan in hir lewednesse compre-hende,

They demen gladly to the badder ende And somme of hem wondred on the mirour, 225

That born was up into the maister-tour, Hou men myghte in it swiche thynges se Another answerde, and seyde it myghte wel be

Naturally, by composiciouns
 Of anglis and of slye reflexiouns, 230

And seyde that in Rome was swich oon
 They speken of Alocen, and Vitulon, And Aristotle, that writen in hur lyves
 Of queynte mirours and of perspectives, As knowen they that han hir bookes
 herd 235

And oother folk han wondred on the swerd

That wolde percen thurghout every thyng,
 And fille in speche of Thelophus the kyng,
 And of Achilles with his queynte spere, For he koude with it bothe heele and dere, 240

Right in swich wise as men may with the swerd

Of which right now ye han youreselven herd

They speken of sondry hardyng of metal,
 And speke of medicynes therwithal,
 And how and whanne it sholde yharded
 be, 245

Which is unknowe, algates unto me

Tho speke they of Canacees ryng,
 And seyden alle that swich a wonder thyng
 Of craft of rynges herde they nevere noon, Save that he Moyses and kyng Salomon 250 Hadde a name of konnyng in swich art Thus seyn the peple, and drawn hem apart

But natheles somme seiden that it was Wonder to maken of fern-assen glas,
 And yet nys glas nat lyk assen of fern, 255
 But, for they han yknowen it so fern, Therefore cseseth hur janglyng and hur wonder

As soore wondren somme on cause of thonder,

On ebbe, on flood, on gossomer, and on myst, 259

And alle thyng, til that the cause is wyst
 Thus jangle they, and demen, and devyse, Til that the kyng gan fro the bord aryse

Phebus hath laft the angle meridional,
 And yet ascendyng was the beest roial,
 The gentil Leon, with his Aldiran, 265 Whan that this Tartre kyng, this Cam-
 byuskan,

Roos fro his bord, ther that he sat ful hie Toform hym gooth the loude mynstralcye, Til he cam to his chambre of parementz, Ther as they sownen diverse instru-
 mentz, 270

That it is lyk an hevene for to heere
 Now dauncen lusty Venus children deere,
 For in the Fyssh hir lady sat ful hie,
 And looketh on hem with a freendly ye

This noble kyng is set upon his trone 275
 This strange knyght is fet to hym ful soone,
 And on the daunce he gooth with Canacee Heere is the revel and the jolitee

That is nat able a dul man to devyse
 He moste han knowen love and his servyse, And been a feestlych man as fresh as
 May, 281

That sholde yow devysen swich array Who koude telle yow the forme of daunces

So unkouth, and so fresshe contenaunces, Swich subtil looking and dissymulynges For drede of jalouse mennes aperceyv-ynges? 286

No man but Launcelot, and he is deed
 Therefore I passe of al this lustiheed,
 I sey namoore, but in this jolynesse
 I lete hem, til men to the soper dresse 290

The styward bit the spices for to hie,
 And eek the wyn, in al this melodye
 The usshers and the squers been ygoon,
 The spices and the wyn is come anon They ete and drynke, and whan this hadde an ende, 295

Unto the temple, as reson was, they wende
 The service doon, they soupen al by day
 What nedeth yow rehercen hire array?
 Ech man woot wel that a kynges feeste Hath plentee to the meeste and to the
 leeste, 300

And deyntees mo than been in my know-
 yng

At after-soper gooth this noble kyng
 To seen this hors of bras, with al a route Of lordes and of ladyes hym aboute

Swich wondryng was ther on this hors of bras 305

That syn the grete sege of Troie was, Theras men wondreden on an hors also,
 Ne was ther swich a wondryng as was tho
 But fynally the kyng axeth this knyght
 The vertu of this courser and the myght,
 And preyde hym to telle his gouveaunce

This hors anon bigan to tripepe and
 daunce, 312

Whan that this knyght leyde hand upon his reyne,

And seyde, "Sire, ther is namoore to seyne,
But, whan yow list to ryden anywhere, 315 Ye mooten trille a pyn, stant in his ere,
Which I shal telle yow bitwix us two Ye moote nempne hym to what place also,
Or to what contree, that yow list to ryde
And whan ye come ther as yow list abyde, Bidde hym descende, and trille another pyn, 321

For thern lith th'effect of al the gyn,
And he wol doun descende and doon youre
wille,

And in that place he wol abyde stille Though al the world the contrarie hadde yswore, 325

He shal nat thennes been ydrawe ne ybore
Or, if yow liste bidde hym thennes goon, Trille this pyn, and he wol vanysse anon
Out of the sighte of every maner wight,
And come agayn, be it by day or nyght, 330 Whan that yow list to clepen hym ageyn
In swich a gyse as I shal to yow seyn Bitwixe yow and me, and that ful soone Rade whan yow list, ther is namoore to
doone "

Enformed whan the kyng was of that
knyght, 335

And hath conceyved in his wit aright
The manere and the forme of al this thyng, Ful glad and blithe, thus noble doughty
kyng

Repereth to his revel as biforn
The brydel is unto the tour yborn 340
And kept among his jueles leeve and deere The hors vanysshed, I noot in what
manere,

Out of hir sighte, ye gete namoore of me
But thus I lete in lust and jolitee
This Cambyuskan his lordes festeynge 345 Til wel ny the day bigan to spryng

Explicit prima pars

Sequitur pars secunda

The notice of digestioun, the sleep, Gan on hem wynke and bad hem taken keep
That muchel drynke and labour wolde han
reste,
And with a galpyng mouth hem alle he keste, 350
And seyde that it was tyme to lye adoun,

For blood was in his domynacioun
"Cherisseth blood, natures freend," quod
he

They thanken hym galpyng, by two, by
thre,

And every wight gan drawe hym to his
reste, 355

As sleep hem bad, they tooke it for the
beste

Hire dremes shul nat now been toold for me,

Ful were hire heddes of fumositee,
That causeth dreem, of which ther nys no charge

They slepen til that it was pryme large, 360

The mooste part, but it were Canacee
She was ful mesurable, as wommen be,
For of hir fader hadde she take leve
To goon to reste soone after it was eve Hir liste nat appalled for to be, 365
Ne on the morwe unfeestlich for to se,
And slepte hire firste sleep, and thanne awook

For swich a joye she in hir herte took Bothe of hir queynte ryng and hire mirour, That twenty tyme she changed hir colour, 370

And in hire sleep, right for impressioun
Of hire mirour, she hadde a visioun Wherefore, er that the sonne gan up glyde,
She cleped on hir maistresse hire bisyde,
And seyde that hire liste for to ryse 375

These olde wommen that been gladly
wyse,

As is hire maistresse, answerde hire anon,
And seyde, "Madame, whider wil ye goon Thus erly, for the folk been alle on reste?"

"I wol," quod she, "arise, for me
- leste 380

Ne lenger for to slepe, and walke aboute" Hire maistresse clepeth wommen a greet
route,

And up they rysen, wel a ten or twelve,
Up riseth fresshe Canacee hirselve, As rody and bright as dooth the yonge
sonne, 385

That in the Ram is foure degrees up ronne —

Noon hyer was he whan she redy was —
And forth she walketh esily a pas, Arrayed after the lusty seson soote 389 Lightly, for to pleye and walke on foote,

Nat but with fyve or sixe of hur meynnee,
And in a trench forth in the park gooth
she

The vapour which that fro the erthe glood

Made the sonne to seme rody and brood,
But natheles it was so fair a sighte 395
That it made alle hire hertes for to lighte, What for the seson and the morwenyng,
And for the foweles that she herde syng
For right anon she wiste what they mente, Right by hir song, and knew al hire
entente 400

The knotte why that every tale is toold,
If it be taryd til that lust be coold Of hem that han it after herkedn yoore,
The savour passeth ever lenger the moore,
For fulsomnesse of his prolixitee, 405
And by the same resoun, thynketh me,
I sholde to the knotte condescende,
And maken of hir walkyng soone an ende Amydde a tree, for drye as whit as chalk,

As Canacee was pleyng in hir walk, 410
Ther sat a faucon over hire heed ful hie,
That with a pitous voys so gan to crye
That all the wode resound of hire cry Ybeten hadde she hirself so pitously With bothe hir wynges, til the rede
blood 415

Ran endelong the tree ther-as she stood And evere in oon she cryde alwey and shrighte,

And with hir beek hirselven so she prighte,
That ther nys tygre, ne so cruell beest,
That dwelleth outhur in wode or in forest,
That nolde han wept, if that he wepe koude, 421

For sorwe of hire, she shrighte alwey so loude

For ther nas nevere yet no man on lyve,
If that I koude a faucon wel discryve, That herde of swich another of fair-
nesse, 425

As wel of plumage as of gentillesse Of shap, of al that myghte yrekened be A faucon peregryn thanne semed she Of fremde land, and everemoore, as she
stood,

She swowneth now and now for lak of blood, 430

Til wel neigh is she fallen fro the tree

This faire kynges doghter, Canacee,
That on hir fynger baar the queynte ryng, Thurgh which she understood wel every
thyng

That any fowel may in his leden seyn, 435
And koude answeren hym in his ledene
ageyn,

Hath understonde what this faucon seyde, And wel neigh for the routhe almost she
deyde

And to the tree she gooth ful hastily,
And on this faucon looketh pitously, 440 And heeld hir lappe abroad, for wel she
wiste

The faucon moste fallen fro the twiste, Whan that it swowned next, for lak of blood

A longe whil to wayten hire she stood,
Til atte laste she spak in this manere 445 Unto the hauk, as ye shal after heere

"What is the cause, if it be for to telle, That ye be in this fural pyne of helle?"
Quod Canacee unto this hauk above

"Is this for sorwe of deeth or los of love?
For, as I trowe, thise been causes two 451
That causen moost a gentil herte wo, Of oother harm it nedeth nat to speke
For ye youreself upon yourself yow wreke, Which proveth wel that outhur love or
drede 455

Moot been enchesoun of youre cruel dede, Syn that I see noon oother wight yow
chace

For love of God, as dooth youreselven
grace,

Or what may been youre help? for west nor est

Ne saugh I nevere er now no bryd ne
beest 460

That ferde with hymself so pitously Ye sle me with youre sorwe verraily,
I have of yow so greet compassioun
For Goddes love, com fro the tree adoun,
And as I am a kynges doghter trewe, 465
If that I verraily the cause knewe
Of youre disese, if it lay in my myght,
I wolde amenden it er that it were nyght,
As wisly helpe me grete God of kynde!
And herbes shal I right ynowe yfynde 470
To heele with youre hurtes hastily "

Tho shrighte this faucon yet moore pitously

Than ever she dide, and fil to grounde
anon,

And lith aswowne, deed and lyk a stoon,
Til Canacee hath in hire lappe hire take 475

Unto the tyme she gan of swough awake
And after that she of hir swough gan

breyde,

Right in hir haukes ledene thus she seyde
"That pitee renneth soone in gentil herte,

Feelynge his similitude in paynes smerte,
Is preved alday, as men may it see, 481

As wel by werk as by auctoritee,
For gentil herte kitheth gentillesse

I se wel that ye han of my distresse Compassion, my faire Canacee, 485

Of verray wommanly benignytee That Nature in youre principles hath set

But for noon hope for to fare the bet,
But for to obeye unto youre herte free,

And for to maken othere be war by me, 490
As by the whelp chastised is the leon,

Right for that cause and that conclusion,
Whil that I have a leyser and a space,

Myn harm I wol confessen er I pace " 494
And evere, whil that oon hir sorwe tolde,

That oother weep as she to water wolde,
Til that the faucon bad hire to be stille,

And, with a syk, right thus she seyde hir
wille

"Ther I was bred — allas, that harde
day! —

And fostred in a roche of marbul gray 500
So tendrely that no thyng eyled me,

I nyste nat what was adversitee,
Til I koude flee ful hye under the sky

Tho dwelte a tercelet me faste by,
That semed welle of alle gentillesse, 505

Al were he ful of treson and falsnesse,
It was so wrapped under humble cheere,

And under hewe of trouthen in swich
manere,

Under plesance, and under bisy peyne,
That no wight koude han wend he koude

feyne, 510

So depe in greyn he dyed his coloures Right as a serpent hit hym under fioures

Til he may seen his tyme for to byte, Right so this god of love, thus ypcoryte,

Dooth so his cerymonyes and obeisaunces, And kepeth in semblaunt alle his observaunces 516

That sownen into gentillesse of love

As in a toumbe is al the faire above,
And under is the corps, swich as ye woot, Swich was this ypcorte, bothe coold and
hoot 520

And in this wise he served his entente, That, save the feend, noon wiste what he

mente,

Til he so longe hadde wopen and com-
pleyned,

And many a yeer his service to me feyned, Til that myn herte, to pitous and to nyce,

Al innocent of his crouned malice, 526
Forfered of his deeth, as thoughte me,

Upon his othes and his seuretee, Graunted hym love, on this condicioun,

That everemoore myn honour and renoun
Were saved, bothe privee and apert, 531

This is to seyn, that after his desert,
I yaf hym al myn herte and al my thocht—

God woot and he, that ootherwise noight — And took his herte in change of myn for ay 535

But sooth is seyde, goon sithen many a day,
'A trewe wight and a thief thenken nat

oon'

And whan he saugh the thyng so fer ygoon
That I hadde graunted hym fully my love,

In swich a gyse as I have seyde above, 540
And yeven hym my trewe herte as free

As he swoor he yaf his herte to me, Anon this tigre, ful of doublenesse,

Fil on his knees with so devout humblesse, With so heigh reverence, and, as by his

cheere, 545

So lyk a gentil love of manere,
So ravysshed, as it serned, for the joye,

That nevere Jason ne Parys of Troye — Jason? certes, ne noon oother man

Syn Lameth was, that alderfirst bigan 550
To loven two, as writen folk biforn —

Ne nevere, syn the firste man was born, Ne koude man, by twenty thousand part,

Countrefete the sophymes of his art,
Ne were worthy unbokelen his galote,

Ther doublenesse or feynyng sholde approche, 556

Ne so koude thonke a wight as he dide me!
His manere was an hevene for to see

Til any womman, were she never so wys, So peynted he and kembde at point-devys 560

As wel his wordes as his contenaunce

And I so loved hym for his obeisaunce,
 And for the trouthe I demed in his herte,
 That if so were that any thyng hym smerte, Al were it never so lite, and I it wiste, 565 Me thoughte I felte deeth myn herte twiste

And shortly, so ferforth this thyng is went,
 That my wyl was his willes instrument,
 This is to seyn, my wyl obeyed his wyl
 In alle thyng, as fer as reson fil, 570 Keyynge the boundes of my worshipe evere

Ne nevere hadde I thyng so hef, ne levere, As hym, God woot! ne nevere shal namo

This lasteth lenger than a yeer or two,
 That I supposed of hym nocht but good But finally, thus atte laste it stood, 578
 That Fortune wolde that he moste twynne
 Out of that place which that I was mne Wher me was wo, that is no questoun,
 I kan nat make of it descripsoun, 580

For o thyng dar I tellen boldely, I knowe what is the peyne of deeth therby, Swich harm I felte for he ne myghte bileve
 So on a day of me he took his leve,
 So sorwefully eek that I wende verraly 585
 That he had felt as muche harm as I, Whan that I herde hym speke, and saugh his hewe

But nathelees, I thoughte he was so trewe,
 And eek that he repaire sholde ageyn Withinne a litel while, sooth to seyn, 590

And resoun wolde eek that he moste go For his honour, as ofte it happeth so,
 That I made vertu of necessitee, And took it wel, syn that it moste be As I best myghte, I hidde fro hym my
 sorwe, 595

And took hym by the hond, Seint John to borwe,

And seyde hym thus 'Lo, I am youre al, Beth swich as I to yow have been and
 shal'

What he answerde, it nedeth nocht re-herce,

Who kan sey bet than he, who kan do werse? 600

Whan he hath al wel seyde, thanne hath he doon

'Therefore bihoveth hire a ful long spoon That shal ete with a feend,' thus herde I
 seye

So atte laste he moste forth his weye,
 And forth he fleeth tal he cam ther hym
 leste 605

Whan it cam hym to purpos for to reste,
 I trowe he hadde thulke text in mynde,
 That 'alle thyng, reperynge to his kynde, Gladeth hymself,' thus seyn men, as I
 gesse

Men loven of propre kynde newefangel-
 nesse, 610

As briddes doon that men in cages fede For though thou nyght and day take of hem hede,

And strawe hur cage faire and softe as silk,
 And yeve hem sugre, hony, breed and milk,
 Yet right anon as that his dore is uppe, 615 He with his feet wol spurne adoun his cuppe,

And to the wode he wole, and wormes ete,
 So newefangel been they of hire mete,
 And loven novelries of propre kynde,
 No gentillesse of blood ne may hem bynde
 So ferde this tercelet, allas the day! 621

Though he were gentil born, and fressh and gay,

And goodlich for to seen, and humble and
 free,

He saugh upon a tyme a kyte flee,
 And sodeynly he loved this kyte so 625

That al his love is clene fro me ago,
 And hath his trouthe falsed in this wyse
 Thus hath the kyte my love in hire servyse,
 And I am lorn withouten remedie!''

And with that word this faucon gan to
 crie, 630

And swowned eft in Canacees barm

Greet was the sorwe for the haukes harm
 That Canacee and alle hir wommen made, They nyste hou they myghte the faucon glade

But Canacee hom bereth hire in hir lappe, 635

And softly in plastres gan hire wrappe, Ther as she with hire beek hadde hurt herselfe

Now kan nat Canacee but herbes delve Out of the ground, and make salves newe
 Of herbes preciouss and fyne of hewe, 640
 To heelen with this hawk Fro day to nyght She dooth hire bisynesse and al hire
 myght,

And by hire beddes heed she made a mowe,

And covered it with veluettes blewe,
In signe of trouthe that is in wommen
sene

And al withoute, the mewes is peynted
grene,

In which were peynted alle thise false
fowles,

As ben thise tidynes, tercelettes, and owles,

Ryght for despit were peynted hem bisyde,
Pyes, on hem for to crie and chyde 640

Thus lete I Canacee hir hauk kepyng, I wol namoore as now speke of hir ryng,

Til it come eft to purpos for to seyn
How that this faucon gat hire love ageyn

Repentant, as the storie telleth us, 655
By mediacion of Cambalus,

The kynges sone, of which that I yow tolde
But hennesforth I wol my proces holde

To speken of adventures and of batalles, That nevere yet was herd so grete mer-vailles 660

First wol I telle yow of Cambyuskan,
That in his tyme many a citee wan,

And after wol I speke of Algarsif,
How that he wan Theodora to his wif,

For whom ful ofte in greet peril he was, 665 Ne hadde he ben holpen by the steede of bras,

And after wol I speke of Cambalo, That faught in lystes with the bretheren

two
For Canacee er that he myghte hire wynne
And ther I lefte I wol ayeyn bigynne 670

wordes of the Hoost to the Frankleyn

“In feith, Squer, thow hast thee wel yquit

And gentilly I preise wel thy wit,” Quod the Frankeleyn, “considerynge thy yowthe, 675

So feelyngly thou spekest, sire, I allow the!
As to my doom, ther is noon that is heere

Of eloquence that shal be thy peere, If that thou lyve, God yeve thee good

chaunce,
And in vertu sende thee continuaunce! 680

For of thy speche I have greet deyntee
I have a sone, and by the Trinitee,

I hadde levere than twenty pound worth
lond,

Though it right now were fallen in myn
hond,

He were a man of swich discrecioun 685
As that ye been! Ry on possessioun,

Eut if a man be vertuous withal!
I have my sone snybted, and yet shal,

For he to vertu listeth nat entende, 689
But for to pleye at dees, and to despende

And lese al that he hath, is his usage
And he hath levere talken with a page

Than to comune with any gentil wight Where he myghte lerne gentillesse aright ”

“Straw for youre gentillesse!” quod oure
Hoost 695

“What, Frankeleyn! pardee, sire, wel thou
woost

That ech of yow moot tellen atte leste
A tale or two, or breken his biheste ”

“That knowe I wel, sire,” quod the Frankleyn

“I prey yow, haveth me nat in desdeyn, 700 Though to this man I speke a word or

two ”
“Telle on thy tale withouten wordes

mo ” “Gladly, sire Hoost,” quod he, “I wole
obeye

Unto your wyl, now herkneth what I seye
I wol yow nat contrarien in no wyse 705

As fer as that my wittes wol suffyse
I prey to God that it may plesen yow,

Thanne woot I wel that it is good ynow ”

THE FRANKLIN'S PROLOGUE

The Prologe of the Frankeleyns Tale

These olde gentil Britouns in hir dayes
Of diverse aventures maden layes, 710 Rymeyed in hir firste Briton tonge, Whiche layes with hir instrumentz they
songe,

Or elles redden hem for hir plesaunce,
And oon of hem have I in remembraunce, Which I shal seyn with good wyl as I
kan 715

But, sires, by cause I am a burel man,
At my bigynnyng first I yow biseche,
Have me excused of my rude speche

I lerned nevere rethorik, certeyn, Thyng that I speke, it moot be bare and
pleyn 720

I sleep nevere on the Mount of Pernaso, Ne lerned Marcus Tullus Sethero Colours ne knowe I none, withouten drede, But swiche colours as growen in the mede,
Or elles swiche as men dye or peynte 725 Colours of rethoryk been to me queynte, My spirit feeleth noight of swich mateere
But if yow list, my tale shul ye heere

THE FRANKLIN'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Frankeleyns Tale

In Armorik, that called is Britayne, Ther was a knyght that loved and dide his payne 730

To serve a lady in his beste wise,
And many a labour, many a greet emprise
He for his lady wroghte, er she were wonne
For she was oon the faireste under sonne,
And eek therto comen of so heigh kynrede That wel unnethes dorste this knyght, for
drede, 736

Telle hire his wo, his peyne, and his dis-
tresse

But atte laste she, for his worthynesse,
And namely for his meke obeysaunce, Hath swich a pitee caught of his penaunce That pryvely she fil of his accord 741 To take hym for hir housbonde and hir lord,

Of swich lordshupe as men han over hir
wyves

And for to lede the moore in blisse hir
lyves, 744

Of his free wyl he swoor hire as a knyght
That nevere in al his lyf he, day ne nyght, Ne sholde upon hym take no maistrie Agayn hir wyl, ne kithe hire jalouse,
But hire obeye, and folwe hir wyl in al,

As any love to his lady shal, 750
Save that the name of soveraynetee,
That wolde he have for shame of his degree

She thanked hym, and with ful greet
humblesse

She seyde, "Sire, sith of youre gentillesse Ye profre me to have so large a reyne, 755 Ne wolde nevere God bitwixe us tweyne,
As in my gilt, were outhere werre or stryf Sire, I wol be youre humble trewe wyf, Have heer my trouthe, til that myn herte breste "

Thus been they bothe in quete and in
reste 760

For o thyng, sires, sauffy dar I seye,
That freendes everych oother moot obeye,
If they wol longe holden compaignye Love wol nat been constreyned by maistrie

Whan maistrie comth, the God of Love
anon 765

Beteth his wynges, and farewel, he is gon!
Love is a thyng as any spirit free Wommen, of kynde, desiren libertee,
And nat to been constreyned as a thral,
And so doon men, if I sooth seyen shal 770 Looke who that is moost pacient in love,

He is at his advantage al above Pacience is an heigh vertu, certeyn,
 For it venquyseth, as thus clerkes seyn, Thynges that rigour sholde nevere atteyne For every word men may nat chide or
 pleyne 776

Lerneth to suffre, or elles, so moot I goon, Ye shul it lerne, wher so ye wole or noon,
 For in this world, certein, ther no wight is That he ne dooth or seith somtyme amys Ire, siknesse, or constellacioun, 781

Wyn, wo, or chaungynge of complexoun Causeth ful ofte to doon amys or speken
 On every wrong a man may nat be wreken
 After the tyme moste be temperaunce 785
 To every wight that kan on governaunce And therefore hath this wise, worthy
 knyght,

To lyve in ese, suffrance hire bihight,
 And she to hym ful wisly gan to swere That nevere sholde ther be defaute in
 here 790

Heere may men seen an humble, wys accord,
 Thus hath she take hir servant and hir
 lord,

Servant in love and lord in mariage Thanne was he bothe in lordshipe and servage

Servage? nay, but in lordshipe above, 795
 Sith he hath bothe his lady and his love, His lady, certes, and his wyf also,
 The which that lawe of love acordeth to And whan he was in this prosperitee, Hoom with his wyf he gooth to his
 contree, 800

Nat fer fro Pedmark, ther his dwellyng
 was,

Where as he lyveth in blisse and in solas Who koude telle, but he hadde wedded
 be,

The joye, the ese, and the prosperitee That is bitwixe an housbonde and his
 wyf? 805

A yeer and moore lasted this blisful lyf, Til that the knyght of which I speke of
 thus,

That of Kayrrud was cleped Arveragus, Shoop hym to goon and dwelle a yeer or
 tweyne

In Engelond, that cleped was eek Bruteyne,
 To seke in armes worshippe and honour, 811

For al his lust he sette in swich labour, And dwelled there two yeer, the book seith thus

Now wol I stynten of this Arveragus,
 And speken I wole of Dorigen his wyf, 815 That loveth hire housbonde as hire hertes
 lyf

For his absence wepeth she and siketh,
 As doon thus noble wyves whan hem liketh She moorneth, waketh, wayleth, fasteth, pleyneeth, 819

Desir of his presence hire so destreyneth
 That al this wyde world she sette at noight Hire freendes, whiche that knewe hir hevyn
 thought,

Conforten hire in al that ever they may They prechen hire, they telle hire nyght and day

That causeles she sleeth herself, allas! 825
 And every confort possible in this cas
 They doen to hire with al hire bisynesse, Al for to make hire leve hire hevynesse

By proces, as ye knowen everichoon, Men may so longe graven in a stoon 830 Til som figure cherinne emprented be So longe han they confortid hire, til she Receyved hath, by hope and by resoun,
 The emprenting of hire consolacioun, Thurgh which hir grete sorwe gan aswage,
 She may nat alwey duren in swich rage 836

And eek Arveragus, in al this care, Hath sent hire lettres hoom of his welfare,
 And that he wol come hastily agayn,
 Or elles hadde this sorwe hir herte slayn

Hire freendes sawe hir sorwe gan to slake, 841

And preyde hire on knees, for Goddes sake,
 To come and romen hire in compaignye, Away to dryve hire derke fantasye
 And finally she graunteþ that requeste, 845
 For wel she saugh that it was for the beste

Now stood hire castel faste by the see,
 And often with hire freendes walketh shee, Hire to disporte, upon the bank an heigh, Where as she many a ship and barge seigh 850

Sellynge hir cours, where as hem liste go But thanne was that a parcel of hire wo, For to herself ful ofte, "Allas!" seith she,
 "Is ther no ship, of so manye as I see, Wol bryngen hom my lord? Thanne were myn herte 855

Al warissched of his bittre peynes smerte " Another tyme ther wolde she sitte and
 thynke,
 And caste hir eyen downward fro the brynke
 But whan she saugh the grisly rokkes
 blake,
 For verray feere so wolde hir herte quake That on hire feet she myghte hire noght sustene 861
 Thanne wolde she sitte adoun upon the
 grene,
 And pitously into the see biholde, And seyn right thus, with sorweful sikes
 colde
 "Eterne God, that thurgh thy purveaunce 865
 Ledest the world by certain governaunce, In ydel, as men seyn, ye no thyng make But, Lord, these grisly feendly rokkes
 blake,
 That semen rather a foul confusion
 Of werk than any fair creacion 870
 Of swich a parfit wys God and a stable, Why han ye wrought this werk unresonable?
 For by this werk, south, north, ne west, ne east,
 Ther nys yfostred man, ne bryd, ne beest,
 It dooth no good, to my wit, but anyoeth Se ye nat, Lord, how mankynde it de-stroyeth? 876
 An hundred thousand bodyes of mankynde Gan rokkes slayn, al be they nat in mynde, Which mankynde is so fair part of thy werk
 That thou it madest lyk to thyn owene merk 880
 Thanne semed it ye hadde a greet chiertee Toward mankynde, but how thanne may it bee
 That ye swiche meenes make it to destroyen, Whiche meenes do no good, but evere anyoen?
 I woot wel clerkes wol seyn as hem leste,
 By argumentz, that al is for the beste, 886
 Though I ne kan the causes nat yknowe
 But thilke God that made wynd to blowe
 As kepe my lord! this my conclusion
 To clerkes lete I al disputison 890
 But wolde God that alle these rokkes blake

Were sonken into helle for his sake!
 These rokkes sleen myn herte for the
 feere "
 Thus wolde she seyn, with many a pitous
 teere
 Hire freendes sawe that it was no disport 895
 To romen by the see, but discomfort,
 And shopen for to pleyen somwher elles
 They leden hire by ryveres and by welles,
 And eek in othere places delitables, They dauncen, and they pleyen at ches and tables 900
 So on a day, right in the morwe-tyde, Unto a gardyn that was ther bisyde,
 In which that they hadde maad hir ordi-
 naunce
 Of vitalle and of oother purveaunce 904
 They goon and pleye hem al the longe day
 And this was on the sixte morwe of May,
 Which May hadde peynted with his softe
 shoures
 This gardyn ful of leves and of floures,
 And craft of mannes hand so curiously Arrayed hadde this gardyn, trewely, 910
 That nevere was ther gardyn of swich prys,
 But if it were the verray paradys
 The odour of floures and the fresshe sighte Wolde han makid any herte lighte That evere was born, but if to greet sik-
 nesse, 915
 Or to greet sorwe, helde it in distresse,
 So ful it was of beautee with plesaunce
 At after-dyner gonne they to daunce,
 And synge also, save Dorigen allone, Which made alwey hir compleint and hir
 moone, 920
 For she ne saugh hym on the daunce go That was hir housbonde and hir love also But natheless she moste a tyme abyde,
 And with good hope lete hir sorwe slyde Upon this daunce, amonges othere men, Daunced a squer biforn Dorigen, 926
 That fressher was and jolyer of array,
 As to my doom, than is the month of May He syngeth, daunceth, passynge any man
 That is, or was, sith that the world bigan Therwith he was, if men sholde hym discryve, 931
 Oon of the beste farynge man on lyve, Yong, strong, right vertuuous, and riche,
 and wys,

And wel biloved, and holden in greet prys
 And shortly, if the sothe I tellen shal, 935 Unwityng of this Dorigen at al,
 This lusty squer, servant to Venus,
 Which that ycleped was Aurelius, Hadde loved hire best of any creature
 Two year and moore, as was his aventure, But nevere dorste he tellen hire his grevaunce 941
 Withouten coppe he drank al his penaunce He was despeyred, no thyng dorste he
 seye,

Save in his songes somewhat wolde he wreye
 His wo, as in a general compleynyng, 945 He seyde he lovede, and was biloved no
 thyng

Of swich matere made he manye layes, Songes, compleintes, roundels, virelayes,
 How that he dorste nat his sorwe telle, But langwissheth as a furye dooth in
 helle, 950

And dye he moste, he seyde, as dide Ekko
 For Narcisus, that dorste nat telle hir wo
 In oother manere than ye heere me seye, Ne dorste he nat to hire his wo biwreye, Save that, paraventure, somtyme at
 daunces, 955

Ther yonge folk kepen hir observaunces,
 It may wel be he looked on hir face
 In swich a wise as man that asketh grace,
 But nothyng wiste she of his entente Natheles it happed, er they thennes
 wente, 960

By cause that he was hire neighbeour,
 And was a man of worshipe and honour,
 And hadde yknowen hym of tyme yoore, They fille in speche, and forth, moore and
 moore,

Unto his purpos drough Aurelius, 965 And whan he saugh his tyme, he seyde
 thus

“Madame,” quod he, “by God that this world made,

So that I wiste it myghte youre herte
 glade,

I wolde that day that youre Arveragus Wente over the see, that I, Aurelius, 970 Hadde went ther nevere I sholde have come
 agayn

For wel I woot my servyce is in vayn, My gerdon is but brestyng of myn herte Madame, reweth upon my peynes smerte,

For with a word ye may me sleen or
 save 975
 Heere at youre feet God wolde that I were grave!

I ne have as now no leyser moore to seye Have mercy, sweete, or ye wol do ma-
 deye!”

She gan to looke upon Aurelius “Is this youre wyl,” quod she, “and sey ye thus? 980
 Nevere erst,” quod she, “ne wiste I what ye
 mente

But now, Aurelie, I knowe youre entente,
 By thilke God that yaf me soule and lyf, Ne shal I nevere been untrewre wyf
 In word ne werk, as fer as I have wit, 985
 I wol been his to whom that I am knyht Taak this for fynal answer as of me” But after that in pley thus seyde she “Aurelie,” quod she, “by heighe God above,

 Yet wolde I graunte yow to been youre
 love, 990

Syn I yow se so pitously complayne, Looke what day that endelong Britayne Ye remoeve alle the rokkes, stoon by stoon,
 That they ne lette ship ne boot to goon I seye, whan ye han maad the coost so
 clene 995

Of rokkes that ther nys no stoon ysene, Thanne wol I love yow best of any man, Have heer my trouthe, in al that evere I
 kan”

“Is ther noon oother grace in yow?”
 quod he

“No,” by that Lord,” quod she, “that maketh me! 1000

For wel I woot that it shal nevere bityde Lat swiche folies out of youre herte slyde
 What deyntee sholde a man han in his lyf
 For to go love another mannes wyf, That hath hir body whan so that hym
 liketh?” 1005

Aurelius ful ofte soore siketh, Wo was Aurelie whan that he this herde, And with a sorweful herte he thus answerde

“Madame,” quod he, “this were an impossible!

Thanne moot I dye of sodeyn deth horrible” 1010

And with that word he turned hym anon

The coome hir othere freendes many oon,
 And in the aleyes romeden up and doun,
 And nothyng wiste of this conclusioun,
 But sodeynly bigonne revel newe 1015
 Til that the brighte sonne loste his hewe, For th'orsonte hath reft the sonne his lyght, —

This is as muche to seye as it was nyght! —
 And hoom they goon in joye and in solas, Save oonly wrecche Aurehus, allas! 1020
 He to his hous is goon with sorweful herte
 He seeth he may nat fro his deeth asterte, Hym semed that he felte his herte colde
 Up to the hevne his handes he gan holde, And on his knowes bare he sette hym
 doun, 1025

And in his ravynge seyde his orisoun
 For verray wo out of his wit he breyde
 He nyste what he spak, but thus he seyde, With pitous herte his pleynt hath he bigonne 1029

Unto the goddes, and first unto the sonne
 He seyde, " Appollo, god and governour
 Of every plaunte, herbe, tree, and flour,
 That yevest, after thy dechnaacion,
 To ech of hem his tyme and his seson, As thyn herberwe chaungeth lowe or heighe, 1035

Lord Phebus, cast thy merciabie eighe On wrecche Aurehe, which that am but lorn

Lo, lord! my lady hath my deeth ysworn Withoute gilt, but thy benignytee Upon my dedly herte have som pitee 1040
 For wel I woot, lord Phebus, if yow lest, Ye may me helpen, save my lady, best Now voucheth sauf that I may yow devyse How that I may been holpen and in what
 wyse

Youre blisful suster, Lucina the sheene, That of the see is chief goddesse and
 queene 1046

(Though Neptunus have detee in the see Yet emperisse aboven hym is she),
 Ye knowen wel, lord, that right as hir desir Is to be quyked and lightned of youre fir, 1050

For which she folweth yow ful bisly, Right so the see desireth naturelly
 To folwen hire, as she that is goddesse Bothe in the see and ryveres moore and
 lesse

Wherefore, lord Phebus, this is my re-
 queste — 1055

Do this miracle, or do myn herte breste —
 That now next at this opposicion Which in the signe shal be of the Leon,
 As preieth hire so greet a flood to brynge That fyve fadme at the leeste it over-
 sprynge 1060

The hyste rokke in Armonk Briteyne,
 And lat this flood endure yeres tweyne Thanne certes to my lady may I seye, 'Holdeth youre heste, the rokkes been awaye'

Lord Phebus, dooth this miracle for
 me 1065

Preye hire she go no faster cours than ye,
 I seye, preyeth your suster that she go No faster cours than ye thuse yeres two Thanne shal she been evene atte fulle
 alway,

And sprynge flood laste bothe nyght and
 day 1070

And but she vouche sauf in swich manere
 To graunte me my sovereyn lady deere, Prey hire to synken every rok adoun Into hir owene dirke regoun Under the ground, ther Pluto dwelleth
 inne, 1075

Or nevere mo shal I my lady wynne Thy temple in Delphos wol I barefoot seke Lord Phebus, se the teeris on my cheke,
 And of my peyne have som compassioun"
 And with that word in swowne he fil
 adoun, 1080

And longe tyme he lay forth in a traunce His brother, which that knew of his
 penaunce,

Up caughte hym, and to bedde he hath hym broght

Dispeyred in this torment and this thought Lete I this woful creature lye, 1085

Chese he, for me, whether he wol lyve or
 dye

Arveragus, with heele and greet honour,
 As he that was of chivalrie the flour,
 Is comen hoom, and othere worthy men
 O blisful artow now, thou Dorigen, 1090 That hast thy lusty housbonde in thyne
 armes,

The freshe knyght, the worthy man of
 armes,

That loveth thee as his owene hertes lyf.

No thyng list hym to been ymaginatyf, If any wight hadde spoke, whil he was
oute, 1095

To hire of love, he hadde of it no doute
He noight entendeth to no swich mateere, But daunceth, justeth, maketh hire good
cheere,

And thus in joye and blisse I lete hem
dwelle,

And of the sike Aurelius wol I telle 1100
In langour and in torment furyus

Two year and moore lay wreche Aurelyus, Er any foot he myghte on erthe gon, Ne confort in this tyme hadde he noon, Save of his brother, which that was a clerk 1105

He knew of al this wo and al this werk,
For to noon oother creature, certeyn,
Of this matere he dorste no word seyn
Under his brest he baar it moore secree Than evere dide Pamphilus for Galathee 1110

His brest was hool, withoute for to sene,
But in his herte ay was the arwe kene
And wel ye knowe that of a sursanure In surgerye is perilous the cure, But men myghte touche the arwe, or come
therby 1115

His brother weep and wayled pryvely, Til atte laste hym fil in remembraunce,
That whiles he was at Orlens in Fraunce,
As yonge clerkes, that been lykerous

To reden artes that been curious, 1120
Seken in every halke and every herne Particuler sciences for to lerne —

He hym remembered that, upon a day,
At Orlens in studie a book he say Of magyk natureel, which his felawe, 1125
That was that tyme a bacheler of lawe, Al were he ther to lerne another craft, Hadde prively upon his desk ylaft, Which book spak muchel of the opera-
ciouns

Touchynge the eighte and twenty mansiouns 1130

That longen to the moone, and swich folye

As in oure dayes is nat worth a flye, —
For hooly churches feith in oure bileve Ne suffreth noon illusoun us to greve And whan this book was in his remem-
braunce, 1135

Anon for joye his herte gan to daunce,
And to hymself he seyde pryvely “My brother shal be warisshed hastily, For I am siker that ther be sciences By whiche men make diverse apparences, 1140

Swiche as thise subtile tregetoures pleye
For ofte at feestes have I wel herd seye That tregetours, withinne an halle large,
Have maad come in a water and a barge,
And in the halle rowen up and doun 1145
Somtyme hath semed come a grym leoun,
And somtyme floures sprynge as in a mede, Somtyme a vyne, and grapes white and
rede,

Somtyme a castel, al of lym and stoon,
And whan hem lyked, voyded it anon
Thus semed it to every mannes sighte 1151 Now thanne conclude I thus, that if I
myghte

At Orlens som oold felawe yfynde That hadde thise moones mansions in
mynde,

Or oother magyk natureel above, 1155 He sholde wel make my brother han his
love

For with an apparence a clerk may make,
To mannes sighte, that alle the rokkes
blake

Of Britaigne weren yvoyded everichon, And shuppes by the brynke comen and
gon, 1160

And in swich forme enduren a wowke or
two

Thanne were my brother warisshed of his
wo,

Thanne moste she nedes holden hire biheste,

Or elles he shal shame hire atte leeste ” What sholde I make a lenger tale of
thus? 1165

Unto his brotheres bed he comen is,
And swich confort he yaf hym for to gon
To Orlens that he up starte anon, And on his wey forthward thanne is he
fare

In hope for to been lissed of his care 1170 Whan they were come almost to that citee,

But if it were a two furlong or thre, A yong clerk romynge by hymself they
mette,

Which that in Latyn thriftly hem grette,
And after that he seyde a wonder thyng
"I knowe," quod he, "the cause of youre
comyng" 1178

And er they ferther any foote wente,
He tolde hem al that was in hire entente

This Briton clerk hym asked of felawes The whiche that he had knowe in olde dawes, 1180

And he answerde hym that they dede
were,

For which he weep ful ofte many a teere Doun of his hors Aurehus lighte anon,
And with this magicien forth is he gon Hoom to his hous, and maden hem wel at
ese 1185

Hem lacked no vitaille that myghte hem
plesa

So wel arrayed hous as ther was oon Aurehus in his lyf saugh nevere noon

He shewed hym, er he wente to sopeer, Forestes, parkes ful of wilde deer, 1190
Ther saugh he hertes with hir hornes hye,
The gretteste that evere were seyn with ye He saugh of hem an hondred slayn with houndes,

And somme with arwes blede of bittre woundes

He saugh, whan voyded were thise wilde deer, 1195

Thise fauconers upon a fair ryver,
That with hir haukes han the heron slayn Tho saugh he knyghtes justyng in a
playn,

And after this he dide hym swich plesaunce
That he hym shewed his lady on a daunce, On which hymself he daunced, as hym thoughte 1201

And whan this maister that this magyk
wroughte

Saugh it was tyme, he clapte his handes
two,

And farewell! al oure revel was ago And yet remoeved they nevere out of the
hous, 1205

Whil they saugh al this sighte merveillous,
But in his studie, ther as his bookes be,
They seten stille, and no wight but they
thre

To hym this maister called his squier,
And seyde hym thus "Is redy oure soper?
Almost an houre it is, I undertake, 1211

Sith I yow bad oure soper for to make, Whan that thise worthy men wenten with
me

Into my studie, ther as my bookes be"
"Sire," quod this squier, "whan it liketh yow, 1215

It is al redy, though ye wol right now"
"Go we thanne soupe," quod he, "as for the beste

Thise amorous folk somtyme moote han hir reste"

At after-soper fille they in trettee What somme sholde thise maistres gerdon
be, 1220

To remoeven alle the rokkes of Britayne, And eek from Gerounde to the mouth of Sayne

He made it straunge, and swoor, so God hym save, Lasse than a thousand pound he wolde nat have,

Ne gladly for that somme he wolde nat
goon 1225

Aurehus, with blisful herte anon, Answerde thus "Fy on a thousand pound!
This wyde world, which that men seye is round,

I wolde it yeve, if I were lord of it This bargayn is ful dryve, for we been knyt 1230

Ye shal be payed trewely, by my trouthe!
But looketh now, for no negligence or slouthe

Ye tarme us heere no lenger than to-morwe"
"Nay," quod this clerk, "have heer my feith to borwe"

To bedde us goon Aurehus whan hym
leste, 1235

And wel ny al that nyght he hadde his
reste

What for his labour and his hope of blisse,
His woful herte of penaunce hadde a lisse

Upon the morwe, whan that it was day, To Britaigne tooke they the nighte
way, 1240

Aurehus and this magicien busyde,
And been descended ther they wolde
abyde

And this was, as thise bookes me remembre,

The cold, frosty seson of Decembre Phebus wax old, and hewed lyk laton,

That in his hoothe declynacion 1246 Shoon as the burned gold with stremes
bryghte,

But now in Capricorn adoun he lighte,
Where as he shoon ful pale, I dar wel seyn The bittre frostes, with the sleet and
reyn, 1250

Destroyed hath the grene in every yerd Janus sit by the fyr, with double berd,
And drynketh of his bugle horn the wyn, Biforn hym stant brawen of the tusked swyn,

And "Nowel" crieth every lusty man Aurelius, in al that evere he kan, 1256
Dooth to his maister chiere and reverence,
And preyeth hym to doon his diligence
To bryngen hym out of his peynes smerte, Or with a swerd that he wolde slitte his
herte 1260

This subtil clerk swich routhe had of this man
That nyght and day he spedde hym that he kan

To wayten a tyme of his conclusoun,
This is to seye, to maken illusoun,
By swich an apparence of jogelrye — 1265
I ne kan no termes of astrologye — That she and every wight sholde wene and seye

That of Britaigne the rokkes were aweye,
Or ellis they were sonken under grounde
So attis laste he hath his tyme yfounde 1270
To maken his japes and his wrecchednesse Of swich a superstitious cursednesse His tables Tolletanes forth he brought,
Ful wel corrected, ne ther lakked nought, Nether his collect ne his expans yeerns, 1275
Ne his rootes, ne his othere geerns,
As been his centris and his argumentz
And his proporcionales convenementz
For his equacions in every thyng 1279
And by his eighte speere in his wirkyng
He knew ful wel how fer Alnath was shove Fro the heed of thilke fixe Aries above, That in the ninthe speere considered is,
Ful subtilly he kalkuled al this Whan he hadde founde his firste man-

soun, 1285
He knew the remenaunt by proporcioun,
And knew the arisyng of his moone weel,
And in whos face, and terme, and every-deal,

And knew ful weel the moones mansioun Acordaunt to his operacioun, 1290
And knew also his othere observaunces For swiche illusiouns and swiche mes-chaunces

As hethen folk useden in thilke dayes
For which no lenger maked he delayes, But thurgh his magik, for a wyke or
tweye, 1295

It semed that alle the rokkes were aweye Aurelius, which that yet despered is Wher he shal han his love or fare amys, Awateth nyght and day on this myracle,
And whan he knew that ther was noon obstacle, 1300

That voyded were thise rokkes everychon, Doun to his maistres feet he fil anon,
And seyde, "I, woful wrecche, Aurelius, Thanke yow, lord, and lady myn Venus,
That me han holpen fro my cares colde"
And to the temple his wey forth hath he
holde, 1306

Where as he knew he sholde his lady see And whan he saugh his tyme, anon-right hee,

With dredful herte and with ful humble
cheere,

Salewed hath his sovereyn lady deere 1310
"My righte lady," quod this woful man, "Whom I moost drede and love as I best
kan,

And lothest were of al this world displesse, Nere it that I for yow have swich disese That I moste dyen heere at youre foot
anon, 1315

Noght wolde I telle how me is wo bigon
But certes outhere moste I dye or pleyne, Ye sle me guiteles for verray peyne But of my deeth thogh that ye have no
routhe,

Avyseth yow er that ye breke youre
trouthe 1320

Repenteth yow, for thilke God above, Er ye me sleen by cause that I yow love For, madame, wel ye woot what ye han
hight —

Nat that I chalange any thyng of right Of yow, my sovereyn lady, but youre
grace — 1325

But in a gardyn yond, at swich a place,
Ye woot right wel what ye bihigten me,
And in myn hand youre trouthe plighthen ye

To love me best — God woot, ye seyde so, Al be that I unworthy am therto 1330
Madame, I speke it for the honour of yow Moore than to save myn hertes lyf right
now,

I have do so as ye comanded me,
And if ye vouche sauf, ye may go see Dooth as yow list, have youre biheste in
mynde, 1335
For, quyk or deed, right there ye shal me
fynde

In yow lith al to do me lyve or deye, —
But wel I woot the rokkes been awaye ” He taketh his leve, and she astoned
stood,

In al hir face nas a drope of blood 1340
She wende nevere han come in swich a trappe
“Allas,” quod she, “that evere this sholde happe!

For wende I nevere by possibiltee That swich a monstre or mervelle myghte
be!

It is agayns the proces of nature ” 1345
And hoom she goth a sorweful creature,
For verray feere unnethe may she go
She wepeth, walleth, al a day or two,
And swowneth, that it routhe was to see
But why it was to no wight tolde shee, 1350
For out of towne was goon Arveragus But to hirself she spak, and seyde thus,
With face pale and with ful sorweful
cheere,

In hure compleynt, as ye shal after heere “Allas,” quod she, “on thee, Fortune,
I pleyne, 1355
That unwar wrapped hast me in thy cheyne,

Fro which t'escape woot I no socour, Save oonly deeth or elles dishonour, Oon of these two bihoveth me to chese
But natheless, yet have I levere to lese 1360
My lif than of my body to have a shame,
Or knowe myselfen fals, or lese my name,
And with my deth I may be quyrt, ywis Hath ther nat many a noble wyf er this,
And many a mayde, yslayn hirself,
allas! 1365

Rather than with hir body doon trespas?
Yis, certes, lo, these stories beren wit-
nesse

Whan thritty trauntz, ful of cursednesse,

Hadde slayn Phidon in Atthenes atte feste, 1369

They comanded his doghtres for t'areste,
And bryngen hem biforn hem in despit,
Al naked, to fulfille hir foul delit,
And in hir fadres blood they made hem
daunce

Upon the pavement, God yeve hem mys-
chaunce!

For which these woful maydens, ful of
drede, 1375

Rather than they wolde lese hir mayden-
hede,

They prively been sturt into a welle,
And dreynte hemselven, as the bookes
telle

They of Mecene leete enquere and seke
Of Lacedomye fifty maydens eke, 1380
On whiche they wolden doon hir lecherye
But was ther noon of al that compaignye That she nas slayn, and with a good en-
tente

Chees rather for to dye than assente
To been oppressed of hir maydenhede 1385
Why sholde I thanne to dye been in drede?
Lo, eek, the traunt Aristocledes,
That loved a mayden, heet Stymphalides, Whan that hir fader slayn was on a nyght, Unto Dianes temple goth she right, 1390
And hente the ymage in hir handes two, Fro which ymage wolde she nevere go
No wight ne myghte hir handes of it arace Til she was slayn, right in the selve place

Now sith that maydens hadden swich despit 1395

To been defouled with mannes foul delit, Wel oghte a wyf rather hirselven slee Than be defouled, as it thynketh me What shal I seyn of Hasdrubales wyf, That at Cartage brafte hirself hir lyf?
For whan she saugh that Romayns wan the toun, 1401

She took hir children alle, and skipte adoun
Into the fyr, and chees rather to dye
Than any Romayn dide hire vileynye Hath nat Lucesse yslayn hirself, allas! 1405 At Rome, whan that she oppressed was Of Tarquyn, for hire thoughte it was a shame

To lyven whan that she had lost hir name?
The sevene maydens of Melese also Han slayn hemself, for verrey drede and wo,

Rather than folk of Gawle hem sholde opprese 1411

Mo than a thousand stories, as I gesse, Koude I now telle as touchynge this
mateere

Whan Habradate was slayn, his wyf so
deere

Hirselven slow, and leet hir blood to glyde 1415

In Habradates woundes depe and wyde,
And seyde, 'My body, at the leeste way, Ther shal no wight defoulen, if I may'

What sholde I mo ensamples heerof
sayn,

Sith that so manye han hemselven
slayn 1420

Wel rather than they wolde defouled be?
I wol conclude that it is bet for me To sleen myself than been defouled thus I wol be trewe unto Arveragus,

Or rather sleen myself in som manere, 1425
As dide Democones doghter deere

By cause that she wolde nat defouled be O Cedasus, it is ful greet pitee

To reden how thy doghtren deyde, allas!
That slowe hemself for swich a manere
cas 1430

As greet a pitee was it, or wel moore,
The Theban mayden that for Nichanore Hirselven slow, right for swich manere wo Another Theban mayden dide right so, For oon of Macidonye hadde hire oppressed, 1435

She with hire deeth hir maydenhede redressed

What shal I seye of Nicerates wyf, That for swich cas birafted hursel hir lyf?
How trewe eek was to Alcebiades

His love, that rather for to dyen chees 1440 Than for to suffre his body unburyed be

Lo, which a wyf was Alceste," quod she "What seith Omer of goode Penelopee?

Al Grece knoweth of hire chastitee Pardee, of Laodomya is writen thus, 1445

That whan at Troie was slayn Prothese-laus,

Ne lenger wolde she lyve after his day
The same of noble Porcia telle I may,

Withoute Brutus koude she nat lyve,
To whom she hadde al hool hir herte yive
The parfit wyfhod of Arthemese 1451

Honored is thurgh al the Barbarie

O Teuta, queene! thy wyfly chastitee

To alle wyves may a mirour bee
The same thyng I seye of Bilyea, 1455 Of Rodogone, and eek Valeria "

Thus pleyned Dorigen a day or tweye, Purposynge evere that she wolde deyde
But natheles, upon the thridde nyght, Hoom cam Arveragus, this worthy
knyght, 1460

And asked hire why that she weep so
soore,

And she gan wepen ever lenger the moore
"Allas," quod she, "that evere was I born!
Thus have I seyd," quod she, "thus have I sworn" —

And toold hym al as ye han herd bfore,
It nedeth nat reherce it yow namoore 1466 This housbonde, with glad chiere, in frendly wyse

Answerde and seyde as I shal yow devyse
"Is ther oght elles, Dorigen, but this?"

"Nay, nay," quod she, "God helpe me so as wys! 1470

This is to mucche, and it were Goddes
wille "

"Ye, wyf," quod he, "lat slepen that is
stille

It may be wel, paraventure, yet to day
Ye shul youre trouthe holden, by my fay!
For God so wysly have mercy upon
me, 1475

I hadde wel levere ystiked for to be For verray love which that I to yow have,
But if ye sholde youre trouthe kepe and save

Trouthe is the hyeste thyng that man may
kepe" —

But with that word he brast anon to wepe, 1480

And seyde, "I yow forbede, up peyne of
deeth,

That nevere, whil thee lasteth lyf ne breeth,

To no wight telle thou of this aventure, —
As I may best, I wol my wo endure, —

Ne make no contenance of hevynesse, 1485 That folk of yow may demen harm or
gesse "

And forth he cleped a squer and a
mayde

"Gooth forth anon with Dorigen," he
sayde,

"And bryngeth hire to swich a place anon"

They take hir leve, and on hir wey they
goon, 1490

But they ne wiste why she thider wente
He nolde no wight tellen his entente

Paraventure an heep of yow, ywis, Wol holden hym a lewed man in this
That he wol putte his wyf in iupartie 1495 Herkneþ the tale er ye upon hire crie She may have bettre fortune than yow semeth,

And whan that ye han herd the tale, demeth

This squier, which that highte Aurelius,
On Dorigen that was so amorus, 1500
Of aventure happed hire to meete

Amydde the toun, right in the quykkest
strete,

As she was boun to goon the wey forth
right

Toward the gardyn ther as she had hight
And he was to the gardyn-ward also, 1505

For wel he spyed whan she wolde go Out of hir hous to any maner place

But thus they mette, of aventure or grace,
And he saleweth hire wth glad entente,

And asked of hire whiderward she wente,
And she answerde, half as she were mad, 1511

"Unto the gardyn, as myn housbonde bad, My trouthe for to holde, allas! allas!"

Aurelius gan wondren on this cas,
And in his herte hadde greet compas-
soun 1515

Of hire and of hire lamentacioun,
And of Arveragus, the worthy knyght,

That bad hire holden al that she had
hight,

So looth hym was his wyf sholde breke hir
trouthe,

And in his herte he caughte of this greet
routhe, 1520

Considerynge the beste on every syde,
That fro his lust yet were hym levere
abyde

Than doon so heigh a cherlyssh wrecched-
nesse

Agayns franchise and alle gentillesse, For which in fewe wordes seyde he thus "Madame, seyth to youre lord Arveragus, 1526

That sith I se his grete gentillesse
To yow, and eek I se wel youre distresse, That him were levere han shame (and that were routhe)

Than ye to me sholde breke thus youre
trouthe, 1530

I have wel levere evere to suffre wo Than I departe the love bitwix yow two

I yow relese, madame, into youre bond Quyrt every surement and every bond

That ye han maad to me as heerbiforn, 1535 Sith thilke tyme which that ye were born

My trouthe I plighte, I shal yow never repreve

Of no biheste, and heere I take my leve,
As of the treweste and the beste wyf

That evere yet I knew in al my lyf 1540
But every wyf be war of hire biheeste!

On Dorigen remembreth, atte leeste Thus kan a squier doon a gentil dede

As wel as kan a knyght, withouten drede "

She thonketh hym upon hir knees al
bare, 1545

And hoom unto hir housbonde is she fare,
And tolde hym al, as ye han herd me sayd,

And be ve siker, he was so weel apayd
That it were impossible me to wryte

What sholde I lenger of this cas endyte?
Arveragus and Dorigen his wyf 1551

In sovereyn blisse leden forth hir lyf Nevere eft ne was ther angre hem bitwene

He chersseth hire as though she were a
queene,

And she was to hym trewe for evere-
moore 1555

Of these two folk ye gete of me namoore Aurelius, that his cost hath al forlorn,

Curseth the tyme that evere he was born
"Allas," quod he, "allas, that I bihighte

Of pure gold a thousand pound of
wighte 1560

Unto this philosophre! How shal I do?
I se namoore but that I am fordo

Myn heritage moot I nedes selle, And been a beggere, heere may I nat
dwelle,

And shamen al my kynrede in this
place, 1565

But I of hym may gete bettre grace
But nathelees, I wole of hym assaye,

At certeyn dayes, yeer by yeer, to paye,
And thanke hym of his grete curteisye

My trouthe wol I kepe, I wol nat lye " 1570

With herte soor he gooth unto his cofre,
And broghte gold unto this philosophre,
The value of fyve hundred pound, I gesse,
And hym bisecheth, of his gentillesse,
To graunte hym dayes of the remenaunt, And seyde, "Maister, I dar wel make avaunt, 1576

I failed nevere of my trouthe as yit
For sikerly my dette shal be quyt Towardes yow, howevere that I fare
To goon a-begged in my kirtle bare 1580
But wolde ye vouche sauf, upon seuretee,
Two yeer or thre for to respiten me, Thanne were I wel, for elles moot I selle Myn heritage, ther is namoore to telle "

This philosophre sobrelly answerde, 1585
And seyde thus, whan he thuse wordes
herde

"Have I nat holden covenant unto thee?"

"Yes, certes, wel and trewely," quod he "Hastow nat had thy lady as thee
liketh?"

"No, no," quod he, and sorwefully he siketh 1590

"What was the cause? tel me if thou
kan "

Aurelius his tale anon bigan,
And tolde hym al, as ye han herd bifoore,
It nedeth nat to yow reherce it moore

He seide, "Arveragus, of gentillesse, 1595 Hadde levere dye in sorwe and in dis-
tresse

Than that his wyf were of hir trouthe fals "
The sorwe of Dorigen he tolde hym als,

How looth hire was to been a wikked wyf,
And that she levere had lost that day
hir lyf, 1600

And that hir trouthe she swoor thurgh innocence,
She nevere erst hadde herd speke of apparence

"That made me han of hire so greet pitee,
And right as frely as he sente hire me,
As frely sente I hire to hym ageyn 1605
This al and som, ther is namoore to seyn "

This philosophre answerde, "Leeve
brother,

Everch of yow dide gentilly til oother Thou art a squer, and he is a knyght,
But God forbede, for his blisful myght,
But if a clerk koude doon a ger'ul dede 1611
As wel as any of yow, it is no drede!

Sire, I releesse thee thy thousand pound, As thou right now were copen out of the ground,

Ne nevere er now ne haddest knowen
me 1615

For, sire, I wol nat taken a peny of thee
For al my craft, ne noght for my travaille Thou hast ypayed wel for my vitalle
It is ynogh, and farewel, have good day!" And took his hors, and forth he goth his
way 1620

Lordynges, this question, thanne, wolde I aske now,

Which was the mooste fre, as thynketh
yow?

Now telleth me, er that ye ferther wende
I kan namoore, my tale is at an ende

Heere is ended the Frankeleyns Tale

FRAGMENT VI (GROUP C)

THE PHYSICIAN'S TALE

Heere folweth the Phisiciens Tale

Ther was, as telleth Titus Livius,
A knyght that called was Virginius, Fulfil'd of honour and of worthynesse, And strong of freendes, and of greet
richesse

This knyght a doghter hadde by his
wyf, 5

No children hadde he mo in al his lyf
Fair was this mayde in excellent beautee Aboven every wight that man may see,
For Nature hath with sovereyn diligence Yformed hire in so greet excellence, 10
As though she wolde seyn, "Lo' I, Nature, Thus kan I forme and pevynte a creature, Whan that me list, who kan me countre-fete?"

Pigmalion noght, though he ay forge and bete,

Or grave, or peynte, for I dar wel seyn, 15
Apelles, Zanzis, sholde werche in veyn Outher to grave, or peynte, or forge, or
bete,

If they presumed me to countrefete
For He that is the formere principal Hath maked me his vicaire general, 20
To forme and peynten erthely creaturis Right as me list, and ech thyng in my cure is

Under the moone, that may wane and waxe,

And for my werk right no thyng wol I axe,
My lord and I been ful of oon accord 25
I made hire to the worshippe of my lord,
So do I alle myne othere creatures, What colour that they han, or what figures"

Thus semeth me that Nature wolde seye

This mayde of age twelve yeer was and
tweye, 30

In which that Nature hadde swich delit
For right as she kan peynte a lile wht,
And reed a rose, right with swich peynture
She peynted hath this noble creature.

Er she were born, upon hir lymes fre, 35
Where as by right swiche colours sholde be,
And Phebus dyed hath hire tresses grete Lyk to the stremes of his burned heete
And if that excellent was hire beautee, A thousand foold moore vertuous was
she 40

In hire ne lacked no condicioun
That is to preyse, as by discrecioun As wel in goost as body chast was she,
For which she floured in virginitee With alle humylitee and abstinence, 45
With alle attemperaunce and pacience, With mesure eek of beryng and array Discreet she was in answeyng alway, Though she were wis as Pallas, dar I seyn, Hir facound eek ful wommanly and
pleyn, 50

No countrefeted termes hadde she
To seme wys, but after hir degree She spak, and alle hire wordes, moore and
lesse,

Sownynge in vertu and in gentillesse Shamefast she was in maydens shamefastnesse, 55

Constant in herte, and evere in bisynesse
To dryve hire out of ydel slogardye Bacus hadde of hir mouth right no
maistrie,

For wyn and youthe dooth Venus encesse,
As men in fyr wol casten oille or greesse 60
And of hir owene vertu, unconstreyned,
She hath ful ofte tyme syk hire feyned,
For that she wolde fleen the compaignye Where likly was to treten of folye,
As is at feestes, revels, and at daunces, 65
That been occasions of daliaunces

Swich thynges maken children for to be To soone rype and boold, as men may se,
Which is ful perilous, and hath been yooore
For al to soone may she lerne loore 70
Of booldnesse, whan she woxen is a wyf
And ye maistresses, in youre olde lyf,

That lordes doghtres han in governaunce, Ne taketh of my wordes no displeasaunce 74
 Thenketh that ye been set in governynges Of lordes doghtres, oonly for two thynges Outher for ye han kept youre honestee, Or elles ye han falle in freletee,
 And knowen wel ynough the olde daunce,
 And han forsaken fully swich meschaunce For everemo, therfore, for Cristes sake, 81
 To teche hem vertu looke that ye ne slake

A thief of venysoun, that hath forlafft
 His likerousnesse and al his olde craft, Kan kepe a forest best of any man 85
 Now kepeth wel, for if ye wole, ye kan Looke wel that ye unto no vice assente, Lest ye be dampned for youre wikke
 entente,

For whoso dooth, a traitour is, certeyn
 And taketh kep of that that I shal seyn 90
 Of alle tresons sovereyn pestilence Is whan a wight bitrayseth innocence

Ye fadres and ye moodres eek also,
 Though ye han children, be it oon or mo, Youre is the charge of al hir surveiaunce, 95 Whil that they been under youre governance

Beth war, that by ensample of youre lyvynges,

Or by youre neghence in chastisynges,
 That they ne perisse, for I dar wel seye,
 If that they doon, ye shul it deere abeye
 Under a shepherde softe and neghent 101
 The wolf hath many a sheep and lamb
 torent

Suffiseth oon ensample now as heere,
 For I moot turne agayn to my matere

This mayde, of which I wol this tale expresse, 105

So kepte hirself hir neded no maistresse,
 For in hir lyvyng maydens myghten rede,
 As in a book, every good word or dede
 That longeth to a mayden vertuous,
 She was so prudent and so bounteous 110 For which the fame out sprong on every
 syde,

Bothe of hir beautee and hir bountee wyde,
 That thurgh that land they preised hire echone

That loved vertu, save Envye allone,
 That sory is of oother mennes wele, 115
 And glad is of his sorwe and his unheele (The doctour maketh this descripcioun)

This mayde upon a day wente in the
 toun

Toward a temple, with hire mooder deere,
 As is of yonge maydens the manere 120 Now was ther thanne a justice in that
 toun,

That governour was of that regioun
 And so bifel this juge his eyen caste Upon this mayde, avysynge hym ful faste,
 As she cam forby ther as this juge stood 125
 Anon his herte chaunged and his mood, So was he caught with beautee of this
 mayde,

And to hymself ful pryvely he sayde,
 "This mayde shal be myn, for any man!"

Anon the feend into his herte ran, 130 And taughte hym sodeynly that he by slyghte

The mayden to his purpos wyne myghte
 For certes, by no force ne by no meede, Hym thoughte, he was nat able for to
 speede, 134

For she was strong of freendes, and eek she Confermed was in swich soverayn bountee, That wel he wiste he myghte hire nevere
 wyne

As for to make hire with hir body synne
 For which, by greet deliberacioun,
 He sente after a cherl, was in the toun, 140 Which that he knew for subtil and for boold

This juge unto this cherl his tale hath toold In secree wise, and made hym to ensure He sholde telle it to no creature,
 And if he dide, he sholde lese his heed 145 Whan that assented was this cursed reed, Glad was this juge, and maked him greet
 cheere,

And yaf hym yiftes precieuse and deere

Whan shapen was al hire conspiracie Fro point to point, how that his lecherie 150 Parfourned sholde been ful subtilly, As ye shul heere it after openly, Hoom gooth the cherl, that hughte Claudius

This false juge, that highte Aprus, (So was his name, for this is no fable, 155
 But knownen for historal thyng notable,
 The sentence of it sooth is, out of doute),
 This false juge gooth now faste aboute To hasten his delit al that he may
 And so bifel soone after, on a day, 160

This false juge, as telleth us the storie,
As he was wont, sat in his consistorie,
And yaf his doomes upon sondry cas
This false cherl cam forth a ful greet pas, And seyde, "Lord, if that it be youre
wille, 165

As dooth me right upon this pitous bille,
In which I pleyne upon Virginius, And if that he wol seyn it is nat thus,
I wol it preeve, and fynde good witsnesse,
That sooth is that my bille wol expresse "

The juge answerde, "Of this, in his absence, 171

I may nat yeve diffynytyf sentence
Lat do hym calle, and I wol gladly heere, Thou shalt have al right, and no wrong
heere "

Virginius cam to wite the juges wille, 175
And right anon was rad this cursed bille,
The sentence of it was as ye shul heere

"To yow, my lord, sire Apus so deere, Sheweth youre povre servant Claudius
How that a knyght, called Virginius, 180
Agayns the lawe, agayn al equitee, Holdeth, expres agayn the wyl of me, My servant, which that is my thral by
right,

Which fro myn hous was stole upon a
nyght,

Whil that she was ful yong, this wol I
preeve 185

By witsnesse, lord, so that it nat yow
greeve

She nys his doghter nat, what so he seye Wherfore to yow, my lord the juge, I preye, Yeld me my thral, if that it be youre
wille "

Lo, this was al the sentence of his bille 190

Virginius gan upon the cherl biholde,
But hastily, er he his tale tolde, And wolde have preeved it as sholde a
knyght,

And eek by witnessyng of many a wight,
That al was fals that seyde his adversarie, 195

This cursed juge wolde no thyng tarme, Ne heere a word moore of Virginius, But yaf his juggement, and seyde thus

"I deeme anon this cherl his servant
have,

Thou shalt no lenger in thyn hous hir
save 200

Go bryng hire forth, and put hire in oure warde

The cherl shal have his thral, this I awarde "

And whan this worthy knyght Virginius,

Thurgh sentence of this justice Apus, Moste by force his deere doghter yven 205 Unto the juge, in lecherie to lyven, He gooth hym hoom, and sette him in his
halle,

And leet anon his deere doghter calle,
And with a face deed as asshen colde Upon hir humble face he gan biholde, 210 With fadres pitee stakynge thurgh his
herte,

Al wolde he from his purpos nat converte
"Doghter," quod he, "Virginia, by thy
name,

Ther been two weyes, outhur deeth or
shame,

That thou most suffre, alas, that I was bore! 215

For nevere thou deservedest wherfore
To dyen with a swerd or with a knyf
O deere doghter, endere of my lyf, Which I have fostred up with swich plessaunce

That thou were nevere out of my remem-
braunce! 220

O doghter, which that art my laste wo,
And in my lyf my laste joye also,
O gemme of chastitee, in pacience

Take thou thy deeth, for this is my sentence

For love, and nat for hate, thou most be deed, 225

My pitous hand moot smyten of thyn
heed

Allas, that evere Apus the say!
Thus hath he falsly jugged the to-day" —
And tolde hire al the cas, as ye bifore Han herd, nat nedeth for to telle it
moore 230

"O mercy, deere fader!" quod this
mayde,

And with that word she bothe hir armes layde

Aboute his nekke, as she was wont to do The teeris bruste out of hir eyen two,
And seyde, "Goode fader, shal I dye? 235 Is ther no grace, is ther no remedye?"

"No, certes, deere doghter myn," quod
 he
 "Thanne yif me leyser, fader myn,"
 quod she,
 "My deeth for to compleyne a litel space,
 For, pardee, Jepete yaf his doghter grace
 For to compleyne, er he hir slow, allas!
 And, God it woot, no thyng was hir trespas, 242
 But for she ran hir fader first to see,
 To welcome hym with greet solempntee " And with that word she fil aswowne
 anon, 245
 And after, whan hir swownyng is agon,
 She riseth up, and to hir fader sayde,
 "Blissed be God, that I shal dye a mayde!
 Yif me my deeth, er that I have a shame, Dooth with youre child youe wyl, a Goddes name!" 250
 And with that word she preyed hym ful ofte
 That with his swerd he sholde smyte softe,
 And with that word aswowne doun she fil Hir fader, with ful sorfeful herte and wil, Hir heed of smoot, and by the top it
 hente, 255
 And to the juge he gan it to presente,
 As he sat yet in doom in consistorie And whan the juge it saugh, as seith the
 storie,
 He bad to take hym and anhange hym
 faste,

But right anon a thousand peple in thraste, 260
 To save the knyght, for routhe and for pitee, For knowen was the false iniquitee
 The peple anon had suspect in this thyng,
 By manere of the cherles chalangyng,
 That it was by the assent of Apus, 265
 They wisten wel that he was lecherus
 For which unto this Apus they gon,
 And caste hym in a prisoun right anon, Ther as he slow hymself, and Claudius,
 That servant was unto this Apus, 270
 Was demed for to hange upon a tree,
 But that Virginus, of his pitee,
 So preyde for hym that he was exiled,
 And elles, certes, he had been bigyled The remenant were anhanged, moore and
 lesse, 275
 That were consentant of this cursednesse Heere may men seen how synne hath his merite
 Beth war, for no man woot whom God wol
 smyte
 In no degree, ne in which manere wyse
 The worm of conscience may agryse 280 Of wikked lyf, though it so pryvee be That no man woot therof but God and he For be he lewed man, or ellis lered, He noot how soone that he shal been afered
 Therefore I rede yow this conseil take, 285 Forsaketh synne, er synne yow forsake

Heere endeth the Phisiciens Tale

THE INTRODUCTION TO THE PARDONER'S TALE

The wordes of the Hoost to the Phisicien and the Pardoner

Oure Hooste gan to swere as he were
 wood,
 "Harrow!" quod he, "by nayles and by
 blood!
 This was a fals cherl and a fals justise
 As shameful deeth as herte may devyse 290 Come to thise juges and hire advocatz!
 Algate thus sely mayde is slayn, allas!
 Allas, to deere boughte she beautee!

Wherefore I seye al day that men may see That yiftes of Fortune and of Nature 295
 Been cause of deeth to many a creature Hire beautee was hire deth, I dar wel sayn Allas, so pitously as she was slayn!
 Of bothe yiftes that I speke of now Men han ful ofte moore for harm than prow 300
 But trewely, myn owene mauster deere,

This is a pitous tale for to heere
 But natheless, passe over, is no fors
 I pray to God so save thy gentil cors,
 And eek thyne uryinals and thy jurdones, Thyn ypocras, and eek thy galones, 306
 And every boyste ful of thy letuarie, God blesse hem, and oure lady Sente
 Marie!
 So moot I theen, thou art a propre man,
 And lyk a prelat, by Seint Ronyan! 310 Seyde I nat wel? I kan nat speke in terme, But wel I woot thou doost myn herte to erme,
 That I almost have caught a cardynacle
 By corpus bones! but I have triacle, Or elles a draughte of moyste and corny
 ale, 315
 Or but I heere anon a myrne tale,

Myn herte is lost for pitee of this mayde Thou beel amy, thou Pardoner," he sayde,
 "Telle us som myrthe or japes right anon"
 "It shal be doon," quod he, "by Seint Ronvon! 320
 But first," quod he, "heere at this ale-stake
 I wol bothe drynke, and eten of a cake" But right anon thuse gentils gonne to
 crye,
 "Nay, lat hym telle us of no ribaudye!
 Telle us som moral thyng, that we may
 leere 325
 Som wit, and thanne wol we gladly heere"
 "I graunte, ywis," quod he, "but I moot
 thynke
 Upon som honest thyng while that I
 drynke"

THE PARDONER'S PROLOGUE

Heere folweth the Prologe of the Pardoners Tale

Radix malorum est Cupiditas Ad Themotheum, 6^o

"Lordynges," quod he, "in churches whan I preche,
 I peyne me to han an hauteyn speche, 330
 And ryng it out as round as gooth a belle,
 For I kan al by rote that I telle My theme is alwey oon, and evere was — Radix malorum est Cupiditas
 First I pronounce whennes that I come, And thanne my bulles shewe I, alle and
 some 338
 Oure lige lordes seel on my patente,
 That shewe I first, my body to warente, That no man be so boold, ne preest ne
 clerk,
 Me to destourbe of Cristes hooly werk 340 And after that thanne telle I forth my tales,
 Bulles of popes and of cardynales,
 Of patriarkes and bishopes I shewe,
 And in Latyn I speke a wordes fewe,
 To saffron with my predicacioun, 345
 And for to stire hem to devocioun Thanne shewe I forth my longe cristal
 stones,

Yerammed ful of cloutes and of bones, — Relikes been they, as wenen they echoon Thanne have I in latoun a sholder-boon 350 Which that was of an hooly Jewes sheep 'Goode men,' I seye, 'taak of my wordes
 keep,
 If that this boon be wasshe in any welle,
 If cow, or calf, or sheep, or oxe swelle
 That any worm hath ete, or worm ystonge, Taak water of that welle and wassh his
 tonge, 356
 And it is hool anon, and forthermoore, Of pokkes and of scabbe, and every soore Shal every sheep be hool that of this welle Drynketh a draughte Taak kep eek what I telle 360
 If that the good-man that the beestes oweth Wol every wyke, er that the cok hym croweth,
 Fastynge, drynken of this welle a draughte,
 As thilke hooly Jew oure eldres taughte,
 His beestes and his stoor shal multiple 365
 And, sures, also it heeleth jalousie,

For though a man be falle in jalous rage, Lat maken with this water his potage,
 And nevere shal he moore his wyf mystriste,

Though he the soothe of hur defeaute
 wiste, 370

Al had she taken prestes two or thre Heere is a miteyn eek, that ye may se
 He that his hand wol putte in this mitayn,
 He shal have multiplyng of his grayn, Whan he hath sowen, be it whete or otes, 375

So that he offre pens, or elles grotes
 Goode men and wommen, o thyng warne

I yow
 If any might be in this chirche now That hath doon synne horrible, that he Dar nat, for shame, of it yshryven be, 380

Or any womman, be she yong or old,
 That hath ymaad hur housbonde cokewold, Swich folk shal have no power ne no grace
 To offen to my relikes in this place And whose fyndeth hym out of swich
 blame, 385

He wol come up and offre in Goddes
 name,

And I assaille him by the auctoritee Which that by bulle ygraunted was to me'

By this gaude have I wonne, yeer by
 yeer,

An hundred mark sith I was pardonere 390
 I stonde lyk a clerk in my pulpet,
 And whan the lewed peple is doun yset,
 I preche so as ye han herd bifoore,
 And telle an hundred false japes moore Thanne peyne I me to strecche forth the
 nekke, 395

And est and west upon the peple I bekke, As dooth a dowve sittynge on a berne Myne handes and my tonge goon so yerne
 That it is joye to se my busynesse

Of avarice and of swich cursednesse 400
 Is al my prechyng, for to make hem free To yeven hur pens, and namely unto me
 For myn entente is nat but for to wynne,
 And nothyng for correccioun of synne I rekke nevere, whan that they been beryed, 405

Though that hur soules goon a-blakeberyed!
 For certes, many a predicacioun Comth ofte tyme of yvel entencioun, Som for plesance of folk and flaterye,

To been avaunced by ypocrisie, 410 And som for weyne glorie, and som for hate

For whan I dar noon oother weyes debate, Thanne wol I styngge hym with my tonge
 smerte

In prechyng, so that he shal nat asterte
 To been defamed falsly, if that he 415 Hath trespased to my bretheren or to me
 For though I telle nocht his propre name, Men shal wel knowe that it is the same,
 By signes, and by othere circumstances Thus quyte I folk that doon us dis-plesances, 420

Thus spitte I out my venym under hewe
 Of hoodynesse, to semen hooly and trewe

But shortly myn entente I wol devyse
 I preche of no thyng but for covetyse Therefore my theme is yet, and evere was,
Radix malorum est Cupiditas 426

Thus kan I preche agayn that same vice Which that I use, and that is avance
 But though myself be gilty in that synne, Yet kan I maken oother folk to twynne 430
 From avarice, and soore to repente
 But that is nat my principal entente,
 I preche nothyng but for covetyse
 Of this mateere it oghte ynogh suffise

Thanne telle I hem ensamples many
 oon 435

Of olde stories longe tyme agoon
 For lewed peple loven tales olde, Swiche thynges kan they wel reporte and
 holde

What, trowe ye, that whiles I may preche,
 And wynde gold and silver for I teche, 440
 That I wol lyve in poverté wilfully?
 Nay, nay, I thoghte it nevere, trewely!
 For I wol preche and begge in sondry landes,

I wol nat do no labour with myne handes,
 Ne make baskettes, and lyve therby, 445
 By cause I wol nat beggen ydely
 I wol noon of the apostles countrefete,
 I wol have moneie, wolle, chese, and whete, Al were it yeven of the povereste page,
 Or of the povereste wydwe in a village, 450
 Al sholde hur children sterve for famyne Nay, I wol drynke licour of the vyne,
 And have a joly wenche in every toun
 But herketh, lordynges, in conclusioun Youre likyng is that I shal telle a tale 455

Now have I dronke a draughte of corny ale, By God, I hope I shal yow telle a thyng
That shal by reson been at youre lykynge
For though myself be a ful vicious man,

A moral tale yet I yow telle kan, 460
Which I am wont to preche for to wyne Now hood youre pees' my tale I wol
bigynne "

THE PARDONER'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Pardoners Tale

In Flaundes whilom was a compaignye Of yonge folk that haunteden folye,
As riot, hasard, stywes, and tavernes, 465
Where as with harpes, lutes, and gyternes, They daunce and pleyen at dees bothe day and nyght,
And eten also and drynken over hir myght, Thurgh which they doon the devel sacrifi-

se Withinne that develes temple, in cursed
wise, 470

By superfluytee abhomynable Hir othes been so grete and so dampnable That it is grisly for to heere hem swere Oure blissed Lordes body they totere, — Hem thoughte that Jewes rente hym noght ynough, 475

And ech of hem at otheres synne lough
And right anon thanne comen tombesteres Fetys and smale, and yonge frutesteres, Syngeres with harpes, baudes, wafereres, Whiche been the verray develes officeres 480
To kyndle and blowe the fyr of lecherye,
That is annexed unto glotonye
The hooly writ take I to my witsnesse That luxurie is in wyn and dronkenesse

Lo, how that dronken Looth, unkyndely, Lay by his doghtres two, unwityngly, 486 So dronke he was, he nyste what he
wroghte

Herodes, whoso wel the stories soghte, Whan he of wyn was repleet at his feeste, Right at his owene table he yaf his
heeste 490

To sleen the Baptist John, ful giltelees Senec seith a good word doutelees,
He seith he kan no difference fynde Bitwix a man that is out of his mynde
And a man which that is dronkelewe, 495
But that woodnesse, yfallen in a shrewe,

Persevereth lenger than dooth dronke-
nesse

O glotonye, ful of cursednesse!
O cause first of oure confusioun!
O original of oure dampnacioun, 500 Til Crist hadde boght us with his blood
agayn!

Lo, how deere, shortly for to sayn, Aboght was thilke cursed vileynye!
Corrupt was al this world for glotonye

Adam oure fader, and his wyf also, 505 Fro Paradys to labour and to wo Were dryven for that vice, it is no drede For whil that Adam fasted, as I rede, He was in Paradys, and whan that he Eet of the fruyt deffended on the tree, Anon he was out cast to wo and peyne 511

O glotonye, on thee wel oghte us pleynel
O, wiste a man how manye maladyes Folwen of excesse and of glotonyes,
He wolde been the moore mesurable 515
Of his diete, sittynge at his table
Allas! the shorte throte, the tendre mouth, Maketh that est and west and north and south,

In erthe, in er, in water, men to swynke To gete a glotoun deyntee mete and
drynke! 520

Of this matiere, o Paul, wel kanstow trete "Mete unto wombe, and wombe eek unto mete, Shal God destroyen bothe," as Paulus
seith

Allas! a foul thyng is it, by my feith,
To seye this word, and fouler is the dede, Whan man so drynketh of the white and
rede 526

That of his throte he maketh his pryvee, Thurgh thilke cursed superfluytee
The apostel wepyng seith ful pitously, “Ther walken manye of whiche yow toold have I — 530

I seye it now wepyng, with pitous voys —
That they been enemyes of Cristes croys, Of whiche the ende is deeth, wombe is hur god!”

O wombe! O bely! O stynkyng cod, Fulfilled of dong and of corrupcioun! 535

At either ende of thee foul is the soun
How greet labour and cost is thee to fynde!
These cookes, how they stampe, and streyne, and grynde,

And turnen substaunce into accident,
To fulfillle al thy likerous talent! 540

Out of the harde bones knokke they
The mary, for they caste nocht away That may go thurgh the golet softe and swoote

Of spicerie of leef, and bark, and roote Shal been his sauce ymaked by delit, 545
To make hym yet a newer appetit But, certes, he that haunteth swiche delices

Is deed, whil that he lyveth in the vices A lecherous thyng is wyn, and dronke-
nesse

Is ful of stryvyng and of wrecched-
nesse 550

O dronke man, disfigured is thy face, Sour is thy breath, foul artow to embrace,
And thurgh thy dronke nose semeth the
soun

As though thou seydest ay “Sampsoun, Sampsoun!”

And yet, God woot, Sampsoun drank nevere no wyn 555

Thouallest as it were a styked swyn, Thy tonge is lost, and al thyn honeste
cure,

For dronkenesse is verray sepulture
Of mannes wit and his discrecioun

In whom that drynke hath dominacioun 560
He kan no conseil kepe, it is no drede Now kepe yow fro the white and fro the
rede,

And namely fro the white wyn of Lepe,
That is to selle in Fysshstrete or in Chepe
This wyn of Spaigne crepeth subtly 565

In other wynes, growyng faste by,
Of which ther ryseth swich fumostee That than a man hath dronken draughtes
thre,

And weneth that he be at hoom in Chepe, He is in Spaigne, right at the toune of Lepe, — 570

Nat at the Rochele, ne at Burdeux toun, And thanne wol he seye “Sampsoun, Sampsoun!”

But herkneth, lordynges, o word, I yow
preye,

That alle the sovereyn actes, dar I seye,
Of victories in the Olde Testament, 575 Thurgh verray God, that is omnipotent, Were doon in abstinence and in preyere Looketh the Bible, and ther ye may it
leere

Looke, Attalla, the grete conquerour, Deyde in his sleep, with shame and dis-
honour, 580

Bledyng ay at his nose in dronkenesse
A capitayn sholde lyve in sobrenesse
And over al this, avyseth yow right wel
What was comaunded unto Lamuel — Nat Samuel, but Lamuel, seye I — 585
Redeth the Bible, and fynde it expresly Of wyn-yevyng to hem that han justise Namooore of this, for it may wel suffice

And now that I have spoken of glotonye,

Now wol I yow deffenden hasardrye 590 Hasard is verray mooder of lesynges,
And of deceite, and cursed forswerynges, BlaspHEME of Crist, manslaughtre, and wast also

Of catel and of tyme, and forthermo,
It is repreeve and contrarie of honour 595

For to ben holde a commune hasardour
And ever the hyer he is of estaat,
The moore is he yholden desolaat
If that a prynce useth hasardrye, In alle governaunce and polycye 600
He is, as by commune opimoun, Yholde the lasse in reputacioun

Stilboun, that was a wys embassadour, Was sent to Corynthe, in ful greet honour, Fro Lacedomye, to make hire alliaunce And whan he cam, hym happede, par
chaunce, 606

That alle the gretteste that were of that
lond,

Pleyngge atte hasard he hem fond For which, as soone as it myghte be,
He stal hym hoom agayn to his contree, 610
And seyde, “Ther wol I nat lese my name,

Ne I wol nat take on me so greet defame, Yow for to alie unto none hasardours Sendeth othere wise embassadours, For, by my trouthe, me were levere
 dye 615

Than I yow sholde to hasardours allye
 For ye, that been so glorious in honours, Shul nat allyen yow with hasardours
 As by my wyl, ne as by my tretree"
 This wise philosopre, thus seyde hee 620

Looke eek that to the kyng Demetrius
 The kyng of Parthes, as the book seith us, Sente him a paire of dees of gold in scorn,
 For he hadde used hasard ther-biforn, For which he heeld his glorie or his renoun 625

At no value or reputacioun Lordes may fynden oother maner pley Honest enough to dryve the day away
 Now wol I speke of othes false and grete
 A word or two, as olde bookes trete 630

Gret sweryng is a thyng abhominable,
 And fals sweryng is yet moore reprevable
 The heighe God forbad sweryng at al, Witnessse on Mathew, but in special Of sweryng seith the hooly Jeremye, 635 "Thou shalt swere sooth thyne othes, and
 nat lye,
 And swere in doom, and eek in rightwis-
 nesse",

But ydel sweryng is a cursednesse Bihoold and se that in the firste table Of heighe Goddes heestes honourable, 640 Hou that the seconde heeste of hym is thus "Take nat my name in ydel or amys"

Lo, rather he forbedeth swich sweryng Than homycide or many a cursed thyng,
 I seye that, as by ordre, thus it stondesth, This knoweth, that his heestes understondesth, 646

How that the seconde heeste of God is that

And forther over, I wol thee telle al plat, That vengeance shal nat parten from his
 hous

That of his othes is to outrageous 650
 "By Goddes precious herte," and "By his nayles,"

And "By the blood of Crist that is in Hayles,

Sevene is my chaunce, and thyn is cynk and treye!"

"By Goddes armes, if thou falsly pleye, This daggere shal thurghout thyn herte
 go!" — 655

This fruyt cometh of the bicched bones
 two,

Forsweryng, ire, falsnesse, homycide
 Now, for the love of Crist, that for us dyde, Lete youre othes, bothe grete and smale But, sires, now wol I telle forth my tale 660

These riotours thre of whiche I telle, Longe erst er prime rong of any belle,
 Were set hem in a taverne for to drynke,
 And as they sat, they herde a belle clynke Biforn a cors, was caried to his grave 665
 That oon of hem gan callen to his knave
 "Go bet," quod he, "and axe redly
 What cors is this that passeth heer forhy, And looke that thou reporte his name
 weel"

"Sire," quod this boy, "it nedeth
 never-a-deel, 670
 It was me toold er ye cam heer two
 houres

He was, pardee, an old felawe of youre,
 And sodeynly he was ysлайн to-nyght, Fordronke, as he sat on his bench upright Ther cam a privee theef, men clepeth
 Deeth, 675

That in this contree al the peple sleeth,
 And with his spere he smoot his herte atwo,
 And wente his wey withouten wordes n o
 He hath a thousand slayn this pestilence
 And, maister, er ye come in his presence, Me thynketh that it were necessarie 681
 For to be war of swich an adversarie Beth redy for to meete hym everemoore, Thus taughte me my dame, I sey na-
 moore"

"By seinte Marie!" seyde this taverner
 "The child seith sooth, for he hath slayn this yeer, 686

Henne over a mile, withinne a greet village,

Bothe man and womman, child, and hyne, and page,

I trowe his habitacioun be there
 To been avyded greet wysdom it were, 690 Er that he hide a man a dishonour"

"Ye, Goddes armes!" quod this riotour,
 "Is it swich peril with hym for to meete?
 I shal hym seke by wey and eek by strete,

I make a yow to Goddes digne bones! 695 Herkneht, felawes, we thre been al ones, Lat ech of us holde up hus hand til oother,
 And ech of us bicomen otheses brother,
 And we wol sleen this false traytour Deeth He shal be slayn, he that so manye sleeth, 700

By Goddes dignitee, er it be nyght!" Togidres han thuse thre hir trouthes plight

To lyve and dyen ech of hem for oother, As though he were his owene ybore
 brother 704

And up they stirte, al dronken in this rage,
 And forth they goon towards that village
 Of which the taverner hadde spoke biforn And many a grisly ooth thanne han they
 sworn,

And Cristes blessed body al torente — Deeth shal be deed, if that they may hym
 hente! 710

When they han goon nat fully half a mile,

Right as they wolde han troden over a stile,

An oold man and a povre with hem mette
 This olde man ful mekely hem grette, And seyde thus, "Now, lordes, God yow
 see!" 715

The proudeste of these notoures three Answerde agayn, "What, carl, with sory
 grace!"

Why artow al forwrapped save thy face?
 Why lyvestow so longe in so greet age?"

This olde man gan looke in his visage, And seyde thus, "For I ne kan nat
 fynde 721

A man, though that I walked into Ynde, Neither in citee ne in no village,
 That wolde change his youthe for myn
 age,

And therefore moot I han myn age stille,
 As longe tyme as it is Goddes wille 726
 Ne Deeth, allas! ne wol nat han my lyf Thus walke I, lyk a resteless karyf, And on the ground, which is my moodres
 gate,

I knokke with my staf, bothe erly and late, 730

And seye 'Leeve mooder, leet me in!
 Lo how I varyssa, flessch, and blood, and skyn!

Allas! whan shul my bones been at reste?
 Mooder, with yow wolde I change my cheste 734

That in my chambre longe tyme hath be, Ye, for an heyre clowt to wrappe in me!"
 But yet to me she wol nat do that grace,
 For which ful pale and welked is my face

But, sres, to yow it is no curteisye
 To speken to an old man vileynye, 740

But he trespasse in word, or elles in dede In Hooly Writ ye may yourself wel rede
 'Agayns an oold man, hoor upon his heed, Ye sholde arise,' wherfore I yeve yow
 reed,

Ne dooth unto an oold man noon harm
 now, 745

Namooore than that ye wolde men did to
 yow

In age, if that ye so longe abyde
 And God be with yow, where ye go or ryde!
 I moot go thuder as I have to go"

"Nay, olde cherl, by God, thou shalt nat so," 750

Seyde this oother hasardour anon,
 "Thou partest nat so lightly, by Sent John!"

Thou spak right now of thilke traytour
 Deeth,

That in this contree alle oure freendes
 sleeth

Have here my trouthe, as thou art his
 espye, 755

Telle where he is, or thou shalt it abyde,
 By God, and by the hooly sacrament!
 For soothly thou art oon of his assent
 To sleen us yonge folk, thou false theef!"

"Now, sres," quod he, "if that ye be so leef 760

To fynde Deeth, turne up this coked wey,
 For in that grove I lafte hym, by my fey, Under a tree, and there he wole abyde, Noght for youre boost he wole hum no thyng hyde

Se ye that ook? Right there ye shal hym
 fynde 765

God save yow, that boghte agayn man-
 kynde,

And yow amende!" Thus seyde this olde
 man,

And everich of these notoures ran Til he cam to that tree, and ther they founde

Of floryns fyne of gold ycoyned rounde Wel ny an eighte bussshels, as hem
 thoughte 771
 No lenger thanne after Deeth they soughte,
 But ech of hem so glad was of that sighte, For that the floryns been so faire and
 brighte,
 That doun they sette hem by this precious hoord 775
 The worste of hem, he spak the firste word
 "Bretheren," quod he, "taak kep what that I seye, My wit is greet, though that I bourde and
 pleye
 This tresor hath Fortune unto us yiven,
 In myrthe and jolftee oure lyf to lyven, And lightly as it comth, so wol we
 spende 781
 Ey! Goddes precious dignitee! who wende
 To-day that we sholde han so fair a grace?
 But myghte this gold be caried from this
 place 784
 Hoom to myn hous, or elles unto youres —
 For wel ye woot that al this gold is oures — Thanne were we in heigh felictee
 But trewely, by daye it may nat bee Men wolde seyn that we were theves
 stronge,
 And for oure owene tresor doon us honge 790
 This tresor moste ycaried be by nyghte
 As wisely and as slyly as it myghte Wherefore I rede that cut among us alle Be drawe, and lat se wher the cut wol
 falle,
 And he that hath the cut with herte
 blithe 795
 Shal renne to the town, and that ful swithe,
 And brynge us breed and wyn ful prively
 And two of us shul kepen subtilly
 This tresor wel, and if he wol nat tarie, When it is nyght, we wol this tresor carie, 800
 By oon assent, where as us thynketh best " That oon of hem the cut broghte in his
 fest,
 And bad hem drawe, and looke where it wol falle,
 And it fil on the yongeste of hem alle,
 And forth toward the toun he wente
 anon 805
 And also soone as that he was gon,

That oon of hem spak thus unto that
 oother
 "Thow knowest wel thou art my sworn
 brother,
 Thy profit wol I telle thee anon Thou woost wel that oure felawe is
 agon, 810
 And heere is gold, and that ful greet plentee,
 That shal departed been among us thre
 But natheless, if I kan shape it so That it departed were among us two, Hadde I nat doon a freendes torn to
 thee?" 815
 That oother answerde, "I noot hou that may be He woot wel that the gold is with us
 tweye,
 What shal we doon? What shal we to hym
 seye?"
 "Shal it be conseil?" seyde the firste shrewe,
 "And I shal tellen in a wordes fewe 820 What we shal doon, and brynge it wel
 aboute "
 "I graunte," quod that oother, "out of
 doute,
 That, by my trouthe, I wol thee nat biweye "
 "Now," quod the firste, "thou woost wel we be tweye,
 And two of us shul strengre be than oon Looke whan that he is set, that right
 anon 826
 Arys as though thou woldest with hym
 pleye,
 And I shal ryve hym thurgh the sydes
 tweye Whil that thou strogelest with hym as in
 game,
 And with thy daggere looke thou do the same, 830
 And thanne shal al this gold departed be,
 My deere freend, bitwixen me and thee Thanne may we bothe oure lustes all fulfillle,
 And pleye at dees right at oure owene
 wille "
 And thus acorded been these shrewes
 tweye 835
 To sleen the thridde, as ye han herd me
 seye

This yongeste, which that wente to the
toun,
Ful ofte in herte he rolleth up and doun The beautee of thise floryns newe and
bryghte
"O Lord!" quod he, "if so were that I
myghte 840
Have al this tresor to myself allone, Ther is no man that lyveth under the trone
Of God that sholde lyve so murye as I!"
And atte laste the feend, oure enemy, Putte in his thought that he sholde poyson beye, 845
With which he myghte sleen his felawes
tweye,
For-why the feend foond hym in swich lyvyng
That he hadde leve him to sorwe bryng
For this was outrely his fulle entente, To sleen hem bothe, and nevere to
repente 850
And forth he gooth, no lenger wolde he tare,
Into the toun, unto a pothecarie,
And preyde hym that he hym wolde selle Som poyson, that he myghte his rattes
quelle,
And eek ther was a polcat in his hawe, 855
That, as he seyde, his capouns hadde
yslawe,
And fayn he wolde wreke hym, if he
myghte,
On vermyn that destroyed hym by nyghte
The pothecarie answerde, "And thou shalt have A thyng that, also God my soule save, 860
In al this world ther is no creature, That eten or dronken hath of this confiture Noght but the montance of a corn of
whete,
That he ne shal his lif anon forlete, Ye, sterve he shal, and that in lasse
while 865
Than thou wolt goon a paas nat but a mile,
This poysoun is so strong and violent"
This cursed man hath in his hond yhent This poysoun in a box, and sith he ran Into the nexte strete unto a man, 870
And borwed hym large botelles thre, And in the two his poyson poured he,

The thridde he kepte clene for his drynke For al the nyght he shoop hym for to swynke 874
In caryng of the gold out of that place
And whan this riotour, with sory grace, Hadde filled with wyn his grete botels
thre,
To his felawes agayn repaireth he What nedeth it to sermone of it moore?
For right as they hadde cast his deeth
bifoore, 880
Right so they han hym slayn, and that
anon
And whan that this was doon, thus spak that con
"Now lat us sitte and drynke, and make us merie,
And afterward we wol his body berie"
And with that word it happed hym, par
cas, 885
To take the botel ther the poyson was,
And drank, and yaf his felawe drynke also,
For which anon they storven bothe two But certes, I suppose that Avycen Wroot nevere in no canon, ne in no
fen, 890
Mo wonder signes of empoisonyng Than hadde thise wrecches two, er hir endyng
Thus ended been thise homycides two,
And eek the false empoysonere also O cursed synne of alle cursednesse! 895
O traytours homycide, O wikkednesse!
O glotonye, luxurne, and hasardrye!
Thou blasphemour of Crist with vilevnye
And othes grete, of usage and of pride!
Allas! mankynde, how may it bitide 900 That to thy creatour, which that the wroghte,
And with his precious herte-blood thee
boghte,
Thou art so fals and so unkynde, allas?
Now, goode men, God foryeve yow youre trespas,
And ware yow fro the synne of avarice! 905 Myn hooly pardoun may yow alle warice,
So that ye offre nobles or sterlynges,
Or elles silver broches, spoones, rynges Boweth youre heed under this hooly bulle!
Cometh up, ye wyves, offreth of youre wolle! 910
Your names I entre heer in my rolle anon:

Into the blisse of hevене shul ye gon
 I yow assoille, by myn heigh power, Yow that wol offre, as clene and eek as cleer
 As ye were born — And lo, sres, thus I
 preche 915
 And Jhesu Crist, that is oure soules leche,
 So graunte yow his pardoun to receyve,
 For that is best, I wol yow nat deceyve
 But, sres, o word forgat I in my tale
 I have relikes and pardoun in my male, 920
 As faire as any man in Engelond, Whiche were me yeven by the popes hond
 If any of yow wole, of devocion, Offren, and han myn absolucion,
 Com forth anon, and kneleth heere
 adoun, 925
 And mekely receyveth my pardoun,
 Or elles taketh pardoun as ye wende,
 Al newe and fressh at every miles ende,
 So that ye offren, alwey newe and newe, Nobles or pens, whiche that be goode and
 trewe 930
 It is an honour to everich that is heer
 That ye mowe have a suffisant pardoneer T'assoille yow, in contree as ye ryde,
 For aventures whiche that may bityde Paraventure ther may fallen oon or two Doun of his hors, and breke his nekke
 atwo 936
 Looke which a seuretee is it to yow alle
 That I am in youre felaweshipe yfalle, That may assoille yow, bothe moore and lasse,
 Whan that the soule shal fro the body passe 940
 I rede that oure Hoost heere shal bigynne,
 For he is moost enveloped in synne
 Com forth, sire Hoost, and offre first anon,

And thou shalt kisse the relikes everychon, Ye, for a grote! Unbokele anon thy purs ” “Nay, nay!” quod he, “thanne have I Cristes curs! 946 Lat be,” quod he, “it shal nat be, so theech!
 Thou woldest make me kisse thyn olde breech,
 And swere it were a relyk of a seint, Though it were with thy fundament depent! 950
 But by the croys whiche that Sent Eleyne fond,
 I wolde I hadde thy coillons in myn hond
 In stide of relikes or of sentuarie Lat kutte hem of, I wol thee helpe hem
 carie,
 They shul be shryned in an hogges toord!” 955
 This Pardoner answerde nat a word, So wrooth he was, no word ne wolde he
 seye
 “Now,” quod oure Hoost, “I wol no lenger pleye
 With thee, ne with noon oother angry
 man ”
 But right anon the worthy Knyght
 bigan, 960
 Whan that he saugh that al the peple
 lough, “Namore of this, for it is right nough!
 Sire Pardoner, be glad and myrie of cheere, And ye, sire Hoost, that been to me so
 deere,
 I prey yow that ye kisse the Pardoner 965
 And Pardoner, I prey thee, drawe thee
 neer,
 And, as we diden, lat us laughe and pleye ” Anon they kiste, and ryden forth hur weye.

Here is ended the Pardoners Tale

FRAGMENT VII (GROUP B²)*

THE SHIPMAN'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Shipmannes Tale

A marchant whilom dwelled at Seint Denys,
That riche was, for which men helde hym
wys

A wyf he hadde of excellent beautee, And compaignable and revelous was she,
Which is a thyng that causeth more dis-pence 5

Than worth is al the chiere and reverence That men hem doon at festes and at daunces

Swiche salutaciouns and contenaunces Passen as dooth a shadwe upon the wal,
But wo is hym that payen moot for all *1200
The sely housbonde, algate he moot paye,
He moot us clothe, and he moot us arraye, Al for his owene worshipe richely,
In which array we daunce jolyly

And if that he noght may, par aventure, 15

Or ellis list no swich dispence endure,
But thynketh it is wasted and ylost, Thanne moot another payen for oure cost,
Or lene us gold, and that is perilous

This noble marchaunt heeld a worthy
hous, *1210

For which he hadde alday so greet repair
For his largesse, and for his wyf was fair,
That wonder is, but herkneth to my tale Amonges alle his gestes, grete and smale, Ther was a monk, a fair man and a boold — 25

I trowe a thirtty wynter he was oold — That evere in oon was drawyng to that
place

This yonge monk that was so fair of face, Aqueynted was so with the goode man, Sith that hir firste knoweliche bigan, *1220 That in his hous as famulier was he As it is possible any freend to be

And for as muchel as this goode man,
And eek this monk, of which that I bigan,
Were bothe two yborn in o village, 35

The monk hym claymeth as for cosynage,
And he agayn, he seith nat ones nay,
But was as glad therof as fowel of day,
For to his herte it was a greet plesaunce Thus been they knyht with eterne all-
aunce, *1230

And ech of hem gan oother for t'assure
Of bretherhede, whil that hir lyf may dure Free was daun John, and namely of dis-
pence,

As in that hous, and ful of diligence 44
To doon plesaunce, and also greet costage
He noght forgat to yeve the leeste page
In al that hous, but after hir degree,
He yaf the lord, and sitthe al his meynee, Whan that he cam, som manere honest
thyng, *1239

For which they were as glad of his comyng
As fowel is fayn whan that the sonne up riseth

Na moore of this as now, for it suffiseth
But so bifel, this marchant on a day Shoop hym to make redy his array Toward the toun of Brugges for to fare,
To byen there a porcioun of ware, 56
For which he hath to Parys sent anon
A messenger, and preyed huth daun John That he sholde come to Seint Denys to
pleye

With hym and with his wyf a day or
tweye, *1250

Er he to Brugges wente, in alle wise
This noble monk, of which I yow devyse, Hath of his abbot, as hym list, licence,
By cause he was a man of heigh prudence,
And eek an officer, out for to ryde, 65
To seen hir graunges and hire bernes wyde,
And unto Seint Denys he comth anon Who was so welcome as my lord daun
John,

Oure deere cosyn, ful of curteisye?
With hym broghte he a jubbe of mal-veseye, *1260

* For the convenience of the reader, in finding references, the traditional numbering of Group B², marked with asterisks, is carried alternately, with that of Fragment VII

And eek another, ful of fyn vernage,
And volatyl, as ay was his usage And thus I lete hem ete and drynke and
pleye,

This marchant and this monk, a day or
tweye

The thridde day, this marchant up arseth, 75

And on his nedes sadly hym avyseth, And up into his countour-hous gooth he
To rekene with hymself, as wel may be,
Of thilke yeer how that it with hym stood,
And how that he despended hadde his good, *1270

And if that he encessed were or noon
His bookes and his bagges many oon
He leith biforn hym on his countyng-bord Ful riche was his tresor and his hord, For which ful faste his countour-dore he shette, 85

And eek he nolde that no man sholde hym lette

Of his accountes, for the meene tyme,
And thus he sit til it was passed pryme Daun John was rysen in the morwe
also,

And in the gardyn walketh to and fro, *1280
And hath his thynges seyde ful curteisly

This goode wyf cam walkyng pryvely Into the gardyn, there he walketh softe,
And hym saleweth, as she hath doon ofte
A mayde chuld cam in hire compaignye, Which as hir list she may governe and gye, 96

For yet under the yerde was the mayde
"O deere cosyn myn, daun John," she
sayde,

"What eyleth yow so rathe for to ryse?"
"Neece," quod he, "it oghte ynough suffise *1290

Fyve houres for to slepe upon a nyght,
But it were for an old appalled wight, As been these wedded men, that lye and dare

As in a fourme sit a wery hare, Were al forstraught with houndes grete and smale 105

But deere nece, why be ye so pale?
I trowe, certes, that oure goode man Hath yow laboured sith the nyght began,
That yow were nede to resten hastily"
And with that word he lough ful murlly,

And of his owene thought he wax al
reed *1301

This fare wyf gan for to shake hir heed
And seyde thus, "Ye, God woot al," quod
she

"Nay, cosyn myn, it stant nat so with me, For, by that God that yaf me soule and
lyf, 115

In al the reawme of France is ther no wyf
That lasse lust hath to that sory pley
For I may synge 'allas and weylawey, That I was born,' but to no wight," quod
she,

"Dar I nat telle how that it stant with
me *1310

Wherfore I thynke out of this land to
wende,

Or elles of myself to make an ende,
So ful am I of drede and eek of care "

This monk bigan upon this wyf to stare, And seyde, "Allas, my nece, God for-bede 125

That ye, for any sorwe or any drede, Fordo youreself, but telleth me youre gref Paraventure I may, in youre meschief, Conseille or helpe, and therefore telleth me Al youre anoy, for it shal been secree *1320
For on my porthors here I make an ooth That nevere in my lyf, for lief ne looth, Ne shal I of no conseil yow biwreye "

"The same agayn to yow," quod she, "I
seye

By God and by this porthors I yow
swere, 135

Though men me wolde al into pieces tere, Ne shal I nevere, for to goon to helle, Biwreye a word of thyng that ye me telle, Nat for no cosynage ne allance,
But verraily, for love and affiance " *1330 Thus been they sworn, and heerupon they

kiste,
And ech of hem tolde oother what hem liste

"Cosyn," quod she, "if that I hadde a
space,

As I have noon, and namely in this place, Thanne wolde I telle a legende of my
lyf, 145

What I have suffred sith I was a wyf
With myn housbonde, al be he youre cosyn "Nay," quod this monk, "by God and sent Martyn,

He is na moore cosyn unto me Than is this leef that hangeth on the
 tree! *1340

I clepe hym so, by Seint Denys of Fraunce,
 To have the moore cause of aqueyntaunce Of yow, which I have loved specially Aboven alle wommen, sikerly
 Thus swere I yow on my professoun 155 Telleth youre grief, lest that he come
 adoun,
 And hasteth yow, and gooth youre wey
 anon "

"My deere love," quod she, "O my daun John,
 Ful hef were me this conseil for to hyde,
 But out it moot, I may namoore abyde Myn housbonde is to me the worste
 man *1351

That evere was sith that the world bigan
 But sith I am a wyf, it sit nat me To tellen no wight of oure privetee, Neither abedde, ne in noon oother place, God shulde I sholde it tellen, for his
 grace! 166

A wyf ne shal nat seyn of hir housbonde
 But al honour, as I kan understonde, Save unto yow thus muche I tellen shal As helpe me God, he is nocht worth at al *1360

In no degree the value of a flye
 But yet me greveth moost his nygardye And wel ye woot that wommen naturally Desuren thynges sixe as wel as I They wolde that hir housbondes sholde
 be 175

Hardy, and wise, and riche, and therto free,
 And buxom unto his wyf, and fressh
 abedde

But by that ilke Lord that for us bledde,
 For his honour, myself for to arraye,
 A Sondag next I moste nedes paye *1370
 An hundred frankes, or ellis I am lorn Yet were me levere that I were unborn Than me were doon a sclandre or
 vileynye,
 And if myn housbonde eek it myghte
 espye,
 I nere but lost, and therefore I yow
 preye, 185

Lene me this somme, or ellis moot I deye Daun John, I seye, lene me thuse hundred frankes

Pardee, I wol nat faille yow my thankes,
 If that yow list to doon that I yow praye
 For at a certeyn day I wol yow paye, *1380 And doon to yow what plesance and service
 That I may doon, right as yow list devise And but I do, God take on me vengeance
 As foul as evere hadde Genylon of France "

This gentel monk answerde in this
 manere 195

"Now trewely, myn owene lady dcere, I have," quod he, "on yow so greet a
 routhe
 That I yow swere, and plighte yow my
 trouthe,
 That whan youre housbonde is to Flaundres fare,
 I wol delivere yow out of this care, *1390
 For I wol bryngte yow an hundred frankes "

And with that word he caughte hire by the flankes,
 And hire embraceth harde, and kiste hire
 ofte

"Gooth now youre wey," quod he, "al
 stille and softe,
 And lat us dyne as soone as that ye
 may, 205

For by my chilyndre it is pryme of day Gooth now, and beeth as trewe as I shal be "

"Now elles God forbede, sire," quod she,
 And forth she gooth as jolif as a pye,
 And bad the cookes that they sholde hem
 hye, *1400

So that men myghte dyne, and that anon
 Up to hir housbonde is this wyf ygon,
 And knokketh at his countour boldely
 "Quy la?" quod he "Peter! it am I," Quod she, "what, sire, how longe wol ye
 faste? 215

How longe tyme wol ye rekene and caste Youre sommes, and youre bookes, and youre thynges?

The devel have part on alle swiche rekenynges!

Ye have ynough, pardee, of Goddes sonde Com down to-day, and lat youre bogges
 stonde *1410

Ne be ye nat ashamed that daun John Shal fasting al this day alenge goon?
 What! lat us heere a messe, and go we dyne "

"Wyf," quod this man, "litel kanstow devyne
 The curious bisynesse that we have 225
 For of us chapmen, also God me save,
 And by that lord that clepid is Seint Yve, Scarsly amonges twelve tweye shul
 thryve
 Continuelly, lastyng unto oure age
 We may wel make chiere and good
 visage, *1420
 And dryve forth the world as it may be,
 And kepen oure estaat in pryvetee, Til we be deed, or elles that we pleye
 A pilgrymage, or goon out of the weye
 And therefore have I greet necessitee 235 Upon this queynte world t'avysse me,
 For everemoore we moot stonde in drede
 Of hap and fortune in oure chapmanhede To Flaundres wol I go to-morwe at day, And come agayn, as soone as evere I
 may *1430
 For which, my deere wyf, I thee biseke,
 As be to every wight buxom and meke,
 And for to kepe oure good be curious,
 And honestly governe wel oure hous Thou hast ynough, in every maner
 wise, 245
 That to a thrifty houshold may suffice Thee lakketh noon array ne no vitaille, Of silver in thy purs shaltow nat faille"
 And with that word his countour-dore he
 shette,
 And doun he gooth, no lenger wolde he
 lette *1440
 But hastily a messe was ther seyde,
 And spedily the tables were yleyd,
 And to the dyner faste they hem spedde,
 And richely this monk the chapman fedde
 At after-dyner daun John sobrelly 255
 This chapman took apart, and prively He seyde hym thus "Cosyn, it standeth
 so,
 That wel I se to Brugges wol ye go God and seint Austyn spede yow and gyde!
 I prey yow, cosyn, wisely that ye ryde *1450 Governeth yow also of youre diete Atemprelly, and namely in this hete Bitwix us two nedeth no strange fare, Farewel, cosyn, God shulde yow fro care!
 And if that any thyng by day or nyght,
 If it lye in my power and my myght, 266

That ye me wol comande in any wyse,
 It shal be doon, right as ye wol devyse O thyng, er that ye goon, if it may be,
 I wolde prey yow, for to lene me *1460
 An hundred frankes, for a wyke or tweye,
 For certem beestes that I moste beye,
 To stoore with a place that is oures
 God helpe me so, I wolde it were youre!
 I shal nat faille surely of my day, 275
 Nat for a thousand frankes, a mile way
 But lat this thyng be secree, I yow prey,
 For yet to-nyght these beestes moot I beye
 And fare now wel, myn owene cosyn deere, Graunt mercy of youre cost and of youre
 cheere" *1470
 This noble marchant gentilly anon Answerde and seyde, "O cosyn myn, daun John,
 Now sikerly this is a smal requeste
 My gold is youre, whan that it yow leste,
 And nat only my gold, but my chaffare Take that yow list, God shilde that ye spare 286
 But o thyng is, ye knowe it wel ynogh,
 Of chapmen, that hir moneie is hir plogh
 We may creauce whil we have a name,
 But goldles for to be, it is no game *1480 Paye it agayn whan it lith in youre ese, After my myght ful fayn wolde I yow plese"
 These hundred frankes he fette forth
 anon,
 And prively he took hem to daun John No wight in al this world waste of this
 loone, 295
 Savyng this marchant and daun John allone
 They drynke, and speke, and rome a while and pleye,
 Til that daun John rideth to his abbeye
 The morwe cam, and forth this marchant rideth
 To Flaundres-ward, his prentys wel hym gydeth, *1490
 Til he cam into Brugges murly
 Now gooth this marchant faste and busily Aboute his nede, and byeth and creaunceth
 He nerther pleyeth at the dees ne daunceth, But as a marchaunt, shortly for to
 telle, 305
 He let his lyf, and there I lete hym dwelle

The Sondag next the marchant was agon, To Seint Denys ycomen is daun John,
With crowne and berd al fressh and newe yshave, *1499

In al the hous ther nas so litel a knave, Ne no wight elles, that he nas ful fayn For that my lord daun John was come
agayn

And shortly to the point right for to gon,
This faere wyf acorded with daun John That for thise hundred frankes he sholde al nyght 315

Have hire in his armes bolt upright,
And this acord parfourned was in dede
In myrthe al nyght a busy lyf they lede Til it was day, that daun John wente his
way,

And bad the meynee "farewel, have good
day!" *1510

For noon of hem, ne no wight in the toun, Hath of daun John right no suspicioun
And forth he rydeth hoom to his abbeye,
Or where hym list, namoore of hym I seye

This marchant, whan that ended was the fare, 325

To Seint Denys he gan for to repaire, And with his wyf he maketh feeste and
cheere,

And telleth hire that chaffare is so deere That nedes moste he make a chevyssaunce, For he was bounden in a reconys-
saunce *1520

To paye twenty thousand sheeld anon
For which this marchant is to Parys gon To borwe of certeine freendes that he
hadde

A certeyn frankes, and somme with him he ladde

And whan that he was come into the
toun, 335

For greet chiertee and greet affeccoun, Unto daun John he gooth first, hym to
pleye,

Nat for to axe or borwe of hym moneye,
But for to wite and seen of his welfare,
And for to tellen hym of his chaffare, As freendes doon whan they been met
yfeere *1531

Daun John hym maketh feeste and merye
cheere,

And he hym tolde agayn, ful specially,
How he hadde wel ybought and graciously,

Thanked be God, al hool his marchandise, Save that he moste, in alle maner wise, 346
Maken a chevyssaunce, as for his beste, And thanne he sholde been in joye and
reste

Daun John answerde, "Certes, I am
fayn *1539

That ye in heele ar comen hom agayn
And if that I were riche, as have I blisse, Of twenty thousand sheeld sholde ye nat
mysse,

For ye so kyndely this oother day Lente me gold, and as I kan and may,
I thank yow, by God and by seint Jame! 355

But natheles, I took unto oure dame, Youre wyf, at hom, the same gold ageyn Upon youre bench, she woot it wel,
certeyn,

By certeyn tokenes that I kan hire telle Now, by youre leve, I may no lenger
dwelle, *1550

Oure abbot wole out of this toun anon,
And in his compaignye moot I goon Grete wel oure dame, myn owene nece sweete,

And fare wel, deere cosyn, til we meete!" This marchant, which that was ful war
and wys, 365

Creanced hath, and payd eek in Parys
To certeyn Lumbardes, redy in hur hond, The somme of gold, and gat of hem hur
bond,

And hoom he gooth, mure as a papejay,
For wel he knew he stood in swich
array *1560

That nedes moste he wyne in that viage
A thousand frankes aboven al his costage

His wyf ful redy mette hym atte gate,
As she was wont of oold usage algate,
And al that nyght in myrthe they bi-
sette, 375

For he was riche and cleerly out of dette Whan it was day, this marchant gan embrace

His wyf al newe, and kiste hire on hur face,
And up he gooth and maketh it ful tough
"Namoore," quod she, "by God, ye have ynowgh!" *1570

And wantowly agayn with hym she
pleyde,

Til atte laste thus this marchant seyde

"By God," quod he, "I am a litel wrooth With yow my wyf, although it be me looth And woot ye why? by God, as that I
gesse 385

That ye han maad a manere straungenesse Bitwixen me and my cosyn daun John Ye sholde han warned me, er I had gon, That he yow hadde an hundred frankes payed

By redy token, and heeld hym yvele apayed, *1580

For that I to hym spak of chevyssaunce, Me semed so, as by his contenaunce
But nathelees, by God, oure hevене kyng,
I thoughte nat to axen hym no thyng
I prey thee, wyf, ne do namoore so, 395 Telle me alwey, er that I fro thee go,
If any dettour hath in myn absence Ypayed thee, lest thurgh thy necligence I myghte hym axe a thing that he hath payed "

This wyf was nat afered nor affrayed,
But boldely she seyde, and that anon, *1591
"Marie, I defie the false monk, daun John!
I kepe nat of his tokenes never a deel,
He took me certeyn gold, that woot I
weel, —

What! yvel thedam on his monkes snowte! 405

For, God it woot, I wende, withouten doute,
That he hadde yeve it me bycause of yow, To doon therwith myn honour and my
prow,

For cosyngage, and eek for beele cheere
That he hath had ful ofte tymes heere *1600
But sith I se I stonde in this disjoynt,
I wol answere yow shortly to the poynt Ye han mo slakkere dettours than am I!
For I wol paye yow wel and redily Fro day to day, and if so be I faille, 415
I am youre wyf, score it upon my taille,
And I shal paye as soone as ever I may For by my trouthe, I have on myn array,
And nat on wast, bistowed every deel,
And for I have bistowed it so weel *1610
For youre honour, for Goddes sake, I seye, As be nat wrooth, but lat us laughe and
pleye

Ye shal my joly body have to wedde,
By God, I wol nat paye yow but abedde!
Forgyve it me, myn owene spouse deere, Turne hiderward, and maketh bettre
cheere " 426

This marchant saugh ther was no remedie,

And for to chide it nere but fole, Sith that the thyng may nat amended be "Now wyf," he seyde, "and I foryeve it
thee, *1620

But, by thy lyf, ne be namoore so large Keep bet my good, this yeve I thee in charge "

Thus endeth now my tale, and God us
sende

Tallynge ynough unto oure lyves ende
Amen

Heere endeth the Shipmannes Tale

Bihould the murie wordes of the Hoost to the Shipman and to the lady Prioressse

"Wel seyde, by corpus domnus," quod
oure Hoost, 435

"Now longe moote thou saille by the cost, Sire gentil maister, gentil maryneer!
God yeve the monk a thousand last quade
yeer!

A ha! felawes! beth ware of swich a jape!
The monk putte in the mannes hood an ape, *1630

And in his wyves eek, by Seint Austyn!
Draweth no monkes moore unto youre
in

But now passe over, and lat us seke
aboute,

Who shal now telle first of al this route Another tale," and with that word he seyde,
As curteisly as it had been a mayde, 446
"My lady Prioressse, by youre leve,
So that I wiste I sholde yow nat greve,
I wolde demen that ye tellen sholde
A tale next, if so were that ye wolde *1640 Now wol ye vouche sauf, my lady deere?"

"Gladly," quod she, and seyde as ye shal heere

PROLOGUE OF THE Prioress's Tale

The Prologe of the Prioresses Tale

Domine dominus noster

"O Lord, oure Lord, thy name how mervellous

Is in this large world ysprad," quod she,
"For noight only thy laude precious 455 Parfourned is by men of dignitee,
But by the mouth of children thy bountee Parfourned is, for on the brest soukyng Sontyme shewen they thyn heriyng

Wherefore in laude, as I best kan or
may, *1650

Of thee and of the white lylie flour
Which that the bar, and is a mayde alway,
To telle a storne I wol do my labour, Nat that I may encreessen hir honour,
For she hirself is honour and the roote 465
Of bountee, next hir Sone, and soules boote

O mooder Mayde! o mayde Mooder free!
O bush unbrent, brennyng in Moyses
sighte,

That ravysheedest doun fro the Deitee,

Thurgh thyn humblesse, the Goost that in th'aighte, *1660

Of whos vertu, whan he thyn herte lighte, Conceyved was the Fadres sapience, Help me to telle it in thy reverence!

Lady, thy bountee, thy magnificence, Thy vertu, and thy grete humyltee, 475
Ther may no tonge expresse in no science,
For somtyme, Lady, er men praye to thee, Thou goost biforn of thy benyngnytee, And getest us the lyght, thurgh thy preyere,

To gyden us unto thy Sone so deere *1670

My konnyng is so wayk, o blisful Queene,
For to declare thy grete worthynesse
That I ne may the weighte nat susteene,
But as a child of twelf month cold, or lesse,
That kan unnethes any word expresse, 485 Right so fare I, and therfore I yow preyre, Gydeh my song that I shal of yow seye "

Explicit

THE Prioress's Tale

Heere bigynneth the Prioresses Tale

Ther was in Asye, in a greet citee, Amonges Cristene folk, a Jewerye, Sustened by a lord of that contree *1680
For foule usure and lucre of vileynye, Hateful to Crist and to his compaignye, And thurgh the strete men myghte ride or
wende,
For it was free and open at eyther ende

A litel scole of Cristen folk ther stood 495 Doun at the ferther ende, in which ther
were

Children an heep, ycomen of Cristen blood,

That lerned in that scole yeer by yeer Swich manere doctrine as men used there,
This is to seyn, to syngen and to rede, *1690
As smale children doon in hire childhede

Among these children was a wydwes sone,
A litel clergeon, seven yeer of age,
That day by day to scole was his wone,
And eek also, where as he saugh th'ymage
Of Cristes mooder, hadde he in usage, 506 As hym was taught, to knele adoun and
seye

His Ave Marie, as he goth by the weye

Thus hath this wydwe hir litel sone
ytaught *1699
Oure blisful Lady, Cristes mooder deere,
To worshipe ay, and he forgat it naught,
For sely child wol alday soone leere
But ay, whan I remembre on this mateere, Saint Nicholas stant evere in my presence,
For he so yong to Crust dide reverence 515

This litel child, his litel book lernynge,
As he sat in the scole at his prymer,
He Alma redemptoris herde syngre,
As children lerned hire antiphoner, And as he dorste, he drough hym ner and ner, *1710
And herkned ay the wordes and the noote, Til he the firste vers koude al by rote

Noight wiste he what this Latyn was to
seye,
For he so yong and tendre was of age
But on a day his felawe gan he preye 525 T'expounden hym this song in his langage, Or telle hym why this song was in usage, This preyde he hym to construe and declare Ful often tyme upon his knowes bare

His felawe, which that elder was than
he, *1720
Answerde hym thus "This song, I have herd seye,
Was maked of our blisful Lady free, Hire to salue, and eek hire for to preye To been oure help and socour whan we
deye 534
I kan namoore expounde in this mateere, I lerne song, I kan but smal grammeere"

"And is this song maked in reverence Of Cristes mooder?" seyde this innocent
"Now, certes, I wol do my diligence To konne it al er Cristemasse be went *1770 Though that I for my prymer shal be
shent,
And shal be beten thres in an houre,
I wol it konne Oure Lady for to honoure!"

His felawe taughte hym homward prively, Fro day to day, til he koude it by rote, 545
And thanne he song it wel and boldely, Fro word to word, acordynge with the note

Twies a day it passed thurgh his throte, To scoleward and homward whan he
wente, *1739
On Cristes mooder set was his entente

As I have seyde, thurghout the Juerie,
This litel child, as he cam to and fro, Ful murly than wolde he syngre and crie
O Alma redemptoris everemo
The swetnesse hath his herte perced so 555
Of Cristes mooder that, to hire to preye,
He kan nat stynte of syngynge by the weye

Oure firste foo, the serpent Sathanas, That hath in Jues herte his waspes nest, Up swal, and seide, "O Hebrayk peple,
allas! *1750
Is this to yow a thyng that is honest, That swich a boy shal walken as hym lest In youre despit, and syngre of swich sentence
Which is agayn youre lawes reverence?"

Fro thennes forth the Jues han conspired 565
This innocent out of this world to chace
An homycide therto han they hyred,
That in an aleye hadde a privee place,
And as the child gan forby for to pace,
This cursed Jew hym hente, and heeld hym faste, *1760
And kitte his throte, and in a pit hym
caste

I seye that in a wardrobe they hym threwe Where as thise Jewes purgen hire entraille O cursed folk of Herodes al newe, What may youre yvel entente yow availl? 575
Mordre wol out, certeyn, it wol nat faille,
And namely ther th'onour of God shal sprede,
The blood out cræth on youre cursed dede

O martir, sowded to virginitee, Now maystow syngen, folwynge evere in
oon *1770
The white Lamb celestial — quod she —
Of which the grete evaungelist, Saint
John,
In Pathmos wroot, which seith that they that goon

Biforn this Lamb, and synge a song al
newe,
That nevere, flesshly, wommen they ne
knewe 585

This poure wydwe awaiteth al that
nyght
After hir litel child, but he cam noght,
For which, as soone as it was dayes lyght,
With face pale of drede and busy thocht, She hath at scole and elleswhere hym soght, *1780
Til finally she gan so fer espie
That he last seyn was in the Juerie

With moodres pitee in hir brest enclosed, She gooth, as she were half out of hir
mynde,
To every place where she hath supposed 595
By liklihedde hir litel child to fynde, And evere on Cristes mooder meeke and
kynde
She cride, and atte laste thus she wroghte, Among the cursed Jues she hym soghte

She frayneth and she preyeth pitously *1790
To every Jew that dwelte in thulke place,
To telle hire if hir child wente oght forby
They seyde "nay", but Jhesu, of his grace, Yaf in hir thocht, inwith a litel space, That in that place after hir sone she cryde, 605
Where he was casten in a pit bisyde

O grete God, that parfournest thy laude By mouth of innocentz, lo, heere thy
myght!
This gemme of chastite, this emeraude,
And eek of martirdom the ruby bright, Ther he with throte ykorven lay up-
right, *1801
He Alma redemptoris gan to synge
So loude that al the place gan to ryng

The Cristene folk that thurgh the stretre
wente
In coomen for to wondre upon this
thyng, 615
And hastily they for the provost sente,
He cam anon withouten taryng,
And hereth Crist that is of hevene kyng,

And eek his mooder, honour of man-
kynde, *1809
And after that the Jewes leet he bynde

This child with pitous lamentacioun Up taken was, syngynge his song alway,
And with honour of greet processoun
They caren hym unto the nexte abbay His mooder swownynge by the beere loyer, 625
Unnethe myghte the peple that was there This newe Rachel brynge fro his beere

With torment and with shameful deeth echon
This provost dooth thise Jewes for to sterve
That of this mordre wiste, and that
anon *1820
He nolde no swich cursednesse observe
"Yvele shal have that yvele wol deserve", Therefore with wilde hors he dide hem
drawe,
And after that he heng hem by the lawe

Upon this beere ay lith this innocent 635
Biforn the chief auter, whil masse laste,
And after that, the abbot with his covent Han sped hem for to burien hym ful faste,
And whan they hooly water on hym caste, Yet spak this child, whan spreynd was hooly water, *1830
And song O Alma redemptoris mater!

This abbot, which that was an hooly
man,
As monkes been, or elles oghte be,
This yonge child to conjure he bigan,
And seyde, "O deere child, I halse thee,
In vertu of the hooly Trinitee, 646
Tel me what is thy cause for to synge, Sith that thy throte is kut to my semyng?"

"My throte is kut unto my nekke boon," Seyde this child, "and, as by wey of
kynde, *1840
I sholde have dyed, ye, longe tyme agon
But Jesu Crist, as ye in bookes fynde, Wil that his glorie laste and be in mynde,

And for the worship of his Mooder deere Yet may I syng O Alma loude and cleere

“This welle of mercy, Cristes mooder
sweete, 656

I loved alwey, as after my konnyng,
And whan that I my lyf sholde forlete,
To me she cam, and bad me for to syng
This anthem verraily in my deyyng, As ye han herd, and whan that I hadde
songe, *1851
Me thoughte she leyde a greyn upon my
tonge

“Wherefore I syng, and syng I moot
certeyn,

In honour of that blisful Mayden free, Til fro my tonge of taken is the greyn, 665
And after that thus seyde she to me ‘My litel child, now wol I fecche thee, Whan that the greyn is fro thy tonge ytake Be nat agast, I wol thee nat forsake’ ”

This hooly monk, this abbot, hym meene I, *1860
His tonge out caughte, and took away the greyn,

And he yaf up the goost ful softly
And whan this abbot hadde this wonder
seyn,

His salte teers trikled down as reyn, 674
And gruf he fil al plat upon the grounde,
And stille he lay as he had ben ybounde

The covent eek lay on the pavement Wepyng, and heryen Cristes mooder
deere,

And after that they ryse, and forth been went,

And taken away this martir from his
beere, *1870

And in a tombe of marbul stones cleere Enclosen they his litel body sweete Ther he is now, God leve us for to meete!

O yonge Hugh of Lyncoln, slayn also With cursed Jewes, as it is notable, 685
For it is but a litel while ago, Preye eek for us, we synful folk unstable,
That, of his mercy, God so merciable On us his grete mercy multiple,
For reverence of his mooder Marie
Amen *1880

Heere is ended the Prioresses Tale

PROLOGUE TO SIR THOPAS

Bihold the murye wordes of the Hoost to Chaucer

Whan seyde was al this miracle, every man
As sobre was that wonder was to se, Til thatoure hooste jopen the bigan,
And thanne at erst he looked upon me,
And seyde thus, “What man artow?”
quod he, 695

“Thou lookest as thou woldest fynde an hare,
For evere upon the ground I se thee stare

“Approche neer, and looke up murily Now war yow, sures, and lat this man have
place!

He in the waast is shape as wel as I, *1890
This were a popet in an arm t'enbrace

For any womman, smal and fair of face
He semeth elvyssh by his contenance,
For unto no wight dooth he daliaunce

“Sey now somewhat, syn oother folk han

SIR THOPAS

Heere bigynneth Chaucers Tale of Thopas

The First Fit

Listeth, lordes, in good entent,
And I wol telle verrayment
Of myrthe and of solas,
Al of a knyght was fair and gent
In bataille and in tourneyment, His name was sire Thopas

Yborn he was in fer contree, In Flaundes, al byyonde the see,
At Poperyng, in the place
His fader was a man ful free,
And lord he was of that contree,
As it was Goddes grace

Sire Thopas wax a doghty swayn, Whit was his face as payndemayn,
His lippes rede as rose,
His rode is lyk scarlet in grayn,
And I yow telle in good certayn,
He hadde a semely nose

His heer, his berd was lyk saffroun, That to his girdel raughte adoun,
His shoon of cordewane
Of Brugges were his hosen broun,
His robe was of syklatoun,
That coste many a jane

He koude hunte at wilde deer,
And ride an haukyng for river
With grey goshawk on honde, Therto he was a good archeer,
Of wrastlyng was ther noon his peer,
Ther any ram shal stonde

Ful many a mayde, bright in bour,
They moorne for hym paramour, Whan hem were bet to slepe,
But he was chaast and no lechour,
And sweete as is the brembul flour That bereth the rede hepe

And so bifel upon a day,
For sothe, as I yow telle may, Sire Thopas wolde out ride
He worth upon his steede gray,

And in his hand a launcegay,
A long sword by his side

He priketh thurgh a fair forest, Therinne is many a wilde best,
Ye, bothe bukke and hare,
And as he priketh north and est,
I telle it yow, hym hadde almost Bitid a sory care

Ther spryngen herbes grete and smale,
The lycorys and the cetewale,
And many a clowe-gylofre,
And notemuge to putte in ale,
Whether it be moyste or stale,
Or for to leye in cofre

The briddes synge, it is no nay,
The sparhawk and the papejay,
That joye it was to heere,
The thrustelcock made eek his lay,
The wodedowve upon the spray
She sang ful loude and cleere

Sire Thopas fil in love-longynge, Al whan he herde the thrustel synge,
And pryked as he were wood His faire steede in his prikyng
So swatte that men myghte hum wryng,
His sydes were al blood

Sire Thopas eek so wery was For prikyng on the softe gras,
So fiers was his corage,
That doue he leyde him in that plas
To make his steede som solas, And yaf hym good forage

"O seinte Marie, benedicite!
What eyleth this love at me
To bynde me so soore?
Me dremed al this nyght, pardee, An elf-queene shal my lemman be
And slepe under my goore

"An elf-queene wol I love, ywis, For in this world no womman is

THE TALE OF MELIBEE

Heere bigynneth Chaucers Tale of Melibee

A yong man called Melibeus, myghty and riche, bigat upon his wyf, that called was Prudence, a doghter which that called was Sophie /

Upon a day bifel that he for his desport is went into the feeldes hym to pleye / His wyf and eek his doghter hath he left inwith his hous, of which the dores weren faste yshette / Thre of his olde foes han it espyed, and setten laddres to the walles of his hous, and by wyndowes been entred, / and betten his wyf, and *2160 wounded his doghter with fyve mortal woundes in fyve sondry places, —/ this is to seyn, in hur feet, in hire handes, in hur erys, in hur nose, and in hire mouth, — and leften hire for deed, and wenten
away /

Whan Melibeus retourned was in to his hous, and saugh al this meschef, he, lyk a mad man, rentynge his clothes, gan to wepe and crie /

Prudence, his wyf, as ferforth as she dorste, bisoghte hym of his wepyng for to stynthe, / but nat forthy he gan to crie and wepen evere lenger the moore / 975

This noble wyf Prudence remem-bred hire upon the sentence of Ovide, in his book that cleped is the Remedie of Love, where as he seith / "He is a fool that destourbeth the mooder to wepen in the deeth of hire child, til she have wept hur fille as for a certain tyme, / and thanne shal man doon his dilgencce with amyable wordes hire to reconforte, and preyen hire of hur wepyng for to stynthe" / For which resoun this noble wyf Prudence suffred hur housbonde for to wepe and crie as for a certain space, / and whan she saugh hur tyme, she seyde hym in this wise "Allas, my lord," quod she, "why make ye youreself for to be lyk a fool? / For sothe it aperteneth nat *2170 to a wys man to maken swich a sorwe / Youre doghter, with the grace of God, shal warisshe and escape / And, al were it so that she right now were deed, ye ne oughte nat, as for hur deeth, youreself to destroye / Senek seith 'The wise man shal nat take to greet disconfort for the deeth of his children, / but, certes, he sholde suffren it in pacience as wel as he abideth the deeth of his owene propre personne "' / 985

This Melibeus answerde anon, and seyde, "What man," quod he, "sholde of his wepyng stente that hath so greet a cause for to wepe? / Jhesu Crist, oure Lord, hymself wepte for the deeth of Lazarus hys freend" /

Prudence answerde "Certes, wel I woot attempree wepyng is no thyng defended to hym that sorweful is, amonges folk in sorwe, but it is rather graunted hym to wepe / The Apostle Paul unto the Romayns writeth, 'Man shal rejoyse with hem that maken joye, and wepen with swich folk as wepen' / But though at-tempree wepyng be ygraunted, outrageous wepyng certes is defended / *2180 Mesure of wepyng sholde be considered, after the loore that techeth us Senek / 'Whan that thy frend is deed,' quod he, 'lat nat thyne eyen to moyste been of teeris, ne to mucche drye, although the teeris come to thyne eyen, lat hem nat falle,/ and whan thou hast forgoon thy freend, do diligence to gete another freend, and this is moore wysdom than for to wepe for thy freend which that thou has lorn, for therinne is no boote / And therefore, if ye governe yow by sapience, put away sorwe out of youre herte / Remembre yow that Jhesus Syrak seith, 'A man that is joyous and glad in herte, it hym conserveth flourishyng in his age, but soothly sorweful herte maketh his bones drye' / 995 He seith eek thus, that sorwe in herte sleeth ful many a man / Salomon seith that right as motthes in the shepes flees anoyeth to the clothes, and the smale wormes to the tree, right so anoyeth sorwe to the herte / Wherefore us oghte, as wel in the deeth of oure children as in the los of oure othere goodes temporels, have pacience / Remembre yow upon the pacient Job / Whan he hadde lost his children and his temporel substance, and in his body endured and receyved ful many a grevous tribulacion, yet seyde he thus / 'Oure Lord hath yeve it me, oure Lord hath biraft it me, right as oure Lord hath wold, right so it is doon, blessed be the name of oure Lord!' / *2190

To thise forseide thynges answered Melibeus unto his wyf Prudence 'Alle thy wordes,' quod he, "been sothe, and therto profitable, but trewely myn herte is troubled with this sorwe so grevously that I noot what to doone" /

"Lat calle," quod Prudence, "thy trewe freendes alle, and thy lynage whiche that been wise / Telleth youre cas, and herkneth what they seye in consellyng, and yow governe after hire sentence / Salomon seith, 'Werk alle thy thynges by conseil, and thou shalt never repente'" /

Thanne, by the conseil of his wyf Prudence, this Melibeus leet callen a greet congregacion of folk, / as surgiens, phisiciens, olde folk and yonge, and somme of his olde enemys reconciled as by hir semblaunt to his love and into his grace, / and therwithal ther 1005 coomen somme of his neighbores that didnen hym reverence moore for drede than for love, as it happeth ofte / Ther

coomen also ful many subtille flatereres, and wise advocatz lerned in the lawe /

And whan this folk togidre assembled weren, this Melibeus in sorweful wise shewed hem his cas / And by the manere of his speche it semed that in herte he baar a cruell ire, redy to doon vengeance upon his foes, and soodeynly desired that the werre sholde bigynne, / but nathelees, yet axed he hire conseil upon this matiere / A surgien, by licence and *2200 assent of swiche as weren wise, up roos, and to Melibeus seyde as ye may heere /

"Sire," quod he, "as to us surgiens aperteneth that we do to every wight the beste that we kan, where as we been withholde, and to oure pacientz that we do no damage, / wherefore it happeth many tyme and ofte that whan twey men han everich wounded oother, oon same surgien heeleth hem bothe, / wherefore unto oure art it is nat pertinent to norice werre ne parties to supporte / But certes, as to the warisshyng of youre doghter, al be it so that she perilously be wounded, we shullen do so ententif bisynesse fro day to nyght that with the grace of God she shal be hool and sound as soone as is possible" / 1015

Almost right in the same wise the phisiciens answerden, save that they seyden a fewe woordes moore / that right as maladies been cured by hir contraries, right so shul men warisshe werre by vengeance /

His neighbores ful of envye, his feyned freendes that semeden reconciled, and his flatereres / maden semblant of wepyng, and empereden and agreggeden muchel of this matiere in preisyng greetly Melibee of myght, of power, of richesse, and of freendes, despisyng the power of his adversaries, / and seiden outrelly that he anon sholde wreken hym on his foes, and bigynne werre / *2210

Up roos thanne an advocat that was wys, by leve and by conseil of othere that were wise, and seide / "Lordynges, the nede for which we been assembled in this place is a ful hevvy thyng and an heigh matiere, / by cause of the wrong and of the wikkednesse that hath be doon, and eek

by resoun of the grete damages that in tyme comynge been possible to fallen for this same cause,/ and eek by resoun of the grete richesse and power of the parties bothe,/ for the whiche resouns it were a ful greet peril to erren in this matiere / Wherefore, Melibeus, this 1025 is oure sentence we conseilte yow aboven alle thyng that right anon thou do thy diligence in keypynge of thy propre persone in swich a wise that thou ne wante noon espie ne wacche, thy persone for to save / And after that we conseilte that in thyn hous thou sette sufficient garnisoun so that they may as wel thy body as thyn hous defende / But certes, for to moeve werre, ne sodeynly for to doon vengeance, we may nat demen in so litel tyme that it were profitable / Wherefore we axen leysur and espace to have deliberacion in this cas to deme / For the commune proverbe seith thus 'He that soone deemeth, soone shal repente' / And eek men seyn that *2220 thilke juge is wys that soone understondeth a matiere and juggeth by leysur,/ for, al be it so that alle taryng be anyful, algates it is nat to repreve in yevynge of judgement ne in vengeance takynge, whan it is sufficient and resonable / And that shewed oure Lord Jhesu Crist by ensample, for whan that the womman that was taken in avowtrie was brought in his presence to knowen what sholde be doon with hire persone, al be it so that he wiste wel hymself what that he wolde answer, yet ne wolde he nat answer sodeynly, but he wolde have deliberacion, and in the ground he wroot twies / And by these causes weaxen deliberacioun, and we shal thanne, by the grace of God, conseilte thee thyng that shal be profitable /

Up sturten thanne the yonge folk atones, and the mooste partie of that compaignye han scorned these olde wise men, and bigonnen to make noyse, and seyden that/ right so as, whil 1035 that iren is hoot, men sholden smyte, right so men sholde wrenken hir wronges whil that they been fresshe and newe, and with loud voys they criden "Werre! werre!" /

Up roos tho oon of these olde wise, and with his hand made contenance that men sholde holden hem stille and yeven hym audience / "Lordynges," quod he, "ther is ful many a man that crETH 'Werre! werre!' that woot ful litel what werre amounteth / Werre at his bigynnyng hath so greet an entryng and so large, that every wight may entre whan hym liketh, and lightly fynde werre,/ but certes, what ende that shal therof bifalle, it is nat light to knowe / For soothly, whan *2230 that werre is ones bigonne, ther is ful many a child unborn of his mooder that shal sterve yong by cause of thilke werre, or elles lyve in sorwe and dye in wrecchednesse / And therefore, er that any werre bigynne, men moste have greet conseil and greet deliberacion" / And whan this olde man wende to enforchen his tale by resons, wel ny alle atones bigonne they to rise for to breken his tale, and beden hym ful ofte his wordes for to abregge / For soothly, he that precheth to hem that listen nat heeren his wordes, his sermon hem anoiet / For Jhesus Syrak seith that "musik in wepyng is a noyous thyng", this is to seyn as muche availleth to speken bifore folk to which his speche anoyeth, as it is to synge biforn hym that wepeth / And whan this wise 1045 man saugh that hym wanted audience, al shamefast he sette hym doun agayn / For Salomon seith "Ther as thou ne mayst have noon audience, enforce thee nat to speke" / "I see wel," quod this wise man, "that the commune proverbe is sooth, that 'good conseil wanteth whan it is moost nede'" /

Yet hadde this Melibeus in his conseil many folk that prively in his eere counselled hym certeyn thyng, and counselled hym the contrarie in general audience /

Whan Melibeus hadde herd that the gretteste partie of his conseil weren accorded that he sholde maken werre, anon he consented to hir consellyng, and fully affermed hire sentence / Thanne *2240 dame Prudence, whan that she saugh how that hir housbonde shoop hym for to wrenken hym on his foes, and to bigynne werre, she in ful humble wise, whan she saugh hir tyme, seide to hym these wordes / "My lord," quod she,

"I yow biseche as hertely as I dar and kan, ne haste yow nat to faste, and for alle gerdons, as yeveth me audience / For Piers Alfonse seith, 'Whoso that dooth to thee oother good or harm, haste thee nat to quiten it, for in this wise thy freend wole abyde, and thyn enemy shal the lenger lyve in drede' / The proverbe seith, 'He hasteth wel that wisely kan abyde,' and in wikked haste is no profit" /

This Melibee answerde unto his wyf Prudence "I purpose nat," quod he, "to werke by thy conseil, for many causes and resouns For certes, every wight wolde holde me thanne a fool, / this 1055 is to seyn, if I, for thy consellyng, wolde chaungen thynges that been or-deyned and affermed by so manye wyse / Secoundly, I seye that alle women been wikke, and noon good of hem alle For 'of a thousand men,' seith Salomon,
'I foond o good man, but certes, of alle wommen, good womman foond I nevere' / And also, certes, if I governed me by thy conseil, it sholde seme that I hadde yeve to thee over me the maistrie, and God forbede that it so weere! / For Jhesus Syрак seith that 'if the wyf have maistrie, she is contrarious to hir housbonde' / And Salomon seith 'Nevere in thy lyf to thy wyf, ne to thy child, ne to thy freend, ne yve no power over thyself, for bettere it were that thy children aske of thy persone thynges that hem nedeth, than thou see thyself in the handes of thy children' / And also if I wolde *2250 werke by thy consellyng, certes, my conseil moste som tyme be secree, til it were tyme that it moste be knowe, and this ne may nocht be / [Car il est escript, la genlerie des femmes ne puet riens celler fors ce qu'elle ne scet / Apres, le philosopre dit, en mauvais conseil les femmes vainquent les hommes et par ces raisons je ne dois point user de ton conseil /

Whanne dame Prudence, ful debon-arily and with greet pacience, hadde herd al that hir housbonde liked for to seye, thanne axed she of hym licence for to speke, and seyde in this wise / "My lord," quod she, "as to youre firste resoun, certes it may lightly been answered For I seye that it is no folte to chaunge conseil whan the thyng is chaunged, or elles whan the thyng semeth ootherweyes than it was biforn / And mooreover, I seye 1065 that though ye han sworn and bi-hight to perforce youre emprise, and nathelless ye weyve to perforce thilke same emprise by juste cause, men sholde nat seyn therfore that ye were a liere ne forsworn / For the book seith that 'the wise man maketh no lesyng whan he turneth his corage to the bettere' / And al be it so that youre emprise be establissed and ordeyned by greet multitude of folk, yet thar ye nat accomplice thilke ordinauce, but yow like / For the trouthe of thynges and the profit been rather founden in fewe folk that been wise and ful of resoun, than by greet multitude of folk ther every man crieth and clatereth what that hym liketh Soothly swich multitude is nat honest / And as to the seconde resoun, where as ye seyn that alle women been wikke, save youre grace, certes ye despisen alle women in this wyse, and 'he that al despis-eth, al displeseth,' as seith the book / *2260 And Senec seith that 'whoso wole have sapience shal no man dispresye, but he shal gladly techen the science that he kan withouten presumpcion or pride, / and swiche thynges as he nocht ne kan, he shal nat been ashamed to lerne hem, and enquire of lasse folk than hymself' / And, sure, that ther hath been many a good womman, may lightly be preved / For certes, sire, oure Lord Jhesu Crist wolde nevere have descended to be born of a womman, if alle women hadden ben wikke / And after that, for the grete bountee that is in wommen, oure Lord Jhesu Crist, whan he was risen fro deeth to lyve, appeered rather to a womman than to his Apostles / And 1075 though that Salomon seith that he ne foond nevere womman good, it folweth nat therfore that alle women ben wikke / For though that he ne foond no good womman, certes, many another man hath founden many a womman ful good and trewe / Or elles, per aventure, the entente of Salomon was this, that, as in sovereyn bounte, he foond no womman, this is to seyn, that ther is no wight that hath sovereyn bountee save God allone, as he hymself recordeth in hys Evaungelie / For ther nys no creature so good that hym ne wanteth somewhat of the perfeccoun of God, that is his makere / Youre thridde reson is *2270 this ye seyn that if ye governe yow by my conseil, it sholde seme that ye hadde yeve me the maustre and the lordshipe over youre persone / Sire, save youre grace, it is nat so For if it so were that no man sholde be conselled but oonly of hem that hadden lordshipe and maustre of his persone, men wolden nat be conselled so ofte / For soothly thilke man that asketh conseil of a purpos, yet hath he free choys whether he wole werke by that conseil or noon / And as to youre fourthe resoun, ther ye seyn that the janglerie of wommen kan hyde thynges that they wot nocht, as who seith that a womman kan nat hyde that she woot, / sire, these wordes been under-stonde of wommen that been jangleresses and wikked, / of whiche wom- 1085 men men seyn that thre thynges dryven a man out of his hous, that is to seyn, smoke, droppying of reyn, and wikked wyves, / and of swiche wommen seith Salomon that 'it were bettre dwelle in desert than with a womman that is riotous' / And sire, by youre leve, that am nat I, / for ye han ful ofte assayed my grete silence and my grete pacience, and eek how wel that I kan hyde and hele thynges that men oghte secreely to hyde / And soothly, as to youre fifthe resoun, where as ye seyn that in wikked conseil wommen venquisshe men, God woot, thilke resoun stant heere in no stede / *2280

 For understood now, ye asken conseil to do wikkednesse, / and if ye wole werken wikkednesse, and youre wif restreyneth thilke wikked purpos, and overcometh yow by reson and by good conseil, / certes youre wyf oghte rather to be preised than yblamed / Thus sholde ye understonde the philosopre that seith,

 'In wikked conseil wommen venquisshe hir housbondes' / And ther as ye blamen alle wommen and hir resouns, I shal shewe yow by manye ensamples that many a womman hath ben ful good, and yet been, and hir consails ful hool-some and profitable / Eek som 1095 men han seyð that the consellynge of wommen is outhere to deere, or elles to litel of pris / But al be it so that ful many a womman is badde, and hir conseil vile and nocht worth, yet han men founde ful many a good womman, and ful discret and wis in consellynge / Loo, Jacob, by good conseil of his mooder Rebekka, wan the benysoun of Ysaak his fader, and the lordshipe over alle his bretheren / Judith, by hire good conseil, delivered the citee of Bethulie, in which she dwelled, out of the handes of Olofernus, that hadde it biseged and wolde have al destroyed it / Abygaal delivered Nabal hir housbonde fro David the kyng, that wolde have slayn hym, and apaysed the ire of the kyng by hir wit and by hir good consellyng / Hester, by hir good con- *2290 seil, enhanced greetly the peple of God in the regne of Assuerus the kyng / And the same bountee in good consellyng of many a good womman may men telle / And mooreover, whanoure Lord hadde creat Adam,oure forme fader, he seyde in this wise / 'It is nat good to been a man allone, make we to hym an helpe semblable to hymself' / Heere may ye se that if that wommen were nat goode, and hir consails goode and profitable, /oure Lord God of hevене 1105 wolde nevere han wrought hem, ne called hem help of man, but rather confusoun of man / And ther seyde oones a clerk in two vers, 'What is bettre than gold? Jaspere What is bettre than jaspere?
 Wisedoom / And what is better than wisdom? Womman And what is bettre than a good womman? Nothyng' / And, sire, by manye of othre resouns may ye seen that manye wommen been goode, and hir consails goode and profitable / And therefore, sire, if ye wol tryste to my conseil, I shal restoore yow youre doghter hool and sound/ And eek *2300 I wol do to yow so muche that ye shul have honour in this cause”/

Whan Melibee hadde herd the wordes of his wyf Prudence, he seyde thus / “I se wel that the word of Salomon is sooth He seith that ‘wordes that been spoken discreetly by ordinaunce been honycombes, for they even swetnesse to the soule and hoolsomnesse to the body’/ And, wyf, by cause of thy sweete wordes, and eek for I have assayed and preved thy grete sapience and thy grete trouthe, I wol governe me by thy conseil in alle thyng”/

“Now, sire,” quod dame Prudence, “and syn ye vouche sauf to been governed by my conseil, I wol enforme yow how ye shul governe yourself in chesyng of youre conseilours / Ye 1115 shul first in alle youre werkes mekely biseken to the heighe God that he wol be youre conseilour,/ and shapeth yow to swich entente that he yeve yow conseil and confort, as taughte Thobie his sone / ‘At alle tymes thou shalt blesse God, and praye hym to dresse thy weyes, and looke that alle thy counsels been in hym for everemoore’/ Seint Jame eek seith ‘If any of yow have nede of sapience, axe it of God’/ And afterward thanne shul ye taken conseil in youreself, and examyne wel youre thoghtes of swich thyng as yow thinketh that is best for yowre profit / And thanne shul ye *2310 dryve fro youre herte thre thynges that been contrariouse to good conseil,/ that is to seyn, ire, covetise, and hastif-
nesse /

First, he that axeth conseil of hymself, certes he moste been withouten ire, for manye causes / The firste is this he that hath greet ire and wratthe in hymself, he weneþ alwey that he may do thyng that he may nat do / And secoundely, he that is irous and wrooth, he ne may nat wel deme,/ and he that may nat wel 1125 deme, may nat wel conselle / The thridde is this, that he that is irous and wrooth, as seith Senec, ne may nat speke but blameful thynges,/ and with his vicious wordes he stureth oother folk to angre and to ire / And eek, sire, ye moste dryve covetise out of youre herte / For the Apostle seith that covetise is roote of alle harmes / And trust wel *2320 that a covetous man ne kan noght deme ne thynke, but only to fulfill the ende of his covetise,/ and certes, that ne may nevere been accomplice, for evere the moore habundaunce that he hath of richesse, the moore he desireth / And, sire, ye moste also dryve out of youre herte hastifnesse, for certes,/ ye ne may nat deeme for the beste by a sodeyn thought that falleth in youre herte, but ye moste avyse yow on it ful ofte / For, as ye herde her biforn, the commune proverbe is thus, that ‘he that soone deemeth, soone repenteth’/ Sire, ye ne be 1135 nat alwey in lyk disposicion,/ for certes, somthyng that somtyme semeth to yow that it is good for to do, another tyme it semeth to yow the contrarie /

Whan ye han taken conseil in youreself, and han deemed by good deliberacion swich thyng as you semeth best,/ thanne rede I yow that ye kepe it secree / Biwrey nat youre conseil to no persone, but if so be that ye wenen sikerly that thurgh youre biwreyng youre condicoun shal be to yow the moore profitable / For *2330 Jhesus Syrak seith, ‘Neither to thy foo, ne to thy frend, discovere to thy secree ne thy folie,/ for they wol yeve yow audience and lookyng and supportacion in thy presence, and scorne thee in thy absence’/ Another clerk seith, that ‘scarsly shaltou fynden any persone that may kepe conseil secretly’/ The book seith, ‘Whil that thou kepest thy conseil in thy herte, thou kepest it in thy prisoun,/ and whan thou biwrest thy conseil to any wight, he holdeth thee in his snare’/ And therefore yow 1145 is bettere to hyde youre conseil in yowre herte than praye him to whom ye han biwreyed youre conseil that he wole kepen it cloos and stille / For Seneca seith ‘If so be that thou ne mayst nat thyñ owene conseil hyde, how darstou prayen any oother wight thy conseil secretly to kepe?’/ But natheless, if thou wene sikerly that the biwreyng of thy consel to a persone wol make thy con-dicion to stonden in the bettre plyt, thanne shaltou tellen hym thy conseil in this wise / First thou shalt make no semblant whether thes were levere pees or werre, or this or that, ne shewe hym nat thy wille and thyn entente / For trust wel that comunli these conseil-lours been flatereres, / namely the *2340 conseillours of grete lordes, / for they enforcen hem alwey rather to speken plesante wordes, enclynnye to the lordes lust, than wordes that been trewe or profitable / And therefore men seyn that the riche man hath seeld good conseil, but if he have it of hymself /

And after that thou shalt considere thy freendes and thyne enemies / And as touchynge thy freendes, thou shalt considere which of hem been moost faithful and moost wise and eldest and most approved in consellyng, / and of 1155 hem shalt thou aske thy conseil, as the caas requireth / I seye that first ye shul clepe to youre conseil youre freendes that been trewe / For Salomon seith that 'right as the herte of a man delteth in savour that is soote, right so the conseil of trewe freendes yeveth swetnesse to the soule' / He seith also, 'Ther may no thyng be likned to the trewe freend, / for certes gold ne silver ben nat so muche worth as the goode wyl of a trewe freend' / And eek he seith that 'a *2350 trewe freend is a strong deffense, who so that it fyndeth, certes he fyndeth a greet tresour' / Thanne shul ye eek considere if that youre trewe freendes been discrete and wise / For the book seith, 'Axe alwey thy conseil of hem that been wise' / And by this same resoun shul ye clepen to youre conseil of youre freendes that been of age, swiche as han seyn and been expert in manye thynges and been approved in consellynges / For the book seith that 'in olde men is the sapience, and in longe tyme the prudence' / And Tullus seith that 'grete thynges ne been nat ay accompliched by strengthe, ne by delvernesse of body, but by good conseil, by auctoritee of persones, and by science, the whiche thre thynges ne been nat fieble by age, but certes they enforcen and encreescen day by day' / 1165 And thanne shul ye kepe this for a general reule / First shul ye clepen to youre consel a fewe of youre freendes that been especial, / for Salomon seith, 'Manye freendes have thou, but among a thousand chese thee oon to be thy conseilour' / For al be it so that thou first ne telle thy consel but to a fewe, thou mayst afterward telle it to mo folk if it be nede / But looke alwey that thy conseilours have thilke thre condicions that I have seyd bifore, that is to seyn, that they be trewe, wise, and of oold experyence / And werke nat alwey in every nede by oon conseillour alone, for somtyme bihooveth it to been conselled by manye / For Salomon seith, 'Sal- *2360 vacacion of thynges is where as ther been manye conseilours' /

Now, sith that I have toold yow of which folk ye sholde been counselled, now wol I teche yow which conseil ye oghte to eschewe / First, ye shul eschue the consellyng of foolles, for Salomon seith, 'Taak no conseil of a fool, for he ne kan nought conselle but after his owene lust and his affectioun' / The book seith that 'the propeteie of a fool is thus he troweth lightly harm of every wight, and lightly troweth alle bountee in hymself' / Thou shalt eek eschue the consellyng of alle flatereres, swiche as enforcen hem rather to preise youre persone by flaterye than for to telle yow the soothfastnesse of thynges / Wherefore Tullus seith, 1175
'Amonges alle the pestilences that been in freendshipe the gretteste is flat-erie' And therefore is it moore nede that thou eschue and drede flatereres than any oother peple / The book seith, 'Thou shalt rather drede and flee fro the sweete wordes of flaterynge preisers than fro the egre wordes of thy freend that seith thee thy sothes' / Salomon seith that 'the wordes of a flaterere is a snare to cacche with innocet' / He seith also that 'he that spekech to his freend wordes of swetnesse and of ples-aunce, setteth a net biforn his feet to cacche hym' / And therefore seith Tullus,

'Enclyne nat thyne eres to flatereres, ne taak no conseil of the wordes of flaterye' / And Caton seith, 'Avysee *2370 thee wel, and eschue the wordes of swetnesse and of plesaunce' / And eek thou shalt eschue the consellyng of thyne olde enemys that been reconciled / The book seith that 'no wight retourneth saufully into the grace of his olde enemy' / And Isope seith, 'Ne trust nat to hem to whiche thou hast had som tyme werre or enemytee, ne telle hem nat thy conseil' / And Seneca telleth the cause why 'It may nat be,' seith he, 'that where greet fyr hath longe tyme endured, that ther ne dwelleth som vapour of warmnesse' / And therefore seith Sal- 1185 omon, 'In thyn olde foo trust nevere' / For sikerly, though thyn enemy be reconciled, and maketh thee chiere of humylitee, and lowteth to thee with his heed, ne trust hym nevere / For certes he maketh thulke feyned humilitee moore for his profit than for any love of thy persone, by cause that he deemeth to have victorie over thy persone by swich feyned contenance, the which victorie he myghte nat have by strif or werre / And Peter Alfonse seith, 'Make no felawshipe with thyne olde enemys, for if thou do hem bountee, they wol perverten it into wikkednesse' / And eek thou most eschue the consellyng of hem that been thy servantz and beren thee greet reverence, for peraventure they seyn it moore for drede than for love / And ther- *2380 fore seith a philosopre in this wise

Ther is no wight parfitly trewe to hym that he to soore dredeth' / And Tullius seith, 'Ther nys no myght so greet of any emperour that longe may endure, but if he have moore love of the peple than drede' / Thou shalt also eschue the conselling of folk that been dronkelewe, for they ne kan no conseil hyde / For Salomon seith, 'Ther is no privetee ther as regneth dronkenesse' / Ye shul also han in suspect the consellyng of swich folk as conseilte yow o thyng prively, and conseilte yow the contrame openly / 1195 For Cassidone seith that 'it is a manere sleighte to hyndre, whan he sheweth to doon o thyng openly and werke eth prively the contrarie' / Thou shalt also have in suspect the consellyng of wikked folk For the book seith, 'The consellyng of wikked folk is alway ful of fraude' / And David seith, 'Blisful is that man that hath nat folwed the consellyng of shrewes' / Thou shalt also eschue the consellyng of yong folk, for hir conseil is nat rype /

Now, sire, sith I have shewed yow of which folk ye shul take youre conseil, and of which folk ye shul folwe the conseil, / now wol I teche yow how *2390 ye shal examyne youre conseil, after the doctrine of Tullus / In the examynynge thanne of youre conseilour ye shul considere manye thynges / Alderfirst thou shalt considere that in thulke thyng that thou purposost, and upon what thyng thou wolt have conseil, that verray trouthe be seyed and conserved, this is to seyn, telle trewely thy tale / For he that seith fals may nat wel be counselled in that cas of which he heth / And after this thou shalt considere the thynges that accorden to that thou purposost for to do by thy conseilours, if resoun accorde therto, / and eek 1205 if thy myght may atteine therto, and if the moore part and the bettre part of thy conseilours acorde therto, or noon / Thanne shaltou considere what thyng shal folwe of that consellyng, as hate, pees, werre, grace, profit, or damage, and manye othere thynges / And in alle these thynges thou shalt chese the beste, and weyve alle othere thynges / Thanne shaltou considere of what roote is engendred the matiere of thy conseil, and what fruyt it may conceyve and engendre / Thou shalt eek considere alle these causes, fro whennes they been sprongen / *2400 And whan ye han examyned youre conseil, as I have seyed, and which partie is the bettre and moore profitable, and han approved it by manye wise folk and olde, / thanne shaltou considere if thou mayst parfourne it and maken of it a good ende / For certes, resoun wol nat that any man sholde bigynne a thyng, but if he myghte parfourne it as hym oghte, / ne no wight sholde take upon hym so hevye a charge that he myghte nat bere it / For the proverbe seith, 'He that to muche embraceth, distreyneth litel' / And 1215 Catoun seith, 'Assay to do swich thyng as thou hast power to doon, lest that the charge oppresse thee so soore that thee bihoveth to weyve thyng that thou hast bigonne' / And if so be that thou be in doute whether thou mayst parfourn a thynge or noon, chese rather to suffre than bigynne / And Piers Alphonse seith, 'If thou hast myght to doon a thyng of which thou most repente, it is bettre

'nay' than 'ye'' / This is to seyn, that thee is bettre holde thy tonge stille than for to speke / Thanne may ye understonde by strengre reasons that if thou hast power to parfourn a werk of which thou shalt repente, thanne is it bettre that thou suffre than bigynne / Wel seyn they that de- *2410 fenden every wight to assaye a thyng of which he is in doute whether he may parfourn it or noon / And after, whan ye han examyned youre conseil, as I have seyd bifore, and knowen wel that ye may parfourn youre emprise, conferme it thanne sadly til it be at an ende /

Now is it resoun and tyme that I shewe yow whanne and wherfore that ye may change youre conseilours withouten youre repreve / Soothly, a man may chaungen his purpos and his conseil if the cause cesseth, or whan a newe caas bitydeth / For the lawe seith that 'upon thynges that newly bityden bihoveth newe conseil' / And Senec 1225 seith, 'If thy conseil is comen to the eers of thyn enemy, change thy conseil' / Thou mayst also change thy conseil if so be that thou fynde that by errour, or by oother cause, harm or damage may bityde / Also if thy conseil be dishonest, or ellis cometh of dishonest cause, change thy conseil / For the lawes seyn that 'alle bihestes that been dishoneste been of no value', and eek if so be that it be impossible, or may nat goodly be parfourned or kept / *2420

And take this for a general reule, that every conseil that is affirmed so strongly that it may nat be changed for no condicioun that may bityde, I seye that thilke conseil is wikked' /

This Melibeus, whanne he hadde herd the doctrine of his wyf dame Prudence, answerde in this wyse / "Dame," quod he, "as yet into this tyme ye han wel and covenably taught me as in general, how I shal governe me in the chesyng and in the withholdyng of my conseilours / But now wolde I fayn that ye wolde condescende in especial, and telle me how liketh yow, or what semeth yow, by oure conseillours that we han chosen in oure present nede" / 1235

"My lord," quod she, I "biseke yow in al humblesse that ye wol nat wilfully replie agayn my resouns, ne distempere youre herte, thogh I speke thyng that yow displese / For God woot that, as in myn entente, I speke it for youre beste, for youre honour, and for youre profite eke / And soothly, I hope that youre benyngnytee wol taken it in pacience / Trusteth me wel," quod she, "that youre conseil as in this caas ne sholde nat, as to speke properly, be called a conseillyng, but a mocioun or a moevyng of folye, in which conseil ye han erred in many a sondry
wise / *2430

First and forward, ye han erred in th'assemblyng of youre conseilours / For ye sholde first have cleped a fewe folk to youre conseil, and after ye myghte han shewed it to mo folk, if it hadde been nede / But certes, ye han sodeynly cleped to youre conseil a greet multitude of peple, ful chargeant and ful anoyous for to heere / Also ye han erred, for theras ye sholden oonly have cleped to youre conseil youre trewe frendes olde and wise, ye han ycleped straunge folk, yonge folk, false flatereres, and enemys reconsiled, and folk that doon yow reverence withouten love / And eek 1245 also ye have erred, for ye han brought with yow to youre conseil ire, covetise, and hastifnesse, the whiche thre thynges been contrarious to every conseil honest and profitable, the whiche thre thynges ye han nat amentassed or destroyed hem, neither in youreself, ne in youre conseil-lours, as yow oghte / Ye han erred also, for ye han shewed to youre conseilours youre talent and youre affeccoun to make werre anon, and for to do vengeance / They han espied by youre wordes to what thyng ye been enclyned, / and *2440 therefore han they rather counselled yow to youre talent than to youre profit / Ye han erred also, for it semeth that yow suffiseth to han been counselled by thise conseilours oonly, and with ltel avys, / whereas in so greet and so heigh a nede it hadde been necessarie mo conseilours and moore deliberacion to parfourne youre emprise / Ye han erred also, for ye ne han nat examvned youre conseil in the forseide manere, ne in due manere, as the caas requireth / Ye han erred also, for ye han maked no division bitwixe youre conseilours, this is to seyn, bitwixen youre trewe freendes and youre feyned conseilours, / ne ye 1255 han nat knowe the wil of youre trewe freendes olde and wise, / but ye han cast alle hire wordes in an hochebot, and enclyned youre herte to the moore part and to the gretter nombre, and there been ye condescended / And sith ye woot wel that men shal alwey fynde a gretter nombre of fooles than of wise men, / and therefore the counsels that been at congregaciouns and multitudes of folk, there as men take moore reward to the nombre than to the sapience of persones, / ye se wel that in swiche conseillynges fooles han the maistris / *2450

Melibeus answerde agayn, and seyde, "I graunte wel that I have erred, / but there as thou hast toold me heerbiorn that he nys nat to blame that chaungeth his conseilours in certain caas and for certaine juste causes, / I am al redy to change my conseilours right as thou wolt devyse / The proverbe seith that 'for to do synne is mannyssh, but certes for to persevere longe in synne is werk of the devel'" /

To this sentence answered anon dame Prudence, and seyde / "Examineth," quod she, "youre conseil, and lat us see the whiche of hem han spoken most resonably, and taught yow

best conseil / And for as muche as that the examynacion is necessarie, lat us bigynne at the surgiens and at the phisiciens, that first speeken in this matiere / I sey yow that the surgiens and phisiciens han seyde yow in youre conseil discreetly, as hem oghte, / and in hir speche seyden ful wisely that to the office of hem aperteneth to doon to every wight honour and profit, and no wight for to anoye, / and after hir craft to doon greet diligence unto the cure of hem which that they han in hir governaunce / And, sire, right as *2460 they han answered wisely and discreetly, / right so rede I that they been heighly and sovereynly gerdoned for hir noble speche, / and eek for they sholde do the moore ententif bisynesse in the curacion of youre doghter deere / For al be it so that they been youre freendes, therefore shal ye nat suffren that they serve yow for noght, / but ye oghte the rather gerdone hem and shewe hem youre largesse / And as touchynge the 1275 proposicioun which that the phisiciens encreesceden in this caas, this is to seyn, / that in maladies that oon contrarie is warissed by another contrarie, / I wolde fayn knowe hou ye understonde thilke text, and what is youre sentence" /

"Certes," quod Melibeus, "I understonde it in this wise / that right as they han doon me a contrarie, right so sholde I doon hem another / For *2470 right as they han venged hem on me and doon me wrong, right so shal I venge me upon hem and doon hem wrong, / and thanne have I cured oon contrarie by another" /

"Lo, lo," quod dame Prudence, "how lightly is every man enclined to his owene desir and to his owene plesaunce / Certes," quod she, "the wordes of the phisiciens ne sholde nat han been understonden in thys wise / For certes, wikkednesse is nat contrarie to wikkednesse, ne vengeance to vengeance, ne wrong to wrong, but they been semblable / And therefore o vengeance is 1285 nat warissed by another vengeance, ne o wroong by another wroong, / but everich of hem encreesceth and aggreggeth oother / But certes, the wordes of the phisiciens sholde been understanden in this wise / For good and wikkednesse been two contraries, and pees and werre, vengeance and suffraunce, discord and accord, and manye othere thynges / But certes, wikkednesse shal be warissed by goodnesse, discord by accord, werre by pees, and so forth of othere thynges / And *2480 heerto accordeth Seint Paul the Apostle in manye places / He seith

 'Ne yeldeth nat harm for harm, ne wikked speche for wikked speche, / but do wel to hym that dooth thee harm, and blesse hym that seith to thee harm' / And in manye othere places he amonesteth pees and accord / But now wol I speke to yow of the conseil which that was yeven to yow by the men of lawe and the wise folk, / that seyden alle by oon ac- 1295 cord, as ye han herd bfore, / that over alle thynges ye shal doon youre dil-gence to kepen youre persone and to warnestoore youre hous, / and seyden also that in this caas yow oghten for to werken ful avyseyd with greet deliberacioun / And, sire, as to the firste point, that toucheth to the keypyng of youre persone, / ye shul understonde that he that hath werre shal everemoore mekely and devoutly preyen, biforn alle thynges, / *2490 that Jhesus Crst of his mercy wol han hym in his proteccion and been his sovereyn helpyng at his nede / For certes, in this world ther is no wight that may be conselled ne kept sufficently withouten the keypyng of oure Lord Jhesu Crst / To this sentence accordeth the prophete David, that seith, / 'If God ne kepe the citee, in ydel waketh he that it kepeth' / Now, sire, thanne shul ye committe the keypyng of youre persone to youre trewe freendes, that been approved and yknowe, / and of hem shul ye axen 1305 help youre persone for to kepe For Catoun seith 'If thou hast nede of help, axe it of thy freendes, / for ther nys noon so good a phisicien as thy trewe freend' / And after this thanne shul ye kepe yow fro alle straunge folk, and fro lyeres, and have alwey in suspect hire compaignye / For Piers Alfonse seith, 'Ne taak no compaignye by the weye of a straunge man, but if so be that thou have knowe hym of a lenger tyme / And if so be that he falle into thy compaignye paraventure, withouten thyn assent, / enquere *2500 thanne as subtilly as thou mayst of his conversacion, and of his lyf bfore, and feyne thy wey, seye that thou wolt thuder as thou wolt nat go, / and if he bereth a spere, hoold thee on the right syde, and if he bere a swerd, hoold thee on the left syde' / And after this thanne shul ye kepe yow wisely from all swich manere peple as I have seyde bfore, and hem and hur conseil eschewe / And after this thanne shul ye kepe yow in swich manere / that, for any presumpcion of youre strengthe, that ye ne dispuse nat, ne acounte nat the myght of youre adversarie so litel, that ye lete the keypyng of youre persone for youre presumpcioun, / for every wys man 1315 dredeth his enemy / And Salomon seith 'Weleful is he that of alle hath drede, / for certes, he that thurgh the hardynesse of his herte, and thurgh the hardynesse of hymself, hath to greet presumpcioun, hym shal yvel bityde' / Thanne shul ye everemoore countrewayte embusschementz and alle espialle / For Senec seith that 'the wise man that dredeth harmes, eschueth harmes, / ne he ne falleth *2510 into perils that perils eschueth' / And al be it so that it seme that thou art in siker place, yet shaltow alwey do thy digence in keypyng of thy persone, / this is to seyn, ne be nat nechgent to kepe thy persone, nat onlyn for thy gretteste enemys, but fro thy leeste enemy / Senec seith

 'A man that is well avyseyd, he dredeth his leeste enemy' / Ovyde seith that 'the litel wesele wol slee the grete bole and the wilde hert' / And the book 1325 seith, 'A litel thorn may prikke a kyng ful soore, and an hound wol holde the wilde boor' / But natheles, I sey nat thou shalt be so coward that thou doute ther wher as is no drede / The book seith that 'somme folk han greet lust to deceyve, but yet they dreden hem to be deceyved' / Yet shaltow drede to been empoisoned, and kepe yow from the compaignye of scorneres. / For the book seith, 'With scorneres make no compaignye, but flee hire wordes as venym / *2520

Now, as to the seconde point, where as youre wise conseilours counselled yow to warnestooore youre hous with gret diligence, / I wolde fayn knowe how that ye understonde thilke wordes and what is youre sentence /

Melibeus answerde, and seyde, "Certes, I understande it in this wise That I shal warnestooore myn hous with toures, swiche as han castelles and othere manere edifices, and armure, and artelries, / by whiche thynges I may my persone and myn hous so kepen and defenden that myne enemys shul been in drede myn hous for to approche" /

To this sentence answerde anon Prudence "Warnestoorng," quod she, "of heighe toures and of grete edifices apperteyneth somtyme to pryde / 1335 And eek men make heighe toures, and grete edifices with grete costages and with gret travaille, and whan that they been accompliced, yet be they nat worth a stree, but if they be defended by trewe frendes that been olde and wise / And understood wel that the gretteste and strongeste garnysoun that a riche man may have, as wel to kepen his persone as his goodes, is / that he be biloved with hys subgetz and with his neighebores / For thus seith Tullius, that 'ther is a manere garnysoun that no man may venquysse ne disconfit, and that is / a lord to be biloved of his citezens and of his peple' / *2530

Now, sire, as to the thridde point, where as youre olde and wise conseilours seyden that yow ne oghte nat sodeynly ne hastily proceden in this nede, / but that yow oghte purveyen and apparallen yow in this caas with gret diligence and gret de-liberacioun, / trewely, I trowe that they seyden right wisely and right sooth / For Tullus seith 'In every nede, er thou bigynne it, appaalle thee with gret diligence' / Thanne seye I that in vengeance takyng, in werre, in bataille, and in warnestoorng, / er thou bigynne, I 1345 rede that thou appaalle thee therto, and do it with gret deliberacion /

For Tullius seith that 'longe apparaillynge biforn the bataille maketh short victorie' / And Cassidorus seith, 'The garnysoun is stronger, whan it is longe tyme avysed' /

But now lat us speken of the conseil that was accorded by youre neighebores, swiche as doon yow reverence withouten love, / youre olde enemys reconciled, youre flatereres, / that counselled yow cer- *2540 teyne thynges prively, and openly conseilleden yow the contrarie, / the yonge folk also, that conseilleden yow to venge yow, and make werre anon / And certes, sire, as I have seyde biforn, ye han greetly erred to han cleped swich manere folk to youre conseil, / which conseilours been ynogh reprieved by the resouns aforeseyd / But natheless, lat us now descende to the special Ye shuln first procede after the doctrine of Tullius / Certes, 1355 the trouthe of this matiere, or of this consel, nedeth nat diligently enquire, / for it is wel wist whiche they been that han doon to yow this trespas and vileynye, / and how manye trespasours, and in what manere they han to yow doon al this wrong and al this vileynye / And after this thanne shul ye examyne the seconde condicion which that the same Tullius addeth in this ma-tiere / For Tullius put a thyng which that he clepeth 'consentyng', this is to seyn, / who been they, and *2550 whiche been they and how manye, that consenten to thy conseil in thy wilful-nesse to doon hastif vengeance / And lat us considere also who been they, and how manye been they, and whiche been they, that consenteden to youre adversaries / And certes, as to the firste poynt, it is wel known whiche folk been they that consenteden to youre hastif wilfulness, / for trewely, alle tho that conseilleden yow to maken sodeyn werre ne been nat youre frendes / Lat us now considere whiche been they that ye holde so greetly youre frendes as to youre persone / 1365 For al be it so that ye be myghty and riche, certes ye ne been but alone, / for certes ye ne han no child but a doghter, / ne ye ne han bretheren, ne cosyns garmayns ne noon oother neigh kynrede, / wherfore that youre enemys for drede sholde stante to plede with yow, or to destroye youre persone / Ye knowen also that youre richesces mooten been dispended in diverse parties, / and whan that *2560 every wight hath his part, they ne wollen taken but litel reward to venge thy deeth / But thyne enemys been thre, and they han mane children, bretheren, cosy ns, and oother ny kynrede / And though so were that thou haddest slayn of hem two or three, yet dwellen ther ynowe to wrenken hir deeth, and to sle thy persone / And though so be that youre kynrede be moore siker and stedefast than the kyn of youre adversarie, / yet natheles youre kynrede nys but a fer kynrede, they been but litel syb to yow, / and the kyn of 1375 youre enemys been ny syb to hem And certes, as in that, hir condicoun is bet than youre / Thanne lat us considere also if the consellyng of hem that conselle den yow to taken sodeyn vengeance, whether it accorde to resoun / And certes, ye knowe wel 'nay' / For, as by right and resoun, ther may no man taken vengeance on no wight but the juge that hath the jurisdiccoun of it, / whan it is graunted hym to take thilke vengeance hastily or attempely, as the lawe requireth / *2570 And yet mooreover of thilke word that Tullus clepeth 'consentyng', / thou shalt considere if thy myght and thy power may consenten and suffice to thy wilfulnesse and to thy consellours / And certes thou mayst wel seyn that 'nay' / For sikerly, as for to speke proprely, we may do no thyng, but oonly swich thyng as we may doon rightfully / And certes rightfully ne mowe ye take no vengeance, as of youre propre auctoritee / Thanne 1385 mowe ye seen that youre power ne consenteth, nat ne accordeth nat, with youre wilfulnesse /

Lat us now examyne the thridde point, that Tullus clepeth 'consequent' / Thou shal understonde that the vengeance that thou purposet for to take is the consequent, / and therof folweth another vengeance, peril, and werre, and othere damages withoute nombre, of whiche we be nat war, as at this tyme /

And as touchyng the fourthe point, that Tullus clepeth 'engendryng', / thou shalt considere *2580 that this wrong which that is doon to thee is engendred of the hate of thyne enemys, / and of the vengeance takyng upon that wolde engendre another vengeance, and muchel sorwe and wastyng of richesces, as I seyde /

Now, sire, as to the point that Tullus clepeth 'causes,' which that is the laste point, / thou shalt understonde that the wrong that thou hast receyved hath certene causes, / whiche that clerkes clepen Oriens and Efficiens, and Causa longinqua and Causa propinqua, this is to seyn, the fer cause and the ny cause / 1395 The fer cause is almyghty God, that is cause of alle thynges / The neer cause is thy thre enemys / The cause accidental was hate / The cause material been the fyve woundes of thy doghter / The cause formal is the manere of hir werkyng that broghten laddres and cloumben in at thy wyndowes / The cause final *2590 was for to sle thy doghter It letted nat in as muche as in hem was / But for to speken of the fer cause, as to what ende they shul come, or what shal finally bryde of hem in this caas, ne kan I nat deeme but by coniectyng and by supposyng / For we shul suppose that they shul come to a wikked ende, / by cause that the Book of Decrees seith, 'Seelden, or with greet peyne, been causes ybrought to good ende whanne they been baddely bigonne' /

Now, sire, if men wolde axe me why that God suffred men to do yow this vileynye, certes, I kan nat wel answer, as for no soothfastnesse / For th'apostle 1405 seith that 'the sciences and the juggementz of oure Lord God almyghty been ful depe, / ther may no man comprehendene ne serchen hem suffisantly' / Natheles, by certeyne presumpciouns and coniectynges, I holde and bileeve / that God, which that is ful of justice and of rightwisnesse, hath suffred this bityde by juste cause resonable /

Thy name is Melibee, this is to seyn, 'a man that drynketh hony' / *2600 Thou hast ydronke so muchel hony of sweete temporeel richesces, and delices and honours of this world,/ that thou art dronken, and hast forgeten Jhesu Crist thy creatur / Thou ne hast nat doon to hym swich honour and reverence as thee oughte, ne thou ne hast nat wel ytaken kep to the wordes of Ovide, that seith,/ 'Undei the hony of the goodes of the body is hyd the venym that sleeth the soule' / 1415 And Salomon seith, 'If thou hast founden hony, ete of it that suffiseth,/ for if thou ete of it out of mesure, thou shalt spewe,' and be nedy and povre / And peraventure Crist hath thee in despit, and hath turned away fro thee his face and his eiris of misericorde,/ and also he hath suffred that thou hast been punysshed in the manere that thou hast ytrespassed / Thou hast doon synne agayn oure Lord Crist,/ for certes, the three *2610 enemys of mankynde, that is to seyn, the flesh, the feend, and the world,/ thou hast suffred hem entre in to thyn herte wilfully by the wyndowes of thy body,/ and hast nat defended thyself suffisantly agayns hure assautes and hure temptaciouns, so that they han wounded thy soule in fyve places,/ this is to seyn, the deedly synnes that been entred into thyn herte by thy fyve wittes / And in the same manere oure Lord Crist hath wood and suffred that thy three enemys been entred into thyn hous by the wyndowes,/ 1425 and han ywounded thy doghter in the forseide manere' /

"Certes," quod Melibee, "I se wel that ye enforce yow muchel by wordes to overcome me in swich manere that I shal nat venge me of myne enemys,/ shewyng me the perils and the yveles that myghten falle of this vengeance / But whoso wolde considere in alle vengeances the perils and yveles that myghte sewe of vengeance takyng,/ a man wolde nevere take vengeance, and that were harm,/ for *2620 by the vengeance takyng been the wikked men dissevered fro the goode men, and they that han wyl to do wikkednesse restreynen hir wikked purpos, whan they seen the punyssynge and chastisyng of the trespassours' /

Et a ce respondit dame Prudence, "Certes," dist elle, "je t'otroye que de vengeance vent molt

*de maulx et de biens, / Mais vengeance n'ap-partient pas a un chascun fors seulement aux juges et a ceulx qui ont la juridiccion sur les maufaitteurs / And yet seye I moore, that right as a singular persone synneth in takyng vengeance of another man,/ 1435 right so synneth the juge if he do no vengeance of hem that it han disseiued / For Senec seith thus 'That maister,' he seith, 'is good that proveth shrewes' / And as Cassidore seith, 'A man dredeth to do outrages whan he woot and knoweth that it displeseth to the juges and the sovereyns' / And another seith, 'The juge that dredeth to do right, maketh men shrewes' / And Seint Paul the Apostle seith in his Epistle, whan he writeth unto the Romayns, that 'the juges beren nat the spere withouten cause,/ but 2630 they beren it to punyssen the shrewes and mysdoeres, and for to defende the goode men' / If ye wol thanne take vengeance of youre enemys, ye shul retourne or have youre recours to the juge that hath the juridiccion upon hem,/ and he shal punyssen hem as the lawe axeth and requere' /

"A" quod Melibee, "this vengeance liketh me no thyng / I bithenke me now and take heed how Fortune hath norissed me fro my childhede, and hath holpen me to passe many a stroong paas / 1445 Now wol I assayen hire, trowyng, with Goddes help, that she shal helpe me my shame for to venge' /

"Certes," quod Prudence, "if ye wol werke by my conseil, ye shul nat assaye Fortune by no wey,/ ne ye shul nat lene or bowe unto hire, after the word of Senec, for 'thynges that been folly doon, and that been in hope of Fortune, shullen nevere come to good ende' / And, as the same Senec seith, 'The moore cleer and the moore shynyng that Fortune is, the moore brotil and the sonner broken she is' / Trusteth nat in hire, for *2640 she nys nat stidefast ne stable,/ for whan thou trowest to be moost seur or siker of hire help, she wol faille thee and deceyve thee / And where as ye seyn that Fortune hath norissed yow fro youre childhede,/ I seye that in so muchel shul ye the lasse truste in hire and in hir wit / For Senec seith, 'What man that is norressed by Fortune, she maketh hym a greet fool' / Now thanne, syn ye desire 1455 and axe vengeance, and the vengeance that is doon after the lawe and bi-fore the juge ne liketh yow nat, / and the vengeance that is doon in hope of Fortune is perloous and uncertem, / thanne have ye noon oother remedie but for to have youre recours unto the sovereyn Juge that veng-eth alle vileynyes and wronges / And he shal venge yow after that hymself witness-eth, where as he seith, / 'Leveth the vengeance to me, and I shal do it' / *2650

Melibee answerde, "If I ne venge me nat of the vileynye that men han doon to me, / I sompne or warne hem that han doon to me that vileynye, and alle othere, to do me another vileynye / For it is writen, 'If thou take no vengeance of an old vileynye, thou sompnest thyne adversaries to do thee a newe vileynye' / And also for my suffraunce men wolden do me so muchel vileynye that I myghte neither bere it ne susteene, / and so sholde I been put and holden over-lowe / For men seyn, 'In muchel 1465 suffrynge shul manye thynges falle unto thee whiche thou shalt nat mowe suffre' /

"Certes," quod Prudence, "I graunte yow that over-muchel suffraunce is nat good / But yet ne folweth it nat therof that every persone to whom men doon vileynye take of it vengeance, / for that aperteneth and longeth al oonly to the juges, for they shul venge the vileynyes and injures / And therefore tho two auctoritees that ye han seyde above been oonly understonden in the juges / For whan *2660 they suffren over-muchel the wronges and the vileynyes to be doon withouten punysshynge, / they sompne nat a man al oonly for to do newe wronges, but they comanden it / Also a wys man seith that 'the juge that correcteth nat the synnere comandeth and biddeth hym do synne' / And the juges and sovereyns myghten in hir land so muchel suffre of the shrewes and mysdoeres, / that they sholden, by swich suffraunce, by proces of tyme wexen of swich power and myght that they sholden putte out the juges and the sovereyns from hir places, / and atte laste maken 1475 hem lesen hire lordshipes /

But lat us now putte that ye have leve to venge yow / I seye ye been nat of myght and power as now to venge yow, / for if ye wole maken comparisoun unto the myght of youre adversaries, ye shul fynde in manye thynges that I have shewed yow er this that hire condicion is bettre than yours / And therefore seye I that it is good as now that ye suffre and be pacient / *2670

Forthermoore, ye knowen wel that after the comune sawe, 'it is a woodnesse a man to stryve with a strengre or a moore myghty man than he is hymself, / and for to stryve with a man of evene strengthe, that is to seyn, with as strong a man as he is, it is peril, / and for to stryve with a weyker man, it is folie' / And therefore sholde a man flee stryvynge as muchel as he myghte / For Salomon seith, 'It is a greet worsupe to a man to kepen hym fro noyse and stryf' / And 1485 if it so bifalle or happe that a man of gretter myght and strengthe than thou art do thee grevaunce, / stude and biseye thee rather to stille the same grevaunce than for to venge thee / For Senec seith that 'he putteth hym in greet peril that stryveth with a gretter man than he is hymself' / And Catoun seith, 'If a man of hyer estat or degree, or moore myghty than thou do thee any or grevaunce, suffre hym, / for he that oones hath greved thee, may another tyme releve thee and helpe' / Yet sette I caas, ye have *2680 bothe myght and licence for to venge yow, / I seye that ther be ful manye thynges that shul restreynne yow of vengeance takyng, / and make yow for to encline to suffre, and for to han pacience in the wronges that han been doon to yow / First and foreward, if ye wole considere the defautes that been in youre owene persone, for whiche defautes God hath suffred yow have this tribulacioun, as I have seyde yow heer-bifore / For the 1495 poete seith that 'we oghte paciently taken the tribulacions that comen to us.

whan we thynken and consideren that we han disserved to have hem' / And Seint Gregorie seith that 'whan a man considereth wel the nombre of his defautes and of his synnes, / the peynes and the tribulaciouns that he suffreth semen the lesse unto hym, / and in as muche as hym thynketh his synnes moore hevvy and grevous, / in so muche semeth his peyne the lighter and the esier unto hym' / *2690

Also ye owen to encline and bowe youre herte to take the pacience of oure Lord Jhesu Crist, as seith seint Peter in his Epistles / 'Jhesu Crist,' he seith, 'hath suffred for us and yeven ensample to every man to folwe and sewe hym, / for he dide nevere synne, ne nevere cam ther a vileyns word out of his mouth / Whan men cursed hym, he cursed hem noght, and whan men betten hym, he manaced hem noght' / Also the grete pacience which the seintes that been in Paradys han had in tribulaciouns that they han ysuffred, withouten hir desert or gilt, / 1505

oghte muchel stiren yow to pacience / Forthermoore ye sholde enforce yow to have pacience, / consideringe that the tribulaciouns of this world but litel while endure, and soone passed been and goon, / and the joye that a man seketh to have by pacience in tribulaciouns is perdurable, after that the Apostle seith in his epistle / 'The joye of God,' he seith, 'is perdurable,' that is to seyn, everelastyng / Also troweth and *2700

bileveth stedefastly that he nys nat wel ynorissed, ne wel ytaught, that kan nat have pacience, or wol nat receive pacience / For Salomon seith that 'the doctrine and the wit of a man is knowen by pacience' / And in another place he seith that 'he that is pacient governeth hym by greet prudence' / And the same Salomon seith, 'The angry and wrathful man maketh noyses, and the pacient man atempreth hem and stilleth' / He seith also, 'It is moore worth to be pacient than for to be right strong, / and he 1515 that may have the lordshupe of his owene herte is moore to preyse than he that by his force or strengthe taketh grete citees' / And therefore seith Seint Jame in his Epistle that 'pacience is a greet vertu of perfeccioun' /

"Certes," quod Melibee, "I graunte yow, dame Prudence, that pacience is a greet vertu of perfeccioun, / but every man may nat have the perfeccioun that ye seken, / ne I nam nat of the nombre of right parfite men, / for myn herte *2710 may nevere been in pees unto the tyme it be venged / And al be it so that it was greet peril to myne enemys to do me a vileynye in takyng vengeance upon me, / yet token they noon heed of the peril, but fulfilleden hir wikked wyl and hir corage / And therefore me thynketh men oghten nat repreve me, though I putte me in a litel peril for to venge me, / and though I do a greet excesse, that is to seyn, that I venge oon outrage by another" / 1525

"A," quod dame Prudence, "ye seyn youre wyl and as yow liketh, / but in no caas of the world a man sholde nat doon outrage ne excesse for to vengen hym / For Cassidore seith that 'as yvele dooth he that vengeth hym by outrage as he that dooth the outrage' / And therefore ye shul venge yow after the ordre of right, that is to seyn, by the laws, and noght by excesse ne by outrage / And also, if ye wol venge yow of the outrage of youre adversaries in oother manere than right comandeth, ye synnen / And therefore *2720 seith Senec that 'a man shal nevere vengen shrewednesse by shrewednesse' / And if ye seye that right axeth a man to defenden violence by violence, and fighting by fighting, / certes ye srye sooth, whan the defense is doon anon withouten intervale or withouten taryng or delay, / for to defenden hym and nat for to vengen hym / And it bihoveth that a man putte swich attemperance in his defense / 1535

that men have no cause ne matiere to repreven hym that deffendeth hym of excesse and outrage, for ellis were it agayn resoun / Pardee, ye knowen wel that ye maken no defense as now for to defende yow, but for to venge yow, / and so seweth it that ye han no wyl to do youre dede attemprely / And therefore me thynketh that pacience is good, for Salomon seith that 'he that is nat pacient shal have greet harm' /

“Certes,” quod Melibee, “I graunte yow that whan a man is impacient and wrooth, of that that toucheth hym noght and that aperteneth nat unto hym, though it harme hym, it is no wonder / For the *2730 lawe seith that ‘he is coupable that entremetteth hym or medleth with swych thyng as aperteneth nat unto hym’ / And Salomon seith that ‘he that entremetteth hym of the noyse or strif of another man is lyk to hym that taketh an hound by the eris’ / For right as he that taketh a straunge hound by the eris is outhurwhile biten with the hound, / right in the same wise is it resoun that he have harm that by his impacience medleth hym of the noyse of another man, whereas it aperteneth nat unto hym / But ye knowen wel that this dede, that is to seyn, my grief and my disese, toucheth me right ny / And 1545 therefore, though I be wrooth and impacient, it is no meruelle / And, savyngge youre grace, I kan nat seen that it myghte greetly harme me though I tooke vengeance / For I am richer and moore myghty than myne enemys been, / and wel knowen ye that by moneye and by havynge grete possessions been alle the thynges of this world governed / And Salomon seith that ‘alle thynges obeyen to moneye’” / *2740

Whan Prudence hadde herd hir housbonde avanten hym of his richesse and of his moneye, dispresyngge the power of his adversaries, she spak, and seyde in this wise / “Certes, deere sere, I graunte yow that ye been riche and myghty, / and that the riches been goode to hem that han wel ygeten hem and wel konne usen hem / For right as the body of a man may nat lyven withoute the soule, namoore may it lyve withouten temporeel goodes / And by richeses may a man gete hym grete freendes / And therefore 1555 seith Pamphilles ‘If a net-herdes doghter,’ seith he, ‘be riche, she may chesen of a thousand men which she wol take to hir housbonde, / for, of a thousand men, oon wol nat forsaken hire ne refusen hire’ / And thus Pamphilles seith also ‘If thow be right happy’ — that is to seyn, if thow be right riche — ‘thou shalt fynde a greet nom-

bre of felawes and freendes / And if thy fortune change that thou wexe povre, farewell freendshipe and felaweshipe, / for thou shalt be balloon withouten any compaignye, but if it be the compaignye of povre folk’ / And yet seith this Pam- *2750 philles moreover that ‘they that been thralle and bonde of lynage shullen been maad worthy and noble by the riches’ / And right so as by richeses ther comen manye goodes, right so by poverté come ther manye harmes and yveles / For greet poverté constreyneth a man to do manye yveles / And therefore clepeth Cassidore poverté the mooder of ruyne, / that is to seyn, the mooder of overthrowngge or fallynge doun / 1565 And therefore seith Piers Alfonse ‘Oon of the gretteste adversitees of this world is / whan a free man by kynde or of burthe is constreyned by poverté to eten the almese of his enemy’ / and the same seith Innocent in oon of his bookes He seith that ‘sorweful and myshappy is the condicoun of a povre beggere, / for if he axe nat his mete, he dyeth for hunger, / and if he axe, he dyeth for shame, and algates necessitee constreyneth hym to axe’ / And therefore seith Salo- *2760 mon that ‘bet it is to dye than for to have swich poverté’ / And as the same Salomon seith, ‘Bette it is to dye of bitter deeth than for to lyven in swich wise’ / By thus reson that I have seid unto yow, and by manye othere reson that I koude seye, / I graunte yow that richeses been goode to hem that geten hem wel, and to hem that wel usen tho riches / And therefore wol I shewe yow hou ye shul have yow and how ye shul here yow in gaderyngge of richeses, and in what manere ye shul usen hem / 1575

First, ye shul geten hem withouten greet deyr, by good leyser, sokyngyng and nat over-hastily / For a man that is to desyryngge to gete richeses abaundoneth hym first to thefte, and to alle othere yveles, / and therefore seith Salomon, ‘He that hasteth hym to busily to wexe riche shal be noon innocent’ / He seith also that ‘the richesse that hastily cometh to a man, soone and lightly gooth and passeth fro

a man,/ but that riches that cometh litel and litel, wexeth alwey and multiplieth ' / And, sire, ye shul *2770 geten riches by youre wit and by youre travaille unto youre profit,/ and that withouten wrong or harm doynge to any oother persone / For the lawe seith that 'ther maketh no man himselfen riche, if he do harm to another wight ' / This is to seyn, that nature defendeth and forbedeth by right that no man make hymself riche unto the harm of another persone / And Tullius seith that 'no sorwe, ne no drede of deeth, ne no thyng that may falle unto a man,/ is 1585 so muchel agayns nature as a man to to encressen his owene profit to the harm of another man / And though the grete men and the myghty men geten riches moore lightly than thou,/ yet shaltou nat been ydel ne slow to do thy profit, for thou shalt in alle wise flee ydelnesse ' / For Salomon seith that 'ydelnesse techeth a man to do manye yveles ' / And the same Salomon seith that 'he that travaileth and bis-ieth hym to taken his land, shal eten breed,/ but he that is ydel and *2780 casteth hym to no bisynesse ne occupacioun, shal falle unto poverté, and dye for hunger ' / And he that is ydel and slow kan nevere fynde covenable tyme for to doon his profit / For ther is a versifiour seith that 'the ydel man excuseth hym in wynter by cause of the grete coold, and in somer by enchesoun of the grete heete ' / For these causes seith Caton, 'Waketh and enclyneth nat yow over-muchel for to slepe, for over-muchel reste norisseth and causeth manye vices ' / And therfore seith Saint Jerome, 'Dooth somme goode dedes that the devel, which is oure enemy, ne fynde yow nat unoccupied ' / For 1595 the devel ne taketh nat lightly unto his werkynge swiche as he fyndeth occupied in goode werkes /

Thanne thus, in getynge riches, ye mosten flee ydelnesse / And afterward, ye shul use the riches which ye have geten by youre wit and by youre travaille,/ in swich a manere that men holde yow nat to scars, ne to sparynge, ne to fool-large, that is to seyn, over-large a spendere / For right as men blamen an avaricious man by cause of his scarsetee and chyncherie,/ in the same wise is he *2790 to blame that spendeth over-largely / And therfore seith Caton 'Use,' he seith, 'thy riches that thou hast geten/ in swich a manere that men have no matiere ne cause to calle thee neither wrecche ne chynche,/ for it is a greet shame to a man to have a povere herte and a riche purs ' / He seith also 'The goodes that thou hast ygeten, use hem by mesure,' that is to seyn, spende hem mesurably,/ 1605 for they that folly wasten and despenden the goodes that they han,/ whan they han namoore propre of hir owene, they shapen hem to take the goodes of another man / I seye thanne that ye shul flee avarice,/ usynge youre riches in swich manere that men seye nat that youre riches been yburied,/ but that ye have hem in youre myght and in youre weeldynge / For a wys man *2800 repreveth the avaricious man, and seith thus in two vers / 'Wherto and why burieth a man his goodes by his grete avarice, and knoweth wel that nedes moste he dye? / For deeth is the ende of every man as in this present lyf ' / And for what cause or enchesoun joyneth he hym or knytteth he hym so faste unto his goodes/ that alle hise wittes mowen nat disseveren hym or departen hym from his goodes,/ and knoweth wel, or oghte 1615 knowe, that whan he is deed he shal no thyng bere with hym out of this world? / And therfore seith Saint Austyn that 'the avaricious man is likned unto helle,/ that the moore it swelweth, the moore desir it hath to swelwe and devoure ' / And as wel as ye wolde eschewe to be called an avaricious man or chynche,/ as wel sholde ye kepe yow and governe yow in swich a wise that men calle yow nat fool-large / Therfore seith Tullius *2810 'The goodes,' he seith, 'of thyn hous ne sholde nat been hyd ne kept so cloos, but that they myghte been opened by pitee and debonairetee,' that is to seyn, to yeven part to hem that han greet nede,/ 'ne thy goodes shullen nat been so opene to been every mannes goodes /

Afterward, in getyng of youre riches and in usynge hem, ye shul alwey have three thynges in youre herte,/ that is to seyn, oure Lord God, conscience, and good name / First, ye shul have God 1625 in youre herte,/ and for no rchesse ye shullen do no thyng which may in any manere displese God, that is youre creatour and makere / For after the word of Salomon, 'It is better to have a litel good with the love of God,/ than to have muchel good and tresour, and lese the love of his Lord God' / And the prophete seith that 'better it is to been a good man and have litel good and tresour,/ than to *2820 been holden a shrewe and have grete riches' / And yet seye I ferthermoore, that ye sholde alwey doon youre bisynesse to gete yow rcheses,/ so that ye gete hem with good conscience / And th'apostle seith that 'ther nys thyng in this world of which we sholden have so greet joye as whan oure conscience bereth us good witness' / And the wise man seith, 'The substance of a man is ful good, whan synne is nat in mannes conscience' / 1635 Afterward, in getyng of youre riches and in usynge of hem,/ yow moste have greet bisynesse and greet diligence that youre goode name be alwey kept and conserved / For Salomon seith that 'better it is and moore it availleth a man to have a good name, than for to have grete riches' / And therefore he seith in another place, 'Do greet diligence,' seith Salomon, 'in keyng of thy freend and of thy goode name,/ for it shal lenger abide with thee than any tresour, be it never so precious' / And certes *2830 he sholde nat be called a gentil man that after God and good conscience, alle thynges left, ne dooth his diligence and bisynesse to kepen his goode name / And Cassidore seith that 'it is signe of a gentil herte, whan a man loveth and desureth to han a good name' / And therefore seith Seint Austyn that 'ther been two thynges that arn necessaie and nedefulle,/ and that is good conscience and good loos,/ that is to seyn, good conscience to thyn owene persone inward, and good loos for thy neighbor outward' / And he that 1645 trusteth hym so muchel in his goode conscience/ that he displeseth, and setteth at nocht his goode name or loos, and reketh nocht though he kepe nat his goode name, nys but a cruell cherl /

Sire, now have I shewed yow how ye shul do in getyng riches, and how ye shullen usen hem,/ and I se wel that for the trust that ye han in youre richeses ye wole moeve werre and bataille / I conselle yow that ye bigynne no werre in trust of youre richeses, for they ne suffisen nocht werres to mayntene / And *2840 therefore seith a philosopre, 'That man that desireth and wole algates han werre, shal nevere have suffisaunce,/ for the richer that he is, the gretter despenses moste he make, if he wole have worshipe and victorie' / And Salomon seith that 'the gretter richeses that a man hath, the mo dependours he hath' / And deere sire, al be it so that for youre richeses ye mowe have muchel folk,/ yet bihoveth it nat, ne it is nat good, to bigynne werre, whereas ye mowe in oother manere have pees unto youre worshipe and profit / For the victorie of batailles 1655 that been in this world lyth nat in greet nombre or multitude of the peple, ne in the vertu of man,/ but it lith in the wyl and in the hand of oure Lord God Almyghty / And therefore Judas Machabeus, which was Goddes knyght,/ whan he sholde fighte agayn his adversaie that hadde a gretter nombre and a gretter multitude of folk and stronger than this peple of Machabee,/ yet he reconforted his litel compaignye, and seyde right in this wise / 'Als lightly,' quod *2850 he, 'may oure Lord God Almyghty yeve victorie to a fewe folk as to many folk,/ for the victorie of a bataile comth nat by the grete nombre of peple,/ but it cometh from oure Lord God of hevене' / And, deere sire, for as muchel as ther is no man certain if he be worthy that God yeve hym victorie, [ne plus que il est certain se il est digne de l'amour de Dieu], or naught, after that Salomon seith,/ therefore every man sholde greetly drede werres to bigynne / And by cause that in 1665 batailles fallen manye perils,/ and happeth outhur while that as soone is the grete man slayn as the litel man, / and as it is writen in the seconde Book of Kynges, 'The dedes of batailles been aventurous and nothyng certeyne, / for as lightly is oon hurt with a spere as another', / and for ther is gret peril in werre, therefore sholde a man flee and eschue werre, in as muchel as a man may goodly / *2860 For Salomon seith, 'He that loveth peril shal falle in peril' /

After that Dame Prudence hadde spoken in this manere, Melbee answerde, and seyde / "I see wel, dame Prudence, that by youre faire wordes, and by youre resouns that ye han shewed me, that the werre liketh yow no thyng, / but I have nat yet herd youre conseil, how I shal do in this nede" /

"Certes," quod she, "I conseilte yow that ye accorde with youre adversaries and that ye have pees with hem / For Seint Jame seith in his 1675 Epistles that 'by concord and pees the smale richesses wexen grete, / and by debaat and discord the grete richesses fallen down' / And ye knowen wel that oon of the gretteste and moost sovereyn thyng that is in this world is unytee and pees / And therefore seyde oure Lord Jhesu Crist to his apostles in this wise / 'Wel happy and blessed been they that loven and purchacen pees, for they been called children of God' /" *2870

"A," quod Melbee, "now se I wel that ye loven nat myn honour ne my worshipe / Ye knowen wel that myne adversaries han bigonnen this debaat and bryge by hire outrage, / and ye se wel that they ne requeren ne preyen me nat of pees, ne they asken nat to be reconciled / Wol ye thanne that I go and meke me and obeye me to hem, and crie hem mercy? / For sothe, that were nat my worshipe / For right as men seyn that 1685 'over-greet hoomlynesse engendreth dispreisyng,' so fareth it by to greet humylyte or mekenesse" /

Thanne bigan dame Prudence to maken semblant of wratthe, and seyde / "Certes, sire, sauf youre grace, I love youre honour and youre profit as I do myn owene, and evere have doon, / ne ye, ne noon outhur, syen nevere the contrarie / And yit if I hadde seyde that ye sholde han purchaced the pees and the reconciliacioun, I ne hadde nat muchel mystaken me, ne seyde amys / For the wise man *2880 seith, 'The dissensioun bigynneth by another man, and the reconciling bygyneth by thyself' / And the prophete seith, 'Flee shrewednesse and do goodnesse, / seke pees and folwe it, as muchel as in thee is' / Yet seye I nat that ye shul rather pursue to youre adversaries for pees than they shuln to yow / For I knowe wel that ye been so hard-herted that ye wol do no thyng for me / And Salomon 1695 seith, 'He that hath over-hard an herte, atte laste he shal myshappe and mystyde' /

Whanne Melbee hadde herd dame Prudence maken semblant of wratthe, he seyde in this wise / "Dame, I prey yow that ye be nat displeyd of thynges that I seye, / for ye knowe wel that I am angry and wrooth, and that is no wonder, / and they that been wrothe witen nat wel what they don, ne what they seyn / *2890 Therefore the prophete seith that 'troubled eyen han no cleer sighte' / But seyeth and conseleth me as yow liketh, for I am redy to do right as ye wol desire, / and if ye repreve me of my folye, I am the moore holden to love yow and to preyse yow / For Salomon seith that 'he that repreveth hym that dooth folye, / he shal fynde gretter grace than he that deceyveth hym by sweete wordes' /" 1705

Thanne seide dame Prudence, "I make no semblant of wratthe ne anger, but for youre grete profit / For Salomon seith, 'He is moore worth that repreveth or chideth a fool for his folye, shewyng hym semblant of wratthe, / than he that supporteth hym and preyseth hym in his mysdoynge, and laugheth at his folye' / And this same Salomon seith afterward that 'by the sorweful visage of a man,' that is to seyn by the sory and hevvy contenance of a man, / 'the fool correcteth and amendeth hymself' /" *2900

Thanne seyde Melbee, "I shal nat konne answer to so manye faire resouns as ye putten to me and shewen / Seyeth shortly youre wyl and youre conseil, and I am al redy to fulfille and parfourne

it” /

Thanne dame Prudence discovered al hir wyl to hym, and seyde, / “I conseil-le yow,” quod she, “aboven alle thynges, that ye make pees bitwene God and yow, / and beth reconciled unto hym and to his grace / For, as I have seyde yow 1715 heer biforn, God hath suffred yow to have this tribulacioun and disese for youre synnes / And if ye do as I sey yow, God wol sende youre adversaries unto yow, / and maken hem fallen at youre feet, redy to do youre wyl and youre comandementz / For Salomon seith, ‘Whan the condicioun of man is plesaunt and likyng to God, / he chaungeth the hertes of the mannes adversaries and constreyneth hem to biseken hym of pees and of grace’ / *2910 And I prey yow lat me speke with your adversaries in pryvee place, / for they shul nat knowe that it be of youre wyl or of your assent / And thanne, whan I knowe hir wil and hire entente, I may conseil-le yow the moore seurely” /

“Dame,” quod Melbee, “dooth youre wil and youre likyng, / for I putte me hoolly in youre disposicioun and ordnaunce” / 1725

Thanne dame Prudence, whan she saugh the goode wyl of hir housbonde, delibered and took avys in hirself, / thinkinge how she myghte bryng this nede unto a good conclusioun and to a good ende / And whan she saugh hir tyme, she sente for thise adversaries to come unto hire into a pryvee place, / and shewed wisely unto hem the grete goodes that comen of pees, / and the grete harmes and perils that been in werre, / and seyde to hem in a *2920 goodly manere hou that hem oughten have greet repentaunce / of the injure and wrong that they hadden doon to Melbee hir lord, and unto hire, and to hire doghter /

And whan they herden the goodliche wordes of dame Prudence, / they weren so supprised and ravysshed, and hadden so greet joye of hire that wonder was to telle / “A, lady,” quod they, “ye han shewed unto us the blessyng of swetnesse, after the sawe of David the prophete, / 1735 for the reconcalyng which we been nat worthy to have in no manere, / but we oghte requeren it with greet contricioun and humylitee, / ye of youre grete goodnesse have presented unto us / Now se we wel that the science and the konnyng of Salomon is ful trewe / For he seith that ‘sweete wordes multiplen and encreescen freendes, and maken shrewes to be debonaire and meeke’ / *2930

“Certes,” quod they, “we putten oure dede and al oure matere and cause al hoolly in youre goode wyl / and been redy to obeye to the speche and comandement of my lord Melbee / And therefore, deere and benygne lady, we preien yow and bi-seke yow as mekely as we konne and mowen, / that it lyke unto youre grete goodnesse to fulfillen in dede youre good-liche wordes / For we consideren and knowelichen that we han offended and greved my lord Melbee out of mesure, / so ferforth that we be nat 1745 of power to maken his amendes / And therefore we oblige and bynden us and oure freendes for to doon al his wyl and his comandementz / But peraventure he hath swich hevynesse and swich wratthe to us-ward, by cause of oure offense, / that he wole enjoyne us swich a peyne as we mowe nat bere ne susteene / And therfore, noble lady, we biseke to youre wommanly pitee / to taken swich *2940 avysement in this nede that we, ne oure freendes, be nat desherited ne destroyed thurgh oure folye” / “Certes,” quod Prudence, “it is an hard thyng and right perilous / that a man putte hym al outely in the arbitracioun and juggement, and in the myght and power of his enemys / For Salomon seith, ‘Leeveth me, and yeveth credence to that I shal seyn I seye,’ quod he, ‘ye peple, folk and governours of hooly chirche, / to thy sone, to thy wyf, to thy freend, ne to thy broother, / ne yeve thou nevere 1755 myght ne maistrie of thy body whil thou lyvest’ / Now sithen he deffendeth that man sholde nat yeven to his broother ne to his freend the myght of his body, / by a strengre rescoun he deffendeth and for-bedeth a man to yeven hymself to his enemy / And natheles I conseilte you that ye mystruste nat my lord,/ for I woot wel and knowe verraily that he is debonaire and meeke, large, curteys,/ *2950 and nothing desirous ne covetous of good ne richesse / For the nys nothing in this world that he desireth, save oonly worshipe and honour / Forthermoore I knowe wel and am right seur that he shal nothing doon in this nede withouten my conseil,/ and I shal so werken in this cause that, by the grace of oure Lord God, ye shul been reconciled unto us”/

Thanne seyden they with o voys, “Worshupful lady, we putten us and oure goodes al fully in youre wil and disposicioun,/ and been redy to comen, 1765 what day that it like unto youre noblesse to lymyte us or assigne us,/ for to maken oure obligacioun and boond as strong as it liketh unto youre goodnesse,/ that we mowe fulfillle the wille of yow and of my lord Melbee”/

Whan dame Prudence hadde herd the answeres of these men, she bad hem goon agayn prively,/ and she retourned to hir lord Melbee, and tolde hym how she found his adversaries ful repentant,/ *2960 knowelechyng ful lovely hir synnes and trespas, and how they were redy to suffren all peyne,/ requyringe and preynge hym of mercy and pitee /

Thanne seyde Melbee “He is wel worthy to have pardoun and foryiffnesse of his synne, that excuseth nat his synne,/ but knowelecheth it and repenteth hym, axinge indulgence / For Senec seith, ‘Ther is the remissoun and forviffnesse, where as the confessioun is’,/ for 1775 confessioun is neighebor to innocence / And he seith in another place that ‘he that hath shame of his synne and knowlecheth it, is worthy remissoun’ And therefore I assente and conferme me to have pees,/ but it is good that we do it nat withouten the assent and wyl of oure freendes”/

Thanne was Prudence right glad and joyeful, and seyde / “Certes, sire,” quod she, “ye han wel and goodly answered,/ for right as by the conseil, *2970

assent, and help of youre freendes ye han been stured to venge yow and maken werre,/ right so withouten hire conseil shul ye nat accorden yow ne have pees with youre adversaries / For the lawe seith ‘Ther nys no thyng so good by wey of kynde as a thyng to be unbounde by hym that it was ybounde”/

And thanne dame Prudence, withouten delay or tarynge, sente anon hire messages for hire kyn, and for hie olde freendes which that were trewe and wyse,/ and tolde hem by ordre in the presence of Melbee al this mateere as it is aboven expressed and declared,/ and preyd 1785 hem that they wolde yeven hire avys and conseil what best were to doon in this nede / And whan Melbees freendes hadde taken hire avys and deliberacioun of the forseide mateere,/ and hadden examyned it by greet bisynesse and greet diligence,/ they yave ful conseil for to have pees and reste,/ and that Melbee sholde receyve with good herte his adversaries to foryiffnesse and mercy / *2980

And whan dame Prudence hadde herd the assent of hir lord Melbee, and the conseil of his freendes,/ accorde with hire wille and hire entencioun/, she was wonderly glad in hire herte, and seyde / “Ther is an old proverbe,” quod she, “seith that ‘the goodnesse that thou mavst do this day, do it,/ and abide nat ne delaye it nat til to-morwe’/ And therefore I 1795 conseilte that ye sende youre messages, swiche as been discrete and wise,/ unto youre adversaries, tellynge hem on youre bihalve/ that if they wole trete of pees and of accord,/ that they shape hem withouten delay or taryng to comen unto us”/ Which thyng parfourned was in dede / And whanne these *2990 trespassours and repentyng folk of hire folhes, that is to seyn, the adversaries of Melbee,/ hadden herd what these messagers seyden unto hem,/ they weren right glad and joyeful, and answereden ful mekely and benignely,/ yeldyng graces and thankynges to hir lord Melbee and to al his compaignye,/ and shopen hem withouten delay to go with the messagers, and obeye to the comandement of hir lord Melibee / 1805

And right anon they taken hire wey to the court of Melibee, / and taken with hem somme of hire trewe freendes to maken feith for hem and for to been hire borwes / And whan they were comen to the presence of Melibee, he seyde hem these wordes / "It standeth thus," quod Melibee, "and sooth it is, that ye, causeles and withouten skile and resoun, / han doon grete injuries and *3000 wronges to me and to my wyf Prudence, and to my doghter also / For ye han entred into myn hous by violence, and have doon swich outrage that alle men knowen wel that ye have disserved the death / And therefore wol I knowe and wite of yow / whether ye wol putte the punyssement and the chastysynge and the vengeance of this outrage in the wyl of me and of my wyf Prudence, or ye wol nat?" / 1815

Thanne the wiseste of hem thre answerde for hem alle, and seyde, "Sire," quod he, "we knowen wel that we been unworthy to comen unto the court of so greet a lord and so worthy as ye been / For we han so greetly mystaken us, and han offended and agilt in swich a wise agayn youre heigh lordshipe, / that trewely we han disserved the death / But yet, for the grete goodnesse and debonairetee that al the world witnesseth of youre persone, / we submytten us to the *3010 excellence and benygntee of youre gracious lordshipe, / and been redy to obeie to alle youre comandementz, / bisekyng yow that of youre merciable pitee ye wol considere oure grete repentance and lowe submyssioun, / and graunten us foryevenesse of oure outrageous trespas and offense / For wel we knowe that youre liberal grace and mercy stretchen hem further into goodnesse than doon oure outrageouse giltes and trespas into wikkednesse, / al be it that cursedly 1825 and dampnablye we han agilt agayn youre heigh lordshipe" /

Thanne Melibee took hem up fro the ground ful benygely, / and receyved hire obligaciouns and hir boondes by hire othes upon hire plegges and borwes, / and assigned hem a certeyn day to retourne unto his court, / for to accepte and receive the sentence and judgement that Melibee wolde comande to be doon on hem by the causes aforesayd / Whiche *3020 thynges ordeyned, every man re-toured to his hous /

And whan that dame Prudence saugh hir tyme, she freyned and axed hir lord Melibee / what vengeance he thoughte to taken of his adversaries /

To which Melibee answerde, and seyde
"Certes," quod he, ' I thynke and purpose me fully / to desherite hem of al that evere they han, and for to putte hem in exil for evere ' / 1835

"Certes," quod dame Prudence, "this were a cruel sentence and muchel agayn resoun / For ye been riche ynough, and han no nede of oother mennes good, / and ye myghte lightly in this wise gete yow a covetous name, / which is a vicious thyng, and oghte been eschued of every good man / For after the sawe of the word of the Apostle, 'Covetise is roote of alle harmes' / And therefore it were *3030 bette for yow to lese so muchel good of youre owene, than for to taken of hur good in this manere, / for bettre it is to lesen good with worschupe, than it is to wynne good with vileynye and shame / And everi man oghte to doon his dilgenc and his bisynesse to geten hym a good name / And yet shal he nat oonly bisie hym in kepynge of his good name, / but he shal also enforchen hym alwey to do somthyng by which he may renovelle his good name / For it is writen 1845 that 'the olde good loos or good name of a man is soone goon and passed, whan it is nat newed ne renovelled' / And as touchynge that ye seyn ye wole exle youre adversaries, / that thynketh me muchel agayn resoun and out of mesure, / considered the power that they han yeve yow upon hemself / And it is writen that 'he is worthy to lesen his privilege, that mysuseth the myght and the power that is yeven hym' / And I sette *3040 cas ye myghte enjoyne hem that peyne by right and by lawe, / which I trowe ye mowe nat do,/ I seye ye mighte nat putten it to execucioun peraventure,/ And thanne were it likly to retourne to the werre as it was biforn / And therefore, if ye wole that men do yow obeisance, ye moste deemen moore curteisly,/ 1855 this is to seyn, ye moste yeven moore esy sentences and juggementz / For it is writen that 'he that moost curteisly comandeth, to hym men moost obeyen' / And therefore I prey yow that in this necessitee and in this nede ye caste yow to overcome youre herte / For Senec seith that 'he that overcometh his herte, overcometh twies' / And Tullius seith 'Ther is no thyng so comendable in a greet lord/ as when he is debonaire and *3050 meeke, and appeseth him lightly' / And I prey yow that ye wole forbere now to do vengeance,/ in swich a manere that youre goode name may be kept and conserved,/ and that men mowe have cause and mateere to preyse yow of pitee and of mercy,/ and that ye have no cause to repente yow of thyng that ye doon / 1865 For Senec seith, 'He overcometh in an yvel manere that repenteth hym of his victorie' / Wherfore I pray yow, lat mercy been in youre herte,/ to th' effect and entente that God Almighty have mercy on yow in his laste juggement / For Saint Jame seith in his Epistle 'Jugge-ment withouten mercy shal be doon to hym that hath no mercy of another wight' /

Whanne Melbee hadde herd the grete skiles and resouns of dame Prudence, and hire wise informaciouns and techynges,/ his herte gan encline *3060 to the wil of his wif, considerynge hur trewe entente,/ and conformed hym anon, and assented fully to werken after hir conseil,/ and thonked God, of whom pro-cedeth al vertu and alle goodnesse, that hym sente a wif of so greet discrecioun / And when the day cam that his adversaries sholde appieren in his presence,/ he spak unto hem ful goodly, and seyde in this wyse / 'Al be it so that of 1875 youre pride and heigh presumpcioun and folie, and of youre negligence and un-konnyng,/ ye have mysborn yow and trespassed unto me,/ yet for as muche as I see and biholde youre grete humylitee,/ and that ye been sory and repentant of youre giltes,/ it constreyneth me to doon yow grace and mercy / Wher- *3070 fore I receyve yow to my grace,/ and foryeve yow outrely alle the offenses, injuries, and wronges that ye have doon agayn me and myne,/ to this effect and to this ende that God of his endeless mercy/wole at the tyme of oure dyngge foryeven us oure giltes that we han trespassed to hym in this wrecched world / For doute-lees, if we be sory and repentant of the synnes and giltes which we han trespassed in the sighte of oure Lord God,/ he is so free and so merci- 1885 able,/ that he wole foryeven us oure giltes,/ and bryngen us to the blisse that nevere hath ende Amen

Heere is ended Chaucers Tale of Melbee and of Dame Prudence

THE PROLOGUE OF THE MONK'S TALE

The murye wordes of the Hoost to the Monk

Whan ended was my tale of Melbee,
And of Prudence and hire benignytee, *3080
Oure Hooste seyde, "As I am feithful man, And by that precious corpus Madrian,
I hadde levere than a barele ale That Goodehief, my wyf, hadde herd this
tale' 1894

For she nys no thyng of swich pacience
As was this Melbeus wyf Prudence
By Goddes bones' whan I bete my knaves, She bryngeth me forth the grete clobbered
staves,

And crieth, 'Slee the dogges everichoon, And brek hem, bothe bak and every
boon!' *3090

And if that any neighebor of myne Wol nat in chirche to my wyf enclyne,
Or be so hardy to hire to trespase, Whan she comth hoom she rampeth in my
face, 1904

And crieth, 'False coward, wreke thy wyf'
By corpus bones, I wol have thy knyf, And thou shalt have my distaf and go spynne!'

Fro day to nyght right thus she wol bi-gynne
'Allas!' she seith, 'that evere I was shape *3099

To wedden a milksop, or a coward ape,
That wol been overlad with every wight' Thou darst nat stonden by thy wyves
right!'

This is my lif, but if that I wol fighte,
And out at dore anon I moot me dighte,
Or elles I am but lost, but if that I 1915
Be lyk a wilde leoun, fool-hardy

I woot wel she wol do me slee som day Som neighebor, and thanne go my way,
For I am perlious with knyf in honde, Al be it that I dar nat hire withstonde,
For she is byg in armes, by my feith, *3111 That shal he fynde that hire mysdooth or seith

But lat us passe away fro this mateere My lord, the Monk," quod he, "be myrie of cheere,

For ye shul telle a tale trewely 1925

Loo, Rouchestre stant heer faste by' Ryde forth, myn owene lord, brek nat oure
game

But, by my trouthe, I knowe nat youre
name

Wher shal I calle yow my lord daun John,
Or daun Thomas, or elles daun Albon? *3120
Of what hous be ye, by youre fader kvn?
I vowe to God, thou hast a ful fair skyn,
It is a gentil pasture ther thow goost Thou art nat lyk a penant or a goost

Upon my feith, thou art som officer, 1935 Som wortay sexteyn, or som celerer,
For by my fader soule, as to my doom,
Thou art a maister whan thou art at hoom,
No povre cloysterer, ne no novys,

But a governour, wily and wys, *3130
And therwithal of brawnes and of bones,

A wel farynge persone for the nones
I pray to God, yeve hym confusioun That first thee broghte unto religioun' Thou woldest han been a tredefowel aright Haddestow as greet a leeve, as thou hast
myght, 1946

To parfourne al thy lust in engendrure, Thou haddest bigeten ful many a creature Allas, why werestow so wyd a cope?
God yeve me sorwe, but, and I were a pope, *3140

Nat only thou, but every myghty man,
Though he were shorn ful hye upon his pan, Sholde have a wyf, for al the world is lorn' Religioun hath take up al the corn Of tredyng, and we borel men been shrympes 1955

Of fieble trees ther comen wrecched ympes This maketh that oure heires been so
sklendre

And feble that they may nat wel engendre
This maketh that oure wyves wole assaye Religious folk, for ye mowe better paye
Of Venus paiaementz than mowe we, *3151 God woot, no lusseburghes payen ye!
But be nat wrooth, my lord, though that I
pleye

Ful ofte in game a sooth I have herd seye!''
This worthy Monk took al in pacience

And seyde, "I wol doon al my diligence, As fer as sowneth into honestee, 1967
To telle yow a tale, or two, or three And if yow list to herkne hyderward, I wol yow seyn the lyf of Seint Edward,
Or ellis, first, tragedies wol I telle, *3161
Of whiche I have an hundred in my celle Tragedie is to seyn a certeyn storie,
As olde bookes maken us memorie,
Of hym that stood in greet prosperitee, 1975
And is yfallen out of heigh degree Into myserie, and endeth wrecchedly
And they ben versified communely

Of six feet, which men clepen exametron
In prose eek been endited many oon, *3170
And eek in meetre, in many a sondr wyse Lo, this declaryng oghte ynogh suffice
Now herketh, if yow liketh for to heere
But first I yow biseeke in this mateere, Though I by ordre telle nat thise thynges,
Be it of popes, emperours, or kynges, 1986
After hir ages, as men writen fynde, But tellen hem som bifore and som bi hynde,
As it now comth unto my remembraunce,
Have me excused of myn ignoraunce " *3180

Explicit

THE MONK'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Monkes Tale De Casibus Virorum Illustrum

I wol biwaille, in manere of tragedie, The harm of hem that stode in heigh degree,
And fillen so that ther nas no remedie
To brynge hem out of hir adversitee
For certein, whan that Fortune list to flee, Ther may no man the cours of hire with-
holde 1996
Lat no man truste on blynd prosperitee, Be war by thise ensamples trewe and olde

Lucifer

At Lucifer, though he an angel were,
And nat a man, at hym wol I bigynne *3190
For though Fortune may noon angel dere,
From heigh degree yet fel he for his synne Doun into helle, where he yet is mne O Lucifer, brightest of angels alle, Now artow Sathanas, that mayst nat twyne 2005
Out of miserie, in which that thou art felle

Adam

Loo Adam, in the feeld of Damysseene, With Goddes owene fynger wrought was he,
And nat bigeten of mannes sperme unclene,
And welte al paradys savyng o tree *3200
Hadde nevere worldly man so heigh degree

As Adam, til he for mysgovernance Was dryven out of hys hye prosperitee To labour, and to helle, and to meschaunce

Sampson

Loo Sampson, which that was annunciat 2015
By th' angel, longe er his nativitee,
And was to God Almyghty consecrat,
And stood in noblesse whil he myghte see Was nevere swich another as was hee, To speke of strengthe, and therwith hardy-
nesse, *3210
But to his wyves toolde he his secree, Thurgh which he slow hymself for wrecch-ednesse

Sampson, this noble almyghty champioun, Withouten wepen, save his handes tweye,
He slow and al torente the leoun, 2025
Toward his wedding walkyng by the weye
His false wyf koude hym so plesse and preye Til she his conseil knew, and she, untweye, Unto his foos his conseil gan biwrewe,
And hym forsook, and took another newe

Thre hundred foxes took Sampson for ire,
And alle hur tayles he togydre bond, *3222

And sette the foxes tayles alle on fire,
For he on every tayl had knyrt a brond,
And they brende alle the cornes in that
lond, 2035

And alle hire olyveres, and vynes eke
A thousand men he slow eek with his hond,
And hadde no wepen but an asses cheke

Whan they were slayn, so thursted hym that he

Was wel ny lorn, for which he gan to preye That God wolde on his peyne han some
pitee, *3231

And sende hym drynke, or elles moste he
deye,

And of this asses cheke, that was dreye,
Out of a wang-tooth sprang anon a welle,
Of which he drank ynogh, shortly to seye, Thus heelp hym God, as Judicum can
telle 2046

By verray force at Gazan, on a nyght, Maugree Philistiens of that citee,
The gates of the toun he hath up plyght,
And on his bak yearyed hem hath hee *3240 Hye on an hill whereas men myghte hem
see

O noble, almyghty Sampson, lief and
deere,

Had thou nat toold to wommen thy secree,
In al this world ne hadde been thy peere!

This Sampson nevere ciser drank ne wyn, Ne on his heed cam rasour noon ne sheere,
By precept of the messenger divyn, 2057
For alle his strengthes in his heeres weere
And fully twenty wynter, yeer by yeere,
He hadde of Israel the governaunce *3250
But soone shal he wepe many a teere, For wommen shal hym bryngen to mes-
chaunce!

Unto his lemman Dalida he tolde
That in his heers al his strengthe lay,
And falsly to his foomen she hym solde 2065
And slepyng in hir barm, upon a day,
She made to clippe or shere his heres away,
And made his foomen al his craft espyen,
And whan that they hym foond in this array,

They bounde hym faste and putten out his
yen *3280

But er his heer were clipped or yshave, Ther was no boond with which men myghte him bynde,

But now is he in prison in a cave, Where-as they made hym at the queerne grynde 2074

O noble Sampson, strongest of mankynde, O whilom juge, in glorie and in richesse!
Now maystow wepen with thyne eyen
blynde,

Sith thou fro wele art falle in wretched-
nesse

The ende of this caytyf was as I shal seye
His foomen made a feeste upon a day, *3270
And made hym as hire fool biforn hem
pleye,

And this was in a temple of greet array
But atte laste he made a foul affray, For he two pilers shook and made hem
falle,

And doun fil temple and al, and ther it
lay, 2085
And slow hymself, and eek his foomen alle

This is to seyn, the prynces everichoon, And eek thre thousand bodyes, were ther
slayn

With fallynge of the grete temple of stoon Of Sampson now wol I namoore sayn *3280
Beth war by this ensample oold and playn
That no men telle hir conseil til hir wyves Of swich thyng as they wolde han secree
fayn,

If that it touche hur lymes or hur lyves

Hercules

Of Hercules, the sovereyn conquerour, Syngen his werkes laude and heigh renoun, For in his tyme of strengthe he was the flour 2097

He slow, and rafte the skyn of the leoun,
He of Centauros leyde the boost adoun,
He Arpies slow, the cruell bryddes felle,
He golden apples rafte of the dragoun, *3291
He drow out Cerberus, the hound of helle,

He slow the cruell tyrant Busirus, And made his hors to frete hym, flesh and
boon,

He slow the fryr serpent venymus, 2105
Of Acheloy's two hornes he brak oon,

And he slow Cacus in a cave of stoon,
He slow the geant Antheus the stronge,
He slow the grisly boor, and that anon,
And bar the hevене on his nekke longe

Was nevere wight, sith that this world
bigan, *3301

That slow so manye monstres as dide he Thurhout this wyde world his name ran, What for his strengthe and for his heigh
bountee,

And every reawme wente he for to see He was so stroong that no man myghte hym lette 2116

At bothe the worldes endes, seith Trophee, In stide of boundes he a piler sette

A lemman hadde this noble champioun,
That highte Dianra, fressh as May, *3310
And as thise clerkes maken mencoun,
She hath hym sent a sherte, fressh and gay Allas! this sherte, allas and weylaway!
Envenymed was so subtilly withalle, 2124
That er that he had wered it half a day,
It made his flessch al from his bones falle

But natheles somme clerkes hire excusen
By oon that highte Nessus, that it maket Be as be may, I wol hire nocht accusen, But on his bak this sherte he wered al
naked, *3320

Til that his flessch was for the venym blaked

And whan he saugh noon oother remedye,
In hoothe coles he hath hymselfen raked, For with no venym deigned hym to dye

Thus starf this worthy, myghty Hercules Lo, who may truste on Fortune any throwe? 2136

For hym that folweth al this world of prees, Er he be war, is ofte yleyd ful lowe Ful wys is he that kan hymselfen knowe!
Beth war, for whan that Fortune list to glose, *3330

Thanne wayteth she her man to over-
throwe

By swich a wey as he wolde leest suppose

Nabugodonosor

The myghty trone, the precious tresor,
The glorious ceptre, and roial magestee

That hadde the kyng Nabugodonosor 2145
With tonge unnethe may discryved bee
He twyves wan Jerusalem the citee, The vessel of the temple he with hym
ladde

At Babiloigne was his sovereyn see,
In which his glorie and his delit he hadde

The faireste childien of the blood roial
Of Israel he leet do gelde anoon, *3342
And maket ech of hem to been his thral Amonges othere Daniel was oon,
That was the wiseste child of everychon,
For he the dremes of the kyng expowned, Whereas in Chaldeye clerk ne was ther
noon 2157

That wiste to what fyn his dremes sowned

This proude kyng leet maken a statue of gold,

Sixty cubites long and sevene in brede, *3350
To which ymage bothe yong and oold Comanded he to loute, and have in drede,
Or in a fourneys, ful of flambes rede,
He shal be brent that wolde nocht obeye
But nevere wolde assente to that dede 2165 Daniel, ne his yonge felawes tweye

This kyng of kynges proud was and elaat,
He wende that God, that sit in magestee, Ne myghte hym nat bireve of his estaat
But sodeynly he loste his dignytee, *3360
And lyk a beest hym semed for to bee,
And eet hey as an oxe, and lay theroute
In reyn, with wilde beestes walked hee, Til certein tyme was ycome aboute

And lik an egles fetheres wax his heres, 2175
His nayles lyk a briddes clawes weere, Til God releessed hym a certeyn yeres, And yaf hym wit, and thanne with many a teere

He thanked God, and evere his lyf in feere Was he to doon amys or moore trespaece,
And til that tyme he leyd was on his beere, He knew that God was ful of myght and
grace *3372

Balthasar

His sone, which that highte Balthasar,
That heeld the regne after his fader day,
He by his fader koude nocht be war, 2185

For proud he was of herte and of array,
And eek an ydolastre was he ay
His hye estaat assured hym in pryde, But Fortune caste hym doun, and ther he
lay,
And sodeynly his regne gan divide *3380

A feeste he made unto his lordes alle, Upon a tyme, and bad hem blithe bee,
And thanne his officeres gan he calle,
"Gooth, bryngeth forth the vesseles," quod
he,
"Whiche that my fader in his prosperitee
Out of the temple of Jerusalem brafte, 2196
And to oure hye goddes thanke we Of honour that oure elders with us lafte "

Hys wyf, his lordes, and his concubynes Ay dronken, whil hire appetites laste, *3390
Out of these noble vessels sondry wyne
And on a wal this kyng his eyen caste,
And saugh an hand, armlees, that wroot ful faste,
For feere of which he quook and siked
soore

This hand, that Balthasar so soore agaste, Wroot Mane, techel, phares, and namoore

In all that land magicien was noon 2207 That koude expoune what this lettre
mente,

But Daniel expowned it anoon,
And seyde, "Kyng, God to thy fader sente Glorie and honour, regne, tresour, rente, And he was proud, and nothyng God ne
dradde, *3402

And therefore God greet wreche upon hym
sente,
And hym brafte the regne that he hadde

He was out cast of mannes compaignye,
With asses was his habitacioun, 2216
And eet hey as a beest in weet and drye, Til that he knew, by grace and by resoun,
That God of hevene hath domynacioun Over every regne and every creature, *3410 And thanne hadde God of hym compas-sioun,

And hym restored his regne and his figure

Eek thou, that art his sone, art proud also,
And knowest alle these thynges verraly,

And art rebel to God, and art his foo 2225 Thou drank eek of his vessels boldely, Thy wyf eek, and thy wenches, synfully Dronke of the same vessels sondry wynys,
And heryst false goddes cursedly, Therefore to thee yshapen ful greet pyne
ys *3420

This hand was sent from God that on the
wal

Wroot Mane techel phares, truste me, Thy regne is doon, thou weyest nocht at al Dyvyded is thy regne, and it shal be To Medes and to Perses yeven," quod he And thilke same nyght this kyng was slawe, 2236

And Darius occupieth his degree, Thogh he therto hadde neither right ne
lawe

Lordynges, ensample heerby may ye take How that in lordshipe is no sikernesse, *3430
For whan Fortune wole a man forsake, She bereth away his regne and his richesse, And eek his freendes, bothe moore and
lesse

For what man that hath freendes thurgh Fortune,

Mishap wol maken hem enemys, I gesse, This proverbe is ful sooth and ful commune 2246

Cenobia

Cenobia, of Palymerie queene,
As writen Persiens of hir noblesse,
So worthy was in armes and so keene,
That no wight passed hire in hardynesse, Ne in lynage, ne in oother gentillesse *3441
Of kynges blood of Perce is she descended
I seye nat that she hadde moost farnesse, But of hir shap she myghte nat been amended 2254

From hire childhede I fynde that she fledde Office of wommen, and to wode she wente,
And many a wilde hertes blood she shedde
With arwes brode, that she to hem sente
She was so swift that she anon hem hente, And whan that she was elder, she wolde
kille *3450

Leouns, leopardes, and beres al torente,
And in hur armes weelde hem at hur wille

She dorste wilde beestes dennes seke, And rennen in the montaignes al the nyght,
And slepen under a bussh, and she koude eke 2265

Wrastlen, by verray force and verray
myght,

With any yong man, were he never so
wight

Ther myghte no thyng in hir armes stonde She kepte hir maydenhod from every
wight, *3459

To no man deigned hire for to be bonde

But atte laste hir freendes han hire maried
To Odenake, a prynce of that contree, Al were it so that she hem longe taried And ye shul understonde how that he Hadde swiche fantasies as hadde she 2275 But nathelees, whan they were knyht in-
feere,

They lyved in joye and in felicitye,
For ech of hem hadde oother hef and deere

Save o thyng, that she wolde nevere assente,
By no wey, that he sholde by hire lye *3470
But ones, for it was hir pleynt entente
To have a child, the world to multiplye,
And also soone as that she myghte espye That she was nat with childe with that
dede,

Thanne wolde she suffre hym doon his fantasye 2285

Eft-soone, and nat but oones, out of drede

And if she were with childe at thilke cast, Namoore sholde he pleyen thilke game
Til fully fourty dayes weren past,

Thanne wolde she ones suffre hym do the
same *3480

Al were this Odenake wilde or tame,
He gat namoore of hire, for thus she seyde,
It was to wyves lecherie and shame, In oother caas, if that men with hem
pleyde

Two sones by this Odenake hadde she, 2295
The whiche she kepte in vertu and lettrure, But now unto oure tale turne we I seye, so worshipful a creature,
And wys therwith, and large with mesure, So penyble in the werre, and curteis
eke. *3490

Ne moore labour myghte in werre endure, Was noon, though al this world men sholde seke

Hir riche array ne myghte nat be told,
As wel in vessel as in hire clothyng
She was al clad in perree and in gold, 2305
And eek she lafte noght, for noon huntyng,
To have of sondry tonges ful knowyng, Whan that she leyser hadde, and for to entende

To lerne bookes was al hire likyng, *3499
How she in vertu myghte hir lyf dispende

And shortly of this storie for to trete, So doghty was hir housbonde and eek she,
That they conquered manye regnes grete
In the orient, with many a fair citee Apertenaunt unto the magestee 2315 Of Rome, and with strong hond held hem
ful faste,

Ne nevere myghte hir foomen doon hem
flee,

Ay whil that Odenakes dayes laste

Hir batailles, whoso list hem for to rede, Agayn Sapor the kyng and othere mo, *3510
And how that al this proces fil in dede, Why she conquered, and what tittle had therto,

And after of hir meschief and hire wo,
How that she was biseged and ytake, — Lat hym unto my maister Petrak go, 2325
That writ nough of this, I undertake

Whan Odenake was deed, she myghtily
The regnes heeld, and with hire propre hond Agayn hir foos she faught so cruelly That ther nas kyng ne prynce in al that
lond *3520

That he nas glad, if he that grace fond,
That she ne wolde upon hus lond werreye With hire they maden alliance by bond
To been in pees, and lete hire ride and pleye

The Emperour of Rome, Claudius 2335
Ne hym bifore, the Romayn Galien, Ne dorste nevere been so corageus, Ne noon Ermyn, ne noon Egipcien, Ne Surren, ne noon Arabyen, Withinne the feeldes that dorste with hire
fichte, *3530

Lest that she wolde hem with hir handes slen,
Or with hir meignee putten hem to flighte

In kynges habit wente hir sones two,
As heeres of hir fadres regnes alle,
And Hermanno and Thymalao 2345 Hir names were, as Persiens hem calle
But ay Fortune hath in hire hony galle, Thus myghty queene may no while endure Fortune out of hir regne made hire falle To wrecchednesse and to mysaven-
ture *3540

Aurelian, whan that the governaunce Of Rome cam into his handes tweye, He shoop upon this queene to doon vengeaunce
And with his legions he took his weye 2354
Toward, Cenobie, and, shortly for to seye,
He made hire flee, and atte laste hire hente,
And fettered hire, and eek hire children
tweye,
And wan the land, and hoom to Rome he
wente

Amonges othere thynges that he wan, Hir chaar, that was with gold wrought and perree, *3550
This grete Romayn, this Aurelian, Hath with hym lad, for that men sholde it
see Biforen his trumpehe walketh shee,
With galte cheynes on hire nekke hangyng Coroned was she, as after hir degree, 2365
And ful of perree charged hire clothyng

Allas, Fortune! she that whilom was Dredful to kynges and to emperoures, Now gaureth al the peple on hire, allas!
And she that helmed was in starke stoures, *3560
And wan by force townes stronge and toures,
Shal on hir heed now were a vitremyte,
And she that bar the ceptre ful of floures Shal bere a distaf, hire cost for to quyte

De Petro Rege Ispanne

O noble, O worthy Petro, glorie of Spayne, 2375
Whom Fortune heeld so hye in magestee,

Wel oghten men thy pitous deeth complayne!

Out of thy land they brother made thee
flee,
And after at a seege, by subtiltee, Thou were bitrayseed and lad unto his
tente, *3570
Where as he with his owene hand slow
thee,
Succedyng in thy regne and in thy rente

The feeld of snow, with th'egle of blak therinne,
Caught with the lymrod coloured as the gleede,
He brew this cursednesse and al this
synne 2385
The wikked nest was werker of this zede Noght Charles Olyver, that took ay heede
Of trouthe and honour, but of Armorike Genylon-Olyver, corrupt for meede, Broghte this worthy kyng in swich a brike *3580

De Petro Rege de Cipro

O worthy Petro, kyng of Cypre, also,
That Ahsandre wan by heigh maistrise, Ful many an hethen wroghtestow ful wo,
Of which thyne owene liges hadde envie,
And for no thyng but for thy chivalrie 2395
They in thy bed han slayn thee by the
morwe Thus kan Fortune hir wheel governe and
gye,
And out of joye bryngne men to sorwe

De Barnabo de Lombardia

Off Melan grete Barnabo Viscounte, *3589
God of delit, and scourge of Lombardye, Why sholde I nat thyn infortune acounte, Sith in estaat thow cloumbe were so hye?
Thy brother sone, that was thy double
allye,
For he thy newew was, and sone-in-lawe, Withinne his prisoun made thee to dye, — But why, ne how, noot I that thou were
slawe 2406

De Hugelino Comite de Pize

Off the Erl Hugelyn of Pyze the langour Ther may no tonge telle for pitee
But hitel out of Pize stant a tour,

In which tour in prisoun put was he, *3600
And with hym been his litel children thre,
The eldeste scarsly fyf yeer was of age Allas, Fortune! it was greet crueltee Swiche briddes for to putte in swich a cage!

Dampned was he to dyen in that prisoun, 2415
For Roger, which that bisschop was of Pize, Hadde on hym maad a fals suggestioun, Thugh which the peple gan upon hym rise,

And putten hym to prisoun, in swich wise As ye han herd, and mete and drynke he
hadde *3610
So smal, that wel unnethe it may suffise,
And therwithal it was ful povre and badde

And on a day bifil that in that hour Whan that his mete wont was to be brought,
The gayler shette the dores of the tour 2425
He herde it wel, but he spak right noght,
And in his herte anon ther fil a thoght
That they for hunger wolde doon hym
dyen

"Allas!" quod he, "allas, that I was wrought!"
Therwith the teeris fillen from his yen *3620

His yonge sone, that thre yeer was of age, Unto hym seyde, "Fader, why do ye
wepe?"

Whanne wol the gayler bryngenoure potage?

Is ther no morsel breed that ye do kepe?
I am so hungry that I may nat slepe 2435 Now wolde God that I myghte slepen everel

Thanne sholde nat hunger in my wombe crepe,

Ther is no thyng, save breed, that me were levere "

Thus day by day this child bigan to crye, Til in his fadres barm adoun it lay, *3630
And seyde, "Farewel, fader, I moot dye!"
And kiste his fader, and dyde the same day
And whan the woful fader deed it say,
For wo his armes two he gan to byte, And seyde, "Allas, Fortune, and weyl-
away!" 2445

Thy false wheel my wo al may I wyte "

His children wende that it for hunger was That he his armes gnou, and nat for wo,
And seyde, "Fader, do nat so, allas!
But rather ete the flessch upon us two *3640 Oure flessch thou yaf us, take oure flessch us fro,
And ete ynogh," — right thus they to hym
seyde,

And after that, withinne a day or two,
They leyde hem in his lappe adoun and
deyde

Hymself, despeired, eek for hunger starf, 2455
Thus ended is this myghty Erl of Pize From heigh estaat Fortune away hym carf

Of this tragedie it oghte ynough suffise, Whoso wol here it in a lenger wise, Redeth the grete poete of Ytaille *3650
That highte Dant, for he kan al devyse Fro point to point, nat o word wol he faille

Nero

Although that Nero were as vicious
As any feend that lith ful lowe adoun, Yet he, as telleth us Swetonius, 2465
This wyde world hadde in subjeccioun Bothe est and west, [south], and septem-troun

Of rubies, saphires, and of peerles white Were alle his clothes brouded up and doun
For he in gemmes greetly gan delite *3660

Moore delicaat, moore pompous of array, Moore proud was nevere emperour than he,
That like clooth that he hadde wered o day, After that tyme he nolde it nevere see Nettes of gold threed hadde he greet
plentee 2475

To fische in Tybre, whan hym liste pleye
His lustes were as lawe in his decree, For Fortune, as his freend, hym wolde
obeye

He Rome brende for his delicacie,
The senatours he slow upon a day, *3670 To heere how that men wolde wepe and
crie,

And slow his brother, and by his suster lay
His mooder made he in pitous array,
For he hire wombe slitte to biholde

Where he conceyved was, so weilaway!
That he so litel of his mooder tolde 2486

No teere out of his eyen for that sighte Ne cam, but seyde, "A fair womman was
she!"

Greet wonder is how that he koude or
myghte

Be domesman of hire dede beautee *3680
The wyn to bryngen hym comanded he,
And drank anon, — noon oother wo he made

Whan myght is joyned unto crueltee, Allas, to depe wol the venym wade! 2494

In yowthe a maister hadde this emperour
To teche hym letterure and curteisye, For of moraltee he was the flour,
As in his tyme, but if bookes lye,
And whil this maister hadde of hym
mastrye, *3689
He maked hym so konnyng and so sowple
That longe tyme it was er tyrannye Or any vice dorste on hym uncowple

This Seneca, of which that I devyse, By cause Nero hadde of hym swich drode, For he fro vices wolde hym ay chastise 2505

Discreetly, as by word and nat by dede, —
"Sire," wolde he seyn, "an emperour moot nede

Be vertuous and hate tyrannye — "
For which he in a bath made hym to blede
On bothe his armes, til he moste dye *3700

This Nero hadde eek of acustumaunce In youthe agayns his maister for to ryse, Which afterward hym thoughte a greet
grevaunce,

Therefore he made hym dyen in this wise
But natheless this Seneca the wise 2515 Chees in a bath to dye in this manere Rather than han another tormentise, And thus hath Nero slayn his maister
deere

Now fil it so that Fortune hste no lenger
The hye pryde of Nero to cherice, *3710 For though that he were strong, yet was she strengier
She thoughte thus, "By God! I am to nyce

To sette a man that is fulfild of vice In heigh degree, and emperour hym calle By God! out of his sete I wol hym trice, 2525
Whan he leest weneth, sonnest shal he
falle "

The peple roos upon hym on a nyght
For his defaute, and whan he it espied,
Out of his dores anon he hath hym dight Alone, and ther he wende han been allied, *3720

He knocked faste, and ay the moore he cried,

The fastere shette they the dores alle Tho wiste he wel, he hadde himself mysgyed,

And wente his wey, no lenger dorste he calle

The peple cride and rombled up and
doun, 2535

That with his erys herde he how they
seyde,

"Where is this false tiraunt, this Neroun?" For fere almost out of his wit he breyde,
And to his goddes pitously he preyde
For socour, but it myghte nat bityde *3730 For drede of this, hym thoughte that he
deyde,

And ran into a gardyn hym to hyde

And in this gardyn foond he cherles tweye
That seten by a fyr ful greet and reed 2544
And to thuse cherles two he gan to preye
To sleen hym, and to girden of his heed,
That to his body, whan that he were deed,
Were no despit ydoon for his defame Hymself he slow, he koude no better reed, Of which Fortune lough, and hadde a game *3740

De Oloferno

Was nevere capitayn under a kyng
That regnes mo putte in subjeccioun, Ne strengier was in feeld of alle thyng,
As in his tyme, ne gretter of renoun, Ne moore pompous in heigh presump-
cioun 2555

Than Oloferne, which Fortune ay kiste
So likerously, and ladde hym up and doun, Til that his heed was of, er that he wiste

Nat oonly that this world hadde hym in ave

For lesyng of richesse or libertee, *3750
But he made every man reneyen his lawe
"Nabugodonosor was god," seyde hee,
"Noon oother god sholde adoured bee" Agayns his heeste no wight dar trespace Save in Bethulia, a strong citee, 2565 Where Ehachim a preest was of that place

But taak kep of the deth of Oloferne Amydde his hoost he dronke lay a nyght, Withinne his tente, large as is a berne, And yet, for al his pompe and al his
myght, *3760

Judith, a womman, as he lay upright Slepyng, his heed of smoot, and from his
tente

Ful pryvely she stal from every wight,
And with his heed unto hir toun she wente

De Rege Antiocho illustri

What nedeth it of kyng Antiochus 2575
To telle his hye roial magestee,
His hye pride, his werkes venymus?
For swich another was ther noon as he Rede which that he was in Machabee, And rede the proude wordes that he
seyde, *3770
And why he fil fro heigh prosperitee,
And in an hill how wretchedly he deyde

Fortune hym hadde enhaunced so in pride That verraily he wende he myghte attayne Unto the sterres upon every syde, 2585
And in balance weyen ech montayne, And alle the floodes of the see restrayne
And Goddes peple hadde he moost in hate, Hem wolde he sleen in torment and in
payne,
Wenyng that God ne myghte his pride abate *3780

And for that Nichanore and Thymothee
Of Jewes wren venquysshed myghtly, Unto the Jewes swich an hate hadde he
That he bad grethen his chaar ful hastily,
And swoor, and seyde ful despitously 2595
Unto Jerusalem he wolde eftsoone, To wroken his ire on it ful cruelly,
But of his purpos he was let ful soone

God for his manace hym so soore smoot
With invisible wounde, ay incurable, *3790
That in his guttes carf it so and boot
That his peynes weren importable
And certainly the wreche was resonable,
For many a mannes guttes dide he payne But from his purpos cursed and dampnable, 2605
For al his smert, he wolde hym nat restreyne,

But bad anon apparailen his hoost;
And soodeynly, er he was of it war,
God daunted al his pride and al his boost For he so soore fil out of his char *3800
That it his lmes and his skyn totar,
So that he neyther myghte go ne ryde,
But in a chayer men aboute hym bar,
Al forbrused, bothe bak and syde 2614

The wreche of God hym smoot so cruelly That thurgh his body wikked wormes
crepte,
And therwithal he stank so horribly That noon of al his meynee that hym kepte, Whether so he wook, or ellis slepte, Ne myghte noght the stynk of hym endure *3810
In this meschief he wayled and eek wepte,
And knew God lord of every creature

To al his hoost and to hymself also Ful wlatson was the stynk of his careyne, No man ne myghte hym bere to ne
fro 2625
And in this stynk and this horrible payne,
He starf ful wretchedly in a monteyne
Thus hath this robbour and this homyude, That many a man made to wepe and
pleyne, *3819
Swich gerdoun as bilongeth unto pryde

De Alexandro

The storie of Ahsaundre is so commune That every wight that hath discrecioun Hath herd somewhat or al of his fortune
This wyde world, as in conclusioun, He wan by strengthe, or for his hye re-noun 2635
They wren glad for pees unto hym sende
The pride of man and beest he leyde adoun, Wherso he cam, unto the worldes ende Comparisoun myghte nevere yet been maked *3829

Bitwixe hym and another conquerour, For al this world for drede of hym hath quaked

He was of knyghthod and of fredom flour, Fortune hym made the heir of hire honour Save wyn and wommen, no thing myghte aswage

His hye entente in armes and labour, 2645
So was he ful of leonyn corage

What pris were it to hym, though I yow
tolde

Of Darus, and an hundred thousand mo
Of kynges, princes, dukes, erles bolde Whiche he conquered, and broghte hem into wo? *3840

I seye, as fer as man may ryde or go,
The world was his, — what sholde I moore
devyse?

For though I write or tolde yow everemo
Of his knyghthod, it myghte nat suffise

Twelf yeer he regned, as seith Macha-bee 2655

Philippe sone of Macidoyne he was,
That first was kyng in Grece the contree O worthy, gentil Ahsandre, allas, That evere sholde fallen swich a cas!
Empoysoned of thyn owene folk thou weere, *3850

Thy sys Fortune hath turned into aas,
And yet for thee ne weep she never a teere

Who shal me yeven teeris to compleyne
The deeth of gentillesse and of franchise,
That al the world weeded in his demeyne,
And yet hym thoughte it myghte nat
suffise? 2666

So ful was his corage of heigh emprise Allas! who shal me helpe to endite False Fortune, and poyson to despise,
The whiche two of al this wo I wyte? *3860

De Julio Cesare

By wisdom, manhede, and by greet
labour,

From humble bed to roial magestee
Up roos he Julius, the conquerour, That wan al th'occident by land and see,
By strengthe of hand, or elles by trettee,

And unto Rome made hem tributarie, 2676
And sitthe of Rome the emperour was he,
Til that Fortune weex his adversarie

O myghty Cesar, that in Thessaie Agayn Pompeus, fader thyn in lawe, *3870
That of the orient hadde al the chivalrie
As fer as that the day bignyeth dawe, Thou thurgh thy knyghthod hast hem take and slawe,

Save fewe folk that with Pompeus fledde, Thurgh which thou putttest al th'orient in awe 2685

Thanke Fortune, that so wel thee spedde!

But now a litel while I wol biwaille
This Pompeus, this noble governour Of Rome, which that fleigh at this bataille
I seye, oon of his men, a fals traitour, *3880
His heed of smoot, to wynnen hym favour Of Julius, and hym the heed he broghte Allas, Pompeye, of th'orient conquerour, That Fortune unto swich a fyn thee
broghte!

To Rome agayn repaireth Julius 2695
With his triumpe, lauriat ful hye,
But on a tyme Brutus Cassius,
That evere hadde of his hye estaat envye, Ful prively hath maad conspiracye Agayns this Julius in subtil wise, *3890
And caste the place in which he sholde dye
With boydekyns, as I shal yow devyse

This Julius to the Capitohe wente
Upon a day, as he was wont to goon,
And in the Capitohe anon hym hente 2705
This false Brutus and his othere foon,
And staked hym with boydekyns anoon With many a wounde, and thus they lete hym lye,

But nevere gronte he at no strook but oon,
Or elles at two, but if his storie lye *3900

So manly was this Julius of herte,
And so wel lovede estaatly honestee, That though his deedly woundes soore
smerte,

His mantel over his hypes caste he,
For no man sholde seen his privetee, 2715
And as he lay of dyng in a traunce,

And wiste verraily that deed was hee,
Of honestee yet hadde he remembrance

Lucan, to thee this storie I recomende,
And to Swetoun, and to Valerie also, *3910
That of this storie written word and ende, How that to thise grete conqueroures two Fortune was first freend, and sitthe foo
No man ne truste upon hire favour longe,
But have hire in awayt for everemoo, 2725 Witnessse on alle thise conqueroures
stronge

Cresus

This riche Cresus, whilom kyng of Lyde,
Of which Cresus Cyrus soore hym dradde,
Yet was he caught amyddes al his pryde,
And to be brent men to the fyr hym
ladde *3920
But swich a reyn doun fro the welkne shadde
That slow the fyr, and made hym to escape,
But to be war no grace yet he hadde, Til Fortune on the galwes made hym gape

Whanne he escaped was, he kan nat
stente 2735
For to bigynne a newe werre agayn
He wende wel, for that Fortune hym sente Swich hap that he escaped thurgh the rayn,
That of his foos he myghte nat be slayn, And eek a sweven upon a nyght he
mette, *3930
Of which he was so proud and eek so fayn
That in vengeance he al his herte sette

Upon a tree he was, as that hym thoughte, Ther Juppiter hym wessh, bothe bak and
syde,
And Phebus eek a fair towaille hym
broughte 2745
To dryen hym with, and therefore wax his pryde,
And to his doghter, that stood hym bisyde, Which that he knew in heigh science
habounde,
He bad hire telle hym what it signyfyde,
And she his dreem bigan right thus expounde *3940

“The tree,” quod she, “the galwes is to meene,
And Juppiter bitokneth snow and reyn,
And Phebus, with his towaille so clene, Tho been the sonne stremes for to seyn Thou shalt anhangd be, fader, certeyn, 2755
Reyn shal thee wasshe, and sonne shal thee drye”
Thus warned hym ful plat and eek ful
pleyn
His doghter, which that called was Phanye Anhangd was Cresus, the proude kyng,
His roial trone myghte hym nat availle Tragedies noon oother maner thyng *3951
Ne kan in syngyng crie ne biwaille
But that Fortune alwey wole assaille With unwar strook the regnes that been
proude,
For whan men trusteth hire, thanne wol she faille, 2765
And covere hire brighte face with a clowde

Heere stynteth the Knyght the Monk of his tale

THE PROLOGUE OF THE NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE

The prologe of the Nonnes Preestes Tale

"Hoo!" quod the Knyght, "good sire, namoore of this!
 That ye han seyde is right ynough, ywis,
 And muchel moore, for litel hevynesse Is right ynough to mucche folk, I gesse *3960
 I seye for me, it is a greet disese, Whereas men han been in greet welthe and
 ese,
 To heeren of hire sodeyn fal, allas!
 And the contrarie is joye and greet solas,
 As whan a man hath been in povre
 estaat, 2775
 And clymbeth up and wexeth fortunat,
 And there abideth in prosperitee Swich thyng is gladsom, as it thynketh me,
 And of swich thyng were goodly for to

 If he wol serve thee, rekke nat a bene Looke that thyn herte be murie evere-
 mo " 2815
 "Yis, sir," quod he, "yis, Hoost, so moot
 I go,
 But I be myrie, ywis I wol be blamed "
 And right anon his tale he hath attamed,
 And thus he seyde unto us everichon,
 This sweete preest, this goodly man sir

THE NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Nonnes Preestes Tale of the Cok and Hen, Chauntecleer and Pertelote

A povre wydwe, somdeel stape in age
Was whilom dwellyng in a narwe cotage Beside a grove, stondyng in a dale
This wydwe, of which I telle yow my tale, Syn thilke day that she was last a wyf, 2825
In pacience ladde a ful symple lyf,
For litel was hir catel and hir rente
By housbondrie of swich as God hire sente She foond hirself and eek hir doghtren
two

Thre large sowes hadde she, and namo, *4020
Three keene, and eek a sheep that highte Malle

Ful sooty was hire bour and eek hir halle,
In which she eet ful many a sklendre meel
Of poynaunt sauce hir neded never a deel No deyntee morsel passed thurgh hir
throthe, 2835

Hir diete was accordant to hir cote Repleccioun ne made hire nevere sik, Attempree diete was al hir phisik,
And exercise, and hertes suffisaunce The goute lette hire nothyng for to
daunce, *4030

N'apoplexie shente nat hir heed
No wyn ne drank she, neither whit ne reed, Hir bord was served moost with whit and
blak,

Milk and broun breed, in which she foond no lak, Seynd bacoun, and somtyme an ey or
tweye, 2845

For she was, as it were, a maner deye
A yeerd she hadde, enclosed al aboute
With stikkes, and a drye dych withoute, In which she hadde a cok, hight Chaunte-
cleer *4039

In al the land of crowyng nas his peer His voys was murier than the murie orgon On messe-dayes that in the churche gon Wel sikerer was his crowyng in his logge Than is a klokke or an abbey orlogge
By nature he knew ech ascencioun 2855
Of the equynoxial in thilke toun,
For whan degreys fiftene weren ascended,

Thanne crew he, that it myghte nat been amended

His coomb was redder than the fyn coral,
And batailled as it were a castel wal, *4050
His byle was blak, and as the feet it shoon, Lyk asure were his legges and his toon,
His nayles whitter than the lylve flour,
And lyk the burned gold was his colour This gentil cok hadde in his govern-
aunce 2865

Sevene hennes for to doon al his plessaunce, Whiche were his sustres and his paramours,
And wonder lyk to hym, as of colours,
Of whiche the faireste hewed on hir throthe Was cleped faire damoysele Pertelote *4060
Curteys she was, discreet, and debonaire,
And compaignable, and bar hyrself so faire, Syn thilke day that she was seven nyght cold,

That trewely she hath the herte in hoold
Of Chauntecleer, loken in every lith, 2875 He loved hire so that wel was hym ther-with

But swich a joye was it to here hem synge, Whan that the bryghte sonne gan to
sprynge,
In sweete accord, "My hef is faren in londe!"

For thilke tyme, as I have understonde, Beestes and briddes koude speke and synge *4071

And so bifel that in a dawenyng,
As Chauntecleer among his wyves allc Sat on his perche, that was in the halle,
And next hym sat this faire Pertelote, 2885
This Chauntecleer gan gronen in his throthe, As man that in his dreem is dreched soore And whan that Pertelote thus herde hym roore,

She was agast, and seyde, "Herte deere, What eyleth yow, to grone in thus man-ere? *4080

Ye been a verray sleper, fy, for shame!" And he answerde, and seyde thus "Madame,

I pray yow that ye take it nat agrief
 By God, me mette I was in swich meschief Right now, that yet myn herte is soore a fright 2895
 Now God" quod he, "my swevene recche a right,
 And kepe my body out of foul prisoun'
 Me mette how that I romed up and down Withinne our yeerd, wheer as I saugh a beest
 Was lyk an hound, and wolde han maad areest *4090
 Upon my body, and wolde han had me deed
 His colour was bitwixe yelow and reed,
 And tipped was his tayl and bothe his eeris With blak, unlyk the remenant of his heeris,
 His snowte smal, with glowyng eyen
 tweye 2905
 Yet of his look for feere almost I deye, This caused me my gronyng, douteles"
 "Avoy!" quod she, "fy on yow, herteles' Allas!" quod she, "for, by that God above, Now han ye lost myn herte and al my love
 I kan nat love a coward, by my feith! *4101
 For certes, what so any womman seith,
 We alle desren, if it myghte bee,
 To han housbondes hardy, wise, and free,
 And secree, and no nygard, ne no fool, 2915
 Ne hym that is agast of every tool, Ne noon avauntour, by that God above!
 How dorste ye seyn, for shame, unto youre
 love
 That any thyng myghte make yow aferd?
 Have ye no mannes herte, and han a berd? *4110
 Allas! and konne ye been agast of swev-enys?
 Nothyng, God woot, but vantee in sweven is Swevenes engendren of replecciouns,
 And ofte of fume and of complecciouns, Whan humours been to habundant in a
 wight 2925
 Certes this dreem, which ye han met to-
 nyght,
 Cometh of the greete superfluytee Of youre rede colera, pardee,
 Which causeth folk to dreden in hir dremes
 Of arwes, and of fyr with rede lemes, *4120
 Of rede beestes, that they wol hem byte,
 Of kontek, and of whelpes, grete and lyte,

Right as the humour of malencoke Causeth ful many a man in sleep to crie
 For feere of blake beres, or boles blake, 2935 Or elles blake develes wole hem take Of othere humours koude I telle also That werken many a man in sleep ful wo,
 But I wol passe as lightly as I kan Lo Catoun, which that was so wys a
 man, *4130
 Seyde he nat thus, 'Ne do no fors of dremes?'
 Now sire," quod she, "whan we flee fro the bemes,
 For Goddes love, as taak som laxatyf Up peril of my soule and of my lyf,
 I conseilte yow the beste, I wol nat lye, 2945
 That bothe of colere and of malencolye Ye purge yow, and for ye shal nat tarie, Though in this toun is noon apothecarie,
 I shal myself to herbes techen yow That shul been for youre hele and for youre
 prow, *4140
 And in oure yeerd the herbes shal I fynde
 The whiche han of hire propretee by kynde
 To purge yow bynethe and eek above Foryet nat this, for Goddes owene love!
 Ye been ful coleryk of compleccioun, 2955
 Ware the sonne in his ascencioun Ne fynde yow nat repleet of humours hoote
 And if it do, I dar wel leye a grote,
 That ye shul have a fevere terciane,
 Or an agu, that may be youre bane *4150
 A day or two ye shul have digestyves Of wormes, er ye take youre laxatyves
 Of lawriol, centaure, and fumetere,
 Or elles of ellebor, that groweth there,
 Of katapuce, or of gaitrys berys, 2965 Of herbe yve, growyng in oure yeerd, ther mery is,
 Pekke hem up right as they growe and ete hem yn
 Be myrie, housbonde, for youre fader kyn!
 Dredeth no dreem, I kan sey yow namoore" "Madame," quod he, "graunt mercy of youre loore *4160
 But natheles, as touchyng daun Catoun,
 That hath of wysdom swich a greet renoun, Though that he bad no dremes for to drede,
 By God, men may in olde bookes rede
 Of many a man moore of auctorite 2975
 Than evere Caton was, so moot I thee,

That al the revers seyn of this sentence,
And han wel founden by experience That dremes been significaciouns
As wel of joye as of tribulaciouns *4170
That folk enduren in this lif present Ther nedeth make of this noon argument,
The verray preeve sheweth it in dede

Oon of the gretteste auctour that men
rede

Seith thus, that whilom two felawes
wente 2985

On pilgrimage, in a ful good entente,
And happed so, they coomen in a toun Wher as ther was swich congregacioun Of peple, and eek so stret of herbergage, That they ne founde as muche as o cotage *4180

In which they bothe myghte ylogged bee Wherfore they mosten of necessitee,
As for that nyght, departen compaignye,
And ech of hem gooth to his hostelrye,
And took his loggyng as it wolde falle 2995
That oon of hem was logged in a stalle, Fer in a yeerd, with oxen of the plough,
That oother man was logged wel ynough,
As was his aventure or his fortune,
That us governeth alle as in commune *4190

And so bifel that, longe er it were day,
This man mette in his bed, ther as he lay,
How that his felawe gan upon hym calle,
And seyde, 'Allas' for in an oxes stalle This nyght I shal be mordred ther I
lye 3005

Now help me, deere brother, or I dye
In alle haste com to me!' he sayde
This man out of his sleep for feere abrayde,
But whan that he was wakened of his sleep,
He turned hym, and took of this no
keep *4200

Hym thoughte his drem nas but a vanitee
Thus twies in his slepyng dremed hee,
And atte thridde tyme yet his felawe Cam, as hym thoughte, and seide, 'I am now slawe

Bihoold my bloody woundes depe and wyde! 3015

Arys up erly in the morwe tyde,
And at the west gate of the toun,' quod he,
'A carte ful of dong ther shaltow se,
In which my body is hid ful prively,
Do thilke carte arresten boldly *4210
My gold caused my mordre, sooth to sayn'

And tolde hym every point how he was
slayn,

With a ful pitous face, pale of hewe
And truste wel, his drem he foond ful
trewe,

For on the morwe, as soone as it was
day, 3025

To his felawes in he took the way,
And whan that he cam to this oxes stalle,
After his felawe he bigan to calle

The hostuler answerede hym anon,
And seyde, 'Sure, your felawe is agon' *4220
As soone as day he wente out of the toun'

This man gan fallen in suspecioun, Remembrynge on his dremes that he
mette,

And forth he gooth—no lenger wolde he
lette—

Unto the west gate of the toun, and
fond 3035

A dong-carte, wente as it were to donge
lond,

That was arrayed in that same wise
As ye han herd the dede man devyse
And with an hardy herte he gan to crye Vengeance and justice of this felonye *4230
'My felawe mordred is this same nyght,
And in this carte he lith gapyng upright I crye out on the ministres,' quod he,
'That sholden kepe and reulen this citee Harrow' allas' heere lith my felawe
slayn' 3045

What sholde I moore unto this tale sayn?
The peple out sterte and caste the cart to grounde,

And in the myddel of the dong they founde
The dede man, that mordred was al newe O blisful God, that art so just and
trewe, *4240

Lo, how that thou biwreyest mordre alway!
Mordre wol out, that se we day by day Mordre is so watson and abhomynable
To God, that is so just and resonable,
That he ne wol nat suffre it heled be, 3055
Though it abyde a yeer, or two, or thre Mordre wol out, this my conclusioun And right anon, ministres of that toun Han hent the carter and so soore hym pyned,

And eek the hostuler so soore engnyed, *4250
That they biknewe hire wikkednesse anon,
And were anhangid by the nekke-bon Heere may men seen that dremes been to drede

And certes in the same book I rede, Right in the nexte chapitre after this — 3065
I gabbe nat, so have I joye or blis —
Two men that wolde han passed over see,
For certeyn cause, into a fer contree,
If that the wynd ne hadde been contrarie,
That made hem in a citee for to tarie *4260
That stood ful myrie upon an haven-syde,
But on a day, agayn the even-tyde, The wynd gan change, and blew right as hem leste
Jolif and glad they wente unto hir reste,
And casten hem ful erly for to saille 3075
But to that o man fil a greet mervaille
That oon of hem, in slepyng as he lay, Hym mette a wonder drem agayn the day Hym thoughte a man stood by his beddes
syde,
And hym comanded that he sholde
abyde, *4270
And seyde hym thus, 'If thou tomorwe
wende,
Thow shalt be dreynt, my tale is at an
ende'
He wook, and tolde his felawe what he
mette,
And preyde hym his viage for to lette, 3084
As for that day, he preyde hym to byde
His felawe, that lay by his beddes syde, Gan for to laughe, and scorned him ful
faste
'No drem,' quod he, 'may so myn herte agaste
That I wol lette for to do my thynges
I sette nat a straw by thy dremynges, *4280
For sweenes been but vanytees and japes Men dreme alday of owles and of apes,
And eek of many a maze therwithal, Men dreme of thyng that nevere was ne
shal
But sith I see that thou wolt heere
abyde, 3095
And thus forslawthen wilfully thy tyde, God woot, it reweth me, and have good
day!'
And thus he took his leve, and wente his way
But er that he hadde half his cours yseyled, Noot I nat why, ne what myschaunce it eyled, *4290

But casuelly the shippes botme rente,
And ship and man under the water wente
In sighte of othere shippes it bisyde,
That with hem seyled at the same tyde
And therfore, faire Pertelote so deere, 3105
By swiche ensamples olde mastow leere
That no man sholde been to recchelees Of dremes, for I seye thee, doutelees,
That many a drem ful soore is for to drede Lo, in the lyf of Seint Kenelm I rede, That was Kenulphus sone, the noble
kyng *4301
Of Mercenrike, how Kenelm mette a
thyng
A lite er he was mordred, on a day,
His mordre in his avysioun he say His norice hym expowned every deel 3115 His sweven, and bad hym for to kepe hym
weel
For traisoun, but he nas but seven yeer
oold,
And therfore litel tale hath he toold
Of any drem, so hooly was his herte By God! I hadde levere than my
sherte *4310
That ye hadde rad his legende, as have I Dame Pertelote, I sey yow trewely, Macrobeus, that writ the avisoun In Affrike of the worthy Ciprioun, Affermeth dremes, and seith that they
been 3125
Warnyng of thynges that men after seen
And forthermoore, I pray yow, looketh wel In the olde testament, of Daniel,
If he heeld dremes any vanitee Reed eek of Joseph, and ther shul ye
see *4320
Wher dremes be somtyme — I sey nat
alle —
Warnyng of thynges that shul after falle Looke of Egipte the kyng, daun Pharao, His bakere and his butiller also, Wher they ne felte noon effect in dremes 3135
Whoso wol seken actes of sondry remes
May rede of dremes many a wonder thyng Lo Cresus, which that was of Lyde kyng, Mette he nat that he sat upon a tree,
Which signified he sholde anhangd
bee? *4330
Lo heere Andromacha, Ectores wyf,
That day that Ector sholde lese his lyf,

She dremed on the same nyght biforn
 How that the lyf of Ector sholde be lorn,
 If thilke day he wente into bataille 3145
 She warned hym, but it myghte nat availl,
 He wente for to fighte natheles,
 But he was slayn anon of Achilles
 But thilke tale is al to longe to telle,
 And eek it is ny day, I may nat dwelle *4340 Shortly I seye, as for conclusioun, That I shal han of this avisioun Adversitee, and I seye forthermoor,
 That I ne telle of laxatyves no stoor, For they been venymous, I woot it
 weel, 3155

I hem diffye, I love hem never a deel!
 Now let us speke of myrthe, and stynte
 al this

Madame Pertelote, so have I blis,
 Of o thyng God hath sent me large grace,
 For whan I se the beautee of youre
 face, *4350

Ye been so scarlet reed aboute youre yen,
 It maketh al my drede for to dyen,
 For al so siker as In principio, Mulier est hominis confusio, — Madame, the sentence of this Latyn is, 3165
 'Womman is mannes joye and al his blis'
 For whan I feele a-nyght your softe syde, Al be it that I may nat on yow ryde,
 For thatoure perche is maad so narwe,
 allas!

I am so ful of joye and of solas, *4360
 That I diffye bothe sweven and drem?"
 And with that word he fley doum fro the beam,

For it was day, and eke his hennes alle,
 And with a chuk he gan hem for to calle, For he hadde founde a corn, lay in the yerd 3175

Real he was, he was namoore aferd
 He fethered Pertelote twenty tyme,
 And trad hire eke as ofte, er it was pryme
 He looketh as it were a grym leoun,
 And on his toos he rometh up and doum, Hym deigned nat to sette his foot to grounde *4371

He chuketh, whan he hath a corn yfounde,

And to hym rennen thanne his wyves alle
 Thus roial, as a prince is in his halle, Leve I this Chauntecleer in his pasture, 3185

And after wol I telle his aventure

Whan that the month in which the world
 bigan,

That highte March, whan God first maketh
 man,

Was compleet, and passed were also, Syn March bigan, thritty dayes and
 two, *4380

Bifel that Chauntecleer in al his pryde,
 His sevene wyves walkynge by his syde, Caste up his eye to the brighte sonne,
 That in the signe of Taurus hadde yronne Twenty degrees and oon, and somewhat
 moore, 3195

And knew by kynde, and by noon oother
 loore,

That it was pryme, and crew with blisful
 stevene

"The sonne," he seyde, "is clomben up on hevene

Fourty degrees and oon, and moore ywis Madame Pertelote, my worldes blis, *4390 Herkneþ these blisful briddes how they
 syng,

And se the fresshe floures how they
 sprynge,

Ful is myn herte of revel and solas!"
 But sodovynly hym fil a sorweful cas,
 For evere the latter ende of joye is wo 3205
 God woot that worldly joye is soone ago,
 And if a rethor koude faire endite,

He in a cronycle sauffy myghte it write
 As for a sovereyn notabilitee

Now every wys man, lat him herkne
 me, *4400

This storie is also trewe, I undertake,
 As is the book of Launcelot de Lake,
 That women holde in ful greet reverence Now wol I torne agayn to my sentence
 A col-fox, ful of sly iniquitee, 3215
 That in the grove hadde woned yeres
 thre,

By heigh ymaginacioun forncast,
 The same nyght thurghout the hegges brast

Into the yerd ther Chauntecleer the faire Was wont, and cek his wyves, to repaire, *4410

And in a bed of wortes stille he lay,
 Til it was passed undren of the day, Waitynge his tyme on Chauntecleer to
 falle,

As gladly doon thise homycides alle
That in await ligen to mordre men 3225
O false mordroure, lurkyng in thy den!
O newe Scariot, newe Genylon, False dissymulour, o Greek Nyon,
That broghtest Troye al outrely to sorwe!
O Chauntecleer, acursed be that morwe That thou into that yerd flaugh fro the bemes! *4421

Thou were ful wel ywarned by thy dremes
That thilke day was perilous to thee, But what that God forwoot moot nedes
bee,

After the opinoun of certein clerkis 3235 Witnessse on hym that any parfit clerk is,
That in scole is greet altercacioun
In this mateere, and greet disputacioun, And hath been of an hundred thousand
men

But I ne kan nat bulte it to the bren, *4430

As kan the hooly doctour Augustyn, Or Boece, or the Bissshop Bradwardyn, Whether that Goddes worthy forwityng Streyneth me nedely for to doon a
thyng, —

“Nedely” clepe I symple necessitee, 3245
Or elles, if free choys be graunted me
To do that same thyng, or do it nocht, Though God forwoot it er that it was
wroght,

Or if his wityng streyneth never a deel
But by necessitee condicioneel *4440
I wol nat han to do of swich mateere,
My tale is of a cok, as ye may heere,
That tok his conseil of his wyf, with sorwe,
To walken in the yerd upon that morwe That he hadde met that drem that I yow
tolde 3255

Wommennes conseilis been ful ofte colde, Wommannes conseil broghte us first to wo,
And made Adam fro Paradys to go,
Ther as he was ful myrie and wel at ese But for I noot to whom it myght dis-plesa, *4450

If I conseil of wommen wolde blame, Passe over, for I seyde it in my game Rede auctours, where they trete of swich
mateere,
And what they seyn of wommen ye may
heere Thise been the cokkes wordes, and nat
myne, 3265

I kan noon harm of no womman divyne Faire in the soond, to bathe hire myrily, Lith Pertelote, and alle hire sustres by,
Agayn the sonne, and Chauntecleer so free Soong murier than the mermayde in the
see, *4460

For Physiologus seith sikerly
How that they syngen wel and myrily
And so bifel that, as he caste his ye Among the wortes on a boterflye, He was war of this fox, that lay ful
lowe 3275

Nothing ne liste hym thanne for to crowe, But cride anon, “Cok! cok!” and up he
sterte

As man that was affrayed in his herte
For natureelly a beest desreth flee Fro his contrarie, if he may it see, *4470 Though he never erst hadde seyn it with his ye

This Chauntecleer, whan he gan hym
espye,
He wolde han fled, but that the fox anon Seyde, “Gentil sire, allas! wher wol ye gon?
Be ye affrayed of me that am youre freend? 3285

Now, certes, I were worse than a feend,
If I to yow wolde harm or vileynye!
I am nat come youre conseil for t'espye,
But trewely, the cause of my comyng
Was oonly for to herkne how that ye
syng 3480

For trewely, ye have as myrie a stevene
As any aungel hath that is in hevene Therwith ye han in musyk moore feelynge Than hadde Boece, or any that kan
syng

My lord youre fader — God his soule
blesse! — 3295

And eek youre mooder, of hire gentillesse, Han in myn hous ybeen to my greet ese,
And certes, sire, ful fayn wolde I yow
plese

But for men speke of syngyng, I wol seye,
So moote I brouke wel myne eyen tweye, Save yow, I herde nevere man so syng 4491
As dide youre fader in the morwenyng Certes, it was of herte, al that he song
And for to make his voys the moore strong, He wolde so peyne hym that with bothe his yen 3305
He moste wynke, so loude he wolde cryen,

And stonden on his tiptoon therewithal, And streche forth his nekke long and smal

And eek he was of swich discrecioun
That ther nas no man in no regioun *4500 That hym in song or wisdom myghte
passe

I have wel rad in "Daun Burnel the Asse,"

Among his vers, how that ther was a cok,
For that a preestes sone yaf hym a knok Upon his leg whil he was yong and
nyce, 3315

He made hym for to lese his benefice
But certeyn, ther nys no comparisoun Bitwixe the wisdom and discrecioun Of youre fader and of his subtiltee
Now syngeth, sire, for seinte charitee, *4510 Lat se, konne ye youre fader counrefete?'

This Chauntecleer his wynges gan to
bete,

As man that koude his traysoun nat espie,
So was he ravysshed with his flatere Allas! ye lordes, many a fals flatour 3325 Is in youre courtes, and many a losengeour,

That plesen yow wel moore, by my feith, Than he that soothfastnesse unto yow
seith

Redeth Ecclesiaste of flaterye, Beth war, ye lordes, of hur trecherye *4520 This Chauntecleer stood hye upon his toos,

Strechynge his nekke, and heeld his eyen cloos,

And gan to crowe loude for the nones
And daun Russell the fox stirte up atones,
And by the gargat hente Chauntecleer, And on his bak toward the wode hym beer, 3336

For yet ne was ther no man that hym sewed

O destinee, that mayst nat been eschewed!

Allas, that Chauntecleer fleigh fro the bemes!

Allas, his wyf ne roghte nat of dremes! *4530
And on a Friday fil al this meschaunce

O Venus, that art goddesse of plesaunce, Syn that thy servant was this Chaunte-
cleer,

And in thy servyce dide al his poweer,

Moore for delit than world to multi-
plye, 3345
Why woldestow suffre hym on thy day to
dye?

O Gaufred, deere maister soverayn, That whan thy worthy kyng Richard was
slayn

With shot, compleynedest his deeth so
soore,

Why ne hadde I now thy sentence and thy loore *4540

The Friday for to chide, as diden ye?
For on a Friday, soothly, slayn was he Thanne wolde I shewe yow how that I koude pleyne

For Chauntecleres drede and for his peyne Certes, swich cry ne lamentacion, 3355

Was nevere of ladyes maad whan Yhon Was wonne, and Pirrus with his streite
swerd,

Whan he hadde hent kyng Priam by the
berd,

And slayn hym, as seith us Eneydos,
As maden alle the hennes in the clos, *4550

Whan they had seyn of Chauntecleer the
sighte

But sovereynly dame Pertelote shrighite, Ful louder than dide Hasdrubales wyf, Whan that hir housbonde hadde lost his
lyf,

And that the Romayns hadde brende Cartage 3365

She was so ful of torment and of rage
That wilfully into the fyr she sterte, And brende hirselves with a stedefast
herte

O woful hennes, right so criden ye,
As, whan that Nero brende the citee *4560
Of Rome, cryden senatoures wyves

For that hir husbondes losten alle hir lyves, Withouten gilt this Nero hath hem slayn
Now wole I turne to my tale agayn

This sely wydwe and eek hir doghtres
two 3374

Herden these hennes crie and maken wo,
And out at dores stirten they anon,

And syen the fox toward the grove gon,
And bar upon his bak the cok away,

And cryden, "Out! harrow! and weyl-
away! *4570

Ha! ha! the fox!" and after hym they ran,
And eek with staves many another man Ran Colleoure dogge, and Talbot, and Gerland,

And Malkyn, with a dystaf in hir hand, Ran cow and calf, and eek the verray nogges, 3385

So fered for the berkyng of the dogges
And shoutyng of the men and wommen eek,
They ronne so hem thoughte hir herte breeke
They yolliden as feendes doon in helle, The dokes cryden as men wolde hem
quelle, *4580

The gees for feere flowen over the trees,
Out of the hyve cam the swarm of bees
So hydous was the noyse, a, benedictee!
Certes, he Jakke Straw and his meynee Ne made nevere shoutes half so shrille, 3395 Whan that they wolden any Flemyng kille, As thilke day was maad upon the fox
Of bras they broghten bemes, and of box, Of horn, of boon, in whiche they blewe and popped,
And therewithal they sknrked and they howped *4590

It semed as that hevене sholde falle Now, goode men, I prey yow herkneth
alle
Lo, how Fortune turneth sodeynly
The hope and pryde eek of hir enemy!
This cok, that lay upon the foxes bak, 3405
In al his drede unto the fox he spak,
And seyde, "Sire, if that I were as ye, Yet sholde I seyn, as wys God helpe me,
'Turneth agayn, ye proude cherles alle!
A verray pestilence upon yow falle!' *4600
Now am I come unto the wodes syde, Maugree youre heed, the cok shal heere
abyde
I wol hym ete, in feith, and that anon!"
The fox answerde, "In feith, it shal be don"
And as he spak that word, al sodeynly 3415

This cok brak from his mouth delyverly,
And heighe upon a tree he fleigh anon And whan the fox saugh that the cok was
gon,
"Allas!" quod he, "O Chauntecleer,
allas!
I have to yow," quod he, "ydoon trespas, *4610
In as muche as I makid yow aferd Whan I yow hente and broghte out of the yerd
But, sire, I dide it in no wikke entente Com down, and I shal telle yow what I
mente,
I shal seye sooth to yow, God help me
so!" 3425
"Nay thanne," quod he, "I shrewe us
bothe two
And first I shrewe myself, bothe blood and
bones,
If thou bigyle me ofter than ones Thou shalt namoore, thurgh thy flaterye, Do me to synge and wynke with myn
ye, *4620
For he that wynketh, whan he sholde see, Al wilfully, God lat him nevere thee!"
"Nay," quod the fox, "but God yeve hym meschaunce,
That is so undiscreet of governaunce That jangleth whan he sholde holde his
pees" 3435
Lo, swich it is for to be recchelees
And negligent, and truste on flaterye
But ye that holden this tale a folye,
As of a fox, or of a cok and hen, Taketh the moralite, goode men *4630 For seint Paul seith that al that writen is,
To oure doctrine it is ywrite, ywis, Taketh the fruyt, and lat the chaf be stille
Now, goode God, if that it be thy wille, As seith my lord, so make us alle goode
men, 3445
And brynge us to his heighe blisse! Amen

Heere is ended the Nonnes Preestes Tale

[EPILOGUE TO THE NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE

"Sire Nonnes Preest," oure Hooste seide
 anoon,

"I-blessed be thy breche, and every stoon!
 This was a murie tale of Chauntecleer
 But by my trouthe, if thou were secular, Thou woldest ben a trede-foul aright *4641 For if thou have corage as thou hast
 myght,

Thee were nede of hennes, as I wene, Ya, moo than seven tymes seventene

See, whiche braunes hath this gentil preest, 3455

So gret a nekke, and swich a large breest!
 He loketh as a sperhauk with his yen,
 Him nedeth nat his colour for to dyen
 With brasle, ne with greyn of Portyngale Now, sire, faire falle yow for youre
 tale!" *4650

And after that he, with ful merie chere, Seide unto another, as ye shuln heere]

FRAGMENT VIII (GROUP G)

THE SECOND NUN'S PROLOGUE

The Prologe of the Seconde Nonnes Tale

The minstre and the norice unto vices, Which that men clepe in Englyssh ydel-
 nesse,
 That porter of the gate is of delices,
 To eschue, and by hire contrarie hire op-
 presse,
 That is to seyn, by leueful bisynesse, 5
 Wel oghten we to doon al oure entente, Lest that the feend thurgh ydelnesse us
 hente

For he that with his thousand cordes slye Continuelly us warteth to biclappe, Whan he may man in ydelnesse espye, 10 He kan so lightly cacche hym in his
 trappe,
 Til that a man be hent right by the lappe, He nys nat war the feend hath hym in
 honde
 Wel oghte us werche, and ydelnesse with-
 stonde

And though men dradden nevere for to
 dye, 15
 Yet seen men wel by resoun, doutelees,
 That ydelnesse is roten slogardye, Of which ther nevere comth no good n'encrees,
 And seen that slouthe hire holdeth in a lees
 Oonly to slepe, and for to ete and drynke,
 And to deuouren al that othere swynke 21

And for to putte us fro swich ydelnesse,
 That cause is of so greet confusioun,
 I have heer doon my feithful bisynesse 25
 After the legende, in translacioun, Right of thy glorious lif and passioun, Thou with thy gerland wrought with rose and hie, —
 Thee meene I, mayde and martyr, Sent Cecihe

Invocacio ad Mariam

And thow that flour of virgines art alle,
 Of whom that Bernard list so wel to write,
 To thee at my bigynnyng first I calle, 31
 Thou confort of us wrecches, do me endite Thy maydens deeth, that wan thurgh hire merite

The eterneel lyf, and of the feend victorie,
 As man may after reden in hire storie 35

Thow Mayde and Mooder, doghter of thy Sone,

Thow welle of mercy, synful soules cure,
 In whom that God for bountee chees to
 wone,

Thow humble, and heigh over every creature,

Thow nobledest so ferforth oure nature, 40

That no desdeyn the Makere hadde of
 kynde

His Sone in blood and flessch to clothe and wynde

Withinne the cloistre blisful of thy sydis Took mannes shap the eterneel love and
 pees,

That of the tryne compas lord and gyde
 is, 45

Whom erthe and see and hevene, out of relees,

Ay heryen, and thou, Virgine wemmelees, Baar of thy body — and dweltest mayden pure —

The Creatour of every creature

Assembled is in thee magnificence 50 With mercy, goodnesse, and with swich
 pitee

That thou, that art the sonne of excellence
 Nat oonly helpst hem that preyen thee,
 But often tyme, of thy benygnytee,

Ful frely, er that men thyn help biseche, 55

Thou goost biforn, and art hir lyves leche

Now help, thow meeke and blisful faire
mayde,

Me, flemed wrecche, in this desert of galle, Thynk on the womman Cananee, that
sayde

That whelpes eten somme of the crommes
alle 60

That from hir lordes table been yfalle,
And though that I, unworthy sone of Eve,
Be synful, yet accepte my beleve

And, for that feith is deed withouten
werkis,

So for to werken yif me wit and space, 65
That I be quit fro thennes that moost
derk is!

O thou, that art so fair and ful of grace,
Be myn advocat in that heighe place Theras withouten ende is songe "Osanne," Thow Cristes mooder, doghter dcere of Anne! 70

And of thy light my soule in prison lighte,
That troubled is by the contagioun
Of my body, and also by the wighte
Of erthely lust and fals affeccoun, O havene of refut, o salvacioun 75
Of hem that been in sorwe and in distresse,
Now help, for to my werk I wol me dresse

Yet preye I yow that reden that I write, Foryeve me that I do no diligence
This ilke storne subtly to endite, 80
For bothe have I the wordes and sentence Of hym that at the sentes reverence
The storie wroot, and folwen hire legende, And pray yow, that ye wole my werk amende

Interpretacio nominis Cecilie quam ponit Frater Jacobus Januensis in Legenda

First wolde I yow the name of Seint Cecilie 85

Expowne, as men may in hir storne see It is to seye in Englissh "hevenes lile," For pure chaastnesse of virginitee,
Or, for she whitnesse hadde of honestee, And grene of conscience, and of good fame 90

The soote savour, "lile" was hir name

Or Cecilie is to seye "the wey to blynde," For she ensample was by good techyng, Or elles Cecile, as I writen fynde,
Is joynd, by a manere conjoynyng 95 Of "hevene" and "Lia", and heere, in fig-uryng,
The "hevene" is set for thoght of hooly-
nesse,
And "Lia" for hire lastyng bisynesse

Cecile may eek be seyde in this manere, "Wantyng of blyndnesse," for hir grete light 100

Of sapience, and for hire thewes cleere,
Or elles, loo, this maydens name bright Of "hevene" and "leos" comth, for which by right

Men myghte hire wel "the hevene of peple" calle, Ensamble of goode and wise werkes
alle 105

For "leos" "peple" in Englissh is to seye, And right as men may in the hevene see The sonne and moone and sterres every
weye,

Right so men goostly in this mayden free Seyen of feith the magnanymytee, 110
And eek the cleernesse hool of sapience,
And sondry werkes, brighte of excellence

And right so as thise philosophres write That hevene is swift and round and eek brennyng,

Right so was faire Cecilie the white 115
Ful swift and busy evere in good werkynge,
And round and hool in good perseveryng,
And brennyng evere in charite ful brighte
Now have I yow declared what she highte

THE SECOND NUN'S TALE

Here bigynneth the Seconde Nonnes Tale of the lyf of Seinte Cecile

This mayden bright Cecile, as hir lif serth, 120
 Was comen of Romayns, and of noble
 kynde,
 And from hir cradel up fostred in the feith
 Of Crist, and bar his gospel in hir mynde
 She never cessed, as I writen fynde, Of hir preyere, and God to love and
 drede, 125
 Bisekyng hym to kepe hir maydenhede

And whan this mayden sholde unto a man Ywedded be, that was ful yong of age,
 Which that ycleped was Valerian,
 And day was comen of hir marriage, 130
 She, ful devout and humble in hir corage, Under hir robe of gold, that sat ful faire, Hadde next hire flessch yclad hire in an haire

And whil the organs maden melodie,
 To God allone in herte thus sang she, 135
 "O Lord, my soule and eek my body gye Unwemmed, lest that it confounded be"
 And, for his love that dyde upon a tree,
 Every seconde or thridde day she faste, Ay biddyng in hire onsons ful faste 140

The nyght cam, and to bedde moste she
 gon

With hire housbonde, as ofte is the manere,
 And pryvely to hym she seyde anon,
 "O sweete and wel biloved spouse deere,
 Ther is a conseil, and ye wolde it heere, Which that right fayn I wolde unto yow
 seye, 146
 So that ye swere ye shul it nat biwreie"

Valerian gan faste unto hire swere That for no cas, ne thyng that myghte
 be,
 He sholde nevere mo biwreien here, 150
 And thanne at erst to hym thus seyde she
 "I have an aungel which that loveth me, That with greet love, wher so I wake or sleepe,
 Is redy ay my body for to kepe

"And if that he may feelen, out of
 drede, 155
 That ye me touche, or love in vileynye,
 He right anon wol sle yow with the dede,
 And in youre yowthe thus ye sholden dye,
 And if that ye in clene love me gye, He wol yow loven as me, for youre clen-
 nesse, 160
 And shewen yow his joye and his bright-
 nesse"

Valerian, corrected as God wolde, Answerde agayn, "If I shal trusten thee, Lat me that aungel se, and hym biholde,
 And if that it a verray angel bee, 165 Thanne wol I doon as thou hast prayed
 me,
 And if thou love another man, for sothe Right with this swerd thanne wol I sle yow bothe"

Cecile answerde anon-right in this wise
 "If that yow list, the angel shul ye see, 170
 So that ye trowe on Crist and yow baptize Gooth forth to Via Apia," quod shee, "That fro this toun ne stant but miles
 thre,
 And to the povre folkes that ther dwelle, Sey hem right thus, as that I shal yow
 telle 175

"Telle hem that I, Cecile, yow to hem
 sente,
 To shewen yow the goode Urban the olde,
 For screee nedes and for good entente And whan that ye Seint Urban han bi-
 holde,
 Telle hym the wordes whiche I to yow
 tolde, 180
 And whan that he hath purged yow fro
 synne,
 Thanne shul ye se that angel, er ye
 twynne"

Valerian is to the place ygon,
 And right as hym was taught by his lern-
 ynge,

He foonð this hooly olde Urban anon 185
 Among the seintes buryeles lotyng
 And he anon, withouten tariynge, Dide his message, and whan that he it
 tolde,
 Urban for joye his handes gan up holde

The teeris from his eyen leet he falle 190
 "Almyghty Lord, o Jhesu Crist," quod he,
 "Sower of chaast conseil, hierde of us alle,
 The fruyt of thilke seed of chastitee That thou hast sowe in Cecile, taak to
 thee!

Lo, lyk a busy bee, withouten gile, 195 Thee serveth ay thyn owene thral Cecile

"For thilke spouse that she took right now Ful lyk a fiers leoun, she sendeth heere, As meke as evere was any lomb, to yow!"
 And with that word anon ther gan appeere 200
 An oold man, clad in white clothes cleere, That hadde a book with lettre of gold in
 honde,
 And gan bifore Valerian to stonde

Valerian as deed fil down for drede Whan he hym saugh, and he up hente hym
 tho, 205
 And on his book right thus he gan to rede
 "O Lord, o feith, o God, withouten mo, O Cristendom, and Fader of alle also,
 Aboven alle and over alle everywhere" These wordes al with gold ywriten were Whan this was rad, thanne seyde this olde

 man, 211
 'Leevestow this thyng or no? Sey ye or nay"
 "I levee al this thyng," quod Valerian,
 'For sother thyng than this, I dar wel say, Under the hevene no wight thynke
 may" 215
 Tho vanysshed the olde man, he nyste where,
 And Pope Urban hym cristned right there

Valerian gooth hoom and fynt Cecile Withinne his chambre with an angel
 stonde
 This angel hadde of roses and of lile 220
 Corones two, the which he bar in honde,

And first to Cecile, as I understonde, He yaf that oon, and after gan he take That oother to Valerian, hir make

"With body clene and with unwemmed thoght 225
 Kepeth ay wel thise corones," quod he,
 "Fro paradys to yow have I hem broght, Ne nevere mo ne shal they roten bee,
 Ne lese hir soote savour, trusteth me, Ne nevere wight shal seen hem with his
 ye, 230
 But he be chaast and hate vileynye

"And thow, Valerian, for thow so soone Assentedest to good conseil also, Sey what thee list, and thou shalt han thy boone"
 "I have a brother," quod Valerian tho, 235
 "That in this world I love no man so I pray yow that my brother may han
 grace
 To knowe the trouthe, as I do in this
 place"

The angel seyde, "God liketh thy re-
 queste,
 And bothe, with the palm of martirdom, 240 Ye shullen come unto his blisful feste"
 And with that word Tiburce his brother coom
 And whan that he the savour undernoom, Which that the roses and the lilies caste Withinne his herte, he gan to wondre
 faste, 245

And seyde, "I wondre, this tyme of the
 yeer, Whennes that soote savour cometh so
 Of rose and lilies that I smelle heer For though I hadde hem in myne handes
 two,
 The savour myghte in me no depper
 go 250
 The sweete smel that in myn herte I fynde Hath chaunged me al in another kynde" Valerian seyde "Two corones han we, Snow white and rose reed, that shynen

 cleere,
 Whiche that thyne eyen han no myght to
 see, 255

And as thou smellst hem thurgh my preyere,

So shaltow seen hem, leeve brother deere,
If it so be thou wolt, withouten slouthe, Bileve aright and knowen verray trouthe " Tiburce answerde, "Seistow this to

me 260

In soothnesse, or in drem I herkne this?"

"In dremes," quod Valerian, "han we be Unto this tyme, brother myn, ywis

But now at erst in trouthe oure dwellyng
is "

"How woostow this?" quod Tiburce, "and in what wyse?" 265

Quod Valerian, "That shal I thee devyse

"The aungel of God hath me the trouthe
ytaught

Which thou shalt seen, if that thou wolt reneye

The ydoles and be clene, and elles naught "

And of the myracle of these corones
tweye 270

Semt Ambrose in his preface list to seye, Solempnely this noble doctour deere

Commendeth it, and seith in this manere

"The palm of marturdom for to receyve, Semente Cecile, fulfild of Goddes yfte, 275

The world and eek hire chambre gan she weyve,

Witnesse Tyburces and Valerians shrifte,

To whiche God of his bountee wolde shifte

Corones two of floures wel smellynge,

And make his angel hem the corones
brynge 280

The mayde hath brought these men to blisse
above,

The world hath wist what it is worth,
certeyn,

Devocioun of chastitee to love "

Tho showed hym Cecile al open and pleyn

That alle ydoles nys but a thyng in veyn, 285

For they been dombe, and therto they been deve,

And charged hym his ydoles for to leve

'Whoso that troweth nat this, a beest he is,"

Quod tho Tiburce, "if that I shal nat lye "
And she gan kisse his brest, that herde
this, 290

And was ful glad he koude trouthe espye

"This day I take thee for myn allye," Seyde this blisful faire mayde deere,

And after that she seyde as ye may heere

"Lo, right so as the love of Crist," quod
she, 295

"Made me thy brotheres wyf, right in that
wise

Anon for myn allye heer take I thee,

Syn that thou wolt thyne ydoles despise

Go with thy brother now, and thee baptise,

And make thee clene, so that thou mowe

biholde 300

The anges face of which thy brother tolde

Tiburce answerde and seyde, "Brother
deere,

First tel me whider I shal, and to what
man?"

"To whom?" quod he, "com forth with right good cheere,

I wol thee lede unto the Pope Urban" 305

"Til Urban? brother myn Valerian," Quod tho Tiburce, "woltow me thider lede?

Me thynketh that it were a wonder dede

"Ne menestow nat Urban," quod he tho,

"That is so ofte dampned to be deed, 310

And woneth in halkes alwey to and fro,

And dar nat ones putte forth his heed?

Men sholde hym brennen in a fyr so reed

If he were founde, or that men myghte hym spye,

And we also, to bere hym compaignye, 315

"And whil we seken thilke divinitee,

That is yhid in hevene pryvely,

Algate ybrend in this world shul we be!"

To whom Cecile answerde boldely,

"Men myghten dreden wel and skilfully 320

This lyf to lese, myn owene deere brother,

If this were lyrynge oonly and noon oother

"But ther is bettre lif in oother place,

That nevere shal be lost, ne drede thee
noght,

Which Goddes Sone us tolde thurgh his
grace 325

That Fadres Sone hath alle thyng ywrought,
And al that wroght is with a skilful thought,
The Goost, that fro the Fader gan procede, Hath sowled hem, withouten any drede

By word and by myracle Goddes Sone, 330 Whan he was in this world, declared heere That ther was oother lyf ther men may wone "

To whom answerde Tiburce, "O suster
deere,

Ne seydestow right now in this manere, Ther nys but o God, lord in soothfast-
nesse? 335

And now of three how maystow bere wit-
nesse?"

"That shal I telle," quod she, "er I go Right as a man hath sapiences three, Memorie, engyn, and intellect also,

So in o beyng of divinitee, 340 Thre persones may ther right wel bee "

Tho gan she hym ful bisily to preche
Of Cristes come, and of his peynes teche,

And manye pointes of his passioune, How Goddes Sone in this world was with-
holde 345

To doon mankynde pleyn remissioun, That was ybounde in synne and cares
colde,

Al this thyng she unto Tiburce tolde
And after this Tiburce in good entente 349
With Valerian to Pope Urban he wente,

That thanked God, and with glad herte and light

He cristned hym, and made hym in that place

Parfit in his lernynge, Goddes knyght
And after this Tiburce gat swich grace That every day he saugh, in tyme and space, 355

The aungel of God, and every maner boone That he God axed, it was sped ful soone

It were ful hard by ordre for to seyn How manye wondres Jhesus for hem
wroghte,

But atte laste, to tellen short and pleyn,

The sergeantz of the toun of Rome hem
soghte, 361

And hem biforn Almache, the prefect,
broughte

Which hem apposed, and knew al hire
entente,

And to the ymage of Juppiter hem sente,

And seyde, "Whoso wol nat sacrificise, 365 Swape of his heed, this my sentence heer "

Anon thuse martirs that I yow devyse, Oon Maximus, that was an officer

Of the prefectes and his corniculer, Hem hente, and whan he forth the sentes

ladde, 370
Hymself he weep for pitee that he hadde

Whan Maximus had herd the sentes lore,
He gat hym of the tormentoures leve,

And ladde hem to his hous withoute moore,
And with hir prechyng, er that it were

eve, 375
They gonnen fro the tormentours to reve,

And fro Maxime, and fro his folk echone,
The false feith, to trowe in God allone

Cecile cam, whan it was woxen nyght, With preestes that hem cristned alle

yfeere, 380
And afterward, whan day was woxen light,

Cecile hem seyde with a ful stedefast
cheere,

"Now, Cristes owene knyghtes leeve and
deere,

Cast alle away the werkes of derknesse,
And armeth yow in armure of bright-

nesse 385

"Ye han for sothe ydoon a greet bataille, Youre cours is doon, youre feith han ye conserved Gooth to the corone of lif that may nat

falle,
The rightful Juge, which that ye han

served,
Shal yeve it yow, as ye han it deserved "

And whan this thyng was seyde as I
devyse, 391

Men ledde hem forth to doon the sacrificise

But whan they weren to the place brought To tellen shortly the conclusioun,

They nolde encense ne sacrificise right
noght, 395

But on hir knees they setten hem adoun
With humble herte and sad devocioun,
And losten bothe hir hevedes in the place Hir soules wenten to the Kyng of grace

This Maximus, that saugh this thyng
bityde, 400

With vitous teeris tolde it anonright,
That he hir soules saugh to hevене glyde
With aungels ful of cleernesse and of light, And with his word converted many a
wight, 404

For which Almachus dide hym so tobete
With whippe of leed, til he his lif gan lete

Cecile hym took and buried hym anon
By Tiburce and Valerian softly Withinne hire buryng place, under the
stoon,

And after this Almachus hastily 410 Bad his ministres fecchen openly Cecile, so that she myghte in his presence Doon sacrifice, and Juppiter encense

But they, converted at hir wise loore, 414 Wepten ful soore, and yaven ful credence Unto hire word, and cryden moore and
moore,

"Crist, Goddes Sone, withouten difference,
Is verray God — this is al oure sentence — That hath so good a servant hym to serve This with o voys we trowen, thogh we
sterve!" 420

Almachus, that herde of this doynge, Bad fecchen Cecile, that he myghte hire
see,

And alderfirst, lo! this was his axynge,
"What maner womman artow?" tho
quod he

"I am a gentil womman born," quod
she 425

"I axe thee," quod he, "though it thee
greeve,

Of thy religioun and of thy bileeve "

"Ye han bigonne youre questioun folily,"

Quod she, "that wolden two answeres conclude

In o demande, ye axed lewedly " 430 Almache answerde unto that similtude,
"Of whennes comth thyn answeyng so rude?"

"Of whennes?" quod she, whan that she was freyned,

"Of conscience and of good feith unfeyned "

Almachus seyde, "Ne takestow noon
heede 435

Of my power?" And she answerde hym
this

"Youre myght," quod she, "ful litel is to dreede,

For every mortal mannes power nys

But lyk a bladdre ful of wynd, ywys

For with a nedles poynt, whan it is blowe, 440

May al the boost of it be leyd ful lowe "

"Ful wrongfully bigonne thow," quod
he,

"And yet in wrong is thy perseveraunce Wostow nat how oure myghty princes free Han thus comanded and maad ordi-
naunce, 445

That every Cristen wight shal han pen-
aunce

But if that he his Cristendom withseye,
And goon al quit, if he wole it reneye?"

"Yowre princes erren, as youre nobleye dooth,"

Quod tho Cecile, "and with a wood sentence 450

Ye make us gilty, and it is nat sooth

For ye, that knowen wel oure innocence,

For as muche as we doon a reverence

To Crist, and for we bere a Cristen name,

Ye putte on us a cryme, and eek a
blame 455

But we that knowen thilke name so

For vertuous, we may it nat withseye " Almache answerde, "Chees oon of these

two

Do sacrifice, or Cristendom reneye,

That thou mowe now escapen by that
weye " 460

At which the hooly blisful faire mayde

Gan for to laughe, and to the juge sayde

"O juge, confus in thy nycetee, Woltow that I reneye innocence, To make me a wikked wight?" quod
shee 465

"Lo, he dissymuleth heere in audience, He stareth, and woodeth in his advert-
ence!"

To whom Almachius, "Unsely wrecche, Ne woostow nat how fer my myght may strecche?"

"Han noght oure myghty princes to me
yiven, 470

Ye, bothe power and auctoritee
To maken folk to dyen or to lyven?
Why spekestow so proudly thanne to me?"

"I speke noght but stedfastly," quod she,
"Nat proudly, for I seye, as for my
syde, 475

We haten deedly thilke vice of pryde

"And if thou drede nat a sooth to heere, Thanne wol I shewe al openly, by right,
That thou hast maad a ful gret lesyng
heere

Thou seyest thy princes han thee yeven
myght 480

Bothe for to sleen and for to quyken a
wight,

Thou, that ne mayst but oonly lyf bireve, Thou hast noon oother power ne no leve

"But thou mayst seyn thy princes han thee maked

Ministre of death, for if thou speke of
mo, 485

Thou lyst, for thy power is ful naked"

"Do wey thy booldnesse," seyde Al-machius tho,

"And sacrifice to oure goddes, er thou go!
I recche nat what wrong that thou me profre,

For I kan suffre it as a philosopre, 490

"But thilke wronges may I nat endure That thou spekest of oure goddes heere,"
quod he

Cecile answerde, "O nyce creature!
Thou seydest no word syn thou spak to me
That I ne knew therwith thy nycetee, 495
And that thou were, in every maner wise,
A lewed officer and a veyn justuse

"Ther lakketh no thyng to thyne outter eyen

That thou n'art blynd, for thyng that we seen alle

That it is stoon, that men may wel espyen, 500

That ilke stoon a god thow wolt it calle
I rede thee, lat thyn hand upon it falle,
And taste it wel, and stoon thou shalt it
fynde,

Syn that thou seest nat with thyne eyen
blynde

"It is a shame that the peple shal 505

So scorne thee, and laughe at thy folye,

For comunly men woot it wel overal

That myghty God is in his hevenes hye,

And these ymages, wel thou mayst espye,

To thee ne to hemself mowen noght profite, 510

For in effect they been nat worth a myte"

These wordes and swiche othere seyde
she,

And he weex wrooth, and bad men sholde hir lede

Hom til hir hous, and "In hire hous,"
quod he,

"Brenne hire right in a bath of flambes
rede" 515

And as he bad, right so was doon the dede,

For in a bath they gonne hire faste shetten,

And nyght and day greet fyr they under betten

The longe nyght, and eek a day also,

For al the fyr, and eek the bathes heete,

She sat al coold, and feelede no wo 521

It made hire nat a drope for to sweete

But in that bath hir lyf she moste lete,

For he Almachius, with ful wikke en-
tente, 524

To sleen hire in the bath his sonde sente

Thre strokes in the nekke he smoot hire tho,

The tormentour, but for no maner chaunce

He myghte noght smyte al hir nekke atwo,

And for ther was that tyme an ordinaunce

That no man sholde doon man swich pen-
aunce 530

The ferthe strook to smyten, softe or soore,

This tormentour ne dorste do namoore,

But half deed, with hir nekkeycorven there,
He lefte hir lye, and on his way is went The Cristen folk, which that aboute hire
were, 535

With sheetes han the blood ful faire yhent
Three dayes lyved she in this torment,
And never cessed hem the feith to teche That she hadde fostred, hem she gan to
preche,

And hem she yaf hir moebles and hir
thyng, 540

And to the Pope Urban bitook hem tho,
And seyde, "I axed this of hevene kyng,

To han respit thre dayes and namo,
To recomende to yow, er that I go, These soules, lo! and that I myghte do werche 545
Heere of myn hous perpetuelly a cherche "

Seint Urban, with his deknes, prively
The body fette, and buryed it by nyghte Among his othere seintes honestly Hir hous the churche of Seint Cecile
highte, 550

Seint Urban halwed it, as he wel myghte,
In which, into this day, in noble wyse,
Men doon to Crist and to his seint servyse

Heere is ended the Seconde Nonnes Tale

THE CANON'S YEOMAN'S PROLOGUE

The Prologe of the Chanouns Yemannes Tale

Whan ended was the lyf of Seinte Cecile, Er we hadde riden fully fyve mile, 555

At Boghtoun under Blee us gan atake
A man that clothed was in clothes blake,
And under-nethe he hadde a whyt surpys

His hakeney, that was al pomely grys,
So swatte that it wonder was to see, 560
It semed as he had priked miles three

The hors eek that his yeman rood upon So swatte that unnethe myghte it gon

Aboute the peytrel stood the foom ful hye,
He was of foom al flekked as a pye 565

A male tweyfoold on his croper lay,
It semed that he caried lite array

Al light for somer rood this worthy man,
And in myn herte wondren I bigan

What that he was, til that I understood 570
How that his cloke was sowed to his hood,

For which, whan I hadde longe avysed
me,

I demed hym som chanoun for to be His hat heeng at his bak down by a laas,

For he hadde riden moore than trot or paas, 575

He hadde ay priked lik as he were wood
A clote-leef he hadde under his hood

For swoot, and for to keep his heed from heete

But it was joye for to seen hym swete!
His forheed dropped as a stillatorie, 580

Were ful of plantayne and of paritorie And whan that he was come, he gan to
crye,

"God save," quod he, "this joly compaignye!"

Faste have I priked," quod he, "for youre
sake,

By cause that I wolde yow atake, 585
To riden in this myrie compaignye "

His yeman eek was ful of curteisye,
And seyde, "Sires, now in the morwe-tyde

Out of youre hostelrie I saugh yow ryde, And warned heer my lord and my soverayn, 590

Which that to ryden with yow is ful fayn,
For his desport, he loveth dalaunce "

"Freend, for thy warnyng God yeve thee good chaunce!"

Thanne seydeoure Hoost, "for certain it wolde seme

Thy lord were wys, and so I may wel deme 595

He is ful jocunde also, dar I leye!
Can he oght telle a myrie tale or tweye,

With which he glade may this com-
paignye?"

"Who, sire? my lord? ye, ye, withouten
 lye,
 He kan of murthe and eek of joltee 600
 Nat but ynough, also, sire, trusteth me,
 And ye hym knewe as wel as do I,
 Ye wolde wondre how wel and craftly
 He koude werke, and that in sondry wise
 He hath take on hym many a greet emprise, 605
 Which were ful hard for any that is heere
 To brynge aboute, but they of hym it leere
 As hoonly as he rit amonges yow, If ye hym knewe, it wolde be for youre
 prow
 Ye wolde nat forgoon his aqueynt-
 aunce 610
 For muchel good, I dar leye in balaunce Al that I have in my possessioun
 He is a man of heigh discrecioun, I warne yow wel, he is a passyng man "
 "Wel," quod oure Hoost, "I pray thee, tel me than, 615
 Is he a clerk, or noon? telle what he is "
 "Nay, he is gretter than a clerk, ywis," Seyde this Yeman, "and in wordes fewe, Hoost, of his craft somewhat I wol yow
 shewe
 I seye, my lord kan swich subtilitee — 620
 But al his craft ye may nat wite at me,
 And somewhat helpe I yet to his wirk-
 yng —
 That al this ground on which we been rydyng,
 Til that we come to Caunterbury toun,
 He koude al clene turne it up-so-doun, 625
 And pave it al of silver and of gold "
 And when this Yeman hadde this tale ytold Unto oure Hoost, he seyde, "Benedictee!
 This thyng is wonder merveillous to me,
 Syn that thy lord is of so heigh prudence, By cause of which men sholde hym reverence, 631
 That of his worshipe rekketh he so lite
 His overslope nys nat worth a myte,
 As in effect, to hym, so moot I go!
 It is al budy and totore also 635
 Why is thy lord so sluttish, I the preye,
 And is of power bettre clooth to beye,
 If that his dede accorde with thy speche?
 Telle me that, and tha^t I thee buseche "

"Why?" quod this Yeman, "wherto axe ye me? 640
 God help me so, for he shal nevere thee!
 (But I wol nat avowe that I seye, And therefore keeppe it secree, I yow preye)
 He is to wys, in feith, as I bleeve
 That that is overdoon, it wol nat preeve Aright, as clerkes seyn, it is a vice 646 Wherefore in that I holde hym lewed and
 nyce
 For when a man hath over-greet a wit, Ful oft hym happeth to mysusen it So dooth my lord, and that me greveth
 soore, 650
 God it amende! I kan sey yow namoore " "Ther-of no fors, good Yeman," quod
 oure Hoost,
 "Syn of the konnyng of thy lord thow
 woost,
 Telle how he dooth, I pray thee hertely, Syn that he is so crafty and so sly 655 Where dwelle ye, if it to telle be?"
 "In the suburbes of a toun," quod he,
 "Lurkyng in hernes and in lanes blynde Whereas thise robbours and thise theves by
 kynde
 Holden hir pryvee fereful residence, 660
 As they that dar nat shewen hir presence, So faren we, if I shal seye the sothe "
 "Now," quod oure Hoost, "yt lat me talke to the Why artow so discoloured of thy face?"
 "Peter!" quod he, "God yeve it harde
 grace, 665
 I am so used in the fyr to blowe
 That it hath chaunged my colour, I trowe
 I am nat wont in no mirour to prie, But swynke soore and lerne multiple We blondren evere and pouren in the fir, 670
 And for al that we falle of oure desir,
 For evere we lakken oure conclusioun To muchel folk we doon illusoun,
 And borwe gold, be it a pound or two, 674
 Or ten, or twelve, or manye sommes mo,
 And make hem wenen, at the leeste weye,
 That of a pound we koude make tweye
 Yet is it fals, but ay we han good hope It for to doon, and after it we grope
 But that science is so fer us biforn, 680
 We mowen nat, although we hadden it
 sworn,

It overtake, it slit away so faste
 It wole us maken beggers atte laste " Whil this Yeman was thus in his talkyng, This Chanoun drough hym neer, and herde al thyng 685
 Which that this Yeman spak, for suspecioun
 Of mennes speche evere hadde this Chanoun
 For Catoun seith that he that guilty is Demeth alle thyng be spoke of hym, ywis That was the cause he gan so ny hym
 drawe 690
 To his Yeman, to herknen al his sawe
 And thus he seyde unto his Yeman tho
 "Hoold thou thy pees, and spek no wordes
 mo,
 For if thou do, thou shalt it deere abyde Thou sclaudrest me heere in this compaignye, 695
 And eek discoverest that thou sholdest
 hyde "
 "Ye," quod oure Hoost, "telle on, what so bityde
 Of al his thretyng rekke nat a myte"
 ' In feith," quod he, "namoore I do but lyte "

And whan this Chanon saugh it wolde nat bee, 700
 But his Yeman wolde telle his pryvetee, He fledde away for verray sorwe and
 shame
 "A' quod the Yeman, "heere shal arise game,
 Al that I kan anon now wol I telle Syn he is goon, the foule feend hym
 quelle! 705
 For nevere heerafter wol I with hym
 meete
 For peny ne for pound, I yow biheete
 He that me broghte first unto that game, Er that he dye, sorwe have he and shame!
 For it is ernest to me, by my feith, 710
 That feele I wel, what so any man seith And yet, for al my smert and al my grief,
 For al my sorwe, labour, and meschief,
 I koude nevere leve it in no wise
 Now wolde God my wit myghte suffise 715
 To tellen al that longeth to that art!
 But natheles yow wol I tellen part Syn that my lord is goon, I wol nat spare Swich thyng as that I knowe, I wol declare

Heere endeth the Prologe of the Chanouns Yemannes Tale

THE CANON'S YEOMAN'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Chanouns Yeman his Tale

[Prima Pars]

With this Chanoun I dwelt have seven
 yeer, 720
 And of his science am I never the neer Al that I hadde I have lost therby, And, God woot, so hath many mo than I Ther I was wont to be right fressh and gay
 Of clothyng and of oother good array, 725
 Now may I were an hose upon myn heed, And wher my colour was bothe fressh and
 reed,
 Now is it wan and of a leden hewe — Whoso it useth, soore shal he rewel — And of my swynk yet blered is myn
 ye 730

Lo! which advantage is to multiple!
 That slydyng science hath me maad so
 bare
 That I have no good, wher that evere I
 fare,
 And yet I am endetted so therby,
 Of gold that I have borwed, trewely, 735
 That whil I lyve I shal it quite nevere Lat every man be war by me for evere!
 What maner man that casteth hym therto,
 If he continue, I holde his thrift ydo For so helpe me God, therby shal he nat
 wyne, 740
 But empte his purs, and make his wittes thynne

And whan he, thurgh his madnesse and
folye,

Hath lost his owene good thurgh jupartye, Thanne he exciteth oother folk therto,
To lesen hir good, as he hymself hath do For unto shrewes joye it is and ese 746
To have hir felawes in peyne and disece Thus was I ones lerned of a clerk Of that no charge, I wol speke of oure
werk

Whan we been there as we shul exercise 750

Oure elyvysse craft, we semen wonder
wise, Oure termes been so clerical and so queynte

I blowe the fir til that myn herte feynte
What sholde I tellen ech proporcion Of thynges whiche that we werche upon— 755

As on fyve or sixe ounces, may wel be,
Of silver, or som oother quantitee—
And biseye me to telle yow the names Of orpyment, brent bones, iren squames, That into poudre grounden been ful smaal, 760

And in an erthen pot how put is al,
And salt yput in, and also papeer, Bifore these poudres that I speke of heer,
And wel ycovered with a lampe of glas, And muchel oother thyng which that ther was, 765

And of the pot and glasses enlutyng, That of the eyr myghte passe out no-
thyng,

And of the esy fir, and smart also,
Which that was maad, and of the care and wo

That we hadde in oure matires sublym-
yng, 770

And in amalgamyng and calcenyng
Of quyksilver, yclept mercurie crude?
For alle oure sleightes we kan nat conclude Oure orpyment and sublymed mercurie, Oure grounden litarge eek on the por-fure, 775

Of ech of these of ounces a certeyn—Noght helpeth us, oure labour is in veyn Ne eek oure spiritres ascencioun, Ne oure materes that lyen al fix adoun, Mowe in oure werkyng no thyng us savalle, 780

For lost is al oure labour and travaille,
And al the cost, a twenty devel waye,
Is lost also, which we upon it laye

Ther is also ful many another thyng
That is unto oure craft apertenyng 785
Though I by ordre hem nat reherce kan,
By cause that I am a lewed man,
Yet wol I telle hem as they come to mynde, Thogh I ne kan nat sette hem in hir kynde
As boole armonyak, verdegrees, boras, 790
And sondry vessels maad of erthe and glas, Oure urynales and oure descensorios, Violes, crosletz, and sublymatories, Cucurbitres and alambikes eek, 794
And othere swiche, deere ynough a leek Nat nedeth it for to reherce hem alle,— Watres rubifyng, and boles galle, Arsenyk, sal armonyak, and brymstoon,
And herbes koude I telle eek many oon,
As egremoyne, valerian, and lunarie, 800
And othere swiche, if that me liste tarie, Oure lampes brennyng bothe nyght and
day,

To brynge aboute oure purpos, if we may,
Oure fourneys eek of calcinacioun,
And of watres albificacioun 805 Unlekked lym, chalk, and gleyre of an ey, Poudres diverse, assches, donge, pisse, and cley,

Cered pokkets, sal peter, vitrole,
And diverse fires maad of wode and cole, Sal tartre, alkaly, and sal preparat, 810
And combust materes and coagulat, Cley maad with hors or mannes heer, and oille

Of tartre, alum glas, berme, wort, and argouille,

Resalgar, and othere materes enbiblyng,
And eek of oure materes encorpyryng, 815
And of oure silver citrinacioun, Oure cementyng and fermentacioun, Oure yngottes, testes, and many mo

I wol yow telle, as was me taught also,
The foure spiritres and the bodies sevene, By ordre, as ofte I herde my lord hem nevene 821

The firste spirit quyksilver called is,
The seconde orpyment, the thridde, ywis, Sal armonyak, and the ferthe brymstoon The bodyes sevene eek, lo! hem heere
anoon 825

Sol gold is, and Luna silver we threpe,

Mars iren, Mercurie quyksilver we clepe, Saturnus leed, and Juppiter is tyn,
And Venus copier, by my fader kyn!

This cursed craft whoso wole excercise, 830

He shal no good han that hym may suffice,
For al the good he spendeth therabout
He lese shal, therof have I no doute

Whoso that listeth outhen his folie, Lat hym come forth and lerne multiplie 835

And every man that oght hath in his cofre, Lat hym appiere, and waxe a philosophre Ascaunce that craft is so light to leere?
Nay, nay, God woot, al be he monk or frere,

Preest or chanoun, or any oother wyght,
Though he sitte at his book bothe day and nyght 841

In lernyng of this elvysshe nyce loore, Al is in veyn, and parde! muchel moore
To lerne a lewed man this subtiltee —

Fy! spek nat therof for it wol nat bee, 845
And konne he letterure, or konne he noon,
As in effect, he shal fynde it al oon
For bothe two, by my savacioun, Concluden in multiplicacioun

Ylike wel, when they han al ydo, 850
This is to seyn, they failen bothe two

Yet forgat I to maken rehersaille Of watres corosis, and of lymaille,
And of bodes mollificacioun,
And also of hire induracioun, 855

Oilles, ablucions, and metal fusible, —
To tellen al wolde passen any bible

That owher is, wherfore, as for the beste,
Of alle these names now wol I me reste
For, as I trowe, I have yow toold ynowe
To reyse a feend, al looke he never so rowe 861

A! nay! lat be, the philosophres stoon, Elixer clept, we sechen faste echoon,
For hadde we hym, thanne were we siker ynow

But unio God of hevene I make avow, 865
For al our craft, when we han al ydo, And al oure sleighte, he wol nat come us to He hath ymaad us spenden muchel good,
For sorwe of which almost we waxen wood, 869

But that good hope crepeth in oure herte, Supposynge evere, though we sore smerte,

To be releevd by hym afterward Swich supposyng and hope is sharp and hard,

I warne yow wel, it is to seken evere
That futur temps hath maad men to dissevere, 875

In trust therof, from al that evere they hadde

Yet of that art they kan nat waxen sadde,
For unto hem it is a bitter sweete, —
So semeth it, — for nadde they but a sheete,

Which that they myghte wrappe hem inne a-nyght, 880

And a brat to walken inne by daylyght,
They wolde hem selle and spenden on this craft

They kan nat stynte til no thyng be laft
And everemoore, where that evere they goon,

Men may hem knowe by smel of brymstoon 885

For al the world they stynken as a goot, Hir savour is so rammyssh and so hoot That though a man from hem a mile be,
The savour wole infecte hym, trusteth me
And thus by smel, and by threedbare array, 890

If that men liste, this folk they knowe may
And if a man wole aske hem pryvely
Why they been clothed so unthrifly, They right anon wol rownen in his ere,
And seyn that if that they espied were, 895 Men wolde hem slee by cause of hir science Lo, thus this folk bitrayen innocence!

Passe over thus, I go my tale unto Er that the pot be on the fir ydo,
Of metals with a certeyn quantitee, 900
My lord hem tempreth, and no man but he —

Now he is goon, I dar seyn boldely —
For, as men seyn, he kan doon craftly Algate I woot wel he hath swich a name,
And yet ful ofte he renneth in a blame 905

And wite ye how? ful ofte it happeth so,
The pot tobreketh, and farewel, al is go!
These metals been of so greet violence, Oure walles mowe nat make hem resistence,
But if they weren wrought of lym and stoon, 910

They percen so, and thurgh the wal they goon

And somme of hem synken into the ground —

Thus han we lost by tymes many a pound —

And somme are scatered al the floor aboute, Somme lepe into the roof Withouten
doute, 915

Though that the feend noght in oure sighte hym shewe,

I trowe he with us be, that ilke shrewe!
In helle, where that he lord is and sire, Nis ther moore wo, ne moore rancour ne ire Whan that oure pot is broke, as I have sayd, 920

Every man chit, and halt hym yvele apayd Somme seyde it was long on the fir makyng,

Somme seyde nay, it was on the blow-
yng, —

Thanne was I fered, for that was myn office

“Straw!” quod the thridde, “ye been lewed and nyce 925

It was nat tempred as it oghte be”

“Nay,” quod the fourthe, “stynt and herkne me

By cause oure fir ne was nat maad of beech,
That is the cause, and oother noon, so thee’ch!”

I kan nat telle wheron it was long, 930 But wel I woot greet strif is us among “What,” quod my lord, “ther is namoore to doone,

Of these perils I wol be war eftsoone
I am right siker that the pot was crased
Be as be may, be ye no thyng amased, 935
As usage is, lat swepe the floor as swithe, Plukke up youre hertes, and beeth glad and blithe”

The mullok on an heep ysweped was,
And on the floor ycast a canevas,
And al this mullok in a syve ythrowe, 940
And sifted, and ypiked many a throwe

“Pardee,” quod oon, “somewhat of oure metal

Yet is ther heere, though that we han nat
al

Although this thyng myshapped have as
now,

Another tyme it may be well ynow 945
Us moste putte oure good in aventure
A marchant, pardee, may nat ay endure,

Trusteth me wel, in his prospertee Somtyme his good is drowned in the see,
And somtyme comth it sauf unto the
londe” 950

“Pees!” quod my lord, “the nexte tyme
I wol fonde

To bryngen oure craft al in another plite,
And but I do, sires, lat me han the wite Ther was defeaute in somewhat, wel I woot”

Another seyde the fir was over-hoot, —
But, be it hoot or coold, I dar seye this, 956
That we concluden everemoore amys.

We faille of that which that we wolden
have,

And in oure madnesse everemoore we rave
And whan we been togidres everichoon, 960
Every man semeth a Salomon

But al thyng which that shyneth as the gold Nis nat gold, as that I have herd it told, Ne every appul that is fair at eye

Ne is nat good, what so men clappe or crye Right so, lo, fareth it amonges us 966

He that semeth the wiseste, by Jhesus!
Is moost fool, whan it cometh to the preef,

And he that semeth trevest is a theef That shul ye knowe, er that I fro yow
wende, 970

By that I of my tale have maad an ende

Explicit prima pars

Et sequitur pars secunda

Ther is a chanoun of religioun Amonges us, wolde infecte al a toun, Thogh it as greet were as was Nynyvee, Rome, Ahsaundre, Troye, and othere
three 975

His sleighes and his infinite falsnesse Ther koude no man writen, as I gesse, Though that he myghte lyve a thousand
yeer

In al this world of falschede nis his peer,
For in his termes he wol hym so wynde,
And speke his wordes in so sly a kynde, 981 Whanne he commune shal with any wight,
That he wol make hym doten anonright, But it a feend be, as hymselfen is Ful many a man hath he bigiled er this, 985

And wole, if that he lyve may a while,
And yet men ride and goon ful many a mile Hym for to seke and have his aqueyn-
taunce,

Noght knowynge of .us false governaunce
And if yow list to yeve me audience, 990
I wol it tellen heere in youre presence

But worshipful chanons religious,
Ne demeth nat that I sclandre youre hous,
Although that my tale of a chanoun bee
Of every ordre som shrewe is, pardee, 995
And God forbode that al a compaignye Sholde rewre o singuleer mannes folye
To sclandre yow is no thyng myn entente,
But to correcten that is mys I mente
This tale was nat oonly toold for yow, 1000 But eek for othere mo, ye woot wel how That among Cristes apostelles twelve Thei nas no travtoure but Judas hymselfe Thanne why sholde al the remenant have a
blame

That giltyes were? By yow I seye the same, 1005

Save oonly this, if ye wol herkne me If any Judas in youre covent be, Remoeveth hym bitymes, I yow rede,
If shame or los may causen any drede And beeth no thyng displesed, I yow
preye, 1010

But in this cas herkneth what I shal seye
In Londoun was a preest, an annueleer, That therinne dwelled hadde many a yeer,
Which was so plesaunt and so servysable Unto the wyf, where as he was at table, That she wolde suffre hym no thyng for to paye 1015

For bord ne clothyng, wente he never so gaye,

And spendyng silver hadde he right ynow Therof no fors, I wol procede as now,
And telle forth my tale of the chanoun 1020 That broghte this preest to confusioun

This false chanon cam upon a day Unto this preestes chambre, wher he lay, Bisechyng hym to lene hym a certeyn Of gold, and he wolde quite it hym ageyn
"Leene me a marc," quod he, "but dayes
three, 1026

And at my day I wol it quiten thee
And if so be that thow me fynde fals, Another day do hange me by the hals!"

This preest hym took a marc, and that as swithe, 1030

And this chanoun hym thanked ofte sithe, And took his leve, and wente forth his
weye,

And at the thridde day broghte his moneye,
And to the preest he took his gold agayn, Wherof this preest was wonder glad and
fayn 1035

"Certes," quod he, "no thyng anyoeth
me

To lene a man a noble, or two, or thre,
Or what thyng were in my possessioun, Whan he so trewe is of condicioun
That in no wise he breke wole his day, 1040
To swich a man I kan never seye nay"

"What!" quod this chanoun, "sholde I be untrewe?"

Nay, that were thvng yfallen al of newe Trouthe is a thyng that I wol evere kepe Unto that day in which that I shal crepe Into my grave, and ellis God forbode 1045 Bileveth this as siker as your Crede God thanke I, and in good tyme be it sayd, That ther was nevere man yet yvele apayd
For gold ne silver that he to me lente, 1050 Ne nevere faldhede in myn herte I mente
And sire," quod he, "now of my pryvetee, Syn ye so goodlich han been unto me,
And kithed to me so greet gentillesse Somwhat to quyte with youre kyndenesse
I wol yow shewe, and if yow list to leere,
I wol yow teche pleynly the manere 1057
How I kan werken in philosophie Taketh good heede, ye shul wel seen at ye That I wol doon a maistrie er I go" 1060

"Ye," quod the preest, "ye, sire, and wol ye so?"

Marie! therof I pray yow hertely"

"At youre comandement, sire, trewely," Quod the chanoun, "and ellis God forbeede!"

Loo, how this thief koude his service
beede! 1065

Ful sooth it is that swich profred servyse Stynketh, as witnessen thise olde wyse,
And that ful soone I wol it verifie
In this chanoun, roote of al trecherie, That everemoore deht hath and glad-
nesse — 1070

Swiche feendly thoughtes in his herte im-presse —

How Cristes peple he may to meschief
brynge

God kepe us from his false dissymulyng!
Noght waste this preest with whom that he delte,

Ne of his harm comynge he no thyng felte
O sely preest! o sely innocent! 1076

With coveteise anon thou shalt be blent!
O gracelees, ful blynd is thy conceerte,
No thyng ne artow war of the deceite Which that this fox yshapen hath to thee!
His wily wrenches thou ne mayst nat flee Wherefore, to go to the conclusion, 1082
That refereth to thy confusion, Unhappy man, anon I wol me hye To tellen thyn unwit and thy folye, 1085 And eek the falsnesse of that oother
wrecche,

As ferforth as that my konnyng wol
strecche

This chanon was my lord, ye wolden weene?

Sire hoost, in feith, and by the hevenes
queene,

It was another chanoun, and nat hee, 1090
That kan an hundred foold moore subtiltee
He hath bitrayed folkes many tyme,
Of his falsnesse it dulleth me to ryme Evere whan that I speke of his falskede, For shame of hym my chekes wexen rede Algates they bigynnen for to glowe, 1096
For reednesse have I noon, right wel I
knowe,

In my visage, for fumes diverse
Of metals, whiche ye han herd me reherce, Consumed and wasted han my reednesse Now taak heede of this chanons cursed-
nesse! 1101

"Sire," quod he to the preest, "lat youre man gon

For quyksilver, that we it hadde anon,
And lat hym bryngen ounces two or three,
And whan he comth, as faste shal ye see A wonder thyng, which ye saugh nevere er
this " 1106

"Sire," quod the preest, "it shal be doon, ywis "

He bad his servant fecchen hym this thyng,
And he al redy was at his biddyng, And wente hym forth, and cam anon
agayn 1110

With this quyksilver, shortly for to sayn,
And took this ounces thre to the chanoun,
And he hem leyde faire and wel adoun,
And bad the servant coles for to brynge,
That he anon myghte go to his werkynge
The coles right anon weren yfet, 1116

And this chanoun took out a crosselet
Of his bosom, and shewed it to the preest
"This instrument," quod he, "which that thou seest,

Taak in thyn hand, and put thyself ther-
inne 1120

Of this quyksilver an ounce, and heer bi-
gynne,

In name of Crist, to wexe a filosofre Ther been ful fewe to whiche I wolde profre
To shewen hem thus muche of my science
For ye shul seen heer, by experience, 1125
That this quyksilver I wol mortifye Right in youre sighte anon, withouten lye,
And make it as good silver and as fyn
As ther is any in youre purs or myn,
Or elleswhere, and make it mallable, 1130 And elles holdeth me fals and unable Amonges folk for evere to appeere
I have a poudre heer, that coste me deere, Shal make al good, for it is cause of al
My konnyng, which that I yow shewen
shal 1135

Voyde youre man, and lat hym be theroute,
And shette the dore, whils we been about Oure pryvete, that no man us espie, ¶ Whils that we werke in this filosofie ?
Al as he bad fulfilled was in dede 1140

This ilke servant anonright out yede
And his maister shette the dore anon,
And to hire labour spedily they gon

This preest, at this cursed chanons bid-dyng,

Upon the fir anon sette this thyng, 1145
And blew the fir, and busyed hym ful faste
And this chanoun into the crosselet caste A poudre, noot I wherof that it was Ymaad, outhere of chalk, outhere of glas,
Or somewhat elles, was nat worth a flye, 1150
To blynde with this preest, and bad hym
hye

The coles for to couchen al above
The crosselet ' For in tokenyng I thee
love,"

Quod this chanoun, "thyne owene handes
two

Shul werche al thyng which that shal heer be do " 1155

"Graunt mercy," quod the preest, and was ful glad,

And couched cole as that the chanoun bad
And while he busy was, this feendly wrecche,

This false chanoun — the foule feend hym fecche! —

Out of his bosom took a bechen cole, 1160
In which ful subtilly was maad an hole,
And therinne put was of silver lemaille An ounce, and stopped was, withouten
faile,

This hole with wex, to kepe the lemaille in And understandeth that this false gyn 1165 Was nat maad ther, but it was maad bi-
fore,

And othere thynges I shal tellen moore Herafterward, whiche that he with hym
broghte

Er he cam there, hym to bigle he thoghte,
And so he dide, er that they wente atwynne, Til he had terved hym, koude he nat blyne 1171

It dulleth me whan that I of hym speke
On his falshede fayn wolde I me wreke,
If I wiste how, but he is heere and there,
He is so variaunt, he abit nowhere 1175

But taketh heede now, sres, for Goddes
love!

He took his cole of which I spak above,
And in his hand he baar it pryvely
And whiles the preest couched bisily
The coles, as I tolde yow er this, 1180 This chanoun seyde, "Freend, ye doon
amys

This is nat couched as it oghte be,
But soone I shal amenden it," quod he "Now lat me medle therwith but a while,
For of yow have I pitee, by Semt Gile! 1185 Ye been right hoot, I se wel how ye swete Have heere a clooth, and wipe away the wete"

And whiles that the preest wiped his face, This chanoun took his cole — with harde
grace! — 1189

And leyde it above upon the myddeward
Of the crosselet, and blew wel afterward, Til that the coles gonne faste brenne

"Now yeve us drynke," quod the chanoun thenne,

"As swithe al shal be wel, I undertake Sitte we doun, and lat us myrne make" 1195
And whan that this chanounes bechen cole Was brennt, al the lemaille out of the hole
Into the crosselet fil anon adoun,
And so it moste nedes, by resoun, Syn it so evene aboven it couched was 1200

But therof wiste the preest nothyng, alas!
He demed alle the coles yliche good,
For of that sleighte he nothyng understood

And whan this alkamystre saugh his tyme,
"Ris up," quod he, "sire preest, and stondeth by me, 1205

And for I woot wel ingot have ye noon, Gooth, walketh forth, and brynge us a chalk stoon,

For I wol make it of the same shap
That is an ingot, if I may han hap And bryngeth eek with yow a bolle or a panne 1210

Ful of water, and ye shul se wel thanne How thatoure busynesse shal thryve and
preeve

And yet, for ye shul han no mysbileeve
Ne wrong conceite of me in youre absence,
I ne wol nat been out of youre presence, But go with yow, and come with yow
ageyn" 1216

The chambre dore, shortly for to seyn, They opened and shette, and wente hir
weye

And forth with hem they carmeden the keye,

And coome agayn withouten any delay
What sholde I tarien al the longe day? 1221
He took the chalk, and shoop it in the wise
Of an ingot, as I shal yow devyse

I seye, he took out of his owene sleeve A teyne of silver — yvele moot he cheeve! — 1225

Which that was nat but an ounce of weighte

And taaketh heede now of his cursed sleighte!

He shoop his ingot, in lengthe and in breede

Of this teyne, withouten any drede,
So slyly that the preest it nat espide, 1230
And in his sleve agayn he gan it hide,

And fro the fir he took up his mateere,
And in th'ngot putte it with myrne cheere,
And in the water-vessel he it caste,

Whan that hym luste, and bad the preest as faste, 1235

"Loke what ther is, put in thyn hand and
grope

Thow fynde shalt ther silver, as I hope What, devel of helle! sholde it elles be?

Shaving of silver silver is, pardee!" 1239
 He putte his hand in and took up a teyne
 Of silver fyn, and glad in every veyne Was this preest, whan he saugh that it was so

"Goddess blessynge, and his moodres also,
 And alle halwes, have ye, sire chanoun," Seyde the preest, "and I hir malisoun, 1245
 But, and ye vouchesauf to techen me
 This noble craft and this subtiltee, I wol be youre in al that evere I may"

Quod the chanoun, "Yet wol I make assay

The seconde tyme, that ye may taken
 heede 1250

And been expert of this, and in youre neede Another day assaye in myn absence
 This disciplyne and this crafty science Lat take another ounce," quod he tho,
 "Of quyksilver, withouten wordes mo,
 And do therwith as ye han doon er this With that oother, which that now silver
 is" 1257

This preest hym bisith in al that he kan
 To doon as this chanoun, this cursed man, Comanded hym, and faste he blew the fir,
 For to come to th'effect of his desir 1261
 And this chanon, right in the meene while,
 Al redy was this preest eft to bigle,
 And for a contenance in his hand he bar An holwe stikke — taak kep and be war! — 1265

In the ende of which an ounce, and na-
 moore,

Of silver lemalle put was, as bifore
 Was in his cole, and stopped with wex weel
 For to kepe in his lemalle every deel
 And whil this preest was in his bysynesse, This chanoun with his stikke gan hym
 dresse 1271

To hym anon, and his poudre caste in
 As he dide er — the devel out of his skyn Hym terve, I pray to God, for his falschede!
 For he was evere fals in thoght and
 dede — 1275

And with this stikke, above the crosselet,
 That was ordeyned with that false jet He stired the coles til relente gan
 The wex agayn the fir, as every man,
 But it a fool he, woot wel it moot nede, 1280
 And al that in the stikke was out yede,
 And in the crosselet hastily it fel

Now, goode sires, what wol ye bet than wel?

Whan that this preest thus was bigled
 ageyn,

Supposynge noght but treuthe, sooth to
 seyn, 1285

He was so glad that I kan nat expresse
 In no manere his myrthe and his gladnesse,
 And to the chanoun he profred eftsoone Body and good "Ye," quod the chanoun
 soone,

"Though poure I be, crafty thou shalt me
 fynde 1290

I warne thee, yet is ther moore bihynde Is ther any coper herinne?" seyde he "Ye," quod the preest, "sure, I trowe we' ther be"

"Elles go bye us som, and that as swithe, Now, goode sure, go forth thy wey and hy the" 1295

He wente his wey, and with the coper cam,

And this chanon it in his handes nam,
 And of that coper weyed out but an ounce

Al to symple is my tonge to pronouce,
 As ministre of my wit, the doublenesse 1300
 Of this chanoun, roote of alle cursednesse!
 He semed frendly to hem that knewe hym
 noght,

But he was feendly bothe in werk and
 thoght

It weerieth me to telle of his falsnesse,
 And natheles yet wol I it expresse, 1305
 To th'entente that men may be war therby,
 And for noon oother cause, trewely

He putte this ounce of coper in the crosselet,

And on the fir as swithe he hath it set,
 And caste in poudre, and made the preest to blowe, 1310

And in his werkynge for to stoupe lowe,
 As he dide er, — and al nas but a jape, Right as hym liste, the preest he made his ape!

And afterward in the ingot he it caste,
 And in the panne putte it at the laste 1315
 Of water, and in he putte his owene hand,
 And in his sleve (as ye biforen-hand Herde me telle) he hadde a silver teyne
 He silyly took it out, this cursed heyne, Unwityng this preest of his false craft, 1320
 And in the pannes botme he hath it left,

And in the water rombled to and fro,
 And wonder pryvely took up also The coper teyne, noght knowynge this preest,

And hidde it, and hym hente by the breest,
 And to hym spak, and thus seyde in his
 game 1326

"Stoupeth adoun, by God, ye be to blame!
 Helpeth me now, as I dide yow whileer, Putte in youre hand, and looketh what is theer "

This preest took up this silver teyne
 anon, 1330
 And thanne seyde the chanoun, "Lat us
 gon

With this thre teynes, whiche that we han
 wrought,

To som goldsmyth, and wite if they been oght

For, by my feith, I nolde, for myn hood,
 But if that they were silver fyn and good,
 And that as swithe preeved it shal bee "

Unto the goldsmyth with this teynes
 thre 1337

They wente, and putte this teynes in assay
 To fir and hamer, myghte no man seye nay,
 But that they weren as hem oghte be 1340

This sotted preest, who was gladder than
 he?

Was nevere brid gladder agayn the day,
 Ne nyghtyngale, in the sesoun of May,
 Was nevere noon that luste bet to synge, Ne lady lustier in carolynges, 1345

Or for to speke of love and wommanhede, Ne knyght in armes to doon an hardy dede,
 To stonden in grace of his lady deere, Than hadde this preest this soory craft to leere

And to the chanoun thus he spak and
 seyde 1350

"For love of God, that for us alle deyde,
 And as I may deserve it unto yow, What shal this receite coste? telleth now?"

"By oure Lady," quod this chanon, "it is deere,

I warne yow wel, for save I and a frere, 1355 In Engelond ther kan no man it make "

"No fors," quod he, "now, sire, for Goddes sake,

What shal I paye? telleth me, I preye "

"Ywis," quod he, "it is ful deere, I seye Sire, at o word, if that thee list it have, 1360

Ye shul paye fourty pound, so God me
 save!

And nere the freendshipe that ye dide er
 this

To me, ye sholde paye moore, ywis "

This preest the somme of fourty pound
 anon

Of nobles fette, and took hem everichon
 To this chanoun, for this ilke receite 1366

Al his werkyng nas but fraude and deceite "Sire preest," he seyde, "I kepe han no
 loos

Of my craft, for I wolde it kept were cloos,
 And, as ye love me, kepeth it secrete 1370

For, and men knewen al my soultree,
 By God, they wolden han so greet envye

To me, by cause of my philosophye, I sholde be deed, ther were noon oother
 weye "

"God it forbeede," quod the preest,
 "what sey ye? 1375

Yet hadde I leverer spenden al the good Which that I have, and elles wexe I wood, Than that ye sholden falle in swich mescheef "

"For youre good wyl, sire, have ye right good preef,"

Quod the chanoun, "and farwel, grant
 mercy!" 1380

He wente his wey, and never the preest hym sy

After that day, and whan that this preest shoolde

Maken assay, at swich tyme as he wolde,
 Of this receit, farwel! it wolde nat be

Lo, thus byjaped and bigiled was he! 1385
 Thus maketh he his introduccioun,

To bryngre folk to hir destruccioun Considereth, sires, how that, in ech
 estaat,

Bitwixe men and gold ther is debaat
 So ferforth that unnethes is ther noon 1390

This multiplying blent so many oon
 That in good feith I trowe that it bee

The cause grettest of swich scarsetee Philosophres speken so mystly

In this craft that men kan nat come
 therby, 1395

For any wit that men han now-a-dayes They mowe wel chiteren as doon these jayes,

And in hir termes sette hir lust and peyne,

But to hir purpos shul they nevere atteyne
A man may lightly lerne, if he have aught, To multiplie, and brynge his good to naught! 1401

Lo! swich a lucre is in this lusty game,
A mannes myrthe it wol turne unto grame,
And empten also grete and hevye purses,
And maken folk for to purchacen curses
Of hem that han hir good therto ylent 1406
O! fy, for shame! they that han been brent, Allas! kan they nat flee the fires heete?
Ye that it use, I rede ye it leete, Lest ye lese al, for bet than nevere is late Nevere to thrvve were to long a date 1411
Though ye prolle ay, ye shul it nevere fynde Ye been as boold as is Bayard the blynde, That blondreth forth, and peril casteth
noon

He is as boold to renne agayn a stoon 1415
As for to goon bisides in the weye
So faren ye that multiplie, I seye
If that youre eyen kan nat seen aright, Looke that youre mynde lakke noght his sight

For though ye looken never so brode and stare, 1420

Ye shul nothyng wynne on that chaffare,
But wasten al that ye may rape and renne Withdraweth the fir, lest it to faste brenne, Medleth namoore with that art, I mene, For if ye doon, youre thrift is goon ful
clene 1425

And right as swithe I wol yow tellen heere
What filosofres seyn in this mateere

Lo, thus seith Arnold of the Newe Toun, As his Rosarie maketh mencion,
He seith right thus, withouten any lye
"Ther may no man mercurie mortifie 1431
But it be with his brother knowlechyng" How that he which that first seyde this
thyng

Of filosofres fader was, Hermes —
He seith how that the dragon, doutelees, Ne dyeth nat, but if that he be slayn 1436
With his brother, and that is for to sayn,
By the dragon, Mercurie, and noon oother He understood, and brymstoon by his
brother,

That out of Sol and Luna were ydrawe
"And therefore," seyde he, — taak heede to my sawe — 1441

"Lat no man bisye hym this art for to
seche,

But if that he th'entencion and speche
Of filosofres understonde kan,
And if he do, he is a lewed man 1445 For this science and this konnyng," quod
he,

"Is of the secree of secrees, pardee"

Also ther was a disciple of Plato, That on a tyme seyde his maister to,
As his book Senior wol bere witnesse, 1450 And this was his demande in soothfast-
nesse

"Telle me the name of the privee stoon?"

And Plato answerde unto hym anon,
"Take the stoon that Titanos men name"
"Which is that?" quod he "Magnasia is the same," 1455

Seyde Plato "Ye, sire, and is it thus?
This is ignotum per ignocvus
What is Magnasia, good sire, I yow
preye?"

"It is a water that is maad, I seye, Of elementes foure," quod Plato 1460
"Telle me the roote, good sire," quod he
tho,

"Of that water, if it be youre wil"

"Nay, nay," quod Plato, "certein, that I nyl

The filosofres sworn were everychoon
That they sholden discovere it unto noon, Ne in no book it write in no manere 1466
For unto Crist it is so lief and deere That he wol nat that it discovered bee,
But where it liketh to his detee Men for t'enspire, and eek for to deffende Whom that hym liketh, lo, this is the
ende" 1471

Thanne conclude I thus, sith that God of hevene

Ne wil nat that the filosofres nevene
How that a man shal come unto this stoon,
I rede, as for the beste, lete it goon 1475
For whoso maketh God his adversarie,
As for to werken any thyng in contrarie
Of his wil, certes, never shal he thrvve, Thogh that he multiplie terme of his lyve
And there a poynt, for ended is my tale God sende every trewe man boote of his bale! Amen 1481

FRAGMENT IX (GROUP H)

THE MANCIPLE'S PROLOGUE

Heere folweth the Prologe of the Maunciples Tale

Woot ye nat where ther stant a litel toun Which that ycleped is Bobbe-up-and-doun, Under the Blee, in Caunterbury weye?
Ther gan oure Hooste for to jape and pleye, And seyde, "Sires, what! Dun is in the myre!" 5

Is ther no man, for preyere ne for hyre,
That wole awake oure felawe al bihynde?
A theef myghte hym ful lightly robbe and bynde

See how he nappeth! see how, for cokkes
bones,

That he wol falle fro his hors atones! 10
Is that a cook of Londoun, with mes-chaunce?

Do hym come forth, he knoweth his pen-
aunce,

For he shal telle a tale, by my fey,
Although it be nat worth a botel hey Awake, thou Cook," quod he, "God yeve thee sorwe!" 15

What eyleth thee to slepe by the morwe?
Hastow had fleen al nyght, or artow dronke?

Or hastow with som quene al nyght yswonke,

So that thow mayst nat holden up thyn
heed?"

This Cook, that was ful pale and no thyng reed, 20

Seyde to oure Hoost, "So God my soule
blesse,

As ther is falle on me swich hevynesse, Noot I nat why, that me were levere slepe Than the beste galon wyn in Chepe "

"Wel," quod the Maunciple, "if it may doon ese 25

To thee, sere Cook, and to no wight dis-
plese,

Which that heere rideth in this compaignye,
And that oure Hoost wole, of his curteisye,
I wol as now excuse thee of thy tale

For, in good feith, thy visage is ful pale, 30 Thyne eyen daswen eek, as that me thynk-eth,

And, wel I woot, thy breeth ful soure stynketh,

That sheweth wel thou art nat wel disposed Of me, certeyn, thou shalt nat been yglosed 34

See how he ganeth, lo! this dronken wight,
As though he wolde swolwe us anonright Hoold cloos thy mouth, man, by thy fader kyn!

The devel of helle sette his foot thern!
Thy cursed breeth infecte wole us alle Fy, stynkyng swyn! fy, foule moote thee
falle! 40

A! taketh heede, sires, of this lusty man Now, sweete sire, wol ye justen atte fan?
Therto me thynketh ye been wel yshape!
I trowe that ye dronken han wyn ape, And that is whan men pleyen with a straw " 45

And with this speche the Cook wax wrooth and wraw,

And on the Manciple he gan nodde faste For lakke of speche, and doun the hors hym caste,

Where as he lay, til that men hym up took
This was a fair chyvachee of a cook! 50 Allas! he nadde holde hym by his ladel!

And er that he agayn were in his sadel, Ther was greet showvyng bothe to and fro
To lifte hym up, and muchel care and wo,
So unweedly was this sory palled goost 55
And to the Manciple thanne spak oure
Hoost

"By cause drynke hath dominacioun Upon this man, by my savacioun,
I trowe he lewedly wolde telle his tale
For, were it wyn, or oold or moysty ale 60 That he hath dronke, he speketh in his nose,

And fneseth faste, and eek he hath the pose
 He hath also to do moore than ynough To kepen hym and his capul out of the slough,

And if he falle from his capul eftsoone, 65
 Thanne shal we alle have ynogh to doone,
 In lifyng up his hevly dronken cors
 Telle on thy tale, of hym make I no fors

But yet, Manciple, in feith thou art to
 nyce,

Thus openly repreve hym of his vice 70
 Another day he wole, peraventure, Reclayme thee and bryngte thee to lure,
 I meene, he speke wole of smale thynges,
 As for to pynchen at thy rekenynges

That were nat honest, if it cam to preef " 75
 "No," quod the Manciple, "that were a greet mescheef'

So myghte he lightly bryngte me in the snare

Yet hadde I levere payen for the mare Which he rit on, than he sholde with me
 stryve

I wol nat wratthen hym, also moot I
 thryve! 80

That that I spak, I seyde it in my bourde And wite ye what? I have heer in a gourde

A draghte of wyn, ye, of a ripe grape,
 And right anon ye shul seen a good jape
 This Cook shal drynke therof, if I may 85 Up peyne of deeth, he wol nat seye me nay "

And certeynly, to tellen as it was,
 Of this vessel the Cook drank faste, allas!
 What neded hym? he drank ynough bifore
 And whan he hadde pouped in this horn, 90
 To the Manciple he took the gourde agayn, And of that drynke the Cook was wonder
 fayn,

And thanked hym in swich wise as he koude

Thanne ganoure Hoost to laughen wonder loude,

And seyde, "I se wel it is necessarie, 95 Where that we goon, good drynke we with us carie,

For that wol turne rancour and disece T'acord and love, and many a wrong apese

O thou Bacus, yblessed be thy name,
 That so kanst turnen earnest into game! 100 Worshipe and thank be to thy detee!

Of that mateere ye gete namoure of me Telle on thy tale, Manciple, I thee preye " "Wel, sire," quod he, "now herkneht what I seye "

THE MANCIPLE'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Maunciples Tale of the Crowe

Whan Phebus dwelled heere in this erthe adoun, 105

As olde bookes maken mencion,
 He was the mooste lusty bachiler
 In al this world, and eek the beste archer
 He slow Phytoun, the serpent, as he lay Slepynge agayn the sonne upon a day, 110
 And many another noble worthy dede He with his bowe wroghte, as men may
 rede

Pleyen he koude on every mynstralcie,
 And syngen, that it was a melodie To heeren of his cleere voys the soun 115 Certes the kyng of Thebes, Amphion, That with his syngyng walled that citee, Koude nevere syngen half so wel as hee

Therto he was the semelheste man
 That is or was, sith that the world bigan
 What nedeth it his fetures to discryve? 121
 For in this world was noon so fair on-lyve
 He was therwith fulfid of gentillesse, Of honour, and of parfit worthynesse

This Phebus, that was flour of bachulrie, As wel in fredom as in chivalrie, 126
 For his desport, in signe eek of victorie
 Of Phytoun, so as telleth us the storie,
 Was wont to beren in his hand a bowe

Now hadde this Phebus in his hous a crowe 130

Which in a cage he fostred many a day,
 And taughte it speken, as men teche a jay Whit was this crowe as is a snow-whit swan,

And countrefete the speche of every man
 He koude, whan he sholde telle a tale 135 Therwith in al this world no nyghtyngale Ne koude, by an hondred thousand deel, Syngen so wonder myrly and weel

Now hadde this Phebus in his hous a wyf
 Which that he lovede moore than his lyf, 140
 And nyght and day dide evere his diligence Hir for to plesse, and doon hire reverence, Save oonly, if the sothe that I shal sayn, Jalous he was, and wolde have kept hire
 fayn

For hym were looth byjaped for to be, 145
 And so is every wight in swich degree,
 But al in ydel, for it availleth nocht A good wyf, that is clene of werk and
 thought,

Sholde nat been kept in noon awayt, certain,
 And trewely, the labour is in vayn 150
 To kepe a shrewe, for it wol nat bee Thus holde I for a verray nyceete, To spille labour for to kepe wyves
 Thus writen olde clerkes in hir lyves

But now to purpos, as I first bigan 155
 This worthy Phebus dooth al that he kan
 To plesen hire, wenyng for swich plesaunce,
 And for his manhede and his governaunce,
 That no man sholde han put hym from hir
 grace

But God it woot, ther may no man embrace 160

As to destreyne a thyng which that nature Hath natureelly set in a creature

Taak any bryd, and put it in a cage,
 And do al thyn entente and thy courage To fostre it tendrely with mete and drynke Of alle deynteas that thou kanst bithynke,
 And keep it al so clenly as thou may, 167
 Although his cage of gold be never so gay, Yet hath this brid, by twenty thousand foold,

Levere in a forest, that is rude and coold, Goon ete wormes and swich wretched-
 nesse 171

For evere this brid wol doon his bysnesse
 To escape out of his cage, yif he may His libertee this brid desureth ay

Lat take a cat, and fostre hym wel with milk 175
 And tendre flessh, and make his couche of silk,

And lat hym seen a mous go by the wal,
 Anon he weyveth milk and flessh and al,
 And every deyntee that is in that hous,
 Swich appetit hath he to ete a mous 180
 Lo, heere hath lust his dominacioun,
 And appetit fleemeth discrecioun

A she-wolf hath also a vileyns kynde
 The lewedeeste wolf that she may fynde,
 Or leest of reputacioun, wol she take, 185 In tyme whan hir lust to han a make Alle thise ensamples speke I by thise

 men

That been untrewes, and nothyng by wom-
 men

For men han evere a likerous appetit
 On lower thyng to parfourne hire deht 190
 Than on hire wyves, be they never so faire, Ne never so trewe, ne so debonaire Flessh is so newefangel, with meschaunce, That we ne konne in nothyng han ples-
 saunce

That sowneth into vertu any while 195 This Phebus, which that thoughte upon no gile,

Deceyved was, for al his jolitee
 For under hym another hadde shee,
 A man of litel reputacioun, Nat worth to Phebus in comparisoun 200
 The moore harm is, it happeth ofte so,
 Of which ther cometh muchel harm and wo

And so bifel, whan Phebus was absent, His wyf anon hath for hir lemman sent Hir lemman? Certes, this is a knavyssh
 speche! 205

Forveveth it me, and that I yow biseche
 The wise Plato seith, as ye may rede,
 The word moot nede accorde with the dede
 If men shal telle proprely a thyng, 209
 The wora moot cosyne be to the werkyng
 I am a boystous man, right thus seye I, Ther nys no difference, trewely Bitwixe a wyf that is of heigh degree,
 If of hir body dishonest she bee,
 And a povre wenche, oother than this —
 If it so be they werke bothe amys — 216
 But that the gentile, in estaat above,
 She shal be cleped his lady, as in love,
 And for that oother is a povre woman,
 She shal be cleped his wenche or his lem-
 man 220

And, God it woot, myn owene deere
 brother,

Men leyen that oon as lowe as lith that
oother

Right so bitwixe a tittleles tiraunt
And an outlawe, or a thief erraunt,
The same I seye, ther is no difference 225
To Ahsaundre was toold this sentence That, for the tirant is of gretter myght,
By force of meynee, for to sleen dounright,
And brennen hous and hoom, and make al
playn,

Lo, therefore is he cleped a capitayn, 230
And for the outlawe hath but smal meynee, And may nat doon so greet an harm as he,
Ne brynge a contree to so greet mescheef, Men clepen hym an outlawe or a thief
But, for I am a man nocht textueel, 235
I wol nocht telle of textes never a deel,
I wol go to my tale, as I bigan

Whan Phebus wyf had sent for hir lemman, Anon they wroghten al hire lust volage

The white crowe, that heeng ay in the cage, 240

Biheeld hire werk, and seyde never a word
And whan that hoom was come Phebus, the lord,

This crowe sang "Cokkow! cokkow! cok-kow!"

"What, bryd!" quod Phebus, "what song syngestow? 244

Ne were thow wont so myrily to syng
That to myn herte it was a rejoysynge To heere thy voys? allas! what song is
this?"

"By God!" quod he, "I syng nat amys Phebus," quod he, "for al thy worthy-
nesse,

For al thy beautee and thy gentillesse, 250
For al thy song and al thy mynstralcye, For al thy waityng, blered is thyn ye With oon of litel reputacioun, Noght worth to thee, as in comparisoun, The montance of a gnat, so moote I
thryve! 255

For on thy bed thy wyf I saugh hym swyve "

What wol ye moore? The crowe anon hym tolde,

By sadde tokenes and by wordes bolde,
How that his wyf had doon hire lecherye, Hym to greet shame and to greet vileynye, And tolde hym ofte he saugh it with his
yen 261

This Phebus gan awayward for to wryen,
And thoughte his sorweful herte brast atwo
His bowe he bente, and sette therinne a flo,
And in his ire his wyf thanne hath he slayn
This is th'effect, ther is namoore to sayn, 266
For sorwe of which he brak his mynstralcye, Bothe harpe, and lute, and gyterne, and sautrie,

And eek he brak his arwes and his bowe,
And after that thus spak he to the crowe
"Traitor," quod he, "with tonge of scorpioun, 271

Thou hast me broght to my confusioun, Allas, that I was wrought! why nere I deed?
O deere wyf! o gemme of lustiheed!

That were to me so sad and eek so trewe,
Now listow deed, with face pale of hewe, Ful gitelees, that dorste I swere, ywys! 277
O rakel hand, to doon so foule amys!

O trouble wit, o ire recchelees,
That unavysed smyteth giteles! 280

O wantrust, ful of fals suspencion, Where was thy wit and thy discrecion?

O every man, be war of rakelnesse!
Ne trowe no thyng withouten strong witnessse

Smyt nat to soone, er that ye witen why,
And beeth avysed wel and sobrelly, 286
Er ye doon any execucion

Upon youre ire for suspencion Allas! a thousand folk hath rakel ire Fully fordoon, and broght hem in the mire 290

Allas! for sorwe I wol myselfen slee!"
And to the crowe, "O false thief!" seyde
he,

"I wol thee quite anon thy false tale Thou songe whulom lyk a nyghtyngale, Now shaltow, false thief, thy song forgon,
And eek thy white fetheres everichon, 296
Ne nevere in al thy lif ne shaltou speke
Thus shal men on a traytour been awreke, Thou and thyn ofspryng evere shul be
blake,

Ne nevere sweete noyse shul ye make, 300
But evere crie agayn tempest and rayn, In tokenynge that thurgh thee my wyf is
slayn "

And to the crowe he sturte, and that anon,
And pulled his white tettheres everychon, And made hym blak, and refte hym al his song, 305

And eek his speche, and out at dore hym slong
 Unto the devel, which I hym bitake,
 And for this caas been alle crowes blake Lordynges, by this ensample I yow
 preye,
 Beth war, and taketh kep what that I
 seye 310
 Ne telleth nevere no man in youre lyf
 How that another man hath dight his wyf,
 He wol yow haten mortally, certeyn Daun Salomon, as wise clerkes seyn, Techeth a man to kepen his tonge weel 315
 But, as I seyde, I am nocht textueel
 But natheles, thus taughte me my dame
 "My sone, think on the crowe, a Goddes
 name!
 My sone, keep wel thy tonge, and keep thy freend
 A wikked tonge is worse than a feend, 320
 My sone, from a feend men may hem
 blesse
 My sone, God of his endeles goodnesse Walled a tonge with teeth and lippes eke,
 For man sholde hym avyse what he speeke
 My sone, ful ofte, for to mucche speche 325 Hath many a man been spilt, as clerkes
 teche,
 But for litel speche avysely
 Is no man shent, to speke generally My sone, thy tonge sholdestow restreyne At alle tymes, but whan thou doost thy
 peyne 330
 To speke of God, in honour and preyere
 The firste vertu, sone, if thou wolt leere, Is to restreyne and kepe wel thy tonge, Thus lerne children whan that they been yonge 334

My sone, of muchel spekyng yvele avysed, Ther lasse spekyng hadde ynough suffised, Comth muchel harm, thus was me toold and taught In muchel speche synne wanteth naught Wostow wherof a rakel tonge serveth?
 Right as a swerd forkutteth and forker-veth 340
 An arm a-two, my deere sone, right so A tonge kutteth freendshipe al a-two A jangler is to God abhomynable Reed Salomon, so wys and honourable, Reed David in his psalmes, reed Senekke My sone, speke nat, but with thyn heed thou bekke 346
 Dissimule as thou were deaf, if that thou
 here
 A janglere speke of perilous mateere
 The Flemynge seith, and lerne it if thee
 leste,
 That litel janglyng causeth muchel reste My sone, if thou no wikked word hast
 seyde, 351
 Thee thar nat drede for to be biwreyd,
 But he that hath mysseyd, I dar wel sayn,
 He may by no wey clepe his word agayn Thyng that is seyde is seyde, and forth it
 gooth, 355
 Though hym repente, or be hym leef or looth
 He is his thral to whom that he hath sayd
 A tale of which he is now yvele apayd
 My sone, be war, and be noon auctour newe Of tidynges, whether they been false or
 trewe 360
 Whereso thou come, amonges hye or lowe, Kepe wel thy tonge, and think upon the crowe "

Heere is ended the Maunciples Tale of the Crowe

FRAGMENT X (GROUP I)

THE PARSON'S PROLOGUE

Heere folweth the Prologe of the Persouns Tale

By that the Maunciple hadde his tale al ended,
 The sonne fro the south lyne was descended So lowe that he nas nat, to my sighte, Degrees nyne and twenty as in highte Foure of the clokke it was tho, as I gesse, 5
 For ellevene foot, or litel moore or lesse,
 My shadwe was at thilke tyme, as there,
 Of swiche feet as my lengthe parted were In sixe feet equal of proporcioun Therwith the moones exaltacioun, 10
 I meene Libra, alway gan ascende,
 As we were entryng at a thropes ende,
 For which oure Hoost, as he was wont to gye,
 As in this caas, oure joly compaignye, Seyde in this wise "Lordynges everichoon, Now lakketh us no tales mo than oon 16
 Fulfilled is my sentence and my decree,
 I trowe that we han herd of ech degree, Almost fulfilled is al myn ordnaunce I pray to God, so yeve hym right good
 chaunce, 20
 That telleth this tale to us lustly Sire preest," quod he, "artow a vicary?
 Or arte a person? sey sooth, by thy fey!
 Be what thou be, ne breke thou nat oure
 pley,
 For every man, save thou, hath toold his tale 25
 Unbokele, and shewe us what is in thy male,
 For, trewely, me thynketh by thy cheere Thou sholdest knytte up wcl a greet mateere
 Telle us a fable anon, for cokkes bones!"
 This Persoun answerde, al atones, 30
 "Thou getest fable noon ytoold for me,
 For Paul, that writeth unto Thymothee, Repreveth hem that weyven soothfast-
 nesse,
 And tellen fables and swich wrecchednesse
 Why sholde I sowen draf out of my fest, 35 Whan I may sowen whete, if that me lest?

For which I seye, if that yow list to heere Moraltee and vertuous mateere,
 And thanne that ye wol yeve me audience,
 I wol ful fayn, at Cristes reverence, 40
 Do yow plesaunce leefful, as I kan
 But trusteth wel, I am a Southren man,
 I kan nat geeste 'rum, ram, ruf,' by lettre, Ne, God woot, rym holde I but litel bettre, And therefore, if yow list — I wol nat
 glose — 45
 I wol yow telle a myrie tale in prose To knytte up al this feeste, and make an
 ende
 And Jhesu, for his grace, wit me sende
 To shewe yow the wey, in this viage,
 Of thilke parfit glorious pilgrymage 50
 That highte Jerusalem celestial And if ye vouche sauf, anon I shal Bigynne upon my tale, for which I preye Telle youre avys, I kan no bettre seye
 But nathelees, this meditacioun 55
 I putte it ay under correccioun Of clerkes, for I am nat textuel,
 I take but the sentence, trusteth weel Therefore I make a protestacioun That I wol stonde to correccioun " 60 Upon this word we han assented soone,
 For, as it seemed, it was for to doone,
 To enden in som vertuous sentence,
 And for to yeve hym space and audience,
 And bade oure Hoost he sholde to hym
 seye 65
 That alle we to telle his tale hym preye Oure Hoost hadde the wordes for us alle "Sire preest," quod he, "now fare yow bi-
 falle!
 Telleth," quod he, "youre meditacioun
 But hasteth yow, the sonne wole adoun, 70
 Beth fructuous, and that in litel space,
 And to do wel God sende yow his grace!
 Sey what yow list, and we wol gladly
 heere "
 And with that word he seyde in this manere

Explicit prohemium

THE PARSON'S TALE

Heere bigynneth the Persouns Tale

Jer 6° State super vias, et videte, et interrogate de viis antiquis que sit via bona, et ambulabunt in ea, et inuenietis refrigererum animabus vestris, etc

Oure sweete Lord God of hevene, that no man wole perisse, but wole that we comen alle to the knoweleche of hym, and to the blisful lif that is perdurable, / 75 amonesteth us by the prophete Jeremie, that seith in thys wyse / Stondeth upon the weyes, and seeth and axeth of olde pathes (that is to seyn, of olde sentences) which is the goode wey, / and walketh in that wey, and ye shal fynde refreshynge for youre soules, etc / Manye been the weyes espiutuels that leden folk to oure Lord Jhesu Crist, and to the regne of glorie / Of whiche weyes, ther is a ful noble wey and a ful covenable, which may nat fayle to man ne to woman that thurgh synne hath myscoon from the righte wey of Jerusalem celestial, / and thus wey is cleped Penitence, 80 of which man sholde gladly herknen and enquire with al his herte, / to wyten what is Penitence, and whennes it is cleped Penitence, and in how manye maneres been the acciouns or werkynges of Penitence, / and how manye spesces ther been of Penitence, and whiche thynges apertenen and bihoven to Penitence, and whiche thynges destourben Penitence /

Saint Ambrose seith that Penitence is the pleynynge of man for the gilt that he hath doon, and namore to do any thyng for which hym oghte to pleyne / And som doctour seith, "Penitence is the waymentynge of man that sorweth for his synne, and pyneth hymself for he hath mysdoon" / Penitence, with certeyne 85 circumstances, is verray repentance of a man that halt hymself in sorwe and oother peyne for his giltes / And for he shal be verray penitent, he shal first biwaylen the synnes that he hath doon, and stidefastly purposen in his herte to have shrift of mouthe and to doon satisfac-

cioun, / and nevere to doon thyng for which hym oghte moore to biwayle or to compleyne, and to continue in goode werkes, or elles his repentance may nat availle / For, as seith seint Ysidre, "he is a japere and a gabbere, and no verray repentant, that eftsoone dooth thyng for which hym oghte repente" / Wepynge, and nat for to stynte to do synne, may nat avayle / But nathelees, men shal 90 hope that every tyme that man falleth, be it never so ofte, that he may arise thurgh Penitence, if he have grace, but certainly it is greet doute / For, as seith Seint Gregorie, "unnethe ariseth he out of his synne, that is charged with the charge of yvel usage" / And therefore repentant folk, that stynte for to synne, and forlete synne er that synne forlete hem, hooly churche holdeth hem siker of hire savacioun / And he that synneth and verraily repenteth hym in his laste ende, hooly churche yet hopeth his savacioun, by the grete mercy of oure Lord Jhesu Crist, for his repentaunce, but taak the siker wey /

And now, sith I have declared yow what thyng is Penitence, now shul ye understonde that ther been three acciouns of Penitence / The firste is that a man 95 be baptized after that he hath synned / Seint Augustyn seith "But he be penytent for his olde synful lyf, he may nat bigynne the newe clene lif" / For, certes, if he be baptized withouten penitence of his olde gilt, he receyveth the mark of baptesme, but nat the grace ne the remission of his synnes, til he have repentance verray / Another defeaute is this, that men doon deedly synne after that they han receyved baptesme / The thridde defeaute is that men fallen in venial synnes after hir baptesme, fro day to day / Therof 100 seith Seint Augustyn that penitence of goode and humble folk is the penitence of every day /

The spesces of Penitence been three

That oon of hem is solempne, another is commune, and the thridde is privee / Thilke penance that is solempne is in two maneres, as to be put out of hooly chirche in Lente, for slaughtre of children, and swich maner thyng / Another is, when a man hath synned openly, of which synne the fame is openly spoken in the contree, and thanne hooly chirche by juggement destreyneth hym for to do open penance / Commune penance is that preestes enjoynen men in certeyn caas, as for to goon peraventure naked in pilgrimages, or bare-foot / Pryvee penance is 105 thilke that men doon alday for privee synnes, of whiche we shryve us prively and receyve privee penance /

Now shaltow understande what is bihovely and necessarie to verry perfite Penitence And this stant on three thynges / Contricioun of herte, Confessioun of Mouth, and Satisfaccioun / For which seith Seint John Crisostom "Penitence destreyneth a man to accepte benygnely every peyne that hym is enjoyned, with contricioun of herte, and shrift of mouth, with satisfaccioun, and in werkynge of alle manere humylitee" / And this is fruytful penitence agayn three thynges in whiche we wratthe oure Lord Jhesu Crist / this is to 110 seyn, by delit in thynkyng, by recchelesnesse in spekyng, and by wikked synful werkynge / And agayns these wikkede giltes is Penitence, that may be likned unto a tree /

The roote of this tree is Contricioun, that hideth hym in the herte of hym that is verry repentaunt, right as the roote of a tree hydeth hym in the erthe / Of the roote of Contricioun spryngeth a stalke that bereth braunches and leves of Confessioun, and fruyt of Satisfaccioun / For which Crist seith in his gospel "Dooth digne fruyt of Penitence", for by this fruyt may men knowe this tree, and nat by the roote that is hyd in the herte of man, ne by the braunches, ne by the leves of Confessioun / And therefore oure 115 Lord Jhesu Crist seith thus "By the fruyt of hem shul ye knowen hem" / Of this roote eek spryngeth a seed of grace, the which seed is mooder of sikernesse, and this seed is egre and hoot / The grace of this seed spryngeth of God thurgh remembrance of the day of doom and on the peynes of helle / Of this matere seith Salomon that in the drede of God man foreleteth his synne / The heete of this seed is the love of God, and the desiryng of the joye perdurable / This heete draweth the 120 herte of a man to God, and dooth hym haten his synne / For soothly ther is nothyng that savoureth so wel to a child as the milk of his norice, ne nothyng is to hym moore abhomynable than thilke milk when it is medled with oother mete / Right so the synful man that loveth his synne hym semeth that it is to him moost sweete of any thyng, / but fro that tyme that he loveth sadly oure Lord Jhesu Crist, and desreth the lif perdurable, ther nys to him no thyng moore abhomynable / For soothly the lawe of God is the love of God, for which David the prophete seith "I have loved thy lawe, and hated wikkednesse and hate", he that loveth God kepeth his lawe and his word / 125 This tree saugh the prophete Daniel in spirit, upon the avysioum of the kyng Nabugodonosor, when he conseled hym to do penitence / Penance is the tree of lyf to hem that it receyven, and he that holdeth hym in verry penitence is blessed, after the sentence of Salomon /

In this Penitence or Contricioun man shal understonde foure thynges, that is to seyn, what is Contricioun, and whiche been the causes that moeven a man to Contricioun, and how he sholde be contrit, and what Contricioun availleth to the soule / Thanne is it thus that Contricioun is the verry sorwe that a man receyveth in his herte for his synnes, with sad purpos to shryve hym, and to do penance, and nevermoore to do synne / And this sorwe shal been in this manere, as seith Seint Bernard "It shal been hevye and grevous, and ful sharp and poynnant in herte" / First, for man hath agilt 130 his Lord and his Creatour, and moore sharp and poynnant, for he hath agilt hys Fader celestial, / and yet moore sharp and poynant, for he hath wrathed and agilt hym that boghte hym, that with his precious blood hath deliuered us fro the bondes of synne, and fro the crueltee of the deuel, and fro the peynes of helle /

The causes that oghte moeve a man to Contricioun been sixe First a man shal remembre hym of his synnes, / but looke he that thulke remembraunce ne be to hym no delit by no wey, but greet shame and sorwe for his gilt For Job seith, "Synful men doon werkes worthy of confessioun" / And therefore seith Ezechie, "I wol remembre me alle the yeres of my lyf in bitternesse of myn herte" / And 135 God seith in the Apocalpse, "Remembreth yow fro whennes that ye been falle", for biforn that tyme that ye synned, ye were the children of God, and lymes of the regne of God, / but for youre synne ye been woxen thral, and foul, and membres of the feend, hate of aungels, sclaudre of hooly churche, and foode of the false serpent, perpetuel matere of the fir of helle, / and yet moore foul and abhominable, for ye trespassen so ofte tyme as dooth the hound that retourneth to eten his spewyng / And yet be ye fouler for youre longe continuyng in synne and youre synful usage, for which ye be roten in youre synne, as a beest in his dong / Swiche manere of thoghtes maken a man to have shame of his synne, and no delit, as God seith by the prophete Ezechiel / 140 "Ye shal remembre yow of youre weyes, and they shuln displese yow" Soothly synnes been the weyes that leden folk to helle /

The seconde cause that oghte make a man to have desdayn of synne is this that, as seith Seint Peter, "whoso that dooth synne is thral of synne", and synne put a man in greet thraldom / And therefore seith the prophete Ezechiel "I wente sorweful in desdayn of myself" Certes, wol oghte a man have desdayn of synne, and withdrawe hym from that thraldom and vileyny / And lo, what seith Seneca in this matere? He seith thus "Though I wiste that neither God ne man ne sholde nevere knowe it, yet wolde I have desdayn for to do synne" / And the same Seneca also seith "I am born to gretter thynges than to be thral to my body, or than for to maken of my body a thral" / 145 Ne a fouler thral may no man ne womman maken of his body than for to yeven his body to synne / Al were it the fouleste cherl or the fouleste womman that lyveth, and leest of value, yet is he thanne moore foul and moore in servitude / Evere fro the hyer degree that man falleth, the moore is he thral, and moore to God and to the world vile and abhominable / O goode God, wel oghte man have desdayn of synne, sith that thurgh synne, ther he was free, now is he maked bonde / And therefore seyth Seint Augustyn "If thou hast desdayn of thy servant, if he agite or synne, have thou thanne desdayn that thou thyself sholdest do synne" / 150 Tak reward of thy value, that thou ne be to foul to thyself / Allas! wel oghten they thanne have desdayn to been servauntz and thralles to synne, and soore been ashamed of hemself, / that God of his endelees goodnesse hath set hem in heigh estaat, or yeven hem wit, strengthe of body, heele, beautee, prosperitee, / and boghte hem fro the deeth with his herte-blood, that they so unkyndely, agayns his gentillesse, quiten hym so vileynsly to slaughtre of hir owene soules / O goode God, ye wommen that been of so greet beautee, remembreth yow of the proverbe of Salomon He seith / 155 "Likneth a fair womman that is a fool of hire body lyk to a ryng of gold that were in the groyn of a soughe" / For right as a soughe wroteth in everich ordure, so wroteth she hire beautee in the styngnyng ordure of synne /

The thridde cause that oghte moeve a man to Contricioun is drede of the day of doom and of the horrible peynes of helle / For, as Seint Jerome seith, "At every tyme that me remembreth of the day of doom I quake, / for whan I ete or drynke, or what so that I do, evere semeth me that the trompe sowneth in myn ere / 'Ris- 160 eth up, ye that been dede, and cometh to the juggement'" / O goode God, muchel oghte a man to drede swich a juggement, "ther as we shullen been alle," as

Seint Poul seith, "biforn the seete of oure Lord Jhesu Crist,"/ whereas he shal make a general congregacioun, whereas no man may be absent / For certes there availleth noon essoyne ne excusacioun / And nat only that oure defaultes shullen be jugged, but eek that alle oure werkes shullen orenly be knowe / And, as seith 165 Seint Bernard, "Ther ne shal no pleyngre availe, ne no sleighte, we shullen yeven rekenyng of everich ydel word" / Ther shul we han a juge that may nat been deceyved ne corrupt And why? For, certes, alle oure thoghtes been discovered as to hym, ne for preyere ne for meede he shal nat been corrupt / And therfore seith Salomon, "The wratthe of God ne wol nat spare no wight, for preyere ne for yifte", and therefore, at the day of doom, ther nys noon hope to escape / Wherefore, as seith Seint Anselm, "Ful greet angwyssh shul the synful folk have at that tyme,/ ther shal the stierne and wrothe juge sitte above, and under hym the horrible pit of helle open to destroyen hym that moot biknowen his synnes, whiche synnes openly been shewed biforn God and biforn every creature,/ and in the left syde mo develes 170 than herte may bithynke, for to harye and drawe the synful soules to the peyne of helle,/ and withinne the hertes of folk shal be the bityng conscience, and withoute forth shal be the world al brennyng / Whider shal thanne the wrecched synful man flee to hiden hym? Certes, he may nat hyden hym, he moste come forth and shewen hym" / For certes, as seith Seint Jerome, "the erthe shal casten hym out of hym, and the see also, and the eyr also, that shal be ful of thonder-clappes and lightnynges" / Now soothly, whoso wel remembreth hym of these thynges, I gesse that his synne shal nat turne hym into delit, but to greet sorwe, for drede of the peyne of helle / And 175 therfore seith Job to God "Suffre, Lord, that I may a while biwaille and wepe, er I go withoute returnyng to the derke lond, covered with the derknesse of deeth,/ to the lond of mysese and of derknesse, whereas is the shadwe of deeth, whereas ther is noon ordre or ordinaunce, but grisly

drede that evere shal laste" / Loo, heere may ye seen that Job preyde respit a while, to biwepe and waille his trespas, for soothly oo day of respit is bettre than al the tresor of this world / And forasmuche as a man may acquiten hymself biforn God by penitence in this world, and nat by tresor, therfore sholde he preye to God to yeve hym respit a while to biwepe and biwailen his trespas / For certes, al the sorwe that a man myghte make fro the bigynnyng of the world nys but a litel thyng at regard of the sorwe of helle / The 180 cause why that Job clepeth helle the lond of derknesse,/ understondeth that he clepeth it "lond" or erthe, for it is stable, and nevere shal faille, "derk," for he that is in helle hath defaulte of light materal / For certes, the derke light that shal come out of the fyr that evere shal brenne, shal turne hym al to peyne that is in helle, for it sheweth him to the horrible develes that hym tormenten / "Covered with the derknesse of deeth," that is to seyn, that he that is in helle shal have defaulte of the sighte of God, for certes, the sighte of God is the lyf perdurable / "The derknesse of deeth" been the synnes that the wrecched man hath doon, whiche that destourben hym to see the face of God, right as dooth a derk clowde bitwixe us and the sonne / "Lond of mysese," by 185 cause that ther been three maneres of defaultes, agayn three thynges that folk of this world han in this present lyf, that is to seyn, honours, delices, and riches / Agayns honour, have they in helle shame and confusoun / For wel ye woot that men clepen honour the reverence that man doth to man, but in helle is noon honour ne reverence For certes, namoore reverence shal be doon there to a kyng than to a knave / For which God seith by the prophete Jeremye, "Thilke folk that me despisen shul been in despit" / Honour is eek cleped greet lordshipe, ther shal no wight serven other, but of harm and torment Honour is eek cleped greet dignyte and heighnesse, but in helle shul they been al fortroden of develes / 190 And God seith, "The horrible develes shulle goon and comen upon the hevedes of the dampned folk " And this is for as muche as the hyer that they were in this present lyf, the moore shulle they been abated and defouled in helle / Agayns the richesse of this world shul they han myseuse of poverte, and this poverte shal been in foure thynges / In defaute of tresor, of which that David seith, "The riche folk, that embraceden and oneden al hire herte to tresor of this world, shul slepe in the slepyng of deeth, and nothyng ne shal they fynden in hir handes of al hir tresor" / And mooreover the myseuse of helle shal been in defaute of mete and drinke / For God seith thus by Moyses "They shul been wasted with hunger, and the briddes of helle shul devouren hem with bitter deeth, and the galle of the dragon shal been hire drynke, and the venym of the dragon hire morsels" / And forther over, 195 hire myseuse shal been in defaute of clothyng, for they shulle be naked in body as of clothyng, save the fyr in which they brenne, and othere filthes, / and naked shul they been of soule, as of alle manere vertues, which that is the clothyng of the soule Where been thanne the gaye robes, and the softe shetes, and the smale shertes? / Loo, what seith God of hem by the prophete Ysaye that "under hem shul been strawed motthes, and hire covertures shulle been of wormes of helle" / And forther over, hir myseuse shal been in defaute of freendes For he nys nat povre that hath goode freendes, but there is no frend, / for neither God ne no creature shal been freend to hem, and everich of hem shal haten oother with deedly hate / "The sones and the doghtren 200 shullen rebellen agayns fader and mooder, and kynrede agayns kynrede, and chiden and despisen everich of hem oother bothe day and nyght," as God seith by the prophete Michias / And the lovyng children, that whilom loveden so fleshly everich oother, wolden everich of hem eten oother if they myghte / For how sholden they love hem togidre in the peyne of helle, whan they hated everich of hem oother in the prosperitee of this lyf? / For truste wel, hir fleshly love was deedly hate, as seith the prophete David "Whoso that loveth wikkednesse, he hateth his soule" / And whoso hateth his owene soule, certes, he may love noon oother wight in no manere / And therefore, in helle is 205 no solas ne no freendshipe, but evere the moore fleshly lynredes that been in helle, the moore cursynges, the more chid-ynges, and the moore deedly hate ther is among hem / And forther over, they shul have defaute of alle manere delices For certes, delices been after the appetites of the fyve wittes, as sighte, herynge, smell-yng, savorynge, and touchynge / But in helle hir sighte shal be ful of derknesse and of smoke, and therefore ful of teeres, and hir herynge ful of waymentynge and of gryntyng of teeth, as seith Jhesu Crist / Hir nosethurles shullen be ful of stynkyng stynk, and, as seith Ysaye the prophete, "hir savorynge shal be ful of bitter galle", / and touchynge of al hir body ycovered with "fir that nevere shal quenche, and with wormes that nevere shul dyen," as God seith by the mouth of Ysaye / 210 And for as muche as they shul nat wene that they may dyen for peyne, and by hir deeth flee fro peyne, that may they understanden by the word of Job, that seith, "ther as is the shadwe of deeth" / Certes, a shadwe hath the liknesse of the thyng of which it is shadwe, but shadwe is nat the same thyng of which it is shadwe / Right so fareth the peyne of helle, it is lyk deeth for the horrible angwyssh, and why? For it peyneth hem evere, as though they sholde dye anon, but certes, they shal nat dye / For, as seith Seint Gregorie, "To wrecche caytyves shal be deeth withoute deeth, and ende withouten ende, and defaute withoute failynge / For hir deeth shal alwey lyven, and hir ende shal everemo bigynne, and hir defaute shal nat faille" / And 215 therfore seith Seint John the Evaungelist "They shullen folwe deeth, and they shul nat fynde hym, and they shul desiren to dye, and deeth shal flee fro hem" / And eek Job seith that in helle is noon ordre of rule / And al be it so that God hath creat alle thynges in right ordre, and no thyng withouten ordre, but alle thynges been ordeyned and nombred, yet, nathe-lees, they that been dampned been nothyng in ordre, ne holden noon ordre /

For the erthe ne shal bere hem no fruyt / For, as the prophete David seith, "God shal destroe the fruyt of the erthe as fro hem, ne water ne shal yeve hem no moisture, ne the eyr no refresshyng, ne fyr no light" / For, as seith 220 Seint Basile, "The brennyng of the fyr of this world shal God yeve in helle to hem that been dampned, / but the light and the cleernesse shal be yeven in hevene to his children", right as the goode man yeveth flessch to his children and bones to his houndes / And for they shullen have noon hope to escape, seith Seint Job atte laste that "ther shal horroure and grisly drede dwellen withouten ende" / Horroure is alwey drede of harm that is to come, and this drede shal evere dwelle in the hertes of hem that been dampned And therefore han they lorn al hire hope, for sevene causes / First, for God, that is hir juge, shal be with-outen mercy to hem, and they may nat plesse hym ne noon of his halwes, ne they ne may yeve no thyng for hir raunsoun, / 225 ne they have no voys to speke to hym, ne they may nat fle fro peyne, ne they have no goodnesse in hem, that they mowe shewe to delivere hem fro peyne / And therefore seith Salomon "The wikked man dyeth, and whan he is deed, he shal have noon hope to escape fro peyne" / Whoso thanne wolde wel understande these peynes, and bithynke hym weel that he hath deserved thilke peynes for his synnes, certes, he sholde have moore talent to siken and to wepe, than for to synge and to pleye / For, as that serth Salomon, "Whoso that hadde the science to knowe the peynes that been establissed and ordeyned for synne, he wolde make sorwe" / "Thilke science," as seith Seint Augustyn, "maketh a man to waynten in his herte" / 230

The fourthe point that oghte maken a man to have contricion is the sorweful remembrance of the good that he hath left to doon heere in erthe, and eek the good that he hath lorn / Soothly, the goode werkes that he hath lost, outhere they been the goode werkes that he wroghte er he fel into deedly synne, or elles the goode werkes that he wroghte while he lay in synne / Soothly, the goode werkes that he dide biforn that he fil in synne been al mortefied and astoned and dilled by the ofte synnyng / The othere goode werkes, that he wroghte whil he lay in deedly synne, thei been outrelly dede, as to the lyf perdurable in hevene / Thanne thilke goode werkes that been mortefied by ofte synnyng, whiche goode werkes he dide whil he was in charitee, ne mowe nevere quyken agayn withouten verray penitence / And therof seith God 235 by the mouth of Ezechuel, that "if the rightful man returne agayn from his rightwisnesse and werke wikkednesse, shal he lyve?" / Nay, for alle the goode werkes that he hath wroght ne shul nevere been in remembrance, for he shal dyen in his synne / And upon thilke chapitre seith Seint Gregorie thus that "we shulle under-stonde this principally, / that whan we doon deedly synne, it is for noght thanne to rehercen or drawn into memorie the goode werkes that we han wroght biforn" / For certes, in the werkyng of the deedly synne, ther is no trust to no good werk that we han doon biforn, that is to seyn, as for to have therby the lyf perdurable in hevene / But natheles, the goode 240 werkes quyken agayn, and comen agayn, and helpen, and availlen to have the lyf perdurable in hevene, whan we han contricion / But soothly, the goode werkes that men doon whil they been in deedly synne, for as muche as they were doon in deedly synne, they may nevere quyke agayn / For certes, thyng that nevere hadde lyf may nevere quykene, and natheles, al be it that they ne availle noght to han the lyf perdurable, yet availen they to abregge of the peyne of helle, or elles to geten temporal riches, / or elles that God wole the rather enrichen and lightne the herte of the synful man to have repentance, / and eek they availen for to usen a man to doon goode werkes, that the feend have the lasse power of his soule / And thus the curteis 245 Lord Jhesu Crist ne wole that no good werk be lost, for in somewhat it shal avsille / But, for as muche as the goode werkes that men doon whil they been in good lyf been al mortefied by synne foilwyng, and eek sith that alle the goode werkes that men doon whil they been in deedly synne been outrely dede as for to have the lyf peraurable, / wel may that man that no good werk ne dooth synge thilke newe Frenshe song, "Jay tout perdu mon temps et mon labour" / For certes, synne bireveth a man bothe goodnesse of nature and eek the goodnesse of grace / For soothly, the grace of the Hooly Goost fareth lyk fyr, that may nat been ydel, for fyr fayleth anon as it forleteth his wirkyng, and right so grace fayleth anon as it forleteth his werkyng / 250 Then leseth the synful man the goodnesse of glorie, that only is bihight to goode men that labouren and werken / Wel may he be sory thanne, that oweth al his lif to God as long as he hath lyved, and eek as long as he shal lyve, that no goodnesse ne hath to paye with his dette to God to whom he oweth al his lyf / For trust wel, "he shal yeven accountes," as seith Sेंट Bernard, "of alle the goodes that han be yeven hym in this present lyf, and how he hath hem despended, / in so muche that ther shal nat perisse an heer of his heed, ne a moment of an houre ne shal nat perisse of his tyme, that he ne shal yeve of it a rekenyng" /

The fifthe thyng that oghte moeve a man to contricioun is remembrance of the passiou that oure Lord Jhesu Crist suffred for oure synnes / For, as 255 seith Sेंट Bernard, "Whil that I lyve I shal have remembrance of the travailes that oure Lord Crist suffred in prechyng, / his werynesse in travallyng, his temptaciouns whan he fasted, his longe wakynge whan he preyde, hise teeres whan that he weep for pitee of good peple, / the wo and the shame and the filthe that men seyden to hym, of the foule spitting that men spitte in his face, of the buffettes that men yaven hym, of the foule mowes, and of the repreves that men to hym seyden, / of the nayles with whiche he was nayled to the croys, and of al the remenant of his passiou that he suffred for my synnes, and no thyng for his gilt" / And ye shul

understonde that in mannes synne is every manere of ordre or ordinaunce turned up-so-down / For it is sooth 260 that God, and resoun, and sensualitee, and the body of man been so ordeyned that everich of these foure thynges sholde have lordshipe over that oother, / as thus God sholde have lordshipe over resoun, and resoun over sensualitee, and sensualitee over the body of man / But soothly, whan man synneth, al this ordre or ordinaunce is turned up-so-down / And therefore, thanne, for as muche as the resoun of man ne wol nat be subget ne obeisant to God, that is his lord by right, therefore leseth it the lordshipe that it sholde have over sensualitee, and eek over the body of man / And why? For sensualitee rebelleth thanne agayns resoun, and by that wey leseth resoun the lordshipe over sensualitee and over the body / For right as 265 resoun is rebel to God, right so is bothe sensualitee rebel to resoun and the body also / And certes this disordinaunce and this rebelloun oure Lord Jhesu Crist aboghte upon his precious body ful deere, and herkneth in which wise / For as muche thanne as resoun is rebel to God, therefore is man worthy to have sorwe and to be deed / Thus suffred oure Lord Jhesu Crist for man, after that he hadde be betrayed of his disciple, and distreyned and bounde, so that his blood brast out at every nayl of his handes, as seith Sेंट Augustyn / And farther over, for as muchel as resoun of man ne wol nat daunte sensualitee whan it may, therefore is man worthy to have shame, and this suffred oure Lord Jhesu Crist for man, whan they spetten in his visage / And farther over, 270 for as muchel thanne as the caytyf body of man is rebel bothe to resoun and to sensualitee, therefore is it worthy the deeth / And this suffred oure Lord Jhesu Crist for man upon the croys, where as ther was no part of his body free withouten greet payne and bitter passiou / And al this suffred Jhesu Crist, that nevere forgeted And therefore resonably may be seyde of Jhesu in this manere "To muchei am I peyned for the thynges that I nevere deserved, and to muche defouled for shendshipe that man is worthy to have" / And therefore may the synful man wel seye, as seith Seint Bernard, "Acursed be the bitterness of my synne, for which ther moste be suffred so muchel bitterness" / For certes, after the diverse discordaunces of oure wikkednesses was the passioun of Jhesu Crist ordeyned in diverse thynges, / as thus Certes, synful 275 mannes soule is bitrayسد of the devel by coveteise of temporeel prosperitee, and scorned by deceite whan he cheseth fleshly delices, and yet is it tormented by unpacience of adversitee, and bispet by servage and subjeccioun of synne, and atte laste it is slayn fynally / For this disordinaunce of synful man was Jhesu Crist first bitrayسد, and after that was he bounde, that cam for to unbynden us of synne and peyne / Thanne was he byscorned, that only sholde han been honoured in alle thynges and of alle thynges / Thanne was his visage, that oghte be desired to be seyn of al mankynde, in which visage aungels desiren to looke, vileynsly bispet / Thanne was he scourged, that no thyng hadde agilt, and finally, thanne was he crucified and slayn / Thanne was acompliced 280 the word of Ysaye, "He was wounded for oure mysdedes and defouled for oure telonics" / Now sith that Jhesu Crist took upon hymself the peyne of alle oure wikkednesses, muchel oghte synful man wepen and biwayle, that for his synnes Goddes sone of hevene sholde al this peyne endure /

The sixte thyng that oghte moeve a man to contricioun is the hope of three thynges, that is to seyn, foryifnesse of synne, and the yifte of grace wel for to do, and the glorie of hevene, with which God shal gerdone man for his goode dedes / And for as muche as Jhesu Crist yeveth us these yiftes of his largesse and of his sovereyn bountee, therefore is he cleped Jhesus Nazarenus rex Judeorum / Jhesus is to seyn "saveour" or "salvaciou," on whom men shul hope to have foryifnesse of synnes, which that is proprely salvacioun of synnes / And therefore seyde the 285 aungel to Joseph, "Thou shalt clepen his name Jhesus, that shal saven his peple of hir synnes" / And heerof seith Seint Peter "Ther is noon oother name under hevene that is yeve to any man, by which a man may be saved, but only Jhesus" / Nazarenus is as muche for to seye as "florisshyng," in which a man shal hope that he that yeveth hym remissioun of synnes shal yeve hym eek grace wel for to do / For in the flour is hope of fruyt in tyme comyng, and in foryifnesse of synnes hope of grace wel for to do / "I was atte dore of thyn herte," seith Jhesus, "and cleped for to entre / He that openeth to me shal have foryifnesse of synne / I wol entre into hym by my grace, and soupe with hym," by the goode werkes that he shal doon, whiche werkes been the foode of God, "and he shal soupe with me," by the grete joye that I shal yeven hym / Thus 290 shal man hope, for his werkes of penaunce, that God shal yeven hym his regne, as he bihooteth hym in the gospel /

Now shal a man understonde in which manere shal been his contricioun / I seye that it shal been universal and total / This is to seyn, a man shal be verray repentaunt for alle his synnes that he hath doon in delit of his thought, for delit is ful perilous / For ther been two manere of consentynges that oon of hem is cleped consentyng of affeccioun, whan a man is moeved to do synne, and deliteth hym longe for to thynke on that synne, / and his reson aperceyveth it wel that it is synne agayns the lawe of God, and yet his reson refreyne[n]t nat his foul delit or talent, though he se wel apertly that it is agayns the reverence of God / Although his reson ne consente noght to doon that synne in dede, / yet seyn somme doctours that swich delit that dwelleth longe, it is ful perilous, al be it nevere so lite / And also a 295 man sholde sorwe namely for al that evere he hath desired agayn the lawe of God with perfit consentyng of his reson for therof is no doute, that it is deedly synne in consentyng / For certes, ther is no deedly synne, that it nas first in mannes thought, and after that in his delit, and so forth into consentyng and into dede / Wherfore I seye that many men ne repenten hem nevere of swiche thoughtes and delites, ne nevere shryven hem of it, but oonly of the dede of grete synnes outward / Wherefor I seye that swiche wikked delites and wikked thoghtes been subtille bigleres of hem that shullen be dampned / Moore-over man oghte to sorwe for his wikkede wordes as wel as for his wikkede dedes For certes, the repentaunce of a synguler synne, and nat repente of alle his othere synnes, or elles repenten hym of alle his othere synnes, and nat of a synguler synne, may nat availle / For certes, God 300 almygnty is al good, and therefore he foryeveth al, or elles right noght / And heerof seith Seint Augustyn / "I wot certeynly that God is enemy to everich synner", and how thanne, he that observeth o synne, shal he have foryiffnesse of the remenaunt of his othere synnes? Nay / And forther over, contricioun sholde be wonder sorweful and angwissous, and therfore yeveth hym God pleynly his mercy, and therefore, whan my soule was angwis-sous withinne me, I hadde remembrance of God that my preyere myghte come to hym / Forther over, contricioun moste be continueel, and that man have stedefast purpos to shriven hym, and for to amenden hym of his lyf / For 305 soothly, whil contricioun lasteth, man may evere have hope of foryiffnesse, and of this comth hate of synne, that destroyeth synne, bothe in himself, and eek in oother folk, at his power / For which seith David "Ye that loven God, hateth wikkednesse" For trusteth wel, to love God is for to love that he loveth, and hate that he hateth /

The laste thyng that men shal under-stonde in contricioun is this, wherof avayleth contricioun I seye that som-tyme contricioun delivereth a man fro synne, / of which that David seith, "I seye," quod David, that is to seyn, I pur-posed fermely, "to shryve me, and thow, Lord, relessedest my synne" / And right so as contricioun availleth noght withouten sad purpos of shrifte, if man have oportunittee, right so litel worth is shrifte or satisfaccioun withouten contricioun / And mooreover contricioun 310 destroyeth the prisoun of helle, and maketh wayk and fieble alle the strengthes of the develes, and restoreth the yftes of the Hooly Goost and of alle goode vertues, and it clenseth the soule of synne, and delivereth the soule fro the peyne of helle, and fro the compaignye of the devel, and fro the servage of synne, and restoreth it to alle goodes espiituels, and to the compaignye and commounoun of hooly chirche / And forther over, it maketh hym that whilom was sone of ire to be sone of grace, and alle these thynges been preved by hooly writ / And therefore, he that wolde sette his entente to these thynges, he were ful wys, for soothly he ne sholde nat thanne in al his lyf have corage to synne, but yeven his body and al his herte to the service of Jhesu Crist, and therof doon hym hommage / For soothly oure sweete Lord Jhesu Crist hath spared us so debonarily in oure folies, that if he ne hadde pites of mannes soule, a sory song we myghten alle synge / 315

Explicit prima pars Penitentie, Et sequitur secunda pars eiusdem

The seconde partie of Penitence is Confessioun, that is signe of contricioun / Now shul ye understonde what is Confessioun, and whether it oghte nedes be doon or noon, and whiche thynges been covenable to verray Confessioun /

First shaltow understonde that Confessioun is verray shewynge of synnes to the preest / This is to seyn "verray," for he moste confessen hym of alle the condicions that bilongen to his synne, as ferforth as he kan / Al moot be seyde, and no thyng excused ne hyd ne forwrapped, and noght avaunte thee of thy goode werkes / And forther over, it is 320 necessarie to understonde whennes that synnes spryngen, and how they encreessen and whiche they been /

Of the spryngynge of synnes seith Seint Paul in this wise that "right as by a man

synne entred first into this world, and thurgh that synne deeth, right so thilke deeth entred into alle men that synneden / And this man was Adam, by whom synne entred into this world, whan he brak the comaundementz of God / And therefore, he that first was so myghty that he sholde nat have dyed, bicam swich oon that he moste nedes dye, whether he wolde or noon, and al his progenye in this world, that in thilke man synneden / Looke that in th'estaat of innocence, whan Adam and Eve naked weren in Paradys, and nothyng ne hadden shame of hir nakednesse, / how that the serpent, that 325 was most wily of alle othere beestes that God hadde maked, seyde to the womman "Why comaunded God to yow ye sholde nat eten of every tree in Paradys?" / The womman answerde "Of the fruyt," quod she, "of the trees in Paradys we feden us, but soothly, of the fruyt of the tree that is in the myddel of Paradys, God forbad us for to ete, ne nat touchen it, lest per aventure we sholde dyen" / The serpent seyde to the womman "Nay, nay, ye shul nat dyen of deeth, for sothe, God woot that what day that ye eten therof, youre eyen shul opene, and ye shul been as goddes, knowynge good and harm" / The womman thanne saugh that the tree was good to feedyng, and far to the eyen, and delitable to the sighte She took of the fruyt of the tree, and eet it, and yaf to hire housbonde, and he eet, and anon the eyen of hem bothe openeden / And whan that they knewe that they were naked, they sowed of fige leves a maner of breches to hiden hire membres / There may 330 ye see that deedly synne hath first suggestion of the feend, as sheweth heere by the naddre, and afterward, the delit of the flesh, as sheweth heere by Eve, and after that, the consentyng of resoun, as sheweth heere by Adam / For trust wel, though so were that the feend tempted Eve, that is to seyn, the flesh, and the flesh hadde delit in the beaute of the fruyt defended, yet certes, til that resoun, that is to seyn, Adam, consented to the etynge of the fruyt, yet stood he in th'estaat of innocence / Of thilke Adam tooke we thilke synne original, for of hym fleshly descended he we alle, and engendred of vile and corrupt mateere / And whan the soule is put in oure body, right anon is contract original synne, and that that was erst but oonly peyne of concupiscence, is afterward bothe peyne and synne / And therefore be we alle born sones of wratthe and of dampnacioun perdurable, if it nere baptesme that we receyven, which bynymeth us the culpe But for sothe, the peyne dwelleth with us, as to temptacioun, which peyne highte concupiscence / And this 335 concupiscence, whan it is wrongfully disposed or ordeyned in man, it maketh hym coveite, by covetise of flesh, fleshly synne, by sighte of his eyen as to erthely thynges, and eek covetise of hynesse by pride of herte /

Now, as for to speken of the firste covetise, that is concupiscence, after the lawe of oure membres, that weren lawefulliche ymaked and by rightful juggement of God, / I seye, forasmuche as man is nat obeisaunt to God, that is his lord, therefore is the flesh to hym disobeisaunt thurgh concupiscence, which yet is cleped norrisynge of synne and occasioun of synne / Therefore, al the while that a man hath in hym the peyne of concupiscence, it is impossible but he be tempted somtime and moeved in his flesh to synne / And this thyng may nat faille as longe as he lyveth, it may wel wexe fieble and faille by vertu of baptesme, and by the grace of God thurgh penitence, / but fully ne shal it nevere 340 quenche, that he ne shal som tyme be moeved in hymself, but if he were al refreyded by sickness, or by malefice of sorcerie, or colde drynkcs / For lo, what seith Seint Paul "The flesh coveteth agayn the spirit, and the spirit agayn the flesh, they been so contrarie and so stryven that a man may nat alway doon as he wolde" / The same Seint Paul, after his grete penaunce in water and in lond, — in water by nyght and by day in greet peril and in greet peyne, in lond, in famyne and thirst, in coold and cloothlees, and ones stoned almost to the deeth, / — yet seyde he, "Allas, I caytyf man! who shal delivere me fro the prisoun of my caytyf body?" / And Seint Jerome, whan he longe tyme hadde woned in desert, where as he hadde no compaignye but of wilde beestes, where as he ne hadde no mete but herbes, and water to his drynke, ne no bed but the naked erthe, for which his flessch was blak as an Ethiopeen for heete, and ny destroyed for coold, / yet seyde he 345 that "the brynnyng of lecherie boyled in al his body" / Wherefore I woot wel sykerly that they been deceyved that seyn that they ne be nat tempted in hir body / Witnessse on Seint Jame the Apostel, that seith that "every wight is tempted in his owene concupiscence", that is to seyn, that everich of us hath matere and occasioun to be tempted of the norissyng of synne that is in his body / And therefore seith Seint John the Evgangelist "If that we seyn that we be withoute synne, we deceyve us selve, and trouthe is nat in us" /

Now shal ye understonde in what manere that synne wexeth or encreaseth in man The firste thyng is thilke norissyng of synne of which I spak biforn, thilke flesshly concupiscence / And after 350 that comth the subjeccioun of the devel, this is to seyn, the develes bely, with which he bloweth in man the fir of flesshly concupiscence / And after that, a man bithynketh hym whether he wol doon, or no, thilke thing to which he is tempted / And thanne, if that a man withstonde and weyve the firste entusyng of his flessch and of the feend, thanne is it no synne, and if it so be that he do nat so, thanne feeleth he anon a flambe of delit / And thanne is it good to be war, and kepen hym wel, or elles he wol falle anon into consentyng of synne, and thanne wol he do it, if he may have tyme and place / And of this matere seith Moyses by the devel in this manere
 "The feend seith, 'I wole chace and pursue the man by wikked suggestioun, and I wole hente hym by moevyng or stryng of synne And I wol departe my prisre or my praye by deliberacioun, and my lust shal been acomplced in delit I wol drawe my swerd in consentyng' — / 355 for certes, right as a swerd departeth a thyng in two peces, right so consentyng departeth God fro man — 'and thanne wol I sleen hym with myn hand in dede of synne', thus seith the feend" / For certes, thanne is it man al deed in soule And thus is synne acomplced by temptacioun, by delit, and by consentyng, and thanne is the synne cleped actueel /

For sothe, synne is in two maneres, outhr it is venial, or deedly synne Soothly, whan man loveth any creature moore than Jhesu Crist oure Creatour, thanne is it deedly synne And venial synne is it, if man love Jhesu Crist lasse than hym oghte / For sothe, the dede of this venial synne is ful perilous, for it amenuseth the love that men sholde han to God moore and moore / And therefore, if a man charge hymself with manye swiche venial synnes, certes, but if so be that he somtyme discharge hym of hem by shrifte, they mowe ful lightly amenuse in hym al the love that he hath to Jhesu Crist, / and in this wise skippeth 360 venial into deedly synne For certes, the moore that a man chargeth his soule with venial synnes, the moore is he enclynd to fallen into deedly synne / And therefore lat us nat be negligent to deschargen us of venial synnes For the proverbe seith that "manye smale maken a greet" / And herke this ensample A greet wawe of the see comth som tyme with so greet a violence that it drencheth the ship And the same harm doon som tyme the smale drops of water, that en-tren thurgh a litel crevace into the thurrok, and in the botme of the ship, if men be so negligent that they ne discharge hem nat by tyme / And therefore, although ther be a difference bitwixe these two causes of drenchyng, algates the ship is dreynt / Right so fareth it somtyme of deedly synne, and of anoyouse veniale synnes, whan they multiple in a man so greetly that thilke worldly thynges that he loveth, thurgh whiche he synneth venially, is as greet in his herte as the love of God, or moore / And therefore, the 365 love of every thyng that is nat biset in God, ne doon principally for Goddes sake, although that a man love it lasse than God, yet is it venial synne, / and deedly synne whan the love of any thyng weyeth in the herte of man as muchel as the love of God, or moore / "Deedly synne," as seith Seint Augustyn, "is whan a man turneth his herte fro God, which that is verray sovereyn bountee, that may nat change, and yeveth his herte to thyng that may chaunge and flitte" / And certes, that is every thyng save God of hevene For sooth is that if a man yeve his love, the which that he oweth al to God with al his herte, unto a creature, certes, as muche of his love as he yeveth to thilke creature, so muche he breveth fro God, / and therefore dooth he synne For he that is dettour to God ne yeldeth nat to God al his dette, that is to seyn, al the love of his herte / 370

Now sith man understandeth generally which is venial synne, thanne is it covenable to tellen specially of synnes whiche that many a man peraventure ne demeth hem nat synnes, and ne shryveth him nat of the same thynges, and yet natheless they been synnes / Soothly, as thise clerkes writen, this is to seyn, that at every tyme that a man eteth or drynketh moore than suffiseth to the sustenance of his body, in certein he dooth synne / And eek whan he speketh moore than it nedeth, it is synne Eke whan he herketh nat benignely the compleint of the povre, / eke whan he is in heele of body, and wol nat faste whan other folk faste, withouten cause resonable, eke whan he slepeth moore than nedeth, or whan he comth by thilke enchesoun to late to chirche, or to othere werkes of charite, / eke whan he useth his wyf, withouten sovereyn desir of engendrure to the honour of God, or for the entente to yelde to his wyf the dette of his body, / eke whan he wol nat 375 visite the sike and the prisoner, if he may, eke if he love wyf or child, or oother worldly thyng, moore than resoun requireth, eke if he flater or blandise moore than hym oghte for any necessitee, / eke if he amenuse or withdrawe the almesse of the povre, eke if he apparalleth his mete moore deliciously than nede is, or ete it to hastily by likerousnesse, / eke if he tale vanytees at chirche or at Goddes service, or that he be a talker of ydel wordes of folye or of vileynye, for he shal yelden accountes of it at the day of doom, / eke whan he biheteth or assureth to do thynges that he may nat perfourne, eke whan that he by lightnesse or folie myssyeth or scorneth his neighebor, / eke whan he hath any wikked suspicioun of thyng ther he ne woot of it no soothfastnesse / 380 thise thynges, and mo withoute nombre, been synnes, as seith Seint Augustyn /

Now shal men understonde that, al be it so that noon erthely man may eschue alle venial synnes, yet may he refreyne hym by the brennyng love that he hath to oure Lord Jhesu Crist, and by preyeres and confessioun and othere goode werkes, so that it shal but litel greve / For, as seith Seint Augustyn, "If a man love God in swich manere that al that evere he dooth is in the love of God, and for the love of God, verraily, for he brenneth in the love of God, / looke, how muche that a drope of water that falleth in a fourneys ful of fyr anoyeth or greveth, so muche anoyeth a venial synne unto a man that is perfit in the love of Jhesu Crist" / Men may also refreyne venial synne by receyvynge worthily of the precious body of Jhesu Crist, / by receyvynge eek of 385 hooly water, by almesdode, by general confessioun of Confiteor at masse and at complyn, and by blessinge of bissopes and of prestes, and by othere goode werkes

Explicit secunda pars Penitentie

Sequitur de septem peccatis mortalibus et eorum dependenciis circumstantiis et speciebus

Now is it bihovely thyng to telle whiche been the sevene deedly synnes, this is to seyn, chieftaynes of synnes Alle they renne in o lees, but in diverse man-eres Now been they cleped chieftaynes, for as muche as they been chief and spryng of alle othere synnes / Of the roote of these sevene synnes, thanne, is Pride the general roote of alle harmes For of this roote spryngen certein braunches, as Ire, Envy, Accidie or Slewthe, Avarice or Covetise (to commune understandyng), Gloutyng, and Lecherye / And everch of these chief synnes hath his braunches and his twigges, as shal be declared in hire chapitres folwyng /

De Superbia

And thogh so be that no man kan out-rely telle the nombre of the twigges and of the harmes that cometh of Pride, yet wol I shewe a partie of hem, as ye shul understonde / Ther is Inobedi- 390 ence Avauntynge, Ypocrisie, Despit, Arrogance, Impudence, Swellyng of Herte, Insolence, Elacioun, Impacience, Strif, Contumacie, Presumpcioun, Irreverence, Pertunacie, Veyne Glorie, and many another twig that I kan nat declare / In-obedient is he that disobeyeth for despit to the comandementz of God, and to his sovereyns, and to his goostly fader / Avauntour is he that bosteth of the harm or of the bountee that he hath doon / Ypocrite is he that hideth to shewe hym swich as he is, and sheweth hym swich as he nocht is / Despitous is he that hath desdeyn of his neighebor, that is to seyn, of his evene-Cristene, or hath despit to doon that hym oghte to do / Arro- 395 gant is he that thynketh that he hath thilke bountees in hym that he hath nocht, or weneth that he sholde have hem by his desertes, or elles he demeth that he be that he nys nat / Impudent is he that for his pride hath no shame of his synnes / Swellyng of herte is whan a man rejoyseth hym of harm that he hath doon / Insolent is he that despieth in his juggedment alle othere folk, as to regard of his value, and of his konnyng, and of his spekyng, and of his beryng / Elacioun is whan he ne may neither suffre to have maister ne felawe / Impacient is he 400 that wol nat been ytaught ne undernome of his vice, and by strif werreth trouthe wityngly, and deffendeth his folye / Contumax is he that thurgh his indignacioun is agayns everich auctoritee or power of hem that been his sovereigns / Presumpcioun is whan a man undertaketh an emprise that hym oghte nat do, or elles that he may nat do, and this is called Surquidrie Irreverence is whan men do nat honour there as hem oghte to doon, and waiten to be revered / Pertunacie is whan man deffendeth his folie, and trusteth to muchel to his owene wit / Veyneglorie is for to have pompe and delit in his temporeel hynesse, and glorie hym in this worldly estaat / 405 Janglyng is whan men speken to muche biforn folk, and clappen as a mille, and taken no keep what they seye /

And yet is ther a privee spece of Pride, that waiteth first to be salewed er he wole salewe, al be he lasse worth than that oother is, peraventure, and eek he waiteth or desreth to sitte, or elles to goon above hym in the wey, or kisse pax, or been encensed, or goon to offryng biforn his neighebor, / and swiche semblable thynges, agayns his duetee, peraventure, but that he hath his herte and his entente in swich a proud desir to be magnified and honoured biforn the peple /

Now been ther two maneres of Pride that oon of hem is withinne the herte of man, and that oother is withoute / Of whiche, soothly, these forseide thynges, and mo than I have seyd, apertenen to Pride that is in the herte of man, and that othere spesces of Pride been withoute / 410 But natheles that oon of these spesces of Pride is signe of that oother, right as the gaye leefsel atte taverne is signe of the wyn that is in the celer / And this is in manye thynges as in speche and contenaunce, and in outrageous array of clothyng / For certes, if ther ne hadde be no synne in clothyng, Crist wolde nat so soone have noted and spoken of the clothyng of thilke riche man in the gospel / And, as seith Seint Gregorie, that "precious clothyng is cowpable for the derthe of it, and for his softnesse, and for his strangenesse and degisyngesse, and for the superflutee, or for the mordinat scantnesse of it" / Allas! may man nat seen, as in oure dayes, the synful costlewe array of clothyng, and name'ly in to muche super-flute, or elles in to desordinat scant-

nesse? / 415

As to the first synne, that is in superflutee of clothyng, which that maketh it so deere, to harm of the peple, / nat oonly the coste of embrowdyng, the degise endentynge or baryng, owndyng, palyng, wyndyng or bendyng, and semblable wast of clooth in vanitee, / but ther is also costlewe furryng in hir gownes, so muche pownsonyng of chisel to maken holes, so muche daggyng of sheres, / forth-with the superflutee in lengthe of the forseide gownes, trailyng in the dong and in the mire, on horse and eek on foote, as wel of man as of womman, that al thilke trailyng is verrailly as in effect wasted, consumed, thredbare, and roten with donge, rather than it is yeven to the povre, to greet damage of the forseide povre folk / And that in sondry wise, this is to seyn that the moore that clooth is wasted, the moore moot it coste to the peple for the scarsnesse / And forther over, 420 if so be that they wolde yeven swich pownsoned and dagged clothyng to the povre folk, it is nat convenient to were for hire estaat, ne suffisant to beete hire necessitee, to kepe hem fro the dis-temperance of the firmament / Upon that oother side, to speken of the horrible desordinat scantnesse of clothyng, as been these kuttet sloppes, or haynselyns, that thurgh hire shortnesse ne covere nat the shameful membres of man, to wikked entente / Allas! somme of hem shewen the boce of hir shap, and the horrible swollen membres, that semeth lik the malade of hirna, in the wrappyng of hir hoses, / and eek the buttokes of hem faren as it were the hyndre part of a she-ape in the fulle of the moone / And mooreover, the wreched swollen membres that they shewe thurgh disgisyng, in departyng of hire hoses in whit and reed, semeth that half hir shameful privee membres weren flayne / And it so be that they 425 departen hire hoses in othere colours, as is whit and blak, or whit and blew, or blak and reed, and so forth, / thanne sem-eth it, as by variaunce of colour, that half the partie of hire privee membres were corrupt by the fir of seint Antony, or by cancere, or by oother swich meschaunce / Of the hyndre part of hir buttokes, it is ful horrible for to see For certes, in that partie of hir body ther as they purgen hir stynkyng ordure, / that foule partie shewe they to the peple proudly in despit of honestitee, which honestitee that Jhesu Crist and his freendes observede to shewen in hir lyve / Now, as of the outrageous array of women, God woot that though the visages of somme of hem seme ful chaast and debonaire, yet notifie they in hire array of atyr likerousnesse and pride / I sey nat that honestitee 430 in clothyng of man or womman is uncovenable, but certes the superflutee or desordinat scantitee of clothyng is re-prevable / Also the synne of aornement or of apparaille is in thynges that apert-enen to ridyng, as in to manye delicat horses that been hooden for delit, that been so faire, fatte, and costlewe, / and also in many a vicious knave that is sustened by cause of hem, and in to curious harneys, as in sadeles, in crouperes, poy-trels, and bridles covered with precious clothyng, and riche barres and plates of gold and of silver / For which God seith by Zakarie the prophete, "I wol confounde the riders of swiche horses" / This folk taken litel reward of the ridyng of Goddes sone of hevене, and of his harneys whan he rood upon the asse, and ne hadde noon oother harneys but the povre clothes of his disciples, ne we ne rede nat that evere he rood on oother beest / I speke 435 this for the synne of superfluitee, and nat for resonable honestitee, whan reson it requreth / And forther over, certes, pride is greetly notified in holdyng or greet meynce, whan they be of litel profit or of right no profit, / and namely whan that meynce is felonous and damageous to the peple by hardynesse of heigh lordshipe or by wey of offices / For certes, swiche lordes sellen thanne hir lordshipe to the devel of helle, whanne they sustenen the wikkednesse of hir meynce / Or elles, whan this folk of lowe degree, as thilke that holden hostelries, sustenen the thefte of hire hostlers, and that is in many manere of decertes / Thilke 440 manere of folk been the flyes that folwen the hony, or elles the houndes that folwen the careyne Swich forseide folk stranglen spiritually hir lordshipes, / for which thus seith David the prophete

 "Wikked deeth moote come upon thilke lordshipes, and God yeve that they moote descenden into helle al doun, for in hire houses been miqutees and shrewednesses, and nat God of hevenc" / And certes, but if they doon amendement, right as God yaf his benyousoun to [Laban] by the service of Jacob, and to [Pharao] by the service of Joseph, right so God wol yeve his malisoun to swiche lordshipes as sustenen the wikkednesse of hir servauntz, but they come to amendement / Pride of the table appeereth eek ful ofte, for certes, riche men been cleped to festes, and povre folk been put away and rebuked / Also in excesse of diverse metes and drynkes, and namely swich manere bake-metes and disshmetes, brennyng of wilde fir and peynted and castelled with papir, and semblable wast, so that it is abusoun for to thynke / And eek in to greet 445 preciousnesse of vessel and curiositee of mynstralcie, by whiche a man is stired the moore to delices of luxurie, / if so be that he sette his herte the lasse upon oure Lord Jhesu Crist, certeyn it is a synne, and certainly the delices myghte been so grete in this caas that man myghte lightly falle by hem into deedly synne / The especes that sourden of Pride, soothly whan they sourden of malice ymagined, avised, and forncast, or elles of usage, been deedly synnes, it is no doute / And whan they sourden by freletee unavysed, and sodeynly withdrawn ayeyn, al been they grevous synnes, I gesse that they ne been nat deedly / Now myghte men axe wherof that Pride sourdeth and spryng-eth, and I seye, somtyme it spryngeth of the goodes of nature, and somtyme of the goodes of fortune, and somtyme of the goodes of grace / Certes, the 450 goodes of nature stonden outhur in goodes of body or in goodes of soule / Certes, goodes of body been heele of body, strengthe, delvernesse, beautee, gentrie, franchise / Goodes of nature of the soule been good wit, sharp understandyng, subtil engyn, vertu natureel, good mem-orie / Goodes of fortune been richesse, hyghe degrees of lordshipes, preisynges of the peple / Goodes of grace been science, power to suffre spirituel travaille, be-nignitee, vertuous contemplacioun, with-stondyng of temptacioun, and semblable thynges / Of whiche forseide 455 goodes, certes it is a ful greet folye a man to priden hym in any of hem alle /

 Now as for to speken of goodes of nature, God woot that somtyme we han hem in nature as mucche to oure damage as to oure profit / As for to speken of heele of body, certes it passeth ful lightly, and eek it is ful ofte enchesoun of the siknesse of oure soule For, God woot, the flessh is a ful greet enemy to the soule, and therefore, the moore that the body is hool, the moore be we in peril to falle / Eke for to pride hym in his strengthe of body, it is an heigh folye For certes, the flessh covert-eth agayn the spirit, and ay the moore strong that the flessh is, the sorier may the soule be / And over al this, strengthe of body and worldly hardynesse causeth ful ofte many a man to peril and meschance / Eek for to pride hym of 460 his gentrie is ful greet folie, for ofte tyme the gentrie of the body bynnyeth the gentrie of the soule, and eek we ben alle of o fader and of o mooder, and alle we been of o nature, roten and corrupt bothe riche and povre / For sothe, o manere gentrie is for to preise, that appa-ralleth mannes corage with vertues and moralitees, and maketh hym Cristes child / For truste wel that over what man that synne hath maistrie, he is a verray cherl to synne /

Now been ther generale signes of gentil-lesse, as eschewynge of vice and ribaudye and servage of synne, in word, in werk, and contenance, / and usynge vertu, curteise, and clenness, and to be liberal, that is to seyn, large by mesure, for thilke that passeth mesure is folie and synne / Another is to remembre 465 hym of bountee, that he of oother folk hath receyved / Another is to be benigne to his goode subgetus, wherfore seith Senek, "Ther is no thng moore covenable to a man of heigh estaat than debonairetee and pitee / And therefore these flyes that men clepen bees, when they maken hir kyng, they chesen oon that hath no prikke wherwith he may styng" / Another is, a man to have a noble herte and a diligent, to attayne to heighe vertu-ouse thynges / Now certes, a man to pride hym in the goodes of grace is eek an outrageous folie, for thilke yifte of grace that sholde have turned hym to goodness and to medicine, turneth hym to venym and to confusoun, as seith Seint Gregorie / Certes also, whoso prid- 470 eth hym in the goodes of fortune, he is a ful greet fool, for som tyme is a man a greet lord by the morwe, that is a caytyf and a wrecche er it be nyght, / and som-tyme the richesse of a man is cause of his deth, somtyme the delices of a man ben cause of the grevous maladye thurgh which he dyeth / Certes, the commendacioun of the peple is somtyme ful fals and ful brotel for to taste, thus day they preyse, tomorwe they blame / God woot, desir to have commendacioun eek of the peple hath caused deeth to many a busy
 man /

Now sith that so is that ye han under-stonde what is Pride, and whuche been the speces of it, and whennes Pride sourd-eth and spryngeth, / now shul ye 475 understonde which is the remedie agayns the synne of Pride, and that is humylitee, or mekenesse / That is a vertu, thurgh which a man hath verray knoweleche of hymself, and holdeth of hymself no pris ne deyntee, as in regard of his desertes, considerynge evere his freletee / Now been ther three maneres of humylitee, as humylitee in herte, another humylitee is in his mouth, the thridde in his werkes / The humilitee in herte is in foure maneres That oon is whan a man holdeth hymself as noght worth biforn God of hevene Another is whan he ne despiseth noon oother man / The thridde is whan he rekketh nat, though men holde hym noght worth The ferthe is whan he nys nat sory of his humili-acioun / Also the humilitee of 480 mouth is in foure thynges in at-tempree speche, and in humblesse of speche, and whan he biknoweth with his owene mouth that he is swich as hym thynketh that he is in his herte Another is whan he priseth the bountee of another man, and nothyng therof amenuseth / Humilitee eek in werkes is in foure maneres The firste is whan he putteth othere men biforn hym The seconde is to chese the loweste p'ace over al The thridde is gladly to assente to good conseil / The ferthe is to stonde gladly to the award of his sovereyns, or of hym that is in hyer degrec Certein, this is a greet werk of humylitee /

Sequitur de Invidia

After Pride wol I speken of the foule synne of Envye, which that is, as by the word of the philosophre, "sorwe of oother mannes prosperitee", and after the word of Seint Augustyn, it is "sorwe of oother mennes wele, and joye of othere mennes harm" / This foule synne is platly agayns the Hooly Goost Al be it so that every synne is agayns the Hooly Goost, yet natheless, for as muche as bountee aperteneth proprely to the Hooly Goost, and Envye comth proprely of malice, therfore it is proprely agayn the bountee of the Hooly Goost / Now hath malice 485 two speses, that is to seyn, hardnesse of herte in wikkednesse, or elles the flessch of man is so blynd that he considereth nat that he is in synne, or rekketh nat that he is in synne, which is the hardnesse of the devel / That oother spece of malice is whan a man werreyeth trouthe, whan he woot that it is trouthe, and eek whan he werreyeth the grace that God hath yve to his neighebor, and al this is by Envye / Certes, thanne is Envye the worste synne that is For soothly, alle othere synnes been somtyme oonly agayns o special vertu, / but certes, Envye is agayns alle vertues and agayns alle goodnesses For it is sory of alle the bountees of his neighe-bor, and in this manere it is divers from alle othere synnes / For wel unnethe is ther any synne that it ne hath som delit in itself, save oonly Envye, that evere hath in itself angwissh and sorwe / 490 The speses of Envye been thise Ther is first, sorwe of oother mannes goodnesse and of his prosperitee, and prosperitee is kyndely matere of joye, thanne is Envye a synne agayns kynde / The seconde spece of Envye is joye of oother mannes harm, and that is proprely lyk to the devel, that evere rejoyseth hym of mannes harm / Of thise two speses comth bakbityng, and this synne of bakbityng or detraccion hath certeine speses, as thus Som man preiset his neighebor by a wikked entente, / for he maketh alwey a wikked knotte atte laste ende Alwey he maketh a "but" atte laste ende, that is digne of moore blame, than worth is al the preisyng / The seconde spece is that if a man be good, and dooth or seith a thing to good entente, the bakbitere wol turne al thilke goodnesse up-so-down to his shrewed entente / The 495 thridde is to amenuse the bountee of his neighebor / The fourthe spece of bakbityng is this, that if men speke goodnesse of a man, thanne wol the bakbitere seyn, "parfey, swich a man is yet bet than he", in dispreisyng of hym that men praise / The fiftte spece is this, for to consente gladly and herkrie gladly to the harm that men speke of oother folk This synne is ful greet, and ay encreeseth after the wikked entente of the bakbitere / After bakbityng cometh gruchchyng or mur-muracioun, and somtyme it spryngeth of impacience agayns God, and somtyme agayns man / Agayns God it is, whan a man gruccheth agayn the peyne of helle, or agayns poverté, or los of catel, or agayn reyn or tempest, or elles gruccheth that shrewes han prosperitee, or elles for that goode men han adversitee / And 500 alle these thynges sholde man suffre paciently, for they comen by the rightful juggement and ordinaunce of God / Som-tyme comth gruchching of avarice, as Judas grucched agayns the Magdaleyne, whan she enoynted the heved of oure Lord Jhesu Crist with hir precious oynement / This manere murmure is swich as whan man gruccheth of goodnesse that hymself dooth, or that oother folk doon of hir owene catel / Somtyme comth murmure of Pride, as whan Simon the Pharisee gruchched agayn the Magdaleyne, whan she approched to Jhesu Crist, and weep at his feet for hire synnes / And som-tyme gruchchyng sourdeth of Envye, whan men discovereth a mannes harm that was pryvee, or bereth hym on hond thyng that is fals / Murmure eek is ofte 505 amonges servauntz that grucchen whan hir sovereyns bidden hem doon lefevu thynges, / and forasmuche as they dar nat openly withseye the comaunde-mentz of hir sovereyns, yet wol they seyn harm, and gruche, and murmure pryvely for verray despit, / whiche wordes men clepen the develes Pater noster, though so be that the devel ne hadde nevere Pater noster, but that lewed folk yeven it swich a name / Somtyme it comth of Ire or prive hate, that norisseth rancour in herte, as afterward I shal declare / Thanne cometh eek bitternesse of herte, thurgh which bitternesse every good dede of his neighebor semeth to hym bitter and unsavory / Thanne cometh discord, 510 that unbyndeth alle manere of friendshipe Thanne comth scornynge of his neighebor, al do he never so weel / Thanne comth accusyng, as whan man seketh occasoun to anoyen his neighebor, which that is lyk the craft of the devel, that waiteth bothe nyght and day to accusen us alle / Thanne comth malignitee, thurgh which a man anoyeth his neighebor prively, if he may, / and if he noght may, algate his wikked wil ne shal nat wante, as for to brennen his hous prively, or empoysone or sleen his beestes, and semblable thynges /

Remedium contra peccatum Invidie

Now wol I speke of remedie agayns this foule synne of Envye First is the love of God principal, and lovyng of his neighebor as hymself, for soothly, that oon ne may nat been withoute that oother / And truste wel that in 515 the name of thy neighebor thou shalt understonde the name of thy brother, for certes alle we have o fader flesshly, and o mooder, that is to seyn, Adam and Eve, and eek o fader espirituel, and that is God of hevене / Thy neighebor artow holden for to love, and wilne hym alle goodnesse, and therefore seith God, "Love thy neighebor as thyselfe," that is to seyn, to salvacioun bothe of lyf and of soule / And mooreover thou shalt love hym in word, and in benigne amonestyng and chastisyng, and conforten hym in his anoyes, and preye for hym with al thyn herte / And in dede thou shalt love hym in swich wise that thou shalt doon to hym in charitee as thou woldest that it were doon to thyn owene persone / And therefore thou ne shalt doon hym no damage in wikked word, ne harm in his body, ne in his catel, ne in his soule, by entussyng of wikked ensample / 520 Thou shalt nat desuren his wyf, ne none of his thynges Understood eek that in the name of neighebor is comprehended his enemy / Certes, man shal loven his enemy, by the comandement of God, and soothly thy freend shaltow love in God / I seye, thyn enemy shaltow love for Goddes sake, by his comandement For if it were reson that man sholde haten his enemy, for sothe God nolde nat receyven us to his love that been his enemys / Agayns three manere of wronges that his enemy dooth to hym, he shal doon three thynges, as thus / Agayns hate and rancour of herte, he shal love hym in herte Agayns chydng and wikkede wordes, he shal preye for his enemy Agayns the wikked dede of his enemy, he shal doon hym bountee / For Crist seith "Loveth 525 youre enemys, and preyeth for hem that speke yow harm, and eek for hem that yow chacen and pursewen, and dooth bountee to hem that yow haten" Loo thus comaundeth us oure Lord Jhesu Crist to do to oure enemys / For soothly, nature dryveth us to loven oure freendes, and parfey, oure enemys han moore nede to love than oure freendes, and they that moore nede have, certes to hem shal men doon goodnesse, / and certes, in thilke dede have we remembrance of the love of Jhesu Crist that deyde for his enemys / And in as muche as thilke love is the moore grevous to perfourne, so muche is the moore gret the merite, and therefore the lovyng of oure enemy hath confounded the venym of the devel / For right as the devel is disconfited by humylytee, right so is he wounded to the deeth by love of oure enemy / Certes, thanne is love the 530 medicine that casteth out the venym of Envye fro mannes herte / The spesces of this paas shullen be moore largely declared in hir chapitres folwyng /

Sequitur de Ira

After Envye wol I discryven the synne of Ire For soothly, whoso hath envye upon his neighebor, anon he wole comunly fynde hym a matere of wratthe, in word or in dede, agayns hym to whom he hath envye / And as wel comth Ire of Pride, as of Envye, for soothly, he that is proud or envyous is lightly wrooth /

This synne of Ire, after the discryvyng of Seint Augustyn, is wikked wil to been avenged by word or by dede / 535 Ire, after the philosophre, is the fervent blood of man quyked in his herte, thurgh which he wole harm to hym that he hateth / For certes, the herte of man, by eschawfyng and moevyng of his blood, wexeth so trouble that he is out of alle juggement of resoun / But ye shal understonde that Ire is in two maneres, that oon of hem is good, and that oother is wikked / The goode Ire is by jalousie of goodnesse, thurgh which a man is wrooth with wikkednesse and agayns wikkednesse, and therefore seith a wys man that Ire is bet than pley / This Ire is with debonairetee, and it is wrooth withouten bitternesse, nat wrooth agayns the man, but wrooth with the mysdede of the man, as seith the prophete David, "Irascimur et nolite peccare" / 540 Now understandeth that wikked Ire is in two maneres, that is to seyn, sodeyn Ire or hastif Ire, withouten avisement and consentyng of resoun / The menyng and the sens of this is, that the resoun of a man ne consente nat to thilke sodeyn Ire, and thanne is it venial / Another Ire is ful wikked, that comth of felonie of herte avysed and cast biforn, with wikked wil to do vengeance, and therto his resoun consenteth, and soothly this is deedly synne / This Ire is so displeasent to God that it troubleth his hous, and chaceth the Hooly Goost out of mannes soule, and wasteth and destroyeth the liknesse of God, that is to seyn, the vertu that is in mannes soule, / and put in hym the liknesse of the devel, and bynymeth the man fro God, that is his rightful lord / This Ire is a ful greet ples- 545 aunce to the devel, for it is the develes founneys, that is eschawfed with the fir of helle / For certes, right so as fir is moore mighty to destroyen erthely thynges than any oother element, right so Ire is myghty to destroyen alle spiritueel thynges / Looke how that fir of smale gleodes, that been almost dede under asshen, wollen quike agayn when they been touched with brymstoon, right so Ire wol everemo quyken agayn, when it is touched by the pride that is covered in mannes herte / For certes, fir ne may nat comen out of no thyng, but if it were first in the same thyng natureelly, as fir is drawn out of flyntes with steel / And right so as pride is ofte tyme matere of Ire, right so is rancour norice and kepere of Ire / Ther is a maner tree, 550 as seith Seint Ysidre, that whan men maken fir of thilke tree, and covere the coles of it with asshen, soothly the fir of it wol lasten al a yeer or moore / And right so fareth it of rancour, whan it is ones conceyved in the hertes of som men, certein, it wol lasten praveurte from oon Estre day unto another Estre day, and moore / But certes, thilke man is ful fer fro the mercy of God al thilke while /

In this forseyde develes founneys ther forgen three shrewes Pride, that ay bloweth and encreeseth the fir by chidyng and wikked wordes, / thanne stant Envye, and holdeth the hoote iren upon the herte of man with a peire of longe toonges of long rancour, / and thanne 555 stant the synne of Contumelise, or strif and cheeste, and batereth and forgeth by vileyns reprevynges / Certes, this cursed synne anoyeth bothe to the man hymself and eek to his neighebor For soothly, almost al the harm that any man dooth to his neighebor comth of wratthe / For certes, outrageous wratthe dooth al that evere the devel hym comaundeth, for he ne spareth neither Crist ne his sweete Mooder / And in his outrageous anger and ire, allas! allas! ful many oon at that tyme feeleth in his herte ful wikkedly, bothe of Crist and eek of alle his halwes / Is nat this a cursed vice? Yis, certes Allas! it bynymeth from man his wit and his resoun, and al his debonaire lif es- 560 spiritueel that sholde kepen his soule / Certes, it bynymeth eek Goddes due lordshipe, and that is mannes soule, and the love of his neighebores It stryvethe eek alday agayn trouthe It revetth hym the quete of his herte, and subverteth his soule /

Of Ire comen thise stynkyng engendrures First hate, that is oold wratthe, discord, thurgh which a man forsaketh his olde freend that he hath loved ful longe, / and thanne cometh werre, and every manere of wrong that man dooth to his neighebor, in body or in catel / Of this cursed synne of Ire cometh eek manslaughtre And understonde wel that homycide, that is manslaughter, is in diverse wise. Som manere of homicide is spiritueel, and som is bodily. Spiritueel manslaughter is in sixe thynges. First by hate, as seith Seint John "He that hateth his brother is an homycide." Homycide is eek by bakbitynge, of whiche bakbiteres seith Salomon that "they han two swerdes with whiche they sleen hire neighebores." For soothly, as wikke is to bynyme his good name as his lyf. Homycide is eek in yevynge of wikked conseil by fraude, as for to yeven conseil to areysen wrongful custumes and tallages. Of whiche seith Salomon "Leon rorynge and bere hongry been like to the crueel lordshipes in witholdynge or abreggyng of the shepe (or the hyre), or of the wages of servauntz, or elles in usure, or in withdrawynge of the almesse of povre folk." For which the wise man seith, "Fedeth hym that almost dyeth for honger", for soothly, but if thow feede hym, thou sleest hym, and alle these been deedly synnes. Bodily manslaughter is, whan thow sleest him with thy tonge in oother manere, as whan thou comdest to sleen a man, or elles yevest hym conseil to sleen a man. Manslaughter in dede is in foure maneres. That oon is by lawe, right as a justice dampneth hym that is coupable to the death. But lat the justice be war that he do it rightfully, and that he do it nat for delit to spille blood, but for keyynge of rightwysnesse. Another homycide is that is doon for necessitee, as whan o man sleeth another in his defendaunt, and that he ne may noon ootherwise escape from his owene death. But certainly if he may escape withouten slaughtre of his adversarie, and sleeth hym, he dooth synne and he shal bere penance as for deedly synne. Eek if a man, by caas or aventure, shete an arwe, or caste a stoon, with which he sleeth a man, he is homycide. Eek if a womman by negligence overlyeth hire child in hir slepyng, it is homycide and deedly synne. Eek whan man destourbeth concepcioun of a child, and maketh a womman outhere bareyne by drynk-ynge venenouse herbes thurgh which she may nat conceyve, or sleeth a child by drynkes wilfully, or elles putteth certeine materiel thynges in hire screece places to slee the child, or elles dooth unkyndely synne, by which man or womman shedeth hire nature in manere or in place ther as a child may nat be conceived, or elles if a woman have conceyved, and hurt herself and sleeth the child, yet is it homycide. What seye we eek of wommen that mordren hir children for drede of worldly shame? Certes, an horrible homicide. Homycide is eek if a man approacheth to a womman by desir of lecherie, thurgh which the child is perressed, or elles smyteth a womman wityngly, thurgh which she leseth hir child. Alle these been homycides and horrible deedly synnes. Yet comen ther of Ire manye mo synnes, as wel in word as in thocht and in dede, as he that arretteth upon God, or blameth God of thyng of which he is hymself gilty, or despiseth God and alle his halwes, as doon these cursede hasardours in diverse ctreees. This cursed synne doon they, whan they feelen in hir herte ful wkkedly of God and of his halwes. Also whan they treten un-reverently the sacrament of the auter, thlike synne is so greet that unneth may it been releessed, but that the mercy of God passeth alle his werkes, it is so greet, and he so benigne. Thanne comth of Ire attraynre. Whan a man is sharply amonested in his shrifte to foreleten his synne, thanne wole he be angry, and answeren hokerly and angrily, and defenden or excusen his synne by unstedfastnesse of his flesh, or elles he dide it for to holde compaignye with his folawes, or elles, he seith, the fecnd entuced hym, or elles he dide it for his youthe, or elles his compleccioun is so corageous that he may nat forbere, or elles it is his destynce, as he seith, unto a certain age, or elles, he seith, it cometh hym of gentillesse of his auncestres, and semblable thynges. Alle these manere of folk so wrappen hem in hir synnes that they ne wol nat delivere hemself. For soothly, no wight that excuseth hym wilfully of his synne

may nat been delivered of his synne, til that he mekely biknoweth his synne / After this, thanne cometh sweryng, that is expres agayn the comandement of God, and thus bifalleth ofte of anger and of Ire / God seith "Thow shalt nat take the name of thy Lord God in veyn or in ydel" Also our Lord Jhesu Crist seith, by the word of Sente Mathew, / "Ne wol ye nat swere in alle manere, neither by hevене, for it is Goddes trone, ne by erthe, for it is the bench of his feet, ne by Jerusalem, for it is the citee of a greet kyng, ne by thyn heed, for thou mayst nat make an heer what ne blak / But seyeth by youre word 'ye, ye,' and 'nay, nay', And what that is moore, it is of yvel," thus seith Crist / For Cristes sake, ne swereth 590 nat so synfully in dismembryng of Crist by soule, herte, bones, and body For certes, it semeth that ye thynke that the cursede Jewes ne dismembred nat ynough the precieuse persone of Crist, but ye dis-membre hym moore / And if so be that the lawe compelle yow to swere, thanne rule yow after the lawe of God in youre sweryng, as seith Jeremye, quarto capitulo "Thou shalt kepe three condicions thou shalt swere in trouthe, in doom, and in rightwisnesse" / This is to seyn, thou shalt swere sooth, for every lesyng is agayns Crist For Crist is verrey trouthe And thynk wel this, that every greet swerere, nat compelled lawefully to swere, the wounde shal nat departe from his hous whil he useth swich unleveful sweryng / Thou shalt sweren eek in doom, whan thou art constreyned by thy domesman to witnessen the trouthe / Eek thow shalt nat swere for envye, ne for favour, ne for moede, but for rightwisnesse, for declaracioun of it, to the worshipe of God and helpyng of thyne evene-Cristene / 595 And therefore every man that taketh Goddes name in ydel, or falsly swereth with his mouth, or elles taketh on hym the name of Crist, to be called a Cristen man, and lyveth agayns Cristes lyvyng and his techyng, alle they taken Goddes name in ydel / Looke eek what seint Peter seith, Actuum, quarto, Non est aliud nomen sub celo, etc, "Ther nys noon oother name," seith Sente Peter, "under hevене yeven to men, in which they mowe be saved", that is to seyn, but the name or Jhesu Crist / Take kep eek how precious is the name of Crist, as seith Sente Paul, ad Phylipenses, secundo, In nomine Jhesu, etc, "that in the name of Jhesu every knee of hevencly creatures, or erthely, or of helle sholde bowe", for it is so heigh and so worshipful that the cursede feend in helle sholde tremblen to heeren it ynempned / Thanne semeth it that men that sweren so horribly by his blessed name, that they despise it moore boldly than dude the cursede Jewes or elles the devel, that trembleth whan he heereth his name /

Now certes, sith that sweryng, but if it be lawefully doon, is so heighly def-fended, muche worse is forsweryng falsly, and yet nedeles / 600

What seye we eek of hem that del-iten hem in sweryng, and holden it a gentrie or a manly dede to swere grete othes? And what of hem that of verrey usage ne cesse nat to swere grete othes, al be the cause nat worth a straw? Certes, this is horrible synne / Sweryng sod-eynly withoute avysement is eek a synne / But lat us go now to thilke horrible sweryng of adjuracioun and conjuracioun, as doon these false enchauntours or nigromanciens in bacyns ful of water, or in a bright sward, in a cercle, or in a fir, or in a shulderboon of a sheep / I kan nat seye but that they doon cursedly and dampnably agayns Crist and al the feith of hooly chirche /

What seye we of hem that bileeven on divynailes, as by flight or by noyse of briddes, or of beestes, or by sort, by geomancie, by dremes, by chirkyng of dores, or crakkyng of houses, by gnaw-ying of rattes, and swich manere wrecchednesse? / Certes, al this 605 thyng is defended by God and by hooly chirche For which they been acursed, til they come to amendement, that on swich filthe setten hire bileeve / Charmes for woundes or maladie of men or of beestes, if they taken any effect, it may be praventure that God suffreth it, for folk sholden yeve the moore feith and reverence to his name /

Now wol I speken of lesynges, which generally is fals signyficaunce of word, in entente to deceyven his evene-Cristene / Som lesyng is of which ther comth noon avantage to no wight and som lesyng turneth to the ese and profit of o man, and to disese and damage of another man / Another lesyng is for to saveh his lyf or his catel Another lesyng comth of delit for to lye, in which delit they wol forge a long tale, and peynten it with alle circumstaunces, where alle the ground of the tale is fals / Som lesyng comth, for he wole sustene his word, and som lesyng comth of recchelesnesse withouten avisement, and semblable thynges /

Lat us now touche the vice of flaterynge, which ne comth nat gladly but for drede or for covetise / Flaterye is generally wrongful preisyng Flatereres been the develes norices, that norissen his children with milk of losengere / For sothe, Salomon seith that "flaterie is wors than detraccioun" For somtyme detraccion maketh an hauteyn man be the moore humble, for he dredeth detraccion, but certes flaterye, that maketh a man to enhanceh his herte and his contaenance / Flatereres been the develes enchauntours, for they make a man to wene of hymself be lyk that he nys nat lyk / They been lyk to Judas that bitraysen a man to sellen hym to his enemy, that is to the devel / Flatereres been the develes chapelleyns, that syngen evere Placebo / I rekene flaterie in the vices of Ire, for ofte tyme, if o man be wrooth with another, thanne wole he flaterie som wight to sustene hym in his querele /

Speke we now of swich cursyng as comth of irous herte Mahsoum generally may be seyde every maner power of harm Swich cursyng bireveth man fro the regne of God, as seith Sent Paul / And ofte tyme swich cursyng wrongfully retorneth agayn to hym that curseth, as a bryd that retorneth agayn to his owene nest / And over alle thyng men oughten eschewe to cursen hire children, and yeven to the devel hire engendrure, as ferforth as in hem is Certes, it is greet peril and greet synne /

Lat us thanne speken of chidyng and reproche, whiche been ful grete woundes in mannes herte, for they unsowen the semes of frendshipe in mannes herte / For certes, unnethes may a man pleynly been accorded with hym that hath hym openly revyld and repreed and disclaundred This is a ful grisly synne, as Crist seith in the gospel / And taak kep now, that he that repreveh his neighebor, outhere he repreveth hym by som harm of peyne that he hath on his body, as "mesel," "croked harlot," or by som synne that he dooth / Now if he repreve hym by harm of peyne, thanne turneth the repreve to Jhesu Crist, for peyne is sent by the rightwys sonde of God and by his suffrance, be it meselrie, or maheym, or maladie / And if he repreve hym uncharitably of synne, as "thou holour," "thou dronkelewe harlot," and so forth, thanne aperteneth that to the rejoysyng of the devel, that evere hath joye that men doon synne / And certes, chidyng may nat come but out of a vileyns herte For after the habundance of the herte speketh the mouth ful ofte / And ye shul understonde that looke, by any way, whan any man shal chastise another, that he be war from chidyng or reprevyng For trewely, but he be war, he may ful lightly quyken the fir of angre and of wrathe, which that he sholde quenche, and peraventure sleeth hym, which that he myghte chastise with benignitee / For as seith Salomon, "The amyable tonge is the tree of lyf," that is to seyn, of lyf esprituuel, and soothly, a deslavee tonge sleeth the spirtes of hym that repreveth and eek of hym that is repreed / Loo, what seith Sent Augustyn "Ther is nothyng so lyk the develes child as he that ofte chideth" Sent Paul seith eek, "A servant of God bihoveth nat to chide" / And how that chidyng be a vileyns thyng bitwixe alle manere folk, yet is it certes moost uncovenable bitwixe a man and his wyf, for there is nevere reste And therefore seith Salomon, "An hous that is uncovered and droppynge, and a chydynge wyf, been lyke" / A man that is in a droppynge hous in manye places, though he eschewe the droppynge in o place, it droppeth on hym in another place So fareth it by a chydynge wyf, but she chide hym in o place, she wol chide hym in another / And therefore, "bette is a morsel of breed with joye than an hous ful of delices with chidynge," seith Salomon / Seint Paul seith "O ye wommen, be ye subgetes to youre housbondes as bihoveth in God, and ye men loveth youre wyves" Ad Colossenses, tertio /

Afterward speke we of scornynge, which is a wikked synne, and namely whan he scorneth a man for his goode werkes / For certes, swache scorn- 635 eres faren lyk the foule tode, that may nat endure to smelle the soote savour of the vyne whanne it florissbeth / These scorneres been partyng felawes with the devel, for they han joye whan the devel wynneth, and sorwe whan he leseth / They been adversaries of Jhesu Crist, for they haten that he loveth, that is to seyn, salvacioun of soule /

Speke we now of wikked conseil, for he that wikked conseil yeveth is a traytour For he deceyveth hym that trusteth in hym, ut Achitofel ad Absolonem But natheless, yet is his wikked conseil first agayn hymself / For, as seith the wise man, "Every fals lyyynge hath this propertee in hymself, that he that wole anoye another man, he anoyeth first hymself" / And men shul under- 640 stonde that man shal nat taken his conseil of fals folk, ne of angry folk, or grevous folk, ne of folk that loven specially to muchel hir owene profit, ne to muche worldly folk, namely in consalyng of soules /

Now comth the synne of hem that sown and maken discord amonges folk, which is a synne that Crist hateth outrelly And no wonder is, for he deyde for to make concord / And moore shame do they to Crist, than dide they that hym crucifiede, for God loveth bettre that freendshupe

be amonges folk, than he dide his owene body, the which that he yaf for untee Therefore been they likned to the devel, that evere is aboute to maken discord /

Now comth the synne of double tonge, swiche as speken faire byforn fo'k, and wikkedly bihynde, or elles they maken semblant as though they speeke of good entencioun, or elles in game and pley, and yet they speke of wikked entente /

Now comth biwreving of conseil, thurgh which a man is defamed, certes, unnethe may he restooore the damage / 645

Now comth manace, that is an open folye, for he that ofte manaceth, he threteth moore than he may perfourne ful ofte tyme /

Now cometh ydel wordes, that is withouten profit of hym that speketh tho wordes, and eek of hym that herkneth tho wordes Or elles ydel wordes been tho that been nedeless, or withouten entente of natureel profit / And al be it that ydel wordes been somtyme venial synne, yet sholde men douten hem for we shul yeve rekenynge of hem before God /

Now comth janglyng, that may nat been withoute synne And, as seith Salomon, "It is a sygne of apert folye" / And therefore a philosopre seyde, whan men aed hym how that men sholde plesse the peple, and he answerde, "Do manye goode werkes, and spek fewe jangles" / 650

After this comth the synne of japeres, that been the develes apes, for they maken folk to laughe at hire japerie as folk doon at the gawdes of an ape Swiche japes defendeth Seint Paul / Looke how that vertuose wordes and hooly conforten hem that travaillen in the service of Crist, right so conforten the vileyns wordes and knakkes of japeris hem that travaillen in the service of the devel / These been the synnes that comen of the tonge, that comen of Ire and of othere synnes mo /

peccatum Ire*

The remedie agayns Ire is a vertu that men clepen Mansuetude, that is Debonarettee, and eek another vertu, that men callen Pacience or Suffrance /

Debonaretee withdraweth and refreyneth the sturynges and the moevynges of mannes corage in his herte, in swich manere that they ne skippe nat out by angre ne by ire / Suffrance suffreth 655 swetely alle the anoyaunces and the wronges that men doon to man outward / Seint Jerome seith thus of debonaretee, that "it dooth noon harm to no wight ne seith, ne for noon harm that men doon or seyn, he ne eschawfeth nat agayns his resoun" / This vertu somtyme comth of nature, for, as seith the philosopre, "A man is a quyk thyng, by nature debonaire and tretable to goodnesse, but whan debonaretee is enforced of grace, thanne is it the moore worth" /

Pacience, that is another remedie agayns Ire, is a vertu that suffreth swetely every mannes goodnesse, and is nat wrooth for noon harm that is doon to hym / The philosopre seith that pacience is thilke vertu that suffreth debonairely alle the outrages of adversitee and every wikked word / This vertu maketh 660 a man lyk to God, and maketh hym Goddes owene deere child, as seith Crist This vertu disconfiteth thyn enemy And therefore seith the wise man, "If thou wolt venquyse thyn enemy, lerne to suffre" / And thou shalt understonde that man suffreth foure manere of grevances in outward thynges, agayns the whiche foure he moot have foure manere of pacienes /

The firste grevance is of wikkede wordes Thilke suffrede Jhesu Crist withouten grucchyng, ful patiently, whan the Jewes despised and reprieved hym ful ofte / Suffre thou therefore patiently, for the wise man seith, "If thou stryve with a fool, though the fool be wrooth or though he laughe, algate thou shalt have no reste" / That oother grevance outward is to have damage of thy catel Ther-agayns suffred Crist ful patiently, whan he was despoyled of al that he hadde in this lyf, and that nas but his clothes / The thridde grevance is a 665 man to have harm in his body That suffred Crist ful patiently in al his passioun / The fourthe grevance is in outrageous labour in werkes Wherfore I seye that folk that maken hir servantz to travaillen to grevously, or out of tyme, as on haly dayes, soothly they do greet synne / Heer-agayns suffred Crist ful patiently and taughte us pacience, whan he baar upon his blissed shulder the croys upon which he sholde suffren despitous deeth / Heere may men lerne to be pacient, for certes noht only Cristen men been pacient, for love of Jhesu Crist, and for gerdoun of the blisful lyf that is perdurable, but certes, the olde payens that nevere were Cristene, commendedden and useden the vertu of pacience /

A philosopre upon a tyme, that wolde have beten his disciple for his grete trespas, for which he was greetly amoeved, broghte a yerde to scourge with the child, / and whan this child saugh the 670 yerde, he seyde to his maister, "What thanke ye do?" "I wol bete thee," quod the maister, "for thy correccioun" / "For sothe," quod the child, "ye oghten first correcte youreself, that han lost al youre pacience for the gilt of a child" / "For sothe," quod the maister al wepyng, "thow seyst sooth Have thow the yerde, my deere sone, and correcte me for myn inpacience" / Of pacience comth obedience, thurgh which a man is obedient to Crist and to alle hem to whiche he oghte to be obedient in Crist / And understond wel that obedience is perfit, whan that a man dooth gladly and hastily, with good herte enterly, al that he sholde do / Obedience generally is 675 to perfourne the doctrine of God and of his sovereyns, to whiche hym oghte to ben obeisaunt in alle rightwisnesse /

Sequitur de Accidia

After the synne of Envye and of Ire, now wol I speken of the synne of Accidie For Envye blyndeth the herte of a man, and Ire troubleth a man, and Accidie maketh hym hevly, thoughtful, and wraw / Envye and Ire maken bitternesse in herte, which bitternesse is mooder of Accidie, and bynymeth hym the love of alle goodnesse Thanne is Accidie the angwysch of troubled herte, and Seint Augustyn seith, "It is anoy of goodnesse and Ioye of harm" / Certes, this is a dampnable synne, for it dooth wrong to Jhesu Crist, in as muche as it bynymeth the service that men oghte doon to Crist with alle diligence, as seith Salomon / But Accidie dooth no swich diligence He dooth alle thyng with anoy, and with wrawnesse, slaknesse, and excusacioun, and with ydelnesse, and unlust, for which the book seith, "Acused be he that dooth the service of God negligently" / Thanne 680 is Accidie enemy to everich estaat of man, for certes, the estaat of man is in three maneres / Outher it is th'estaat of innocence, as was th'estaat of Adam biforn that he fil into synne, in which estaat he was holden to werche as in herynge and adowrynge of God / Another estaat is the estaat of synful men, in which estaat men been holden to labour in preynge to God for amendement of hire synnes, and that he wole graunte hem to arysen out of hir synnes / Another estaat is th'estaat of grace, in which estaat he is holden to werkes of penitence And certes, to alle thise thynges is Accidie enemy and contrarie, for he loveth no bisynesse at al / Now certes, this foule synne, Accidie, is eek a ful greet enemy to the lifode of the body, for it ne hath no purveaunce agayn temporel necessitee, for it forslaweth and forsluggeth and destroyeth alle goodes temporeles by recheleesnesse / 685

The fourthe thyng is that Accidie is lyk hem that been in the peyne of helle, by cause of hir slouthe and of hire hevynesse, for they that been dampned been so bounde that they ne may neither wel do ne wel thynke / Of Accidie comth first, that a man is anoyed and encombred for to doon any goodnesse, and maketh that God hath abhomynecion of swich Accidie, as seith Seint John /

Now comth Slouthe, that wol nat suffre noon hardnesse ne no penaunce For soothly, Slouthe is so tendre and so dehaat, as seith Salomon, that he wol nat suffre noon hardnesse ne penaunce, and therefore he shendeth al that he dooth /

Agayns this roten-herted synne of Accidie and Slouthe shold men exercise himself to doon goode werkes, and manly and vertuously cacchen corage wel to doon, thynkyng that oure Lord Jhesu Crist quiteth every good dede, be it never so lite / Usage of labour is a greet thyng, for it maketh, as seith Seint Bernard, the laborer to have stronge armes and harde synwes, and slouthe maketh hem feble and tendre / Thanne comth 690 drede to bigynne to werke anye goode werkes For certes, he that is enclined to synne, hym thynketh it is so greet an emprise for to undertake to doon werkes of goodnesse, and casteth in his herte that the circumstaunces of goodnesse been so grevous and so chargeaunt for to suffre, that he dar nat undertake to do werkes of goodnesse, as seith Seint Gregorie /

Now comth wanhope, that is despeir of the mercy of God, that comth somtyme of to muche outrageous sorwe, and somtyme of to muche drede, ymaginyng that he hath doon so muche synne that it wol nat availen hym, though he wolde repenten hym and forsake synne, / thurgh which despeir or drede he abaondoneth al his herte to every maner synne, as seith Seint Augustin / Which dampnable synne, if that it continue unto his ende, it is cleped synnyng in the Hooly Goost / This horrible synne is so 695 perilous that he that is despeired, ther nys no felouye ne no synne that he douteth for to do, as shewed wel by Judas / Certes, aboven alle synnes thanne is this synne moost displesant to Crist, and moost adversarie / Soothly, he that despereth hym is lyk the coward champioun recreant, that seith "creant" withoute nede allas' allas' nedeles is he recreant and nedelees despeired / Certes, the mercy of God is evere redy to the penitent, and is aboven alle his werkes / Allas' kan a man nat bithynke hym on the gospel of Seint Luc, 15, where as Crist seith that "as wel shal ther be joye in hevene upon a synful man that dooth penitence, as upon nynty and nyne rightful men that neden no penitence" / Looke 700

forther, in the same gospel, the joye and the feste of the goode man that hadde lost his sone, whan his sone with repentance was returned to his fader / Kan they nat remembren hem eek that, as seith Seint Luc, 23, how that the thief that was hanged bisyde Jhesu Crist, seyde "Lord, remembre of me, whan thou comest into thy regne?" / "For sothe," seyde Crist, "I seye to thee, to day shaltow been with me in paradys" / Certes, ther is noon so horrible synne of man that it ne may in his lyf be destroyed by penitence, thurgh vertu of the passion and of the deeth of Crist / Allas! what nedeth man thanne to been despered, sith that his mercy so redy is and large?

Axe and have / Thanne cometh 705 sompnolence, that is, sloggy slombryng, which maketh a man be hevvy and dul in body and in soule, and this synne comth of Slouthe / And certes, the tyme that, by wey of resoun, men sholde nat slepe, that is by the morwe, but if ther were cause resonable / For soothly, the morwe tyde is moost covenable a man to seye his preyeres, and for to thynken on God, and for to honoure God, and to yeven almesse to the povre that first cometh in the name of Crist / Lo, what seith Salomon "Whoso wolde by the morwe awaken and seke me, he shal fynde" / Thanne cometh negligence, or recchelesnesse, that rekketh of no thyng / And how that ignoraunce be mooder of alle harm, certes, negligence is the norice / Negligence ne 710 dooth no fors, whan he shal doon a thyng, whether he do it weel or baddely /

Of the remedie of these two synnes, as seith the wise man, that "he that dredeth God, he spareth nat to doon that him oghte doon" / And he that loveth God, he wol doon diligence to plesse God by his werkes, and abaundone hymself, with al his myght, wel for to doon / Thanne comth ydelnesse, that is the yate of alle harmes / An ydel man is lyk to a place that hath no walles, the develes may entre on every syde, or sheten at hym at discovert, by temptacion on every syde / This ydelnesse is the thurrok of alle wikked and vileyns thoghtes, and of alle jangles, trufes, and of alle ordure / Certes, 715 the hevene is yeven to hem that wol labouren, and nat to ydel folk / Eek David seith that "they ne been nat in the labour of men, ne they shul nat been whipped with men," that is to seyn, in purgatorie / Certes, thanne semeth it, they shul be tormented with the devel in helle, but if they doon penitence /

Thanne comth the synne that men clepen tarditas, as whan a man is to laterede or taryng, er he wole turne to God, and certes, that is a greet folhe / He is lyk to hym that falleth in the dych, and wol nat arise / And this vice comth of a fa's hope, that he thynketh that he shal lyve longe, but that hope faileth ful ofte /

Thanne comth lachesse, that is he, that whan he bignneth any good werk, anon he shal foreleten it and stynten, as doon they that han any wight to governe, and ne taken of hym namoore kep, anon as they fynden any contrarie or any any / These been the newe sheep- 720 herdes that leten hir sheep wityngly go renne to the wolf that is in the breres, or do no fors of hur owene governaunce / Of this comth poverte and destruccoun, bothe of spirituel and temporeel thynges / Thanne comth a manere cooldnesse, that freseth al the herte of a man / Thanne comth undevoicioun, thurgh which a man is blent, as seith Seint Bernard, and hath swich langour in soule that he may neither rede ne singe in hooly chirche, ne heere ne thynke of no devocioun, ne travaille with his handes in no good werk, that it nys hym unsavory and al apalled / Thanne wexeth he slough and slombry, and soone wol be wrooth, and soone is enclnyed to hate and to envye / Thanne comth the synne of worldly sorwe, swich as is cleped tristitia, that sleeth man, as seith Seint Paul / For certes, swich 725 sorwe werketh to the deeth of the soule and of the body also, for therof comth that a man is anyoed of his owene lif / Wherefore swich sorwe shorteth ful ofte the lif of man, er that his tyme be come by wey of kynde /

Remedium contra peccatum Accidie

Agayns this horrible synne of Accidie, and the branches of the same, ther is a vertu that is called fortitudo or strengthe, that is an affeccioun thurgh which a man despiseth manye thynges / This vertu is so myghty and so vigerous that it dar withstonde myghtly and wisely kepen hymself fro perils that been wikked, and wrastle agayn the assautes of the devel / For it enhaunceth and enforceth the soule, right as Accidie abateth it and maketh it fieble For this fortitudo may endure by long suffraunce the travailles that been covenable / 730

This vertu hath manye spesces, and the firste is cleped magnanimitee, that is to seyn, greet corage For certes, tho bihoveth greet corage agayns Accidie, lest that it ne swolwe the soule by the synne of sorwe, or destroye it by wanhope / This vertu maketh folk to undertake harde thynges and grevouse thynges, by hir owene wil, wisely and resonably / And for as muchel as the devel fighteth agayns a man moore by queyntise and by sleighte than by strengthe, therefore men shal withstonden hym by wit and by resoun and by discrecioun / Thanne arn ther the vertues of feith and hope in God and in his seintes, to acheve and acompliee the goode werkes in the whiche he purposeth fermely to continue / Thanne comth seuretee or sikernesse, and that is whan a man ne douteth no travaille in tyme comyng of the goode werkes that a man hath bigonne / Thanne comth magnif- 735 icence, that is to seyn, whan a man dooth and perfourneth grete werkes of goodnesse, and that is the ende why that men sholde do goode werkes, for in the acomplissyng of grete goode werkes lith the grete gerdoun / Thanne is ther constaunce, that is, stablenesse of corage, and this sholde been in herte by stedefast feith, and in mouth, and in beryng, and in chiere, and in dede / Eke ther been mo speciale remedies against Accidie in diverse werkes, and in consideracioun of the peynes of helle and of the joyes of hevene, and in the trust of the grace of the Holy

Goost, that wole yeve hym myght to perfourne his goode entente /

Sequitur de Avaricia

After Accidie wol I speke of Avarice and of Covetise, of which synne seith Seint Paul that "the roote of alle harmes is Covetise" Ad Thimotheum Sexto / For soothly, whan the herte of a man is confounded in itself and troubled, and that the soule hath lost the confort of God, thanne seketh he an ydel solas of worldly thynges / 740

Avarice, after the descripcioun of Seint Augustyn, is a likerousnesse in herte to have erthely thynges / Som oother folk seyn that Avarice is for to purchacen manye erthely thynges, and no thyng yeve to hem that han nede / And understood that Avarice ne stant nat oonly in lond ne catel, but everytyme in science and in glorie, and in every manere of outrageous thyng is Avarice and Covetise / And the difference bitwixe Avarice and Covetise is this Covetise is for to coverte swiche thynges as thou hast nat, and Avarice is for to withholde and kepe swiche thynges as thou hast, withoute rightful nede / Soothly, this Avarice is a synne that is ful dampnable, for al hooly wrot curseth it, and speketh agayns that vice, for it dooth wrong to Jhesu Crist / For it bireveth 745 hym the love that men to hym owen, and turneth it bakward agayns alle resoun, / and maketh that the avaricious man hath moore hope in his catel than in Jhesu Crist, and dooth moore observance in kepyng of his tresor than he dooth to the service of Jhesu Crist / And therefore seith Seint Paul ad Ephesios, quinto, that an avaricious man is the thraldoun of ydolatrie /

What difference is bitwixe an ydolastre and an avaricious man, but that an ydolastre, per aventure, ne hath but o mawmet or two, and the avaricious man hath manye? For certes, every floryn in his cofre is his mawmet / And certes, the synne of mawmetrie is the firste thyng that God deffended in the ten comaundementz, as bereth witness in Exodi capitula vicesimo / "Thou shalt 750 have no false goddes bfore me, ne thou shalt make to thee no grave thyng" Thus is an avaricious man, that loveth his tresor biforn God, an ydolastre, / thurgh this cursed synne of avaunce Of Coveitise comen these harde lordshipes, thurgh whiche men been distreyned by taylages, custumes, and carriages, moore than hire duetee or resoun is And eek taken they of hire bonde-men amercentz, whiche myghten moore resonably ben cleped extorcions than amercentz / Of whiche amercentz and raunsonyng of boonde-men somme lordes stywardes seyn that it is rightful, for as muche as a cherl hath no temporeel thyng that it ne is his lordes, as they seyn / But certes, these lordshipes doon wrong that breven hire bonde-folk thynges that they nevere yave hem Augustinus, de Civitate, libro nono / Sooth is that the condicioun of thraldom and the firste cause of thraldom is for synne Genesis, nono / 755

Thus may ye seen that the gilt dusserveth thraldom, but nat nature / Wherefore these lordes ne sholde nat muche glorifien hem in hir lordshipes, sith that by naturel condicion they been nat lordes over thralles, but that thraldom comth first by the desert of synne / And forther over, ther as the lawe seith that temporeel goodes of boonde-folk been the goodes of hir lordshipes, ye, that is for to under-stonde, the goodes of the emperour, to def-fenden hem in hir right, but nat for to robben hem ne reven hem / And therefore seith Seneca, "Thy prudence sholde lyve benignely with thy thralles" / Thilke that thou clepest thy thralles been Goddes peple, for humble folk been Cristes freendes, they been contubernyal with the Lord / 760

Thynk eek that of swich seed as cherles spryngen, of swich seed spryngen lordes As wel may the cherl be saved as the lord / The same deeth that taketh the cherl, swich deeth taketh the lord Wherefore I rede, do right so with thy cherl, as thou woldest that thy lord dide with thee, if thou were in his plit / Every synful man is a cherl to synne. I rede thee, certes, that thou, lord, werke in swich wise with thy cherles that they rather love thee than drede / I woot wel ther is degree above degree, as reson is, and skile is that men do hir devoir ther as it is duc, but certes, extorcions and despit of youre underlynges is dampnable /

And forther over, understood wel that these conquerours or tirauntz maken ful ofte thralles of hem that been born of as roial blood as been they that hem conqueren / This name of thraldom 765 was nevere erst kowth, til that Noe seyde that his sone Canaan sholde be thral to his bretheren for his synne / What seye we thanne of hem that pilen and doon extorcions to hooly churche? Certes, the swerd that men yeven first to a knyght, whan he is newe dubbed, signifieth that he sholde defenden hooly churche, and nat robben it ne pilen it, and whoso dooth is traitour to Crist / And, as seith Seint Augustyn, "they been the develes wolves that stranglen the sheep of Jhesu Crist", and doon worse than wolves / For soothly, whan the wolf hath ful his wombe, he stynteth to strangle sheep But soothly, the pilours and destroyours of the godes of hooly churche ne do nat so, for they ne stynte nevere to pile / Now as I have seyde, sith so is that synne was first cause of thraldom, thanne is it thus, that thilke tyme that al this world was in synne, thanne was al this world in thraldom and subjeccioun / But certes, sith 770 the tyme of grace cam, God ordeyned that som folk sholde be moore heigh in estaat and in degree, and som folk moore lough, and that everich sholde be served in his estaat and in his degree / And therefore in somme contrees, ther they byen thralles, whan they han turned hem to the feith, they maken hire thralles free out of thraldom And therefore, certes, the lord oweth to his man that the man oweth to his lord / The Pope calleth hymself servant of the servantz of God, but for as muche as the estaat of hooly churche ne myghte nat han be, ne the commune profit myghte nat han be kept, ne pees and rest in erthe, but if God hadde ordeyned that som men hadde hyer degree and som men lower, /

therefore was sovereignty ordeyned, to kepe and mayntene and defenden hire underlynges or hire subgetz in resoun, as ferforth as it lith in hire power, and nat to destroyen hem ne confounde / Wherefore I seye that thilke lordes that been lyk wolves, that devouren the possessiouns or the catel of povre folk wrongfully, withouten mercy or mesure, / they shul receyven, 775 by the same mesure that they han mesured to povre folk, the mercy of Jhesu Crist, but if it be amended / Now comth deceite bitwixe marchaunt and marchant And thou shalt understonde that marchandise is in manye maneres, that oon is bodily, and that oother is goostly, that oon is honest and lefevel, and that oother is deshonest and unleveful / Of thilke bodily marchandise that is lefevel and honest is this that, there as God hath ordeyned that a regne or a contree is suffisaunt to hymself, thanne is it honest and lefevel that of habundance of this contree, that men helpe another contree that is moore nedy / And therefore ther moote been marchantz to bryngen fro that o contree to that oother hire marchandises / That oother marchandise, that men haunten with fraude and trecherie and deceite, with lesynges and false othes, is cursed and dampnable / Espirit- 780 uel marchandise is properly symonye, that is, ententif desir to byen thyng espritueel, that is, thyng that aperteneth to the sentuarie of God and to cure of the soule / This desir, if so be that a man do his diligence to parfournen it, al be it that his desir ne take noon effect, yet is it to hym a deedly synne, and if he be ordred, he is irregulier / Certes symonye is cleped of Simon Magus, that wolde han boght for temporeel catel the yifte that God hadde yeven, by the Hooly Goost, to Saint Peter and to the apostles / And therefore understood that bothe he that selleth and he that beyeth thynges esprituels been cleped symonyals, be it by catel, be it by procuryng, or by fleshly prayere of his freendes, fleshly freendes, or espritueel freendes / Fleshly in two maneres, as by kynrede, or othere freendes Soothly, if they praye for hym that is nat worthy and able, it is symonye, if he take the benefice, and if he be worthy and able, ther nys noon / 785 That oother manere is whan men or wommen preyen for folk to avauncen hem, oonly for wikked fleshly affeccion that they han unto the persone, and that is foul symonye / But certes, in service, for which men yeven thynges esprituels unto hir servantz, it moot been understonde that the service moot been honest, and elles nat, and eek that it be withouten bargaynyng, and that the persone be able / For, as seith Saint Damascie, "Alle the synnes of the world, at regard of this synne, arn as thyng of noght" For it is the gretteste synne that may be, after the synne of Lucifer and Antecrist / For by this synne God forleseth the churche and the soule that he boghte with his precious blood, by hem that yeven churches to hem that been nat digne / For they putten in theves that stelen the soules of Jhesu Crist and destroyen his patrimoyne / By 790 swiche undigne preestes and curates han lewed men the lasse reverence of the sacramentz of hooly churche, and swiche yeveres of churches putten out the children of Crist, and putten into the churche the develes owene sone / They sellen the soules that lambes sholde kepen to the wolf that strangleth hem And therefore shul they nevere han part of the pasture of lambes, that is the blisse of hevne / Now comth hasardrie with his apurtenances, as tables and rafes, of which comth deceite, false othes, chidynges, and alle ravynes, blasphemynge and reneyng of God, and hate of his neighebores, wast of goodes, mysspendyng of tyme, and somtyme manslaughtre / Certes, hasardours ne mowe nat been withouten greet synne whiles they haunte that craft / Of Avarice comen eek lesynges, thefte, fals witnessse, and false othes And ye shul understonde that these been grete synnes, and expres agayn the comaundementz of God, as I have seyde / Fals witnessse is in word and eek in dede 795 In word, as for to bireve thy neighebores goode name by thy fals witnessyng, or bireven hym his catel or his heritage by thy fals witnessyng, when thou for ire, or for meede, or for envye, berest fals witnesse, or accusest hym or excusest hym by thy fals witnesse, or elles excusest thyself falsly / Ware yow, questemongeris and notaries / Certes, for fals witnessyng was Susanna in ful gret sorwe and peyne, and many another mo / The synne of thefte is eek expres agayns Goddes heeste, and that in two maneres, corporeel or spirituel / Corporeel, as for to take thy neighebores catel agayn his wyl, be it by force or by sleighte, be it by met or by mesure, / by stelyng eek of false enditementz upon hym, and in borwyng of thy neighebores catel, in entente nevere to payen it agayn, and semblable thynges / Es- 800 pirtuel thefte is sacrilege, that is to seyn, hurtyng of hooly thynges, or of thynges sacred to Crist, in two maneres by reson of the hooly place, as churches or churche-hawes, / for which every vileyns synne that men doon in swiche places may be cleped sacrilege, or every violence in the semblable places, also, they that withdrawn falsly the rightes that longen to hooly churche / And pleynly and generally, sacrilege is to reven hooly thyng fro hooly place, or unhooly thyng out of hooly place, or hooly thing out of unhooly place /

Relevacio contra peccatum Avaricie

Now shul ye understonde that the releevyng of Avarice is misericorde, and pitee largely taken And men myghten axe why that misericorde and pitee is releevyng of Avarice / Certes, the avaricious man sheweth no pitee ne misericorde to the nedeful man, for he deliteth hym in the keypyng of his tresor, and nat in the rescowyng ne releevyng of his evene-Cristen And therefore speke I first of misericorde / Thanne is miseri- 805
 corde, as seith the philosophre, a vertu by which the corage of a man is stired by the myse of hym that is mysed / Upon which misericorde folweth pitee in parfournyng of charitable werkes of misericorde / And certes, these thynges moeven a man to the misericorde of Jhesu Crist, that he yaf hymself for oure gilt, and suffred death for misericorde, and forgaf us oure originale synnes, / and therby releessed us fro the peynes of helle, and amenused the peynes of purgatorie by penitence, and yeveth grace wel to do, and atte laste the blisse of hevenc / The speses o' misericorde been, as for to lene and for to yeve, and to foryeven and relesse, and for to han pitee in herte and compassioun of the meschief of his evene-Cristene, and eek to chastise, there as nede is / An- 810 other manere of remedie agayns avarice is resonable largesse, but soothly, heere bihoveth the consideracioun of the grace of Jhesu Crist and of his temporeel goodes, and eek of the goodes perdurables, that Crist yaf to us, / and to han remembrance of the deeth that he shal receive, he noot whanne, where, ne how, and eek that he shal forgon al that he hath save oonly that he hath despended in goode werkes /

But for as muche as som folk been unmesurable, men oghten eschue foollargesse, that men clepen wast / Certes, he that is fool-large ne yeveth nat his catel, but he leseth his catel Soothly, what thyng that he yeveth for veyne glorie, as to mynstrals and to folk, for to beren his renoun in the world, he hath synne therof, and noon almesse / Certes, he leseth foule his good, that ne seketh with the yifte of his good nothyng but synne / He is lyk to an hors that 815
 seketh rather to drynken drovy or trouble water than for to drynken water of the clere welle / And for as muchel as they yev en ther as they sholde nat yeven, to hem aperteneth thilke malisoun that Crist shal yeven at the day of doom to hem that shullen been dampned /

Sequitur de Gulá

After Avarice comth Glotonye, which is expres eek agayn the comandement of God Glotonye is unmesurable appetit to ete or to drynke, or elles to doon ynogh to the unmesurable appetit and desordeyne covetise to eten or to drynke / This synne corrupted al this world, as is wel shewed in the synne of Adam and of Eve Looke eek what seith Seint Paul of

Glotonye / "Manye," seith Saint Paul, "goon, of whiche I have ofte seyde to yow, and now I seye it wepyng, that been the enemys of the croys of Crist, of whiche the ende is deeth, and of whiche hire wombe is hire god, and hire glorie in confusoun of hem that so devouren erthely thynges" / He that is usaunt to 820 this synne of glotonye, he ne may no synne withstonde He moote been in servage of alle vices, for it is the develes hoord ther he hideth hym and resteth / This synne hath manye spesces The firste is dronkenesse, that is the horrible sepulture of mannes resoun, and therefore, whan a man is dronken, he hath lost his resoun, and this is deedly synne / But soothly, whan that a man is nat wont to strong drynke, and peraventure ne knoweth nat the strengthe of the drynke, or hath feblesse in his heed, or hath travaled, thurgh which he drynketh the moore, al be he sodeynly caught with drynke, it is no deedly synne, but venyal / The seconde spece of glotonye is that the spirit of a man wexeth al trouble, for dronkenesse bureveth hym the discrecioun of his wit / The thridde spece of glotonye is whan a man devoureth his mete, and hath no rightful manere of etyng / The 825 fourthe is whan, thurgh the grete habundaunce of his mete, the humours in his body been distempred / The fifthe is foryetelnesse by to muchel drynkyng, for which somtyme a man foryeteth er the morwe what he hide at even, or on the nyght biforn /

In oother manere been distinct the spesces of Glotonye, after Seint Gregorie The firste is for to ete biforn tyme to ete The seconde is whan a man get hym to delicaat mete or drynke / The thridde is whan men taken to muche over mesure The fourthe is curiositee, with greet entente to maken and apparallen his mete The fifthe is for to eten to gredily / These been the fyve fyngrs of the develes hand, by whiche he draweth folk to synne / 830

Remedium contra peccatum Gule

Agayns Glotonye is the remedie abstinence, as seith Galien, but that holde I nat meritorie, if he do it onoly for the heele of his body Seint Augustyn wole that abstinence be doon for vertu and with patience / "Abstinence," he seith, "is litel worth, but if a man have good wil therto, and but it be enforced by patience and by charitee, and that men doon it for Godes sake, and in hope to have the blisse or hevene" /

The felawes of abstinence been attemperance, that holdeth the meene in alle thynges, eek shame, that eschueth alle deshonestee, suffisance, that seketh no riche metes ne drynkes, ne dooth no fors of to outrageous apparalyng of mete, / mesure also, that restreyneth by resoun the deslavage appetit of etyng, sobrenesse also, that restreyneth the outrage of drynke, / sparyng also, that restreyneth the delicaat ese to sitte longe at his mete and softly, wherfore some folk stonden of hir owene wyl to eten at the lasse leyser / 835

Sequitur de Luxuria

After Glotonye thanne comth Lecherie, for these two synnes been so ny cosyngs that ofte tyme they wol nat departe / God woot, this synne is ful displesaunt thyng to God, for he seyde hymself, "Do no lechere" And therefore he putte grete peynes agayns this synne in the olde lawe / If womman thral were taken in this synne, she sholde be beten with staves to the deeth, and if she were a gentil womman, she sholde be slayn with stones, and if she were a bissshoppes doghter, she sholde been brent, by Goddes comandement / Forther over, by the synne of lechere God dreynthe al the world at the diluge And after that he brente fyve citees with thonder-leyt, and sank hem into helle /

Now lat us speke thanne of thulke stynkyng synne of Lecherie that men clepe avoutrie of wedded folk, that is to seyn, if that oon of hem be wedded, or elles bothe / Seint John seith that 840 avoutiers shullen been in helle, in a

stank brennyng of fyr and of brymston, in fyr, for hire lecherye, in brymston, for the stynk of hire ordure / Certes, the brekyng of this sacrament is an horrible thyng It was maked of God hymself in paradys, and confermed by Jhesu Crist, as witnesseth Seint Mathew in the gospel "A man shal lete fader and mooder, and taken hym to his wif, and they shullen be two in o flesh" / This sacrament bitokneth the knyttyng togidre of Crist and of hooly chirche / And nat oonly that God forbad avowtrie in dede, but eek he comanded that thou sholdest nat covete thy neighebores wyf / "In this heeste," seith Seint Augustyn, "is forboden alle manere covetise to doon lecherie" Lo, what seith Seint Mathew in the gospel, that "whoso seeth a womman to covetise of his lust, he hath doon lecherie with hire in his herte" / Heere may ye seen that nat oonly 845 the dede of this synne is forboden, but eek the desir to doon that synne / This cursed synne anoyeth grevousliche hem that it haunten And first to hire soule, for he obligeth it to synne and to peyne of deeth that is perdurable / Unto the body anoyeth it grevously also, for it dreyeth hym, and wasteth him, and shent hym, and of his blood he maketh sacrifice to the feend of helle It wasteth eek his catel and his substaunce / And certes, if it be a foul thyng a man to waste his catel on wommen, yet is it a fouler thyng whan that, for swich ordure, wommen dispenden upon men hir catel and substaunce / This synne, as seith the prophete, breveth man and womman hir goode fame and al hire honour, and it is ful plesaunt to the devel, for therby wynneth he the mooste partee of this world / And right as 850 a marchant delteth hym moost in chaffare that he hath moost advantage of, right so delteth the fend in this ordure /

This is that oother hand of the devel with fyve fyngres to cacche the peple to his vileynye / The firste fynger is the fool lookyng of the fool womman and of the fool man, that sleeth, right as the basihcock sleeth folk by the venym of his sighte, for the covetise of eyen folweth the covetise of the herte / The seconde fynger is the

vileyns touchyng in wikkede manere And therefore seith Salomon that "whoso toucheth and handleth a womman, he fareth lyk hym that handleth the scorpion that styngeth and sodeynly sleeth thurgh his envenymyng," as whoso toucheth warm pych, it shent his fyngres / The thridde is foule wordes, that fareth lyk fyr, that right anon brenneth the herte / 855 The fourthe fynger is the kysseyng, and trewely he were a greet fool that wolde kisse the mouth of a brennyng oven or of a fourneys / And moore fooler been they that kissen in vileynye, for that mouth is the mouth of helle, and namely these olde dotardes holours, yet wol they kisse, though they may nat do, and smatre hem / Certes, they been lyk to houndes, for an hound, whan he comth by the roser or by othere [bushes], though he may nat pisse, yet wole he heve up his leg and make a contenance to pisse / And for that many man weneth that he may nat synne, for no likerousnesse that he dooth with his wyf, certes, that opunon is fals God woot, a man may sleen hymself with his owene knyf, and make hymselfen dronken of his owene tonne / Certes, be it wyf, be it child, or any worldly thyng that he loveth biforn God, it is his mawmet, and he is an ydolastre / Man sholde 860 loven hys wyf by drecreoun, patiently and atempely, and tnanne is she as though it were his suster / The fifthe fynger of the develes hand is the stynkyng dede of Lecherie / Certes, the fyve fyngres of Glotome the feend put in the wombe of a man, and with his fyve fyngres of Lecherie he gripeth hym by the reynes, for to throwen hym into the fourneys of helle, / ther as they shul han the fyr and the wormes that evere shul lasten, and wepyng and walyng, sharp hunger and thurst, and grymnesse of develes, that shullen al totrede hem withouten respit and withouten ende / Of Lecherie, as I seyde, sourden diverse speces, as fornicacioun, that is bitwixe man and womman that been nat maried, and this is deedly synne, and agayns nature / Al that is 865 enemy and destruccioun to nature is agayns nature / Parfay, the resoun of a man telleth eek hym wel that it is deedly synne, for as muche as God forbad leccherie And Seint Paul yeveth hem the regne that nys dewe to no wight but to hem that doon deedly synne / Another synne of Leccherie is to bireve a mayden of hir maydenhede, for he that so dooth, certes, he casteth a mayden out of the hyeste degree that is in this present lif, / and bireveth hire thilke precious fruyt that the book clepeth the hundred fruyt I ne kan seye it noon ootherweyes in Englysh, but in Latyn it highte Centesimus fructus / Certes, he that so dooth is cause of manye damages and vileynyes, mo than any man kan rekene, right as he somtyme is cause of alle damages that beestes don in the feeld, that breketh the hegge or the closure, thurgh which he destroyeth that may nat been restooored / For certes, na- 870 moore may maydenhede be restooored than an arm that is smyten from the body may retourne agayn to wexe / She may have mercy, this woot I wel, if she do penitence, but nevere shal it be that she nas corrupt / And al be it so that I have spoken somewhat of avowtrie, it is good to shewen mo perils that longen to avowtrie, for to eschue that foule synne / Avowtrie in Latyn is for to seyn, approachynge of oother mannes bed, thurgh which tho that whilom weren o flesh abawndone hir bodyes to othere persones / Of this synne, as seith the wise man, folwen manye harmes First, brekyng of feith, and certes, in feith is the keye of Cristendom / And whan that feith is 875 broken and lorn, soothly Cristendom stant veyn and withouten fruyt / This synne is eek a thefte, for thefte generally is for to reve a wight his thyng agayns his wille / Certes, this is the fouleste thefte that may be, whan a womman steleth hir body from hir housbonde, and yeveth it to hire holour to defoulen hire, and steleth hir soule fro Crist, and yeveth it to the devel / This is a fouler thefte than for to breke a churche and stele the chalice, for these avowtiers breken the temple of God spiritually, and stelen the vessel of grace, that is the body and the soule, for which Crist shal destroyen hem, as seith Seint

Paul / Soothly, of this thefte douted gretly Joseph, whan that his lordes wyf preyed hym of vileynye, whan he seyde, "Lo, my lady, how my lord hath take to me under my warde al that he hath in this world, ne no thyng of his thynges is out of my power, but only ye, that been his wyf / And how sholde I 880 thanne do this wikkednesse, and synne so horribly agayns God and agayns my lord? God it forbeede!" Allas! al to litel is swich trouthe now yfounde / The thridde harm is the filthe thurgh which they breken the comendement of God, and defoulen the auctour of matrimoyne, that is Crist / For certes, in so muche as the sacrament of mariage is so noble and so digne, so muche is it gretter synne for to breken it, for God made mariage in paradys, in the estaat of innocence, to multiplye mankynde to the service of God / And therefore is the brekyng therof the moore grevous, of which brekyng comen false heires ofte tyme, that wrongfully occupien folkes heritages And therefore wol Crist putte hem out of the regne of hevене, that is heritage to goode folk / Of this brekyng comth eek ofte tyme that folk unwar wedden or synnen with hire owene kynrede, and namely thilke harlotes that haunten bordels of these fool wommen, that mowe be likned to a commune gong, where as men purgen hire ordure / What seye we eek of 885 putours that lyven by the horrible synne of putrie, and constreyne wommen to yelden hem a certeyn rente of hire bodily puterie, ye, somtyme of his owene wyf or his child, as doon these hawdes? Certes, these been cursede synnes / Understood eek that Avowtrie is set gladly in the ten comandementz bitwixe thefte and manslaughter, for it is the gretteste thefte that may be, for it is thefte of body and of soule / And it is lyk to homycide, for it kerveth atwo and breketh atwo hem that first were makid o flessh And therefore, by the olde lawe of God, they sholde be slayn / But natheless, by the lawe of Jhesu Crist, that is lawe of pitee, whan he seyde to the womman that was founden in avowtrie, and sholde han been slayn with stones, after the wyl of the Jewes, as was hir lawe, "Go," quod Jhesu Crist, "and have namoore wyl to synne," or, "wille namoore to do synne" / Soothly the vengeance of Avowtre is awarded to the peynes of helle, but if so be that it be destourbed by penitence / Yet 890 been ther mo speses of this cursed synne, as whan that oon of hem is religious, or elles bothe, or of folk that been entred into ordre, as subdekne, or dekne, or preest, or hospitaliers And evere the hyer that he is in ordre, the gretter is the synne / The thynges that gretly agreggen hire synne is the brekyng of hire avow of chastitee, whan they receyved the ordre / And farther over, sooth is that hooly ordre is chief of al the tresorie of God, and his especial signe and mark of chastitee, to shewe that they been joyned to chastitee, which that is the moost precious lyf that is / And thusse ordred folk been specially tited to God, and of the special meignee of God, for which, whan they doon deedly synne, they been the special traytours of God and of his peple, for they lyven of the peple, to preye for the peple, and while they ben suche traitours, here preyer avayleth nat to the peple / Preestes been aungeles, as by the dignitee of hir mysterye, but for sothe, Seint Paul seith that Sathanas transformeth hym in an aungel of light / Soothly, the 895 preest that haunteth deedly synne, he may be likned to the aungel of derknesse transformed in the aungel of light He semeth aungel of light, but for sothe he is aungel of derknesse / Swiche preestes been the sones of Helle, as sheweth in the Book of Kynges, that they weren the sones of Belial, that is, the devel / Belial is to seyn, "withouten juge", and so faren they, hem thynketh they been free, and han no juge, namoore than hath a free bole that taketh which cow that hym liketh in the town / So faren they by women For right as a free bole is ynough for al a toun, right so is a wikked preest corrupcioun ynough for al a parisshe, or for al a contree / These preestes as seith the book, ne konne nat the mystere of preesthod to the peple, ne God ne knowe they

nat They ne helde hem nat apayd, as seith the book, of soden flessch that was to hem offred, but they tooke by force the flessch that is rawe / Certes, so 900 thusse shrewes ne holden hem nat apayed of roosted flessch and sode flessch, with which the peple fedden hem in greet reverence, but they wole have raw flessch of folkes wyves and hir doghtres / And certes, thusse wommen that consenten to hire harlotrie doon greet wrong to Crist, and to hooly chirche, and alle halwes, and to alle soules, for they bireven alle thusse hym that sholde worshipe Crist and hooly chirche, and preye for Cristene soules / And therefore han swiche preestes, and hire lemmanes eek that consenten to hir lecherie, the malisoun of al the court Cristien, til they come to amendement / The thridd spece of avowtre is somtyme bitwixe a man and his wyf, and that is whan they take no reward in hire assemblynge but oonly to hire flesschly delit, as seith Seint Jerome, / and ne rekken of nothyng but that they been assembled, by cause that they been maried, al is good ynough, as thynketh to hem / 905 But in swich folk hath the devel power, as seyde the aungel Raphael to Thobie, for in hire assemblynge they putten Jhesu Crist out of hire herte, and yeven hemself to alle ordure / The fourthe spece is the assemblee of hem that been of hire kynrede, or of hem that been of oon affynytee, or elles with hem with whiche hir fadres or hir kynrode han deded in the synne of lecherie This synne maketh hem lyk to houndes, that taken no kep to kynrede / And certes, parentele is in two maneres, outhere goostly or flesschly, goostly, as for to deelen with his god-sibbes / For right so as he that engendreth a child is his flesschly fader, right so is his godfader his fader espritueel For which a womman may in no lasse synne assemblen with hire godsib than with hire owene flesschly brother / The fifthe spece is thilke abhomynable synne, of which that no man unnethe oghte speke ne write, nathelees it is openly rehersed in holy writ / This cursednesse doon men 910 and wommen in diverse entente and in diverse manere, but though that hooly writ speke of horrible synne, certes hooly writ may nat been defouled, namoore than the sonne that shyneth on the mixne / Another synne aperteneth to leccherie, that comth in slepyng, and this synne cometh ofte to hem that been maydenes, and eek to hem that been corrupt, and this synne men clepen polucioun, that comth in foure maneres / Somtyme of langwissynge of body, for the humours been to ranke and to habundaunt in the body of man, somtyme of infermetee, for the feiblesse of the vertu retentif, as phisik maketh mencion, somtyme for surfeit of mete and drynke, / and somtyme of vileyns thoghtes that been enclosed in mannes mynde whan he gooth to slepe, which may nat been withoute synne, for which men moste kepen hem wisely, or elles may men synnen ful greuously /

Remedium contra peccatum luxurie

Now comth the remedie agayns Leccherie, and that is generally chastitee and continence, that restreyneth alle the desordeynee moevynges that comen of fleshly talentes / And evere the 915 gretter merite shal he han, that moost restreyneth the wikkede eschawfynges of the ardour of this synne And this is in two maneres, that is to seyn, chastitee in marriage, and chastitee of widwehod / Now shaltow understonde that matrimoynne is leefful assemblynge of man and of womman that receyven by vertu of the sacrament the boond thurgh which they may nat be departed in al hir lyf, that is to seyn, whil that they lyven bothe / This, as seith the book, is a ful greet sacrament. God maketh it, as I have seyde, in paradys, and wolde hymself be born in marriage / And for to halwen marriage he was at a weddyng, where as he turned water into wyn, which was the firste miracle that he wroghte in erthe biforn his disciples / Trewe effect of marriage clenseth fornicacioun and replenyseth hooly churche of good lynage, for that is the ende of marriage, and it chaungeth deedly synne into venial synne bitwixe hem that been ywedded, and maketh the hertes al oon of hem that been ywedded, as wel as the bodies / This is verray 920 marriage, that was established by God, er that synne bigan, whan natureel lawe was in his right poynt in paradys, and it was ordeyned that o man sholde have but o womman, and o womman but o man, as seith Seint Augustyn, by manye resouns /

First, for marriage is figured bitwixe Crist and holy churche And that oother is for a man is heved of a womman, algate, by ordinaunce it sholde be so / For if a womman hadde mo men than oon, thaune sholde she have moo hevedes than oon, and that were an horrible thyng biforn God, and eek a womman ne myghte nat plesse to many folk at oones And also ther ne sholde nevere be pees ne reste amonges hem, for everich wolde axen his owene thyng / And forther over, no man ne sholde knowe his owene engendrure, ne who sholde have his heritage, and the womman sholde been the lasse beloved fro the tyme that she were conjoynt to many men /

Now comth how that a man sholde bere hym with his wif, and namely in two thynges, that is to seyn, in suffraunce and reverence, as shewed Crist whan he made first womman / For he ne 925 made hire nat of the heved of Adam, for she sholde nat clayme to greet lordshupe / For ther as the womman hath the maustrie, she maketh to mucche desray Ther neden nonc ensamples of this, the experience of day by day oghte suffice / Also, certes, God ne made nat womman of the foot of Adam, for she ne sholde nat been holden to lowe, for she kan nat patiently suffre But God made womman of the ryb of Adam, for womman sholde be felawe unto man / Man sholde bere hym to his wyf in feith, in trouthe, and in love, as seith Seint Paul, that a man sholde loven his wyf as Crist loved hooly churche, that loved it so wel that he deyde for it So sholde a man for his wyf, if it were nelle /

Now how that a womman sholde be subget to hire housbonde, that telleth Seint Peter First, in obedience / 930

And eek, as seith the decree, a womman that is wyf, as longe as she is a wyf, she hath noon auctoritee to swere ne to bere witness withoute leve of hir housbonde, that is hire lord, algate, he sholde be so by resoun / She sholde eek serve hym in alle honestee, and been attempree of hire array I woot wel that they sholde setten hire entente to plesen hir housbondes, but nat by hire queyntise of array / Seint Jerome seith that "wyves that been apparailled in silk and in precious purple ne mowe nat clothen hem in Jhesu Crist" / Loke what seith Seint John eek in thys matere? / Seint Gregorie eek seith that "no wight seketh precious array but oonly for veyne glorie, to been honoured the moore bifore the peple" / It is a greet folye, a womman to have a far array outward and in herself be foul inward / A wyf sholde eek be 935 mesurable in lookynge and in berynge and in lawghynge, and discreet in alle hire wordes and hire dedes / And above alle worldly thyng she sholde loven hire housbonde with al hire herte, and to hym be trewe of hir body / So sholde an housbonde eek be to his wyf / For sith that al the body is the housbondes, so sholde hire herte been, or elles ther is bitwixe hem two, as in that, no parfit mariage / Thanne shal men understonde that for thre thynges a man and his wyf fleshly mowen assemble / The firste is in entente of engendrure of children to the service of God, for certes that is the cause final of matrimoyne / Another cause is to yelden everich of hem to oother the dette of hire bodies, for neither of hem hath power of his owene body / The thridde is for to eschewe leccherie and vileynye / The ferthe is for sothe deedly synne / As to the firste, it is 940 mentioe, the seconde also, for, as seith the decree, that she hath merite of chastitee that yeldeth to hire housbonde the dette of hir body, ye, though it be agayn hir likynge and the lust of hire herte / The thridde manere is venyal synne, and, trewely, scarsly may ther any of these be withoute venial synne, for the corrupcion and for the delit / The fourthe manere is for to understonde, as if they assemble oonly for amorous love and for noon of the foreseyde causes, but for to accomplice thilke brennyng delit, they rekke nevere how ofte / Soothly it is deedly synne, and yet, with sorwe, somme folk wol pevnen hem moore to doon than to hire appetit suffiseth /

The seconde manere of chastitee is for to been a clone wydewe, and eschue the embracynges of man, and desiren the embracyng of Jhesu Crist / These been tho that han been wyves and han forgoon hire housbondes, and eek wommen that han doon leccherie and been releved by penitence / And certes, if that 945 a wyf koude kepen hire al chaast by licence of hir housbonde, so that she yeve nevere noon occasion that he aglite, it were to hire a greet merite / These manere wommen that observen chastitee moste be clene in herte as wel as in body and in thought, and mesurable in clothynge and in contenance, and been abstinent in etynge and drynkynge, in spekyng, and in dede / They been the vessel or the boyste of the blussed Magdeiene, that fulfilleth hooly churche of good odour / The thridde manere of chastitee is virginitee, and it bihoveth that she be hooly in herte and clene of body / Thanne is she spouse to Jhesu Crist, and she is the lyf of angeles / She is the preysynge of this world, and she is as thise martyn in egalitee, she hath in hire that tonge may nat telle ne herte thynke / Virginitee baar oure Lord Jhesu 950 Crist, and virgine was hymselfe /

Another remedie agayns Leccherie is specially to withdrawn swiche thynges as yeve occasion to thilke vileynye, as ese, etynge, and drynkynge / For certes, whan the pot boyleth strongly, the beste remedie is to withdrawe the fyr / Slepyng longe in greet quete is eek a greet norice to Leccherie /

Another remedie agayns Leccherie is that a man or a womman eschue the compaignye of hem by whiche he douteth to be tempted, for al be it so that the dede be withstonden, yet is ther greet temptacioun / Soothly, a whit wal, although it ne brenne nocht fully by stakynge of a candle, yet is the wal blak of the leyt / Ful ofte tyme I rede that no man truste in his owene peccacioun, but he be stronger than Sampson, and hooler than David, and wiser than Salomon / 955

Now after that I have declared yow, as I kan, the sevene deedly synnes, and somme of hire biauuches and hire remedies, soothly, if I koude, I wolde telle yow the ten comandementz / But so heigh a doctrine I lete to divines Nathe-lees, I hope to God, they been touched in this tretice, everch of hem alle /

Sequitur secunda pars Penitencie

Now for as muche as the seconde partie of Penitence stant in Confessour of mouth, as I bigan in the firste chapitre, I seye, Seint Augustyn seith / "Synne is every word and every dede, and al that men coverten, agayn the lawe of Jhesu Crist, and this is for to synne in herte, in mouth, and in dede, by thy fyve wittes, that been sighte, herynge, smellynge, tastynge or savourynge, and feelynge" / Now is it good to understonde the circumstances that agreggen muchel every synne / Thou shalt considere what 960 thow art that doost the synne, whether thou be male or femele, yong or oold, gentil or thral, free or servant, hool or syk, wedded or sengle, ordred or unordred, wys or fool, clerk or seculeer, / if she be of thy kynrede, bodily or ghostly, or noon, if any of thy kynrede have synned with hire, or noon, and manye mo thinges /

Another circumstaunce is thus whether it be doon in fornicacioun or in avowtrie or noon, incest or noon, mayden or noon, in manere of homicide or noon, horrible grete synnes or smale, and how longe thou hast continued in synne / The thridde circumstaunce is the place ther thou hast do synne, whether in oother mennes hous or in thyn owene, in feeld or in churche or in chirchehawe, in churche dedicaat or noon / For if the churche be halwed, and man or womman spille his kynde inwith that place, by wey of synne or by wikked tempta-cioun, the churche is entredited til it be reconciled by the bysshop / And 965 the preest sholde be enterdited that dde swich a vileynye, to terme of al his lif he sholde namoore syng masse, and if he dide, he sholde doon deedly synne at every time that he so songe masse / The fourthe circumstaunce is by whiche mediatours, or by whiche messagers, as for enticement, or for consentement to bere compaignye with felaweshupe, for many a wrecche, for to bere compaignye, wol go to the devel of helle / Wherefore they that eggen or consenten to the synne been parteners of the synne, and of the dampnacioun of the synnere /

The fifthe circumstaunce is how manye tymes that he hath synned, if it be in his mynde, and how ofte that he hath falle / For he that ofte falleth in synne, he despiseth the mercy of God, and encreeseth hys synne, and is unkynde to Crist, and he wexeth the moore fieble to withsonde synne, and synneth the moore lightly, / and the latter arseth, and 970 is the moore eschew for to shryven hym, and namely, to hym that is his con-fessour / For which that folk, whan they falle agayn in hir olde folles, outhere they forleten hir olde confessours al outrely, or elles they departen hir shrift in diverse places, but soothly, swich departed shrift deserveth no mercy of God of his synnes / The sixte circumstaunce is why that a man synneth, as by which temptacioun, and if hymself procure thilke temptacioun, or by the exutyng of oother folk, or if he synne with a womman by force, or by hire owene assent, / or if the womman, maugree hir hed, hath been afforced, or noon This shal she telle for coveteise, or for poverte, and if it was hire procurynge, or noon, and swich manere harneys / The seventhe circumstaunce is in what manere he hath doon his synne, or how that she hath suffred that folk han doon to hire / 975 And the same shal the man telle pleynly with alle circumstaunces, and whether he hath synned with comune bordel wommen, or noon, / or doon his synne in hooly tymes, or noon, in fastyng tymes, or noon, or biforn his shrifte, or after his latter shrifte, / and hath peraventure broken therfore his penance enjoyned, by whos help and whos conseil, by sorcerie or craft, al moste be toold / Alle

thuse thynges, after that they been grete or smale, engreggen the conscience of man And eek the preest, that is thy juge, may the better been avysed of his juggement in yevynge of thy penaunce, and that is after thy contricioun / For understand wel that after tyme that a man hath defouled his baptesme by synne, if he wole come to salvacioun, ther is noon other wey but by penitence and shrifte and satisfaccioun, / and namely by the two, 981 if ther be a confessour to which he may shriven hym, and the thridde, if he have lyf to parfournen it /

Thanne shal man looke and considere that if he wole maken a trewe and a profitable confessioun, ther moste be foure condiciouns / First, it moot been in sorweful bitterness of herte, as seyde the kyng Ezechias to God "I wol remembre me alle the yeres of my lif in bitterness of myn herte" / This condicioun of bitterness hath fyve signes The firste is that confessioun moste be shamefast, nat for to covere ne hyden his synne, for he hath agilt his God and defouled his soule / And herof seith Seint Augustyn "The herte travaileth for shame of his synne", and for he hath greet shamefastnesse, he is digne to have greet mercy of God / 985 Swich was the confessioun of the publican that wolde nat heven up his eyen to hevене, for he hadde offended God of hevене, for which shamefastnesse he hadde anon the mercy of God / And therof seith Seint Augustyn that swich shamefast folk seen next foryevnesse and remissioun / Another signe is humyltee in confessiour, of which seith Seint Peter, "Humbleth yow under the myght of God" The hond of God is myghty in confessioun, for therby God foryeveth thee thy synnes, for he alone hath the power / And this humyltee shal been in herte, and in signe outward, for right as he hath humyltee to God in his herte, right so sholde he humble his body outward to the preest, that sit in Goddes place / For which in no manere, sith that Crist is sovereyn, and the preest meene and mediatour bitwixe Crist and the synnere, and the synnere is the laste by wey of resoun, / thanne sholde nat the 990

synnere sitte as heighe as his confessour, but knele biforn hym or at his feet, but if maladie destourbe it For he shal nat taken kep who sit there, but in whos place that he sitteth / A man that hath trespased to a lord, and comth for to axe mercy and maken his accord, and set him doun anon by the lord, men wolde holden hym outrageous, and nat worthy so soone for to have remissioun ne mercy / The thridde signe is how that thy shrift sholde be ful of teeris, if man may, and if man may nat wepe with his bodily eyen, lat hym wepe in herte / Swich was the confession of Seint Peter, for after that he hadde forsake Jhesu Crist, he wente out and weep ful bitterly / The fourthe signe is that he ne lette nat for shame to shewen his confessioun / Swich 995 was the confessioun of the Magdalene, that ne spared, for no shame of hem that weren ate feeste, for to go to oure Lord Jhesu Crist and biknowe to hym hire synne / The fifthe signe is that a man or a womman be obeisant to receyven the penaunce that hym is enjoyned for his synnes, for certes, Jhesu Crist, for the giltes of a man, was obedient to the deeth /

The seconde condicion of verray confession is that it be hastily doon For certes, if a man hadde a deedly wounde, evere the lenger that he taried to warisshe hymself, the moore wolde it corrupte and haste hym to his deeth, and eek the wounde wolde be the wors for to heele / And right so fareth synne that longe tyme is in a man unshewed / Certes, a man oghte hastily shewen his synnes for manye causes, as for drede of deeth, that cometh ofte sodeynly, and no certeyn what tyme it shal be, ne in what place, and eek the drecchyng of o synne draweth in another, / and eek the lenger that he 1000 tarieth, the fether he is fro Crist And if he abide to his laste day, scarsly may he shryven hym or remembre hym of his synnes or repenten hym, for the grevous maladie of his deeth / And for as muche as he ne hath nat in his lyf herkned Jhesu Crist whanne he hath spoken, he shal crie to Jhesu Crist at his laste day, and scarsly wol he herkne hym /

And understand that this condicioun moste han foure thynges Thi shrift moste be purveyed bifore and avysed, for wikked haste dooth no profit, and that a man konne shryve hym of his synnes, be it of pride, or of envye, and so forth with the speses and circumstances, / and that he have comprehended in hys mynde the nombre and the greetnesse of his synnes, and how longe that he hath leyn in synne, / and eek that he be contrit of his synnes, and in studefast purpos, by the grace of God, nevere eft to falle in synne, and eek that he drede and countrewaite hymself, that he fle the occasiouns of synne to whiche he is enclyned / Also thou 1005 shalt shryve thee of alle thy synnes to o man, and nat a parcel to o man and a parcel to another, that is to understande, in entente to departe thy confessioun, as for shame or drede, for it nys but stranglyng of thy soule / For certes Jhesu Crist is entierly al good, in hym nys noon imperfeccioun, and therefore outhere he foryeveth al parfitly or nevere a deel / I seye nat that if thou be assigned to the penitancer for certein synne, that thou art bounde to shewen hym al the remenaunt of thy synnes, of whiche thou hast be shryven to thy curaate, but if it like to thee of thyn humylitee, this is no departyng of shrifte / Ne I seye nat, ther as I speke of divisioun of confessioun, that if thou have licence for to shryve thee to a discret and an honest preest, where thee liketh, and by licence of thy curaate, that thou ne mayst wel shryve thee to him of alle thy synnes / But lat no blotte be bihynde, lat no synne been untoold, as fer as thou hast remembrance / 1010 And when thou shalt be shryven to thy curaate, telle hym eek alle the synnes that thou hast doon syn thou were last yshryven, this is no wikked entente of divisioun of shrifte /

Also the verray shrifte axeth certein condiciouns First, that thou shryve thee by thy free wil, nocht constreyned, ne for shame of folk, ne for maladie, ne swiche thynges For it is resoun that he that trespasseth by his free wyl, that by his free wyl he confesse his trespas, / and that noon oother man telle his synne but he hymself, ne he shal nat nayte ne denye his synne, ne wrattthe hym agayn the preest for his amonestyng to lete synne / The seconde condicioun is that thy shrift be laweful, that is to seyn, that thou that shryvest thee, and eek the preest that hereth thy confessioun, been verraily in the feith of hooly chirche, / and that a man ne be nat despered of the mercy of Jhesu Crist, as Caym or Judas / 1015 And eek a man moot accusen hymself of his owene trespas, and nat another, but he shal blame and wyten hymself and his owene malice of his synne, and noon oother / But natheless, if that another man be occasioun or enticere of his synne, or the estaat of a persone be swich thurgh which his synne is agregged, or elles that he may nat pleynly shryven hym but he telle the persone with which he hath synned, thanne may he telle it, so that his entente ne be nat to bakbite the persone, but oonly to declaren his confessioun /

Thou ne shalt nat eek make no lesynges in thy confessioun, for humylitee, peraventure, to seyn that thou hast doon synnes of whiche thou were nevere guilty / For Seint Augustyn seith, "If thou, by cause of thyn humylitee, makest lesynges on thyself, though thou ne were nat in synne bifore, yet artow thanne in synne thurgh thy lesynges" / Thou 1020 most eek shewe thy synne by thyn owene propre mouth, but thou be woxe dowmb, and nat by no lettre, for thou that hast doon the synne, thou shalt have the shame therefore / Thou shalt nat eek peynte thy confessioun by faire subtle wordes, to covere the moore thy synne, for thanne biglestow thyself, and nat the preest Thou most tellen it platly, be it nevere so foul ne so horrible / Thou shalt eek shryve thee to a preest that is discret to conseilte thee, and eek thou shalt nat shryve thee for veyne glorie, ne for ypocryse, ne for no cause but oonly for the doute of Jhesu Crist and the heele of thy soule / Thou shalt nat eek renne to the preest so deylnly to tellen hym lightly thy synne, as whoso telleth a jape or a tale but avysely and with greet devocioun / And generally, shryve thee ofte If thou ofte falle, ofte thou arise by con-

fessioun / And though thou shryve 1025 thee ofter than ones of synne of which thou hast be shryven, it is the moore merite And, as seith Seint Augustyn, thow shalt have the moore lightly relessyng and grace of God, bothe of synne and of peyne / And certes, oones a yeere atte leeste way it is laweful for to been housled, for certes, oones a yeere alle thynges renovellen /

Now have I toold yow of verray Con-fessioun, that is the seconde partie of Penitence /

Explicit secunda pars Penitencie, et sequatur tercia pars eiusdem

The thridde partie of Penitence is Satis-faccioun, and that stant moost generally in almesse and in bodily peyne / Now been ther thre manere of almesses contricion of herte, where a man offreth hymself to God, another is to han pitee of defaute of his neighebores, and the thridde is in yevyng of good conseil and comfort, goostly and bodily, where men han nede, and namely in sustenaunce of mannes foode / And tak kep that a 1030 man hath nede of these thynges generally he hath nede of foode, he hath nede of clothyng and herberwe, he hath nede of charitable conseil and visytyng in prisone and in malade, and sepulture of his dede body / And if thow mayst nat visite the nedeful with thy persone, visite hym by thy message and by thy yiftes / These been general almesses or werkes of charitee of hem that han temporeel richesses or discrecioun in conseil-yng Of these werkes shaltow heren at the day of doom /

These almesses shaltow doon of thyne owene propre thynges, and hastily and prively, if thow mayst / But natheless, if thow mayst nat doon it prively, thow shalt nat forbere to doon almesse though men seen it, so that it be nat doon for thank of the world, but oonly for thank of Jhesu Crst / For, as 1035 witnesseth Seint Mathew, capitulo quinto, "A citee may nat been hyd that is set on a montayne, ne men highte nat a lanterne and put it under a busshel, but men sette it on a candle-stikke to yeve light to the men in the hous / Right so shal youre light lighten bifore men, that they may seen youre goode werkes, and glorifie youre fader that is in hevene" /

Now as to speken of bodily peyne, it stant in preyeres, in walynges, in fastynges, in vertuouse techynges of orisouns / And ye shul understonde that orisouns or preyeres is for to seyn a pitous wyl of herte, that redresseth it in God and ex-presseth it by word outward, to remoeven harmes and to han thynges esprituel and durable, and somtyme temporele thynges, of whiche orisouns, certes, in the orison of the Pater noster hath Jhesu Crst enclosed moost thynges / Certes, it is privyleged of thre thynges in his dignytee, for which it is moore digne than any oother preyere, for that Jhesu Crst hymself madek it, / and it is short, for it 1040 sholde be koud the moore lightly, and for to withholden it the moore esly in herte, and helpen hymself the ofter with the orisoun, / and for a man sholde be the lasse wery to seyen it, and for a man may nat excusen hym to lerne it, it is so short and so esy, and for it comprehendeth in it self alle goode preyeres / The expositioun of this hooly preyere, that is so excellent and digne, I bitake to these maistres of theologie, save thus muchel wol I seyn, that whan thow prayest that God sholde foryeve thee thy giltes as thou foryevest hem that agilten to thee, be ful wel war that thow ne be nat out of charitee / This hooly orison amenuseth eek venyal synne, and therefore it aperteneth specially to penitence /

This preyere moste be trewely seyde, and in verray feith, and that men preyre to God ordinatly and discretly and devoutly, and alwey a man shal putten his wyl to be subget to the wille of God / This orisoun moste eek been 1045 seyde with greet humblesse and ful pure, honestly, and nat to the anyoauce of any man or womman It moste eek been contnued with the werkes of char-itee / It avayleth eek agayn the vices of the soule, for, as seith Seint Jerome, "By fastyng been saved the vices of the flessch, and by preyere the vices of the soule" /

After this, thou shalt understonde that bodily peyne stant in wakyng, for Jhesu Crist seith, "Waketh and preyeth, that ye ne entre in wikked temptacioun" / Ye shul understanden also that fastyng stant in thre thynges in forberynge of bodily mete and drynke, and in forberynge of worldly jolitee, and in forberynge of deedly synne, this is to seyn, that a man shal kepen hym fro deedly synne with all his myght /

And thou shalt understanden eek that God ordeyned fastyng, and to fastyng apertenen foure thynges / 1050 largenesse to povre folk, gladnesse of herte espyrituel, nat to been angry ne annoyed, ne grucche for he fasteth, and also resonable houre for to ete, ete by mesure, that is for to seyn, a man shal nat ete in untyme, ne sitte the lenger at his table to ete for he fasteth /

Thanne shaltow understonde that bodily peyne stant in disciplyne or techynge, by word, or by wrytynge, or in ensample, also in weryng of heyres, or of stamyn, or of haubergeons on hire naked flesh, for Cristes sake, and swiche manere penances / But war thee wel that swiche manere penances on thy flesh ne make nat thyn herte bitter or angry or annoyed of thyself, for bettre is to caste away thyn heyre, than for to caste away the sikernes of Jhesu Crist / And therefore seith Seint Paul, "Clothe yow, as they that been chosen of God, in herte of misericorde, debonairetee, suffraunce, and swich manere of clothyng", of whiche Jhesu Crist is noore apayed than of heyres, or haubergeons, or hauberkes /

Thanne is discipline eek in knockyng of thy brest, in scourgyng with yerdes, in knelynges, in tribulacions, / 1055 suffryng paciently wronges that been doon to thee, and eek in pacient suffraunce of maladies, or lesyng of worldly catel, or of wyf, or of child, or othere freendes /

Thanne shaltow understonde whiche thynges destourben penaunce, and this is in foure maneres, that is, drede, shame, hope, and wanhope, that is, desperacion / And for to speke first of drede for which he weneth that he may suffre no pen-

auce, / ther-agayns is remedie for to thynke that bodily penaunce is but short and litel at regard of the peyre of helle, that is so cruel and so long that it lasteth withouten ende /

Now again the shame that a man hath to shryven hym, and namely those ypo-crites that wolden been holden so parfite that they han no nede to shryven hem, / agayns that shame sho'ld a 1060 man thynke that, by wey of resoun, that he that hath nat been shamed to doon foule thynges, certes hym oghte nat been ashamed to do faire thynges, and that is confessiouns / A man sho'ld eek thynke that God seeth and woot alle his thoghtes and alle his werkes, to hym man no thyng been hyd ne covered / Men sholden eek remembren hem of the shame that is to come at the day of doom to hem that been nat penitent and shryven in this present lyf / For alle the creatures in hevене, in erthe, and in helle shullen seen apertly al that they hyden in this world /

Now for to speken of the hope of hem that been neclignt and slowe to shryven hem, that stant in two maneres / That oon is that he 1065 hopeth for to lyve longe and for to purchacen muche richesse for his de'it, and thanne he wol shryven hym, and, as he seith, hym semeth thanne tymely enough to come to shrifte / Another is of surquidre that he hath in Cristes mercy / Agayns the firste vice, he shal thynke that oure lif is in no sikernes, and eek that alle the riches in this world ben in aventure, and passen as a shadwe on the wal, / and, as seith seint Gregorie, that it aperteneth to the grete rightwisnesse of God that nevere shal the peyne stynte of hem that nevere wolde withdrawn hem fro synne, hir thankes, but ay continue in synne, for thilke perpetuel wil to do synne shul they han perpetuel peyne /

Wanhope is in two maneres the firste wanhope is in the mercy of Crist, that oother is that they thynken that they ne myghte nat longe persevere in goodness / The firste wanhope 1070 comth of that he demeth that he hath synned so greetly and so ofte, and so longe leyn in synne, that he shal nat be saved / Certes, agayns that cursed wanhope sholde he thynke that the passion of Jhesu Crist is moore strong for to unbynde than synne is strong for to bynde / Agayns the seconde wanhope he shal thynke that as ofte as he falleth he may arise agayn by penitence And though he never so longe have leyn in synne, the mercy of Crist is alwey redy to receiven hym to mercy / Agayns the wanhope that he demeth that he sholde nat longe persevere in goodnesse, he shal thynke that the feblesse of the devel may nothyng doon, but if men wol suffren hym, / and eek he shal han strengthe of the help of God, and of al hooly chirche, and of the proteccioun of aungels, if hym list / 1070

Thanne shal men understonde what is the fruyt of penaunce, and, after the word of Jhesu Crist, it is the endeles

blisse of hevene, / ther joye hath no contrariouste of wo ne grevaunce, ther alle harmes been passed of this present lyf ther as is the sikernesse fro the peyne of helle, ther as is the blisful compaignye that rejoyssen hem everemo, everich of otneres joye, / ther as the body of man, that whilom was foul and derk, is moore cleer than the sonne, ther as the body, that whilom was syk, freele, and fieble, and mortal, is immortal, and so strong and so hool that ther may no thyng apeyren it, / ther as ne is neither hunger, thurst, ne coold, but every soule replenysed with the sighte of the parfit knowynge of God / This blisful regne may men purchase by poverté esprituel, and the glorie by lowenesse, the plentee of joye by hunger and thurst, and the reste by travaille, and the lyf by death and mortificacion of synne / 1080

Heere taketh the makere of this book his leve

Heere is ended the book of the tales of Caunterbury, compiled by Geoffrey Chaucer, of whos soule Jhesu Crist have mercy Amen

THE BOOK OF THE DUCHESS

IT HAS long been recognized that Chaucer's earliest writings show French influence. The French literature with which he came chiefly in contact was not the great narrative poetry of the early Middle Ages, the Chanson de Roland or the Arthurian romances of the best period. Though he often displays a knowledge of the subjects treated in this older literature, no important use of the poems themselves has been traced in his writings. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, while good metrical romances continued to be written, there was a change of literary fashion in France, and narratives of the earlier type were in large measure superseded by dreams and allegories. The great example of the new genre was the Roman de la Rose, which Chaucer himself says that he translated. The date of his translation is unknown, and it is not even certain that he wrote any part of the existing English fragments. But the influence of the Roman is apparent in his work from the beginning, and he found other models of the same general type of allegorical writing in the productions of Machaut, Froissart, and Deschamps, the chief French poets of his own century.

It is to Guillaume Machaut, the oldest of these writers, that Chaucer was particularly indebted in the Book of the Duchess, the earliest of his definitely dated works. There are no less than nine of Machaut's poems from which he may have derived suggestions, and of one of them, the Jugement dou Roy de Behaingne, he made extended use. He also drew upon love-visions by other French writers, and for the explanation and illustration of his text comparisons have been made especially with the Roman de la Rose, the Paradys d'Amours of Froissart, and the anonymous Songe Vert. For the incident of Ceyx and Alcione, though Chaucer apparently followed in some details the version of Machaut in the Dit de la Fontaine Amoureuse, he went straight to the Latin source in the Metamorphoses of Ovid, the classical poet to whom throughout his life he was most deeply indebted.

The Book of the Duchess is not only the earliest, but almost the only production of Chaucer that can with confidence be attached to an actual occurrence. According to a tradition recorded by John Stow and still accepted by nearly all critics, the poem was written in commemoration of the death of Blanche, duchess of Lancaster and first wife of John of Gaunt. Though recently called in question the tradition can be safely trusted. It is implied by the title, The Deeth of Blawunche the Duchesse, used by Chaucer himself in the Legend of Good Women, and is further supported by allusions in the poem to the names "Blanche" and "Lancaster" and "Richmond," the Yorkshire seat of John of Gaunt. The duchess died in September, 1369, and the Book was probably composed within the next few months.

It is at once an eulogy of Blanche and a consolation addressed to her bereaved husband. To fulfil the double purpose of the poem Chaucer had the happy idea of adapting a love-vision of the familiar kind to the uses of an elegy. Therein lies the chief originality of the work. Apart from its adaptation, the Book of the Duchess conforms strictly to its type. Indeed it sometimes follows one of its models, Machaut's Roy de Behaingne, so closely that the very description of Blanche seems to be drawn as much from Machaut as from life. The regular features of the love-vision, many of which reappear in the House of Fame, the Parliament of Fowls, and the Prologue to the Legend of Good Women — the introductory device of reading a book, the discussion of sleeplessness and dreams, the setting on May-day or in the spring-time, the vision itself, the guide (who in many poems takes the form of a helpful animal), the personified abstractions, Love, Fortune, Nature, and the like — all these are in evidence. For most modern readers the artificial conventions undoubtedly impair the effect of the story, and the young poet had not yet much thought to contribute or great mastery in expressing it. He was experimenting in style and meter, and the verse, in comparison with what he was soon to write, is both rough and lacking in flexibility. Yet already in this relatively crude work of Chaucer's youth there appears something of his vivid imagination. The hunting scene (which might be consulted as a document on the practice of the sport), the figure of the man in black, and the recital of his tragic story, — all possess a reality unusual in poems of the type. Even the dream itself is not a mere convention, as was often the case, but reflects the peculiar psychology of the sleeping state. And, what is most remarkable, the poem, in spite of the artificial tradition to which it belongs, expresses real feeling. A love-vision might have been expected to serve, as this does so admirably, for an eulogy on the duchess. It is an evidence of the young Chaucer's power that the poem is also a moving narrative of the husband's grief and the dreamer's sympathy.

In a sense Chaucer was unfortunate in the models which the prevailing fashions of his youth forced upon him. For allegory was really foreign to his genius, and he had to work slowly out of it to find the more natural expression of his later years. His greatest and most representative work was undoubtedly in the realistic vein. Yet many of the best loved passages, even in his later writings, belong to the other tradition, commonly regarded as more characteristically mediæval, and English would be much poorer in the poetry of fancy if he had never practiced in that school and become one of its masters.

I have gret wonder, be this lyght, How that I lyve, for day ne nyght I may nat slepe wel nygh noght, I have so many an ydel thought, Purely for defaute of slep,	5	That I have lost al lustyhede Suche fantasies ben in myn hede, So I not what is best to doo But men myght axe me why soo	30
That, by my trouthe, I take no kep Of nothing, how hyt cometh or gooth, Ne me nys nothyng leef nor looth Al is ylyche good to me — Joye or sorowe, wherso hyt be —	10	I may not sleepe, and what me is But natheles, who aske this Leseth his asking trewely Myselven can not telle why The sothe, but trewly, as I gesse,	35
For I have felynge in nothyng, But, as yt were, a mased thyng, Alway in poynt to falle a-doun, For sorwful ymagynacioun Ys alway hooly in my mynde	15	I holde hit be a sicknesse That I have suffred this eight year, And yet my boote is never the ner, For there is phisicien but oon That may me hele, but that is don	40
And wel ye woot, agaynes kynde Hyt were to lyven in thys wyse, For nature wolde nat suffyse To noon erthly creature Nat longe tyme to endure	20	Passe we over untill eft, That wil not be not nede be left, Our first mater is good to kepe So when I saw I might not slepe Til now late, this other night,	45
Withoute slep and be in sorwe And I ne may, ne nyght ne morwe, Slepe, and thus melancolye And drede I have for to dye Defaute of slep and hevynesse	25	Upon my bed I sat upright And bad oon reche me a book, A romaunce, and he it me tok To rede, and drive the night away, For me thoughte it beter play	50
Hath sleyn my spirit of quyknesse		Then play either at ches or tables And in this bok were written fables

- That clerkes had in olde tyme,
 And other poets, put in rime
 To rede, and for to be in minde, 55
 While men loved the lawe of kinde
 This bok ne spak but of such thinges, Of quenes lives, and of kinges,
 And many other thinges smale Amonge al this I fond a tale 60
 That me thoughte a wonder thing
 This was the tale There was a king
 That highte Seys, and had a wif,
 The beste that mighte bere lyf,
 And this quene highte Alcyone 65
 So it befel, thereafter soone, This king wol wenden over see To tellen shortly, whan that he Was in the see, thus in this wise, Such a trampest gan to rise 70
 That brak her mast and made it falle,
 And clefte her ship, and dreinte hem alle,
 That never was founden, as it telles Bord ne man, ne nothing elles Right thus this king Seys: loste his lif 75
 Now for to speken of his wif —
 This lady, that was left at hom, Hath wonder that the king ne com Hom, for it was a longe terme Anon her herte began to erme, 80
 And for that her thoughte evermo
 It was not wele [he dwelte] so,
 She longed so after the king
 That, certes, it were a pitous thing To telle her hertely sorowful lif 85
 That she had, this noble wif,
 For him she loved alderbest Anon she sent bothe east and west To seke him, but they founde nought
 "Alas!" quoth shee, "that I was 90
 wrought!"
 And wher my lord, my love, be deed?
 Certes, I nil never ete breed,
 I make avow to my god here,
 But I mowe of my lord here!" 95
 Such sorowe this lady to her tok
 That trewly I, which made this book, Had such pittee and such rowthe
 To rede hir sorwe, that, by my trowthe,
 I ferde the worse al the morwe Aftir, to thenken on hir sorwe 100
 So whan this lady koude here noo word That no man myghte fynde hir lord, Ful ofte she swouned, and sayed "Alas!"
- For sorwe ful nygh wood she was,
 Ne she koude no reed but oon, 105
 But down on knees she sat anoon And wepte, that pittee was to here
 "A! mercy! swete lady dere!"
 Quod she to Juno, hir goddessse,
 "Helpe me out of thys distresse, 110
 And yeve me grace my lord to se Soone, or wite wher-so he be,
 Or how he fareth, or in what wise,
 And I shal make yow sacrifice,
 And hooly youres become I shal 115
 With good wille, body, herte, and al,
 And but thow wolt this, lady swete, Send me grace to slepe, and mete
 In my slep som certeyn sweven Wherthorough that I may knowen even 120 Whether my lord be quyk or ded"
 With that word she heng down the hed
 And fel a-swowne as cold as ston Hyr women kaught hir up anoon,
 And broghten hir in bed al naked, 125
 And she, forweped and forwaked, Was wery, and thus the dede slep Fil on hir, or she tooke kep, Throgh Juno, that had herd hir bone,
 That made hir to slepe sone 130 For as she prayede, ryght so was don In dede, for Juno ryght anon Called thus hir messager To doo hir erande, and he com per Whan he was come, she had hym thus 135
 "Go bet," quod Juno, "to Morpheus, — Thou knowest hym wel, the god of slep Now understand wel, and tak kep!
 Sey thus on my half, that he Go faste into the grete se, 140
 And byd hym that, on alle thyng,
 He take up Seys body the kyng,
 That lyeth ful pale and nothyng rody Bid hym crepe into the body,
 And doo hit goon to Alcione 145
 The quene, ther she lyeth allone,
 And shewe hir shortly, hit ys no nay,
 How hit was dreynt thys other day,
 And do the body speke ryght soo, Ryght as hyt was woned to doo 150
 The whiles that hit was alyve Goo now faste, and hye the blyve!"
 This messager tok leve and wente Upon hys wey, and never ne stente Til he com to the derke valeye 155

Ther never yet grew corn ne gras,		Ye mowe hyt fynde the see besyde,
Ne tre, ne [nothing] that ought was,		And farewel, swete, my worldes blysse!
Beste, ne man, ne nocht elles,		I praye God youre sorwe lysse	210
Save ther were a fewe welles	160	To lytel while oure blysse lasteth!"
Came rennyng fro the clyves adoun,		With that hir eyen up she casteth
That made a dedly slepyng soun,		And saw nocht "Allas!" quod she for
And ronnen down ryght by a cave		sorwe,
That was under a rokke ygrave		And deyede within the thridde morwe
Amydde the valey, wonder depe	165	But what she sayede more in that swow	215
There these goddes lay and slepe,		I may not telle yow as now,
Morpheus and Eclympasteyr,		Hyt were to longe for to dwelle
That was the god of slepes heyr,		My first matere I wil yow telle,
That slep and dide noon other werk		Wherfore I have told this thyng
This cave was also as derk	170	Of Alcione and Seys the kyng	220
As helle-pit overal aboute		For thus moche dar I saye wel,
They had good leysar for to route		I had be dolven everydel,
To envye, who myghte slepe best		And ded, ryght thurgh defaute of slep
Somme henge her chyn upon hir brest,		Yif I ne had red and take kep
And slept upryght, hir hed yhed,	175	Of this tale next before	225
And somme lay naked in her bed		And I wol telle yow wherfore,
And slepe whiles the dayes laste		For I ne myghte, for bote ne bale,
This messenger com fleyng faste		Slepe, or I had red thys tale
And cried, "O, ho! awake anon!"		Of this dreynthe Seys the kyng,
Hit was for nocht, there herde hym	hym	And of the goddes of slepyng	230
non	180	Whan I had red thys tale wel,
"Awake!" quod he, "whoo ys lyth there?"		And overloked hyt everydel,
And blew his horn ryght in here eere,		Me thoghte wonder yf hit were so,
And cried "Awaketh!" wonder hie		For I had never herd speke, or tho,
This god of slep with hys oon ye		Of noo goddes that koude make	235
Cast up, axed, "Who clepeth ther?"	185	Men to slepe, ne for to wake,
"Hyt am I," quod this messenger		For I ne knew never god but oon
"Juno bad thow shuldest goon" —		And in my game I sayde anon —
And tolde hym what he shulde doon		And yet me lyst ryght evel to pleye —
As I have told yow here-to-fore,		"Rather then that y shulde deye	240
Hyt ys no nede reherse hyt more —	190	Thorgh defaute of slepyng thus,
And went hys way, whan he had sayd		I wolde yive thilke Morpheus,
Anoon this god of slep abrayd		Or hys goddesse, dame Juno,
Out of hys slep, and gan to goon,		Or som wight elles, I ne roghte who,
And dyde as he had bede hym doon,		To make me slepe and have som reste, —
Took up the dreynthe body sone	195	I wil yive hym the alderbeste	246
And bar hyt forth to Alcione ,		Yifte that ever he abod hys lyve
Hys wif the quene, ther as she lay		And here on warde, ryght now, as blyve,
Ryght even a quarter before day,		Yif he wol make me slepe a lyte,
And stood ryght at hyr beddes fet,		Of down of pure dowvves white	250
And called hir ryght as she het	200	I wil yive hym a fether-bed,
By name, and sayde, "My swete wyf,		Rayed with gold, and ryght wel cled
Awake! let be your sorwful lyf!		In fyn blak satyn doutremer,
For in your sorwe there lyth no red		And many a pilowe, and every ber
For, certes, swete, I nam but ded,		Of cloth of Reynes, to slepe softe,	255
Ye shul me never on lyve yse	205	Hym thar not nede to turnen ofte
But, goode swete herte, that ye		And I wol yive hym al that falles

- To a chambre, and al hys halles
 I wol do peynte with pure gold And tapite hem ful many fold 260 Of oo sute this shal he have,
 Yf I wiste where were hys cave, Yf he kan make me slepe sone,
 As did the goddesse queene Alcione And thus this ylke god, Morpheus, 265 May wynne of me moo fees thus Than ever he wan, and to Juno,
 That ys hys goddesse, I shal soo do, I trow that she shal holde hir payd "
- I hadde unneth that word ysayd 270 Ryght thus as I have told hyt yow, That sodeynly, I nyste howt, Such a lust anon me took To slepe, that ryght upon my book
 Y fil aslepe, and therwyt even 275 Me mette so ynly swete a sweven,
 So wonderful, that never yit
 Y trowe no man had the wyt
 To konne wel my sweven rede,
 No, not Joseph, withoute drede, 280
 Of Egipte, he that redde so
 The kynges metyng Pharao,
 No more than koude the lest of us,
 Ne nat skarsly Macrobeus, (He that wrot al th'avysoun 285
 That he mette, kyng Scipioun, The noble man, the Affrikan, — Suche marvayles fortun'd than) I trowe, arede my dremes even Loo, thus hyt was, thys was my sweven Me thoghte thus that hyt was May, 291
 And in the dawenyng I lay (Me mette thus) in my bed al naked,
 And lok'd forth, for I was waked With smale foules a gret hep 295
 That had affrayed me out of my slep, Thorgh noyse and swetnesse of her song And, as me mette, they sate among Upon my chambre roof wythoute, Upon the tyles, overal aboute, 300
 And songen, everych in hys wyse,
 The moste solempne servise
 By noote, that ever man, y trowe,
 Had herd, for som of hem song lowe, Som high, and al of oon acord 305
 To telle shortly, att oo word, Was never herd so swete a steven, — But hyt had be a thyng of heven, —
 So mery a soun, so swete entewnes,
- That certes, for the toun of Tewnes, 310
 I nolde but I had herd hem synge, For al my chambre gan to ryng Thurgh syngyng of her armonye For instrument nor melody
 Was nowhere herd yet half so swete, 315 Nor of acorde half so mete,
 For ther was noon of hem that feyned
 To synge, for ech of hem hym peyned
 To fynde out mery crafty notes
 They ne spared not her throtes 320 And sooth to seyn, my chambre was Ful wel depeynted, and with glas Were al the wyndowes wel yglased, Ful clere, and nat an hoole ycrased,
 That to beholde hyt was gret joye 325
 For holly al the story of Troye Was in the glasyng ywrought thus,
 Of Ector and of kyng Priamus,
 Of Achilles and Lamedon,
 And eke of Medea and of Jason, 330
 Of Paris, Eleyne, and of Lavyne
 And alle the walles with colours fyne Were peynted, bothe text and glose, Of al the Romaunce of the Rose
 My wyndowes were shette echon, 335
 And throug the glas the sonne shon Upon my bed with bryghte bemes,
 With many glade glide stremes,
 And eke the welken was so fair, — Blew, bryght, clere was the ayr, 340 And ful attempre for sothe hyt was,
 For nother to cold nor hoot yt nas, Ne in al the welken was no clowde
 And as I lay thus, wonder lowde Me thought I herde an hunte blowe 345
 T'assay hys horn, and for to knowe Whether hyt were clere or hors of soun
 And I herde goyng, bothe up and doun, Men, hors, houndes, and other thyng,
 And al men speken of huntynge, 350 How they wolde slee the hert with strengthe,
 And how the hert had, upon lengthe,
 So moche embosed, y not now what Anoon ryght, whan I herde that, How that they wolde on huntynge
 goon, 355
 I was ryght glad, and up anoon Took my hors, and forth I wente
 Out of my chambre, I never stente Til I com to the feld withoute

Ther overtok y a gret route Of huntes and eke of foresteres, With many relayes and lymeres, And hyed hem to the forest faste And I with hem So at the laste I asked oon, ladde a lymere "Say, felowe, who shal hunte here?" Hys sorwful hert gan faste faynte,
And his spirites wexen dede,
The blood was fled for pure drede 490 Doun to hys herte, to make hym warm —
For wel hyt feled the herte had harm —
To wite eke why hyt was adrad
By kynde, and for to make hyt glad,
For hit ys membre principal 495
Of the body, and that made al Hys hewe chaunge and wexe grene
And pale, for ther noo blood ys sene
In no maner lym of hys Anoon therwith whan y sawgh this, 500
He ferde thus evel there he set,
I went and stood ryght at his fet,
And grette hym, but he spak noght,
But argued with his owne thought,
And in hys wyt disputed faste 505
Why and how hys lyf myght laste, Hym thoughte hys sorwes were so smerte
And lay so colde upon hys herte
So, throgh hys sorwe and hevy thought, Made hym that he herde me noght, 510
For he had wel nygh lost hys mynde, Thogh Pan, that men clepe god of kynde,
Were for hys sorwes never so wroth
But at the last, to sayn ryght soth,
He was war of me, how y stood 515 Before hym, and did of myn hood,
- And had ygret hym, as I best koude, Debonayrly, and nothyng lowde,
He sayde, "I prey the, be not wroth
I herde the not, to seyn the soth, 520 Ne I sawgh the not, syr, trewely,"
"A, goode sir, no fors," quod y,
"I am ryght sory yf I have ought Destroubled yow out of your thought Foryve me, yf I have mystake " 525
"Yis, th'amendes is lyght to make," Quod he, "for ther lyeth noon therto, There ys nothyng myssayd nor do "
Loo! how goodly spak thys knyght,
As hit had be another wyght, 530
He made hyt nouthr towgh ne queynte
And I saw that, and gan me aqueynte With hym, and fond hym so tretable, Ryght wonder skylful and resonable,
As me thoghte, for al hys bale 535
Anoon ryght I gan fynde a tale To hym, to loke wher I myght ought Have more knowyng of hys thought
"Sir," quod I, "this game is doon
I holde that this hert be goon, 540 These huntis konne hym nowher see "
"Y do no fors therof," quod he,
"My thought ys theron never a del "
"By oure Lord," quod I, "y trow yow wel, Ryght so me thynketh by youre chere 545
But, sir, oo thyng wol ye here?
Me thynketh in gret sorowe I yow see But certes, sire, yf that yee Wolde ought discure me youre woo,
I wolde, as wys God helpe me soo, 550 Amende hyt, yf I kan or may Ye mowe preve hyt be assay,
For, by my trouthe, to make yow hool,
I wol do al my power hool
And telleth me of your sorwes smerte, 555 Paraunter hyt may ese youre herte,
That semeth ful sek under your syde "
With that he loked on me asyde, As who sayth, "Nay, that wol not be "
"Graunt mercy, goode frend," quod he, 560
"I thanke thee that thou woldest soo,
But hyt may never the rather be doo No man may my sorwe glade,
That maketh my hewe to falle and fade,
And hath myn understondyng lorn, 565
That me ys wo that I was born!
May noght make my sorwes slyde, Nought al the remedies of Ovyde,

- Ne Orpheus, god of melodey, Ne Dedalus with his playes slye, 570
 Ne hele me may no phisicien, Noght Ypocras, ne Galyen, Me ys wo that I lyve houres twelve
 But whooso wol assay hymselfe Whether his hert kan have pitee 575
 Of any sorwe, lat hym see me
 Y wreche, that deth hath mad al naked
 Of al the blysse that ever was maked, Yworthe worste of alle wyghtes,
 That hate my dayes and my nyghtes' 580
 My lyf, my lustes, be me loothe,
 For al welfare and I be wroothe
 The pure deth ys so ful my foo
 That I wolde deye, hyt wolde not soo,
 For whan I folwe hyt, hit wol flee, 585
 I wolde have hym, hyt nyl nat me
 This ys my peyne wythoute red, Always deyng and be not ded,
 That Cesiphus, that lyeth in helle,
 May not of more sorwe telle, 590
 And whoso wiste al, by my trouthe,
 My sorwe, but he hadde rowthe
 And pitee of my sorwes smerte,
 That man hath a fendly herte,
 For whoso seeth me first on morwe 595
 May seyn he hath met with sorwe, For y am sorwe, and sorwe ys y
 "Allas! and I wol tel the why My song ys turned to pleyngyng,
 And al my laughtre to wepyng, 600
 My glade thoghtes to hevynesse, In travayle ys myn ydelnesse
 And eke my reste, my wele is woo, My good ys harm, and evermoo In wraþhe ys turned my pleyng 605
 And my delyt into sorwyng Myn hele ys turned into seknesse, In drede ys al my sykernesse,
 To derke ys turned al my lyght,
 My wyt ys foly, my day ys nyght, 610
 My love ys hate, my slep wakyng,
 My myrthe and meles ys fastyng,
 My countenance ys nycete,
 And al abaved, where so I be,
 My pees, in pledyng and in werre 615 Allas! how myghte I fare werre?
 My boldnesse ys turned to shame,
 For fals Fortune hath pleyd a game Atte ches with me, allas! the while!
 The trayteresse fals and ful of gyle, 620
- That al behoteth, and nothyng halt,
 She goth upryght and yet she halt,
 That baggeth foule and loketh faire,
 The dispitouse debonaire,
 That skorneth many a creature! 625
 An ydole of fals portrayture Ys she, for she wol sone wrien,
 She is the monstres hed ywrien,
 As fylthe over-ystrawed with fioures Hir moste worshippe and hir flour ys 630
 To lyen, for that ys hyr nature Wythoute feyth, lawe, or mesure
 She ys fals, and ever lauhyng With oon eye, and that other wepyng That ys broght up, she set al doun 635
 I lykne hyr to the scorpoun,
 That ys a fals, flateryng beste,
 For with his hed he maketh feste,
 But al amydde hys flateryng
 With hys tayle he wol styng 640 And envynyme, and so wol she She ys th'envyouse charite That ys ay fals, and semeth wel,
 So turneth she hyr false whel Aboute, for hyt ys nothyng stable, 645
 Now by the fire, now at table
 For many oon hath she thus yblent
 She ys pley of enchauntement, That semeth oon and ys not soo
 The false thef! what hath she doo, 650 Trowest thou? Bv oure Lord I wol the
 seye
 At the ches with me she gan to pleye
 With hir false draughtes dyvers
 She staal on me, and tok my fers
 And whan I sawgh my fers awaye, 655 Allas! I kouthe no lenger playe, But seyde, 'Farewel, swete, ywys,
 And farewel al that ever ther ys!
 Therwith Fortune seyde 'Chek her!'
 And 'Mat!' in myd poynt of the chekker,
 With a poun errant, allas! 661 Ful craftier to pley she was Than Athalus, that made the game
 First of the ches, so was hys name But God wolde I had oones or twyes 665 Ykoud and knowe the jeupardyes That kowde the Grek Prithagores!
 I shulde have pleyd the bet at ches,
 And kept my fers the bet therby
 And thogh wherto? for trewely 670
 I holde that wylsh nat worth a stree!

- Hyt had be never the bet for me
 For Fortune kan so many a wyle, Ther be but fewe kan hir begile,
 And eke she ys the lasse to blame, 675 Myself I wolde have do the same, Before God, hadde I ben as she,
 She oghte the more excused be
 For this I say yet more therto, Had I be God and myghte have do 680
 My wille, whan she my fers kaughte,
 I wolde have drawe the same draughte For, also wys God yive me reste,
 I dar wel swere she took the beste
 But through that draughte I have lorn
 My blysse, alas! that I was born! 686
 For evermore, y trowe trewly,
 For al my wille, my lust holly Ys turned, but yet, what to doone?
 Be oure Lord, hyt ys to deye soone 690
 For nothyng I leve hyt noght,
 But lyve and deye ryght in this thocht,
 For there nys planete in firmament, Ne in ayr ne in erthe noon element,
 That they ne yive me a yifte echone 695
 Of wepyng whan I am allone For whan that I avise me wel,
 And bethenke me every del,
 How that ther lyeth in rekenyng,
 In my sorwe, for nothyng, 700
 And how ther leveth no gladnesse May glade me of my distresse,
 And how I have lost suffisance,
 And therto I have no plesance, Than may I say I have ryght noght 705
 And whan al this falleth in my thocht, Allas! than am I overcome!
 For that ys doon ys not to come I have more sorowe than Tantale "
- And whan I herde hym tel thys tale 710 Thus pitously, as I yow telle, Unnethe myght y lenger dwelle, Hyt dyde myn herte so moche woo
 "A, goode sir," quod I, "say not soo!
 Have som pitee on your nature 715
 That formed yow to creature Remembre yow of Socrates,
 For he ne counted nat thre strees Of noght that Fortune koude doo "
 "No," quod he, "I kan not soo " 720
 "Why so? syr, yis parde!" quod y,
 "Ne say noght soo, for trewely, Thogh ye had lost the ferses twelve,
 And ye for sorwe mordred yourselfe, Ye sholde be dampned in this cas 725
 By as good ryght as Medea was,
 That slough hir children for Jasoun, And Phyllis also for Demophoun Heng herself, so weylaway!
 For he had broke his terme-day 730
 To come to hir Another rage Had Dydo, the quene eke of Cartage, That slough herself, for Eneas Was fals, which a fool she was!
 And Ecquo died, for Narcisus 735 Nolde nat love hir, and ryght thus Hath many another foly doon,
 And for Dalida died Sampson,
 That slough hymself with a pilcr
 But ther is no man alyve her 740 Wolde for a fers make this woo!"
 "Why so?" quod he, "hyt ys nat soo Thou worst ful lytel what thou menest, I have lost more than thou wenest "
 "Loo, [sey] how that may be?" quod y,
 "Good sir, telle me al hooly 746
 In what wyse, how, why, and wherefore That ye have thus youre blysse lore "
 "Blythely," quod he, "com sytte adoun!
 I telle the upon a condicoun 750
 That thou shalt hooly, with al thy wyrt, Doo thyn entent to herkene hit "
 "Yis, syr " "Swere thy trouthe therto "
 "Gladly " "Do thanne holde hereto!"
 "I shal ryght blythely, so God me save, 755 Hooly, with al the wit I have, Here yow, as wel as I kan "
 "A Goddes half!" quod he, and began
 "Syr," quod he, "sith first I kouthe Have any maner wyrt fro youthe, 760
 Or kyndely understandyng
 To comprehende, in any thyng, What love was, in myn owne wyrt, Dredeles, I have ever yit Be tributarye and yiven rente 765
 To Love, hooly with good entente, And throgh plesaunce become his thral
 With good wille, body, hert, and al
 Al this I putte in his servage, As to my lord, and dide homage, 770 And ful devoutly I prayed hym to,
 He shulde besette myn herte so That hyt plesance to hym were,
 And worship to my lady dere
 "And this was longe, and many a yer,

Or that myn herte was set owher,	776	Of stature, and of wel set gladnesse,
That I dide thus, and nyste why,		Of goodlyhede so wel beseye —
I trowe hit cam me kyndely		Shortly, what shal y more seye?	830
Paraunter I was therto most able,		By God, and by his halwes twelwe,
As a whit wal or a table,	780	Hyt was my swete, ryght as hirselve
For hit ys redy to cacche and take		She had so stedfast countenance,
Al that men wil theryn make,		So noble port and meyntenance
Whethir so men wil portreye or peynte,		And Love, that had wel herd my boone,
Be the werkes never so queynte		Had espyed me thus soone,	836
“And thilke tyme I ferde ryght so,	785	That she ful sone, in my thought,
I was able to have lerned tho,		As helpe me God, so was ykaught
And to have kend as wel or better,		So sodenly, that I ne tok
Paraunter, other art or letre,		No maner counseyl but at hir lok	840
But for love cam first in my thought,		And at myn herte, for-why hir eyen
Therefore I forgat hyt noght	790	So gladly, I trow, myn herte seyen,
I ches love to my firste craft,		That purely tho myn owne thought
Therefore hit ys with me laft		Seyde hit were beter serve hir for noght
For-why I tok hyt of so yong age		Than with another to be wel	845
That malyce hadde my corage		And hyt was soth, for everydel
Nat that tyme turned to nothyng	795	I wil anoon ryght telle thee why
Thorgh to mochel knowlechyng		“I sawgh hyr daunce so comlyly,
For that tyme Yowthe, my maistresse,		Carole and synge so swetely,
Governed me in ydelnesse,		Laughe and pleye so womanly,	850
For hyt was in my firste youthe,		And loke so debonairly,
And thoo ful lytel good y couthe,	800	So goodly speke and so frendly,
For al my werkes were flyttinge		That, certes, y trowe that evermor
That tyme, and al my thought varynge		Nas seyn so blysful a tresor
Al were to me ylyche good		For every heer on hir hed,	855
That I knew thoo, but thus hit stood		Soth to seyne, hyt was not red,
“Hit happed that I cam on a day	805	Ne nouter yelowe, ne broun hyt nas,
Into a place ther that I say,		Me thoghte most lyk gold hyt was Trewly, the fayrest companye		And whiche eyen my lady hadde!
Of ladies that evere man with ye		Debonaire, goode, glade, and sadde,	860
Had seen togedres in oo place		Symple, of good mochel, noght to wyde
Shal I clepe hyt hap other grace?	810	Therto hir look nas not asyde,
That broght me there? Nay, but Fortune,		Ne overthwert, but beset so wel
That ys to lyen ful comune,		Hyt drew and took up, everydel,
The false trayteresse pervers!		Al that on hir gan beholde	865
God wolde I koude clepe hir wers!		Hir eyen semed anoon she wolde
For now she worceth me ful woo,	815	Have mercy, fooles wenden soo,
And I wol telle sone why soo		But hyt was never the rather doo “Among these ladies thus echon,		Hyt nas no countrefeted thyng,
Soth to seyen y sawgh oon		Hyt was hir owne pure loking	870
That was lyk noon of the route,		That the goddessse, dame Nature,
For I dar swere, withoute doute,	820	Had mad hem opene by mesure,
That as the someres sonne bryght		And close, for, were she never so glad,
Ys fairer, clerer, and hath more lyght		Hyr lokinge was not foly sprad,
Than any other planete in heven,		Ne wildly, thogh that she pleyde,	875
The moone, or the sterres seven,		But ever, me thought, hir eyen seyde,
For al the world so hadde she,	825	‘Be God, my wrathe ys al foryve!’
Surmounted hem alle of beaute,		“Therwith hir lyste so wel to lyve,
Of maner, and of comlynesse,		That dulnesse was of hir adrad.

- She nas to sobre ne to glad, 880
 In alle thynges more mesure Had never, I trowe, creature
 But many oon with hire lok she herte,
 And that sat hyr ful lyte at herte,
 For she knew nothyng of her thought, 885
 But whether she knew, or knew it nowght, Algate she ne roughte of hem a stree!
 To gete her love no ner nas he That woned at hom, than he in Ynde,
 The formest was alway behynde 890
 But goode folk, over al other,
 She loved as man may do hys brother,
 Of which love she was wonder large,
 In skilful places that bere charge
 "But which a visage had she thertool!
 Allas! myn herte ys wonder tho 896
 That I ne kan discryven hyt!
 Me lakketh both Englyssh and wit
 For to undo hyt at the fulle,
 And eke my sprites be so dulle 900
 So gret a thyng for to devyse
 I have no wit that kan suffice To comprehendn hir beaute But thus moche dar I sayn, that she Was whit, rody, fressh, and lyvely hewed,
 And every day hir beaute newed 906
 And negh hir face was alderbest, For certes, Nature had swich lest To make that fair, that trewly she Was hir chef patron of beaute 910
 And chef ensample of al hir werk,
 And moustre, for be hyt never so derk, Me thynketh I se hir ever moo
 And yet moreover, thogh alle thoo That ever lvede were now alyve, 915 Ne sholde have founde to discryve Yn al hir face a wikked sygne,
 For hit was sad, symple, and benygne
 "And which a goodly, softe speche Had that swete, my lyves leche! 920
 So frendly, and so wel ygrounded, Up al resoun so wel yfounded,
 And so tretable to alle goode
 That I dar swere wel by the roode,
 Of eloquence was never founde 925
 No swete a sownynge facounde, Ne trewer tonged, ne skorned lasse, Ne bet koude hele — that, by the masse
 I durste swere, thogh the pope hit songe, That ther was never yet through hir
 tonge 930
- Man ne woman gretly harmed,
 As for her [ther] was al harm hyd — Ne lasse flaterynge in hir word,
 That purely hir symple record Was founde as trewe as any bond, 935
 Or trouthe of any mannes hond Ne chyde she koude never a del,
 That knoweth al the world ful wel
 "But swich a fairnesse of a nekke Had that swete that boon nor brekke 940 Nas ther non sene that myssat Hyt was whit, smothe, streght, and pure flat, Wythouten hole, or canel-boon,
 As be semynge, had she noon Hyr throte, as I have now memoyre, 945 Semed a round tour of yvoyre, Of good gretnesse, and noight to gret
 "And goode faire White she het, That was my lady name ryght
 She was bothe fair and bryght, 950
 She hadde not hir name wrog Ryght faire shuldres and body long
 She had, and armes, every lyth Fattyssh, fleshy, not gret therwith, Ryght white handes, and nayles rede, 955 Rounde brestes, and of good brede Hyr hippes were, a streight flat bak
 I knew on hir noon other lak
 That al hir lymmes nere pure sewynge
 In as fer as I had knowynge 960
 "Therto she koude so wel pleye, Whan that hir lyste, that I dar seye,
 That she was lyk to torche bryght
 That every man may take of lyght Ynogh, and hyt hath never the lesse 965
 Of maner and of comlynesse Ryght so ferde my lady dere,
 For every wight of hir manere Myght cacche ynogh, yif that he wolde, Yif he had eyen hir to beholde 970 For I dar swere wel, yif that she Had among ten thousand be,
 She wolde have be, at the leste,
 A chef myroure of al the feste, Thogh they had stonden in a rowe, 975
 To mennes eyen that koude have knowe For wher-so men had pleyd or waked, Me thoughte the felawsshyppe as naked Withouten hir, that sawgh I oones,
 As a corowne withoute stones 980 Trewly she was, to myn ye,

The soleyн fenix of Arabye,
 For ther lvyth never but oon, Ne swich as she ne knowe I noon
 "To speke of godnesse, trewly she 985 Had as moche debonaire
 As ever had Hester in the Bible,
 And more, yif more were possyble And, soth to seyne, therwythal
 She had a wyt so general, 990
 So hool enclyned to alle goode, That al hir wyt was set, by the rode,
 Withoute malyce, upon gladnesse,
 And therto I saugh never yet a lesse Harmful than she was in doynge 995
 I sey nat that she ne had kynwng That harm was, or elles she Had koud no good, so thinketh me
 "And trewly, for to speke of trouthe, But she had had, hyt hadde be routhe Therof she had so moche hyr del — 1001
 And I dar seyn and swere hyt wel — That Trouthe hymself, over al and al Had chose hys maner principal In hir, that was his restyng place 1005 Therto she hadde the moste grace,
 To have stedefast perseveraunce,
 And esy, atempre governaunce,
 That ever I knew or wyste yit,
 So pure suffraunt was hir wyt 1010
 And reson gladly she understood, Hyt folowed wel she koude good She used gladly to do wel,
 These were hir maners everydel
 "Therwath she loved so wel ryght, 1015
 She wrong do wolde to no wyght
 No wyght myghte do hir noo shame,
 She loved so wel hir owne name Hyr lust to holde no wyght in honde, Ne, be thou siker, she wolde not fonde
 To holde no wyght in balauce 1021
 By half word ne by countenaunce,
 But if men wolde upon hir lye, Ne sende men into Walakye,
 To Pruyse, and into Tartarye, 1025
 To Alyssaundre, ne into Turkye, And byd hym faste anon that he Goo hoodles to the Drye Se
 And come hom by the Carrenar,
 And seye 'Sir, be now ryght war 1030
 That I may of yow here seyn Worshyp, or that ye come ageyn!
 She ne used no suche knakkes smale

"But wherfore that y telle my tale?
 Ryght on thys same, as I have seyde, 1035
 Was hooly al my love leyde,
 For certes she was, that swete wif,
 My suffisaunce, my lust, my lyf, Myn hap, myn hele, and al my blesse,
 My wordles welfare, and my goddesse, 1040
 And I hooly hires and everydel" "By oure Lord," quod I, "y trowe yow
 wel'
 Hardely, your love was wel beset,
 I not how ye myghte have do bet"
 "Bet? ne no wyght so wel," quod he 1045
 "Y trowe hyt, sir" quod I, "parde!"
 "Nay, leve hyt wel!" "Sire, so do I, I leve yow wel, that trewely Yow thoghte that she was the beste,
 And to beholde the alderfayreste, 1050 Whoso had loked hir with your eyen"
 "With myn? nay, alle that hir seyen Seyde and sworn hyt was soo And thogh they ne hadde, I wolde thoo Have loved best my lady free, 1055 Thogh I had had al the beaute That ever had Alcipyades,
 And al the strengthe of Ercules,
 And therto had the worthynesse Of Alysaundre, and al the rychesse 1060
 That ever was in Babyloyne, In Cartage, or in Maceoynne, Or in Rome, or in Nynnyve, And therto also hardy be
 As was Ector, so have I joye, 1065
 That Achilles slough at Troye —
 And therfore was he slayn alsoo
 In a temple, for bothe twoo Were slayne, he and Antylegyus,
 And so seyth Dares Frygius, 1070
 For love of Polxena — Or ben as wis as Mynerva, I wolde ever, withoute drede,
 Have loved hir, for I moste nede
 'Nede!' nay, trewly, I gabbe now, 1075 Noght 'nede,' and I wol tellen how,
 For of good wille myn herte hyt wolde,
 And eke to love hir I was holde
 As for the fairest and the beste
 She was as good, so have I reste, 1080
 As ever was Penelopee of Grece, Or as the noble wif Lucrece, That was the beste — he telleth thus,
 The Romayn, Tytus Lyvyus —

- She was as good, and nothyng lyk, 1085 Thogh hir stories be autentyk, Algate she was as trewe as she
 "But wherfore that I telle thee Whan I first my lady say?
 I was ryght yong, soth to say, 1090
 And ful gret nede I hadde to lerne, Whan my herte wolde yerne
 To love, hyt was a gret empryse
 But as my wyt koude best suffise, After my yonge childly wyt, 1095 Withoute drede, I besette hyt
 To love hir in my beste wyse,
 To do hir worship and the servise
 That I koude thoo, be my trouthe, Withoute feynynge outhr slouthe, 1100
 For wonder feyn I wolde hir se
 So mochel hyt amended me
 That, whan I saugh hir first a-morwe,
 I was warished of al my sorwe
 Of al day after, til hyt were eve, 1105 Me thoghte nothyng myghte me greve,
 Were my sorwes never so smerte
 And yet she syt so in myn herte,
 That, by my trouthe, y nolde nocht,
 For al thys world, out of my thought 1110 Leve my lady, noo, trewely!"
 "Now, by my trouthe, sir!" quod I,
 "Me thynketh ye have such a chaunce
 As shryfte wythoute repentaunce"
 "Repentaunce! nay, fy!" quod he, 1115
 "Shulde y now repente me To love? nay, certes, than were I wel Wers than was Achtofel, Or Anthenor, so have I joye,
 The traytor that betrayed Troye, 1120
 Or the false Genelloun,
 He that purchased the tresoun Of Rowland and of Olyver Nay, while I am alyve her,
 I nyl foryete hir never moo" 1125
 "Now, goode syre," quod I thoo,
 "Ye han wel told me herebefore, Hyt ys no nede to reherse it more, How ye sawe hir first, and where

Explicit the Bok of the Duchesse

THE HOUSE OF FAME

THERE was probably a considerable interval between the composition of the Book of the Duchess and that of the House of Fame. Indeed the usual opinion has placed the House of Fame among the later of the minor poems, after the Troilus and not long before the Legend of Good Women. But there are sound reasons for questioning this date, and no decisive considerations in its support. The only positive evidence of the time of composition is furnished by Chaucer's reference to his daily "reckonings," which fixes the limit between 1374 and 1385, when he was controller of customs. For a more definite assignment within this period scholars have resorted to the interpretation of the poem itself. Allegorical explanations of its purpose and occasion, of which several have been proposed, are all very uncertain, and there remain only general literary considerations to fix the place of the poem in the sequence of Chaucer's writings.

In metrical form and literary type the House of Fame belongs with the Book of the Duchess. The device of the love-vision Chaucer continued to use until his later years, when he wrote and revised the Legend of Good Women. But he did not employ the octosyllabic couplet in any poem probably written after 1380, unless the House of Fame itself be an instance. As compared with the Book of the Duchess, the House of Fame shows a marked advance in technical mastery of style and meter. In both works the verse has something of the roughness or irregularity of the traditional English accentual type, but in the House of Fame it has become a freer instrument of expression. That poem also reveals much wider reading, and in particular the beginnings of Italian influence. Still there appears to be no reason why it should not be regarded as an early production. In it, as in the tragedies which were incorporated as the Monk's Tale in the Canterbury series, Chaucer draws upon Dante, who would very naturally have been the first Italian author to engage his attention. And the House of Fame is strikingly free from the influence of Boccaccio's long narrative poems, which so pervaded Chaucer's work in the decade of the eighties. Moreover, the undeniable independence, the experimental character, of the poem, though a mark of advancing craftsmanship, does not compel us to put it after the Parliament of Fowls, or even the Anelida. In view of all these considerations the House of Fame is here placed next to the Book of the Duchess, as the first specimen, among the longer works, of Chaucer's Italian period.

The poem, as already implied, is of a definitely transitional character. In structure a love-vision, it has many of the regular features of the type. It probably owes something to particular French visions such as Froissart's Paradys d'Amours and Temple d'Onnour and La Panthere d'Amours of Nicole de Margival. But no source or model has been found to which it is so much indebted as was the Book of the Duchess to the Jugement du Roy de Behaigne. And the dream convention is handled with great freedom and made the vehicle of many ideas quite remote from the usual allegories of love. Not only does Chaucer include a summary of the Æneid (which, because of the story of Dido, is appropriate enough in a love-vision), but he draws also upon several works of Ovid, upon the Somnium Scipionis, and upon mediæval Latin poets, historians, and men of science, and he makes so much use of Dante that the poem has been regarded — unjustifiably, to be sure — as an imitation of the Divine Comedy. The product of all these ingredients is a humorous, original, but rather heterogeneous work. For, though the thought of love is not lost sight of, and the purpose of the vision is declared to be that the poet may receive "tidings of Love's folk," yet the center of interest certainly shifts from the affairs of love to the vicissitudes of fame. Indeed by reason of this interest the House of Fame has been said to mark the transition from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance, and Chaucer has been hailed as a modern man. But his concern with the behavior of Fame and the circumstances of human reputation is something different from the craving for worldly immortality which is held, rightly or wrongly, to have distinguished the men of the Renaissance.

The primary purpose of the dream, if we may trust the words of the poem itself, was that Chaucer might be snatched away from the monotonous routine of his daily life and carried to the houses of Fame and Rumor, where he could hear tidings of love. This may be a sufficient motive and explanation of the work. But we never discover what the tidings were to be, and matters of love, as has been already remarked, by no means dominate the poem. Interpreters have consequently tried to read between the lines and find allegorical meanings related either to Chaucer's own life or to occasions in the life of his friends. According to autobiographical explanations, which long prevailed, Chaucer meant the poem to express his discontent with his dull and humble routine, or with his failure to win fame and recognition. Some have even seen in it a begging misrive, addressed to those who might give him money or advancement. The expounders of the autobiographical allegory have been much influenced by parallels with the Divine Comedy, the importance of which has been overestimated, and their interpretations are at best very arbitrary. Of late these theories have fallen somewhat out of fashion, and in their place have been urged applications to various events at court. The tidings which Chaucer was to hear have been taken to refer to the marriage of Richard and Anne, or to the expected betrothal of Philippa, the daughter of John of Gaunt. Such explanations derive a certain support from the mention of the "man of gret auctoritee" at the end of the poem. But no good evidence has been found for the particular applications proposed, and if Chaucer had such an event in mind it seems likely to remain undiscovered. Professor Manly, relinquishing altogether the search for a definite historical occasion, has suggested that the tidings were to be a series of tales, and the House of Fame was Chaucer's first attempt at a frame-story, which he abandoned for the Legend of Good Women and the Canterbury Tales. In spite of the popularity of the form and the variety of devices employed for enclosing tales within a tale, Mr. Manly's supposition is rather improbable in the case of the House of Fame. Certainly if Chaucer meant it as an introduction to a series of stories he allowed it to run to disproportionate length, and his reference to "this litel laste bok" (l. 1093) implies that he had no such continuation in mind. Perhaps the unknown tidings were to be as briefly related as the final tragic disclosure of the Black Knight in the Book of the Duchess.

Taken as it stands, without any allegorical interpretation or conjectured completion, the fragmentary House of Fame is a most entertaining specimen of the visions of which so many were written in Chaucer's time. It, when compared with the great tales of Chaucer's later years, it lacks the deeper interest of narrative and characterization, that is one reason for believing it to have been an early work. It is drawn, too, rather from books than from life. But it is rich in fancy, thought, and humor — the humor of situation and bright retort. It presents at least one comic character, the eagle, whose conversational powers are not unworthy of comparison with those of Chauntecleer. And, as a whole, it gives a lively impression of the intellectual interests of Chaucer and his contemporaries.

BOOK I

Proem

God turne us every drem to goode!
 For hyt is wonder, be the roode,
 To my wyt, what causeth swevenes Eyther on morwes or on evenes,
 And why th'effect folweth of somme, 5
 And of somme hit shal never come, Why that is an avisioun
 And this a revelacioun,
 Why this a drem, why that a sweven,
 And noght to every man lyche even, 10
 Why this a fantome, why these oracles,
 I not, but whoso of these miracles
 The causes knoweth bet then I, Devyne he, for I certainly Ne kan hem noght, ne never thinke 15
 To besly my wyt to swinke,
 To knowe of hur signifaunce
 The gendres, neyther the distaunce Of tymes of hem, ne the causes, Or why thus more then that cause is, 20
 As yf folkys complexions Make hem dreme of reflexions, Or ellys thus, as other sayn,
 For to gret feblenesse of her brayn,
 By abstinence, or by seknesse, 25 Prison, stewe, or gret distresse, Or ellys by dysordynaunce Of naturel acustumaunce, That som man is to curious In studye, or melancolyous, 30 Or thus, so inly ful of drede, That no man may hym bote bede,
 Or elles that devocion
 Of somme, and contemplacion Causeth suche dremes ofte, 35
 Or that the cruel lyf unsofte Which these ilke lovers leden That hopen over-muche or dreden,
 That purely her impressions Causen hem to have visions, 40
 Or yf that sprites have the myght
 To make folk to dreme a-nyght,
 Or yf the soule, of propre kynde,
 Be so parfit, as men fynde,
 That yt forwot that ys to come, 45

And that hyt warneth alle and some Of everych of her aventures Be avisions, or be figures,
 But that oure flessch ne hath no myght
 To understonde hyt aryght, 50
 For hyt is warned to derkly, —
 But why the cause is, noght wot I Wel worthe, of this thyng, grete clerkys, That trete of this and other werkes,
 For I of noon opinion 55
 Nyl as now make mensyon,
 But only that the holy roode Turne us every drem to goode!
 For never, sith that I was born, Ne no man elles me beforne, 60
 Mette, I trowe stedfastly,
 So wonderful a drem as I
 The tenthe day now of Decembre,
 The which, as I kan now remembre,
 I wol yow tellen everydel 65

The Invocacion

But at my gynnyng, trusteth wel,
 I wol make invocacion,
 With special devocion,
 Unto the god of slep anoon,
 That duelleth in a cave of stoon 70
 Upon a strem that cometh fro Lete,
 That is a flood of helle unswete, Besyde a folk men clepeth Cymerie, —
 There slepeth ay this god unmerie
 With his slepy thousand sones, 75 That alwey for to slepe hir wone is
 And to this god, that I of rede, Prey I that he wol me spede
 My sweven for to telle aryght, Yf every drem stonde in his myght 80
 And he that mover ys of al
 That is and was and ever shal,
 So yive hem joye that hyt here
 Of alle that they dreme to-yere,
 And for to stonden alle in grace 85
 Of her loves, or in what place
 That hem were levest for to stonde,
 And shelde hem fro poverte and shonde,
 And from unhap and ech diseese,

And sende hem al that may hem plese, 90
 That take hit wel and skorne hyt nocht, Ne hyt mysdemen in her thought Thorgh malicuous entencion
 And whoso thorgh presumption, Or hate, or skorn, or thorgh envye, 95 Dispit, or jape, or vilanye, Mysdeme hyt, pray I Jesus God
 That (dreme he barefot, dreme he shod),
 That every harm that any man Hath had, syth the world began, 100 Befalle hym therof, or he sterve,
 And graunte he mote hit ful deserve, Lo, with such a conclusion
 As had of his avision Cresus, that was kyng of Lyde, 105
 That high upon a gebet dyde!
 This prayer shal he have of me,
 I am no bet in charyte!
 Now herkeneth, as I have yow seyde,
 What that I mette, or I abreyde 110

Story

Of Decembre the tenthe day, Whan hit was nyght, to slepe I lay Ryght ther as I was wont to done,
 And fil on slepe wonder sone,
 As he that wery was forgo 115
 On pilgrymage myles two To the corseynt Leonard,
 To make lythe of that was hard But as I slepte, me mette I was Withyn a temple ymad of glas, 120
 In which ther were moo ymages Of gold, stondyng in sondry stages,
 And moo ryche tabernacles,
 And with perre moo pynacles, 125
 And moo curiose portreytures,
 And queynte maner of figures Of olde werk, then I saugh ever For certeynly, I nyste never Wher that I was, but wel wyste I, Hyt was of Venus redely, 130
 The temple, for in portreyture,
 I sawgh anoon-ryght hir figure Naked fletyng in a see
 And also on hir hed, pardee, 135
 Hir rose garlond whit and red,
 And hir comb to kembe hyr hed, Hir dowves, and daun Cupido, Hir blynde sone, and Vulcano,

That in his face was ful broun
 But as I romed up and doun, 140
 I fond that on a wall ther was Thus writen on a table of bras
 "I wol now singen, yif I kan,
 The armes, and also the man
 That first cam, thurgh his destinee, 145 Fugityf of Troy contree,
 In Itayle, with ful moche pyne Unto the strondes of Lavyne"
 And tho began the story anoon,
 As I shal telle yow echon 150
 First sawgh I the destruction Of Troye, thurgh the Grek Synon, [That] with his false forswerynge,
 And his chere and his lesyng,
 Made the hors broght into Troye, 155 Thorgh which Troyens loste al her joye
 And aftir this was grave, allas!
 How Ilyon assayled was
 And wonne, and kyng Priam yslayn
 And Polytes, his sone, certayn, 160 Disputously, of daun Pirrus
 And next that sawgh I how Venus, Whan that she sawgh the castel brende, Doun fro the heven gan descende,
 And bad hir sone Eneas flee, 165 And how he fledde, and how that he Escaped was from al the pres,
 And took his fader, Anchises,
 And bar hym on hys bak away, Cryng, "Allas! and welaway!" 170
 The whiche Anchises in hys hond Bar the goddes of the lond, Tilke that unbrende were
 And I saugh next, in al thys fere, How Creusa, daun Eneas wif, 175
 Which that he lovede as hys lyf,
 And hir yonge sone Iulo,
 And eke Askanus also,
 Fledden eke with dreary chere,
 That hyt was pitee for to here, 180
 And in a forest, as they wente,
 At a turnyng of a wente,
 How Creusa was ylost, allas!
 That ded, not I how, she was,
 How he hir soughte, and how hir gost 185 Bad hym to flee the Grekes host,
 And seyde he moste unto Itayle,
 As was hys destinee, sauns faille,
 That hyt was pitee for to here
 When hir spirit gan appere, 190

The wordes that she to hym seyde,
 And for to kepe hir sone hym preyde Ther sawgh I graven eke how he,
 Hys fader eke, and his meynee,
 With hys shippes gan to saylle 195
 Towardes the contree of Itaylle As streight as that they myghte goo Ther saugh I thee, cruel Juno,
 That art daun Jupiteres wif,
 That hast yhated, al thy lyf, 200
 Al the Troianysshe blood, Renne and crye, as thou were wood,
 On Eolus, the god of wyndes,
 To blowen oute, of alle kyndes,
 So lowde that he shulde drenche 205
 Lord and lady, grom and wenche,
 Of al the Troian nacion, Withoute any savacion
 Ther saugh I such tempeste aryse,
 That every herte myght agryse 210
 To see hyt peynted on the wal Ther saugh I graven eke withal, Venus, how ye, my lady dere, Wepyng with ful woful chere, Prayen Jupiter on hye 215
 To save and kepe that navye
 Of the Troian Eneas, Syth that he hir sone was Ther saugh I Joves Venus kysse,
 And graunted of the tempest lysse 220
 Ther saugh I how the tempest stente,
 And how with alle pyne he wente,
 And prively tok arryvage
 In the contree of Cartage,
 And on the morwe, how that he 225
 And a knyght, highte Achate, Mette with Venus that day, Goyng in a queynt array,
 As she had ben an hunteresse,
 With wynd blowyng upon hir tresse, 230
 How Eneas gan hym to pleyne,
 When that he knew hir, of his peyne, And how his shippes dreynate were,
 Or elles lost, he nyste where,
 How she gan hym comforte thoo, 235
 And bad hym to Cartage goo,
 And ther he shulde his folk fynde,
 That in the see were left behynde
 And, shortly of this thyng to pace,
 She made Eneas so in grace 240
 Of Dido, queene of that contree, That, shortly for to tellen, she Becam hys love, and let him doc Al that weddyng longeth too

 What shulde I speke more queynte, 245
 Or peyne me my wordes peynte To speke of love? Hyt wol not be,
 I kan not of that faculte
 And eke to telle the manere
 How they aqueynteden in fere, 250 Hyt were a long proces to telle,
 And over-long for yow to dwelle Ther sawgh I grave how Eneas Tolde Dido every caas
 That hym was tyd upon the see 255
 And after grave was, how shee Made of hym shortly at oo word Hyr lyf, hir love, hir lust, hir lord,
 And dide hym al the reverence,
 And leyde on hym al the dispence, 260
 That any woman myghte do, Wenyng hyt had al be so
 As he hir swor, and herby demed
 That he was good, for he such semed Allas! what harm doth apparence, 265 Whan hit is fals in existence!
 For he to hir a traytour was,
 Wherefore she slow hirself, allas!
 Loo, how a woman doth amys,
 To love him that unknowen ys! 270
 For, be Cryste, lo, thus yt fareth, "Hyt is not al gold that glareth"
 For also browke I wel myn hed, Ther may be under godlyhed Kevered many a shrewed vice 275 Therfore be no wyght so nyce,
 To take a love oonly for chere,
 Or speche, or for frendly manere,
 For this shal every woman fynde,
 That som man, of his pure kynde, 280
 Wol shewen outward the fayreste, Tyl he have caught that what him leste,
 And thanne wol he causes fynde,
 And swere how that she ys unkynde,
 Or fals, or privy, or double was 285
 Al this seye I be Eneas
 And Dido, and hir nyce lest,
 That loved al to sone a gest, Therfore I wol seye a proverbe,
 That "he that fully knoweth th'erbe 290 May sauffy leye hyt to his ye", Withoute drede, this ys no lye
 But let us speke of Eneas, How he betrayed hir, allas!

- And lefte hir ful unkyndely 295
 So when she saw al utterly,
 That he wolde hir of trouthe fayle,
 And wende fro hir to Itayle, She gan to wringe hir hondes two "Allas!" quod she, "what me ys woo!" 300
 Allas! is every man thus trewe,
 That every yer wolde have a newe, Yf hit so longe tyme dure,
 Or elles three, peraventure?
 As thus of oon he wolde have fame 305
 In magnyfyng of hys name, Another for friendship, seyth he,
 And yet ther shal the thridde be That shal be take for delyt, Loo, or for synguler profit" 310
 In suche wordes gan to playne Dydo of hir grete peyne,
 As me mette redely, Non other auctour alegge I
 "Allas!" quod she, "my swete herte, 315
 Have pitee on my sorwes smerte,
 And slee mee not! goo noght away!
 O woful Dido, wel-away!"
 Quod she to hirselve thoo
 "O Eneas, what wol ye doo?" 320
 O that your love, ne your bond
 That ye have sworn with your ryght hond, Ne my crewel deth," quod she,
 "May holde yow stille here with me!
 O haveth of my deth pitee!" 325 Iwys, my dere herte, ye Knowen ful wel that never yit,
 As ferforth as I hadde wyt, Agylte [I] yow in thoght ne dede
 O, have ye men such godlyhede 330
 In speche, and never a del of trouthe?
 Allas, that ever hadde routhe Any woman on any man!
 Now see I wel, and telle kan,
 We wrecheded wymmen konne noon art,
 For certeyn, for the more part, 336
 Thus we be served everychone
 How sore that ye men konne groone, Anoon as we have yow receyved, Certaynly we ben deceyvyd!" 340
 For, though your love laste a seson, Wayte upon the conclusyon,
 And eke how that ye determynen,
 And for the more part diffynen
 "O, wel-away that I was born!" 345
 For thorgh yow is my name lorn,
- And alle myn actes red and songe Over al thys lond, on every tonge.
 O wikke Fame! for ther nys Nothing so swift, lo, as she is! 350
 O, soth ys, every thing ys wyst, Though hit be kevered with the myst Eke, though I myghte duren ever,
 That I have don, rekever I never,
 That I ne shal be seyde, allas, 355 Yshamed be thourgh Eneas, And that I shal thus juged be, — 'Loo, ryght as she hath don, now she Wol doo eft-sones, hardely,' Thus seyth the peple prively" 360
 But that is don, is not to done, Al hir compleynt ne al hir moone, Certeyn, awayleth hir not a stre And when she wiste sothly he Was forth unto his shippes goon, 365
 She into hir chambre wente anoon,
 And called on hir suster Anne,
 And gan hir to compleyne thanne,
 And seyde, that she cause was That she first loved him, allas! 370
 And thus counseyllid hir thertoo But what! when this was seyde and doo,
 She rof hirselve to the herte,
 And deyde thorgh the wounde smerte.
 And al the maner how she deyde, 375
 And alle the wordes that she seyde, Whoso to knowe hit hath purpos, Rede Virgile in Eneydos
 Or the Epistle of Ovyde,
 What that she wrot or that she dyde, 380
 And nere hyt to long to endyte, Be God, I wolde hyt here write
 But wel-away! the harm, the routhe,
 That hath betyd for such untrouthe,
 As men may ofte in bokes rede, 385
 And al day sen hyt yet in dede, That for to thynken hyt, a tene is Loo, Demophon, duk of Athenys, How he forswor hym ful falsly,
 And traysed Phillis wikkidly, 390
 That kynges doghtre was of Trace,
 And falsly gan hys terme pace,
 And when she wiste that he was fals,
 She heng hirselve ryght be the hals,
 For he had doon hir such untrouthe 395 Loo! was not this a woo and routhe?
 Eke lo! how fals and reccheles Was to Breseyda Achilles,

And Paris to Oenone, And Jason to Isphile,	400	Tho saugh I grave al the aryvayle That Eneas had in Itayle, And with kyng Latyne hys trettee And alle the batayles that hee Was at hymself, and eke hys knyghtis, Or he had al ywonne his ryghtis,	456
And eft Jason to Medea, And Ercules to Dyanra, For he left hir for Yole, That made hym cache his deth, parde	405	How fals eke was he Theseus, That, as the story telleth us, How he betrayed Adriane, The devel be hys soules bane!	460
For had he lawghed, had he loured, He moste have ben al devoured, Yf Adriane ne had ybe And, for she had of hym pite, She made hym fro the deth escape, And he made hir a ful fals jape, For aftur this, withyn a while,	410	How, mawgree Juno, Eneas, For al hir sleight and hir compas, Acheved al his aventure, For Jupiter took of hym cure At the prayer of Venus, —	465
He lefte hir slepyng in an ile Desert allone, ryght in the se, And stal away, and let hir be, And took hir suster Phedra thoo With him, and gan to shippe goo And yet he had yswore to here On al that ever he myghte swere, That, so she saved hym hys lyf, He wolde have take hir to hys wif, For she desired nothing ellis,	415	The whiche I preye alwey save us, And us ay of oure sorwes lyghte! When I had seen al this syghte In this noble temple thus, "A, Lord!" thoughte I, "that madest us, Yet sawgh I never such noblesse	471

Now herkeneth, every maner man
That Englissh understonde kan, 510
And listeneth of my drem to lere For now at erste shul ye here So sely an avisyon,
That Isaye, ne Scipion, Ne kyng Nabugodonosor, 515 Pharoo, Turnus, ne Elcanor, Ne mette such a drem as this'
Now faire blisfull, O Cipris,
So be my favour at this tyme!
And ye, me to endite and ryme 520 Helpeth, that on Parnaso duelle, Be Elicon, the clere welle O Thought, that wrot al that I mette,
And in the tresorye hyt shette
Of my brayn, now shal men se 525 Yf any vertu in the be,
To tellen al my drem aryght
Now kythe thyn engyn and myght!

The Dream

This egle, of which I have yow told,
That shon with fethres as of gold, 530
Which that so hye gan to sore,
I gan beholde more and more,
To se the beaute and the wonder,
But never was ther dynt of thonder, Ne that thyng that men calle foudre, 535
That smot somtyme a tour to powder,
And in his swifte comynge brende,
That so swithe gan descende
As this foul, when hyt beheld That I a-roume was in the feld, 540
And with hys grymme pawes stronge, Withyn hys sharpe nayles longe,
Me, fleyng, in a swap he hente,
And with hys sours ayen up wente,
Me caryng in his clawes starke 545
As lyghtly as I were a larke,

How high, I can not telle yow, For I cam up, y nyste how For so astonyed and asweved Was every vertu in my heved, 550
What with his sours and with my drede,
That al my felyng gan to dede,
For-whi hit was to gret affray Thus I longe in hys clawes lay, Til at the laste he to me spak 555
In mannes vois, and seyde, "Awak!
And be not agast so, for shame!"
And called me tho by my name,
And, for I shulde the bet abreyde, Me mette, "Awak," to me he seyde, 560
Ryght in the same vois and stevene That useth oon I koude nevene,
And with that vois, soth for to seyn,
My mynde cam to me ageyn,
For hyt was goodly seyde to me, 565
So nas hyt never wont to be And here-withal I gan to stere,
And he me in his fet to here,
Til that he felte that I had hete,
And felte eke tho myn herte bete 570
And thoo gan he me to disporte,
And with wordes to comforte,
And sayde twyes, "Seynte Marye!
Thou art noyous for to carye,
And nothyng nedeth it, pardee! 575
For, also wis God helpe me, As thou noon harm shalt have of this,
And this caas that betyd the is,
Is for thy lore and for thy prow, — Let see! darst thou yet loke now? 580
Be ful assured, boldely, I am thy frend" And therwith I Gan for to wondren in my mynde
"O God!" thoughte I, "that madest
kynde,
Shal I noon other weyes dye? 585
Wher Joves wol me stellyfye, Or what thing may this sygnifye?
I neyther am Ennok, ne Elye,

Ne Romulus, ne Ganymede, That was ybore up, as men rede,	590	Jupiter considereth this, And also, beau sir, other thynges, That is, that thou hast no tydynges Of Loves folk yf they be glade,	645
To hevene with daun Jupiter, And mad the goddys botiller "		Ne of noight elles that God made, And noight oonly fro fer centre
Loo, this was thoo my fantasye! But he that bar me gan espye		That ther no tydyng cometh to thee But of thy verray neyghbores,
That I so thoughte, and seyde this	595	That duellen almost at thy dores,	650
"Thow demest of thyself amys, For Joves ys not theraboute —		Thou herist neyther that ne this, For when thy labour doon al ys,
I dar wel putte the out of doute — To make of the as yet a sterre		And hast mad alle thy rekenynges, In stede of reste and newe thynges,
But er I bere the moche ferre,	600	Thou goost hom to thy hous anoon,	655
I wol the telle what I am, And whider thou shalt, and why I cam		And, also domb as any stoon, Thou stitest at another book
To do thys, so that thou take Good herte, and not for fere quake "		Tyl fully daswed ys thy look, And lyvest thus as an heremyte,
"Gladly," quod I "Now wel," quod he, First, I, that in my fet have the,	606	Although thyn abstynence ys lyte	660
Of which thou hast a fere and wonder, Am dwellynge with the god of thonder,		"And therfore Joves, thorgh hys grace, Wol that I bere the to a place
Which that men callen Jupiter, That dooth me flee ful ofte fer	610	Which that hight the Hous of Fame, To do the som disport and game,
To do al hys comaundement And for this cause he hath me sent		In som recompensacion	665
To the, now berke, be thy trouthe! Certeyn, he hath of the routhe,		Of labour and devocion, That thou hast had, loo causeles,
That thou so longe trewely Hast served so ententyfly	615	To Cupido, the rechcheles! And thus thus god, thorgh his merite,
Hys blynde newew Cupido, And faire Venus also,		Wol with som maner thing the quyte, So that thou wolt be of good chere	671
Withoute guerdon ever yit, And never-the-lesse hast set thy wit —	619	For truste wel that thou shalt here, When we be come ther I seye,
Although that in thy hed ful lyte is — To make bookys, songes, dytees,		Mo wonder thynges, dar I leye, And of Loves folk moo tydynges,	675
In ryme, or elles in cadence, As thou best canst, in reverence		Both sothe sawes and lesinges, And moo loves newe begonne,
Of Love, and of hys servantes eke,	625	And longe yserved loves wonne, And moo loves casuelly
That have hys servyse soght, and seke, And peynest the to preysse hys art,		That ben betyd, no man wot why,	680
Although thou haddest never part, Wherfore, also God me blesse,		But as a blynd man stert an hare, And more jolytee and fare,
Joves halt hyt gret humblesse,	630	While that they fynde love of stel, As thinketh hem, and over-al wel,
And vertu eke, that thou wolt make A-nyght ful ofte thyn hed to ake		Mo discordes, moo jelousies,	685
In thy studye, so thou writest, And ever mo of love enditest,		Mo murmures, and moo novelries, And moo dissymulacions,
In honour of hym and in preysynges,	635	And feyned reparacions, And moo berdys in two houres
And in his folkes furtherynges, And in hir matere al devisest,		Withoute rasour or sissoures	690
And noight hym nor his folk dispisest, Although thou maist goo in the daunce		Ymad, then greynes be of sondes And eke moo holdyng in hondes,
Of hem that hym lyst not avaunce.	340	And also moo renovelances Of olde forleten aqueyntances,
"Wherfore, as I seyde, ywys,

Mo love-dayes and acordes	695	Lyght thing upward, and downward charge
Then on instrumentes be cordes, And eke of loves moo eschaunges Then ever cornes were in graunges, — Unnethe maistow trowen this?"		And for this cause mayst thou see That every ryver to the see Enclyned ys to goo by kynde, And by theskilles, as I fynde,
Quod he "Noo, helpe me God so wys!"		Hath fyssh duellynge in flood and see,
Quod I "Noo? why?" quod he "For hyt	701	And trees eke in erthe bee Thus every thing, by thys reson, Hath his propre mansyng,
Were impossible, to my wit, Though that Fame had alle the pies In al a realme, and alle the spies, How that yet she shulde here al this,	705	To which hit seketh to repaire,
Or they espie hyt "O yis, yis!"		Ther-as hit shulde not apaire Loo, this sentence ys known kouth Of every philosophres mouth, As Aristotle and daun Platon, And other clerkys many oon,
Quod he to me, "that kan I preve Be reson worthy for to leve, So that thou yeve thyn advertence To understonde my sentence	710	And to confirme my resoun, Thou wost wel this, that spech is soun, Or elles no man myghte hyt here, Now herke what y wol the lere "Soun ys noight but eyr ybroken,
"First shalt thou here where she duel- leth,		And every speche that ys spoken, Lowd or pryvee, foul or fair, In his substance ys but air, For as flaumbe ys but lyghted smoke, Ryght soo soun ys air ybroke
And so thyn oun bok hyt tellth, Hir paleys stant, as I shal seye, Ryght even in myddes of the weye Betwixen hevене, erthe, and see,	715	But this may be in many wyse, Of which I wil the twoo devyse, As soun that cometh of pipe or harpe For whan a pipe is blowen sharpe, The air ys twyst with violence
That what so ever in al these three Is spoken, either privy or apert, The way therto ys so overt, And stant eke in so juste a place That every soun mot to hyt pace,	720	And rent, loo, thys ys my sentence, Eke, whan men harpe-strynges smyte, Whether hyt be moche or lyte, Loo, with the strok the ayr tobreketh,
Or what so cometh from any tonge, Be hyt rounded, red, or songe, Or spoke in suerte or in drede, Certeyn, hyt moste thider nede "Now herkene wel, for-why I wille	725	And ryght so breketh it whan men speketh Thus wost thou wel what thing is speche "Now hennesforth y wol the teche How every speche, or noyse, or soun, Thurgh hys multiplicacioun, Thogh hyt were piped of a mous,
Tellen the a propre skille And a worthy demonstracion In myn ymagynacion "Geffrey, thou wost ryght wel this, That every kyndely thyng that is Hath a kyndely stede ther he May best in hyt conserved be, Unto which place every thyng, Thorgh his kyndely enclynynng,	730	Mot nede come to Fames Hous I preve hyt thus — take hede now — Be experience, for yf that thow Throwe on water now a stoon, Wel wost thou, hyt wol make anoon
Moveth for to come to,	735	A litel roundell as a sercle, Paraunter brod as a covercle, And ryght anoon thow shalt see wel, That whel wol cause another whel, And that the thridde, and so forth, brother, Every sercle causynge other
Whan that hyt is away therfro, As thus loo, thou maist alday se That any thing that hevye be, As stoon, or led, or thyng of wighte, And bere hyt never so hye on highte, Lat goo thyn hand, hit falleth doun Ryght so seye I be fyr or soun, Or smoke, or other thynges lyghte, Alwey they seke upward on highte While ech of hem is at his large,	740	Wydder than hymselfe was,
	745

And thus fro roundel to compas, Ech aboute other goynge Causeth of othres sterynge And multiplynge ever moo, Til that hyt be so fer ygoo, That hyt at bothe brynkes bee Although thou mowe hyt not ysee Above, hyt gooth yet alway under, Although thou thenke hyt a gret wonder And whoso seyth of trouthe I varye, Bid hym proven the contrarye And ryght thus every word, ywys, That lowd or pryvee spoken ys, Moveth first an ayr aboute, And of thys movynge, out of doute, Another ayr anon ys meved, As I have of the watir preved, That every cercle causeth other Ryght so of ayr, my leve brother, Everych ayr another stereth More and more, and speche up bereth, Or voys, or noyse, or word, or soun, Ay through multiplicacioun, Til hyt be atte Hous of Fame, — Take yt in earnest or in game "Now have I told, yf thou have mynde, How speche or soun, of pure kynde, Enclyned ys upward to meve, This, mayst thou fele, wel I preve And that same place, ywys, That every thyng enclyned to ys, Hath his kyndelyche stede That sheweth hyt, withouten drede, That kyndely the mansoun Of every speche, of every soun, Be hyt eyther foul or fair, Hath hys kynde place in ayr And syn that every thyng that is Out of hys kynde place, ywys, Moveth thidder for to goo, Yif hyt aweye be therfroo, As I have before preved the, Hyt seweth, every soun, parde, Moveth kyndely to pace Al up into his kyndely place And thus place of which I telle, Ther as Fame lyst to duelle, Ys set amyddys of these three, Heven, erthe, and eke the see, As most conservatyf the soun Than ys this the conclusyoun, That every speche of every man,	As y the telle first began, Moveth up on high to pace Kyndely to Fames place "Telle me this now feythfully, Have y not preved thus symply, Withoute any subtilite Of speche, or gret prolixite Of termes of philosophie, Of figures of poetrie, Or colours of rethorike? Pardee, hit oughte the to lyke! For hard langage and hard matere Ys encombrous for to here Attones, wost thou not wel this?" And y answered and seyde, "Yis" "A ha!" quod he, "lo, so I can Lewedly to a lewed man Speke, and shewe hym swyche skiles That he may shake hem be the biles, So palpable they shulden be But telle me this, now praye y the, How thinketh the my conclusyon?" [Quod he] "A good persuasion," Quod I, "hyt is, and lyk to be Ryght so as thou hast preved me" "Be God," quod he, "and as I leve, Thou shalt have yet, or hit be eve, Of every word of thys sentence A preve by experience, And with thyne eres heren wel Top and tayl, and everydel, That every word that spoken ys Cometh into Fames Hous, ywys, As I have seyde, what wilt thou more?" And with this word upper to sore He gan, and seyde, "Be seynt Jame, Now wil we spoken al of game!" "How farest thou?" quod he to me "Wel," quod I "Now see," quod he, By thy trouthe, yond adoun, Wher that thou knowest any toun, Or hous, or any other thing And whan thou hast of ought knowyng, Looke that thou warne me, And y anon shal telle the How fer that thou art now therfroo" And y adoun gan loken thoo, And beheld felde and playnes, And now hilles, and now mountaynes, Now valeyes, now forestes, And now unnetthes grete bestes, Now ryveres, now citees,	850 855 805 810 815 820 870 875 880 885 890 895 900

Explicit liber secundus

BOOK III

Incipit liber tercus

Invocation

O God of science and of lyght, Appollo, thurgh thy grete myght, Thus lytel laste bok thou gye!
 Nat that I wilne, for maistrye,
 Here art poetical be shewed, 1095
 But for the rym ys lyght and lewed, Yit make hyt sumwhat agreable, Though som vers fayle in a sillable,
 And that I do no diligence To shewe craft, but o sentence 1100
 And yif, devyne vertu, thow Wilt helpe me to shewe now
 That in myn hed ymarked ys — Loo, that is for to menen this,
 The Hous of Fame for to descryve — 1105 Thou shalt se me go as blyve Unto the nexte laure y see,
 And kysse yt, for hyt is thy tree
 Now entre in my brest anon!

The Dream

Whan I was fro thys egle goon, 1110
 I gan beholde upon this place
 And certein, or I ferther pace,
 I wol yow al the shap devyse Of hous and site, and al the wyse
 How I gan to thys place aproche 1115
 That stood upon so hygh a roche, Hier stant ther non in Spayne
 But up I clomb with alle payne,
 And though to clymbe it greved me, Yit I ententyf was to see, 1120
 And for to powren wonder lowe, Yf I koude any weyes knowe What maner stoon this roche was For hyt was lyk alum de glas, But that hyt shoon ful more clere, 1125
 But of what congeled matere Hyt was, I nyste redely
 But at the laste aspied I,
 And found that hit was every del
 A roche of yse, and not of stel 1130 Thoughte I, "By seynt Thomas of Kent!
 Thus were a feble fundament

To bidden on a place hye
 He ought him lytel glorifye
 That hereon bilt, God so me save!" 1135 Tho sawgh I al the half ygrave
 With famous folkes names fele,
 That had iben in mochel wele,
 And her fames wide yblowe
 But wel unnethes koude I knowe 1140
 Any lettres for to rede Hir names by, for, out of drede,
 They were almost ofthowed so That of the lettres oon or two Was molte away of every name, 1145
 So unfamous was woxe hir fame
 But men seyn, "What may ever laste?" Thoo gan I in myn herte caste That they were molte away with hete,
 And not away with stormes bete 1150
 For on that other syde I say
 Of this hil, that northward lay,
 How hit was written ful of names Of folkes that hadden grete fames Of olde tyme, and yet they were 1155
 As fresch as men had writen hem here
 The selve day ryght, or that houre
 That I upon hem gan to poure
 But wel I wiste what yt made, Hyt was conserved with the shade 1160
 Of a castel that stood on high — Al this writynge that I sigh —
 And stood eke on so cold a place That hete myghte hit not deface Thoo gan I up the hil to goon, 1165
 And fond upon the cop a woon,
 That al the men that ben on lyve Ne han the kunnyng to describe The beaute of that ylke place, Ne coude casten no compace 1170 Swich another for to make,
 That myght of beaute ben hys make,
 Ne so wonderlych ywrought,
 That hit astonyeth yit my thought,
 And maketh al my wyt to swynke, 1175
 On this castel to bethynke,
 So that the grete craft, beaute,
 The cast, the curiosite
 Ne kan I not to yow devyse,

My wit ne may me not suffice	1180	To pipen bet than Appolloo
But natheles al the substance		Ther saugh I famous, olde and yonge,
I have yit in my remembrance,		Pipers of the Duché tonge,
For whi me thoughte, be seynt Gyle!		To lerne love-daunces, sprynges,	1235
Al was of ston of beryle,		Reyes, and these straunge thynges
Bothe the castel and the tour,	1185	Tho saugh I in an other place
And eke the halle and every bour,		Stonden in a large space,
Wythouten peces or joynynge		Of hem that maken bloody soun
But many subtil compassinges,		In trumpe, beme, and claryoun,	1240
Babewynnes and pynacles,		For in fight and blod-shedyng
Ymageries and tabernacles,	1190	Ys used gladly clarionynge
I say, and ful eke of wyndowes,		Ther herde I trumpen Messenus,
As flakes falle in grete snowes		Of whom that speketh Virgilius
And eke in ech of the pynacles		There herde I trumpe Joab also,	1245
Weren sondry habitacles,		Theodomas, and other mo,
In which stoden, al withoute —	1195	And alle that used clarion
Ful the castel, al aboute —		In Cataloigne and Aragon,
Of alle maner of mynstralles,		That in her tyme famous were
And gestiours, that tellen tales		To lerne, saugh I trumpe there	1250
Both of wepinge and of game,		There saugh I sitte in other sees,
Of al that longest unto Fame	1200	Pleyngge upon sondry gles,
Ther herde I pleyen on an harpe		Whiche that I kan not nevene,
That sowned bothe wel and sharpe,		Moo than sterres ben in hevене,
Orpheus ful craftely,		Of whiche I nyl as now not ryme,	1255
And on his syde, faste by,		For ese of ylost, and los of tyme
Sat the harper Orion,	1205	For tyme ylost, this knowen ye,
And Eacides Chron,		Be no way may recovered be
And other harpers many oon,		Ther saugh I pleye jugelours,
And the Bret Glascurion,		Magicians, and tregetours,	1260
And smale harpers with her gles		And Phitonesses, charmeresses,
Sate under hem in dyvers sees,	1210	Olde wicches, sorceresses,
And gunne on hem upward to gape,		That use exorsisacions,
And countrefete hem as an ape,		And eke these fumygacions,
Or as craft countrefeteth kynde		And clerkes eke, which konne wel	1265
Tho saugh I stonden hem behynde,		Al this magik naturel,
Afer fro hem, al be herselfe,	1215	That craftely doon her ententes
Many thousand tymes twelve,		To make, in certeyn ascendentes,
That maden lowde mynstralcies		Ymages, lo, through which magik
In cornemuse and shalemyes,		To make a man ben hool or syk	1270
And many other maner pipe,		Ther saugh I the, quene Medea,
That craftely begunne to pipe,	1220	And Circes eke, and Calipsa,
Bothe in doucet and in rede,		Ther saugh I Hermes Ballenus,
That ben at festes with the brede,		Limote, and eke Symon Magus
And many flowte and lityng horn,		There saugh I, and knew hem by name,	1275
And pipes made of grene corn,		That by such art don men han fame
As han thise lytel herde-gromes,	1225	Ther saugh I Colle tregetour
That kepen bestis in the bromes		Upon a table of sycamour
Ther saugh I than Atuteris,		Pleye an uncouth thyng to telle,
And of Athenes daun Pseustis,		Y saugh him carien a wynd-melle	1280
And Marcia that loste her skyn,		Under a walsh-note shale
Bothe in face, body, and chyn,	1230	What shuld I make lenger tale
For that she wolde envien, loo!		Of alle the pepil y ther say,

- Fro hennes into domes day?
 Whan I had al this folk beholde, 1285
 And fond me lous, and nought yholde, And eft imused longe while Upon these walles of berile, That shoone ful lyghter than a glas
 And made wel more than hit was 1290
 To semen every thing, ywis, As kynde thyng of Fames is,
 I gan forth romen til I fond
 The castel-yate on my ryght hond, Which that so wel corven was 1295
 That never such another nas,
 And yit it was be aventure Iwrought, as often as be cure Hyt nedeth nocht yow more to tellen,
 To make yow to longe duellen, 1300
 Of this yates florissshinges, Ne of compasses, ne of kervynges, Ne how they hatte in masoneries,
 As corbetz, ful of ymageries
 But, Lord! so fair yt was to shewe, 1305
 For hit was al with gold behewe
 But in I wente, and that noon Ther mette I crynging many oon,
 "A larges, larges, hold up wel!
 God save the lady of thys pel, 1310
 Our oune gentil lady Fame,
 And hem that wilnen to have name Of us!" Thus herde y crien alle, And faste comen out of halle
 And shoken nobles and sterlynges 1315
 And somme corouned were as kynges,
 With corounes wroght ful of losenges,
 And many ryban and many frenges Were on her clothes trewely Thoo atte last aspyed y 1320
 That pursevantes and heraudes, That crien ryche folkes laudes, Hyt weren alle, and every man Of hem, as y yow tellen can,
 Had on hum throwen a vesture 1325
 Which that men clepe a cote-armure, Enbrowded wonderliche ryche,
 Although they nere nought ylyche
 But nocht nyl I, so mote y thryve, Ben aboute to dyscryve 1330
 Alle these armes that ther weren,
 That they thus on her cotes beren,
 For hyt to me were impossible, Men myghte make of hem a bible Twenty foot thykke, as y trowe 1335
- For certeyn, whoso koude iknowe Myghte ther alle the armes seen Of famous folk that han yseen
 In Auffrike, Europe, and Asye, Syth first began the chevalrie 1340 Loo! how shulde I now telle al thys?
 Ne of the halle eke what nede is To tellen yow that every wal Of hit, and flor, and roof, and al
 Was plated half a foote thikke 1345
 Of gold, and that nas nothyng wikke,
 But, for to prove in alle wyse,
 As fyn as ducat in Venyse,
 Of which to lite al in my pouche is?
 And they were set as thik of nouchis 1350
 Ful of the fynest stones faire,
 That men rede in the Lapidare,
 As grasses growen in a mede
 But hit were al to longe to rede
 The names, and therefore I pace 1355
 But in this lusty and ryche place, That Fames halle called was,
 Ful moche prees of folk ther nas, Ne crowdyng for to mochil prees
 But al on hye, above a dees, 1360 Sitte in a see imperall,
 That mad was of a rubee all,
 Which that a carbuncle ys ycalled, Y saugh, perpetually ystalled,
 A femynyne creature, 1365
 That never formed by Nature Nas such another thing yseye
 For alther-first, soth for to seye, Me thoughte that she was so lyte
 That the lengthe of a cubite 1370 Was lengere than she semed be But thus sone, in a whyle, she Hir tho so wonderliche streighte That with hir fet she erthe reighte,
 And with hir hed she touched hevене, Ther as shynen sterres sevene 1375
 And therto eke, as to my wit,
 I saugh a gretter wonder yit,
 Upon her eyen to beholde,
 But certeyn y hem never tolde 1380
 For as feele eyen hadde she As fettheres upon foules be,
 Or weren on the bestes foure
 That Goddis trone gunne honoure, As John writ in th'Apocalyps 1385 Hir heer, that oundy was and crips,
 As burned gold hyt shoon to see,

And, soth to tellen, also she		Hyt was so hevye and so large	1440
Had also fele upstondyng eres		And for they writen of batayles,
And tonges, as on bestes heres,	1390	As wel as other olde mervayles,
And on hir fet woxen saugh y		Therfor was, loo, thys piler
Partriches wynges redely		Of which that I yow telle her,
But, Lord! the perry and the richesse		Of led and yren bothe, ywys,	1445
I saugh sitting on this godesse!		For yren Martes metal ys,
And, Lord! the hevenyssh melodye	1395	Which that god is of bataylle,
Of songes, ful of armonye,		And the led, withouten faille,
I herde aboute her trone ysonge,		Ys, loo, the metal of Saturne,
That al the paleys-walles ronge!		That hath a ful large whel to turne	1450
So song the myghty Muse, she		Thoo stoden forth, on every rowe,
That cleped ys Calhope,	1400	Of hem which that I koude knowe,
And hir eighte sustren eke,		Though I hem noght be ordre telle,
That in her face semen meke,		To make yow to longe to duelle,
And ever mo, eternally,		These of whiche I gynne rede	1455
They songe of Fame, as thoo herd y		There saugh I stonden, out of drede,
"Heryed be thou and thy name,	1405	Upon an yren piler strong Goddesse of Renoun or of Fame!"		That peynted was, al endelong,
Tho was I war, loo, atte laste,		With tigris blod in every place,
As I myne eyen gan up caste,		The Tholosan that highte Stace,	1460
That thys ylke noble quene		That bar of Thebes up the fame
On her shuldres gan sustene	1410	Upon his shuldres, and the name
Bothe th'armes and the name		Also of cruel Achilles
Of thoo that hadde large fame		And by him stood, withouten les,
Alexander and Hercules,		Ful wonder hy on a piler	1465
That with a sherte hys lyf les!		Of yren, he, the gret Omer,
Thus fond y syttyng this goddesse	1415	And with him Dares and Tytus
In noble, honour, and richesse,		Before, and eke he Lolluis,
Of which I stynte a while now,		And Guydo eke de Columpnis,
Other thing to tellen yow		And Englyssh Gaufrnde eke, ywis,	1470
Tho saugh I stonde on eyther syde,		And ech of these, as have I joye,
Streight down to the dores wide,	1420	Was besy for to bere up Troye
Fro the dees, many a peler		So hevye therof was the fame
Of metal that shoon not ful cler,		That for to bere hyt was no game
But though they nere of no richesse,		But yet I gan ful wel espie,	1475
Yet they were mad for gret noblesse,		Betwex hem was a lital envye
And in hem hy and gret sentence,	1425	Oon seyde that Omer made lyes,
And folk of digne reverence,		Feynyng in hys poetries,
Of which I wil yow telle fonde,		And was to Grekes favorable,
Upon the piler saugh I stonde		Therfor held he hyt but fal le	1480
Alderfirst, loo, ther I sigh		Tho saugh I stonde on a piler,
Upon a piler stonde on high,	1430	That was of tynned yren cler,
That was of led and yren fyn,		The Latyn poete, Virgile, Hym of secte saturnyn,		That bore hath up a longe while
The Ebrayk Josephus, the olde,		The fame of Prius Eneas	1485
That of Jewes gestes tolde		And next hym on a piler was,
And he bar on hys shuldres hye	1435	Of coper, Venus clerk, Ovide,
The fame up of the Jewerye		That hath ysowen wonder wide
And by hym stoden other sevene,		The grete god of Loves name
Wise and worthy for to nevene,		And ther he bar up wel hys fame	1490
To helpen him bere up the charge,		Upon his piler, also hye

As I myghte see hyt with myn ye,
 For-why this halle, of which I rede,
 Was woxen on highte, length, and brede, Wel more, be a thousand del, 1495
 Than hyt was erst, that saugh I wel Thoo saugh I on a piler by,
 Of yren wrought ful sternely,
 The grete poete, daun Lucan,
 And on hys shuldres bar up than, 1500
 As high as that y myghte see,
 The fame of Julius and Pompe
 And by him stoden alle these clerkes That writen of Romes myghty werkes, That yf y wolde her names telle, 1505
 Al to longe most I dwelle
 And next him on a piler stood Of soulfre, lyk as he were wood, Daun Claudian, the sothe to telle,
 That bar up al the fame of helle, 1510
 Of Pluto, and of Proserpyne, That quene ys of the derke pyne
 What shulde y more telle of this?
 The halle was al ful, ywys,
 Of hem that writen olde gestes, 1515
 As ben on trees rokes nestes,
 But hit a ful confus matere Were alle the gestes for to here,
 That they of write, or how they highte
 But while that y beheld thys syghte,
 I herde a noyse aprochen blyve, 1521
 That ferde as been don in an hive Ayen her tyme of out-fleyng, Ryght such a maner murmuryng,
 For al the world, hyt semed me 1525 Tho gan I loke aboute and see That ther come entryng into the halle
 A ryght gret companye withalle,
 And that of sondry regiouns,
 Of alleskynnes condicioons 1530
 That dwelle in erthe under the mone, Pore and ryche And also sone
 As they were come in to the halle, They gonne down on knees falle Before this ilke noble quene, 1535
 And seyde, "Graunte us, lady shene, Ech of us of thy grace a bone!"
 And somme of hem she graunted sone,
 And somme she werned wel and faire,
 And some she graunted the contraire 1540
 Of her axyng outterly
 But thus I seye yow, trewely,
 What her cause was, y nyste

For of this folk ful wel y wiste,
 They hadde good fame ech deserved 1545
 Although they were dyversly served, Ryght as her suster, dame Fortune, Ys wont to serven in comune
 Now herke how she gan to paye
 That gonne her of her grace praye, 1550
 And yit, lo, al this companye Seyden sooth, and noght a lye "Madame," seyde they, "we be Folk that here besechen the That thou graunte us now good fame, 1555
 And let our werkes han that name,
 In ful recompensacioun Of good werkes, yive us good renoun"
 "I werne yow hit," quod she anon,
 "Ye gete of me good fame non, 1560 Be God! and therefore goo your wey"
 "Allas!" quod they, "and welaway!" Telle us what may your cause be"
 "For me lyst hyt noght," quod she,
 "No wyght shal speke of yow, ywis, 1565 Good ne harm, ne that ne this"
 And with that word she gan to calle
 Her messenger, that was in halle,
 And bad that he shulde faste goon,
 Upon payne to be blynd anon, 1570
 For Eolus the god of wynde, —
 "In Trace, ther ye shal him fynde, And bid him bringe his claroun,
 That is ful dyvers of his soun,
 And hyt is cleped Clere Laude, 1575
 With which he wont is to herade Hem that me list ypresed be
 And also bid him how that he Brynge his other claroun,
 That highte Sklaundre in every toun, 1580
 With which he wont is to diffame Hem that me liste, and do hem shame"
 This messenger gan faste goon,
 And found where in a cave of ston,
 In a contree that highte Trace, 1585
 This Eolus, with harde grace, Held the wyndes in distresse,
 And gan hem under him to presse,
 That they gonne as beres rore,
 He bond and pressed hem so sore 1590
 This messenger gan faste crie,
 "Rys up," quod he, "and faste hye, Til thou at my lady be,
 And tak thy clarious eke with the,
 And sped the forth" And he anon 1595

Tok to a man, that highte Triton, Hys clarions to bere thoo, And let a certeyn wynd to goo, That blew so hydously and hye That hyt ne lefte not a skye 1600 In alle the welken long and brod This Eolus nowhere abod Til he was come to Fames fet, And eke the man that Triton het, And ther he stod, as stille as stoon, 1605 And her-withal ther come anoon Another huge companye Of goode folk, and gunne crie, “Lady, graunte us now good fame, And lat oure werkes han that name 1610 Now in honour of gentlesse, And also God your soule blesse! For we han wel deserved hyt, Therefore is ryght that we ben quyt ” “As thryve I,” quod she, “ye shal faylle! 1615 Good werkes shal yow nocht availle To have of me good fame as now But wite ye what? Y graunte yow That ye shal have a shrewed fame, And wikkyd loos, and worse name, 1620 Though ye good loos have wel deserved Now goo your wey, for ye be served And thou, dan Eolus, let see, Tak forth thy trumpe anon,” quod she, “That is ycleped Sklaundre lyght, 1625 And blow her loos, that every wight Speke of hem harm and shrewednesse, In stede of good and worthynesse For thou shalt trumpe alle the contrayre Of that they han don wel or fayre ” 1630 “Allas!” thoughte I, “what adventures Han these sory creatures! For they, amonges al the pres, Shul thus be shamed gilteles But what! hyt moste nedes be ” 1635 What dide this Eolus, but he Tok out hys blake trumpe of bras, That fouler than the devel was, And gan this trumpe for to blowe, As al the world shulde overthrowe, 1640 That throughtout every regioun Wente this foule trumpes soun, As swifte as pelet out of gonne, Whan fyr is in the poudre ronne And such a smoke gan out wende 1645 Out of his foule trumpes ende,	Blak, bloo, grenyssh, swartish red, As doth where that men melte led, Loo, al on high fro the tuel And therto oo thing saugh I wel, 1650 That the ferther that hit ran, The gretter wexen hit began, As dooth the ryver from a welle, And hyt stank as the pit of helle Allas, thus was her shame yronge, 1655 And gilteles, on every tonge! Tho come the thridde companye, And gunne up to the dees to hye, And down on knes they fille anon, And seyde, “We ben everychon 1660 Folk that han ful trewely Deserved fame ryghtfully, And praye yow, hit mote be knowe, Ryght as hit is, and forth yblowe ” “I graunte,” quod she, “for me list 1665 That now your goode werkes be wist, And yet ye shul han better loos, Right in dispit of alle your foos, Than worthy is, and that anoon Lat now,” quod she, “thy trumpe goon, Thou Eolus, that is so blak, 1671 And out thyn other trumpe tak That highte Laude, and blow yt soo That thurgh the world her fame goo Al esely, and not to faste, 1672 That hyt be knowen atte laste ” “Ful gladly, lady myn,” he seyde, And out hys trumpe of gold he brayde Anon, and sette hyt to his mouth, And blew it est, and west, and south, 1680 And north, as lowde as any thunder, That every wight hath of hit wonder, So brode hyt ran, or than hit stente And, certes, al the breth that wente Out of his trumpes mouth it smelde 1685 As men a pot of bawme helde Among a basket ful of roses This favour dide he til her loses And ryght with this y gan aspye, Ther come the ferthe companye — 1690 But certeyn they were wonder fewe — And gunne stonden in a rewte, And seyden, “Certes, lady bryght, We han don wel with al our myght, But we ne kepen have no fame 1695 Hyde our werkes and our name For Goddys love, for certes we Han certeyn doon hyt for bounte,
--	---

And for no maner other thing "		As we had wonne hyt with labour,
"I graunte yow alle your askyng,"	1700	For that is dere boght honour
Quod she, "let your werkes be ded "		At regard of oure grete ese
With that aboute y clew myn hed,		And yet thou most us more plesse
And saugh anon the fifte route		Let us be holden eke therto	1755
That to this lady gunne loue,		Worthy, wise, and goode also,
And doun on knes anon to falle,	1705	And riche, and happy unto love
And to hir thoo besoughten alle		For Goddes love, that sit above,
To hide her goode werkes ek,		Thogh we may not the body have
And seyden they yeven noght a lek		Of wymmen, yet, so God yow save,	1780
For fame ne for such renoun,		Leet men glwe on us the name!
For they for contemplacioun	1710	Sufficeth that we han the fame "
And Goddes love hadde ywrought,		"I graunte," quod she, "be my trouthe!
Ne of fame wolde they nought		Now, Eolus, withouten slouth,
"What?" quod she, "and be ye wood?"		Tak out thy trumpe of gold, let se,	1765
And wene ye for to doo good,		And blow as they han axed me,
And for to have of that no fame?	1715	That every man wene hem at ese,
Have ye dispit to have my name?		Though they goon in ful badde lese "
Nay, ye shul lyven everychon!		This Eolus gan hit so blowe	1769
Blow thy trumpes, and that anon,"		That thrugh the world hyt was yknowe
Quod she, "thou Eolus, y hote,		Thoo come the seventh route anon,
And ryng this folkes werk be note,	1720	And fel on knees everychoon,
That al the world may of hyt here "		And seyde, "Lady, graunte us sone
And he gan blowe her loos so clere		The same thing, the same bone,
In his golden clarioun		That [ye] this nexte folk han doon "	1775
That thrugh the world wente the soun		"Fy on yow," quod she, "everychon!
Also kenely and eke so softe,	1725	Ye masty swyn, ye ydel wrechches,
But atte last hyt was on-lofte		Ful of roten, slowe techches!
Thoo come the sexte companye,		What? false theves! wher ye wolde

So many formed be Nature,		Out at a wyndowe for to pace,
Ne ded so many a creature,	2040	And, when they metten in that place,
That wel unnethe in that place		They were achekked bothe two,
Hadde y a fote-brede of space		And neyther of hem moste out goo
And every wight that I saugh there		For other, so they gonne crowde,	2095
Rounded everych in others ere		Til ech of hem gan crien lowde,
A newe tydyngē openly,	2045	“Lat me go first!” “Nay, but let me!
Or elles tolde al openly		And here I wol ensuren the Ryght thus, and seyde “Nost not thou		Wyth the nones that thou wolt do so,
That ys betyd, lo, late or now?”		That I shal never fro the go,	2100
“No,” quod he, “telle me what ”		But be thyn owne sworn brother!
And than he tolde hym this and that,	2050	We wil medle us ech with other,
And swor therto that hit was soth —		That no man, be they never so wrothe,
“Thus hath he sayd,” and “Thus he doth,”		Shal han on [of us] two, but bothe
“Thus shal hit be,” “Thus herde y seye,”		At ones, al besyde his leve,	2105
“That shal befounde,” “That dar I leve” —		Come we a-morwe or on eve,
That al the folk that ys alvye	2055	Be we cried or stille yrouned ”
Ne han the kunnyngē to discryve		Thus saugh I fals and soth compounded
The thinges that I herde there,		Togeder fle for oo tydyngē
What aloude, and what in ere		Thus out at holes gunne wringe	2110
But al the wondermost was this		Every tydyngē streight to Fame,
Whan oon had herd a thing, ywis,	2060	And she gan yeven ech hys name,
He com forth ryght to another wight,		After hir disposicioun,

And yaf hem eke duracioun,		For hit no nede is, redely,
Somme to wexe and wane sone,	2115	Folk kan synge hit bet than I,
As doth the faire white mone,		For al mot out, other late or rathe,
And let hem goon Ther myghte y seen		Alle the sheves in the lathe —	2140
Wynged wondres faste fleen,		I herde a gret noyse withalle
Twenty thousand in a route,		In a corner of the halle,
As Eolus hem blew aboute	2120	Ther men of love-tydynges tolde,
And, Lord, this hous in alle tymes,		And I gan thuderward beholde,
Was ful of shipmen and pilgrimes,		For I saugh rennyng every wight,	2145
With scrippes bret-ful of lesinges,		As faste as that they hadden myght, Entremedled with tydynges,		And everych cried, "What thing is
And eke allone be hemselve	2125	that?"
O, many a thousand tymes twelve		And somme sayde, "I not never what "
Saugh I eke of these pardoners,		And whan they were alle on an hepe,
Currours, and eke messagers,		Tho behynde begunne up lepe,	2150
With boystes crammed ful of lyes		And clamben up on other faste,
As ever vessel was with lyes	2130	And up the nose and yen kaste,
And as I alther-fastest wente		And troden fast on others heles,
About, and dide al myn entente		And stampen, as men doon aftir eles
Me for to pleyen and for to lere,		Atte laste y saugh a man,	2155
And eke a tydyng for to here,		Which that y [nevene] nat ne kan,
That I had herd of som contre	2135	But he semed for to be
That shal not now be told for me —		A man of gret auctorite

ANELIDA AND ARCITE

THE Anelida has long been a puzzle to the critics. It starts out with all the pomp and circumstance of an epic. After an invocation to Mars and Bellona, which would be a natural introduction to a poem of battle, it goes on to announce its subject as a very old Latin story of Queen Anelida and false Arcite. Then after a second invocation, this time to the Muses, it declares the name of its ancient authorities: Statius, the author of the Thebaid, and a mysterious Corinne, probably the Theban poetess Corinna, who was famous for having defeated the great Pindar in a competition. Then follows the story itself, which fails singularly to fulfill the promise of the poem. It does, to be sure, find its setting and point of departure in Statius's account of the war of the Seven against Thebes. But its actual source at this point is rather the Teseide of Boccaccio than the Thebaid. And the story of Anelida and Arcite, which is soon introduced, far from being an heroic tale of battle and of tournament (like the Knight's Tale, which has so similar a beginning) is a meager and ill-developed narrative of how a faithless knight abandoned one lady for another. It continues for only about a hundred lines, and is little more than an introduction to the lyric Complaint of the deserted Anelida. In contrast to the slender story, the Complaint is an elaborate specimen of its type. With a narrative fullness which is exceptional in such poems Anelida repeats many of the incidents mentioned earlier in the introduction. And the metrical structure of the piece, with its carefully balanced stanzas of varied form, is the most complicated that Chaucer is known to have employed. At the end of the Complaint the story is resumed, but only for seven lines. It relates that Anelida, after writing her lament, vowed sacrifice to Mars, and it stops abruptly before entering upon the description of his temple. Doubtless Chaucer meant to use at this point the passage of the Teseide which at another time he made the basis of the description of the temple in the Palamon and Arcite.

Various have been the attempts to account for this strange fragment. Chaucer's acknowledgment of indebtedness to Statius and Corinne, it is agreed, is pure fiction, so far as concerns the story of Arcite's faithlessness. It is simply Chaucer's way of claiming ancient authority for his tale. He may even have had no literary source for the simple and conventional plot, and therefore no plan for continuing it beyond the Complaint. If he did not take the incident out of a book, there is the other possibility that it was suggested to him by some contemporary occurrence. For scholars are loath to credit anything to pure invention. So theories of personal allegory have been seriously urged. The historical counterpart of Arcite has been sought in the Earl of Oxford and in James Butler, second earl of Ormonde. Though Oxford did desert his wife for a Bohemian lady, his relations with Chaucer make a satirical attack on the part of the poet seem very improbable. And there is no striking parallelism between the incident and the poem to support the application. In the case of Butler the identification with Arcite rests entirely upon a few strange resemblances in proper names, — Ormonde and Ermonie, Arcite and d'Arcy (Butler's mother's maiden name), Anelida and Anne Welle (whom Butler married). Ormonde's marital infidelity is by no means proved, and his life with the Countess was certainly not such as to justify his representation as the faithless Arcite. Contemporary history, then, as well as literature, has failed to yield a satisfactory source or suggestion for the story. And it is possible that Chaucer never had any further plan than to frame a complaint of the French type in the setting furnished by Boccaccio's Teseide. This, in any case, is what he actually does in the fragment, which thus takes its place among the works of his period of transition from French to Italian influence.

The chronological position of the Anelida among the poems that show this two-fold influence can be only conjectured. The metrical form and the use of the Teseide suggest a date after the House of Fame. The treatment of the character of Arcite must be earlier than the heroic presentation of the same figure in the Palamon. In fact the Anelida bears every indication of having been Chaucer's first attempt to utilize the Teseide. It is therefore printed here before the Parliament of Fowls, which is at all events a more finished work in conception and execution.

In spite of its shortcomings the Anelida shows in some respects Chaucer's progressive mastery of his art. The great metrical proficiency he displays in the Complaint has already been mentioned. In the introductory story, too, thin as the substance is, there begins to appear the swift and flexible narrative style of Chaucer's later years. The characterization is poor and conventional, the expression of feeling and sentiment a little more adequate, perhaps because of Chaucer's reading of Ovid. In general, the Anelida testifies at once to Chaucer's enlarging literary knowledge and to the immaturity of his art. These conditions seem to be reflected even in the vocabulary of the poem, which is conspicuous among Chaucer's writings for a tendency to poetic diction.

The Complaynt of feire Anelida and fals Arcite

Invocation

Thou ferse god of armes, Mars the rede,
That in the frosty contre called Trace, Within thy grisly temple ful of drede Honoured art, as patroun of that place,
With thy Bellona, Pallas, ful of grace, 5 Be present, and my song contynue and guye,
At my begynnyng thus to the I crye

For hit ful depe is sonken in my mynde,
With pitous hert in Englyssh to endyte
This olde storie, in Latyn which I fynde, 10
Of quene Anelida and fals Arcite, That elde, which that al can frete and bite,

As hit hath freten mony a noble storie, Hath nygh devoured out of oure memorie

Be favorable eke, thou Polymya, 15
On Parnaso that with thy sustres glade, By Elycon, not fer from Cirrea, Singest with vois memorial in the shade, Under the laurer which that may not fade,

And do that I my ship to haven wynne 20
First folowe I Stace, and after him Corynne

The Story

Iamque domos patris Cithice post aspera gentis Prelia laurigero subeunte Thesea curru Letifici plausus missusque ad sidera vulg

When Theseus, with werres longe and
grete,

The aspre folk of Cithe had overcome, With laurer coroued, in his char gold-
bete,

Hom to his contre-houses is he come, 25
For which the peple, blisful al and somme,
So cryeden that to the sterres hit wente,
And hum to honouren dide al her entente

Beforen this duk, in signe of victorie, The trompes come, and in his baner
large 30

The ymage of Mars, and, in token of
glorie,

Men myghte sen of tresour many a charge, Many a bright helm, and many a spere and
targe,

Many a fresh knyght, and many a blysful
route,

On hors, on fote, in al the feld aboute 35

Ipolita his wif, the hardy quene
Of Cithia, that he conquered hadde,
With Emelye, her yonge suster shene, Faure in a char of gold he with him ladde, That al the ground about her char she spradde 40

With brightnesse of the beaute in her face, Fulfilled of largesse and of alle grace

With his tryumphe, and laurer-coroued
thus,

In al the flour of Fortunes yevynge, Let I this noble prince Theseus 45 Toward Athenes in his wey rydinge,
And founde I wol in shortly for to bringe
The slye wey of that I gan to write,
Of quene Anelida and fals Arcite

Mars, which that through his furious cours of ire, 50

The olde wrathe of Juno to fulfillle, Hath set the peples hertes bothe on fire
Of Thebes and Grece, everich other to kille
With bloddy speres, ne rested never stille, But throng now her, now ther, among hem
bothe, 55

That everych other slough, so were they wrothe

For when Amphiorax and Tydeus, Ipomedon, Parthonope also Were ded, and slayn proude Campaneus, And when the wroched Thebans, bretheren
two, 60

Were slayn, and kyng Adrastus hom ago,
So desolat stod Thebes and so bare,
That no wight coude remedie of his care

And when the olde Creon gan espye How that the blood roial was broght
a-doun, 65

He held the cite by his tyrannye,
And dyde the gentils of that regioun
To ben his frendes, and dwellen in the toun
So, what for love of him, and what for awe,
The noble folk were to the toun idrawe 70

Among al these Anelida, the quene
Of Ermony, was in that toun dwellynge,
That fairer was then is the sonne shene Thurghout the world so gan her name springe,

That her to seen had every wyght likynge, 75

For, as of trouthe, is ther noon her lyche,
Of al the women in this worlde riche

Yong was this quene, of twenty yer of elde,

Of mydel stature, and of such fairenese,
That Nature had a joye her to behelde, 80
And for to speken of her stidfastnesse, She passed hath Penelope and Lucesse,
And shortly, yf she shal be comprehended,
In her ne myghte no thing been amended

This Theban knyght [Arcite] eke, soth to
seyn, 85

Was yong, and therwithal a lusty knyght, But he was double in love and no thing
pleyn,

And subtil in that craft over any wyght,
And with his kunnyng wan this lady bryght,

For so ferforth he gan her trouthe assure That she him trusted over any creature 91

What shuld I seyn? she loved Arcite so That when that he was absent any throwe, Anon her thoghte her herte brast a-two
For in her sight to her he bar hym lowe, 95
So that she wende have al his hert yknowe,
But he was fals, hit nas but feyned chere,— As nedeth not to men such craft to lere

But nevertheles ful mykel besynesse Had he, er that he myghte his lady wynne,
And swor he wolde dyen for distresse, 101
Or from his wit he seyde he wolde twynne Alas, the while! for hit was routhe and
synne,

That she upon his sorowes wolde rewe, But nothing thinketh the fals as doth the
trewe 105

Her fredom fond Arcite in such manere That al was his that she hath, moche or
lyte,

Ne to no creature made she chere Ferther then that hit lyked to Arcite Ther nas no lak with which he myghte her wite 110

She was so ferforth yeven hym to plesse,
That al that lyked hym hit dyde her ese

Ther nas to her no maner lettre sent That touched love, from any maner wyght, That she ne shewed hit him, er hit was brent, 115
 So pleyn she was, and dide her fulle myght That she nyl hiden nothing from her
 knyght,
 Lest he of any untrouthe her upbreyde Withoute bode his heste she obeyde

And eke he made him jelous over here, 120
 That what that any man had to her seyde, Anoon he wolde preyen her to swere
 What was that word, or make him evel apaid

Then wende she out of her wyt have breyd,
 But al this nas but sleight and flaterie, 125
 Withoute love, he feyned jelousye

And al this tok she so debonerly,
 That al his wil, her thoughte hit skulful thung,
 And ever the lenger she loved him tendirly,
 And dide him honour as he were a kyng 130
 Her herte was to him wedded with a ring,
 So ferforth upon trouthe is her entente, That wher he gooth, her herte with him
 wente

When she shal ete, on him is so her thought,
 That wel unnethe of mete tok she kep, 135
 And when that she was to her reste broght,
 On him she thoughte alwey til that she slep,
 When he was absent, prevely she wep
 Thus lyveth feire Anelida the quene 139
 For fals Arcite, that dide her al this tene

This fals Arcite, of his newfanglenesse, For she to him so lowly was and trewe, Tok lesse deynte of her stidfastnesse,
 And saw another lady, proud and newe, And ryght anon he cladde him in her
 hewe — 145
 Wot I not whethir in white, rede, or
 grene —
 And falsed fair Anelida the quene

But neverthesse, gret wonder was hit
 noon
 Thogh he were fals, for hit is kynde of man, Sith Lamek was, that is so longe agoon, 150
 To ben in love as fals as evere he can,
 He was the firste fader that began

To loven two, and was in bigamye,
 And he found tentes first, but yf men lye

This fals Arcite, sumwhat moste he
 feyne, 155
 When he wex fals, to covere his traitorie, Ryght as an hors, that can both bite and
 pleyne,

For he bar her on honde of trecherie,
 And swor he coude her doublenesse espie,
 And al was falsnes that she to him mente Thus swor this thef, and forth his way he
 wente 161

Alas! what herte myght endure hit,
 For routhe or wo, her sorwe for to telle?
 Or what man hath the cunnynge or the wit?

Or what man myghte within the chambre
 dwelle, 165

Yf I to him rehersen sholde the helle
 That suffreth fair Anelida the quene
 For fals Arcite, that dide her al this tene

She wepith, waileth, swowneth pitously,
 To grounde ded she falleth as a ston, 170 Craumpyssheth her lymes crokedly, She speketh as her wit were al agon,
 Other colour then asshen hath she noon, Non other word speketh she, moche or
 lyte,
 But "merci, cruel herte myn, Arcite!" 175

And thus endureth, til that she was so mat That she ne hath foot on which she may
 sustene,

But forth languyssing evere in this estat,
 Of which Arcite hath nouthen routhe ne
 tene

His herte was elleswhere, newe and grene, That on her wo ne deyneth him not to thinke, 181
 Him rekketh never wher she fiete or synke

His newe lady holdeth him so narowe
 Up by the brdil, at the staves ende, 184
 That every word he dredeth as an arowe, Her daunger made him bothe bowe and bende,

And as her liste, made him turne or wende,
 For she ne graunted him in her lyvyng
 No grace, whi that he hath lust to sunge,

But drof hym forth, unnethe liste her
knowe 190

That he was servaunt unto her ladishippe, But lest that he were proud, she held him
lowe

Thus serveth he, withoute fee or shipe,
She sent him now to londe, now to shippe,
And for she yaf him daunger al his fille, 195
Therfor she hadde him at her owne wille

Ensampler of this, ye thrifty wymmen alle, Take her of Anehda and Arcite,
That for her liste him "dere herte" calle,
And was so meke, therfor he loved her
lyte 200

The kynde of mannes herte is to delyte
In thing that straunge is, also God me save!
For what he may not gete, that wolde he have

Now turne we to Anehda ageyn, 204
That pyneth day be day in langwysshinge,
But when she saw that her ne gat no geyn,
Upon a day, ful sorowfully wepinge,
She caste her for to make a compleynyng,
And with her owne hond she gan hit write,
And sente hit to her Theban knyght, Arcite 210

The compleynt of Anehda the quene upon fals Arcite

Proem

So thurleth with the poynt of remem-
braunce

The swerd of sorowe, ywhet with fals
plesaunce,

Myn herte, bare of blis and blak of hewe,
That turned is in quakyng al my daunce,
My surete in awhaped countenaunce, 215 Sith hit availeth not for to ben trewe,
For whoso trewest is, hit shal hir rewte, That serveth love and doth her observ-
aunce

Alwey til oon, and chaungeth for no newe

Strophe

1

I wot myself as wel as any wight, 220 For I loved oon with al myn herte and
myght,

More then myself an hundred thousand sithe,

And called him myn hertes lif, my knyght,
And was al his, as fer as hit was ryght,
And when that he was glad, then was I
blithe, 225

And his disese was my deth as swithe,
And he ayen his trouthe hath me plyght
For evermore, his lady me to kythe

2

Now is he fals, alas! and causeles,
And of my wo he is so routheles, 230
That with a word him list not ones deyne To bringe ayen my sorowful herte in pes, For he is caught up in another les Ryght as him list, he laugheth at my peyne, And I ne can myn herte not restreyme, 235
For to love him alwey neveretheles,
And of al this I not to whom me pleyne

3

And shal I pleyne — alas! the harde
stounde —

Unto my foo that yaf myn herte a wounde, And yet desreth that myn harm be
more? 240

Nay, certis, ferther wol I never founde Non other helpe, my sores for to sounde
My destanee hath shapen hit so ful yore,
I wil non other medecyne ne lore,
I wil ben ay ther I was ones bounde 245
That I have seid, be seid for evermore!

4

Alas! wher is become your gentillesse, Youre wordes ful of plesaunce and hum-
blesse,

Youre observaunces in so low manere,
And your awayting and your besynesse 250
Upon me, that ye calden your maistresse,
Your sovereyne lady in this world here?
Alas! is ther now nother word ne chere Ye vouchen sauf upon myn hevynesse?
Alas! youre love, I bye hit al to dere 255

5

Now, certis, swete, thogh that ye Thus causeles the cause be Of my dedly adversyte,
Your manly resoun oughte hit to respite,
To slen your frend, and namely me, 260

That never yet in no degre Offended yow, as wisly he,
 That al wot, out of wo my soule quyte!
 But for I shewed yow, Arcite, Al that men wolde to me write, 265
 And was so besy yow to delyte — Myn honor save — meke, kynde, and fre, Therfor ye put on me this wite Alas! ye rekke not a myte, Thogh that the swerd of sorwe byte 270
 My woful herte through your cruelte

6

My swete foo, why do ye so, for shame?
 And thanke ye that furthered be your name
 To love a newe, and ben untrewed? Nay!
 And putte yow in sclauder now and
 blame, 275
 And do to me adversite and grame, That love yow most — God, wel thou wost — alway?
 Yet come ayein, and yet be pleyn som day,
 And than shal this, that now is mys, be
 game,
 And al foryive, while that I lyve may. 280

Antistrophe

1

Lo! herte myn, al this is for to seyne,
 As whether shal I preye or elles pleyne?
 Which is the way to doon yow to be trewe?
 For either mot I have yow in my cheyne, Or with the deth ye mote departe us
 tweyne, 285

Ther ben non other mene weyes newe
 For God so wisly upon my soule rewte, As verrayly ye sleen me with the peyne,
 That may ye se unfeyned on myn hewe

2

For thus ferforth have I my deth [y-]soght, Myself I mordre with my privy thoght, 291 For sorowe and routhe of your unkynde-
 nesse

I wepe, I wake, I faste, al helpeth noght, I weyve joye that is to speke of oght,
 I voyde companye, I fle gladnesse 295
 Who may avaunte her beter of hevynesse Then I? And to this plyte have ye me broght, Withoute gilt, — me nedeth no witnessse

3

And shal I preye, and weyve womanhede?
 Nay! rather deth then do so foul a dede!
 And axe merci, gilteles, — what nede? 301
 And yf I pleyne what lyf that I lede, Yow rekke not, that knowe I, out of
 drede,
 And if that I to yow myne othes bede For myn excuse, a skorn shal be my mede 305
 Your chere floureth, but it wol not sede, Ful longe agoon I oghte have taken hede

4

For thogh I hadde yow to-morowe ageyn, I myghte as wel holde Aperill fro reyn,
 As holde yow, to make yow be stidfast 310 Almyghty God, of trouthe sovereyn, Wher is the trouthe of man? Who hath hit
 slayn?
 Who that hem loveth, she shal hem fynde as fast
 As in a tempest is a roten mast
 Is that a tame best that is ay feyn 315
 To renne away, when he is lest agast?

5

Now merci, swete, yf I mysseye!
 Have I seyde oght amys, I preye?
 I noot, my wit is al aweye
 I fare as doth the song of Charante-pleure,
 For now I pleyne, and now I pleye, 321
 I am so mased that I deye, Arcite hath born away the keye
 Of al my world, and my good aventure For in this world nis creature 325 Wakyng, in more discomfiture
 Then I, ne more sorowe endure
 And yf I slepe a furlong wey or tweye, Then thynketh me that your figure Before me stont, clad in asure, 330
 To profren eft a newe asure
 For to be trewe, and merci me to preye

6

The longe nyght this wonder sight I drye,
 And on the day for thulke afray I dye,
 And of al this ryght noght, wys, ye reche 335
 Ne nevere mo myn yen two be drie,
 And to your routhe, and to your trouthe,
 I ere.

But welaway! to fer be they to feche,
 Thus holdeth me my destinee a wreche But me to rede out of this drede, or
 guye, 340
 Ne may my wit, so weyk is hit, not streche

Conclusion

Then ende I thus, sith I may do no more,— I yeve hit up for now and evermore,
 For I shal never eft putten in balaunce
 My sekernes, ne lerne of love the lore 345
 But as the swan, I have herd seyde ful yore,
 Ayeins his deth shal singen his penaunce,

So singe I here my destinee or chaunce,
 How that Arcite Anelida so sore Hath thurled with the poynt of remembraunce 350

The Story continued

When that Anelida, this woful quene, Hath of her hand ywriten in this wise,
 With face ded, betwixe pale and grene,
 She fel a-swowe, and sith she gan to rise,
 And unto Mars avoweth sacrificise 355 Withinne the temple, with a sorowful
 chere,
 That shapen was as ye shal after here

THE PARLIAMENT OF FOWLS

IN THE Parliament of Fowls Chaucer returned to the love-vision. Features made familiar by the Book of the Duchess and the House of Fame — the preliminary reading of a book, the ensuing sleep and dream, the supernatural guide, the vision itself, the allegorical abstractions — reappear in a somewhat different setting, adapted to a new purpose.

In the opening stanzas the poet declares himself to be without direct experience of the ways of the God of Love. "I knowe nat Love in dede." But, as he goes on to explain, he has learned of the subject from books, and to books he is wont to resort for all kinds of knowledge. Just lately he has been reading a most profitable work, the Somnum Scipionis, and he relates at some length how the elder Africanus appeared to Scipio the younger in a dream, and took him up into the heavens, where he showed him the mysteries of the future life. When night came on, the poet says, and put an end to his reading, he fell asleep and dreamed that Africanus came to him in turn and stood at his bedside. To reward him for the study of his "olde book totorn," the Roman took him to a beautiful park, where he saw the temple of Venus, and then to a hillside, where all the birds were assembled before the goddess of Nature on Saint Valentine's Day. They had come, in accordance with Nature's ordinance, to choose their mates, and then to fly away. The first choice belonged to the royal tercel eagle, who claimed the lovely formel eagle on the goddess's hand. Straightway a second and a third tercel, both of lower rank, disputed the first one's claim, and the three noble suitors pleaded their causes before Nature. Then the issue was debated by the general parliament of the birds. Finally Nature ruled that the choice should rest with the formel eagle herself, and she asked for a year's delay before making her decision.

Such, in very brief outline, is the story of the poem. In the familiar framework of the love-vision it presents the device, also familiar in mediæval literature, of a council or parliament of birds. But though it deals with well known conventions, Chaucer's Parliament is a work of great freshness and originality. It has no definite source or model, but draws freely for its materials upon French, Latin, and Italian. Indeed in richness and aptness of literary quotation and allusion it may be compared with the best tales of Chaucer's latest period. And the natural and vivacious dialogue reveals in no small measure the dramatic power which afterward found full expression in the Canterbury Tales.

The Parliament is one of the most charming occasional poems in the language. But what was the occasion? The answer to this question has been the chief concern of the scholars who have studied the work in recent years. Like the Complaint d'Amours and the Complaint of Mars, the Parliament is definitely attached to Saint Valentine's Day, and perhaps a sufficient explanation of its origin is to be found in the celebration of that festival. Alceste says of Chaucer, in the Prologue to the Legend of Good Women, that he wrote "many an ympe for [Love's] holydayes." But, just as, in the case of the Mars, a tradition recorded in the fifteenth century explains the mythological episode as a personal allegory relating to an incident at court, so the modern commentators are many of them persuaded that the Parliament has an allegorical application. It is most commonly held to refer to the suit of Richard II for the hand of Anne of Bohemia in 1381. But since the situation in the poem does not agree very well with the actual events that led up to Richard's betrothal, other applications have been sought in Lancaster's plans for the marriage of his daughter Philippa, or even in Chaucer's own marriage as early as 1374. Most recently a new theory has been proposed which connects the Parliament with the negotiations, conducted in 1376 and 1377, for the marriage of the young prince Richard

to the princess Marie of France The soundness of such allegorical interpretations is very hard to judge In the case of the Book of the Duchess and the Complaints of Mars and Venus personal applications are supported by early traditions, and modern scholarship has devised similar explanations for the House of Fame, the Aneida, the Legend of Good Women, and several of the Canterbury Tales These theories of allegory are not unreasonable in themselves, and they find support in the literary practice of Chaucer's age Yet the Book of the Duchess is the only one of all his works of which the personal application can be said to be generally accepted The interpretations offered for some poems have been shown to be so out of accord with historical facts as to be totally unsatisfactory, and in other instances the parallels between Chaucer's story and the actual incidents are too slight or commonplace to be significant Each case has to be judged on its merits The Parliament of Fowls has perhaps received more such explanations than any other of Chaucer's writings But none is without its difficulties Even the application most recently proposed, to the negotiations for the betrothal of Richard and Marie, while less open to objection than earlier theories, is not supported by such striking parallels of incident as would make it convincing It also implies a date of composition which seems a little too early Moreover, an allegorical interpretation, though undeniably possible, is not necessary to the understanding of the poem The central episode of the contending lovers has been shown to be a frequently recurring theme in literature and popular tradition, and the suspended judgment is the conventional ending

Apart from theories of personal allegory, there is probably to be recognized in the Parliament a certain amount of political or social satire As contrasted with the rival eagles, the other classes of birds — worm-fowl, water-fowl, and seed-fowl — clearly represent in a fashion the humbler orders of human society, and their speeches sometimes appear to reflect the discontent that produced the Peasants' Revolt Certainly the ideals of courtly love, as expounded by the noble suitors, are treated with little respect by some of the spokesmen for the lower classes How much Chaucer himself was concerned with the expression of such ideas we can only conjecture Many of his writings testify to his sustained interest in the problems of courtly love In the Parliament, at all events, he presents the issue dramatically, with the complete detachment of himself as author which is characteristic of the Canterbury Tales He is so non-committal, in fact, that critics are even now disputing whether the poet took sides with seed-fowl or with "fowles of ravyne"

THE PARLIAMENT OF FOWLS

Here begyneth the Parlement of Foules

The lyf so short, the craft so long to lerne, Th'assay so hard, so sharp the conquerynge,
The dredful joye, alwey that slit so yerne Al this mene I by Love, that my felynge Astonyeth with his wonderful werkyng 5
So sore iwis, that whan I on hym thynke, Nat wot I wel wher that I flete or synke

For al be that I knowe nat Love in dede, Ne wot how that he quiteth folk here hyre,

Yit happeth me ful ofte in bokes reede 10
Of his myrakles and his crewel yre
There rede I wel he wol be lord and syre, I dar nat seyn, his strokes been so sore,
But "God save swich a lord!" — I can na
moore

Of usage — what for lust and what for lore — 15

On bokes rede I ofte, as I yow tolde But wherfore that I speke al this? Nat
yoore

Agon, it happede me for to beholde Upon a bok, was write with lettres olde,
 And therupon, a certeyn thing to lerne, 20
 The longe day ful faste I redde and yerne

For out of olde felde, as men seyth, Cometh al this newe corn from yer to yere,
 And out of olde bokes, in good feyth, Cometh al this newe science that men
 here 25

But now to purpos as of this matere,
 To rede forth hit gan me so delite,
 That al that day me thoughte but a lyte

This bok of which I make mencieur Entitled was al thus as I shal telle 30
 "Tullyus of the Drem of Scipioun" Chapitres sevene it hadde, of hevene and
 helle

And erthe, and soules that therinne dwelle,
 Of whiche, as shortly as I can it trete, Of his sentence I wol yow seyn the greete 35

Fyrst telleth it, whan Scipion was come In Affrike, how he meteth Massynisse, That hym for joye in armes hath inome, Thanne telleth it here speche and al the blisse

That was betwix hem til the day gan
 mysse, 40

And how his auncestre, Affrycan so deere, Gan in his slep that nyght to hym apere

Thanne telleth it that, from a sterry place, How Affrycan hath hym Cartage shewed,
 And warnede hym befor of al his grace, 45
 And seyde hym what man, lered other lewed

That lovede commune profyt, wel ithewed,
 He shulde into a blisful place wende,
 There as joye is that last withouten ende

Thanne axede he if folk that here been
 dede 50

Han lyf and dwellynge in another place And Affrican seyde, "Ye, withouten
 drede,"

And that oure present worldes lyves space Nis but a maner deth, what wey we trace, And rightful folk shul gon, after they
 dye, 55

To hevene, and shewede hym the Galaxye

Thanne shewede he hym the lytel erthe that here is,

At regard of the hevenes quantite,
 And after shewede he hym the nyne speres
 And after that the melodye herde he 60
 That cometh of thilke speres thryes thre,
 That welle is of musik and melodye
 In this world here, and cause of armonye

Than bad he hym, syn erthe was so lyte,
 And ful of torment and of harde grace, 65
 That he ne shulde hym in the world delyte Thanne tolde he hym, in certeyn yeres space

That every sterre shulde come into his place

Ther it was first, and al shulde out of
 mynde

That in this world is don of al man-
 kynde 70

Thanne preyede hym Scipion to telle hym al

The wey to come into that hevene blisse
 And he seyde, "Know thyself first immortal,

And loke ay besyly thow werche and wysse To commune profit, and thow shalt not
 mysse 75

To comen swiftly to that place deere That ful of blisse is and of soules cleere

"But brekers of the lawe, soth to seyne,
 And likerous folk, after that they ben dede, Shul whirle aboute th'erthe alwey in
 peyne, 80

Tyl many a world be passed, out of drede,
 And than, foryeven al hir wikked dede, Than shul they come into this blisful
 place,

To which to comen God the sende his
 grace" 84

The day gan faylen, and the derke nyght,
 That reveth bestes from here besynesse, Berafte me my bok for lak of lyght,
 And to my bed I gan me for to dresse, Fulfyld of thought and busy hevynesse, For bothe I hadde thyng which that I
 nolde, 90

And ek I nadde that thyng that I wolde

But fynally, my spirit at the laste,
 For wery of my labour al the day,
 Tok reste, that made me to slepe faste,
 And in my slep I mette, as that I lay, 95
 How African, ryght in the selve aray
 That Scypcion hym say byfore that tyde, Was come and stod right at my beddes syde

The wery hunttere, slepyng in his bed,
 To wode ayeyn his mynde goth anon, 100
 'The juge dremeth how his plees been sped,
 The cartere dremeth how his cartes gon, The riche, of gold, the knyght fyght with his fon,
 The syke met he drynketh of the tonne,
 The lovee met he hath his lady wonne 105

Can I not seyn if that the cause were For I hadde red of African byforn,
 That made me to mete that he stod there, But thus seyde he, "Thow hast the so wel
 born
 In lokyng of myn olde bok totorn, 110
 Of which Macrobye roughte nat a lyte,
 That sumdel of thy labour wolde I quyte "

Cytherea! thow blysfyl lady swete, That with thy fyrbrond dauntest whom the lest,
 And madest me this sweven for to mete,
 Be thow myn helpe in this, for thow mayst
 best! 116
 As wisly as I sey the north-north-west, Whan I began my sweven for to write
 So yif me myght to ryme and ek t'endyte!

This forseide African me hente anon, 120
 And forth with hym unto a gate brougte, Ryght of a park walled with grene ston,
 And over the gate, with lettres large iwroughte,
 There were vers iwritten, as me thoughte,
 On eyther half, of ful gret difference, 125
 Of which I shal now seyn the pleyn sentence

"Thorgh me men gon into that blysfyl
 place
 Of hertes hele and dedly woundes cure, Thorgh me men gon unto the welle of grace,
 There grene and lusty May shal evere
 endure 130

This is the wey to al good aventure Be glad, thow redere, and thy sorwe of-
 caste,
 Al open am I—passe in, and sped thee
 faste!"

"Thorgh me men gon," than spak that other side,
 "Unto the mortal strokes of the spere 135 Of which Disdayn and Daunger is the
 gyde,
 Ther nevere tre shal fruyt ne leves bere This strem yow ledeth to the sorweful were There as the fish in prysoun is al drye, Th'eschewing is only the remedye!" 140

These vers of gold and blak iwritten were,
 Of whiche I gan astoned to beholde,
 For with that oon encesede ay my fere,
 And with that other gan myn herte bolde, That oon me hette, that other dide me
 colde 145
 No wit hadde I, for errour, for to chese,
 To entre or fien, or me to save or lese

Right as, betwixen adamauntes two Of evene myght, a pece of yren set Ne hath no myght to meve to ne fro — 150 For what that oon may hale, that other let — Ferde I, that nyste whether me was bet
 To entre or leve, til Affrycan, my gide, Me hente, and shof in at the gates wide,

And seyde, "It stondesth wryten in thy
 face, 155
 Thyn errour, though thow telle it not to
 me,
 But dred the not to come into this place,
 For this wrytyng nys nothyng ment bi the,
 Ne by non, but he Loves servaunt be 159
 For thow of love hast lost thy tast, I gesse, As sek man hath of swete and bytternesse

"But natheles, although that thow be dul, Yit that thow canst not do, yit mayst thow se
 For many a man that may nat stonde a pul,
 It liketh hym at the wrastlyng for to be, 165 And demeth yit wher he do bet or he And if thow haddest connyng for t'endite, I shal the shewe mater of to wryte "

With that myn hand in his he tok anon, Of which I confort caughte, and wente in
faste 170

But, Lord, so I was glad and wel begoon!
For overal where that I myne eyen caste Were trees clad with leves that ay shal
laste,

Ech in his kynde, of colour fresh and greene
As emeraude, that joye was to seene 175

The byldere ok, and ek the hardy asshe,
The piler elm, the cofre unto carayne,
The boxtre pipere, holm to whippes lashe, The saylynge fyr, the cipresse, deth to playne,

The shetere ew, the asp for shaftes
pleyne, 180

The olyve of pes, and eke the dronke vyne,
The victor palm, the laurer to devyne

A gardyn saw I ful of blosmy bowes Upon a ryver, in a grene mede,
There as swetnesse everemore now is, 185
With floures white, blewe, yelwe, and rede,
And colde welle-stremes, nothyng dede,
That swymmen ful of smale fishes lighte, With fynnes rede and skales sylver
bryghte ✓ 189

On every bow the bryddes herde I synge,
With voys of aungel in here armonye, Some besyede hem here bryddes forth to
brynge,

The litel conyes to here pley gonne hye,
And ferther al aboute I gan aspye The dredful ro, the buk, the hert and
hynde, 195
Squyrels, and bestes smale of gentil kynde

Of instruments of strenges in acord Herde I so pleye a ravysyng swetnesse, That God, that makere is of al and lord, Ne herde nevere beter, as I gesse 200 Therwith a wynd, unnethe it myghte be
lesse,

Made in the leves grene a noyse softe Accordaunt to the foules song alofte

Th'air of that place so attempre was That nevere was ther grevaunce of hot ne
cold, 205

There wex ek every holsom spice and gras,
No man may there waxe sek ne old, Yit was there joye more a thousandfold Than man can telle, ne nevere wolde it nyghte,

But ay cler day to any manes syghte 210

Under a tre, besyde a welle, I say Cupide, oure lord, his arwes forge and file,
And at his fet his bowe al redy lay,
And Wille, his daughter, temprede al this while

The hevedes in the welle, and with hire
file 215

She touchede hem, after they shuide serve Some for to sle, and some to wounde and kerve

Tho was I war of Plesaunce anon-ryght,
And of Aray, and Lust, and Curteysie, And of the Craft that can and hath the

To don by force a wyght to don folye — Disfigurat was she, I nyl nat lye,
And by hymself, under an ok, I gesse, Saw I Delyt, that stod with Gentillesse

I saw Beute withouten any atyr, 225
And Youthe, ful of game and joyite, Foolhardynesse, Flaterye, and Desyr, Messagerye, and Meede, and other
thre —

Here names shul not here be told for me —
And upon pilers greete of jasper longe 230
I saw a temple of bras ifounded stronge

Aboute that temple daunseden alwey Women inowe, of whiche some ther weere Fayre of herself, and some of hem were
gay,

In kertels, al dishevele, wente they
there 235

That was here offyce alwey, yer by yeere And on the temple, of dowves white and fayre

Saw I syttyng many an hundred peyre

Byfore the temple-dore ful soberly Dame Pees sat, with a curtyn in hire
hond, 240

And by hire syde, wonder discretly, Dame Pacience syttyng there I fond,

With face pale, upon an hil of sond,
And aldernext, withinne and ek withoute, Byheste and Art, and of here folk a
route 245

Withinne the temple, of sykes hoothe as fyr
I herde a swogh that gan aboute renne, Whiche sikes were engendered with desyr,
That maden every auter for to brenne Of newe flaume, and wel espyed I
thenne 250

That al the cause of sorwes that they drye Cam of the bittere goddesse Jelosye

The god Priapus saw I, as I wente, Withinne the temple in sovereyn place
stonde,

In swich aray as whan the asse hym
shente 255

With cri by nighte, and with hys sceptre in
honde

Ful besyly men gonne assaye and fonde Upon his hed to sette, of sondry hewe, Garlondes ful of freshe floures newe

And in a prive corner in disport 260 Fond I Venus and hire porter Richesse, That was ful noble and hautayn of hyre
port

Derk was that place, but afterward light-
nesse

I saw a lyte, unnethe it myghte be lesse,
And on a bed of gold she lay to reste, 265
Til that the hote sonne gan to weste

Hyre gylte heres with a golden thred Ibounden were, untressed as she lay,
And naked from the brest unto the hed Men myghte hire sen, and, sothly for to say, 270

The remenaunt was wel kevered to my pay, Ryght with a subtyl coverchef of Val-
ence —

Ther nas no thukkere cloth of no defense

The place yaf a thousand savours sote, And Bachus, god of wyn, sat hire be-
syde, 275

And Ceres next, that doth of hunger boote,
And, as I seyde, amyddes lay Cypride, To whom on knees two yonge folk ther
cryde

To ben here helpe But thus I let hire lye,
And ferther in the temple I gan espie 280

That, in dispit of Dyane the chaste, Ful many a bowe ibroke heng on the wal Of maydenes swiche as gonne here tymes waste

In hyre servyse, and peynted overal
Of many a story, of which I touche shal 285
A fewe, as of Calyxte and Athalante, And many a mayde of which the name I wante

Semyramis, Candace, and Hercules, Biblis, Dido, Thisbe, and Piramus, Tristram, Isaude, Paris, and Achilles, 290 Eleyne, Cleopatre, and Troylus, Silla, and ek the moder of Romulus Alle these were peynted on that other syde, And al here love, and in what plyt they dyde

Whan I was come ayeyn into the place 295
That I of spak, that was so sote and grene, Forth welk I tho myselven to solace Tho was I war wher that ther sat a queene
That, as of lyght the somer sonne shene Passeth the sterre, right so over mesure 300
She fayrer was than any creature

And in a launde, upon an hil of floures,
Was set this noble goddesse Nature Of braunches were here halles and here
boures

Iwrought after here cast and here mesure, 305
Ne there nas foul that cometh of engend-drure

That they ne were prest in here presence,
To take hire dom and yeve hire audyence

For this was on seynt Valentynes day, Whan every foul cometh there to chese his make, 310

Of every kynde that men thynke may,
And that so huge a noyse gan they make That erthe, and eyr, and tre, and every lake

So ful was, that unethe was there space For me to stonde, so ful was al the
place 315

And right as Aleyne, in the Pleynt of Kynde,

Devyseth Nature of aray and face,
In swich aray men myghte hire there
fynde

This noble emperesse, ful of grace, Bad every foul to take his owne place, 320 As they were woned alwey fro yer to
yeere,
Seynt Valentynes day, to stonden there

That is to seyn, the foules of ravyne Weere hiest set, and thanne the foules
smale

That eten, as hem Nature wolde en-clyne, 325
As worm or thyng of which I telle no tale,
And water-foul sat lowest in the dale, But foul that lyveth by sed sat on the
grene,
And that so fele that wonder was to sene

There myghte men the royal egle fynde, That with his sharpe lok perseth the
sonne, 331

And othere egles of a lowere kynde,
Of whiche that clerkes wel devyse conne Ther was the traunt with his fetheres donne

And grey, I mene the goshawk, that doth
pyne 335
To bryddes for his outrageous ravyne

The gentyl faucoun, that with his feet distrayneth

The kynges hand, the hardy sperhawk eke, The quayles foo, the merhoun, that payneth

Hymself ful ofte the larke for to seke, 340
There was the douve with hire yen meke, The jelous swan, ayens his deth that syngeth,

The oule ek, that of deth the bode bryng-
eth,

The crane, the geaunt, with his trompes
soun,

The thef, the chough, and ek the janglynge
pye, 345

The skornynge jay, the eles fo, heroun,
The false lapwyng, ful of trecherye,
The stare, that the conseyl can bewrye,

The tame ruddok, and the coward kyte,
The kok, that orloge is of thorpes lyte, 350

The sparwe, Venus sone; the nyghtyngale, That clepeth forth the grene leves newe,
The swalwe, mortherere of the foules
smale

That maken hony of floures freshe of hewe, The wedded turtill, with hire herte
trewe, 355

The pekok, with his aungels fetheres
bryghte,

The fesaunt, skornere of the cok by nyghte,

The waker goos, the cukkitow ever unkynde,
The popynjay, ful of delicasye,

The drake, stroyere of his owene kynde,
The stork, the wrekere of avouterye, 361
The hote cormeraunt of glotenyne, The raven wys, the crowe with vois of
care,

The throstil old, the frosty feldefare

What shulde I seyn? Of foules every
kynde 365

That in this world han fetheres and stature Men myghten in that place assembled
fynde

Byfore the noble goddesse of Nature,
And everich of hem dide his besy cure Benygnely to chese or for to take, 370
By hire acord, his formel or his make

But to the poynt Nature held on hire
hond

A formel egle, of shap the gentilleste That evere she among hire werkes fond,
The moste benygne and the goodlieste 375
In hire was everi vertu at his reste, So ferforth that Nature hireself hadde blysse

To loke on hire, and ofte hire bek to kysse

Nature, the vicare of the almyghty Lord, That hot, cold, hevvy, lyght, moyst, and dreye 380

Hath knyht by evene noumbres of acord,
In esy voys began to speke and seye,
"Foules, tak hed of my sentence, I preye, And for youre ese, in fortheryng of youre nede,

As faste as I may speke, I wol me speede.

"Ye knowe wel how, seynt Valentynes
day, 386

By my statut and thorgh my governaunce, Ye come for to cheese — and fle youre
wey —

Youre makes, as I prike yow with ples-
aunce,

But natheles, my ryghtful ordenaunce 390
May I nat lete for al this world to wynne,
That he that most is worthi shal begynne

"The tersel egle, as that ye knowe wel,
The foul royal, above yow in degre, 394
The wyse and worthi, secre, trewe as stel,
Which I have formed, as ye may wel se,
In every part as it best liketh me —
It nedeth not his shap yow to devyse —
He shal first chese and speken in his gyse

"And after hym by ordre shul ye chese, 400
After youre kynde, everich as yow lyketh,
And, as youre hap is, shul ye wynne or lese
But which of yow that love most entriketh, God sende hym hire that sorest for hym syketh!"

And therewithal the tersel gan she calle, 405 And seyde, "My sone, the choys is to the
falle

"But natheles, in this condicioun Mot be the choys of everich that is heere,
That she agre to his eleccioun, Whoso he be that shulde be hire feere 410
This is oure usage alwey, fro yer to yeere, And whoso may at this tyme have his
grace,
In blisful tyme he cam into this place!"

With hed enclnyed and with ful humble
cheere

This royal tersel spak, and tariede nought — 415

"Unto my soverayn lady, and not my fere, I chese, and chese with wil, and herte, and
thought,

The formel on youre hond, so wel wrought, Whos I am al, and evere wol hire serve, Do what hire lest, to do me lyve or
sterve, 420

"Besekynge hire of merci and of grace,
As she that is my lady sovereyne,

Or let me deye present in this place For certes, longe may I nat lyve in payne,
For in myn herte is korven every veyne Havyng reward only to my trouthe, 426 My deere herte, have on my wo som
routhe

"And if that I to hyre be founde untrewed, Disobeysaunt, or wilful necligent, Avauntour, or in proces love a newe, 430
I preye to yow this be my judgement,
That with these foules I be al torent That ilke day that evere she me fynde
To hir untrewed, or in my gilt unkynde

"And syn that non loveth hire so wel as I, 435

Al be she nevere of love me behette, Thanne oughte she be myn thourgh hire
mercy,

For other bond can I non on hire knette Ne nevere for no wo ne shal I lette To serven hire, how fer so that she
wende, 440
Say what yow list, my tale is at an ende "

Ryght as the freshe, rede rose newe Ayeyn the somer sonne coloured is, Ryght so for shame al wexen gan the hewe
Of this formel, whan she herde al this,
She neyther answerde wel, ne seyde
amys, 446

So sore abasht was she, tyl that Nature Seyde, "Doughter, drede yow nought, I yow assure "

Another tersel egle spak anon Of lower kynde, and seyde, "That shal nat be! 450

I love hire bet than ye don, by seint John,
Or at the leste I love hire as wel as ye,
And lenger have served hire in my degre,
And if she shulde have loved for long lovyng,

To me fullonge hadde be the guerdon-
yng 455

"I dar ek seyn, if she me fynde fals, Unkynde, janglere, or rebel any wyse,
Or jelous, do me hangen by the hals!
And, but I here me in hire servyse
As wel as that my wit can me suffyse, 460

From poynt to poynt, hyre honour for to
save,
Take she my lif and al the good I have!"

The thridde tercel egle answerde tho,
"Now, sires, ye seen the lytel leyser heere,
For every foul cryeth out to ben ago 465 Forth with his make, or with his lady
deere,
And ek Nature hireself ne wol not heere, For tarynge here, not half that I wolde
seye,
And but I speke, I mot for sorwe deye

"Of long servyse avaunte I me nothing,
But as possible is me to deye to-day 471
For wo as he that hath ben languysshynge
This twenty wynter, and wel happen may,
A man may serven bet and more to pay
In half a yer, although it were no moore, 475 Than som man doth that hath served ful
yoore

"I seye not this by me, for I ne can Don no servyse that may my lady plese,
But I dar seyn, I am hire treweste man As to my dom, and faynest wolde hire
ese 480
At shorte wordes, til that deth me sese,
I wol ben heres, whether I wake or wynke,
And trewe in al that herte may bethynke "

Of al my lyf, syn that day I was born,
So gentil ple in love or other thyng 485
Ne herde nevere no man me beforn,
Who that hadde leyser and connyng
For to reherse hire chere and hire spekyng,
And from the morwe gan this speche laste Tyl dounward drow the sonne wonder
faste 490

The noyse of foules for to ben delyvered So loude rong, "Have don, and lat us
wende!"
That wel wende I the wode hadde al to-shyvered
"Com of!" they criede, "allas, ye wol us shende!
Whan shal youre cursede pletynge have an
ende? 495

How sholde a juge eyther parti leve
For ye or nay, withouten any preve?"

The goos, the cokkow, and the doke also So cryede, "Kek kek! kokkow! quek quek!" hye,

That though myne eres the noyse wente
tho 500

The goos seyde, "Al this nys not worth a flye!

But I can shape herof a remedie,
And I wol seye my verdit fayre and swythe For water-foul, whoso be wroth or blythe!"

"And I for worm-foul," seyde the fol kokkow, 505

"For I wol of myn owene autorite, For comune spede, take on the charge
now,

For to delyvere us is gret charite "

"Ye may abyde a while yit, parde!" Quod the turtel, "If it be youre wille, 510 A wight may speke hym were as fayr be style

"I am a sed-foul, oon the unworthieste, That wot I wel, and litel of connyng
But bet is that a wyghtes tonge reste Than entermeten hym of such donge, 515
Of which he neyther rede can ne synge,
And whoso hit doth, ful foule hymself acloyeth,
For office uncommytted ofte anoyeth "

Nature, which that alwey hadde an ere To murmur of the lewednesse behynde, With facound voys seyde, "Hold youre tonges there! 521
And I shal sone, I hope, a conseyl fynde Yow to delyvere, and fro this noyse un-bynde
I juge, of every folk men shul oon calle
To seyn the verdit for yow foules alle " 525

Assented were to this conclusioun
The briddes alle, and foules of ravynne Han chosen fyrst, by pleyn eleccioun,
The tercelet of the faucoun to diffyne Al here sentence, and as hum lest, termynne,
And to Nature hym gonne to presente, 531
And she accepteth hym with glad entente

The terslet seyde thanne in this manere
"Ful hard were it to preve by resoun

Who loveth best this gentil formel
heere, 535

For everych hath swich replacacioun
That non by skilles may be brought adoun
I can not se that argumentes avayle Thanne semeth it there moste be batayle "

"Al redy!" quod these egles tercels tho 540
"Nay, sires," quod he, "if that I durste it
seye,

Ye don me wrong, my tale is not ido!
For, sires, ne taketh not agref, I preye,
It may not gon, as ye wolde, in this weye, Oure is the voys that han the charge in
honde, 545

And to the juges dom ye moten stonde

"And therefore pes' I seye, as to my wit, Me wolde thynke how that the worstieste
Of knvghthod, and lengest had used it,
Most of estat, of blod the gentilleste, 550
Were sittyngest for hire, if that hir leste,
And of these thre she wot hireself, I trowe, Which that he be, for it is light to knowe "

The water-foules han here hedes led Togedere, and of a short avysement, 555 Whan everych hadde his large golee seint,
They seyden sothly, al by oon assent, How that the goos, with here facounde gent,

"That so desyreth to pronounce oure nede, Shal telle oure tale," and preyede "God hire spede!" 560

And for these water-foules tho began
The goos to speke, and in hire kakelynge
She seyde, "Pes' now tak kep every man, And herkeneth which a resoun I shal forth
brynge!

My wit is sharp, I love no tarynge, 565 I seye I rede hym, though he were my
brother,

But she wol love hym, lat hym love another!"

"Lo, here a parfit resoun of a goos!" Quod the sperhawk, "Nevere mot she
thee!

Lo, swich it is to have a tonge loos! 570 Now, parde! fol, yit were it bet for the Han holdé thy pes than shewed thy nycete

It lyth nat in his wit, ne in his wille,
But soth is seyde, 'a fol can not be stille '"

The laughter aros of gentil foules alle, 575
And right anon the sed-foul chosen hadde
The turtle trewe, and gonne hire to hem
calle,

And preyeden hire to seyn the sothe sadde
Of this matere, and axede what she radde
And she answerde that pleynly hire en-
tente 580

She wolde shewe, and sothly what she
mente

"Nay, God forbede a love-re shulde change!"

The turtle seyde, and wex for shame al red,
"Though that his lady everemore be straunge,

Yit lat hym serve hire ever, til he be ded Forsothe, I preyse nat the goeses red, 585 For, though she deyede, I wolde non other
make,

I wol ben hires, til that the deth me take "

"Wel bourded," quod the doke, "by myn hat!

That men shulde loven alwey causeles, 590
Who can a resoun fynde or wit in that?
Daunseth he murye that is myrtheles?
Who shulde recche of that is recheles?

Ye quek!" yit seyde the doke, ful wel and
fayre,

"There been mo sterres, God wot, than a payre!" 595

"Now fy, cherl!" quod the gentil tercelet,
"Out of the donghil cam that word fui
right!

Thow canst nat seen which thyng is wel beset!

Thow farst by love as oules don by lyght
The day hem blent, ful wel they se by
nyght 600

Thy kynde is of so low a wrechednesse That what love is, thow canst nat seen ne
gesse "

Tho gan the kokkow putte hym forth in pres

For foul that eteth worm, and seyde
blyve —

"So I," quod he, "may have my make in pes, 605

I reche nat how longe that ye stryve Lat ech of hem be solevn al here lyve!
This is my red, syn they may nat acorde,
This shorte lessoun nedeth nat recorde "

"Ye, have the glotoun fild inow his paunche, 610

Thanne are we wel!" seyde the merlioun, "Thow mortherere of the heysoge on the braunche

That broughte the forth, thow [rewtheless] glotoun!

Lyve thow soley, wormes corrupcioun!
For no fors is of lak of thy nature — 615 Go, lewed be thow whil the world may
dure!"

"Now pes," quod Nature, "I comaunde
heer!

For I have herd al youre opynyoun,
And in effect yit be we nevere the neer
But fynally, this is my conclusioun, 620
That she hireself shal han hir eleccioun Of whom hire lest, whoso be wroth or
blythe, Hym that she cheest, he shal hire han as swithe

"For sith it may not here discussed be Who loveth hire best, as seyde the tercelet, Thanne wol I don hire this favour, that
she 626

Shal han right hym on whom hire herte is set,

And he hire that his herte hath on hire knet

Thus juge I, Nature, for I may not lye,
To non estat I have non other ye 630

"But as for conseyl for to chese a make,
If I were Resoun, certes, thanne wolde I Conseyle yow the royal tercel take,
As seyde the tercelet ful skylfully,
As for the gentilleste and most worthi, 635 Which I have wrought so wel to my
plesaunce,

That to yow hit oughte to been a suffi-
saunce "

With dredful vois the formel tho answerde,
"My rightful lady, goddesse of Nature!

Soth is that I am evere under youre verde, 640

As is everich other creature,
And mot be youre whil my lyf may dure,
And therfore graunteth me my firste bone,
And myn entente I wol yow sey right sone "

"I graunte it yow," quod she, and right
anon 640

This formel egle spak in this degre
"Almyghty queen! unto this yer be gon,

I axe respit for to avise me,
And after that to have my choys al fre This al and som that I wol speke and
seye 650

Ye gete no more, although ye do me deye!

"I wol nat serve Venus ne Cupide, Forsothe as yit, by no manere weve "

"Now, syn it may non otherwise betyde," Quod tho Nature, "heere is no more to
seye 655

Thanne wolde I that these foules were aweye

Ech with his make, for tarynge lengere
heere!"

And seyde hem thus, as ye shul after here

"To yow speke I, ye tercelets," quod Nature,

"Beth of good herte, and serveth alle
thre 660

A yer is nat so longe to endure,
And ech of yow peyne him in his degre For to do wel, for, God wot, quyt is she Fro yow this yer, what after so befalla,
This entremes is dressed for yow alle " 665

And whan this werk al brought was to an
ende,

To every foul Nature yaf his make By evene acord, and on here wey they
wende

And, Lord, the blisse and joye that they make!

For ech of hem gan other in wynges
take, 670

And with here nekkes ech gan other wynde, Thankynge alwey the noble goddesse of
kynde

But fyrst were chosen foules for to synge,
As yer by yer was alwey hir usaunce

To synge a roundel at here departyng, 675
 To don to Nature honour and plesaunce
 The note, I trowe, makyd was in Fraunce, The wordes were swiche as ye may heer
 fynde,
 The nexte vers, as I now have in mynde

“Now welcome, somer, with thy sonne
 softe, 680
 That hast this wintres wedres overshake,
 And driven away the longe nyghtes blake!

“Saynt Valentyn, that art ful hy on-lofte, Thus syngen smale foules for thy sake
 Now welcome, somer, with thy sonne
 softe, 685
 That hast this wintres wedres over-shake

“Wel han they cause for to gladen ofte, Sith ech of hem recovered hath hys make, Ful blissful mowe they synge when they wake

Now welcome, somer, with thy sonne
 softe, 690
 That hast this wintres wedres overshake,
 And driven away the longe nyghtes blake!”

And with the shoutyng, whan the song was do

That foules maden at here flyght away,
 I wok, and othere bokes tok me to 695
 To reede upon, and yit I rede alwey
 I hope, ywis, to rede so som day
 That I shal mete som thyng for to fare
 The bet, and thus to rede I nyl nat spare

THE De Consolatione Philosophiæ of Boethius was fitly characterized by Gibbon, in an often quoted phrase, as "a golden volume not unworthy of the leisure of Plato or of Tully." Unhappily, as a result of the changing fashions in education, its elevated philosophy and fine Latinity — exceptionally classical for the sixth century — are little known today, even to students of Latin. But in the so-called Dark and Middle Ages it was among the most familiar of ancient classics. One of the earliest texts in Provençal is a fragment of a poem on the life and teachings of Boethius. The Consolation was translated into Old High German by the celebrated Notker Labeo of Saint-Gall. There are said to be as many as eight French translations which were made before the end of the fifteenth century, one of them by Jean de Meun, the author of the second part of the Roman de la Rose. In England, long before the time of any of these Continental versions, Boethius's treatise was selected by King Alfred as one of the four great works which he translated, or had translated, for the education of his people. And centuries later, after the Renaissance had enlarged men's knowledge of classical literature, the consolation still held so important a place that another sovereign, Queen Elizabeth, undertook its "Englishing." Throughout all the generations from Alfred to Elizabeth it exerted a steady influence on poets and philosophers.

This extraordinary interest was due partly to the work itself and partly to the tragic career of the author. Boethius came of a Roman family long distinguished in the public service. His father held high offices under Odoacer, and was consul in 487. His father-in-law, Q. Aurelius Symmachus, also a consul, was long a leader of the Senate. Boethius himself, who was only a boy in 489 when Theodoric defeated Odoacer and established the Ostrogothic power in Italy, soon enjoyed the favor of the new ruler. Before he was thirty he was admitted to the Senate, and in 510 he served as sole consul. He continued to receive many honors under Theodoric and reached what he regarded as the height of his good fortune in 522, when his two sons were consuls together. But soon after this Theodoric became suspicious of the loyalty of his Italian subjects. Boethius, with others, was charged with plotting to maintain the power of the Senate and restore the liberties of Italy. He was imprisoned at Pavia, and in the year 524 was put to death.

The life which was thus brought to an end was even more important for its contributions to literature and learning than for its public services. From his youth Boethius was devoted to philosophical studies, and he set himself the task of translating into Latin all of the works of Plato and Aristotle, and then of harmonizing their doctrines. This vast programme he never carried out. But in spite of the demands of his public life he succeeded in translating Aristotle's Categories and De Interpretatione and writing commentaries on each, besides composing or translating treatises on the "quadrivium" and on various aspects of logic. He also took part, on the side of Catholic orthodoxy, in the theological controversies over Arianism and Nestorianism, and later ages even ascribed his death to martyrdom for the faith. Thus in one aspect of his work he has been called "the last of the pagan philosophers," and in another "the first of the schoolmen."

From Boethius's treatises and translations the early Middle Ages derived much of their knowledge of Greek thought. But his wider fame as a man of letters rests on the De Consolatione Philosophiæ. The earlier writings were labors of scholarship, this was a work of imagination, produced less under the influence of Aristotle than of Plato and Seneca. The others were expositions of philosophical theory and method, this was applied philosophy — applied in the desperate circumstances of Boethius's fall. Written in prison in the last months of his life it was at once his apologia and the final statement of his philosophy.

It was inevitable that the Consolation should be familiar to Chaucer, and it is not remarkable that the Latin work deeply influenced his thought. As a matter of fact most of the sustained passages of philosophical reflection in his poetry can be traced to Boethius. The date of his translation was probably not far from 1380. The association of Boece and Troilus in the Words to Adam Scweyn and the very heavy indebtedness of the Troilus to the Consolation indicate that Chaucer had the two works in hand at about the same time. The Knight's Tale (like the Troilus, probably a work of the early or middle eighties) also shows strong Boethian influence. On the other hand, in Chaucer's earlier poems very little material from Boethius has been detected, and in the later Canterbury Tales, while reminiscences of the Consolation are frequent, they are no longer of central importance. Everything goes to show that Boethius was "in his domination," along with Boccaccio, in the middle of Chaucer's so-called Italian period.

For literary excellence Chaucer's poetic adaptations of Boethius in the Knight's Tale and the Troilus are far superior to his translation of the Consolation. Indeed his prose at its best (as in the freely composed introduction to the Astrolabe) shows no such mastery of style as his verse, and is hardly equal to that of the early Middle English Ancren Riwle or of King Alfred's Anglo-Saxon Boethius. Moreover in the case of the Boece the use of a French translation, heavily glossed, alongside of the Latin original contributed to looseness of structure and diffuseness of language. But in passing judgment upon a work of this sort one should remember that literal accuracy rather than the reproduction of stylistic excellence was a recognized ideal of translation in Chaucer's age. The freer method was also undoubtedly approved and practiced, and St. Jerome's rule, "Non verbum e verbo, sed sensum exprimere de sensu," carried high authority. But it was not always observed. Jean de Meun's French versions of Boethius and Vegetius were of the more literal kind, as had been Boethius's own translation of Aristotle. In fact Boethius, in his introduction to Porphyry's Isagoge, defended himself for having rendered "verbum verbo expressum comparatumque," and declared this method to be suitable in philosophical writings — "in his scriptis in quibus rerum cognitio quaeritur."

"Carmina qui quondam studio florante peregrinatus" — Metrum 1

Allas! I, wepyng, am constreyned to bygynnen vers of sorful matere, that whilom in florysschyng studie made delitable ditees. For lo! rendyng Muses of poetes enditen to me thynges to ben writen, and dreery vers of wretchidnesse weten my face with verray teres. At the leeste, no drede ne myghte overcomen tho Muses, that thei ne were felawes, and folwyden my wey (that is to seyn, whan I was exiled). They that weren glorie of my youthe, whilom weleful and grene, conforten now the sorful wyerdes of me, olde man. For eelde is comyn unwarly uppon me, hasted by the harmes that y have, and sorwe hath comandid his age to ben in me. Heeris hore arn schad overtymeliche upon myn hed, and the slakke skyn trembleth of myn emptid body.

Ryght so, and noon other wise, the cloude of sorwe dissolved and doon away, I took hevене, and reseveyd mynde to knowe the face of my fisycien, so that I sette myne eien on hir and fastned my lookyng I byholde my noryce, Philosophie, in whos hous I hadde conversed and haunted fro my youthe, and I seide thus “O thou maystresse of alle vertues, descended from the sovereyne sete, 10 whi arttow comen into this solitarie place of myn exil? Artow comen for thou art maad coupable with me of false blames?” “O!” quod sche, “my nory, schulde I forsake the now, and schulde I nat parten with the, by comune travaile, the charge that thou hast suffred for envye of my name? Certes thou confermedest by the mouth of Plato this sentence, that is 30 to seyn that comune thynges or comunalites weren blisful yif they that hadden studied al fully to wysdom governeden thilke thynges, or elles yif it so befille that the governours of comunalites studieden to geten wysdom. Thou seidest eek by the mouth of the same Plato that it was a necessarie cause wise men to taken and desire the governance of comune thynges, for that the governmentz of cites, 40 leften in the handes of felonous turmentours citezeens, ne schulde nocht bryngen in pestilence and destruccioun to goode folk. And therefore I, folwyng thilke auctorite, desired to putten forth in execution and in act of comune administracioun thilke thynges that I hadde lernyd of the among my secre restyng-whiles

Thow and God, that putte the in the thoughts of wise folk, ben knowyng 50 with me that nothyng ne brought me to maistrie or dignyte but the comune studie of alle goodnesse. And therof cometh it that bytwixen wikkid folk and me han ben grevous discordes, that ne myghte nat ben relessed by preyeris, for this liberte hath freedom of conscience, that the wrahthe of more myghty folk hath alwey ben despised of me for savacioun of right. How ofte have I ressted and 60 withstonden thilke man that highte Conigaste, that made alwey assawtes ayens the prospere fortunes of pore feble folk! How ofte eek have I put of or cast out hym Trygwille, provost of the kyngis hous, bothe of the wronges that he hadde bygunne to doon, and ek fully performed! How ofte have I covered and defended by the auctorite of me put ayens perils (that is to seyn, put myn auctorite in 70 peril for) the wreche pore folk, that the covetise of straungiers unpunyschid tormentyde alwey with myseses and grevances out of nombre! But I oughte be the more assureed ayens alle othere folk, that, for the love of rightwisnesse, I ne reservede nevere nothyng to myselve to hem-ward of the kyngis halle, by which I were the 120 more syker But thurw the same accusours accusynge I am condempned Of the nombre of whiche accusours, oon Basilius, that whilom was chased out of the kyngis servyse, is now compelled in accusynge of my name for nede of foreyne moneye Also Opilion and Gaudencius han accused me, al be it so that the justise regal hadde whilom demed hem bothe to gon into exil for hir trecheries and 130 frawdres withouten nombre, to which juggement they nolden nat obeye, but defendeden hem by the sikernesse of holi houses (that is to seyn, fledden into seyntuarre), and whan this was aperceyved to the kyng, he comandide that, but they voydide the cite of Ravenne by certeyn day assigned, that men scholde marken hem on the forheved with an hoot iren and chasen hem out of the towne Now what thyng semyth myghte ben likned to 140 this cruelte? For certes thilke same day was resceyved the accusynge of myn name by thilke same accusours What may ben seyde herto? Hath my studie and my kunnynge disserved this? Or elles the forseide dampnacioun of me — made that hem ryghtfulle accusours or no? Was noght Fortune aschamed of this? Certes, al hadde noght Fortune ben aschamed that innocence was accused, yit 150 oughte sche han had schame of the fythe of myn accusours

But axestow in somme of what gylt I am accused? Men seyn that I wolde saven the companye of the senatours And desirrestow to heren in what manere? I am accused that I schulde han disturbed the accusour to beren lettres, by whiche he scholde han makid the senatours gylty ayens the kynges real majeste O 160 Maystresse, what demestow of this? Schal I forsake this blame, that Y ne be no schame to the? Certes I have wold it (that is to seyn the savacioun of the senat), ne I schal nevere letten to wilne it, and that I confesse and am aknowe, but the entente of the accusour to ben disturbed schal cese For shal I clepe it thanne a felonye or a synne, that I have desired the savacioun of the ordre of the senat? And 170 certes yit hadde thilke same senat don by me thurw hir decretz and hir jugementz as though it were a synne and a felonye (that is to seyn, to wilne the savacioun of hem) But folye, that lyeth alwey to hymselfe, may noght change the merite of thynges, ne I trowe nat by the jugement of Socrates, that it were leveful to me to hide the sothe, ne assente to lesynges But certes, how so evere it be of this, 180 I putte it to gessen or prisien to the jugement of the and of wyse folk Of which thyng all the ordenaunce and the sothe, for as moche as folk that been to comen aftur our dayes schullen knowen it, I have put it in scripture and in remembraunce For touchynge the lettres falsly maked, by whiche lettres I am accused to han hoped the freedom of Rome, what aperteneth me to speken therof? Of 190 whiche lettres the fraude hadde ben schewed apertely, yif I hadde had liberte for to han used and ben at the confessioun of myn accusours, the whiche thyng in alle nedes hath greet strengthe For what other freedom mai men hopen? Certes I wolde that som other freedom myghte ben hoped, I wolde thanne han answeryd by the wordys of a man that hyghte Canyus For whan he was accused 200 by Gaius Cesar, Germaines sone, that he was knowynge and consentynge of a conjuracioun ymaked ayens hym, this Canyus answeride thus 'Yif I hadde wyst it, thou haddest nocht wyst it' In which thyng sorwe hath nocht so dullid my wyt, that I pleyne oonly that schrewed folk apparailen felonies ayens vertu, but I wondre gretly how that they may performe thynges that thei han hoped 210 for to doon For-why to wyne schrewydnesse — that cometh peraventure of our defeaute, but it is lyk a monstre and a merveyle, how that, in the presente sight of God, may ben achieved and performed swiche thynges as every felonous man hath conceyved in his thought ayens innocentz For which thyng oon of thy familiers nocht unskilfully axed thus 'Yif God is, whennes comen wikkide thyngis? 220 And yif God ne is, whennes comen gode thynges?' But al hadde it ben lefeful that felonous folk, that now desiren the blood and the deeth of alle gode men and ek of al the senat, han wilned to gon destroyed me, whom they han seyn alwey bataylen and defenden gode men and eek al the senat, yit hadde I nought disservyd of the faderes (that is to seyn, of the senatours) that they schulden wilne 230 my destruccioun

Thow remembrest wel, as I gesse, that whan I wolde doon or seyn any thyng, thow thiselve alwey present reuledest me

At the cite of Verone, whan that the kyng, greddy of comune slaughtre, caste hym to transporten upon al the ordre of the senat the gilt of his real majeste, of the whiche gilt that Albyn was accused, with how gret sykernesse of peril to me de- 240 fended I al the senat! Thow woust wel that I sey sooth, ne I n'avauntede me nevere in preysynge of myselve For alwey whan any wyght reseceyvet precious renoun in avauntynge hymselfe of his werkes, he amenuseth the secre of his conscience But now thow mayst wel seen to what eende I am comen for myn innocence, I reseceyve peyne of fals felonye for guerdoun of verrai vertu 250 And what open confessioun of felonye hadde evere juges so accordaunt in cruelte (that is to seyn, as myn accusynge hath) that either error of mannys wit, or elles condition of fortune, that is uncerteyn to alle mortal folk, ne submyttede some of hem (that is to seyn, that it ne enclynede som juge to have pite or compassioun)? For although I hadde ben accused that I wolde brenne holi houses and straungle 260 preestis with wykkid sweerd, or that I hadde greythed deth to alle gode men, alleges the sentence scholde han punysshed me present, confessed or convict But now I am remuved from the cite of Rome almost fyve hundred thowsand paas, I am withoute deffense dampnyd to proscriptioun and to the deeth for the stude and bountes that I have doon to the senat But, O, wel ben thei wurthy of meryte! (As who 270 seih, nay) Ther myghte nevere yit noon of hem ben convict of swich a blame as myn is Of which trespas myne accusours sayen ful wel the dignete, the whiche dignyte, for thei wolden derken it with medlynge of some felonye, they bare me on hande, and heden, that I hadde pollut and defouled my conscience with sacrilege for covetise of dignyte And certes thou thiselve, that art plaunted 280 in me, chacedest out of the sege of my corage alle covetise of mortal thynges, ne sacrilege ne hadde no leve to han a place in me byforn thyne eien For thow droppiddest every day in myn eris and in my thought thilke commaundement of

Pictagoras, that is to seyn, men schal serven to God, and noght to goddes Ne it was noght convenient ne no nede to taken help of the fouleste spritz — 290 I, that thow hast ordeyned and set in swich excellence, that thou makedest me lyk to God And over this, the right clene secre chaumbre of myn hous (that is to seyn, my wif), and the companye of myne honeste freendes, and my wyves fadir, as wel holi as worthy to ben reverenced thurw his owene dedes, defenden me fro alle suspeciuon of swich blame But O malice! For they that accusen 300 me taken of the, Philosophie, feith of so greet blame, for they trowen that I have had affynyte to malefice or enchantement, bycause that I am replenysshid and fulfid with thy techynges, and enformed of thi maneris And thus it suffiseth nat oonly that thi reverence ne avayle me nat, but yif that thow of thy free wil rather be blemessched with myne offenciuon But certes, to the harmes that I have, ther 310 hytdeth yit this encrees of harm, that the gessynge and the jugement of moche folk ne loken nothyng to the desertes of thynges, but oonly to the aventure of fortune, and jugen that oonly swiche thynges ben purveied of God, whiche that temporel welefulnesse commendeth (Glose As thus that yif a wyght have prosperite, he is a good man and worthy to han that prosperite, and whoso hath adversite, he 320 is a wikkid man, and God hath forsake hym, and he is worthy to han that adversite This is the opnyoun of some folk) Textus And therof cometh that good gessynge, first of alle thyng, forsaketh wrecches Certes it greveth me to thynke ryght now the diverse sentences that the peple seith of me And thus moche I seie, that the laste charge of contrarious fortune is this that whan that eny blame is leid 330 upon a caytif, men wenen that he hath desservyd that he suffreth And I, that am put away fro gode men, and despoyled of dignytes, and defouled of myn name by gessynge, have suffrid torment for my gode dedes Certes me semyth that I se the felonous covynes of wykkid men habounden in joye and in gladnesse, and

I se that every lorel schapeth hym to fynde out newe fraudes for to accuse 340 goode folk, and I se that goode men ben overthrown for drede of my peril, and every luxurious turmentour dar doon alle felonye unpunysshid, and ben excited therto by yiftes, and innocenz ne ben noght oonly despoiled of sikernesse, but of defense, and therefore me lyst to crie to God in this manere " thi delices, that pleynest so wepyngye and angwysschous for that ther lakketh somewhat to thy wefulnesse For so what man is so sad or of so parfyt wefulnesse, that he ne stryveth or pleyn-eth on som halve ayen the qualite of his estat? Forwhy ful anguysschous thing is the condicioun of mannes goodes, for eyther it cometh nat altogidre to a wyght, or elles it ne last nat perpetuel For som man hath gret rychesse, but he is aschamed of his ungentil lynage, and som man is renomyd of noblesse of kynrede, 90 but he is enclosed in so greet ang-wyssche of nede of thynges that hym were levere that he were unknowe, and som man haboundeth bothe in rychesse and noblesse, but yit he bewayleth his chaste ne accordeth no wyght lyghtly to the condicioun of his fortune, for alwey to every man ther is in somewhat that, unassayed, he ne woot nat, or elles he dredeth that he hath assaied And adde this also, that every weful man hath a ful delicaat feelyngye, so that, but yif alle thynges byfalle at his owene wil, for he is in- 110 pacient or is nat used to have noon adversite, anon he is thrown adoun for every litil thyng And ful litel thynges ben tho that withdrawn the somme or the who seith, thow thyself, ne no wyght ellis, nis a wrecche but whanne he weneth hymself a wrecche by reputacion of his corage) And ayenward, alle fortune is blisful to a man by the agreeablete or by the egalyte of hym that suffreth it What man is that that is so weleful that nolde change his estat whan he hath lost pacience?

The swetnesse of mannes welefulnessse is spraynd with many bitternesses, the whiche welefulnessse although it seme swete and joreful to hym that useth it, yit mai it nat ben withholden that it ne goth away whan it wole Thanne is it wel seene how wrechid is the blisfulnessse of mortel thynges, that neyther it dureth perpetuel with hem that every fortune resceyven agreeablye or egaly, ne it deliteth nat in al to hem that ben angwys-

O ye mortel folk, what seeke ye thanne blisfulnessse out of yourself which that is put in yowrself? Errour and folie confoundeth yow I schal schewe the schortly the poynt of soverayn blisfulnessse Is there anythyng more precyous to the than thiself? Thow wolt answer, 150 'nay' Thanne, yif it so be that thow art myghty over thyself (that is to seyn, by tranquillite of the soule), than hastow thyng in thi power that thow noldest nevere leesen, ne Fortune may nat bynemen it the And that thow mayst knowe that blisfulnessse ne mai nat standen in thynges that ben fortunous and temporel, now undirstond and gadere it togidre thus yif blisfulnessse be the soverayn good of nature that lyv-eth by resoun, ne thulke thyng nys nat soverayn good that may ben taken away in any wise (for more worthy thyng and more dygne is thulke thyng that mai nat ben take away), than scheweth it wel that the unstablenessse of fortune may nat atayne to resceyven verry blisfulnessse And yit more over, what man that this towmblynge welefulnessse ledeth, eyther he woot that it is chaungeable, or elles he woot it nat And yif he woot it nat, what blisful fortune may ther ben in the blynd-nesse of ignorance? And yif he woot that it is chaungeable, he mot alway ben adrad that he ne lese that thyng that he ne despised and forleten Certes eek that is a ful litel good that is born with evene herte whan it is lost (that is to seyn, that men do no more force of the lost than of the havyng) And for as moche as thow thiself art he to whom it hath be schewed and proved by ful many demonstracyons, as I woot wel, that the soules of men ne mowen nat deyen in no wyse, and ek syn it es cleer and certeyn that fortunous wele-fulnessse endeth by the deth of the body, it mai nat be doubted that, yif that deth may take away blisfulnessse, that al the kynde of mortel thynges ne descendeth into wrec-chidnesse by the ende of the deth And syn we knowe wel that many a man hath sought the fruyt of blisfulnessse, nat oonly with suffrynge of deeth, but eek with suffrynge of peynes and tormentz, how myghte thanne this present lif make men blisful, syn that whanne thulke selve lif es ended it ne maketh folk no

But for as mochel as the norisschynges of my resouns descenden now into the, I trowe it were tyme to use a litel strengere medicynes Now undrstand heere, al were it so that the yiftes of Fortune ne were nocht brutel ne transitorie, what is ther in hem that mai be thyn in any tyme, or elles that it nys fowl, yf that it be considered and lookyd perfilty? Richesses ben they precieus by the nature 10 of herself, or elles by the nature of the? What is most worth of rychesses? Is it nat gold or myght of moneye assembled? Certes thilke gold and thilke moneye schyneth and yeveth bettre renoun to hem that dispenden it than to thilke folk that mokeren it, for avaryce maketh alwey mokereres to ben hated, and largesse maketh folk cleer of renoun For, syn that swich thyng as is transferred fro 20 o man to an othr ne may nat duellen with no man, certes thanne is thilke moneye precieus whan it is translated into other folk and stynteth to ben had by usage of large yvyng of hym that hath yeven it And also yif al the moneye that is overal in the world were gadryd toward o man, it scholde make alle othere men to be nedey as of that And certes a voys al hool (that is to seyn, withouten amenusynge) 30 fulfilleth togydre the herynge of moche folk But certes your rychesses ne mowen nocht passen unto moche folk withouten amenusynge, and whan they ben apassed, nedes they maken hem pore that forgoon tho rychesses O streyt and nedey clepe I this richesse, syn that many folk ne mai nat han it al, ne al mai it nat comen to o man withoute povert of alle othere folk And the schynynge 40 of gemmes (that I clepe precieus stones) draweth it nat the eighen of folk to hemward (that is to seyn, for the beautes)? But certes, yf ther were beaute or bountee in the schynynge of stones, thilke clernesse is of the stones hemselve, and nat of men, for which I wondre gretly that men merveylen on swiche thynges Forwhi what thyng is it that, yf it wanteth moevynge and joynture of soule and body, 50 that by right myghte semen a fair creature to hym that hath a soule of resoun? For al be it so that gemmes drawn to hemselve a litel of the laste beaute of the world thurw the entente of hur creatour and thurw the distinccion of hemselve, yit, for as mochel as thei ben put under yowr excellence, thei ne han nat deserved by no way that ye schulde merveylen on hem And the beaute of feeldes, deliteth it 60 nat mochel unto yow?”

 among thi rychesses, but for they semeden fair and precyous, therefore thou haddest levere rekne hem among thi rychesses But what desirestow of Fortune with so greet a noyse and with so greet a fare? I trowe thou seeke to dryve away nede with habundance of thynges, but certes it turneth to you al in the contrarie 130 For why certes it nedeth of ful manye helpynges to kepyn the diversite of precious ostelementz, and sooth it es that of many thynges han they nede, that many thynges han, and ayenward of litel nedeth hem that mesuren hir fille after the han no propre good iset in yow, for which ye mooten seeke outward your 140 goodes in foreyne and subg^t thynges?

So is thanne the condicion of thynges turned up-so-down, that a man, that is a devyne beest be meryte of his resoun, thinketh that hymself nys neyther fair ne noble but it be thurw possessioun of ostelementz that ne han no soules And certes alle othere thynges ben apayed of hir owene beautes, but ye men that ben semblable to God by yowr reson- 150 able thought, desiren to apparailen your excellent kynde of the loweste thynges, ne ye undirstanden nat how greet a wrong ye don to your creatour For he wolve that mankynde were moost wurthy and noble of any othere erthly thynges, and ye thresten adoun yowre dignytes bynethen the loweste thynges For yif that al the good of every thyng be more precyous than is thilke thyng whos that the 160 good es, syn ye demen that the fowleste thynges ben your goodes, thanne submitten ye and putten yourselfen undir the fouleste thynges by your estimacioun, and certes this betydeh nat withouten your desert For certes swich is the condicioun of alle mankynde, that oonly whan it hath knowyng of itself, thanne passeth it in noblesse alle othere thynges, and whan it foretith the 170 knowyng of itself thanne it is brought bynethen alle beestes For why alle othere lyvyng beestes han of kynde to knowe nat hymself, but whan that men leeten the knowyng of hymself, it cometh hem of vice But how broode scheweth the error and the folie of yow men, that wenen that anything mai ben apparaild with straunge apparelementz! But forsothe that mai nat be don For yif a wyght 180 schyneth with thynges that ben put to hym (as thus, yif thilke thynges schynen with whiche a man is aparayled), certes thilke thynges ben comended and preysed with whiche he is apparayled, but natheles, the thyng that is covered and wrapped under that duelleth in his filthe

And I denye that thilke thyng be

He dalf up precyous perles (That is to seyn, that he that hem first 40 up dalf, he dalf up a precyous peril, for-why, for the precyousnesse of swuch thyng hath many man ben in peril)

“Quid autem de dignitatibus” —

Prosa 6

But what schal I seye of dignytes and of powers, the whiche ye men, that neither knowen verray dignyte ne verray power, areysen hem as heyghe as the hevене? The whiche dignytees and poweres yif thei comen to any wikkid man, thei doon as greet damages and destrucciouns as dooth the flaumbe of the mountaigne Ethna whan the flaumbe walweth up, ne no deluge ne doth so cruele harmes Certes the 10 remembreth wel, as I trowe, that thilke dignyte that men clepyn the imperie of consulers, the whiche that whilom was begynnyng of fredom, yowr eldres covyteden to han don away that dignyte for the pride of the consulers And ryght for the same pride yowr eldres byforn that tyme hadden doon away out of the cite of Rome the kynges name (that is to seyn, thei nolden han no lenger no 20 kyng)

But now, if so be that dignytees and poweris ben yiven to gode men, the whiche thyng is ful selde, what aggreable thynges is ther in tho dignytees or poweris but only the goodnesse of folk that usen hem? And therefore it is thus that honour ne cometh nat to vertu for cause of dignyte, but, ayenward, honour cometh to dignyte for cause of vertu But which 30 is thilke your derworthe power that is so cleer and so requerable? O, ye erthliche bestes, considere ye nat over which thyng that it semeth that ye han power? Now yif thou saye a mows among othere mys that chalanged to hymself-ward ryght and power over alle othere mys, how gret scorn woldestow han of it! (Glosa So fareth at by men, the body hath power over the body) For yif thou looke wel upon 40 the body of a wyght, what thyng shaltow fynde more freele than is mankynde, the whiche men ful ofte ben slayn by bytyng of smale fyes, or elles with the entrynge of crepyng worms into the pryvetees of mannes body? But wher schal men fynden any man that mai exercen or haunten any ryght upon another man, but only on his body, or elles upon thynges that ben lower 50 than the body, the whiche I clepe fortunous possessiouns? Maystow evere have any comaundement over a free corage? Maystow remuwen fro the estat of his propre reste a thought that is clyvyng togidre in hymself by stedfast reason? As whilom a tyraunt wende to confownde a freman of corage, and wende to constrayne hym by torment to maken hym discoveren and accusen folk that 60 wisten of a conjuracioun (which I clepe a confederacye) that was cast ayens this tyraunt, but this freman boot of his owene tonge, and caste it in the visage of thulke wode tyraunt So that the tormentz that this tyraunt wende to han maketh matere of cruelte, this wise man maketh it matere of vertu But what thing is it that a man may doon to an other man, that he ne may resceyven 70 the same thyng of other folk in hymself? (Or thus what may a man don to folk, that folk ne may don hym the same?) I have herd told of Busyrides, that was wont to sleen his gester that herberweden in his hous, and he was slayn hymself of Ercules that was his gest Regulus hadde taken in bataile manye men of Affryke and cast hem into feteres, but sone thereafter he most yvve his handes to ben 80 bownde with the cheynes of hem that he hadde whilom overcomen Wenestow thanne that he be myghty that hath no power to doon a thyng that othere ne mai doon in hym that he doth in othere? And yit moreover, yif it so were that these dygnytes or poweris hadden any propre or naturel goodnesse in hemself, nevere wolde they comen to schrewes For contrarious thynges ne ben nat wont to 95 ben ifelashed togydre Nature refusetn that contrarious thynges ben ijoynged And so, as I am in certeyn that ryght wykkyd folk han dignytees ofte tyme, thanne scheweth it wel that dignytees and poweres ne ben nat gode of hir owene kynde, syn that they suffren hemselfe to cleven or joynen hem to schrewes And certes the same thyng mai I most dignehche juggen and seyn of alle the 100 yiftes of Fortune that most plenteuously comen to schrewes Of the whiche yiftes I trowe that it oughte ben considered, that no man douteth that he ne is strong in whom he seeth strengthe, and in whom that swyftnesse is, sooth it is that he is swyft, also musyke maketh musicyens, and phisyk maketh phisycyeens, and rethoryke, rethoriens Forwhy the nature of every thyng maketh his proprete, ne 110 it is nat entremedlyd with the effect of contrarious thynges, and as of wil it chaseth out thynges that to it ben contrarie But certes rychesse mai nat restreynne avarice unstaunched, ne power ne maketh nat a man myghty over hymselfe, which that vicyous lustes holden destreynd with cheynes that ne mowen nat ben unbownden And dignytees that ben yvven to schrewide folk nat only ne 120 maketh hem nat digne, but it scheweth rather al opynly that they ben unworthy and undigne And whi is it thus? Certes for ye han joi to clepen thynges with false names, that beren hem al in the contrarie, the whiche names ben ful ofte reproved by the effect of the same thynges, so that these ilke rychesses ne oughten nat by ryghte to ben cleped rychesses, ne swych power ne aughte nat ben clepyd 130 power, ne swich dignyte ne aughte nat ben clepyd dignyte And at the laste, I may conclude the same thyng of alle the yiftes of Fortune, in which ther nys nothing to ben desired, ne that hath in hymself naturel bownte, as it es ful wel yseene For neither thei ne joynen hem nat alwey to gode men, ne maken hem alwey gode to whom they been ijoynd

We han wel knowen how many grete harmes and destruccions weren idoon by the emperour Nero He leet brennen the cite of Rome, and made sleen the senatours, and he cruel whilom slough his brothr, and he was makid moyst with the blood of his modir (that is to seyn, he leet sleen and statten the body of his modir to seen wher he was conceived), and he lookede on every halve uppon hir colde dede 10 body, ne no teer ne wette his face, but he was so hardherted that he myghte ben domesman or juge of hir dede beaute And natheles yit governed this Nero by septre alle the peples that Phebus (the sonne) may seen, comynge fro his uttreste arysynge til he hide his bemes undir the wawes (That is to seyn he governede al the peples by ceptre imperial that the sonne goth aboute from est to west) 20 And ek this Nero governyde by ceptre alle the peples that ben undir the colde sterres that highten the Septem Tryones (This is to seyn he governede alle the peples that ben under the partye of the north) And eek Nero governede alle the peples that the vyolent wynd Nothus scorklith, and baketh the brennyng sandes by his drye heete (that is to seyn, al the peple in the south) But yit ne myghte nat 30 al his heie power torne the woodnesse of this wikkid Nero Allas! it is grevous fortune as ofte as wikkid sweerd is joyned to cruel venym (that is to seyn, venymous cruellte to lordschipe)”

Philosophie “For sothe,” quod sche, “and that is a thyng that mai drawn to governaunce swiche hertes as ben worthy and noble of hir nature, but natheles it may nat drawn or tollen swiche hertes as ben ibrought to the fulle perfeccioun of vertu, that is to seyn, covetise of glorie and renoun to han wel admin- 20 ystred the comune thynges, or doon gode desertes to profyt of the comune For see now and considere how litel and how voyde of alle prys is thylke glorie Certeyn thyng is, as thou hast learned by the demonstacion of astronomye, that al the envyroung of the erthe aboute ne halt but the resoun of a prykke at regard of the gretnesse of hevene, that is to seyn that, yf ther were makid 30 comparysoun of the erthe to the gretnesse of hevene, men wolde juggen in al that the erthe ne heelde no space Of the whiche litel regoun of this world, the ferthe partye is inhabited with lvyng beestes that we knowen, as thou hast thiselwe learned by Tholome, that proveth it And yif thow haddest withdrawn and abated in thy thought fro thilke ferthe partie as moche space as the see 40 and the mareys contene and overgoon, and as moche space as the regoun of drowghte overstreccheth (that is to seyn, sandes and desertes), wel unnethe sholde ther duellen a ryght streyte place to the habitacion of men And ye thanne, that ben envyrouned and closed withynne the leeste prykke of thilke prykke, thynken ye to manifesten or publiessen your renoun and doon your name for to be 50 born forth? But your glorie that is so narwe and so streyt ithrungen into so litel bowndes, how mochel conteneth it in largesse and in greet doynge? And also set this therto that many a nacioun, diverse of tonge and of maneris and ek of resoun of hir lvyng, ben inhabited in the cloos of thilke lytel habitacle, to the whiche nacyons, what for diffi- 60 culte of weyes, and what for diversite of langages, and what for defaute of unusage and entrecomunynge of marchandise, nat oonly the names of synguler men ne may nat strecchen, but eek the fame of citees ne may nat strecchen. At the laste, certes, in the tyme of Marcus Tulyus, as hymselfe writ in his book, that the renoun of the comune of Rome ne hadde nat nat yit passid ne clomben over the mountaigne that 70 highte Caucasus, and yit was thilke tyme Rome wel waxen and greetly redouted of the Parthes, and eek of the othere folk enhabitynge aboute Seestow nat thanne how streyt and how compressid is thilke glorie that ye travalen aboute to schewe and to multeplye? May thanne the glorie of a synguler Romeyn strecchen thider as the fame of the name of Rome may nat clymben 80 ne passen? And ek seestow nat that the maneris of diverse folk and ek hir lawes ben discordaunt among hemselfe, so that thilke thyng that som men juggen worthy of preysynge, other folk juggen that it is worthy of torment? And therof comyth it that, though a man delyte hym in preysynge of his renoun, he ne mai nat in no wyse bryngen forth ne spreden his name to many 90 manere peples. And therefore every maner man aughte to ben apayed of his glorie, that is publysschid among his owene neygheours, and thilke noble renoun schal ben restreynd withynne the boundes of o manere folk. But how many a man, that was ful noble in his tyme, hath the wrecchid and nedy foryetynge of writaris put out of mynde and doon away, al be it so 100 that, certes, thilke wrytynges profiten litel, the whiche wrytynges long and dirk eelde doth away, bothe hem and ek hir auctours! But yow men semeth to geten yow a perdurablete, whan ye thynken that in tyme comynge your fame schal lasten. But natheles yif thow wolt maken comparysoun to the endles spaces of eternyte, what thyng hastow by which thow mayst rejoisen the of long 110 lastynge of thi name? For yif ther were makyd comparysoun of the abydyng of a moment to ten thowsand wynter, for as mochel as bothe two spaces ben endyd, for yit hath the moment som porcoun of it, although it litel be. But natheles thilke selve nowmbre of yeeris, and eek as many yeris as therto mai be multiplyed, ne mai nat certes be comparysoun to the perdurablete that is endles, for 120 of thynges that han ende may ben makid comparysoun, but of thynges that ben withouten ende to thynges that han ende may be makid no comparysoun. And forthi is it that, although renome, of as longe tyme as evere the list to thynken, were thought to the regard of eternyte, that is unstaunchable and infynyt, it ne sholde nat only semen litel, but pleynliche ryght noght. But 130 ye men, certes, ne konne doon no thyng aryght, but yif it be for the audience of the peple and for idel rumours, and ye forsaken the grete worthynesse of concience and of vertu, and ye seeken yowr gerdouns of the smale wordes of straunge folk. Have now (here and undrstand) in the lyghtnesse of swich pryde and veyne glorye how a man scornede festyvaly and myriely swich vanyte 140 Whilom ther was a man that hadde assaied with stryvynge wordes another man, the whiche, nat for usage of verray vertu but for proud veyne glorie, had taken upon hym falsly the name of a philosophre. This rather man that I spak of thoughte he wolde assaie wher he, thilke, were a philosophre or no, that is to seyn, yif that he wolde han suffrid lightly in pacience the wronges 150 that weren doon unto hym. The tother man answerede ayen ful bytyngly and seyde: "I hadde wel undirstonden it yif thou haddest holde thi tonge 160 stille." But what is it to thise noble worthy men (for, certes, of swyche folk speke I) that seken glorie with vertu? What is it?" quod sche, "what atteyneth fame to swiche folk, whan the body is resolved by the deeth at the laste? For

Tho fastnede sche a litel the syghte of hir eyen, and withdrowgh hir ryght as it were into the streyfte seete of here thought, and bigan to speke ryght thus "Alle the cures," quod sche, "of mortel folk, whiche that travailen hem in many manere studies, gon certes by diverse weyes, but natheles thei enforcen hem alle to comyn oonly to oon ende of blisfulnesse And blisfulnesse is 10 swich a good, that whoso that hath geten it, he ne may over that nothyng more desire And this thyng forsothe is the soverayn good that conteneth in hymself alle maner goodes, to the whiche good if ther fayled any thyng, it myghte nat ben sovereyn good, for thanne wer ther som good out of this ilke sovereyn good, that myghte ben desired Now is it cleer and certeyn thanne, that blisfulnesse is a parfyt estat by the congregacioun of alle goodes, the whiche blisfulnesse, as I have seyde, alle mortel folk enforcen hem to geten by diverse weyes Forwhy the covetise of verray good is naturely iplauntyd in the hertes of men, but the myswandrynge errouer mysledeth hem into false goodes Of the whiche men, some of hem wenen that sovereyn good be to lyven withoute nede 30 of any thyng, and travaylen hem to ben habundaunt of rychesses And some othere men demen that sovereyn good be for to be ryght digne of reverence, and enforcen hem to ben revered among hir neygheours by the honours that thei han igeten And some folk ther ben that holden that ryght hey power be sovereyn good, and enforcen hem for to reignen or elles to joygnen hem to hem that 40 reignen And it semeth to some other folk, that noblesse of renoun be the sovereyn good, and hasten hem to geten hem glorious name by the artz of werre or of pees And many folk mesuren and gessen that the sovereyn good be joye and gladnesse, and wenen that it be ryght blisful thyng to plowngen hem in voluptuous delyt And ther ben folk that entrechaungen the causes and the 50 endes of thyse forseide goodes, as they that desiren rychesses to han power and delitz, or elles they desiren power for to have moneye or for cause of renoun In these thynges and in swiche other thynges is torned al the entencioun of desyrynges and werkes of men, as thus noblesse and favour of peple, which that yyveth to men, as it semeth hem, a maner cleernesse of renoun, and wyf 60 and children, that men desiren for cause of delyt and myrnesse But forsothe freendes schulde nat ben rekned among the goodes of fortune, but of vertu, for it is a ful hooly maner thyng, alle these othere thinges forsothe ben taken for cause of power or elles for cause of delyt Certes now am I redy to referren the goodes of the body to these forseide thynges aboven, for it semeth that 70 strengthe and gretnesse of body yvven power and worthynesse, and that beaute and swyftnesse yvven noblesse and glorie of renoun, and heele of body semeth yvven delyt In alle these thynges it semeth oonly that blisfulnesse is desyred, forwhy thilke thing that every man desreth moost over alle thynges he demeth that it be the sovereyn good, but I have diffyned that blisfulnesse is the sov- 80 ereyn good, for which every wyght demeth that thilke estat that he desreth over alle thynges, that it be blisfulnesse

Now hastow thanne byforn thyne

Certes also ye men, that ben erthliche beestes, dremen alwey your bygynnyng, although it be with a thynne ymaginacioun, and by a maner thought, al be it nat clerly ne parfityly, ye loken from afer to thilke verray fyn of blisfulnesse And therefore naturel entencioun ledeth yow to thilke verray good, but many maner errors mystorneth yow therfro Considere now yif that by thilke 10 thynges by whiche a man weneth to geten hym blisfulnesse, yif that he mai comen to thilke ende that he weneth to come by nature For yif that moneye, or honours, or these othere forseide thynges, brynge to men swich a thyng that no good ne fayle hem ne semeth faile, certes thanne wol I graunte that they ben maketh blisful by thilke thynges that thei han geten But yif 20 it so be that thilke thynges mowen nat performen that they byheten, and that there be defaute of manye goodis, scheweth it nat thanne clerly that false beute of blyfulnesse is knowen and ataynt in thilke thynges First and forward thow thyself, that haddest haboundances of rychesses nat longe agoon, I aske yif that, in the habowndance of alle thilke rychesses, thow were nevere angwys- 30 sours ne sory in thy corage of any wrong or grevance that bytydde the on any side?”

“Certes,” quod I, “it ne remembreth me nat that evere I was so fre of my thought that I ne was alwey in angwyse of somwhat”

“And was nat that,” quod sche, “for that the lakkide somwhat that thow woldest nat han lakkid, or elles thou 40 haddest that thow noldest nat han had?”

"Set dignitatibus" — Prosa 4

But dignytees, to whom thei ben comen, make they hym honourable and reverent?

Han thei nat so gret strengthe that thei may putten vertus in the hertes of folk that usen the lordschipes of hem, or elles may they don away the vices? Certes thei ben nat wont to don away wikkidnesse, but thei ben wont rather to schewen wykkydnesse And therof cometh it that Y have nigt gret disdayn that 10 dignytes ben yyven ofte to wikkide men For which thyng Catullus clepid a consul of Rome that hyghte Nonyus 'postum' or 'boch' (as who seith, he clepid hym a congregacioun of vices in his brest, as a postum is ful of corrupcioun), al were this Nonyus set in chayere of dygnite Sestow nat thanne how grete vylyenye dignytes don to wikkide men? Certes unworthy-nesse of wikkide men schulde ben the 20 lesse isene if thei neere renommed of none honours Certes thou thysel ne myghtest nat ben broght, with as many perils as thow myghtest suffren, that thow woldest peren the magistrat with Decorat (that is to seyn, that for no peril that myghte byfallen the by offence of the kyng Theodorik, thou noldest nat be felawe in governaunce with Decorat), whan thow seye that he hadde wikkid corage of a likerous 30 schrewe and of an accusour Ne I ne mai nat for swiche honours juggen hem worthy of reverence that I deme and holde unworthy to han thilke same honours Now yif thow seie a man that were fulfilled of wysdom, certes thou ne myghtest nat deme that he were unworthy to the honour or elles to the wisdom of which he is fulfilled?"

"No," quod I

"Certes dignytees," quod sche, "aperteignen properly to vertu, and vertu transporteth dignyte anon to thilke man to which sche herself is conjoined And for as moche as honours of peple ne mai nat maken folk digne of honour, it is wel seyn cleerly that thei ne han no propre beaute of dignyte And yet men aughten taken more heede in this For yif a wykkyd wyght be in so mochel the fowlere 50 and the more outcast that he is despysed of moost folk, so as dignyte ne mai nat maken schrewes worthy of no reverence, than maketh dignyte schrewes rather so much more despised than preysed, the whiche schrewes dignyte scheweth to moche folk, and forsothe nat unpunyssched (that is for to seyn that schrewes revengen hem ayenward uppon dignytes), for thei yelden ayen to dignytes as greet 60 gerdoun, whan they byspotten and defoulen dignytes with hir vylenye And for as mochel as thou mow knowe that thilke verray reverence ne mai nat comen by thise schadwy transitorie dignytes, undirstond now thus yif that a man hadde used and had manye maner dignytees of consules, and weere comen peraventure among straunge nacions, scholde thilke honour maken hym worschpful and 70 redouted of straunge folk? Certes yif that honour of peple were a natureel yifte to dignytes, it ne myghte nevere cesen nowhere amonges no maner folk to don his office, right as fyer in every contre ne stynteth nat to eschaufen and to ben hoot But for as mochel as for to be holden honourable or reverent ne cometh nat to folk of hir propre strengthe of nature, but only of the false opynyoun of 80 folk (that is to seyn, that veenen that dignytes maken folk digne of honour), anon therefore, whan that thei comen there as folk ne knowen nat thilke dignytees, hir honours varysschen away, and that anon But that is amonges straunge folk, maystow seyn Ne amonges hem ther thei weren born, ne duren nat thilke dignytes alwey? Certes the dignyte of the provostrye of Rome was whilom a 90 greet power, now nys it no thyng but an idel name, and the rente of the senatorie a greet charge And yif a wyght whilom hadde the office to taken heede to the vitayles of the peple, as of corn and othere thynges, he was holden amonges grete, but what thyng is now more outcast than thilke provostrye? And, as I have seyde a litel herebyforn, that thilke thyng that hath no propre beute of hymself re- 100 sceyveth somtyme prys and schynynge, and somtyme leeseth it, by the opynyoun of usaunces Now yif that dignytes thanne ne mowen nat make folk digne of reverence, and if that dignytees waxen foule of hir wil by the filthe of schrewes, and yif dignytees leesen hir schynynge by chaungynge of tymes, and yif thei waxen fowle by estimacion of peple, what is it that they han in 110 himself of beaute that oughte ben desired? (As who seith noon) Thanne ne mowen they yeven no beute of dignyte to noone othere

“An vero regna” — Prosa 5

But regnes and familiarites of kynges, mai thei maken a man to ben myghti? How elles, whan hir blisfulnesse dureth perpetuely? But certes the olde age of tyme passed, and ek of present tyme now, is ful of ensaumples how that kynges han chaungyd into wrecchidnesse out of hir welefulnesse O, a noble thyng and a cleer thyng is power that is nat fownden myghty to kepe itself! And yif that 10 power of remes be auctour and makere of blisfulnesse, yif thilke power lakketh on any syde, amenuseth it nat thilke blisfulnesse and bryngeth in wrecchidnesse? But yit, al be it so that the remes of mankynde strecchen broode, yit moot ther ned be moche folk over whiche that every kyng ne hath no lordschipe ne comaundement And certes uppon thilke syde that power fayleth, which that maketh 20 folk blisful, ryght on the same syde noun-power entreth undirnethe, that maketh hem wrecches In this manere thanne moten kynges han more porcioun of wrecchidnesse than of welefulnesse A

tyraunt, that was kyng of Sysle, that hadde assayed the peril of his estat, schewede by simyltude the dredes of remes by gastnesse of a swerd that heng over the heved of his famyler 30

What thyng is thanne this power, that mai nat don awaye the bytynges of bysynesse, ne eschewe the prykkes of drede? And certes yit wolde thei lyven in syker- nesse, but thei may nat, and yit they glorifien hem in hir power Holdestow thanne that thilke man be mighty, that thow seest that he wolde doon that he may nat doon? And holdestow thanne hym a myghti man, that hath 40 envyrownd his sydes with men of arnes or sergeantz, and dredeth more hem that he maketh agast thanne thei dreden hym, and that is put in the handes of his servauntz for he scholde seme myghty? But of familers or servantz of kynges, what scholde I telle the any thyng, syn that I myself have schewyd the that rewmes hemself ben ful of greet feblesse? The whiche famyleres, 50 certes, the real power of kynges, in hool estat and in estaat abated, ful ofte throweth adoun Nero constreynede Senek, his famyler and his mayster, to chesen on what deeth he wolde deye Antonyus comaundede that knyghtes lowen with here swerdes Papynian, his famyler, which Papynian that had ben long tyme ful myghty amonges hem of the court And yet certes thei wolden 60 bothe han renounced hir power, of whiche two Senek enforcede hym to yeven to Nero his riches, and also to han gon into solitarie exil But whan the grete weyghte (that is to seyn, of lordes power or of fortune) draweth hem that schullen falle, neither of hem ne myghte don that he wolde What thyng is thanne thilke power, that though men han it, yit thei ben agast, and whanne thou woldest han 70 it, thou n'art nat siker, and yif thou woldest forleeten it, thow mayst nat eschuen it? But whether swiche men ben freendes at nede, as ben conseyled by fortune and nat be vertu? Certes swiche folk as weleful fortune maketh frendes, contraryous fortune maketh hem enemyes

And what pestilence is more myghty for to anoeye a wyght than a famyler enemy?

But glorie, how deceyvable and how foul is it ofte! For which thyng nat unskilfully a tragedien (that is to seyn, a makere of dytees that highten tragedies) cride and seide “O glorie, glorie,” quod he, “thow n'art nothyng elles to thousandes of folk but a greet sweller of eres!” For manye han had ful greet renoun by the false opinyoun of the peple, and what thyng mai ben thought foulere than swich preysynge? 10 For thilke folk that ben preysed falsly, they mote nedes han schame of hire preysynges And yif that folk han geten hem thonk or preysynge by here dissertes, what thyng hath thilke pris echud or encreased to the conscience of wise folk, that mesuren hir good, nat by the rumour of the peple, but by the sothfastnesse of conscience? And yif it seme a fair thyng a man to han encreced and sprad his 20 name, thanne folweth it that it is demed to ben a foul thyng yif it ne be ysprad and encreced But, as I seide a litil herebyforn, that syn ther moot nedes ben many folk to whiche folk the renoun of a man ne mai nat comen, it byfalleth that he that thow wenest be glorious and renowned semeth in the nexte partie of the erthes to ben withouten glorie and withouten renoun And certes 30

amonges these thynges I ne trowe nat that the pris and the grace of the peple nys neyther worthi to ben remembered, ne cometh of wys jugement, ne is ferme perdurably

But now of this name of gentillesse, what man is it that ne may wele seen how veyn and how flyttinge a thyng it es? For yf the name of gentillesse be referred to renoun and cleernesse of lynage, 40 thanne is gentil name but a foreyn thyng (that is to seyn, to hem that glorysten hem of hir lynage) For it semeth that gentillesse be a maner preisynge that cometh of the dessertes of auncestres, and yf preisynge make gentillesse, thanne mote they nedes ben gentil that been preyed For which thyng it folweth that yf thou ne have no gentillesse of thiself (that is to seyn, prys that cometh of thy desert), for- 50 eyn gentillesse ne maketh the nat gentil But certes yf ther be ony good in gentillesse, I trowe it be al only this, that it semeth as that a maner necessite be imposed to gentil men for that thei ne schulde nat owtrayen or forlyven fro the vertus of hir noble kynrede

How grete seknesses and how grete sorwes unsuffrable, ryght as a maner fruyt of wykkidnesse, ben thilke delices wont to bryngen to the bodyes of folk that usen hem! Of whiche delices I not what joi may ben had of here moevynge, but this woot I wel, that 10 whosevere wol remembren hym of his luxures, he schal wel undirstonden that the issues of delices ben sorweful and sorye And yf thilke delices mowen maken folk blisful, thanne by the same cause moten these beestes ben clepid blisful, of whiche beestes al the entencion hasteth to fulfille here bodily jolyte And the gladnesse of wyf and children were an honest thyng, but it hath ben seyde that it is 20 overmoche ayens kynde that children han ben fownden tormentours to here fadris, I not how manye, of whiche children how bytyng is every condicioun, it nedeth nat to tellen it the that hast er this tyme assayed it, and art yit now angwysshous In this approve I the sentence of my disciple Euripidis, that seide that he that hath no children is weleful by in- 30 fortune

Now is it no doute thanne that these weyes ne ben a maner mysledynges to blisfulness, ne that they ne mowen nat leden folk thider as thei byheten to leden hem But with how grete harmes these forseide weyes ben enlaced, I schal schewe the shortly Forwhy yf thou enforcest the to assemble moneye, thow must byreven hym his moneye that hath it, and yf thow wolt schynen with dignitytees, thow 10

must bysechen and supplyen hem that yvven the dignytees, and yif thow coveytest be honour to gon byfore othere folk, thow schalt defoule thiself thurw humblesse of axynge Yif thou desrest power, thow schalt, be awaytes of thy subgetis, anoyously ben cast undir by manye periles Axestow glorye? Thow shalt so bien distract by aspere thynges that thow schalt forgon syker- 20 nesse And yif thow wolt leden thi lif in delices, every wyght schal despysen the and forleeten the, as thow that art thral to thyng that is right foul and brutyl (that is to seyn, servaunt to thā body) Now is it thanne wel yseyn how litil and how brotel possessioun thei coveyten that putten the goodes of the body aboven hir owene resoun For maystow surmounten these olifauntes in gretnesse or weighte of 30 body? Or maistow ben strengere than the bole? Maystow ben swyftere than the tigre? Byhoold the spaces and the stablenesse and the swyft cours of the hevене, and stynt somtyme to wondren on foule thynges The whiche hevене certes nys nat rather for these thynges to ben wondryd upon, than for the resoun by which it is governed But the schynynge of thi forme (that is to seyn, the beute of thā body), how swyftly passynge is it, and how transtorie!

Certes it es more flytynge than the mutabilite of floures of the somer sesoun For so as Aristotle telleth, that if that men hadden eyghen of a beeste that highte lynx, so that the lokynge of folk myghte percen thurw the thynges that withtonden it, whoso lokide thanne in the entrayles of the body of Alcibiades, that 50 was ful fair in the superface withoute, it schulde seme ryght foul And forthi yif thow semest fair, thy nature ne maketh nat that, but the deceyvauce of the feblesse of the eighen that loken But preise the goodes of the body as mochlil as evere the lyst, so that thow knowe algatis that, whatso it be (that is to seyn, of the godes of the body) which that thou wondrist uppon, mai ben destroyed or dissolvld 60 by the heete of a fevere of thre dayes Of alle whiche forside thynges Y mai reducen this shortly in a somme that these worldly goodes, whiche that ne mowen nat yeven that they byheeten, ne ben nat parfite by the congregacioun of alle goodis, that they ne ben nat weyes ne pathes that bryngen men to blisfulnesse, ne maken men to ben blisful

For as moche thanne as thow hast seyn which is the fourme of good that nys nat parfit, and which is the forme of good that is parfit, now trowe I that it were good to schewe in what this perfeccioun of blisfulnesse is set And in this thing I trowe that we schulde first enquire for to witen, yf that any swich maner good as thulke good that thou hast dyffinysshed a litel herebyforn (that is to seyn, sovereyn 10 good) may be founde in the nature of thynges, for that veyn ymagynacioun of thought ne desceyve us nat, and put us out of the sothfastnesse of thulke thing that is summytted to us But it may nat be denyed that thilke good ne is, and that it nys ryght as a welle of alle goodes For alle thing that is cleped inparfyt is proevyd inparfit be the amenusynge of perfec-cioun or of thing that is parfit And 20 herof cometh it that in every thing general, yif that men seen any thing that is inparfit, certes in thilke general ther moot ben som thing that is parfit For yif so be that perfeccioun is don away, men may nat thinke ne say fro whennes thilke thing is that is cleped inparfyt For the nature of thynges ne took nat hir begynny[n]ge of thynges amenused and inparfit, but it procedith of thynges that ben alle 30 hole and absolut, and descendith so doun into uttereste thynges and into thynges empty and withouten fruyt But, as I have schewid a litel here byforn that yif ther be a blisfulnesse that be freel and veyn and inparfyt, ther may no man doute that ther nys som blisfulnesse that is sad, stedefast, and parfyt "

Boece "This is concluded," quod I, "feermely and soothfastly" 40

Philosophie "But considere also," quod sche, "in whom this blisfulnesse enhabiteth The comune accordaunce and conceyt of the corages of men proveth and graunteth that God, prince of alle thynges, is good For, so as nothyng mai ben thought betere than God, it mai nat ben doutet thanne that he that no thyng nys betere, that he nys good Certes resoun scheweth that God is so good 50 that it proeveth by verray force that parfvt good is in hym For yif God nys swych, he ne mai nat be prince of alle thynges, for certes somthing possessyng in itself parfyt good schulde be more worthy than God, and it scholde semen that thilke were first and eldere than God For we han schewyd apertely that alle thynges that ben parfyt ben first er thynges that ben inparfit, and forthy, for as 60 moche as that my resoun or my proces ne go nat away withouten an ende, we owe to graunte that the sovereyn God is ryght ful of sovereyn parfit good And we han establissched that the sovereyne good is verray blisfulnesse Thanne moot it nedis be that verray blisfulnesse is set in sovereyn God"

"This ys," quod I, "a fair thing and a precious, clepe it as thou wilt, be it corolarie, or porisme, or meede of coroune, or declarynges "

"Certes," quod sche, "nothing nys fairere than is the thing that by resoun schulde ben addid to these forseide thynges "

"What thing?" quod I

"So," quod sche, "as it semeth that 180 blisfulnesse contenech many thynges, it were for to witen whether that alle these thynges maken or conjoynen as a maner body of blisfulnesse by diversite of parties or membres, or elles yif any of alle these thynges ben swich that it acomplise by hymself the substaunce of blisfulnesse, so that alle these othere thynges ben referid and brought to blisfulnesse (that is to seyn, as to the cheef of hem) " 190

"Thanne ben they none membres," quod sche, "for elles it schulde seme that blisfulnesse were conjoyned al of o membre allone, but that is a thing that mai 230 not ben don "

"This thing," quod I, "nys not doutous, but I abide to herkennen the remenaunt of the question "

"This is open and cler," quod sche, "that alle othere thynges ben referid and brought to good For therefore is suffisaunce requerid, for it is demyd to ben good, and forthy is power requerid, for men trowen also that it be good, and this same 240 thing mowen we thinken and coniecten of reverence, and of noblesse, and of delyt Thanne is sovereyn good the somme and the cause of al that oughte ben desired, for why thilke thing that withholdeth no good in itselfe, ne semblance of

Seestow nat thanne in how greet filthe these schrewes been iwrapped, and with which clernesse these gode folk schynen?
 In this scheweth it wel that to goode folk ne lakketh neveremo hir meedes, ne schrewes ne lakken neveremo turmentes, for of alle thinges that ben idoon, thilke thing for which any thing is doon, it semeth as by ryght that thilke thing be the mede of that, as thus yif a man ren- 10 neth in the stadye (or in the forlong) for the corone, thanne lith the mede in the coroune for which he renneth And I have schewed that blisfulnesse is thilke same good for which that alle thinges ben doon, thanne is thilke same good purposed to the werkes of mankynde right as a comune mede, which mede ne may nat ben disseveryd fro goode folk For no wight as by ryght, fro thennesforth that hym 20 lakketh goodnesse, ne schal ben cleped good For which thing folk of gode maneres, hir medes ne forsaken hem neveremo For al be it so that schrewes waxen as wode as hem lyst ayem goode folk, yit natheles the coroune of wise men ne schal nat fallen ne faden, for foreyn schrewednesse ne bynymeth nat fro the corages of goode folk hir propre honour But yif that any wyght rejoysede 30 hym of goodnesse that he hadde taken fro withoute (as who seith, yif any man hadde his goodnesse of any other man than of hymself), certes he that yaf hym thilke goodnesse, or elles som other wyght, myghte benymen it hym But for as moche as to every wyght his owene propre bounte yeveth hym his mede, thanne at erste schal he failen of mede whan he foretith to ben good And at the laste, 40 so as alle medes ben requerd for men wenen that thei ben gode, who is he that nolde deme that he that is ryght myghti of good were partlees of the mede? And of what mede schal he ben ryght greet aboven alle medes Remembre the of thilke noble corrolarie that I yaf the a litel herebyforn, and gadre it togidre 50 in this manere so as God hymself is blisfulnesse, thanne is it cler and cer-tein that alle gode folk ben imaked blisful for thei ben gode, and thilke folk that ben blisful it accordeth and is covenable to ben goddes Thanne is the mede of goode folk swych that no day ne schal emperen it, ne no wikkidnesse schal derkne it, ne power of no wyght ne schal nat amenusen it, that is to seyn, to ben

And also ioke on schrewes, that ben the contrarie partie of gode men, how gret peyne felawshipith and folweth hem! For thou hast lerned a lital herebyforn that alle thing that is and hath beyng is oon, and thilke same oon is 90 good than is this the consequence, that it semeth wel that al that is and hath beyng, is good (This is to seyn, as who seith that beyng and unite and goodnesse is al oon) And in this manere it folweth thanne that alle thing that fayleth to ben good, it stynteth for to be and for to han any beyng. Wherefore it es that schrewes stynten for to ben that thei weeren. But thilke othr forme of mankynde 100 (that is to seyn, the forme of the body withoute) scheweth yit that these schrewes weren whilom men. Wherefore, when thei ben perverted and turned into malice, certes, thanne have thei forlorn the nature of mankynde. But so as oonly bownte and prowesse may enhawnsen every man over othere men, than moot it nedes be that schrewes, whiche that schrewednesse hath cast out of the condicion of 110 mankynde, ben put undir the merit and the dissert of men. Than betidith it that, yif thou seest a wyght that be transformed into vices, thow ne mayst nat wene that he be a man. For if he be ardaunt in avaryce, and that he be a ravynour by violence of foreyn richesse, thou schalt seyn that he is lik to the wolf, and if he be felonous and withoute reste, and exercise his tonge to chidynges, thow schalt 120 likne hym to the hownd, and if he be a pryve awaytour yhid, and rejoiseth hym to ravyssche be wiles, thou schalt seyn hym lik to the fox whelpes, and yif he be distempere, and quakith for ire, men schal wene that he bereth the corage of a lyoun, and yif he be dredful and fleynge, and dredith thinges that ne aughte nat to ben dredd, men schal holden hym lik to the hert, and yif he be slow, and 130 astonyd, and lache, he lyveth as an asse, yif he be lyghtand unstedfast of corage and chaungth ay his studies, he is likned to briddes, and if he be ploungid in fowle and unclene luxuris, he is witholden in the foule delices of the fowle sowe. Than folweth it that he that foreleteth bounte and prowesse, he foreleteth to ben a man, syn he ne may nat passe into the condicion of God, he is torned into a beeste 140

of the devyne thought And thilke devyne thought that is iset and put in the tour (that is to seyn, in the heughte) of the simplicité of God, stablissith many maner gises to thinges that ben to done, the whiche manere whan that men looken it in thilke pure clenness of the devyne intelligence, it is yelepéd purveaunce, but whanne thilke manere is referred by men to thinges that it moeveth and 60 disponyth, than of olde men it was clepyd destyne The whiche thinges yif that any wyght loketh wel in his thought the strengthe of that oon and of that oother, he schal lyghtly mowen seen that thise two thinges ben dyvers For purveaunce is thilke devyne resoun that is establissid in the sovereyn prince of thinges, the whiche purveaunce disponith alle thinges, but, certes, destyne is the disposicioun 70 and ordenance clyvyng to moevable thinges, by the whiche disposicion the purveaunce knytteth alle thingis in hir ordres, for purveaunce embraceth alle thinges to-hepe, although that thei ben diverse and although thei ben infinit But destyne, certes, departeth and ordeyneth alle thinges singularly and devyded in moevynges, in places, in formes, in tymes As thus lat the unfoldyng 80 of temporel ordenance, assembled and oonyd in the lokyng of the devyne thought, be cleped purveaunce, and thilke same assemblyng and oonyng, devyded and unfolden by tymes, lat that ben called destyne And al be it so that thise thinges ben diverse, yit natheles hangeth that oon of that oother, forwhi the ordre destynal procedith of the simplicité of purveaunce For ryght as a werkman that 90 aperceyveth in his thought the forme of the thing that he wol make, and moeveth the effect of the work, and ledith that he hadde lookid byform in his thought symplely and presently, by temporel ordenance, certes, ryght so God disponith in his purveaunce singularly and stablye the thinges that ben to doone, but he amynstresth in many maneris and in diverse tymes by destyne thilke same thinges 100 that he hath disponyd Thanne, whether that destyne be exercised outhr

by some devyne spritz, servantz to the devyne purveaunce, or elles by som soule, or elles by alle nature servyng to God, or elles by the celestial moevynges of sterres, or elles by vertu of aungels, or elles by divers subtilite of develis, or elles by any of hem, or elles by hem alle, the destinal ordenance is ywoven and acomplissid 110 Certes, it es open thing that the purveaunce is an unmoevable and symple foime of thinges to doone, and the moevable bond and the temporel ordenance of thinges whiche that the devyne symplité of purveaunce hath ordeyned to doone, that is destyne For which it is that alle thinges that ben put undir destyne ben certes subgitz to purveaunce, to which purveaunce destyne itself is subgit 120 and under But some thinges ben put undir purveaunce, that surmounten the ordenance of destyne, and tho ben thilke that stablye ben ifycchid neygh to the firste godhede They surmounten the ordre of destynal moevablete For ryght as of cerklis that tornen aboute a same centre or aboute a poynt, thilke cerkle that is inner est or most withinne joyneth to the symplesse of the myddle, and is, as it 130 were, a centre or a poynt to that othere cerklis that tornen abouten hym, and thilke that is utterest, compased by a largere envyrownynge, is unfolden by largere spaces, in so moche as it is ferthest fro the myddel symplité of the poynt, and yif ther be any thing that knytteth and felawschpeth hymself to thilke myddel poynt, it is constreyned into simplicité (that is to seyn, into unmoevablete), and it ceseth to ben schad and 140 to fieten diversely, ryght so, by semblable reson, thilke thing that departeth ferrest fro the firste thought of God, it is unfolden and summittid to grettere bondes of destyne, and in so moche is the thing more fre and laus fro destyne, as it axeth and hooldeth hym neer to thilke centre of thingis (that is to seyn, to God), and yif the thing clyveth to the stedfast- 150 nesse of the thought of God and be withoute moevyng, certes it surmounteth the necessite of destyne Thanne ryght swich comparysoun as is of skillyng to undrstandyng, and of thing that ys engendrid to thing that is, and of tyme to eternite, and of the cerle to the centre, ryght so is the ordre of moevable destyne to the stable symplcrite of purveaunce Thilke ordenaunce moveth the hevene 160 and the sterres, and atemprith the elementz togdre amonges himself, and transformeth hem by entrechaungeable mutacioun And thilke same ordre neweth ayein alle thinges growynge and fallynge adoun, by semblable progressions of sedes and of sexes (that is to seyn, male and female) And this ilke ordre constreyneth the fortunes and the dedes of men by a bond of causes nat able to ben un- 170 bownde, the whiche destynal causes, whan thei passen out fro the bygynnynges of the unmoevable purveaunce, it moot nedes be that thei ne be nat mutable And thus ben the thinges ful wel igoverned yf that the symplcrite duellynge in the devyne thoght scheweth forth the ordre of causes unable to ben ibowed And this ordre constreyneth by his propre stablete the moevable thingis, or elles 180 thei scholden fleten folily For which it es that alle thingis semen to ben confus and trouble to us men, for we ne mowen nat considere thilke ordenaunce Natheles the propre maner of every thing, dressynge hem to gode, disponith hem alle, for ther nys no thing doon for cause of yvel, ne thilke thing that is doon by wikkid folk nys nat doon for yvel, the whiche schrewes, as I have schewed 190 ful plentyvously, seken good, but wikkid errorr mystorneth hem, ne the ordre comynge fro the poynt of sovereyn good ne declyneth nat fro his bygynnyng

But thou mayst seyn, "What unreste may ben a worse confusoun than that gode men han somtyme adversite and somtyme prosperite, and schrewes also han now thingis that they desuren and 200 now thinges that thei haten?" Whethur men lyven now in swich holnesse of thought (as who seith, ben men now so wyse) that swiche folk as thei demen to ben gode folk or schrewes, that it moste nedes ben that folk ben swiche as thei wenen? But in this manere the domes of men discorden, that thilke men that som folk demen worthy of mede, other folk demen hem worthy of torment But 210 lat us graunten, I pose, that som man may wel demen or knowen the goode folk and the badde, may he thanne knowen and seen thilke innereste atempraunce of corages as it hath ben wont to ben seyde of bodyes? (As who seith, may a man speken and determinen of atempraunce in corages, as men were wont to demen or speken of complexions and atempraunces of bodies?) Ne it ne is nat an unlik 220 miracle to hem that ne knowen it nat (as who seith, but it is lik a merveyle or miracle to hem that ne knowen it nat) whi that swete thinges ben covenable to some bodies that ben hole, and to some bodies bytterer thinges ben covenable, and also why that some syke folk ben holpen with lyghte medicynes, and some folk ben holpen with sharpe medicynes But natheles 230 the leche, that knoweth the manere and the atempraunce of hele and of maladye, ne mervyleth of it nothyng But what othir thing semeth hele of corages but bounte and prowess? And what othir thing semeth maladye of corages but vices? Who is elles keperer of good or dryvere away of yvel but God, governour and lecherer of thoughtes? The whiche God, whan he hath byholden from the hye tour of his purveaunce, 240 he knoweth what is covenable to every wight, and lenyth hem that he woot that is covenable to hem Lo, herof comyth and herof is don this noble miracle of the ordre destynal, whan God, that al knoweth, dooth swich thing, of which thing unknowynge folk ben astonyd But for to constreyne (as who seith, but for to comprehendre and to telle) a fewe thingis of the devyne depresse, the whiche that manys 250 resoun may undrstonde, thilke man that thow wenest to ben ryght just and ryght keyynge of equite, the contrarie of that semeth to the devyne purveaunce, that al woot And Lucan, my familyer, telleth that the victorious cause likide to the goddess, and the cause overcomen likide to Catoun Thanne whatsoever thou mayst seen that is doon in this world unhopid or unwened, certes it es the ryghte 260 ordre of thinges, but as to thi wikkid opynioun, it is a confusioun. But I suppose that som man be so wel ithewed that the devyne jugement and the jugement of mankynde accorden hem togidre of hym, but he is so unstuffast of corage that, yif any adversite come to hym, he wol forleten peraventure to continue innocence, by the whiche he ne may nat withholden fortune. Thanne the wise dispensa- 270 cion of God sparith hym, the whiche man adversite myghte enpeyren, for that God wol nat suffren hym to travaile, to whom that travaile nis nat covenable.

 Another man is parfit in alle vertus, and is an holi man and neigh to God, so that the purveance of God wolde deme that it were a felonie that he were touched with any adversites, so that he wol nat suffre that swich a man be moeved 280 with any bodily maladye. But so as seyde a philosophre, the more excellent by me, — he seyde in Grec that “vertues han edified the body of the holi man.” And ofte tyme it betyde that the somme of thingis that ben to done is taken to governe to goode folk, for that the malice haboundaunt of schrewes scholde ben abated. And God yeveth and departeth to other folk prosperites and adversites, imedled 290 to hepe aftir the qualite of hir corages, and remordith some folk by adversite, for thei ne scholden nat waxen proude by long welefulnesse, and other folk he suffreth to ben travailed with harde thinges, for that thei scholden confermen the vertues of corage by the usage and the exercitacioun of patience. And other folk dreden more than thei oughten the whiche thei myghte wel beren, and 300 thilke folk God ledeth into experience of hemself by aspre and sorweful thingis.
 And many other folk han bought honourable renou of this world by the prys of glorious deth, and som men, that ne mowen nat ben overcomen by torment, han yeven ensample to other folk that vertu mai nat ben overcomyn by adversites.

And of alle these thinges ther nis no doute that thei ne ben doon ryght- 310 fully and ordeynly, to the profit of hem to whom we seen these thingis betyde. For certes, that adversite cometh somtyme to schrewes and somtyme that that they desuren, it comith of these forseide causes.

 And of sorweful thinges that betyden to schrewes, certes, no man ne wondreth, for alle men wenen that thei han wel desservid it, and that thei ben of wykkid meryt.
 Of whiche schrewes the torment som- 320 tyme agasteth othere to don felonies, and somtyme it amendeth hem that suffren the torment, and the prosperite that is yeven to schrewes scheweth a gret argument to goode folk what thing thei scholde demen of thilke welefulnesse, the whiche prosperite men seen ofte serven to schrewes. In the whiche thing I trowe that God dispenseth. For peraven- 330 ture the nature of som man is so overthrowynge to yvel, and so unconvenable, that the nedy poverté of his houshold myghte rather egren hym to don felonies, and to the maladye of hym God putteth remedye to yeven hym rychesses.
 And som othr man byholdeth his conscience defouled with synnes, and makith comparysoun of his fortune and of hym self, and dredith peraventure that his blisfulnesse, of which the usage is joye- 340 ful to hym, that the lesynge of thilke blisfulnesse ne be nat sorwful to hym, and therefore he wol chaunge his maners, and, for he dredith to lesen his fortune, he forletith his wikkidnesse. To other folk is welefulnesse iyeven unworthely, the whiche overthroweth hem into destruccioun, that thei han disservid, and to som othr folk is yeven power to punysshyn, for that it schal be cause of contynuacioun 350 and exercisyng to goode folk, and cause of torment to schrewes. For so as ther nis noon alhaunce bytwixe goode folk and schrewes, ne schrewes ne mowen nat acorden among hemself. And whi nat?
 For schrewes discorden of hemself by hir vices, the whiche vices al toreenden her consciences, and doon ofte tyme thinges the whiche thingis, whan thei han doon hem, they demen that tho thinges ne 360 scholden nat han ben doon. For which thing thilke sovereyne purveance hath makid ofte tyme fair myracle, so that schrewes han makid schrewes to ben gode men For whan that some schrewes seen that they suffren wrongfully felonyes of othere schrewes, they wexen eschaufed into hate of hem that anoyed hem, and retornen to the fruyt of vertu, whan thei studien to ben unlyke 370 to hem that thei han hated Certis oonly this is the devyne myght to the whiche myghte yvels ben thanne gode whan it useth the yvels covenantly and draweth out the effect of any good (As who seith that yvel is good only to the myght of God, for the myght of God ordeyneth thilke yvel to good)

For oon ordre enbraseth alle thinges, so that what wyght that departeth fro 380 the resoun of thilke ordre which that is assigned to hym, algatus yit he slideth into an othr ordre, so that no thing is lefevel to folye in the reame of the devyne purveaunce (as who seith, no thing nis withuten ordenaunce in the reame of the devyne purveaunce), syn that the ryght stronge God governeth alle thinges in this world For it nis nat lefevel to man to comprehend by wit, ne unfolden by 390 word, alle the subtil ordenaunces and disposciouns of the devyne entente For oonly it owghte suffise to han lokid that God hymself, makere of alle natures, ordeneth and dresseth alle thingis to gode, whil that he hasteth to withholden the thingis that he hath makid into his semblaunce (that is to seyn, for to withholden thingis into gode, for he hymself is good), he chasith out alle yvel for the 400 boundes of his comynalite by the ordre of necessite destinable For which it folweth that, yif thou loke the purveaunce ordeynynge the thinges that men wenen ben outrageous or haboundaunt in erthis, thou ne schalt nat seen in no place no thing of yvel But I se now that thou art charged with the weyghte of the questioun, and wery with lengthe of my resoun, and that thou abydest som swetnesse 410 of song Tak thanne this drawght, and, whanne thou art wel refressched and refect, thou schalt be more stedfast to stye into heyere questions or thinges

Thanne seide I, "Now am I confowndid by a more hard doute than I was"

"What doute is that?" quod sche, "for certes I conjecte now by whiche thingis thou art troubled"

"It semeth," quod I, "to repugnyn and to contrarien gretly, that God knoweth byforn alle thinges and that ther is any freedom of liberte For yif it so be that God loketh alle thinges byforn, ne 10 God ne mai nat ben desceyved in no manere, thanne moot it nedes ben that alle thinges betyden the whiche that the purveaunce of God hath seyn byforn to comen For which, yif that God knoweth byforn nat onoly the werkes of men, but also hir conseilles and hir willes, thanne ne schal ther be no lierte of arbitrie, ne certes ther ne may be noon other dede, ne no wl, but thilke which that the devyne 20 purveaunce, that ne mai nat ben desceyved, hath felid byforn For yif that thei myghten writhen away in othere manere than thei ben purveyed, thanne ne sholde ther be no stedefast prescience of thing to comen, but rather an uncerteyn opynioun, the whiche thing to trowen of God, I deme felonye and unlevelful Ne I ne proeve nat thilke same resoun (as who seith, I ne allowe nat, or I ne preyse 30 nat, thilke same resoun) by which that som men wenen that thei mowe assollen and unknytten the knotte of this questiou For certes thei seyn that thing nis nat to comen for that the purveaunce of God hath seyn byforn that it is to comen, but rathir the contrarie, and that is this that, for that the thing is to comen, that therefore ne mai it nat ben hidd for the purveaunce of God, and in this manere 40 this necessite slideth ayen into the contrarie partie ne it ne byhoveth nat nedes that thinges betiden that ben purveyed, but it byhoveth nedes that thinges that ben to comen ben ipurveyed but, as it were, ytravailed (as who seith, that thilke answer procedith ryght as though men travarleden or weren besy) to enqueren the whiche thing is cause of the whiche thing, as whethir the prescience is 50 cause of the necessite of thinges to comen, or elles that the necessite of thinges to comen is cause of the purveaunce But I ne enforce me nat now to schewen it, that the bytydng of thingis iwyst byforn is necessarie, how so or in what manere that the ordre of causes hath itself, although that it ne seme naught that the prescience bringe in necessite of bytydng to thinges to comen For certes yif that 60 any wyght sitteth, it byhoveth by necessite that the opynioun be soth of hym that conjeteth that he sitteth, and ayenward also is it of the contrarie yif the opynioun be soth of any wyght for that he sitteth, it byhoveth by necessite that he sitte Thanne is here necessite in the toon and in the tothir, for in the toon is necessite of syttyng, and certes in the tothir is necessite of soth But ther- 70 fore sitteth nat a wyght for that the opynioun of the sittyng is soth, but the opynioun is rather soth for that a wyght sitteth byforn And thus, although that the cause of the soth cometh of that other side (as who seith, that although the cause of

with cometh of the sittinge, and nat of the trewe opynoun), algates yit is ther comene necessite in that oon and in that othr Thus scheweth it that Y may make 80 semblable skiles of the purveaunce of God and of thingis to comen For although that for that thingis ben to comen therfore ben thei purveied, and nat certes for thei be purveied therfore ne bytude thei nat, natheles byhoveth it by necessite that eyther the thinges to comen ben purveied of God, or elles that the thinges that ben purveied of God betyden And this thing oonly suffiseth inow to destroien 90 the freedom of oure arbitrie (that is to seyn, of our fre wil) But certes now scheweth it wel how fer fro the sothe and how up-so-down is this thing that we seyn, that the betydyng of temporel thingis is cause of the eterne prescience But for to wenen that God purveie the thinges to comen for thei ben to comen, — what oothr thing is it but for to wene that thilke thinges that bytiden whilom 100 ben causes of thilke soverain purve-aunce that is in God? And herto I adde yit this thing that ryght as whanne that I woot that a thing is, it byhoveth by neces-site that thilke selve thing be and eek whan I have knowen that any thing schal betyden, so byhovith it by necessite that thilke same thing betide so folweth it thanne that the betydyng of the thing that I wyste byforn ne may nat 110 ben eschued And at the laste, yif that any wyghte wene a thing to ben oothr weyes than it is, it nis nat oonly unscience, but it is deceyvable opynoun ful divers and fer fro the sothe of science Wherefore, yif any thing be so to comen that the betydyng of it ne be nat certain ne neces-sarie, who mai witen byforn that thilke thing is to comen? For ryght as science ne may nat ben medled with 120 falsnesse (as who seith, that yif I woot a thing, it ne mai nat ben fals that I ne woot it), ryght so thilke thing that is conceyved by science may ben noon othr weyes than as it is conceyved For that is the cause why that science wanteth lesyng (as who seith, why that wytyng ne resceyweh nat lesyng of that it woot), for it byhoveth by necessite that every thing be ryght as science comprehendeth it to be What schal 130 I thanne seyn? In which manere knoweth God byforn the thinges to comen, yif thei ne ben nat certain? For yif that he deme that thei ben to comen uneschewably, and so may be that it is possible that thei ne schollen nat comen, God is disseyved But not oonly to trowe that God is disseyved, but for to speke it with mouthe, it is a felonous synne But yif that God woot that ryght so as 140 thinges ben to comen, so schollen they comen, so that he wite egaly (as who seith, indifferently) that thingis mowen ben doon or elles nat idoon, what is thilke pre-science that ne comprehendeth no certain thing ne stable? Or elles what difference is ther bytwixe the prescience and thilke japeworthi devynyng of Tyresie the di-vynour, that seide, 'Al that I seie,' quod he, 'either it schal be or elles it 150 schal nat be?' Or elles how mochel is worth the devyne prescience more than the opimoun of mankynde, yif so be that it demeth the thinges uncertayn, as men doon, of the whiche domes of men the betydyng is nat certain? But yif so be that noon uncertein thing ne mai ben in hym that is right certein welle of alle thingis, than is the betydyng^a certain of thilke thingis whiche he hath wist 160 byforn fermly to comen For which it folweth that the freedom of the conseilis and of the werkis of mankynde nis noon, syn that the thought of God, that seeth alle thinges withouten error of falsnesse, byndeth and constreyneth hem to a by-tydyng by necessite And yif this thing be onys igrantid and resceyved (this is to seyn, that ther nis no fre wil), thanne scheweth it wel how gret destruccion 170 and how gret damages ther folwen of thingis of mankynde For in idel ben ther thanne purposed and byhyght medes to goode folk, and peynes to badde folk, syn that no moevyng of fre corage voluntarie ne hath nat disserved hem (that is to seyn, neither mede ne peyne) And it scholde seme thanne that thilke thing is alther-worst which that is now demed for alther-moost just and moost ryghtful, 180

that is to seyn that schrewes ben punysshid or elles that goode folk ben igerdoned The whiche folk, syn that hir propre wil ne sent hem nat to the toon ne to that othir (that is to seyn, neither to good ne to harm), but [ther] constreyneth hem certain necessite of thingis to comen, thanne ne schulle ther nevere be, ne nevere were, vice ne vertu, but it scholde rather ber confusion of alle 190 dissertes medlid withouten discrecioun And yit ther folweth another inconvenient, of the whiche ther ne mai be thought no more felonous ne more wikke, and that is this that, so as the ordre of thingis is led and cometh of the purveance of God, ne that nothing is lewful to the conseles of mankynde (as who seith that men han no power to don nothing ne wylne nothing), thanne folweth it 200 thatoure vices ben ferrid to the makere of alle good (as who seith, thanne folweth it that God oughte han the blame of our vices, syn he constreyneth us by necessite to don vices)

Than nis ther no resoun to han hope in God, ne for to preien to God For what scholde any wyght hopen to God, or why scholde he preien to God, syn that the ordenaunce of destyne, the whiche 210 that mai nat ben enclined, knytteth and streyneth alle thingis that men mai desiren? Thanne scholde ther be don away thilke only alhaunce bytwixen God and men, that is to seyn, to hopen and to preien But by the pris of ryghtwisnesse and of verray mekenesse we disserven the gerdon of the devyne grace which that is mestumable (that is to seyn, that it is so greet that it ne mai nat ben ful vpreysed) 220 And this is oonly the manere (that is to seyn, hope and preiers) for which it semeth that men mowen spekyn with God, and by resoun of supplicacion be conjoynd to thilke cleernesse that nis nat aprochid no rather or that men byseken it and impetren it And yif men ne wene nat that hope ne preieres ne han no strengthis by the necessite of thingis to comen یرهceyved, what thing is ther thanne by which we 230 mowen ben conjoynd and clyven to thilke sovereyne prince of thingis? For which it oyhoveth by necessite that the lynage of mankynde, as thou songe a litil herebyforn, be departed and unjoynd from his welle, and failen of his bygynnyng (that is to seyn, God)

The porche (that is to seyn, a gate of the town of Athenis there as philosophis hadden hir congregacioun to desputen) — thilke porche brougte somtyme olde men, ful dirke in hir sentences (that is to seyn, philosophis that hyghten Stoicyens), that wenden that ymages and sensibilities (that is to seyn, sensible ymaginaciouns or ellis ymaginaciouns of sensible thingis) weren em- 10 prientid into soules fro bodyes withoute-forth, (as who seith that thalke Stoicyens wenden that soule had ben nakid of itself, as a mirour or a clene parchemyn, so that alle figures most first comen fro thingis fro withoute into soules, and ben em- prientid into soules), ryght as we ben wont somtyme by a swift poyntel to fycehen lettres emprientid in the smothnesse or in the pleynesse of the table of wax or in parchemyn that ne hath no figure ne 20 note in it (Glose But now argueth Boece ayens that opynroun and seith thus) But yit the thryvyng soule ne unpliteth nothing (that is to seyn, ne doth nohang) by his propre moevynges, but suffrieth and lith subgit to the figures and to the notes of bodies withoute-forth, and yeldith ymages ydel and vein in the manere of a mirour, whennes thryveth thanne or whennes comith thilke knowynge in our soule, 30 that discernith and byholdith alle thinges? And whennes is thilke strengthe that byholdeth the singuler thinges? Or whennes is the strengthe that devydedh thinges iknowe, and thilke strengthe that gadreth togdre the thingis devyded, and the strengthe that chesith his entre-chaunged wey? For somtyme it hevvyth up the heved (that is to seyn, that it hevvyth up the entenciou to ryght heyde 40 thinges), and somtyme it descendith into ryght lowe thinges, and whan it retorneth into hymself it reproveth and de-stryoeth the false thingis by the trewe thinges Certes this strengthe is cause more efficient, and mochel more myghty to seen and to knowe thinges, than thilke cause that suffrieth and reseceyeth the notes and the figures empressid in manere of matere Algatis the passion (that is to seyn, the suffraunce or the wit) in the quyke body goth byforn, excitynge and moevynge the strengthes of the thought Ryght so as whan that cleernesse smyteth the eyen and moeveth hem to seen, or ryght so as voyz or soun hurteleth to the eres and commoeveth hem to herkne, than is the strengthe of the thought moevid and excited, and clepeth forth to semblable moevyns the spesces that it halt withynne itself, and addith the spesces to the notes and to the thinges withoute-forth, and medleth the ymagis of thinges withoute-forth to the foormes ihidd withynne hymself

But what yif that in bodyes to ben feled (that is to seyn, in the takynge of knowlechyng of bodily thinges), and albeit so that qualites of bodies that ben object fro withoute-forth moeven and entalenten the instrumentz of the wittes, and albeit so that the passioun of the body (that is to seyn, the wit or the suffraunce) goth toforn the strengthe of the wirkyngs corage, the whiche passioun or suffraunce clepeth forth the dede of the thought in hymself and moeveth and exciteth in this menewhile the formes that resten within-forth — and yif that in sensible bodies, as I have seid, our corage nis nat ytaught or emprinted by passioun to knowe these thinges, but demeth and knoweth of his owne strengthe the passioun or suffraunce subject to the body, moche more than the thingis that ben absolut and quit fro alle talentz or affeccions of bodyes (as God or his avngels) ne folwen nat in discernynge thinges object fro withoute-forth, but thei acomplissen and speden the dede of hir thought By this resoun, thanne, ther comen many maner knowynges to dyverse and to differynge substauces For the wit of the body, the whiche wit is naked and despoiled of alle oothre knowynges, — thilke wit cometh to beestis that ne mowen nat moeven hymself her and ther, as oistres and muscles and oothir swich schelle-fyssch of the see, that clyven and ben norisschid to roches But the ymaginacioun cometh to remuable bestis, that semen to han talent to feen or to desuren any thing But resoun is al oonly to the lynage of mankynde, ryght as intelligence is oonly the devyne nature Of which it folweth that thilke knowynge is more worth than these oothre, syn it knoweth by his propre nature nat oonly his subget (as who seith, it ne knoweth nat al oonly that apertenath properly to his knowynge) but it knoweth the subject of alle othre knowynges But how schal it thanne be, yif that wit and ymaginacioun stryven ayein resonyng, and seyn that, of thilke universel thingis that resoun weneth to seen, that it nis ryght naught? For wit and ymaginacioun seyn that that that is sensible or ymaginable, it ne mai nat ben universel Thanne is either the jugement of resoun soth ne that ther nis no thing sensible, or elles, for that resoun woot wel that many thinges ben subject to wit and to ymaginacioun, thanne is the concepcioun of resoun veyn and fals, which that lokith and comprehendith that that is sensible and singuler as universel And yif that resoun wolde answer ayein to these two (that is to seyn, to wit and to ymaginacioun), and seyn, that sothly sche hirselve (that is to seyn, resoun) lokith and comprehendith, by resoun of universalite, bothe that that is sensible and that that is ymaginable, and that thilke two (that is to seyn, wit and ymaginacioun) ne mowen nat stretchen ne enhaunsen hymself to knowynge of universalite, for that the knowynge of hem ne mai exceeden ne surmounten the bodily figures certes of the knowynge of thinges, men oughen ratner yeven credence to the more stidfast and to the more parfitt jugement In this manere stryvyng, thanne, we that han strengthe of resonyng and of ymagynynge and of wit (that is to seyn, by resoun and by ymagynacioun and 80 by wit) — we scholde rather praise the cause of resoun (as who seith, than the cause of wit and ymagynacioun)

Semblable thing is it, that the resoun of mankynde ne weneth nat that the devyne intelligence byholdeth or knoweth things to comen, but ryght as the resoun of mankynde knoweth hem For thou arguist and seist thus that if it ne seme nat to men that some things han certeyn 90 and necessarie bytydynges, thei ne mowen nat ben wist bytorn certainly to betyden, and thanne nis ther no prescience of thilke things, and yif we trowe that prescience be in these things, thanne is ther nothing that it ne bytydeth by necessite But certes yif we myghten han the jugement of the devyne thoght, as we ben parsoners of resoun, ryght so as we han demyd that it byhovith that 100 ymagynacioun and wit ben bynethe re-soun, ryght so wolde we demen that it were ryghtfull thing, that mannys resoun oughte to summytten itself and to ben bynethe the devyne thought For which yif that we mowen (as who seith that, if that we mowen, I conserle that) we enhaunse us into the heighte of thilke soverain intelligence, for ther schal resoun wel seen that that it ne mai nat byholden in itself And 110 certes that is this, in what manere the prescience of God seeth alle thinges certeins and diffinyssched, although thei ne han no certen issues or bytydyngis, ne this nis noon opinoun, but it is rather the sim-plicite of the soverain science, that nis nat enclosed nor ischet withinne none boundes

Therefore thanne, as I have schewed a litel herebyforn that alle thing that is iwist nis nat knowen by his nature propre, but by the nature of hem that comprehendin it, lat us loke now, in as mochil as it is levelful to us (as who seith, lat us loke now as we mowen) which that the estat is of the de-vyne substaunce, so that we mowe eek knowen what his science is The comune jugement of alle creatures 10 resonables thanne is this that God is eterne Lat us considere thanne what is eternite, for certes that schal schewen us togidre the devyne nature and the devyne science Eternite, thanne, is parfit pos-sessioun and algwidre of lif interminable And that scheweth more cleerly by the comparysoun or collacioun of temporel thinges For alle thing that lyveth in tyme, it is present, and procedith fro 20 pretertiz into futures (that is to seyn, fro tyme passed into tyme comynge), ne ther nis nothing established in tyme that mai enbrasen togidre al the space of his lif For certis yit ne hath it nat taken the tyme of tomorwe, and it hath lost that of yesterday And certes in the lif of this dai ye ne lyve namore but right as in this moevable and transtorne moment Thanne thilke thing that suffreth tem- 30 porel condicioun, although that it nev-ere bygan to be, ne though it nevere ne cese for to be, as Aristotile demed of the world, and alough that the lif of it be strecchid with infinite of tyme, yit algatis nis it no swich thing that men mighten trowen by ryghte that it is eterne For although that it comprehend and embrace the space of lif infinit, yit algatis ne enbraseth it nat the space of the lif 40 altogidre, for it ne hath nat the futuris that ne ben nat yit, ne it ne hath no lengere the preteritz that ben idoon or ipassed But thulke thing, thanne, that hath and comprehendith togidre al the plente of the lif interminable, to whom ther ne faileth naught of the future, and to whom ther nis noight of the preteryt escaped nor ipassed, thilke same is iwitnessed and iprovid by right to ben eterne, and yit it by- 50 hovith by necessite that thilke thing be alwey present to hymself, and compotent (as who seith, alwey present to hym-selve, and so myghty that al be right at his plesauce), and that he have al present the infinite of the moevable tyme Wherefore som men trowen wrongfully that, whan thei heren that it semede to Plato that this world ne hadde nevere bygynnyng of tyme, ne that it nevere schal han 60 failynge, thei wenen in this manere that this world be makid coeterne with his makere (As who seith, thei wene that this world and God ben makid to-gidre eterne, and that is a wrongful wen-ynge) For other thing is it to ben lad by lif interminable, as Plato graunte to the world, and oother is it to embrace togidre al the presence of the lif intermynable, the whiche thing it is cleer and many- 70 fest that it is propre to the devyne thought Ne it ne scholde nat seeme to us that God is elders than thinges that ben imaked by quantite of tyme, but rather by the proprete of his simple nature For this ilke infinit moevyng of temporel thinges folweth this presentarie estat of the lif unmoevable, and, so as it ne mai nat contrefetan it, ne feynen it, ne be evene 80 lik to it, for the immoevablete (that is to seem, that is in the eternite of God), it faileth and fallith into moevynge fro the simplicite of the presence of God, and dis-cressith into the infinit quantite of futur and of preterit And so as it ne mai nat han to-gidre al the plente of the lif, algates yit for as moche as it ne ceseth nevere for to ben in som manere, it semyth somdel to us that it folwith and resembleth thulke thing that it ne mai nat atayne to, ne ful- 90 fillen, and byndeth itself to som maner presence of this litle and swifte moment, the whiche presence of this litle and swifte moment, for that it bereth a maner ymage or liknesse of the ai duell-ynge presence of God, it grauntith to swich manere thinges as it betydith to, that it semeth hem that these thinges han iben and ben And for that the presence of swich lital moment ne mai nat 100 duelle, therefore it ravyschide and took the infynit wey of tyme (that is to seyn, by successioun) And by this manere is it idoon, for that it sholde contynue the lif in goinge, of the whiche lif it myght nat embrace the plente in duellinge And for-thi yif we wollen putten worthi names to thinges and folwen Plato, lat us seyen thanne sothly that God is 'eterne,' and that the world is 'perpetuel' Thanne, 110 syn that every judgement knoweth and comprehendith by his owne nature thinges that ben subject unto hym, ther is sothly to God always an eterne and presentarie estat, and the science of hym that overpasseth alle temporel moevement duelleth in the simplicite of his presence, and embraceth and considereth alle the infynit spaces of tymes preteritz and futures, and lokith in his simple know- 120 ynge alle thingis of preterit ryght as thei weren idoon presently ryght now Yif thou wolt thanne thinken and advise the prescience by which it knoweth alle thinges, thou ne schalt naught demen it as prescience of thinges to comen, but thou schalt demen more ryghtfully that it is science of presence or of instance that nevere ne faileth For which it nis nat cyleped 'previdence,' but it sholde 130 rather ben clepid 'purveaunce,' that is established ful fro ryght lowe thinges, and byholdeth fro afer alle thingis, right as it were fro the heye heighte of thinges

Why axestow thanne, or whi desputes-tow thanne, that thilke thingis ben doon by necessite whiche that ben yseyn and knowen by the devyne sighte, syn that forsothe men ne maken nat thilke 140 thinges necessarie whiche that thei seen ben idoon in hir sighte? For addith thi byholdynge any necessite to thilke thinges that thou byholdest present?"

"Nay," quod I

Philosophie "Certes, thanne, yf men myghte maken any digne comparysoun or collacioun of the presence devyne and of the presence of mankynde, ryght so as ye seen some thinges in this tem- 150 porel present, ryght so seeth God alle thinges by his eterne present

Wherefore this devyne prescience ne chaungeth nat the nature ne the proprete of thinges, but byholdeth swiche thingis present to hym-ward as thei shollen betyde to yow-ward in tyme to comen Ne it ne confowndeth nat the jugementz of thingis, but by o sight of his thought he knoweth the thinges to comen, as wel neces- 160 sarie as nat necessarie Ryght so as whan ye seen togidre a man walke on the erthe and the sonne arisen in the hevене, albet so that ye seen and byholden the ton and the tothir togidre, yit natheles ye demen and discerne that the toon is voluntarie and the tother is necessarie Ryght so thanne the devyne lookynge, byholdynge alle thinges undir hym, ne trowbleth nat the qualite of thinges that ben cer- 170 tenly present to hym-ward, but, as to the condicioun of tyme, forsothe thei ben futur For which it folwith that this nis noon opynioun, but rathir a stidfast knowynge istrengthid by soothnesse that, whan that God knoweth any thing to be, ne ne unwot not that thilke thing wanteth necessite to be (This is to seyn that whan that God knoweth any thing to betyde, he wot wel that it ne hath no necessite 180 to betyde) And yif thou seist here that thilke thing that God seeth to betyde, it ne may nat unbytyde (as who seith, it moot bytyde), and thilke thing that ne mai nat unbytyde, it mot bytyden by necessite, and that thou streyne me to this name of necessite, certes I wol wel confessen and byknownen a tyes of ful sad trouthe But unnethe schal ther any wight mowe seen it or come therto, but yif that 190

he be byholdere of the devyne thought For I wol answeren the thus that thilke thing that is futur, whan it is referred to the devyne knowynge than is it necesserie, but certis whan it is undirstonden in his owne kynde, men seen it outrely fre and absolut fro alle necessite

TROILUS AND CRISEYDE

IN THE Troilus and Criseyde Chaucer reached the height of his powers. The later Canterbury Tales, to be sure, reveal new qualities — a wider range of interest, greater variety of style, perhaps a more modern tone, more independence of what we regard as mediæval sentiments and conventions. But there is no advance in narrative skill, or in characterization, or in the mastery of verse form. The Troilus is Chaucer's supreme example of sustained narration, the Knight's Tale alone being in any way comparable. And it remains unsurpassed in its kind in later English poetry.

The time of its composition is not definitely known, but it is hard to believe, as some have held, that so mature a performance can be early work. One or two indications — an apparent allusion to the Peasants' Revolt and a very probable compliment to Queen Anne — point to a date in the eighties, and if, as seems likely, the conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn in the sign of Cancer, described in Book III, was suggested by the actual occurrence of that very rare phenomenon in 1385, the completion of the poem cannot be put earlier than that year. This date would be entirely satisfactory from the point of view of literary considerations. The Troilus would immediately precede the Prologue to the Legend of Good Women, in which Chaucer represents himself as required to do penance for having, among other sins, related the story of the faithless Criseyde. It would surely be considerably later than the House of Fame, which we have seen to belong to the period of transition from French to Italian influence. And it would probably follow also the original version of the Knight's Tale, the Palamon and Arcite, though the two romances from Boccaccio, different as they are in method and treatment, cannot have been far apart in time of composition.

These two chief narrative poems of Chaucer, the Troilus and the Knight's Tale, are alike in having their immediate sources in long poems of Boccaccio, and in dealing with material drawn from the ancient cycles of romance. In the case of the Knight's Tale the main plot was apparently Boccaccio's invention, or at all events has not been traced beyond the Teseide. But the history of the Troilus story is more complicated. In Homer, as might be expected, there is no trace of it. Though several great Homeric figures, Priam and Hector and Achilles and Diomedes, play their part in the Troilus, the chief actors in Chaucer's poem — Pandarus, and Criseyde (the Greek Chryseis in name only), and Troilus himself — count for little in the Iliad. Pandarus is mentioned only twice, as a leader of the Lycians and a great archer, slain by Diomedes, and Troilus is dismissed in a single line of lamentation for his death. The story of Troilus and Cressida does not even appear in Dares Phrygius or Dictys Cretensis, those ultimate "authorities" of the mediæval Trojan saga. But the way is prepared for it in Dares by the exaltation of Troilus to a place second only to Hector among the warriors of Troy. It was first related, so far as is known, by Benoit de Ste-Maure, the author of the Roman de Troie. Some scholars have conjectured that he had a source for it in a longer version of Dares, now lost. But until more evidence is given of the existence of such a text, the invention of this French poet of the twelfth century must be credited with the story which became for the later Middle Ages and the Renaissance the most interesting episode of the Trojan War.

Benoit tells only the second part of the tale, beginning with the separation of the lovers on the departure of Criseyde from Troy. The heroine, in his version, is named Briseide, and not Criseyde, probably because Benoit found in Dares a portrait of Briseis, which may indeed have given him the first suggestion for the episode. But Troilus's Briseide has as little in common with the daughter of Briseus (or Brises) as

Criseyde has with the Homeric Chryseis According to the Iliad, it will be recalled, Briseis and Chryseis were Trojan girls taken captive by Achilles, and in the division of spoils Briseis was awarded to him and Chryseis to Agamemnon Later, in obedience to Apollo, Chryseis was restored to her father, and Achilles was induced to relinquish Briseis to his superior commander In resentment at the injustice Achilles long refrained from aiding the Greeks in battle Now Briseis and Chryseis are of course patronymic forms, meaning, respectively, daughter of Briseus and daughter of Chryseus The real names of the girls, according to the scholasts and later authorities, were Hippodamia and Astynome, and under the French equivalents of these (Ypodamia and Astinome) Benoit, in a passage later than the Troilus episode (ll 26837-27037), tells the Homeric story, doubtless taken over from Dictys He obviously failed to recognize the identity of his Briseide with Ypodamia, and was unaware that he had assigned two distinct rôles to the daughter of Briseus In fact, in his ignorance of the meaning of Briseide's name, he made her the daughter of Calchas (Calchas), the Trojan seer

The next author to tell the tale was Guido delle Colonne, in his Historia Trojana Guido's work was merely a Latin prose redaction of Benoit's, which it largely superseded as an authority on the history of Troy It had no independent value and contributed nothing to the development of the Troilus story It did, however, help greatly to disseminate knowledge of the whole Trojan legend

In the Roman de Troie the account of Troilus and Criseyde is only an episode, interrupted by other incidents, but well told and effective in pathetic appeal In the hands of the next teller, Boccaccio, it becomes a complete poem, "with beginning, middle, and end," and charged with passionate interest The intensity of feeling is largely due to the fact that Boccaccio wrote the Filostrato as an expression of devotion to Maria d'Acquino, and Troilo, in his ardent suit and final unhappiness, represents the author himself in his character of unaccepted lover The entire first half of the poem, which recounts the wooing and winning of Criseida, was Boccaccio's invention, drawn partly from his personal experience and partly from the stories of Achilles and Polixena in the Roman de Troie and of Florio and Biancafiore in his own earlier romance, the Filocolo Boccaccio added the essential figure of Pandaro, whose name alone he derived from earlier writers For some reason also he changed the name of Troilus's beloved from Briseida to Criseida Perhaps he simply adopted the altered form from Armannino, who mentions "Calchas, father to Criseide" in his Florida, written in 1325 Boccaccio doubtless knew from Ovid's Heroides of the true Homeric history of Briseis and Achilles, in fact he refers to it in the Ameto and the Filocolo And if in substituting the name derived from Chryseis he was simply starting a new confusion, the story of Chryseis was in any event less familiar than the other Moreover, Boccaccio, or whoever first made the change, may have been led by a misunderstanding of Ovid's Remedia Amoris (ll 467-484) to think that Chryseis was the daughter of Calchas, and the fact that Calchas, in Benoit, is Briseide's father, would have supported the alteration

The Filostrato was the immediate and principal source of Chaucer's Troilus Moreover, the Filostrato and the Teseide, the source of the Knight's Tale, were models of narrative such as Chaucer had hardly encountered until he read Boccaccio, or if he knew specimens of equal excellence in the Latin poets, at all events his own first attempts of the kind were his adaptations of the Filostrato and the Teseide The greatness of his debt to Boccaccio has been pointed out in the discussion of the Knight's Tale But, much as he owed to his Italian models, neither of Chaucer's poems is a mere translation or servile redaction of its original, and the methods of adaptation in the two works are utterly dissimilar In the Knight's Tale, as has been shown, a long, sometimes diffuse and digressive poem on the model of a classical epic has been reduced to a swiftly moving, highly dramatic romance of a quarter of its length, whereas in the Troilus a simple story of passion and sorrow has been expanded into what has often been called a psychological novel. In thus elaborating the Filostrato Chaucer improved the plot, and made the setting more vivid and more appropriate to its period. He gave the dialogue, which was good in the Italian original, his characteristic naturalness and humor, and sometimes a subtlety that is hardly matched in the best conversational passages in the Canterbury Tales. He enriched the whole narrative with moral and philosophical reflection. And above all, he transformed the characterization.

Troilus, the simplest character of the three protagonists, remains much the same as in Boccaccio. He is strong and brave — "Hector the secounde", sentimental, it may be granted, and unpractical, but no weakling, gallant and generous to the end — the ideal courtly lover.

Boccaccio's Pandaro, though the character was his invention, is not highly individualized. He is Criseida's cousin and a young comrade of Troilo, the success of whose suit he serves without scruple. Chaucer, by making him a generation older — Criseyde's uncle — at once complicates his character. As an elder relative and supposed protector of Criseyde he has obligations of which he is not wholly unaware, while doing his best to further Troilus's suit. In his relations with Troilus he combines the rôles of a valiant friend, ready for any sacrifice, and of a philosophical adviser. His comments on life — often phrased in proverbial language, of which he is a master — are wise and humorous. They sometimes express disillusionment, for which experience and observation had given him plenty of occasion, but cynicism, which has been attributed to him, was not in his nature. And in his own rôle of an unsuccessful old suitor who has always "hopped on behind" in the dance of love, he is an object of amused sympathy alike to fellow characters and to readers.

Boccaccio's Criseida, again, is a relatively simple personality. Widows, according to the assumption of Pandaro, are by nature amorous, and she yields to Troilo with less persuasion and intrigue than is needed to win Chaucer's Criseyde. With Diomed, also, after her separation from Troilo, she rather readily accepts consolation. She is, of course, no mere wanton, as she is sometimes called, and as she became in English tradition after Chaucer. Boccaccio makes the reader feel, as he makes Troilo praise, her qualities of a gentlewoman — her atti altheri e signorali. But on the whole her conduct and emotions are simple and easy to understand. Chaucer's Criseyde, on the other hand, is one of the most complex of his creations. This is made apparent by the very disagreements of the critics in their search for a key to her character. Some have found the explanation of her, or at least of Chaucer's treatment of her, in the idea of fate, which undoubtedly pervades the poem. For some she is merely selfish and designing, but these forget her sincere affection. For others she is simply weak, the helpless victim of intrigue and circumstances, yet to a great extent she makes her own decisions. In spite of her tenderness and passion, as is not seldom the case with women, she is less sentimental and more practical than either Pandarus or Troilus. She has in her even something of the skeptical or disillusioned woman, a type in which Chaucer felt enough interest to portray it again in the Pertelote of the Nun's Priest's Tale. In the end circumstances are too strong for her and destroy her happiness with Troilus. Troilus, undecieved, but loving to the end, meets death bravely in battle. Criseyde, also loving and — we must understand — sincere in her bitter self-reproach, has made a practical compromise with fate and gone to Diomed. For in her nature tenderness was allied with shidyng courage, and not with the loyalty that suffers and endures. This was her condemnation and, in the moral sense, her tragedy.

Where Chaucer got the suggestions for his conception of Pandarus and Criseyde it would be interesting to know. Perhaps there were living models for them both, as there seem to have been for several of the Canterbury pilgrims, at the by no means unsophisticated court of Richard and Anne. The elderly Pandarus, it has been shown, may also owe something to the figure of Duke Ferramonte in Boccaccio's Filocolo. If there is any literary model for Criseyde, it is perhaps to be found in the Helen of Ovid's Heroides

It is now generally recognized by critics that the Troilus is governed by the conventions of courtly love. But the fact may properly be emphasized here, it is so essential to the understanding of the poem. According to the ethics of the system, neither Troilus nor Criseyde was blameworthy for their union. It was expected that love should be sought outside of marriage. Even the offices of Pandarus as go-between were not to be condemned, except as they conflicted with his duty to protect his mece's honor. At that point, perhaps, the ordinary code of morals was felt to intervene. Criseyde's sin lay not in yielding to Troilus, but in "falsing" Troilus for Diomed. The code, of course, was absolutely un-Christian and doubtless out of keeping with any stable system of social morality. How far it was actually practiced in mediæval society is a matter of dispute. But as set forth in literature it was by no means without its ideal aspects. It deprecated coarseness and mere sensuality. It was the very mark and test of "gentillesse." The lover was expected to acquire all the accomplishments and display all the virtues — bravery, humility, honor, loyalty, generosity. Love was a fine art, and its pursuit was held to ennoble the character, so that any courtly "servant" might have used of his lady the familiar words of Sir Richard Steele, "To love her is a liberal education." Beyond question the ideal of courtly love actually contributed to the refinement of life in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. There is no better product or expression of the convention than the Troilus. And when Chaucer has followed the tragic story to the end his closing comment is not, like Boccaccio's, a mere condemnation of faithless women, nor is it strictly a reprobation of the special ethics of courtly love. It is a Christian counsel to fix the heart upon the unfailing love of God. The earnestness of the appeal and the elevation of its mood leave no doubt of Chaucer's essentially religious spirit. Moreover, it is not necessary to assume, as some have held, that the Christian comment was written long after the body of the poem, in a moment of repentance such as called forth the Retractions of the Canterbury Tales. It expresses, on the contrary, exactly the feeling by which Chaucer might have been possessed at the moment when he was deeply moved by his tale of "double sorwe."

As has been already indicated, and will be shown in detail in the explanatory notes, Chaucer constantly went beyond the Filostrato for the materials of the Troilus. It sometimes seems as if a chronology of his poems might almost be based upon the various degrees of complication which they exhibit. His earliest tales, such as the life of St. Cecilia (the Second Nun's Tale) or the episode of Ceyx and Alcione in The Book of the Duchess, tell a simple story and depart very little from their sources. The latest tales, on the other hand — even short ones, like those of the Nun's Priest and the Pardoner — are so overlaid with original elements and with borrowings from every quarter that it matters little from what source the skeleton of the plot was derived. By this test the individual legends of Good Women would be classed with the earlier works. While the quality of complication is not susceptible of exact measurement, the Troilus certainly shows it in a high degree. Not only is the plot altered and elaborated, apparently with the repeated use of the Filocolo, the Roman de Troie, and the Eneas, and the characterization improved, perhaps under the influence of Ovid, but songs are derived from Petrarch and, probably, Machaut, a series of portraits are taken from Joseph of Exeter, and the whole poem is packed with popular proverbs and allusions to literature, both ancient and mediæval.

Among the authors who influenced the thought of the poem, as distinguished from its fable, should be mentioned particularly Boethius and Dante. To Boethius, for example, may be traced Criseyde's discussion of false felicity in the third book — a speech similar to one of Arcite's in the Knights Tale, which is derived from the same source. In the treatment of gentillesse and in many sentiments expressed by the lovers is reflected a knowledge of both Boethius and Dante, and possibly of some of Dante's fellow-poets of the dolce stil nuovo. And the influence of Boethius and Dante is again especially apparent, both in the Troilus and elsewhere, in Chaucer's discussions of fate.

In the Troilus, as has been already remarked, the idea of fate is pervasive. It is so fundamental, indeed, to the development of the story that one of the ablest investigators of Chaucer's scientific and philosophical background, Professor Walter Clyde Curry, has expounded the poem as a tragedy of complete and consistent determinism. The speech of Troilus on predestination, in the fourth book, expresses the doctrine, he maintains, which for Chaucer as a literary artist governed the whole action. The epilogue, which contains the comments of Chaucer as a Christian, is for Mr. Curry out of keeping with the rest of the poem and "dramatically a sorry performance." The artistic propriety of the epilogue may always be a matter of dispute, and its acceptability to the reader will depend in some measure upon his attitude toward explicit moralization. But it is not necessary to find any deep conflict between the epilogue and the story. The destined forces, it is true, are recognized in the Troilus at every turn. But they are also fully described and analyzed by Boethius, as Mr. Curry himself sets forth, and he might have cited similar discussions in Dante. In Boethius and Dante the recognition of these forces is made to harmonize with a doctrine of responsibility and free-will, as it is in the daily assumptions of practical life. Chaucer's own attitude in relation to such matters was probably practical rather than deeply philosophical, and in any case it may be doubted whether he had worked out, even for dramatic purposes, a thorough-going determinism at variance with the teachings of his authorities.

TROIILUS AND CRISEYDE

The double sorwe of Troilus to tellen,
That was the kyng Priamus sone of Troye,
In lovyng, how his aventures fellen Fro wo to wele, and after out of joi, 5
My purpos is, er that I parte fro ye Thesiphone, thow help me for t'endite Thise woful vers, that wepen as I write

To the clepe I, thow goddesse of torment, Thow cruwel Fure, sorwyng evere yn

That helpeh loveres, as I kan, to pleyne For wel sit it, the sothe for to seyne,
A woful wight to han a drery feere,
And to a sorwful tale, a sory chere

For I, that God of Loves servantz serve, 15 Ne dar to Love, for myn unlikynesse, Preyen for speed, al sholde I therfore sterve,

So fer am I from his help in derknesse
But natheles, if this may don gladnesse
To any lovere, and his cause availle, 20 Have he my thonk, and myn be this travaille!

But ye loveres, that bathen in gladnesse,
If any drope of pyte in yow be,
Remembreth yow on passed hevynesse
That ye han felt, and on the adversite 25
Of othere folk, and thynketh how that ye Han felt that Love dorste yow displese, Or ye han wonne hym with to gret an

That it to Love be worship and plesaunce
For so hope I my sowle best avaunce, To prey for hem that Loves servauntz be,
And wraite hire wo, and lyve in charite,

And for to have of hem compassioun, 50
As though I were hire owne brother dere
Now herkneith with a good entencioun,
For now wil I gon streght to my matere,
In which ye may the double sorwes here
Of Troilus in lovynge of Criseyde, 55 And how that she forsook hym er she

Now fel it so that in the town ther was Dwellynge a lord of gret auctorite, 65
A gret devyn, that clepid was Calkas, That in science so expert was that he Knew wel that Troie sholde destroyed be,
By answer of his god, that lighte thus,
Daun Phebus or Appollo Delphicus 70

So whan this Calkas knew by calkulynge,
And ek by answer of this Appollo,

That Grekes sholden swich a peple brynge, Thorough which that Troie moste ben fordo,
He caste anon out of the town to go, 75
For wel wiste he by sort that Troie sholde Destroyed ben, ye, wolde whoso nolde

For which for to departen softlye Took purpos ful this forknowynge wise,
And to the Grekes oost ful pryvely 80
He stal anon, and they, in curteys wise, Hym diden bothe worship and servyse,
In trust that he hath konnyng hem to rede
In every peril which that is to drede

The noise up ros, whan it was first

 Dwelleth with us, whil yow good list, in Troie

"And al th'onour that men may don yow
 have, 120
 As ferforth as youre fader dwelled here, Ye shul have, and youre body shal men
 save,
 As fer as I may ought enquire or here"
 And she hym thonked with ful humble
 chere,
 And offer wolde, and it hadde ben his
 wille, 125
 And took hire leve, and hom, and held hir
 stille

And in hire hous she abood with swich meyne
 As til hire honour nede was to holde,
 And whil she was dwellynge in that cite,
 Kepte hir estat, and both of yonge and olde Ful wel biloved, and wel men of hir tolde But whether that she children hadde or
 noon, 132
 I rede it naught, therefore I late it goon

The thynges fellen, as they don of werre, Bitwixen hem of Troie and Grekes ofte, 135 For som day boughten they of Troie it derre,
 And eft the Grekes founden nothing softe The folk of Troie, and thus Fortune on lofte,
 And under eft, gan hem to whelen bothe Aftir hir cours, ay whil that thei were wrothe 140

But how this town com to destruccion Ne falleth naught to purpos me to telle,
 For it were here a long disgression Fro my matere, and yow to long to dwelle
 But the Troian gestes, as they felle, 145
 In Omer, or in Dares, or in Dite, Whoso that kan may rede hem as they write

But though that Grekes hem of Troie shetten,
 And hir cite biseged al aboute,
 Hire olde usage nolde they nat letten, 150
 As for to honoure hir goddes ful devoute,
 But aldrmost in honour, out of doute, Thei hadde a relik, heet Palladion,
 That was hire trist aboven everichon

And so bifel, whan comen was the tyme 155
 Of Aperil, whan clothed is the mede
 With newe grene, of lusty Veer the pryeme,
 And swote smellen floures white and rede,
 In sondry wises shewed, as I rede,
 The folk of Troie hire observaunces olde, Palladiones feste for to holde 161

And to the temple, in al hir beste wise,
 In general ther wente many a wight,
 To herknen of Palladion the servyse,
 And namely, so many a lusty knyght, 165
 So many a lady fressh and mayden bright, Ful wel arayed, both meste, mene, and
 leste,
 Ye, bothe for the seson and the feste

Among these othere folk was Criseyda, In widewes habit blak, but natheles, 170 Right as oure firste lettre is now an A,
 In beaute first so stood she, makeles Hire goodly loking gladed al the prees Nas nevere yet seyn thyng to ben preyseed
 derre,
 Nor under cloude blak so bright a sterre 175

As was Criseyde, as folk seyde everichone That hir behelden in hir blake wede
 And yet she stood ful lowe and stille allone, Byhynden other folk, in litel brede, And neigh the dore, ay undre shames
 drede, 180
 Simple of atir and debonaire of chere,
 With ful assured loking and manere

This Troilus, as he was wont to gide His yonge knyghtes, lad hem up and down In thilke large temple on every side, 185 Byholding ay the ladies of the town,
 Now here, now there, for no devocioun Hadde he to non, to reven hym his reste, But gan to preise and lakken whom hym
 leste

And in his walk ful faste he gan to wayten
 If knyght or squyer of his compaignie 191 Gan for to syke, or lete his eighen baiten
 On any womman that he koude espye
 He wolde smyle and holden it foyle, And seye hym thus, "God woot, she slepeth soft 195
 For love of the, whan thow turnest ful ofte!

"I have herd told, pardieux, of youre lyv-
 ynge,

Ye loveres, and youre lewed observaunces,
 And whiche a labour folk han in wynnyng Of love, and in the keypyng which doutaunces, 200
 And whan youre prey is lost, woo and penaunces

O veray fooles, nyce and blynde be ye!
 Ther nys nat oon kan war by other be "

And with that word he gan caste up the browe, Ascaunces, "Loo! is this naught wisely spoken?" 205

At which the God of Love gan loken rowe Right for despit, and shop for to ben wroken

He kadde anon his bowe nas naught broken,
 For sodeynly he hitte hym atte fulle,
 And yet as proud a pekok kan he pulle 210

O blynde world, O blynde entencioun!
 How often falleth al the effect contraire Of surquidrie and foul presumpcioun, For kaught is proud, and kaught is debon-aire

This Troilus is clomben on the staire, 215
 And litel weneth that he moot descenden, But alday falleth thing that fooles wenden

As proude Bayard gynneth for to skippe
 Out of the weye, so pryketh hym his corn, Til he a lasshe have of the longe whippe, Than thynketh he, "Though I prounce al byforn 221

First in the trays, ful fat and newe shorn, Yet am I but an hors, and horses lawe
 I moot endure, and with myferes drawe ",

So ferde it by this fierse and proude
 knyght. 225

Though he a worthy kynges sone were,

And wende nothing hadde had swich
 myght

Ayeyns his wille that shuld his herte stere, Yet with a look his herte wax a-ferre,
 That he that now was moost in pride
 above, 230
 Wax sodeynly moost subgit unto love

Forthy ensample taketh of this man, Ye wise, proude, and worthi folkes alle,
 To scornen Love, which that so soone kan
 The freedom of youre hertes to hym thralle, 235

For evere it was, and evere it shal byfalle,
 That Love is he that alle thing may bynde,
 For may no man fordon the lawe of kynde

That this be soth, hath preved and doth yit 239

For this trowe I ye knowen alle or some, Men reden nat that folk han gretter wit Than they that han be most with love ynome,

And strengest folk ben therwith overcome,
 The worstest and grettest of degree This was, and is, and yet men shal it
 see 245

And trowelich it sit wel to be so
 For alderwisest han therwith ben plesed,
 And they that han ben aldermost in wo, With love han ben comforted moost and
 esed, 249

And ofte it hath the cruel herte apesed,
 And worthi folk maad worthier of name,
 And causeth moost to dreden vice and shame

Now sith it may nat goodly ben with-
 stonde,

And is a thing so vertuous in kynde, Refuseth nat to Love for to ben bonde, 255 Syn, as hymselfen liste, he may yow bynde
 The yerde is bet that bowen wole and
 wynde

Than that that brest, and therefore I yow
 rede

To folowen hym that so wel kan yow lede

But for to tellen forth in special 260
 As of this kynges sone of which I tolde,
 And leten other thing collateral,

Of hym thenke I my tale forth to holde, Bothe of his joié and of his cares colde,
And at his werk, as touching this matere,
For I it gan, I wol therto refere 266

Withinne the temple he wente hym forth pleyngé,

This Troilus, of every wight aboute,
On this lady, and now on that, lokyngé, Wher so she were of town or of with-
oute, 270

And upon cas bifel that thorough a route
His eye percede, and so depe it wente,
Til on Criseyde it smot, and ther it stente

And sodeynly he wax therwith astoned,
And gan hir bet biholde in thrifty wise
"O mercy, God," thoughte he, "wher hastow woned, 276

That art so feyr and goodly to devise?"
Therwith his herte gan to sprede and rise,
And softe sighed, lest men myghte hym
here,

And caught ayeyn his firste pleyngé
chere 280

She nas nat with the leste of hire stature, But alle hire lymes so wel answerynge Weren to wommanhod, that creature Was nevere lasse mannyssh in semyngé And ek the pure wise of hire mevyngé 285 Shewed wel that men myght in hire gesse Honour, estat, and wommanly noblesse

To Troilus right wonder wel with alle Gan for to like hire mevyngé and hire chere, Which somdel deignous was, for she let
falle 290

Hire look a lite aside in swich manere, Ascaunces, "What! may I nat stonden
here?"

And after that hir lokyngé gan she lighte, That nevere thoughte hym seen so good a syghte

And of hire look in him ther gan to quyken 295

So gret desir and such affeccoun,
That in his hertes botme gan to stiken
Of hir his fixe and depe impressioun And though he erst hadde poured up and down, 299

He was tho glad his hornes in to shrinke, Unnethes wiste he how to loke or wynke.

Lo, he that leet hymselfen so konnyngé,
And scorned hem that Loves peynes dryen, Was ful unwar that Love hadde his dwell-yngé

Withinne the subtile stremes of hir yen, 305
That sodeynly hym thoughte he felte
dyen,

Right with hire look, the spirit in his herte Blissed be Love, that kan thus folk converte!

She, this in blak, likyngé to Troilus 309
Over alle thing, he stood for to biholde, Ne his desir, ne wherfore he stood thus,
He neither chere made, ne word tolde,
But from afer, his manere for to holde,
On other thing his look som tyme he caste,
And eft on hire, while that the servyse
laste 315

And after this, nat fullch al awhaped,
Out of the temple al eslich he wente, Repentyngé hym that he hadde evere ijaped

Of Loves folk, lest fully the descente Of scorn fille on hymself, but what he
mente, 320

Lest it were wist on any manere syde,
His woo he gan dissimulen and hide

Whan he was fro the temple thus departed,
He streght anon unto his paleys torneth, Right with hire look thorough-shoten and thorough-darted, 325

Al feyneth he in lust that he sojorneth, And al his chere and speche also he borneth,

And ay of Loves servantz every while,
Hymself to wrye, at hem he gan to smyle,

And seyde, "Lord, so ye lyve al in lest, 330 Ye loveres! for the konnyngeste of yow,
That serveth most ententifch and best,
Hym tit as often harm therof as prow Youre hire is quyt ayeyn, ye, God woot how!

Nought wel for wel, but scorn for good
servyse 335

In feith, youre ordre is ruled in good wisel

"In nouncerteyn ben alle youre observances,

But it a sely fewe pointes be,
Ne no thing asketh so gret attendaunces As doth youre lay, and that knowe alle
ye 340

But that is nat the worste, as mote I the!
But, tolde I yow the worste point, I leve, Al seyde I soth, ye wolden at me greve

"But take this that ye loveres of teeschuwe, Or elles doon, of good entencioun, 345
Ful ofte thi lady wol it mysconstruwe,
And deme it harm in hire oppynyoun,
And yet if she, for other enchesoun,
Be wroth, than shaltow have a groyn anon Lord, wel is hym that may ben of yow
oon!" 350

But for al this, whan that he say his tyme,
He held his pees, non other boote hym gayned,

For love bigan his fetheres so to lyme,
That wel unnethe until his folk he fayned
That other besy nedes hym destrayned, 355 For wo was hym, that what to doon he nyste,

But bad his folk to gon wher that hem
liste

And whan that he in chambre was alone,
He doun upon his beddes feet hym sette, And first he gan to sike, and eft to
grone, 360

And thought ay on hire so, withouten lette,
That, as he sat and wook, his spirit mette That he hire saugh a temple, and al the
wise

Right of hire look, and gan it newe avise

Thus gan he make a mirour of his mynde,
In which he saugh al holly hire figure, 366
And that he wel koude in his herte fynde,
It was to hym a right good aventure
To love swich oon, and if he dede his cure To serven hir, yet myghte he falle in
grace, 370

Or ellis for oon of hire servantes pace,

Imagynynge that travaille nor grame Ne myghte for so goodly oon be lorn
As she, ne hym for his desir no shame,

Al were it wist, but in pris and up-born 375
Of alle lovers wel more than biforn, Thus argumented he in his gynnyng, Ful unavysed of his woo comyng

Thus took he purpos loves craft to suwe,
And thoughte he wolde werken pryvely,
First to hiden his desir in muwe 381
From every wight yborn, al outrelly,
But he myghte ought recovered be therby, Remembryng hym that love to wide yblowe Yelt bitter fruyt, though swete seed be sowe 385

And over al this, yet muchel more he thoughte

What for to speke, and what to holden
inne,

And what to arten hire to love he soughte,
And on a song anon-right to bygynne, 389
And gan loude on his sorwe for to wynne,
For with good hope he gan fully assente Criseyde for to love, and nought repente

And of his song naught only the sentence,
As writ myn auctour called Lollius,
But plainly, save oure tonges difference, 395
I dar wel seyn, in al that Troilus Seyde in his song, lool every word right
thus

As I shal seyn, and whoso list it here, Loo, next this vers he may it fynden here

Canticus Troili

"If no love is, O God, what fele I so? 400
And if love is, what thing and which is he?
If love be good, from whennes cometh my woo?"

If it be wikke, a wonder thynketh me,
When every torment and adversite That cometh of hym, may to me savory
thinke, 405
For ay thurst I, the more that ich it
drynke

"And if that at myn owen lust I brenne, From whennes cometh my wailynge and my pleynte?"

If harm agree me, wherto pleyne I thenne?
I noot, ne whi unwery that I feynte 410

O quike deth, O swete harm so queynte, How may of the in me swich quantite,
But if that I consente that it be?

"And if that I consente, I wrongfully Compleyne, iwis Thus passed to and fro, 415

Al stereeles withinne a boot am I Amydde the see, bitwixen wyndes two,
That in contrarie stonden evere mo Allas! what is this wondre maladie?
For hete of cold, for cold of hete, I
dye" 420

And to the God of Love thus seyde he With pitous vois, "O lord, now youres is My spirit, which that oughte youres be Yow thanke I, lord, that han me brought to this 424

But whether goddesse or womman, iwis,
She be, I not, which that ye do me serve,
But as hire man I wol ay lyve and sterve

"Ye stonden in hir eighen myghtily,
As in a place unto youre vertu digne, Wherfore, lord, if my service or I 430
May liken yow, so beth to me benigne, For myn estat roial I here resigne Into hire hond, and with ful humble chere Bicome hir man, as to my lady dere"

In hym ne deynd spare blood roial 435
The fyr of love, the wherfro God me blesse, Ne hum forbar in no degree for al
His vertu or his excellent prowesse,
But held hym as his thral lowe in destresse,
And brende hym so in soundry wise ay
newe, 440
That sexti tyme a day he loste his hewe

So muche, day by day, his owene thought,
For lust to hire, gan quiken and encesse,
That every other charge he sette at nought Forth ful ofte, his hote fir to cesse, 445
To sen hire goodly lok he gan to presse,
For therby to ben esed wel he wende,
And ay the ner he was, the more he brende

For ay the ner the fir, the hotter is, — Thus, trowe I, knoweth al this com-
paignye 450
But were he fer or ner, I dar sey thus

By nyght or day, for wisdom or folye,
His herte, which that is his brestes ye,
Was ay on hire, that fairer was to sene
Than evere was Eleyne or Polixene 455

Ek of the day ther passed nought an houre
That to hymself a thousand tyme he seyde,
"Good goodly, to whom serve I and laboure,

As I best kan, now wolde God, Criseyde, Ye wolden on me rewte, er that I deyde! 460
My dere herte, allas! myn hele and hewe
And lif is lost, but ye wol on me rewte"

Alle other dredes weren from him fledde, Both of th'assege and his savacioun, N'yn hum desir noon other fownes bredde,
But argumentes to this conclusioun, 466
That she of him wolde han compassioun, And he to ben hire man, while he may
dure
Lo, here his lif, and from the deth his cure!

The sharpe shoures felle of armes preve, 470
That Ector or his othere brethren diden, Ne made hym only therfore ones meve, And yet was he, where so men wente or riden, Founde on the beste, and lengest tyme abiden Ther peril was, and dide ek swich tra-vailla 475
In armes, that to thynke it was merveilla

But for non hate he to the Grekes hadde, Ne also for the rescous of the town,
Ne made hym thus in armes for to madde,
But only, lo, for this conclusioun 480
To liken hire the bet for his renoun Fro day to day in armes so he spedde,
That the Grekes as the deth hum dredde

And fro this forth tho reffe hym love his slep,
And made his mete his foo, and ek his
sorwe 485

Gan multiple, that, whoso tok kep,
It shewed in his hewe both eve and morwe Therfor a tittle he gan him for to borwe
Of other siknesse, lest men of hym wende
That the hote fir of love hym brende, 490

And seyde he hadde a fevere and ferde
amys

But how it was, certeyn, kan I nat seye,
If that his lady understood nat this,
Or feynede hire she nyste, oon of the
tweye, 494

But wel I rede that, by no manere weye, Ne semed it as that she of hym roughte, Or of his peyne, or whatsoever he thoughte

But thanne felte this Troilus swich wo, That he was wel neigh wood, for ay his
drede

Was this, that she som wight hadde loved
so, 500

That nevere of hym she wolde han taken
hede

For which hym thoughte he felte his herte
blede,

Ne of his wo ne dorste he nat bygynne
To tellen hir, for al this world to wynne

But whan he hadde a space from his
care, 505

Thus to hymself ful ofte he gan to pleyne,
He seyde, "O fool, now artow in the snare,
That whilom japedest at loves peyne Now artow hent, now gnaw thin owen
cheyne!"

Thow were ay wont ech lovere repre-
hende 510

Of thing fro which thou kanst the nat defende

'What wol now every lovere seyn of the,
If this be wist?' but evere in thin absence Laughen in scorn, and seyn, 'Loo, ther goth he

That is the man of so gret sapience, 515
That held us lovers leest in reverence

Now, thanked be God, he may gon in the
daunce

Of hem that Love list feblly for to avaunce

"But, O thow woful Troilus, God wolde, Sith thow most loven thorough thi destine, 520

That thow beset were on swich oon that sholde

Know al thi wo, al lakked hir pitee!
But also cold in love towards the

This lady is, as frost in wynter moone,
And thow fordon, as snow in fire is soone'

"God wold I were aryved in the port 526
Of deth, to which my sorwe wol me lede!
A, Lord, to me it were a gret comfort, Than were I quyrt of languisshyng in drede
For, be myn hidde sorwe iblowe on brede, I shal byjaped ben a thousand tyme 531
More than that fol of whos folie men rvme

"But now help, God, and ye, swete, for whom

I pleyne, ikaught, ye, nevere wight so
faste!

O mercy, dere herte, and help me from 535
The deth, for I, while that my lyf may
laste,

More than myself wol love yow to my
laste

And with som frendly lok gladeth me,
swete,

Though nevere more thing ye me by-heete" 539

These wordes, and ful many an other to,
He spak, and called evere in his compleynte

Hire name, for to tellen hire his wo, Til neigh that he in salte teres dreynte

Al was for nought she herde nat his
pleynte,

And whan that he bythought on that folie, 545

A thousand fold his wo gan multiple

Bywaying in his chambre thus allone,
A frend of his, that called was Pandare, Com oones in unwar, and herde hym groone,

And say his frend in swich destresse and
care 550

"Allas," quod he, "who causeth al this
fare?"

O mercy, God! what unhap may this meene?

Han now thus soone Grekes maad yow leene?

"Or hastow som remors of conscience,
And art now falle in som devocioun, 555

And wailest for thi synne and thin offence,
 And hast for ferde caught attricioun?
 God save hem that biseged han ourc town,

That so kan leye oure jolite on presse, And brunge oure iusty folk to holy-
 nesse!" 560

These wordes seyde he for the nones alle, That with swich thing he myght hym angry maken,

And with an agre don his wo to falle,
 As for the tyme, and his corage awaken
 But wel he wist, as fer as tonges spaken, 565 Ther nas a man of gretter hardnesse Thanne he, ne more desired worthnesse

"What cas," quod Troilus, "or what
 aventure

Hath gided the to sen me langwissunge, That am refus of every creature?" 570

But for the love of God, at my preyinge, Go hennes away, for certes my deyinge Wol the disese, and I mot nedes deye, Therefore go wey, ther is na more to seye

"But if thou wene I be thus sik for
 drede, 575

It is naught so, and therefore scorne nought Ther is another thing I take of hede Wel more than aught the Grekes han yet
 wrought,

Which cause is of my deth, for sorowe and
 thought

But though that I now telle it the ne leste, Be thou naught wroth, I hide it for the
 beste" 581

This Pandare, that neigh malt for wo and
 routhe,

Ful ofte seyde, "Allas! what may this be?
 Now frend," quod he, "if evere love or
 trouthe

Hath ben, or is, bitwixen the and me, 585
 Ne do thou nevere swich a crueltee
 To hiden fro thi frend so gret a care!
 Wostow naught wel that it am I, Pandare?"

"I wol parten with the al thi peyne,
 If it be so I do the no comfort, 590
 As it is frendes right, soth for to seyne,
 To entreparten wo as glad desport

I have, and shal, for trewe or fals report,
 In wrong and right loved the al my lyve Hid nat thi wo fro me, but telle it
 blyve" 585

Than gan this sorwtul Troylus to syke, And seide hym thus, "God leve it be my
 beste

To telle it the, for sith it may the like, Yet wol I telle it, though myn herte breste And wel woot I thow mayst do me no
 reste, 600

But lest thow deme I truste nat to the,
 Now herke, frend, for thus it stant with
 me

"Love, ayeins the which whoso defendeth Hymselfen most, hym alderlest awayllet,
 With disespeyr so sorwfull me offendeth, That straight unto the deth myn herte saalleth 605

Therto desir so brennyngly me assauleth,
 That to ben slayn it were a gretter joie
 To me than kyng of Grece ben and Troye.

"Suffiseth this, my fulle frend Pandare, 610
 That I have seyde, for now wostow my wo,
 And for the love of God, my colde care,
 So hide it wel — I tolde it nevere to mo
 For harmes myghten folwen mo than two,
 If it were wist, but be thow in glad-
 nesse, 615

And lat me sterve, unknowe, of my de-stresse"

"How hastow thus unkyndely and longe Hid this fro me, thow fol?" quod Panda-rus

"Paraunter thow myghte after swich oon
 longe,

That myn avys anoon may helpen us" 620

"This were a wonder thing," quod Troilus
 "Thow koudest nevere in love thuselven wisse

How devel maistow brynge me to blisse?"

"Ye, Troilus, now herke," quod Pandare,
 "Though I be nyce, it happeth often so, 625 That oon that excesse doth ful yvele fare By good counsel kan kepe his frend ther-fro

I have myself ek seyn a bynd man goo

Ther as he fel that couthe loken wide,
A fool may ek a wis-man ofte gide 630

"A wheston is no keryng instrument,
But yet it maketh sharppe keryng tols And there thow woost that I have aught myswent, Eschuw thow that, for swich thing to the scole is, 634

Thus often wise men ben war by foolys
If thow do so, thi wit is wel bewared,
By his contrarie is every thyng declared

"For how myghte evere swetnesse han ben
knowe

To him that nevere tasted bitternesse?
Ne no man may ben mly glad, I trowe, 640
That nevere was in sorwe or som destresse Eke whit by blak, by shame ek worthi-
nesse,

Ech set by other, more for other semeth,
As men may se, and so the wyse it demeth

"Sith thus of two contraries is o lore, 645
I, that have in love so ofte assayed Grevances, oughte konne, and wel the
more,

Counseillen the of that thow art amayed Ek the ne aughte nat ben yvel appayed, Though I desyre with the for to bere 650 Thyn hevvy charge, it shal the lasse dere

"I woot wel that it fareth thus be me
As to thi brother, Paris, an herdesse, Which that ideped was Oenone, Wrot in a compleynte of hur hevynesse 655 Yee say the lettre that she wrot, I gesse"
"Nay nevere yet, ywys," quod Troilus
"Now," quod Pandare, "herkne, it was
thus

"Phebus, that first fond art of medicyne, Quod she, 'and couthe in every wightes
care 660

Remedye and reed, by herbes he knew
fyne,

Yet to hymself his konnyng was ful bare,
For love hadde hym so bounden in a snare,
Al for the doughter of the kynge Amete, That al his craft ne koude his sorwes
'bete.' 665

"Right so fare I, unhappily for me
I love oon best, and that me smerteth sore;
And yet, perauunter, kan I reden the,
And nat myself, reprove me na more
I have no cause, I woot wel, for to sore 670
As doth an hawk that listeth for to pleye,
But to thun help yet somewhat kan I seye

"And of o thyng right siker maistow be,
That certein, for to dyen in the peyne,
That I shal nevere mo discoveren the, 675 Ne, by my trouthe, I kepe nat restreyne
The fro thi love, theigh that it were Eleyne
That is thi brother wif, if ich it wiste Be what she be, and love hire as the listel

"Therefore, as frend, fullich in me assure 680
And telle me plat now what is th'enchousoun
And final cause of wo that ye endure,
For douteth nothyng, myn entencioun Nis nat to yow of reprehencioun, To speke as now, for no wight may byreve
A man to love, tyl that hym list to leve 686

"And witteth wel that bothe two ben vices, Mistrusten alle, or elles alle leve But wel I woot, the mene of it no vice is,
For for to trusten som wight is a preve 690
Of trouth, and forthi wolde I fayn remeve Thi wronge conseyte, and do the som wyght triste
Thi wo to telle, and tel me, if the liste

"The wise seith, 'Wo hym that is allone, For, and he falle, he hath non helpe to
ryse', 695
And sith thow hast a felawe, tel thi mone, For this nys naught, certein, the nexte wyse
To wynnen love, as techen us the wyse,
To walwe and wepe as Nyobe the queene, Whos teres yet in marble ben yseene 700

"Lat be thy wepyng and thi drerynesse,
And lat us hssen wo with oother speche,
So may thy woful tyme seme lesse Delyte nat in wo thi wo to seche,
As don thuse foles that hire sorwes eche 705
With sorwe, whan thei han mysaventure,
And listen naught to seche hem other cure

"Men seyn, 'to wrecche is consolacioun
To have another felawe in hys peyne'

That owghte wel ben oure opynoun, 710
 For, bothe thow and I, of love we pleyne
 So ful of sorwe am I, soth for to seyne, That certainly namore harde grace May sitte on me, for-why ther is no space

"If God wol, thow art nat agast of me, 715 Lest I wolde of thi lady the bygyle!
 Thow woost thyself whom that I love,
 parde,

As I best kan, gon sithen longe while And sith thow woost I do it for no wyle, And seyst I am he that thow trustest moost, 720
 Telle me somewhat, syn al my wo thow
 woost "

Yet Troilus for al this no word seyde, But longe he ley as styll as he ded were,
 And after this with skyngne he abreyde,
 And to Pandarus vois he lente his ere, 725
 And up his eighen caste he, that in feere Was Pandarus, lest that in frenesie
 He sholde falle, or elles soone dye,

And cryde "Awake!" ful wonderlich and sharpe,

"What! slombrestow as in a litargie? 730
 Or artow lik an asse to the harpe,
 That hereth sown whan men the strynges
 plye,

But in his mynde of that no melodie May sinken hym to gladen, for that he So dul ys of his bestialite?" 735

And with that, Pandare of his wordes
 stente,

And Troilus yet hym nothyng answerde,
 For-why to tellen nas nat his entente To nevere no man, for whom that he so ferde 739

For it is seyde "man maketh ofte a yerde
 With which the maker is hymself ybeten In sondry manere," as thise wyse treten,

And namelich in his counsel tellynge
 That toucheth love that oughthe ben secree,
 For of himself it wol ynough out sprynge,
 But if that it the bet governed be 746
 Ek som tyme it is a craft to seme fle Fro thyng whych in effect men hunte faste Al this gan Troilus in his herte caste

But natheles, whan he hadde herd hym
 crye 750

"Awake!" he gan to syken wonder soore, And seyde, "Frend, though that I styll
 lye,

I am nat deaf Now pees, and crye na-
 more,

For I have herd thi wordes and thi lore,
 But suffre me my meschief to bywaille, 755
 For thi proverbes may me naught availle

"Nor other cure kanstow non for me Ek I nyl nat ben cured, I wol deye What knowe I of the queene Nyobe?
 Lat be thyne olde ensamples, I the
 preye " 760

"No," quod tho Pandarus, "therefore I
 seye,

Swych is delit of foles to bywepe Hire wo, but seken bote they ne kepe

"Now knowe I that ther reson in the failleth

But telle me, if I wiste what she were 765 For whom that the al this mysaunder alleth?

Dorstestow that I tolde hir in hire ere Thi wo, sith thow darst naught thiseif for
 feere,

And hire bysoughte on the to han som
 routhe?"

"Why, nay," quod he, "by God and by my trouthe!" 770

"What? nat as busyly," quod Pandarus,
 "As though myn owene lyf lay on this nede?"

"No, certes, brother," quod this Troilus
 "And whi?" — "For that thow scholdest nevere spede "

"Wostow that wel?" — "Ye, that is out of drede," 775

Quod Troilus, "for al that evere ye
 konne,

She nyl to noon swich wrecche as I ben wonne "

Quod Pandarus, "Allas! what may this be,
 That thow dispered art thus causeles?"

What! lyveth nat thi lady, benidiste? 780
 How wostow so that thow art graceles?"

Swich yvel is nat alwey booteles

Why, put nat impossible thus thi cure, Syn thying to come is oft in aventure

"I graunte wel that thou endurest wo 785
As sharp as doth he Tereus in helle, Whos stomak foughles turen evere moo
That hightyn volturis, as bokes telle
But I may nat endure that thou dwelle
In so unskiful an oppynyoun 790
That of thi wo is no curacioun

'But ones nyltow, for thy coward herte,
And for thyn ire and folish wilfulness,
For wantrust, tellen of thy sorwe smerte, Ne to thyn owen help don bysynesse 795
As muche as speke a resoun moore or lesse, But lyst as he that lest of nothyng recche What woman koude loven swich a wrecche?

"What may she demen oother of thy deeth, If thou thus deye, and she not why it
is, 800

But that for feere is yolden up thy breth,
For Grekes han biseged us, iwys?
Lord, which a thonk than shaltow han of
this!

Thus wol she seyn, and al the town at-tones,

'The wrecche is ded, the devel have his
bones!' 805

"Thow mayst allone here wepe and crye and knele,

But love a woman that she woot it
nought,

And she wol quyte it that thou shalt nat fele,

Unknowe, unkist, and lost, that is unsought

What! many a man hath love ful deere ybought 810

Twenty wynter that his lady wiste,
That nevere yet his lady mouth he kiste

"What? sholde he therfore fallen in dis-payr,

Or be recreant for his owne tene,
Or slen hymself, al be his lady fair? 815

Nay, nay, but evere in oon be fressh and
grene

To serve and love his deere hertes queene,

And thynk it is a guerdon, hire to serve,
A thousand fold moore than he kan de-
serve "

Of that word took hede Troilus, 820
And thoughte anon what folie he was unne,
And how that soth hym seyde Pandarus, That for to slen hymself myght he nat
wynne,

But bothe don unmanhod and a synne,
And of his deth his lady naught to wite, 825
For of his wo, God woot, she knew ful lite

And with that thought he gan ful sore
syke,

And seyde, "Allas! what is me best to do?"
To whom Pandare answered, "If the like,
The beste is that thou telle me al thi
wo 830

And have my trouthe, but thou it fynde so I be thi boote, or that it be ful longe,
To pieces do me drawe, and sithen honge!"

"Ye, so thou seyst," quod Troilus tho,
"allas!"

But, God woot, it is naught the rather so ful hard were it to helpen in this cas, 836

For wel fynde I that Fortune is my fo, Ne al the men that riden konne or go

May of hire cruel whiel the harm with-
stonde,

For, as hire list, she pleyeth with free and
bonde " 840

Quod Pandarus, "Than blamestow Fortune

For thou art wroth, ye, now at erst I see Woost thou nat wel that Fortune is com-une

To everi manere wight in som degree?
And yet thou hast this comfort, lo, parde,

That, as hire joes moten overgon, 846
So mote hire sorwes passen everechon

"For if hire whiel stynte any thyng to torne,

Than ressed she Fortune anon to be Now, sith hire whiel by no way may so-
journe, 850

What woostow if hire mutabilite

Right as thyselven list, wol don by the,

Or that she be naught fer fro thyn help-
ynge?

Paraunter thow hast cause for to synge

“And therefore wostow what I the biseche? 855

Lat be thy wo and tornyng to the grounde,
For whoso list have helyng of his leche,
To hym byhoveth first unwre his wownde
To Cerberus yn helle ay be I bounde, Were it for my suster, al thy sorwe, 860
By my wil she sholde al be thyn to-morwe

‘Look up, I seye, and telle me what she is Anon, that I may gon about thy nede Knowe ich hire aught? For my love, telle me this 864

Thanne wolde I hopen rather for to spede ” Tho gan the veyne of Troilus to blede,
For he was hit, and wax al reed for shame “A ha!” quod Pandare, “here bygynneth
game ”

And with that word he gan hym for to shake,

And seyde, “Thef, thow shalt hire name
telle ” 870

But tho gan sely Troilus for to quake As though men sholde han led hym into
helle,

And seyde, “Allas! of al my wo the welle, Thanne is my swete fo called Criseyde!” And wel neigh with the word for feere he deide 875

And whan that Pandare herde hire name
nevene,

Lord, he was glad, and seyde “Frend so
deere,

Now far aright, for Joves name in hevene, Love hath byset the wel, be of good cheere!
For of good name and wisdom and manere
She hath ynough, and ek of gentillesse 881
If she be fayr, thow woost thyself, I gesse

“Ne I nevere saugh a more bountevous Of hire estat, n’a gladder, ne of speche 885
A frendlyer, n’a more gracious
For to do wel, ne lasse hadde nede to seche
What for to don, and al this bet to eche,
In honour, to as fer as she may stretche,
A kynges herte semeth by hyrs a wrecche

“And forthy loke of good comfort thou
be, 890

For certainly, the firste poynt is this
Of noble corage and wel ordayne,
A man to have pees with himself, ywis So oughtest thou, for nought but good it is To loven wel, and in a worthy place, 895
The oughte nat to clepe it hap, but grace

“And also thynk, and therwith glade the,
That sith thy lady vertuous is al, So foloweth it that there is som pitee Amonges alle these other in general, 900
And forthu se that thow, in special, Requere naught that is ayeyns hyre name, For vertu stretccheth naught hymself to shame

“But wel is me that evere that I was born,
That thow bist art in so good a place, 905 For by my trouthe, in love I dorste have sworn

The sholde nevere han tid thus fayr a grace And wostow why? For thow were wont to chace

At Love in scorn, and for despit him calle ‘Seynt Idyot, lord of these foles alle ’ 910

“How often hastow maad thi nyce japes,
And seyde, that Loves servantz everichone Of nycete ben verray Goddes apes,
And some wolde mucche hire mete allone, Liggyng abedde, and make hem for to
grone, 915

And som, thow seydest, hadde a blaunche fevere,

And preydest God he sholde nevere kevere

“And some of hem tooke on hem, for the cold,

More than ynough, so seydestow ful ofte
And som han feyned ofte tyme, and told How that they waken, whan thei slepen
softe, 921

And thus they wolde han brought himself aloft,

And natheles were under at the laste
Thus seydestow, and japedest ful faste

“Yet seydestow, that for the moore part,
These loveres wolden speke in general, 925
And thoughten that it was a siker art,

For faylyng, for t'assayen overal
Now may I jape of the, if that I shal, But natheles, though that I sholde deye,
That thou art non of tho, I dorste saye 931

"Now bet thi brest, and sev to God of Love,
'Thy grace, lord, for now I me repente,
If I mysspak, for now myself I love' Thus sey with al thyn herte in good en-
tente" 935

Quod Troilus, "A, lord! I me consente, And preye to the my japes thow foryve,
And I shal nevere more whyle I live"

"Thow seist wel," quod Pandare, "and now I hope

That thou the goddes wrathe hast al ap-esed, 940

And sithen thou hast wopen many a drope,
And seyde swych thyng wherwith thi god is plesed,

Now wolde nevere God but thou were
esed!

And thynk wel, she of whom rist al thi wo Hereafter may thy comfort be also 945

"For thilke grownd that bereth the wedes
wikke

Bereth ek these holsom herbes, as ful ofte Nexth the foule netle, rough and thikke, The rose waxeth swoote and smothe and
softe,

And next the valeye is the hil o-lofte, 950
Be next the derke nyght the glade morwe,
And also joie is next the fyn of sorwe

"Now loke that atempre be thi bridel,
And for the beste ay suffre to the tyde,
Or elles al oure labour is on ydel 955
He hasteth wel that wisely kan abyde
Be diligent and trewe, and ay wel hide,
Be lusty, fre, persevere in thy servyse,
And al is wel, if thou werke in this wyse

"But he that parted is in everi place 960 Is nowher hol, as writen clerkes wyse What wonder is, though swich oon have no grace?"

Ek wostow how it fareth of som servise,
As plante a tree or herbe, in sondry wyse,
And on the morwe pulle it up as blyve! 965
No wonder is, though it may nevere thryve

"And sith that God of Love hath the bistowed

In place digne unto thi worthnesse, Stond faste, for to good port hastow rowed,
And of thyself, for any hevynesse, 970
Hope alwey wel, for, but if drrynesse Or over-haste oure bothe labour shende,
I hope of this to maken a good ende

"And wostow why I am the lasse afered
Of this matere with my nece trete? 975
For this have I herd seyde of wyse lered, Was nevere man or womman yet bigete
That was unapt to suffren loves hete, Celestial, or elles love of kynde, Forthy som grace I hope in hure to fynde

"And for to speke of hire in specyall, 981 Hire beaute to bithynken and hure youthe,
It sit hure naught to ben celestial As yet, though that hire liste bothe and kowthe,

But trewely, it sate hire wel right nowthe
A worthi knyght to loven and cherice, 986
And but she do, I holde it for a vice

"Wherefore I am, and wol ben, ay redy To peyne me to do yow this servyse,
For bothe yow to plesse thus hope I 990 Hereafterward, for ye ben bothe wyse,
And konne it counsel kepe in swych a wyse That no man schal the wiser of it be,
And so we may ben gladed alle thre

"And, by my trouthe, I have right now of the 995

A good conceyte in my wit, as I gesse,
And what it is, I wol now that thou se
I thenke, sith that Love, of his goodnesse, Hath the converted out of wikkednesse, That thou shalt ben the beste post, I
leve, 1000
Of al his lay, and moost his foos to greve

"Ensample why, se now these wise clerkes, That erren aldermost ayeyn a lawe, And ben converted from hire wikked werkes

Thorough grace of God that list hem to hym
drawe, 1005

Thanne art they folk that han moost God in awe,

And strengest feythed ben, I undrstonde, And konne an errowr alderbest with-
stonde "

Whan Troilus hadde herd Pandare assented

To ben his help in lovyng of Cryseyde, 1010 Weex of his wo, as who seith, untormented,
But hotter weex his love, and thus he seyde,
With sobre chere, although his herte
pleyde

"Now blisful Venus helpe, er that I sterve, Of the, Pandare, I mowe som thank de-
serve 1015

"But, deere frend, how shal my wo be lesse Til this be doon? And good, ek telle me
this

How wiltow seyn of me and my destresse, Lest she be wroth — this drede I moost, ywys —

Or nyl nat here or trowen how it is? 1020 Al this drede I, and eke for the manere Of the, hre em, she nyl no swich thyng
here "

Quod Pandarus, "Thow hast a ful gret care Lest that the cherl may falle out of the moone!

Whi, Lord! I hate of the thi nyce fare! 1025
Whi, entremete of that thow hast to doone!
For Goddes love, I bidde the a boone,
So lat m'alone, and it shal be thi beste "
"Whi, frend," quod he, "now do right as the leste

"But herke, Pandare, o word, for I nolde That thow in me wendest so gret folie, 1031
That to my lady I desiren sholde That toucheth harm or any vilenye, For dredeles me were levere dye Than she of me aught elles understode 1035
But that that myghte sownen into goode "

Tho lough this Pandare, and anon an-
swerde,

"And I thi borugh? fy! no wight doth but
so I roughte naught though that she stood and herde

How that thow seist! but farewel, I wol
go 1040

Adeu! be glad! God spede us bothe two!
Yef me this labour and this bisynesse,
And of my spede be thyn al that swet-
nesse "

The Troilus gan doun on knees to falle,
And Pandare in his armes hente faste, 1045
And seyde, "Now, fy on the Grekes alle!
Yet, pardee, God shal helpe us atte laste
And dredeles, if that my lyf may laste,
And God tofor, lo, som of hem shal smerte, And yet m'athinketh that this avant m'a-
sterte! 1050

"Now, Pandare, I kan na more seye, But, thow wis, thow woost, thow maist, thow art al!

My hf, my deth, hol in thyn hond I leye Help now!" Quod he, "Yis, by my trowthe, I shal " 1054

"God yelde the, frend, and this m special," Quod Troilus, "that thow me recomande To hire that to the deth me may comande "

This Pandarus, tho desirous to serve His fulle frend, than seyde in this manere
"Farwell, and thenk I wol thi thank de-
serve! 1062

Have here my trowthe, and that thow shalt wel here "

And went his wey, thenkyng on this
matere,

And how he best myghte hire biseche of
grace,

And fynde a tyme therto, and a place

For everi wight that hath an hous to founde Ne renneth naught the werk for to by-
gynne 1066

With rakel hond, but he wol bide a stounde,

And sende his hertes line out fro withinne Aldirfirst his purpos for to wynne

Al this Pandare in his herte thoughte, 1070 And caste his werk ful wisely or he
wroughte

But Troilus lay tho no lenger down,
But up anon upon his stede bay,
And in the feld he pleyde the leoun, Wo was that Grek that with hym mette a-day! 1075

And in the town his manere tho forth ay
Soo goodly was, and gat hym so in grace, That ecch hym loved that loked on his face

For he bicom the frendlieste wight,
The gentlest, and ek the mooste fre, 1080
The thriftiest and oon the beste knyght, That in his tyme was or myghte be Dede were his japes and his cruelte,

His heighe port and his manere estraunge,
And ecch of tho gan for a vertu chaunge

Now lat us stynte of Troilus a stounde, 1086
That fareth lik a man that hurt is soore,
And is somdeel of akyngge of his wownde Ylussed wel, but heeled no deel moore
And, as an esy pacyent, the loore 1090 Abit of hym that gooth aboute his cure,
And thus he dryeth forth his aventure

BOOK II

Incipit prohemium secundi libri

Owt of thise blake wawes for to saylle, O wynd, o wynd, the weder gynneth clere,
For in this see the boot hath swych travaylle,

Of my connyng, that unneth I it steere Thus see clepe I the tempestous matere 5
Of disespere that Troilus was inne,
But now of hope the kalendes bygynne

O lady myn, that called art Cleo, Thow be my speed fro this forth, and my Muse,

To ryme wel this book til I have do, 10
Me nedeth here noon other art to use Forwhi to every lovere I me excuse,
That of no sentement I this endite,
But out of Latyn in my tonge it write

Wherfore I nyl have neither thank ne
blame 15

Of al this werk, but prey yow mekely, Disblameth me, if any word be lame,
For as myn auctour seyde, so sey I Ek though I speeke of love unfelyngly,
No wondre is, for it nothyng of newe is, 20
A blynd man kan nat juggen wel in hewis

Ye knowe ek that in forme of speche is change

Withinne a thousand yeer, and wordes
tho

That hadden pris, now wonder nyce and straunge

Us thinketh hem, and yet thei spake hem
so, 25

And spedde as wel in love as men now do, Ek for to wynnen love in sondry ages,
In sondry londes, sondry ben usages

And forthi if it happe in any wyse,
That here be any lovere in this place 30
That herkneth, as the storie wol devise,
How Troilus com to his lady grace, And thenketh, "so nold I nat love purchace,"

Or wondreth on his speche or his doynge,
I noot, but it is me no wonderynge 35

For every wight which that to Rome went Halt nat o path, or alwey o manere, Ek in som lond were al the game shent,
If that they ferde in love as men don here,
As thus, in opyn doynge or in chere, 40
In visytyng, in forme, or seyde hire sawes, Forthi men seyn, ecch contree hath his lawes

Ek scarsly ben ther in this place thre
That have in love seid lik, and don, in al,
For to thi purpos this may liken the, 45
And the right nought, yet al is seid or schal,

Ek som men grave in tree, some in ston
wal,

As it bitit, but syn I have bigonne, Myn auctour shal I folwen, if I konne

Incipit liber secundus

In May, that moder is of monthes glade, That freshe floures, blew and white and
rede, 51

Ben quike agayn, that wynter dede made,
And ful of bawme is fletyng every mede, Whan Phebus doth his bryghte bemes
sprede,

Right in the white Bole, it so bitidde, 55
As I shal synge, on Mayes day the thrydde,

That Pandarus, for al his wise speche, Felt ek his part of loves shotes keene, That, koude he nevere so wel of lovyng
preche,

It made his hewe a-day ful ofte greene 60
So shop it that hym fil that day a teene
In love, for which in wo to bedde he wente,
And made, er it was day, ful many a

The swalowe Proigne, with a sorowful lay, Whan morwen com, gan make hire way-mentyng, 65

Whi she forshapen was, and ever lay Pandare abedde, half in a slomberyng, Til she so neigh hym made hire cheteryng How Tereus gan forth hire suster take,
That with the noyse of hire he gan awake, 70

And gan to calle, and dresse hym up to
ryse,

Remembryng hym his erand was to doone
From Troilus, and ek his grete emprise, And caste and knew in good plit was the Quod Pandarus, "Madame, God yow

see, 85
With al youre fayre book and compaignie!"

"Ey, uncle myn, welcome iwys," quod she,
And up she roos, and by the hond in hye She took hym faste, and seyde, "This nyght thrie,

To goode mot it turne, of yow I mette" 90
And with that word she down on bench hym
sette

"Ye, nece, yee shal faren wel the bet, If God wol, al this year," quod Pandarus,
"But I am sorry that I have yow let 94

For Goddes love, what seith it? telle it us!
Is it of love? O, som good ye me leere!"
"Uncle," quod she, "youre maistresse is nat here"

With that thei gonnen laughe, and tho she
seyde,

"This romaunce is of Thebes that we
rede, 100

And we han herd how that kyng Layus
deyde

Thorough Edippus his sone, and al that
dede,

And here we stynten at thise lettres rede,
How the bissop, as the book kan telle, Amphorax, fil thorough the ground to
helle" 105

Quod Pandarus, "Al this knowe I myselve,
And al th'assege of Thebes and the care,
For herof ben ther maked bookes twelve But lat be this, and telle me how ye fare Do wey youre barbe, and shewe youre face
bare, 110

Do wey youre book, rys up, and lat us
daunce,

And lat us don to May som observaunce"

"If God forbede!" quod she, "be ye mad?
Is that a widewes lif, so God yow save?
By God, ye maken me ryght soore adrad!
Ye ben so wyld, it semeth as ye rave 114
It sate me wel bet ay in a cave
To bidde and rede on holy seyntes lyves, Lat maydens gon to daunce, and yonge
wyves"

"As evere thrive I," quod this Pandarus, 120

"Yet koude I telle a thyng to doon yow pleye "

"Now, uncle deere," quod she, "telle it us For Goddes love, is than th'assege aweye? I am of Grekes so fered that I deye "

"Nay, nay," quod he, "as evere mote I thryve, 125
It is a thyng wel bet than swyche fyve "

"Ye, holy God," quod she, "what thyng is that?"

What! bet than swyche fyve? I! nav, ywys!

For al this world ne kan I reden what It sholde ben, some jape, I trowe, is this, 130
And but youreselven telle us what it is, My wit is for t'arede it al to leene
As help me God, I not nat what ye meene "

"And I youre borugh, ne nevere shal, for me,

This thyng be told to yow, as mote I thryve!" 135

"And whi so, uncle myn? whi so?" quod she

"By God," quod he, "that wol I telle as blyve!"

For broudder womman is thier noon on lyve, And ye it wist, in al the town of Troye
I jape nought, as evere have I joye!" 140

Tho gan she wondren moore than biforn A thousand fold, and down hire eyghen caste,

For nevere, sith the tyme that she was born, To knowe thyng desired she so faste,
And with a syk she seyde hym atte laste, 145

"Now, uncle myn, I nyl yow nought displese, Nor axen more that may do yow disese "

So after this, with many wordes glade, And frendly tales, and with merne chiere,
Of this and that they pleide, and gonnen wade 150

In many an unkouth glad and dep mastere, As frendes doon whan thei ben mette yfere, Yt she gan axen hym how Ector ferde, That was the townes wal and Grekes yerde

"Ful wel, I thonk it God," quod Pandarus, "Save in his arm he hath a litel wownde, 156
And ek his freshe brother Troilus, The wise, worthi Ector the secoude, In whom that alle vertu list habounde, As alle trouth and alle gentlesse, 160 Wisdom, honour, fredom, and worthnesse "

"In good feath, em," quod she, "that liketh me,

Thei faren wel, God save hem bothe two! For trewelich I holde it gret deynthe, A kynges sone in armes wel to do, 165
And ben of goode condicions therto, For gret power and moral vertu here Is selde yseyn in o persone yfere "

"In good fath, that is soth," quod Pandarus

"But, by my trouthe, the kyng hath sones tweye, — 170

That is to mene, Ector and Troilus, — That certeynly, though that I sholde deye, Thei ben as voide of vices, dar I seye, As any men that lyven under the bonne Hire myght is wyde yknowe, and what they konne 175

"Of Ector nedeth it namore for to telle In al this world ther nys a bettere knyght Than he, that is of worthynesse welle, And he wel moore vertu hath than myght
This knoweth many a wis and worthi wight 180

The same pris of Troilus I seye, God help me so, I knowe nat swiche tweye "

"By God," quod she, "of Ector that is sooth

Of Troilus the same thyng trowe I, For, dredeles, men tellen that he doth 185
In armes day by day so worthily, And bereth hym here at hom so gently To every wight, that alle pris hath he Of hem that me were levest preyed be "

"Ye sey right sooth, ywys," quod Pandarus, 190

"For yesterday, whoso hadde with hym ben,

He myghte han wondred upon Troilus,

For nevere yet so thikke a swarm of been Ne fleigh, as Grekes fro hym gonne fleen, And thorough the feld, in everi wightes
 eere, 195
 Ther nas no cry but 'Troiulus is there!'

"Now here, now ther, he hunted hem so
 faste,

Ther nas but Grekes blood, and Troilus, Now hym he hurte, and hym al down he
 caste,

Ay wher he wente, it was arayed thus 200
 He was hir deth, and sheld and lif for us, That, as that day, ther dorste non with-
 stonde,

Whil that he held his bloody swerd in honde

"Therto he is the frendheste man 204
 Of gret estat, that evere I saugh my lyve,
 And wher hym lest, best felawshupe kan To swich as hym thynketh able for to
 thryve"

And with that word tho Pandarus, as
 blyve,
 He took his leve, and seyde, "I wol gon henne"

"Nay, blame have I, myn uncle," quod she thenne 210

"What aileth yow to be thus wery soone,
 And namelich of wommen? wol ye so?
 Nay, sitteth down, by God, I have to
 doone

With yow, to speke of wisdom er ye go"
 And everi wight that was aboute hem
 tho, 215

That herde that, gan fer away to stonde, Whil they two hadde al that hem liste in
 honde

Whan that hire tale al brought was to an
 ende,

Of hire estat and of hire governaunce, Quod Pandarus, "Now is it tyme I wende
 But yet, I say, ariseth, lat us daunce, 221 And cast youre widewes habit to mis-
 chaunce!"

What list yow thus youreself to disfigure, Sith yow is tid thus fair an aventure?"

"Al wel bithought! for love of God," quod
 she, 225

"Shal I nat witen what ye meene of this"
 "No, this thing axeth leyser," tho quod he,
 "And eke me wolde muche greve, iwys,
 If I it tolde, and ye it toke amys Yet were it bet my tonge for to stille 230 Than seye a soth that were ayeyns youre
 wille

"For, nece, by the goddesse Mynerve, And Jupiter, that maketh the thondre
 ryng,

And by the blisful Venus that I serve, Ye ben the womman in this world
 lyvynge, 235

Withouten paramours, to my wyttynge,
 That I best love, and lothest am to greve,
 And that ye weten wel youreself, I leve"

"Iwis, myn uncle," quod she, "grant
 mercy Youre frendshipe have I founden evere
 yit, 240

I am to no man holden, trewely,
 So muche as yow, and have so litel quyrt,
 And with the grace of God, emforth my
 wit,

As in my gylt I shal yow nevere offende,
 And if I have er this, I wol amende 245

"But, for the love of God, I yow biseche, As ye ben he that I love moost and triste,
 Lat be to me youre fremde manere speche,
 And sey to me, youre nece, what yow liste"
 And with that word hire uncle anon hire
 kiste, 250

And seyde, "Gladly, leve nece dere!
 Tak it for good, that I shal sey yow here"

With that she gan hire eighen down to
 caste,

And Pandarus to coghe gan a lite,
 And seyde, "Nece, alwey, io! to the laste, How so it be that som men hem delite 255
 With subtyl art hire tales for to endite, Yet for al that, in hire entencioun, Hire tale is al for som conclusioun

"And sithen th'ende is every tales
 strengthe, 260

And this matere is so bihovely, What sholde I peynte or drawn it on lengthe

To yow, that ben my frend so feythfully?"
And with that word he gan right inwardly Byholden hire and loken on hire face, 265 And seyde, "On swich a murour goode
grace!"

Than thought he thus "If I my tale endite Aught harde, or make a proces any wyle,
She shal no savour have therein but lite,
And trowe I wolde hire in my wil bigyle,
For tendre wittes wenen al be wyle 271 Thereas thei kan nought pleylny under-
stonde,
Forthi hire wit to serven wol I fonde" —

And loked on hire in a bysi wyse,
And she was war that he byheld hire so, 275
And seyde, "Lord! so faste ye m'avise!
Sey ye me nevere er now — What sey ye,
no?"

"Yis, yys," quod he, "and bet wole er I go!
But, be my trouthe, I thoughte, now if ye Be fortunat, for now men shal it se 280

"For to every wight som goodly aventure Som tyme is shape, if he it kan receyven,
But if that he wol take of it no cure, Whan that it commeth, but wilfully it weyven,

Lo neyther cas ne fortune hym deceyven, 285
But ryght his verray slouthe and wretched-
nesse,
And swich a wight is for to blame, I gesse

"Good aventure, o beele nece, have ye Ful lightly founden, and ye konne it take,
And, for the love of God, and ek of me, 290 Cache it anon, lest aventure slake!
What sholde I lenger proces of it make?
Yif me youre hond, for in this world is
noon,
If that yow list, a wight so wel bygon

"And sith I speke of good entencioun, 295
As I to yow have told wel here-byforn,
And love as wel youre honour and renoun
As creature in al this world yborn, By alle the othes that I have yow sworn,
And ye be wrooth therefore, or wene I
lye, 300
Ne shal I nevere sen yow eft with yē.

"Beth naught agast, ne quaketh naught!
Wherto?

Ne chaungeth naught for fere so youre
hewe!

For hardlye the werst of this is do,
And though my tale as now be to yow
newe, 305

Yet trist alwey ye shal me fynde trewe,
And were it thyng that me thoughte unsittyng,

To yow wolde I no swiche tales bryng "

"Now, my good em, for Goddes love, I
preye,"

Quod she, "come of, and telle me what it
is! 310

For both I am agast what ye wol seye,
And ek me longeth it to wite, ywys,
For whether it be wel or be amys, Sayon, lat me nat in this feere dwelle " —

"So wol I doon, now herkeneth! I shal
telle 315

"Now, nece myn, the kynges deere sone,
The goode, wise, worthi, fresshe, and free,
Which alwey for to don wel is his wone,
The noble Troilus, so loveth the,
That, but ye helpe, it wol his bane be 320 Lo, here is al! What sholde I moore seye?
Do what yow lest, to make hym lyve or
deye

"But if ye late hym deyen, I wol sterve — Have here my trouthe, nece, I nyl nat lyen —

Al sholde I with this knyf my throte
kerve " 325

With that the teris bruste out of his yen,
And seide, "If that ye don us bothe dyen, Thus gilteles, than have ye fished fayre!
What mende ye, though that we booth appare?"

"Allas! he which that is my lord so
deere, 330

That trewe man, that noble gentil knyght, That naught desureth but youre frendly
cheere,

I se hym deyen, ther he goth upryght
And hasteth hym with al his fulle myght
For to ben slayn, if his fortune assente 335 Allas, that God yow swich a beaute sentel

"If it be so that ye so cruel be,
That of his deth yow liste nought to recche,
That is so trewe and worth, as ye se, Namooore than of a japer or a wrecche, —
If ye be swich, youre beaute may nat
strecche 341

To make amendes of so cruel a dede Avysement is good byfore the nede

"Wo worth the faire gemme vertulees!
Wo worth that herbe also that dooth no
boote! 345

Wo worth that beaute that is routheelles!
Wo worth that wight that tret ech undir foote!

And ye, that ben of beaute crop and roote,
If therewithal in yow ther be no routhe,
Than is it harm ye lyven, by my trouthe!

"And also think wel that this is no gaude,
For me were levere thow and I and he 352
Were hanged, than I sholde ben his baude, As heigh as men myghte on us alle ysee!
I am thyn em, the shame were to me, 355
As wel as the, if that I sholde assente, Thorough myn abet, that he thyn honour
shente

"Now understonde, for I yow nought re-
quere

To bynde yow to hym thorough no byheste, But only that ye make hym bettere
chiere 360

Than ye han doon er this, and moore feste,
So that his lif be saved atte leeste
This al and som, and pleynly oure entente God help me so, I nevere other mente!

"Lo this requeste is naught but skylle,
ywys, 365

Ne doute of reson, pardee, is ther noon
I sette the worste, that ye dreden this Men wolde wondren sen hym come or goon Ther-ayeins answer I thus anoon,
That every wight, but he be fool of kynde, Wol deme it love of frendshipe in his
mynde 371

"What? who wol demen, though he se a
man

To temple go, that he th'yimages eteth?
Think ek how wel and wisely that he kan

Governe hymself, that he no thyng foryeteth, 375
That where he cometh, he pris and thank hym geteth,
And ek therto, he shal come here so selde, What fors were it though al the town byhelde?

"Swych love of frendes regneth al this town,

And wry yow in that mantel evere moo, 380
And, God so wys be my savacioun,
As I have seyde, youre beste is to do soo But alwey, goode nece, to stynte his woo,
So lat youre daunger sucred ben a lite, That of his deth ye be naught for to wite" 385

Criseyde, which that herde hym in this
wise,

Thoughte, "I shal felen what he meneth, ywys"

"Now em," quod she, "what wolde ye devise?"

What is youre reed I sholde don of this?"
"That is wel seyde," quod he, "certem, best is 390

That ye hym love ayeyn for his lovyngre,
As love for love is skilful guerdonyngre

"Think ek how elde wasteth every houre In ech of yow a partie of beautee,
And therefore, er that age the devoure, 395 Go love, for old, ther wol no wight of the Lat this proverbe a loore unto yow be 'To late ywar, quod beaute, whan it paste',
And elde daunteth daunger at the laste.

"The kynges fool is wont to crien loude, 400 Whan that hym thinketh a womman berth hire hie,

'So longe mote ye lyve, and alle proude, Til crowses feet be growen under youre ye,
And sende yow than a myrour in to pryde,
In which that ye may se youre face a
morwe!' 405

Nece, I bidde wisshe yow namore sorwe"

With this he stynte, and caste adown the
heed,

And she began to breste a-wepe anoon,

Andseyde, "Allas, for wo' Why nere I deed?
For of this world the feyth is al agoon 410 Allas! what sholden straunge to me doon,
When he, that for my beste frend I wende, Ret me to love, and sholde it me defende?"

"Allas! I wolde han trusted, douteles, That if that I, thorough my disaventure, Hadde loved outhur hym or Achilles, 416 Ector, or any mannes creature, Ye nolde han had no mercy ne mesure
On me, but alwey had me in repreve
This false world, allas! who may it leve? 420

"What! is this al the joye and al the feste?
Is this youre reed? Is this my blisful cas?
Is this the verray mede of youre byheeste?
Is al this paynted proces seyde, allas!
Right for this fyn? O lady myn, Pallas! 425 Thow in this dredful cas for me purveye, For so astoned am I that I deye"

Wyth that she gan ful sorwfully to syke
"A! may it be no bet?" quod Pandarus, "By God, I shal namore come here this wyke, 430
And God toforn, that am mystrusted thus!
I se ful wel that ye sette lite of us,
Or of oure deth! allas, I woful wrecche!
Might he yet lyve, of me is nought to recche

"O cruel god, O dispitouse Marte, 435
O Furies thre of helle, on yow I crye!
So lat me nevere out of this hous departe,
If I mente harm or any vilenye!
But sith I se my lord mot nedes dye, And I with hym, here I me shryve, and
seye 440
That wikkedly ye don us bothe deye

"But sith it liketh yow that I be ded, By Neptunus, that god is of the see,
Fro this forth shal I nevere eten bred Til I myn owen herte blood may see, 445 For certeyn I wol deye as soone as he"— And up he sterte, and on his wey he raughte,
Til she agayn hym by the lappe kaughte

Criseyde, which that wel neugh starf for
feere,

So as she was the ferulleste wight 450
That myghte be, and herde ek wrth hire
ere

And saugh the sorwful ernest of the knyght,
And in his preier ek saugh noon unryght,
And for the harm that myghte ek fallen
moore,
She gan to rewe, and dredde hire wonder
soore, 455

And thoughte thus "Unhappes fallen
thikke

Alday for love, and in swych manere cas
As men ben cruel in hemself and wikke,
And if this man sle here hymself, allas!
In my presence, it wol be no solas 460 What men wolde of hit deme I kan nat
seye

It nedeth me ful sleighly for to plese"

And with a sorowful sik she sayde thrie,
"A! Lord! what me is tid a sory chaunce!
For myn estat lith now in jupartie, 465
And ek myn emes lif is in balaunce,
But natheles, with Goddes governaunce,
I shal so doon, myn honour shal I kepe,
And ek his lif,"—and stynte for to wepe

"Of harmes two, the lesse is for to chese, 470

Yet have I leverer maken hym good chere
In honour, than myn emes lyf to lese Ye seyn, ye nothyng elles me requere?"

"No, wis," quod he, "myn owen nece
dere"

"Now wel," quod she, "and I wol doon my
peyne 475

I shal myn herte ayeins my lust constreynne,

"But that I nyl nat holden hym in honde, Ne love a man ne kan I naught, ne may,
Ayeins my wyl, but elles wol I fonde, Myn honour sauf, plese hym fro day to
day 480

Therto nolde I nat ones han seyde nay,
But that I drede, as in my fantasye,
But cesse cause, ay cesseth maladie

"And here I make a protestacioun, That in this proces if ye depper go, 485
That certeynly, for no salvacioun

Of yow, though that ye sterven bothe two,
Though al the world on o day be my fo, Ne shal I nevere of hym han other
routhe" —

"I graunte wel," quod Pandare, "by my trowthe 490

"But may I truste wel therto," quod he,
"That of this thyng that ye han hight me
here,

Ye wole it holden trewely unto me?"

"Ye, doutelees," quod she, "myn uncle
deere"

"Ne that I shal han cause in this matere," Quod he, "to pleyne, or ofter yow to
preche?" 496

"Why, no, parde, what nedeth moore
speche?"

The fillen they in other tales glade, Tyl at the laste, "O good em," quod she
tho,

"For his love, which that us bothe
made, 500

Tel me how first ye wisten of his wo Woot noon of it but ye?" — He seyde,
"No" —

"Kan he wel speke of love?" quod she, "I
preye

Tel me, for I the bet me shal purveye"

The Pandarus a litel gan to smyle, 505 And seyde, "By my trouthe, I shal yow
telle

This other day, naught gon ful longe while,
In-with the paleis gardyn, by a welle, Gan he and I wel half a day to dwelle,
Right for to speken of an ordinaunce, 510
How we the Grekes myghten disavaunce

"Soon after that bigonne we to lepe,
And casten with oure dartes to and fro, Tyl at the laste he seyde he wolde slepe,
And on the gres adoun he leyde hym
tho, 515

And I afer gan rome to and fro, Til that I herde, as that I welk alone,
How he bigan ful wofully to grone

"The gan I stalke hym softly byhynde, And sikirly, the soothe for to seyne, 520
As I kan clepe ayem now to my mynde,

Right thus to Love he gan hym for to
pleyne

He seyde, 'Lord, have routhe upon my
peyne,

Al have I ben rebell in myn entente,
Now, mea culpa, lord, I me repente! 525

"O god, that at thi disposicioun Ledest the fyn, by juste purveiaunce, Of every wight, my lowe confessioun Accepte in gree, and sende me swich
penaunce

As liketh the, but from disesperaunce, 530 That that my goost departe away fro the, Thow be my sheld, for thi benignite

"For certes, lord, so soore hath she me wounded,

That stood in blak, with lokyng of hire
eyen,

That to myn hertes botme it is ysounded, Thorugh which I woot that I moot nedes deyen 536

This is the werste, I dar me nat bywreyen,
And wel the hotter ben the gledes rede, That men hem wrien with asshen pale and
dede'

"Wyth that he smot his hed adown anon,
And gan to motre, I noot what, trewely 541
And I with that gan stille away to goon,
And leet therof as nothing wist had I,
And com ayen anon, and stood hym by,
And seyde, 'awake, ye slepen al to longe!
It semeth nat that love doth yow longe, 546

"That slepen so that no man may yow
wake

Who sey evere or this so dul a man?"
'Ye, frend,' quod he, 'do ye youre hedes ake

For love, and lat me lyven as I kan' 550 But though that he for wo was pale and
wan,

Yet made he tho as fressh a countenance
As though he sholde have led the newe
daunce

"This passed forth til now, this other day,
It fel that I com romyng al allone 555 Into his chaumbre, and fond how that he lay

Upon his bed, but man so soore grone Ne herde I nevere, and what that was his mone
 Ne wist I nought, for, as I was comynge, Al sodeynly he lefte his complaynyng 560

"Of which I took somwat suspicoun,
 And ner I com, and fond he wepte soore,
 And God so wys he my savacioun,
 As nevere of thyng hadde I no routhe
 moore 564
 For neither with engyn, ne with no loore, Unnethes myghte I fro the deth hym kepe,
 That yet fele I myn herte for hym wepe

"And God woot, nevere, sith that I was
 born,
 Was I so besy no man for to preche, Ne nevere was to wight so depe isworn, 570
 Or he me told who myghte ben his leche
 But now to yow rehercen al his speche,
 Or alle his woful wordes for to sowne, Ne bid me naught, but ye wol se me sownne

"But for to save his lif, and elles nought, 575 And to noon harm of yow, thus am I dryven,
 And for the love of God, that us hath
 wrought,
 Swich cheer hym dooth, that he and I may lyven!
 Now have I plat to yow myn herte shryven, And sith ye woot that myn entent is cleene, 580
 Take heede therof, for I non yvel meene

"And right good thrift, I prey to God, have
 ye,
 That han swich oon ykaught withouten net!
 And, be ye wis as ye be fair to see,
 Wel in the ryng than is the ruby set 585
 Ther were nevere two so wel ymet, Whan ye ben his al hool, as he is youre Ther myghty God yet graunte us see that houre!"

"Nay, therof spak I nought, ha, ha!" quod
 she,
 "As helpe me God, yeshenden every deel!"
 "O, mercy, dere nece," anon quod he, 591

"What so I spak, I mente naught but wel, By Mars, the god that helmed is of steel!
 Now beth naught wroth, my blood, my nece dere"
 "Now wel," quod she, "foryeven be it
 here!" 595

With this he took his leve, and hom he
 wente,
 And, Lord, so he was glad and wel bygon!
 Criseyde aros, no lenger she ne stente,
 But streght into hire closet wente anon,
 And set hire doun as stylee as any ston, 600
 And every word gan up and down to wynde
 That he had seyde, as it com hire to mynde,

And wax somdel astoned in hire thought, Right for the newe cas, but whan that she Was ful avysed, tho fond she right nought
 Of peril, why she ought afered be 605
 For man may love, of possiblite,
 A womman so, his herte may tobreste,
 And she naught love ayein, but if hire leste

But as she sat allone and thoughte thus, 610 Ascry aros at scarmuch al withoute,
 And men cride in the strete, "Se, Troilus Hath right now put to fughte the Grekes
 route!"
 With that gan al hire meyne for to shoute,
 "A, go we se! cast up the yates wyde! 615 For thorwgh this strete he moot to paleys ride,

"For other wey is fro the yate noon Of Dardanus, there opyn is the cheyne"
 With that com he and al his folk anon
 An esy pas rydyng, in routes tweyne, 620
 Right as his happy day was, sooth to seyne, For which, men seyn, may nought destourbed be
 That shal bityden of necessitee

This Troilus sat on his baye steede, Al armed, save his hed, ful richely, 625 And wownded was his hors, and gan to
 blede,
 On which he rood a pas ful softly
 But swich a knyghtly sighte, trewely, As was on hym, was nought, withouten
 faille,
 To loke on Mars, that god is of bataille 630

So lik a man of armes and a knyght
 He was to seen, fulfilled of heigh prowessse,
 For bothe he hadde a body and a myght
 To don that thing, as wel as hardynesse,
 And ek to seen hym in his gere hym dresse,
 So fressh, so yong, so weldy semed he, 636
 It was an heven upon hym for to see

His helm tohewen was in twenty places,
 That by a tyssew heng his bak byhynde, His sheeld todashed was with swerdes and maces, 640

In which men myght many an arwe fynde That thurled hadde horn and nerf and rynde,
 And ay the peple cryde, "Here cometh oure joye,
 And, next his brother, holder up of Troye!"

For which he wex a litel reed for shame, Whan he the peple upon hym herde cryen,
 That to byholde it was a noble game, 647
 How sobrelch he caste down his yen Criseyda gan al his chere aspien,
 And leet it so softe in hire herte synke, 650 That to hireself she seyde, "Who yaf me
 drynke?"

For of hire owen thought she wex al reed, Remembryng hire right thus, "Lo, this is
 he

Which that myn uncle swerth he moot be
 deed,

But I on hym have mercy and pitee" 655
 And with that thought, for pure ashamed,
 she

Gan in hire hed to pulle, and that as faste, Whil he and alle the peple forby paste,

And gan to caste and rollen up and down Withinne hire thought his excellent prow-
 esse, 660

And his estat, and also his renown,
 His wit, his shap, and ek his gentlesse,
 But moost hir favour was, for his distresse Was al for hire, and thoughte it was a
 routhe

To sleen swich oon, if that he mente
 trouthe 665

Now myghte som envious jangle thus "This was a sodeyn love, how myght it be

That she so lightly loved Troilus, Right for the firste syghte, ye, parde?" 669
 Now whoso seith so, mote he nevere ythe!
 For every thyng, a gynnyng hath it nede Er al be wrought, withowten any drede

For I sey nought that she so sodeynly Yaf hym hire love, but that she gan en-clyne

To like hym first, and I have told yow whi, 675

And after that, his manhod and his pyne
 Made love withinne hire herte for to myne,
 For which, by proces and by good servyng,
 He gat hire love, and in no sodeyn wyse

And also blisful Venus, wel arrayed, 680
 Sat in hire seventhe hous of hevene tho, Disposed wel, and with aspectes payed,
 To helpe sely Troilus of his woo
 And, soth to seyne, she nas not al a foo
 To Troilus in his nativitee, 685 God woot that wel the sonner spedde he Now lat us stynte of Troilus a throwe,

 That rideth forth, and lat us torne faste Unto Criseyde, that heng hire hed ful lowe, Ther as she sat alone, and gan to caste 690
 Where on she wolde apoynte hire atte laste,
 If it so were hire em ne wolde cesse,
 For Troilus upon hire for to presse

And, Lord! so she gan in hire thought argue In this matere of which I have yow told,
 And what to doone best were, and what eschue, 696

That plited she ful ofte in many fold
 Now was hire herte warm, now was it cold, And what she thoughte, somewhat shal I write,

As to myn auctour listeth for t'endite 700

She thoughte wel that Troilus persone
 She knew by syghte, and ek his gentlesse, And thus she seyde, "Al were it nat to
 doone,

To graunte hym love, ye, for his worthy-
 nesse,

It were honour, with pley and with glad-
 nesse, 706

In honestee with swich a lord to deele,
 For myn estat, and also for his heele.

"Ek wel woot I my kynges sone is he,
And sith he hath to se me swich deht,
If I wolde outreliche his sighte flee, 710 Peraunter he myghte have me in dispit, Thorough whuch I myghte stonde in worse plit

Now were I wis, me hate to purchase, Withouten nede, ther I may stonde in
grace?

"In every thyng, I woot, there lith mesure For though a man forbode dronkenesse, 716
He naught forbet that every creature Be drynkeles for alwey, as I gesse Ek sith I woot for me is his destresse, I ne aughte nat for that thing hym despise, Sith it is so, he meneth in good wyse 721

"And eke I knowe, of longe tyme agon, His thewes goode, and that he is nat nyce N'avantour, seith men, certein, he is noon,
To wis is he to doon so gret a vice, 725
Ne als I nyl hym nevere so cherice That he may make avaunt, by juste cause, He shal me nevere bynde in swich a clause

"Now sette a caas the hardest is ywys, Men myghten demen that he loveth
me 730
What dishonour were it unto me, this?
May ich hym lette of that? Why, nay,
parde!

I knowe also, and alday heere and se,
Men loven wommen al biside hire leve, And whan hem leste namore, lat hem by-
leve! 735

"I thanke ek how he able is for to have
Of al this noble town the thurftieste,
To ben his love, so she hire honour save For out and out he is the worthieste, Save only Ector, which that is the beste,
And yet his lif al lith now in my cure 741
But swich is love, and ek myn aventure

"Ne me to love, a wonder is it nought, For wel woot I myself, so God me spede, Al wolde I that noon wiste of this thought,
I am oon the faireste, out of drede, 746
And goodheste, whoso taketh hede,
And so men seyn, in al the town of Troie
What wonder is though he of me have joye?

"I am myn owene womman, wel at ese, 750
I thank it God, as after myn estat, Right yong, and stonde unteyd in lusty
leese,

Withouten jalousie or swich debat Shal noon housonde seyn to me "chek mat!"

For either thev ben ful of jalousie, 755
Or maisterfull, or loven novelrie

"What shal I doon? To what fyn lyve I
thus?

Shal I nat love, in cas if that me leste?
What, par dieux! I am naught religious And though that I myn herte sette at
reste 760

Upon this knyght, that is the worthieste, And kepe alwey myn honour and my
name,

By alle right, it may do me no shame "

But right as when the sonne shyneth
bryghte

In March, that chaungeth ofte tyme his face, 765

And that a cloude is put with wynd to flichte,

Which oversprat the sonne as for a space,
A cloudy thought gan thorough hire soule
pace,

That overspradde hire bryghte thoughtes
alle,

So that for feere almost she gan to falle 770

That thought was this "Allas! syn I am
free,

Sholde I now love, and put in jupartie
My sikernesse, and thralen libertee?

Allas! how dorst I thanken that folhe?
May I naught wel in other folk aspie 775

Hire dredfull joye, hire constreinte, and hire peyne?

Ther loveth noon, that she nath why to
pleyne

"For love is yet the mooste stormy lyf, Right of hymself, that evere was bigonne,
For evere som mystrust or nice strif 780 Ther is in love, som cloude is over that
sonne

Therto we wrecched wommen nothing
konne,

Whan us is wo, but wepe and sitte and
 thinke,
 Oure wrecche is this, oure owen wo to
 drynke

“Also thise wikked tonges ben so prest 785
 To speke us harm, ek men ben so untrewē, That, right anon as cessed is hire lest,
 So cesseth love, and forth to love a newe
 But harm ydoon is doon, whoso it rewe, For though thise men for love hem first torende, 790
 Ful sharp by gvnnyng breketh ofte at ende

“How ofte tyme hath it yknowen be,
 The tresoun that to wommen hath ben
 do!
 To what fyn is swich love I kan nat see,
 Or wher bycometh it, whan it is ago 795
 Ther is no wight that woot, I trowe so, Where it bycometh, lo, no wight on it sporneth
 That erst was nothing, into nought it torneth

“How busy, if I love, ek most I be To plesen hem that jangle of love, and dremen, 800
 And coye hem, that they seye noon harm of me!
 For though ther be no cause, yet hem semen
 Al be for harm that folk hire frendes que-
 men,
 And who may stoppen every wikked tonge, Or sown of belles whil that thei ben ronge?” 805

And after that, hire thought gan for to clere,
 And seide, “He which that nothing under-taketh, Nothyng n’acheveth, be hym looth or
 deere”
 And with an other thought hire herte quaketh,
 Than slepeth hope, and after drede awaketh, 810
 Now hoot, now cold, but thus, bitwixen
 tweye,
 She rist hire up, and wente here for to
 pleye

Adown the steyre anonright tho she wente
 Into the garden, with hire neces thre, And up and down ther made many a
 wente, 815

Fleuppe, she, Tharbe, and Antigone,
 To pleyen, that it joye was to see,
 And other of hire wommen, a gret route, Hire folowede in the garden al abowte

This yerd was large, and rayled alle th’ aleyes, 820
 And shadewed wel with blosmy bowes
 grene,
 And benched newe, and sonded alle the weyes,
 In which she walketh arm in arm bitwene, Til at the laste Antigone the shene Gan on a Troian song to singen cleere, 825
 That it an heven was hire vois to here

She seyde “O Love, to whom I have and
 shal
 Ben humble subgit, trewe in myn entente,
 As I best kan, to yow, lord, yeve ich al,
 For everemo, myn hertes lust to rente 830
 For nevere yet thi grace no wight sente
 So blisful cause as me, my lif to lede
 In alle joie and seurte, out of drede

“Ye, blisful god, han me so wel byset
 In love, iwys, that al that bereth lif 835 Ymagynen ne kouthe how to be bet,
 For, lord, withouten jalousie or strif,
 I love oon which that is moost ententif
 To serven wel, unweri or unfeyned, That evere was, and leest with harm de-steyned 840

“As he that is the welle of worthynesse, Of trouthe grownd, mirour of goodlihed,
 Of wit Apollo, stoon of sikernesne,
 Of vertu roote, of lust fynder and hed, Thorough which is alle sorwe fro me ded, — Iwis, I love hym best, so doth he me, 845 Now good thrift have he, wherso that he
 be!

“Whom shulde I thanken but yow, god of Love,
 Of al this blisse, in which to bathe I gynne?
 And thanked be ye, lord, for that I love!
 This is the righte lif that I am inne, 851

To flemen alle manere vice and synne
This dooth me so to vertu for t'entende, That day by day I in my wille amende

"And whoso seith that for to love is vice, 855

Or thraldom, though he feele in it destresse,
He outhir is envious, or right nyce,
Or is unmyghty, for his shrewednesse,
To loven, for swich manere folk, I geesse, Defamen Love, as nothing of him knowe Thei speken, but thei benten nevere his bowe! 861

"What is the sonne wers, of kynde right, Though that a man, for feeblesse of his yen,
May nought endure on it to see for bright?
Or love the wers, though wrecches on it crlen? 865

No wele is worth, that may no sorwe dryen
And forthi, who that hath an hed of verre, Fro cast of stones war hym in the werre!

"But I with al myn herte and al my myght,
As I have seyde, wol love unto my laste, 870
My deere herte, and al myn owen knyght,
In which myn herte growen is so faste,
And his in me, that it shal evere laste Al dredde I first to love hym to bigynne, Now woot I wel, ther is no peril inne" 875

And of hir song right with that word she stente,
And therwithal, "Now nece," quod Cry-
seyde,
Who made this song now with so good
entente?"

Antygone answerde anon and seyde,
"Madame, iwys, the goodlieste mayde 880
Of gret estat in al the town of Troye,
And let hire lif in moste honour and joye"

"Forsothe, so it semeth by hire song," Quod tho Criseyde, and gan therwith to
sike,
And seyde, "Lord, is ther swych blisse among 885
Thise lovers, as they konne faire endite?"

"Ye, wis," quod fresshe Antigone the
white,

"For alle the folk that han or ben on lyve Ne konne wel the blisse of love discryve

"But wene ye that every wrecche woot 890
The parfite blisse of love? Why, nay, iwys!
They wenen all be love, if oon be hoot Do wey, do wey, they woot no thyng of
this!

Men mosten axe at seyntes if it is Aught fair in hevене (why? for they kan
telle), 895
And axen fendes is it foul in helle"

Criseyde unto that purpos naught an-
swerde,
But seyde, "Ywys, it wol be nyght as
faste"

But every word which that she of hire
herde,
She gan to prenten in hire herte faste, 900
And ay gan love hire lasse for t'agaste Than it dide erst, and synken in hire herte,
That she wex somewhat able to converte

The dayes honour, and the hevenes ye,
The nyghtes foo — al this clepe I the
sonne — 905

Gan westren faste, and downward for to wrye,

As he that hadde his dayes cours yronne,
And white thynges wexen dymme and donne 910

For lak of lyght, and sterres for t'ere,
That she and alle hire folk in weyghere

So whan it liked hire to go to reste, 915
And voided weren thei that voiden oughte,
She seyde that to slepen wel hire leste Hire women soone til hire bed hire
broughte

Whan al was hust, than lay she stille and
thoughte 915

Of al this thing, the manere and the wise Reherce it nedeth nought, for ye ben wise

A nyghtyngale, upon a cedir grene, Under the chambre wal ther as she ley,
Ful loude song ayem the moone shene, 920 Peraunter, in his briddes wise, a lay Of love, that made hire herte fressh and gay

That herked she so longe in good entente, Til at the laste the dede slep hire hente

And as she slep, anonright tho hire mette

How that an egle, fethered wht as bon, 926
 Under hire brest his longe clawes sette,
 And out hire herte he rente, and that anon,
 And dide his herte into hire brest to gon,
 Of which she nought agroos, ne nothyng
 smerte, 930
 And forth he fleigh, with herte left for
 herte

Now lat hire slepe, and we oure tales holde
 Of Troilus, that is to paleis riden Fro the scarmuch of the which I tolde,
 And in his chaumbre sit, and hath abiden, Til two or thre of his messages yeden 936
 For Pandarus, and soughten hym ful faste, Til they hym founde and broughte hym at the laste

This Pandarus com lepyng in atones, And seyde thus, "Who hath ben wel ibete 940

To-day with swerdes and with slyng-
 stones,

But Troilus, that hath caught hym an hete?"

And gan to jape, and seyde, "Lord, so ye
 swete!

But ris, and lat us soupe and go to reste "
 And he answerde hym, "Do we as the
 leste " 945

With al the haste goodly that they myghte,
 They spedde hem fro the soper unto bedde,
 And every wight out at the dore hym dyghte,

And where hym liste upon his wey him
 spedde

But Troilus, that thoughte his herte bledde
 For wo, til that he herde som tydyng, 951 He seyde, "Frend, shal I now wepe or
 synge?"

Quod Pandarus, "Ly styлле, and lât me
 slepe,

And don thyn hood, thy nedes spedde be!
 And ches if thou wolt synge or daunce or lepe! 955

At shorte wordes, thou shal trowen me Sire, my nece wol do wel by the,
 And love the best, by God and by my
 trouthe,
 But lak of pursuyt make it in thi slouthe

' For thus ferforth I have thi werk bi-gone, 961

Fro day to day, til this day by the morwe Hire love of frendshipe have I to the
 wonne,

And also hath she leyd hire feyth to borwe Algate a foot is hameled of thi sorwe!"

What sholde I lenger sermon of it holde?
 As ye han herd byfore, al he hym tolde 966

But right as floures, thorgh the cold of
 nyght

Iclosed, stoupen on hire stalke lowe, Redressen hem ayen the sonne bright,

And spreden on hire kynde cours by rowe, 970

Right so gan tho his eighen up to throwe This Troilus, and seyde, "O Venus deere, Thi myght, thi grace, yhered be it here!"

And to Pandare he held up bothe his hondes, 974

And seyde, "Lord, al thyn be that I have!
 For I am hool, al brosten ben my bondes

A thousand Troyes whoso that me yave, Ech after other, God so wys me save,
 Ne myghte me so gladen, lo, myn herte,
 It spredeth so for joie, it wol tosterte! 980

"But, Lord, how shal I doon? How shal I lyven?

Whan shal I next my deere herte see?
 How shal this longe tyme away be dryven,

Til that thou be ayen at hire for me?
 Thou maist answer, 'abid, abid,' but he 985

That hangeth by the nekke, soth to seyne
 In gret disese abideth for the peyne "

"Al esily, now, for the love of Marte," Quod Pandarus, "for every thing hath
 tyme

So longe abid, til that the nyght departe,
 For al so siker as thou list here by me, 991

And God toform, I wyl be ther at pryme,
 And forth, werk somewhat as I shal seye,
 Or on som other wight this charge leye

"For, pardee, God woot I have evere yit 995 Ben redy the to serve, and to this nyght

Have I naught fayned, but emforth my wit Don al thi lust, and shal with al my myght

Do now as I shal seyn, and far aright,

And if thow nylt, wit al thiself thi care! 1000
On me is nought along thyn yvel fare

"I woot wel that thow wiser art than I
A thousand fold, but if I were as thow, God help me so, as I wolde outrely, 1004
Of myn owen hond, write hire right now A lettre, in which I wold hire tellen how I ferde amys, and hire biseche of routhe Now help thiself, and leve it nought for slouthe!

"And I myself wol therwith to hire gon, And whan thow woost that I am with hire
there, 1010
Worth thow upon a courser right anon, Ye, hardily, right in thi beste gere,
And ryd forth by the place, as nought ne
were,
And thow shalt fynde us, if I may, sittynge At som wyndow, into the strete lok-
ynge 1015

"And if the list, than maystow us salue,
And upon me make thow thi countenance,
But, by thi lif, be war and faste eschue To tarien ought, — God shilde us for meschance!

Rid forth thi way, and hold thi govern-
aunce, 1020
And we shal speek of the somewhat, I
trowe,
Whan thow art gon, to don thyn ernes glowe!

"Towchyng thi lettre, thou art wys
ynough

I woot thow nylt it dygneliche endite, As make it with these argumentes tough, 1025

Ne scryvenyssh or craftily thow it write, Biblotte it with thi teris ek a lite,
And if thow write a goodly word al softe, Though it be good, reherce it nought to
ofte

"For though the beste harpoure upon lyve Wolde on the beste sowned joly harpe 1031
That evere was, with alle his fynGRES fyve, Touche ay o streng, or ay o werbul harpe,
Were his nayles poynted nevere so sharpe,
It sholde maken every wight to dulle, 1035
To here his glee, and of his strokes fulle

"Ne jompre ek no discordant thyng
yfeere,

As thus, to usen termes of phisik
In loves termes, hold of thi matere
The forme alway, and so that it be lyk, 1040
For if a peyntour wolde peynte a pyk
With asses feet, and hede it as an ape,
It cordeth naught, so nere it but a jape "

This counsel liked wel to Troilus,
But, as a dredful love, he seyde this 1045
"Allas, my deere brother Pandarus,
I am ashamed for to write, ywys, Lest of myn innocence I seyde amys,
Or that she nolde it for despit receyve, Than were I ded, ther myght it nothyng
weyve " 1050

To that Pandare answerid, "If the lest,
Do that I seye, and lat me therwith gon, For by that Lord that formede est and west,

I hope of it to brynge answer anon Right of hire hond, and if that thow nylt
noon, 1055
Lat be, and sory mote he ben his lyve, Ayeins thi lust that helpeth the to thryve "

Quod Troilus, "Depardieux, ich assente!
Sith that the list, I wil arise and write,
And blisful God prey ich with good en-
tente, 1060

The viage, and the lettre I shal endite,
So spede it, and thow, Mmerva, the white, Yif thow me wit my lettre to devyse "
And sette hym down, and wrot right in this wyse

First he gan hire his righte lady calle, 1065
His hertes lif, his lust, his sorwes leche,
His blisse, and ek these other termes alle
That in swich cas these loveres alle seche,
And in ful humble wise, as in his speche, He gan hym recomaunde unto hire
grace, 1070

To telle al how, it axeth muchel space

And after this, ful lowely he hire preyde
To be nought wroth, thogh he, of his folie,
So hardy was to hire to write, and seyde
That love it made, or elles most he die, 1075
And pitoush gan mercy for to crye,

And after that he seyde, and leigh ful
loude, Hymself was litel worth, and lasse he
koude,

And that she sholde han his konnyng excused,

That litel was, and ek he dredde hire soo,
And his unworthynesse he ay acused, 1081
And after that, than gan he telle his woo,
But that was endeles, withouten hoo, And seyde he wolde in trouthe alwey hym
holde, —

And radde it over, and gan the lettre folde

And with his salte teris gan he bathe 1086
The ruby in his signet, and it sette Upon the wex delverliche and rathe Therwith a thousand tymes, er he lette,
He kiste tho the lettre that he shette, 1090
And seyde, "Lettre, a blisful destine
The shapyn is my lady shal the see!"

This Pandare tok the lettre, and that bytyme

A-morwe, and to his neces paleis sterte,
And faste he swor that it was passed prime, 1095

And gan to jape, and seyde, "Ywys, myn
herte,

So fressh it is, although it sore smerte,
I may naught slepe nevere a Mayes morwe,
I have a joly wo, a lusty sorwe" 1099

Criseyde, whan that she hire uncle herde,
With dredful herte, and desirous to here
The cause of his conyng, thus answerde
"Now, by youre fey, myn uncle," quod she, "dere,

What manere wyndes gydeth yow now
here? 1104

Tel us youre joly wo and youre penaunce
How ferforth be ye put in loves daunce?"

"By God," quod he, "I hoppe alwey by-hynde!"

And she to laughe, it thoughte hire herte
brest

Quod Pandarus, "Loke alwey that ye
fynde

Game in myn hood, but herkneth, if yow
lest! 1110

Ther is right now come into town a gest,
A Greek espie, and telleth newe thynges,
For which I come to telle yow tydynges

"Into the gardyn go we, and ye shal here, Al pryvely, of this a long sermoun" 1115
With that they wenten arm in arm yfeere
Into the gardyn from the chaumbre down,
And whan that he so fer was that the sown
Of that he spake, no man heren myghte, He seyde hire thus, and out the lettre plighte 1120

"Lo, he that is al holy youre free Hym recomaundeth lowly to youre grace, And sente yow this lettre here by me Avyseth yow on it, whan ye han space,
And of som goodly answer yow purchace;
Or, helpe me God, so pleynty for to seyne,
He may nat longe lyven for his peyne" 1127

Ful dredfully tho gan she stonden styлле,
And took it naught, but al hire humble
chere

Gan for to change, and seyde, "Scrit ne
bille, 1130

For love of God, that toucheth swich
matere,

Ne brynge me noon, and also, uncle deere,
To myn estat have more reward, I preye, Than to his lust! What sholde I more sey?

"And loketh now if this be resonable, 1135 And letteth nought, for favour ne for
slouthe,

To seyn a sooth, now were it covenable To myn estat, by God and by youre
trouthe,

To taken it, or to han of hym routhe,
In harmyng of myself, or in repreve? 1140 Ber it ayein, for hym that ye on leve!"

This Pandarus gan on hire for to stare, And seyde, "Now is this the grettest wondre

That evere I seigh! Lat be this nyce fare!
To dethe mot I smyten be with thondre, If for the ctee which that stondesth yondre, 1145

Wold I a lettre unto yow brynge or take To harm of yow! What list yow thus it make?

"But thus ye faren, wel neigh alle and
some,

That he that most desireth yow to
serve, 1150

Of hym ye recche leest wher he bycome,
And whether that he lyve or elles sterve
But for al that that ever I may deserve, Refuse it naught," quod he, and hente hire
faste,

And in hire bosom the lettre down he thraсте, 1155

And seyde hire, "Now cast it awey anon, That folk may seen and gauren on us
tweye"

Quod she, "I kan abyde til they be gon";
And gan to smyle, and seyde hym, "Em, I
preye,

Swich answeere as yow list youreself purveye, 1160

For trewely I nyl no lettre write"

"No? than wol I," quod he, "so ye en-dite"

Therwith she lough, and seyde, "Go we
dyne"

And he gan at hymself to jape faste, 1164
And seyde, "Neece, I have so gret a pyne

For love, that everich other day I faste —"
And gan his beste japes forth to caste,

And made hire so to laughe at his folye,
That she for laughter wende for to dye

And whan that she was comen into halle,
"Now, em," quod she, "we wol go dyme
anon" 1171

And gan some of hire women to hire calle,
And streght into hire chambre gan she gon,
But of hire besynnesses this was on,
Amonges othere thynges, out of drede, 1175 Ful pryvely this lettre for to rede

Avysed word by word in every lyne,
And fond no lak, she thoughte he koude
good,

And up it putte, and wente hire in to dyme
But Pandarus, that in a studye stood, 1180 Er he was war, she took hym by the hood,
And seyde, "Ye were caught er that ye waste"

"I vouche sauf," quod he, "do what you liste"

Tho wessen they, and sette hem down, and ete,

And after noon ful sleighly Pandarus 1185 Gan drawe hym to the wyndowe next the
strete,

And seyde, "Neece, who hath araied thus The yonder hous, that stant aforyeyn us?"

"Which hous?" quod she, and gan for to byholde,

And knew it wel, and whos it was hym
tolde, 1190

And fillen forth in speche of thynges smale,
And seten in the windowe bothe tweye Whan Pandarus saugh tyme unto his tale, And saugh wel that hire folk were alle
aweye,

"Now, nece myn, tel on," quod he, "I
seye, 1195

How liketh yow the lettre that ye woot?
Kan he theron? For, by my trouthe, I noot"

Therwith al rosy hewed tho wex she,
And gan to homme, and seyde, "So I
trowe"

"Aquite hym wel, for Goddes love," quod
he, 1200

"Myself to medes wol the lettre sowe"
And held his hondes up, and sat on knowe,

"Now, goode nece, be it nevere so lite, Yif me the labour it to sowe and plite"

"Ye, for I kan so writen," quod she
tho, 1205

"And ek I noot what I sholde to hym
seye"

"Nay, nece," quod Pandarus, "sey nat so Yet at the leeste thonketh hym, I preye, Of his good wille, and doth hym nat to
deye

Now, for the love of me, my nece
deere, 1210

Refuseth nat at this tyme my prayere!"

"Depardieux," quod she, "God leve al be wel"

God help me so, this is the firste lettre
That evere I wroot, ye, al or any del"

And into a closet, for t'avis hire bettre, She wente allone, and gan hire herte unfette 1216

Out of desdaynes prison but a lite,
And sette hire down, and gan a lettre write,

Of which to telle in short is myn entente Th'effect, as fer as I kan understonde 1220
She thanked hym of al that he wel mente Towardes hire, but holden hym in honde She nolde nought, ne make hireselven
bonde

In love, but as his suster, hym to plesse, She wolde ay fayn, to doon his herte an
ese 1225

She shette it, and in to Pandare gan goon, Ther as he sat and loked into the strete,
And down she sette hire by hym on a stoon
Of jaspre, upon a quysshyn gold-ybete, And seyde, "As wisly help me God the
grete, 1230

I nevere dide thing with more peyne Than wrien this, to which ye me con-streine",

And took it hym He thonked hire and
seyde,

"God woot, of thyng ful often looth by-gonne 1234

Comth ende good, and nece myn, Criseyde,
That ye to hym of hard now ben ywonne Oughte he be glad, by God and yonder
sonne,

For-whi men seith, 'impressiounes lighte Ful lightly ben ay redy to the flighte'

"But ye han played the tyrant neigh to
longe, 1240

And hard was it youre herte for to grave
Now stynte, that ye no lenger on it honge, Al wolde ye the forme of daunger save,
But hasteth yow to doon hym joye have,
For trusteth wel, to longe ydoon hard-
nesse 1245

Causeth despit ful often for destresse "

And right as they declamed this matere, Lo, Troilus, right at the stretes ende,
Com rydyng with his tenthe som yfere,
Al softly, and thiderward gan bende 1250
Ther as they sete, as was his way to wende
To paleis-ward, and Pandarus hym aspide, And seyde, "Neece, ysee who comth here ride!

"O fle naught in (he seeth us, I suppose), Lest he may thynken that ye hym es-chuwe" 1255

"Nay, nay," quod she, and wex as red as rose

With that he gan hire humbly to saluwe, With dredful chere, and oft his hewes muwe,

And up his look debonairly he caste,
And bekked on Pandare, and forth he paste 1260

God woot if he sat on his hors aright,
Or goodly was biseyn, that ilke day!
God woot wher he was lik a manly knyght!
What sholde I drecche, or telle of his aray?

Criseyde, which that alle thuse thynges
say, 1265

To telle in short, hire liked al in-ferre,
His person, his aray, his look, his chere,

His goodly manere, and his gentlesse,
So wel that nevere, sith that she was born,
Ne hadde she swych routh of his destresse, And how so she hath hard ben here-byforn, 1271

To God hope I, she hath now laught a thorn,

She shal nat pulle it out this nexte wyke God sende mo swich thornes on to pike!

Pandare, which that stood hire faste by,
Felte iren hoot, and he bygan to smyte, 1276

And seyde, "Neece, I pray yow hertely, Telle me that I shal axen yow a lite

A womman, that were of his deth to wite, Withouten his gilt, but for hire lakked
routhe, 1280

Were it wel doon?" Quod she, "Nay, by my trouthe!"

"God help me so," quod he, "ye sey me soth.

Ye felen wel youreself that I nought lye Lo, yond he rit!" "Ye," quod she, "so he doth!"

"Wel," quod Pandare, "as I have told yow thre, 1285

Lat be youre nyce shame and youre folie,
And spek with hym in esyng of his herte, Lat nycete nat do yow bothe smerte "

But theron was to heven and to doone Considered al thung it may nat be, 1290
 And whi, for shame, and it were ek to soone
 To graunten hym so gret a libertee For pleyntly hire entente, as seyde she,
 Was for to love hym unwist, if she myghte, And guerdon hym with nothing but with
 sighte 1295

But Pandarus thought, "It shal nought be
 so,

Yif that I may, this nyce opynyoun Shal nought be holden fully yeres two "
 What sholde I make of this a long ser-moun?"

He moste assente on that conclusioun, 1300 As for the tyme, and whan that it was
 eve,

And al was wel, he roos and tok his leve

And on his wey ful faste homward he
 spedde,

And right for joye he felte his herte daunce,
 And Troilus he fond allone abedde, 1305
 That lay, as do thise lovers, in a traunce Bitwixen hope and derk disesperaunce
 But Pandarus, right at his in-comynge, He song, as who seyth, "Somwhat I
 brynge," 1309

And seyde, "Who is in his bed so soone Iburned thus?" "It am I, frend," quod he "Who, Troilus? Nay, help me so the moone,"

Quod Pandarus, "thow shalt arise and see A charme that was sent right now to the,
 The which kan helen the of thyn accesse,
 If thow do forthwith al thi bisynesse " 1316

"Ye, thorough the myght of God," quod Troilus

And Pandarus gan hym the lettre take,
 And seyde, "Parde, God hath holpen us!
 Have here a light, and loke on al this
 blake " 1320

But ofte gan the herte glade and quake
 Of Troilus, whil that he gan it rede,
 So as the wordes yave hym hope or drede

But finaly, he took al for the beste That she hym wroot, for somwhat he by-held, 1325

On which hym thoughte he myghte his herte reste,
 Al covered she the wordes under sheld Thus to the more worthi part he held,
 That, what for hope and Pandarus byheste,
 His grete wo forj ede he at the leste 1330

But as we may alday oureselven see,
 Thorough more wode or col, the more fir, Right so encrees of hope, of what it be,
 Therwith ful ofte encreseth ek desir,
 Or as an ook comth of a litel spir, 1335
 So thorough this lettre, which that she hym
 sente,
 Encressen gan desir, of which he brente

Wherfore I seye alwey, that day and
 nyght

Thus Troilus gan to desuren moore Thanne he did erst, thorough hope, and did his myght 1340

To preessen on, as by Pandarus loore,
 And writen to hire of his sorwes soore Fro day to day he leet it nought refreyde, That by Pandare he wroot somewhat or
 seyde,

And dide also his other observaunces 1345
 That til a loveere longeth in this cas, And after that thise dees torned on
 chaunces,

So was he outhur glad or seyde "allas!"
 And held after his gistes ay his pas,
 And after swiche answeres as he hadde, 1350
 So were his dayes sory outhur gladd

But to Pandare alwey was his recours,
 And pitously gan ay to hym to pleyne, And hym bisoughte of reed and som so-cours

And Pandarus, that sey his woode peyne, Wex wel neigh ded for routhe, sooth to seyne, 1356

And busily with al his herte caste Som of his wo to sien, and that as faste,

And seyde, "Lord, and frend, and brother
 dere,

God woot that thi disese doth me wo 1360
 But wiltow stynten al this woful cheere,
 And, by my trouthe, er it be dayes two,
 And God toforn, yet shal I shape it so,

That thow shalt come into a certeyn place, There as thow mayst thusef hire preye of
grace 1365

"And certeynly, I noot if thow it woost, But tho that ben expert in love it seye,
It is oon of the thynges forthereth most,
A man to han a layser for to preye,
And siker place his wo for to bywrewe, 1370 For in good herte it mot som routhe im-presse,
To here and see the gitlees in distresse

"Peraunter thynkestow though it be so,
That Kynde wolde don hire to bygynne
To have a manere routhe upon my woo, Seyth Daunger, 'Nay, thow shalt me nevere wynne!' 1376
So reulth hire hir hertes gost withinne, That though she bende, yeet she stant on
roote,
What in effect is this unto my boote?"

"Think here-ayens whan that the stordy ook, 1380
On which men hakketh ofte, for the nones, Receyved hath the happy fallyng strook,
The greete sweigh doth it come al at ones,
As don thise rokkes or thise milnestones, For swifter cours comth thyng that is of wighte, 1385
Whan it descendeth, than don thynges
lighte

"And reed that boweth down for every blast,
Ful lightly, cesse wynd, it wol aryse,
But so nyl nought an ook, whan it is cast,
It nedeth me nought the longe to forbise Men shal rejoissen of a gret empryse 1391 Acheved wel, and stant withouten doute, Al han men ben the lenger theraboute

"But, Troilus, yet telle me, if the lest, A thing which that I shal now axen the Which is thi brother that thow lovest
best, 1396
As in thi verray hertes privetee?"
"Iwis, my brother Deiphebus," quod he "Now," quod Pandare, "er houres twyes
twelve,
He shal the ese, unwist of it hymselfe 1400

'Now lat m'alone, and werken as I may," Quod he, and to Deiphebus wente he tho, Which hadde his lord and grete frend ben ay,

Save Troilus, no man he loved so 1404
To telle in short, withouten wordes mo, Quod Pandarus, "I pray yow that ye be Frend to a cause which that toucheth me"

"Yis, parde," quod Deiphebus, "wel thow
woost,

In al that evere I may, and God tofore, Al nere it but for man I love moost, 1410
My brother Troilus, but sey wherfore
It is, for sith that day that I was bore,
I nas, ne nevere mo to ben I thynke, Ayeins a thing that myghte the forthynke"

Pandare gan hym thank, and to hym
seyde, 1415

'Lo, sire, I have a lady in this town,
That is my nece, and called is Criseyde,
Which some men wolden don oppressioun,
And wrongfully han hire possessioun, Wherfore I of youre lordship yow biseche To ben oure frend, withouten more
speche" 1421

Deiphebus hym answerde, "O, is nat this,
That thow spekest of to me thus straungely, Criseyda, my frend?" He seyde, "Yis" "Than nedeth," quod Deiphebus, "hard-lyly, 1425

Namore to speke, for trusteth wel that I Wol be hire champioun with spore and
yerde,
I roughte nought though alle hire foos it
herde

"But telle me, thow that woost al this
matere,
How I myght best avaylen" — "Now lat
se," 1430

Quod Pandarus, "if ye, my lord so dere, Wolden as now do this honour to me,
To preyen hire to-morwe, lo, that she Come unto yow, hire pleyntes to devise, Hire adversaries wolde of it agnise 1435

"And yif I more dorste preye yow as
now,
And chargen yow to han so gret travaille,

To han som of youre bretheren here with
 yow,
 That myghten to hire cause bet availle,
 Than wot I wel she myghte nevere falle For to ben holpen, what at youre instance, 1441
 What with hire other frendes govern-
 aunce "

Deiphebus, which that comen was of
 kynde
 To alle honour and bounte to consente, Answerd, "It shal be don, and I kan
 fynde 1445
 Yet gettere help to this, in myn entente
 What witow seyn, if I for Eleyne sente To speke of this? I trowe it be the beste, For she may leden Paris as hire leste "Of Ector, which that is my lord, my

 brother, 1450
 It nedeth naught to preye hym frend to be,
 For I have herd hym, o tyme and ek oother, Speke of Cryseyde swich honour, that he May seyn no bet, swich hap to hym hath
 she
 It nedeth naught his helpes for to crave, He shal be swich, right as we wol hym
 have 1456

"Spek thow thysel also to Troilus On my byhalve, and prey hym with us
 dyne "

"Syre, al this shal be don," quod Pandarus, And took his leve, and nevere gan to
 fyne, 1460
 But to his neces hous, as streyght as lyne,
 He com, and fond hire fro the mete arise,
 And sette hym down, and spak right in this wise

He seide, "O verray God, so have I ronne!
 Lo, nece myn, se ye nought how I swete?
 I not whether ye the more thank me
 konne 1466

Be ye naught war how false Poliphete
 Is now aboute eftsones for to plete, And brynge on yow advocacis newe?"

"I? no," quod she, and chaunged al hire
 hewe 1470

"What is he more aboute, me to drecche

And don me wrong? What shal I doon, allas?

Yet of hymself nothing ne wolde I recche, Nere it for Antenor and Eneas, 1474
 That ben his frendes in swich manere cas
 But, for the love of God, myn uncle deare, No fors of that, lat hym han al yfeere

"Withouten that I have ynough for us "
 "Nay," quod Pandare, "it shal nothing be
 so

For I have ben right now at Deiphebus, At Ector, and myn oother lordes moo, 1481
 And shortly maked ech of hem his foo,
 That, by my thrift, he shal it nevere wyne, For aught he kan, whan that so he by-
 gynne "

And as thei casten what was best to doone, Deiphebus, of his owen curteisie, 1486
 Com hire to preye, in his propre persone,
 To holde hym on the morwe compaignie
 At dyner, which she nolde nought denyne,
 But goodly gan to his preier obeye 1490
 He thonked hire, and went upon his weye

Whan this was don, this Pandare up anon, To telle in short, and forth gan for to
 wende

To Troilus, as stille as any ston, And al this thyng he tolde hym, word and
 ende, 1495
 And how that he Deiphebus gan to blende, And seyde hym, "Now is tyme, if that thow konne,
 To bere the wel tomorwe, and al is wonne

"Now spek, now prey, now pitously com-
 pleyne,
 Lat nought for nyce shame, or drede, or
 slouthe! 1500

Somtyme a man mot telle his owen peyne Bileve it, and she shal han on the routhe Thow shalt be saved by thi feyth, in
 trouthe

But wel woot I that thow art now in drede,
 And what it is, I leye, I kan arede 1505

"Thow thynkest now, 'How sholde I don
 al this?

For by my cheres mosten folk asprie
 That for hire love is that I fare amys,

Yet hadde I levere unwist for sorwe dye ' Now thynk nat so, for thow dost gret
folie, 1510

For I right now have founden o manere
Of sleighte, for to coveren al thi cheere

"Thow shalt gon over nyght, and that bylyve,

Unto Deiphebus hous, as the to pleye, Thi maladie away the bet to dryve, — 1515
For-whi thow semest sik, soth for to seye Sone after that, down in thi bed the leye,
And sey, thow mayst no lenger up endure,
And ly right there, and byd thyn aventure

"Sei that thi fevre is wont the for to
take, 1520

The same tyme, and lasten til a-morwe,
And lat se now how wel thow kanst it
make,

For, parde, sik is he that is in sorwe Go now, farwel and Venus here to borwe, I hope, and thow this purpos holde ferme, 1525

Thi grace she shal fully ther conferme "

Quod Troilus, "Iwis, thow nedeles Conselest me that siklich I me feyne,
For I am sik in earnest, douteles,
So that wel neigh I sterve for the peyne " Quod Pandarus, "Thow shalt the bettere

pleyne, 1531
And hast the lasse nede to countrefete, For hym men demen hoot that men seen
swete

"Lo, hold the at thi triste cloos, and I Shal wel the deer unto thi bowe dryve " Therwith he took his leve al softly, 1536
And Troilus to paleis wente blyve
So glad ne was he nevere in al his lyve,
And to Pandarus reed gan al assente, And to Deiphebus hous at nyght he
wente 1540

What nedeth yow to tellen al the cheere
That Deiphebus unto his brother made,
Or his accesse, or his sikliche manere, How men gan hym with clothes for to lade,

Whan he was leyd, and how men wolde hym
glade? 1545

But al for nought, he held forth ay the
wyse

That ye han herd Pandare er this devyse

But certayn is, er Troilus hym leyde, Deiphebus had hym preied over nyght
To ben a frend and helpyng to Criseyde 1550 God woot that he it graunted anonright,
To ben hire fulle frend with al his myght,
But swich a nede was to preye hym thenne,
As for to bidde a wood man for to renne

The morwen com, and neighen gan the
tyme 1555

Of meeltide, that the faire queene Eleyne Shoop hire to ben, an houre after the prime,

With Deiphebus, to whom she nolde feyne,
But as his suster, homly, soth to seyne,
She com to dyner in hire pleyne entente But God and Pandare wist al what this
mente 1561

Com ek Criseyde, al innocent of this, Antigone, hire suster Tarbe also But fle we now prolixitee best is,
For love of God, and lat us faste go 1565
Right to th'effect, withouten tales mo, Whi al this folk assembled in this place,
And lat us of hire saluynge pace

Gret honour did hem Deiphebus, certeyn, And fedde hem wel with al that myghte
like, 1570

But evere mo "Allas!" was his refreyne,
"My goode brother Troilus, the syke, Lith yet" — and therwithal he gan to
sike,
And after that, he peyned hym to glade Hem as he myghte, and cheere good he made 1575

Compleyned ek Eleyne of his siknesse
So feythfully, that pite was to here,
And every wight gan waxen for accesse
A leche anon, and seyde, "In this manere Men curen folk" — "This charme I wol yow leere " 1580

But ther sat oon, al list hire nought to
teche,
That thoughte, "Best koud I yet ben his leche "

After compleynte, hym gonnen they to preyse,

As folk don yet, whan som wight hath by-
gonne

To praise a man, and up with pris hym reise 1585

A thousand fold yet heigher than the
sonne

"He is, he kan, that fewe lordes konne"
And Pandarus, of that they wolde afferme, He naught forgat hire preisyng to conferme

Herde al this thyng Criseyde wel inough,
And every word gan for to notife, 1591 For which with sobre cheere hire herte
lough

For who is that ne wolde hire glorifie,
To mowen swich a knyght don lyve or dye?
But al passe I, lest ye to longe dwelle, 1595
For for o fyn is al that evere I telle

The tyme com, fro dyner for to ryse,
And as hem aughte, arisen everichon And gonne a while of this and that devise But Pandarus brak al this speche anon,
And seide to Deiphebus, "Wol ye gon, 1601
If it youre wille be, as I yow preyde,
To speke here of the nedes of Criseyde?"

Eleyne, which that by the hond hire held, Took first the tale, and seyde, "Go we
blyve", 1605

And goodly on Criseyde she biheld,
And seyde, "Joves lat hym nevere thryve, That doth yow harm, and brynge hym soone of lyve,

And yeve me sorwe, but he shal it rewe,
If that I may, and alle folk be trowel!" 1610

"Telle thow thi neces cas," quod Deiphebus

To Pandarus, "for thow kanst best it telle"
"My lordes and my ladys, it stant thus What sholde I lenger," quod he, "do yow
dwelle?"

He rong hem out a proces lik a belle 1615 Upon hire foo, that highte Poliphete,
So heynous, that men myghte on it spete

Answerde of this ech werse of hem than other,

And Poliphete they gonnen thus to warien "Anhonged be swich oon, were he my
brother!" 1620

And so he shal, for it ne may nought varien!"

What shold I lenger in this tale tarien?
Pleyntliche, alle at ones, they hire highten To ben hire helpe in al that evere they myghten

Spak than Eleyne, and seyde, "Pandarus, Woot ought my lord, my brother, this
matere, 1626

I meene Ector? or woot it Troilus?"
He seyde, "Ye, but wole ye now me here?
Me thynketh thus, sith that Troilus is here,
It were good, if that ye wolde assente, 1630
She tolde hureself hym al this, er she wente

"For he wol have the more hur grief at herte, By cause, lo, that she a lady is,
And, by youre leve, I wol but in right
sterte 1634

And do yow wyte, and that anon, iwys, If that he slepe, or wol ought here of this"
And in he lepte, and seyde hym in his ere,
"God have thi soule, ibrought have I thi
beere!"

To smylen of this gan tho Troilus,
And Pandarus, withouten rekenyng, 1640
Out wente anon to Eleyne and Deiphebus, And seyde hem, "So ther be no taryng, Ne moore prees, he wol wel that ye brynge Criseyda, my lady, that is here,
And as he may enduren, he wol here 1642

"But wel ye woot, the chaumbre is but lite,
And fewe folk may lightly make it warm, Now loketh ye (for I wol have no wite,
To brynge in prees that myghte don hym
harm,

Or hym disesen, for my bettre arm) 1650
Wher it be bet she bide til eft-sonys,
Now loketh ye, that knowen what to doon 18

"I sey for me, best is, as I kan knowe,
That no wight in ne wente but ye tweye,
But it were I, for I kan in a throwe 1655 Reherce hire cas unlik that she kan seye,
And after this, she may hym ones preyce

To ben good lord, in short, and take hire
leve
This may nought muchel of his ese hym
reve

"And ek, for she is straunge, he wol forbere 1660
His ese, which that hym thar nought for
yow,
Ek oother thing, that toucheth nought to
here,
He wol yow telle — I woot it wel right
now —
That secret is, and for the townes prow"
And they, that nothyng knewe of his en-
tente, 1665
Withouten more, to Troilus in they wente

Eleyne, in al hire goodly softe wyse, Gan hym salue, and wommanly to pleye,
And seyde, "Iwys, ye moste alweies arise!
Now, fare brother, beth al hool, I preye!"
And gan hire arm right over his shulder
leye, 1671
And hym with al hire wit to reconforte,
As she best koude, she gan hym to disporte

So after this quod she, "We yow biseke, My deere brother, Deiphebus, and I, 1675 For love of God — and so doth Pandare
eke —

To ben good lord and frend, right hertely, Unto Criseyde, which that certeynly Receyveth wrong, as woot weel here Pan-
dare,
That kan hire cas wel bet than I declare"

This Pandarus gan newe his tong affile, 1681
And al hire cas reherce, and that anon Whan it was seyde, soone after in a while, Quod Troilus, "As sone as I may gon, I wol right fayn with al my myght ben
oon, 1685
Have God my trouthe, hire cause to sustene"
"Good thrift have ye!" quod Eleyne the
queene

Quod Pandarus, "And it youre wille be,
That she may take hire leve, er that she
go?"

"O, elles God forbede it," tho quod he, 1690

"If that she vouche sauf for to do so"
And with that word quod Troilus, "Ye two, Deiphebus and my suster hef and deere,
To yow have I to speke of o matere, 1694

To ben avysed by youre reed the bettre —"
And fond, as hap was, at his beddes hed
The copie of a tretys and a lettre,
That Ector hadde hym sent to axen red,
If swych a man was worthi to ben ded, Woot I nought who, but in a grisly wise
He preyede hem anon on it avyse 1701

Deiphebus gan this lettre for t'onfolde
In earnest greet, so did Eleyne the queene, And romyng outward, faste it gonne by-
holde, 1704
Downward a steire, into an herber greene
This ilke thing they reddeden hem bitwene,
And largely, the mountance of an heure, Thei gonne on it to reden and to poure

Now lat hem rede, and torne we anon
To Pandarus, that gan ful faste pryve 1710 That al was wel, and out he gan to gon
Into the grete chaumbre, and that in hye,
And seyde, "God save al this compaynye!
Come, nece myn, my lady queene Eleyne Abideth yow, and ek my lordes tweyne

"Rys, take with yow youre nece Antigone, 1716
Or whom yow list, or no fors, hardyly The lesse prees, the bet, com forth with
me,
And loke that ye thonken humbly Hem alle thre, and whan ye may goodly Your tyme se, taketh of hem youre leeve, 1721
Lest we to longe his restes hym byreeve"

Al innocent of Pandarus entente, Quod tho Criseyde, "Go we, uncle deere", And arm in arm inward with hym she
wente, 1725
Avysed wel hire wordes and hire cheere,
And Pandarus, in earnestful manere, Seyde, "Alle folk, for Godes love, I preye, Stynteth right here, and softly yow pleye.

"Aviseth yow what folk ben hire with-
inne, 1730

And in what plit oon is, God hym amende!"
And inward thus, "Ful softely bygynne, Nece, I conjure and heighly yow defende,
On his half which that soule us alle sende,
And in the vertu of corones tweyne, 1735 Sle naught this man, that hath for yow this peyne!"

"Fy on the deuel! thynk which oon he is,
And in what plit he lith, com of anon!
Thynk al swich taryed tyde, but lost it nys That wol ye bothe seyn, whan ye ben oon Secoundely, ther yet devyneth noon 1741 Upon yow two, come of now, if ye konne!
While folk is blent, lo, al the tyme is wonne

"In titeryng, and pursuyte, and delayes,
The folk devyne at waggyng of a stree, 1745

And though ye wolde han after myrre dayes,
Than dar ye naught, and whi? for she, and
she Spak swych a word, thus loked he, and he!
Lest tyme I loste, I dar nought with yow dele
Com of, therefore, and bryngeth hym to
hele!" 1750

But now to yow, ye loveres that oen here,
Was Troilus nought in a kankedort, That lay, and myghte whisprynge of hem
here,
And thoughte, "O Lord, right now renneth my sort Fully to deye, or han anon comfort!" 1755
And was the firste tyme he shulde hire preye Of love, O myghty God, what shal he seye?"

Explicit liber secundus

Incipit prohemium terci libri

O blisful light, of which the bemes clere Adorneth al the thridde heven faire!
O sonnes lief, O Joves doughter deere, Plesance of love, O goodly debonaire,
In gentil hertes ay redy to repaire! 5
O veray cause of heele and of gladnesse, Iheryed be thy myght and thi goodness!

In hevene and helle, in erthe and salte see Is felt thi myght, if that I wel descerne, As man, brid, best, fishh, herbe, and grene
tree 10

Thee fele in tymes with vapour eterne
God loveth, and to love wol nought werne,
And in this world no lyves creature Withouten love is worth, or may endure

Ye Joves first to thilk effectes glade, 15 Thorugh which that thynges lyven alle and be,

Comeveden, and amorous him made On mortal thyng, and as yow list, ay ye Yeve hym in love ese or advertee,
And in a thousand formes down hym sente

For love in erthe, and whom yow liste, he
hente 21

Ye fierse Mars apaisen of his ire,
And as yow list, ye maken hertes digne, Algates hem that ye wol sette a-fyre, They dreden shame, and vices they resygne, 25

Ye do hem corteys be, fresshe and benigne,
And heighe or lowe, after a wight enten-
eth,

The joes that he hath, youre myght him sendeth

Ye holden regne and hous in untee, Ye sothfast cause of frendshipe ben also,
Ye knowe al thilke covered quaitee 31
Of thynges, which that folk on wondren so, Whan they kan nought construe how it may jo,

She loveth hym, or whi he loveth here,
As whi this fishh, and naught that, comth to were 35

Ye folk a lawe han set in universe,
And this knowe I by hem that lovers be,

That whoso stryveth with yow hath the werse

Now, lady bryght, for thi benignite,
At reverence of hem that serven the, 40
Whos clerc I am, so techeth me devyse Som joye of that is felt in thi servyse

Ye in my naked herte sentement Inhiede, and do me shewe of thy swet-
nesse —

Caliope, thi vois be now present, 45 For now is nede, sestow nought my de-
stresse,

How I mot telle anonright the gladnesse Of Troilus, to Venus herynge?
To which gladnesse, who nede hath, God hym brynge!

Explicit prohemium tercu libri

Incipit liber tercius

Lay al this mene while Troilus, 50 Recording his lesson in this manere
"Mafay," thoughte he, "thus wol I sey, and thus,

Thus wol I pleyne unto my lady dere, That word is good, and this shal be my
cheere,

Thus nyl I nought foryeten in no wise" 55
God leve hym werken as he kan devyse!

And, Lord, so that his herte gan to quappe, Heryng hire come, and shorte for to sike!
And Pandarus, that ledde hire by the
lappe,

Com ner, and gan in at the curtyng pike, 60
And seyde, "God do boot on alle syke!
Se who is here yow comen to visite, Lo, here is she that is youre deth to wite"

Therwith it semed as he wepte almost "Ha, a," quod Troilus so reufully, 65
"Wher me be wo, O myghty God, thow
woost!

Who is al ther? I se nought trewely"
"Sire," quod Criseyde, "it is Pandare and I"

"Ye, swete herte? allas, I may nought rise, To knele and do yow honour in som wyse"

And dressed hym upward, and she right
tho 71

Gan bothe hire hondes softe upon hym
leye

"O, for the love of God, do ye nought so
To me," quod she, "I! what is this to seye?
Sire, comen am I to yow for causes tweye, First, yow to thonke, and of youre lordshipe eke 76

Continuance I wolde yow biseke"

This Troilus, that herde his lady preye Of lordshipe hym, wax neither quyke ne ded,

Ne myghte o word for shame to it seye, 80
Although men sholde smyten of his hed
But, Lord, so he wex sodeynliche red,
And sire, his lessoun, that he wende konne
To preyen hire, is thorough his wit ironne

Criseyde al this aspied wel ynough, 85 For she was wis, and loved hym nevere the lasse,

Al nere he malapert, or made it tough,
Or was to bold, to synge a fool a masse
But whan his shame gan somewhat to passe, His resons, as I may my rymes holde, 90
I wol yow telle, as techen bokes olde

In chaunged vois, right for his verray
drede,

Which vois ek quook, and therto his
manere

Goodly abaist, and now his hewes rede,
Now pale, unto Criseyde, his lady dere, 95 With look down cast and humble ryolden
chere,

Lo, the alderfirste word that hym asterte Was, twyes, "Mercy, mercy, swete herte!"

And stynte a while, and whan he myghte out brynge,

The nexte word was, "God woot, for I
have, 100

As ferforthly as I have had konnyng, Ben youre al, God so my soule save,
And shal, til that I, woful wight, be grave!
And though I dar, ne kan, unto yow pleyne, Iwis, I suffre nought the lasse peyne 105

"Thus muche as now, O wommanliche wif,

I may out brynge, and if this yow displese,
That shal I wreke upon myn owen lif

Right soone, I trowe, and do youre herte an ese,

If with my deth youre wreththe I may apepe 110

But syn that ye han herd me somewhat
seye,

Now recche I nevere how soone that I
deye "

Therwith his manly sorwe to biholde, It myghte han mad an herte of stoon to
rewe,

And Pandare wep as he to water wolde, 115
And poked evere his nece new and newe,
And seyde, "Wo bygon ben hertes trewe!
For love of God, make of this thing an
ende,

Or sle us both at ones, er ye wende "

"I' what?" quod she, "by God and by
my trouthe, 120

I not nat what ye wilne that I seye "

"I' what?" quod he, "that ye han on hym
routhe,

For Goddes love, and doth hym nought to
deye "

"Now thanne thus," quod she, "I wolde hym preye

To telle me the fyn of his entente 125
Yet wist I nevere wel what that he mente "

"What that I mene, O swete herte deere?" Quod Troilus, "O goodly, fresshe free,

That with the stremes of your eyen cleere Ye wolde somtyme frendly on me see, 130 And thanne agreeen that I may ben he,
Withouten braunche of vice on any wise,
In trouthe alwey to don yow my servise,

"As to my lady right and chief resort,
With al my wit and al my diligence, 135
And I to han, right as yow list, comfort, Under yowre yerde, egal to myn offence,
As deth, if that I breke youre defence,
And that ye deigne me so muche honoure,
Me to comanden aught in any houre, 140

"And I to ben youre verray, humble, trewe, Secret, and in my paynes pacient,
And evere mo desiren freschly newe
To serve, and ben ay ylike diligent, 144
And with good herte al holly youre talent

Receyven wel, how sore that me smerte, — Lo, this mene I, myn owen swete herte "

Quod Pandarus, "Lo, here an hard re-
queste,

And resonable, a lady for to werne!

Now, nece myn, by natal Joves feste, 150
Were I a god, ye sholden sterve as yerne, That heren wel, this man wol nothing
yerne

But youre honour, and sen hym almost
sterve,

And ben so loth to suffren hym yow serve "

With that she gan hire eyen on hym caste Ful esly and ful debonairly, 156

Avysyng hire, and hied nought to faste
With nevere a word, but seyde hym softly,
"Myn honour sauf, I wol wel trewely,
And in swich forme as he gan now devyse, Receyven hym fully to my servyse, 161

"Bysechyng hym, for Goddes love, that he Wolde, in honour of trouthe and gentlesse,
As I wel mene, eke menen wel to me,
And myn honour with wit and bisynesse 16*
Ay kepe, and if I may don hym gladnesse, From hennesforth, iwys, I nyl nought
feyne

Now beth al hool, no lenger ye ne pleyne

"But natheles, this warne I yow," quod she.
"A kynges sone although ye be, ywys, 170 Ye shal namore han soveraignete Of me in love, than right in that cas is N'y nyl forbere, if that ye don amys,
To wratthe yow, and whil that ye me serve, Chencen yow right after ye disserve 175

"And shortly, deere herte and al my
knyght,

Beth glad, and draweth yow to lustynesse,
And I shal trewely, with al my myght,
Your bitre tornen al into swetenesse,
If I be she that may yow do gladnesse, 180
For every wo ye shal recovere a blisse "
And hym in armes took, and gan hym kisse

Fil Pandarus on knees, and up his eyen
To heven threw, and held his hondes highe, "Immortal god," quod he, "that mayst nought deyen, 185

Cupid I mene, of this mayst glorie,
And Venus, thow mayst maken melodie!
Withouten hond, me semeth that in towne,
For this merueille, ich here ech belle sowne

"But ho' namore as now of this matere, 190
For-why this folk wol comen up anon,
That han the lettre red, lo, I hem here
But I conjure the, Criseyde, and oon, And two, thow Troilus, whan thow mayst
goon, 194
That at myn hous ye ben at my warnyng,
For I ful well shal shape youre comyng,

'And eseth there youre hertes right
ynough,
And lat se which of yow shal here the belle,
To speke of love aright!" — therwith he lough —
"For ther have ye a leiser for to telle" 200 Quod Troilus, "How longe shal I dwelle, Er this be don?" Quod he, "Whan thow mayst ryse,
This thyng shal be right as I yow devyse "

With that Eleyne and also Deiphebus Tho comen upward, right at the sterres
ende, 205
And Lord, so thanne gan groningen Troilus,
His brother and his suster for to blende Quod Pandarus, "It tyme is that we
wende
Tak, nece myn, youre leve at alle thre, And lat hem speke, and cometh forth with
me" 210

She took hire leve at hem ful thriftly,
As she wel koude, and they hire reverence Unto the fulle diden, hardyly,
And wonder wel spoken, in hire absence,
Of hire, in preysyng of hire excellence, 215 Hire governaunce, hire wit, and hire
manere
Comendedden, it joie was to here

Now lat hire wende unto hire owen place,
And torne we to Troilus ayem,
That gan ful lightly of the lettre pace 220
That Deiphebus hadde in the gardyn seyn,
And of Eleyne and hym he wolde feyn Delivered ben, and seyde that hym leste To slepe, and after tales have reste 224

Eleyne hym kiste, and took hire leve blyve, Deiphebus ek, and hom wente every wight,
And Pandarus, as faste as he may dryve,
To Troilus tho com, as lyne right,
And on a paillet al that glade nyght
By Troilus he lay, with mery chere, 230
To tale, and wel was hem they were yfeere

Whan every wight was voided but they two,
And alle the dores weren faste yshette,
To telle in short, withouten wordes mo,
This Pandarus, withouten any lette, 235
Up roos, and on his beddes syde hym sette,
And gan to speken in a sobre wyse
To Troilus, as I shal yow devyse

"Myn alderlevest lord, and brother deere, God woot, and thow, that it sat me so
soore, 240
When I the saugh so langwisshyng to-yere
For love, of which thi wo wax alwey moore,
That I, with al my myght and al my loore,
Have evere sithen don my bisynesse To brynghe the to joye out of distresse, 245

"And have it brought to swich plit as thow
woost,
So that thourgh me thow stondest now in
weye
To faren wel, I sey it for no bost,
And wostow whi? for shame it is to seye
For the have I bigonne a gamen pleye, 250
Which that I nevere do shal eft for other, Although he were a thousand fold my,
brother

"That is to seye, for the am I bicomen, Bitwixen game and earnest, swich a meene
As maken wommen unto men to comen, Al sey I nought, thow wost wel what I
meene 256
For the have I my nece, of vices cleene,
So fully maad thi gentlesse triste,
That al shal ben right as thuselven liste

"But God, that al woot, take I to wit-
nesse, 260
That nevere I thus for covetise wroughte,
But oonly for t'abregge that distresse For which wel neigh thow deidest, as me
thoughte
But, goode brother, do now as the oughte,

For Goddes love, and kep hire out of blame, Syn thow art wys, and save alwey hire
name 266

"For wel thow woost, the name as yet of
here

Among the people, as who seyth, halwed
is,

For that man is unbore, I dar wel swere,
That evere wiste that she dide amys 270
But wo is me, that I, that cause al this,
May thynken that she is my nece deere,
And I hire em, and traitour eke yfeere!

"And were it wist that I, thorough myn engyn,

Hadde in my nece yput this fantasie, 275
To doon thi lust and holly to ben thyn, Whi, al the world upon it wolde crie,
And seyn that I the werste trecherie Dide in this cas, that evere was bigonne, And she forlost, and thow right nought
ywonne 280

"Wherefore, er I wol ferther gon a pas, Yet eft I the biseche and fully seye,
That privity go with us in this cas,
That is to seyn, that thow us nevere
wreye,

And be nought wroth, though I the ofte
preye 285

To holden secree swich an heigh matere,
For skilfull is, thow woost wel, my praiere

"And thynk what wo ther hath bitid er this,
For makyn of avantes, as men rede,
And what meschaunce in this world yet ther is, 290

Fro day to day, right for that wikked dede,
For which thisise wise clerkes that ben dede Han evere thus proverbed to us yonge, That 'firste vertu is to kepe tonge' 294

"And nere it that I wilne as now t'abregge Diffusioun of speche, I koude almoost
A thousand olde stories the allegge Of wommen lost through fals and foles bost Proverbes kanst thiself ynowe and woost, Ayems that vice, for to ben a labbe, 300
Al seyde men soth as often as thei gabbe

"O tonge, allas! so often here-byforn

Hath mad ful many a lady bright of hewe Seyd "weilaway, the day that I was born!"

And many a maydes sorwe for to newe, 305
And for the more part, al is untrew That men of yelp, and it were brought to preve

Of kynde non avauntour is to leve

"Avauntour and a lyere, al is on,
As thus I pose, a womman graunte me 310 Hire love, and seith that other wol she non,
And I am sworn to holden it secree,
And after I go telle it two or thre, Iwis, I am avauntour at the leeste,
And lyere, for I breke my biheste 315

"Now loke thanne, if they be nought to
blame,
Swich manere folk — what shal I clepe hem? what? —
That hem avaunte of wommen, and by
name,

That nevere yet bihyghte hem thus ne that,
Ne knewe hem more than myn olde hat! 320
No wonder is, so God me sende hele, Though wommen dreden with us men to dele

"I sey nought this for no mistrust of yow, Ne for no wise men, but for foles nyce,
And for the harm that in the world is
now, 325

As wel for folie ofte as for malice, For wel woot I, in wise folk that vice No womman drat, if she be wel avised,
For wyse ben by foles harm chastised

"But now to purpos, leve brother deere, 330 Have al this thyng that I have seyde in
mynde,
And kep the clos, and be now of good
cheere,

For at thi day thow shalt me trewe fynde
I shal thi proces set in swych a kynde,
And God toforn, that it shal the suffice, 335
For it shal be right as thow wolt devyse

"For wel I woot, thow menest wel, parde; Therefore I dar this fully undertake Thow woost ek what thi lady graunted the,
And day is set, the chartres up to make 340

Have now good nyght, I may no lenger
wake,

And bid for me, syn thow art now in blysse,
That God me sende deth or soone lisse "

Who myghte tellen half the joie or feste Which that the soule of Troilus tho felte, Heryng th'effect of Pandarus byheste? 346
His olde wo, that made his herte swelte, Gan tho for joie wasten and tomelte,
And al the richesse of his sikis sore
At ones fledde, he felte of hem namore 350

But right so as thise holtes and thise hayis,
That han in wynter dede ben and dreye, Revesten hem in grene, when that May is,
When every lusty liketh best to pleye,
Right in that selve wise, soth to seye 355
Wax sodeynliche his herte ful of joie,
That gladder was ther nevere man in Troie

And gan his look on Pandarus up caste Ful sobrely, and frendly for to se, 359
And seyde, "Frend, in Aperil the laste, — As wel thow woost, if it remembre the, — How neigh the deth for wo thow fownde
me,
And how thow dedest al thi bisynesse
To knowe of me the cause of my destresse

"Thow woost how longe ich it forbar to
seye 365
To the, that art the man that I best triste,
And peril non was it to the bywreye,
That wist I wel, but telle me, if the liste, Sith I so loth was that thuself it wiste, How dorst I mo tellen of this matere, 370 That quake now, and no wight may us
here?"

"But natheles, by that God I the swere, That, as hym list, may al this world governe, —

And, if I lye, Achilles with his spere Myn herte cleve, al were my lif eterne, 375
As I am mortal, if I late or yerne Wolde it bewreye, or dorst, or sholde
konne,
For al the good that God made under
sonne —

"That rather deye I wolde, and determyne,

As thynketh me, now stokked in prisoun,

380
In wrecchidnesse, in filthe, and in vermyne Caytif to cruel kyng Agamenoun,
And this in all the temples of this town
Upon the goddes alle, I wol the swere
To-morwe day, if that it like the here 385

"And that thow hast so muche ido for me That I ne may it nevere more diserve, This know I wel, al myghte I now for the A thousand tymes on a morwe sterve
I kan namore, but that I wol the serve 390 Right as thi sclave, whider so thow wende For evere more, unto my lyves ende

"But here, with al myn herte, I the biseche That nevere in me thow deme swich folie
As I shal seyn, me thoughte by thi speche That this which thow me dost for com-
paignie, 396

I sholde wene it were a bauderye
I am nought wood, al if I lewed be!
It is nought so, that woot I wel, parde!

"But he that gooth, for gold or for richesse, On swich message, calle hym what the list, 401
And this that thow doost, calle it gen-tlesse,

Compassioun, and felawship, and trist Departe it so, for wyde-wher is wist,
How that ther is diversite requered 405 Bytwixen thynges like, as I have lered

"And, that thow knowe I thynke nought, ne wene,
That this servise a shame be or jape,
I have my faire suster Polixene, Cassandre, Eleyne, or any of the frape, 410
Be she nevere so fair or wel yshape, Telle me which thow wilt of everychone,
To han for thyn, and lat me thanne allone

"But sith thow hast idon me this servyse, Mylif to save, and for non hope of mede, 415
So, for the love of God, this grete emprise Perfourme it out, for now is moste nede,
For heigh and lough, withouten any drede,
I wol alwey thyn hestes alle kepe Have now good nyght, and lat us bothe
slepe "

Thus held hym ech of other wel apayed,
That al the world ne myghte it bet amende,
And on the morwe, whan they were arayed, Ech to his owen nedes gan entende 424
But Troilus, though as the fir he brende
For sharp desir of hope and of plesaunce,
He nought forgat his goode governaunce

But in hymself with manhod gan restreyne Ech racle dede and ech unbridled cheere,
That alle tho that lyven, soth to seyve, 430
Ne sholde han wist, by word or by manere, What that he mente, as touchyng this
matere

From every wight as fer as is the cloude
He was, so wel dissimulen he koude

And al the while which that I yow devyse,
This was his lif, with all his fulle myght, 436
By day, he was in Martes heigh servyse,
This is to seyn, in armes as a knyght,
And for the more part, the longe nyght He lay and thoughte how that he myghte
serve 440

His lady best, hire think for to deserve

Nil I naught swere, although he lay ful
softe,

That in his thought he nas somewhat dis-
esed,

Ne that he turned on his pilwes ofte,
And wold of that hym missed han ben sesed 445

But in swich cas man is nought alwey plesed,

For aught I woot, namore than was he,
That kan I deme of possibilitee

But certeyn is, to purpos for to go,
That in this while, as writen is in geeste, 450
He say his lady somtyme, and also She with hym spak, whan that she dorst and leste;

And by hire bothe avys, as was the beste, Apoynteden full warly in this nede,
So as they durste, how they wolde procede

But it was spoken in so short a wise, 456
In swich await alwey, and in swich feere, Lest any wight devynen or devyse Wolde of hem two, or to it laye an ere,
That al this world so leef to hem ne were 460

As that Cupide wolde hem grace sende
To maken of hire speche aright an ende

But thilke ltel that they spake or
wroughte,

His wise goost took ay of al swych heede,
It semed hire he wiste what she thoughte Withouten word, so that it was no nede 466 To bidde hym ought to doon, or ought for-
beede,

For which she thought that love, al come it late,

Of alle joie hadde opned hire the yate

And shortly of this proces for to pace, 470
So wel his werk and wordes he bisette,
That he so ful stood in his lady grace,
That twenty thousand tymes, er she lette, She thonked God that evere she with hym
mette 474

So koude he hym governe in swich servyse,
That al the world ne myght it bet devyse

For whi she fond hym so discret in al, So secret, and of swich obēisaunce,
That wel she felte he was to hire a wal Of stel, and sheld from every disple-
saunce, 480

That to ben in his goode governaunce,
So wis he was, she was namore afered, -- I mene, as fer as oughte ben requered

And Pandarus, to quike alwey the fir, Was evere ylike prest and diligent, 485
To ese his frend was set al his desir
He shof ay on, he to and fro was sent,
He lettres bar whan Troilus was absent,
That nevere man, as in his frendes nede, Ne bar hym bet than he, withouten drede

But now, paraunter, som man wayten
wolde 491

That every word, or soonde, or look, or
cheere

Of Troilus that I rehercen sholde,
In al this while unto his lady deere I trowe it were a long thyng for to here, 495
Or of what wight that stant in swich dis-joynte,

His wordes alle, or every look, to poynte

For sothe, I have naught herd it don er this

In story non, ne no man here, I wene, And though I wolde, I koude nought,
 ywys, 500
 For ther was som epistel hem bitwene, That wolde, as seyth myn autour, wel con-
 tene
 Neigh half this book, of which hym liste nought write
 How sholde I thanne a lyne of it endite?

But to the grete effect Than sey I
 thus, 505
 That stondyng in concord and in quiete, Thuse ilke two, Criseyde and Troilus,
 As I have told, and in this tyme swete, — Save only often myghte they nought mete, Ne leiser have hire speches to fulfelle, —
 That it bifel right as I shal yow telle, 511

That Pandarus, that evere dide his myght Right for the fyn that I shal speke of
 here,
 As for to bryngen to his hows som nyght
 His faire nece and Troilus yfere, 515 Wheras at leiser al this heighe matere, Touchyng here love, were at the fulle upbounde,
 Hadde out of doute a tyme to it founde

For he with gret deliberacioun Hadde every thyng that herto myght
 availle 520
 Forncast and put in execucioun,
 And neither left for cost ne for travaile Come if hem list, hem sholde no thyng
 faile,
 And for to ben in ought aspied there,
 That, wiste he wel, an impossible were Dredeles, it cler was in the wynd 526

 From every pie and every lette-game, Now al is wel, for al the world is blynd
 In this matere, bothe fremed and tame
 This tymbur is al redy up to frame, 530 Us lakketh nought but that we witen wolde A certeyn houre, in which she comen
 sholde

And Troilus, that al this purveiaunce Knew at the fulle, and waited on it ay, Hadde hereupon ek mad gret ordi-
 naunce, 535

And found his cause, and therto his aray,
 If that he were missed, nyght or day,
 Ther-while he was aboute thus servyse,
 That he was gon to don his sacrificse,

And moste at swich a temple allone wake, Answered of Apollo for to be, 541
 And first to sen the holy laurer quake, Er that Apollo spake out of the tree,
 To telle hym next whan Grekes sholde
 flee, —
 And forthy lette hym no man, God for-
 bede, 545
 But prey Apollo helpen in this nede

Now is ther litel more for to doone,
 But Pandare up, and shortly for to seyne, Right sone upon the chaungynge of the
 moone, Whan lightles is the world a nyght or
 tweyne, 550
 And that the wolken shop hym for to reyne,
 He streght o morwe unto his nece wente,
 Ye han wel herd the fyn of his entente

Whan he was com, he gan anon to pleye
 As he was wont, and of hymself to jape 555
 And finaly he swor and gan hire seye, By thus and that, she sholde hym nought escape,
 Ne lenger don hym after hire to cape,
 But certeynly she moste, by hire leve, Come soupen in his hous with hym at eve 560

At which she lough, and gan hire faste
 excuse,
 And seyde, "It reyneth, lo, how sholde I
 gon?"
 "Lat be," quod he, ' ne stant nought thus to muse
 This moot be don! Ye shal be ther anon"
 So at the laste herof they fille aton, 565
 Or elles, softe he swor hire in hire ere,
 He nolde nevere comen ther she were

Soone after thus, she gan to hym to rowne,
 And axed hym if Troilus were there 569
 He swor hym nay, for he was out of towne,
 And seyde, "Nece, I pose that he were,
 Yow thurste nevere han the more fere,

For rather than men myghte hym ther
aspie,
Me were levere a thousand fold to dye "

Nought list myn auctour fully to declare 575

What that she thoughte whan he seyde so,
That Troilus was out of towne yfare,
As if he seyde therof soth or no, But that, withowten await, with hym to
go,

She graunted hym, sith he hire that bi-soughte, 580

And, as his nece, obeyed as hire oughte

But natheles, yet gan she hym biseche, Although with hym to gon it was no fere
For to ben war of goosish poeples speche, That dremen thynges whiche that nevere
were, 585

And wel avyse hym whom he broughte
there,

And seyde hym, "Em, syn I most on yow
triste,

Loke al be wel, and do now as yow liste "

He swor hire yis, by stokkes and by stones,
And by the goddes that in hevене
dwelle, 590

Or elles were hym levere, soule and bones,
With Pluto kyng as depe ben in helle
As Tantalus! — what sholde I more telle?
Whan al was wel, he roos and took his
leve,

And she to soper com, whan it was eve, 595

With a certein of hire owen men,
And with hire faire nece Antigone,
And other of hire wommen nyne or ten
But who was glad now, who, as trowe ye,
But Troilus, that stood and myght it se 600 Thoroughout a litel wyndow in a stewe, Ther he bishet syn mydnyght was in mewe,

Unwist of every wight but of Pandare?
But to the point, now whan that she was
come,

With alle joie and alle frendes fare, 605
Hire em anon in armes hath hire nome,
And after to the soper, alle and some,
Whan tyme was, ful softe they hem sette
God woot, ther was no deynthe for to fette!

And after soper gonnen they to rise, 610
At ese wel, with hertes fresshe and glade
And wel was hym that koude best devyse To liken hire, or that hire laughen made He song, she pleyde, he tolde tale of Wade But at the laste, as every thyng hath
ende, 615

She took hire leve, and nedes wolde wende

But O Fortune, executrice of wyrdes, O influences of thuse hevenes hie!
Soth is, that under God ye ben oure hierdes, Though to us bestes, he the causes wrie This mene I now, for she gan homward hie, 621

But execut was al bisyde hire leve
The goddes wil, for which she moste bleve

The bente moone with hire hornes pale, Saturne, and Jove, in Cancro joynd
were, 625

That swych a reyn from heven gan avale,
That every maner womman that was there Hadde of that smoky reyn a verray feere, At which Pandare tho lough, and seyde
thenne, 629

"Now were it tyme a lady to gon henne!"

"But goode nece, if I myghte evere plesse Yow any thyng, than prey ich yow," quod
he,

"To don myn herte as now so gret an ese As for to dwelle here al this nyght with
me,

For-whi this is youre owen hous, parde 635
For, by my trouthe, I sey it nought a-game,
To wende as now, it were to me a shame "

Criseyde, which that koude as mucche good As half a world, took hede of his preere,
And syn it ron, and al was on a flod, 640 She thoughte, "As good chep may I dwellen here,

And graunte it gladly with a frendes chere,
And have a thonk, as grucche and thanne abide,

For hom to gon, it may nought wel bitide "

"I wol," quod she, "myn uncle hef and
deere, 645

Syn that yow list, it skile is to be so I am right glad with yow to dwellen here

I seyde but a-game, I wolde go "
 "Twys, graunt mercy, nece," quod he tho,
 "Were it a game or no, soth for to telle, 650 Now am I glad, syn that yow list to
 dwelle "

Thus al is wel, but tho bigan aright
 The newe joie and al the feste agayn
 But Pandarus, if goodly hadde he myght,
 He wolde han hyed hire to bedde fayn, 655
 And seyde, "Lord, this is an huge rayn!
 Thus were a weder for to slepen inne,
 And that I rede us soone to bygyne

"And, nece, woot ye wher I wol yow leye, For that we shul nat ligen far asonder, 660
 And for ye neither shullen, dar I seye, Heren noyse of reynes nor of thonder?
 By God, right in my litel closet yonder
 And I wol in that outer hous allone 664 Be warden of youre wommen everichone

"And in this myddel chaumbre that ye
 se

Shul youre wommen slepen, wel and softe,
 And there I seyde shal youreselven be,
 And if ye ligen wel to-nyght, com ofte,
 And careth nought what weder is alofte 670
 The wyn anon, and whan so that yow leste, So go we slepe, I trowe it be the beste "

Ther nys no more, but hereafter soone,
 The voide dronke, and travers drawe anon, Gan every wight, that hadde nought to done 675

More in the place, out of the chaumbre
 gon

And evere mo so sterneliche it ron,
 And blew therwith so wondirliche loude,
 That wel neigh no man heren other koude

Tho Pandarus, hire em, right as hym oughte, 680

With wommen swiche as were hire most
 aboute,

Ful glad unto hire beddes syde hire
 broughte,

And took his leve, and gan ful lowe loute, And seyde, "Here at this closet dore with-
 oute,

Right overthwart, youre wommen ligen
 alle, 685

That, whom yow list of hem, ye may here
 calle "

So whan that she was in the closet leyd,
 And alle hire wommen forth by ordinaunce Abedde weren, ther as I have seyde, There was nomore to sluppen nor to traunce, 690
 But boden go to bedde, with meschaunce,
 If any wight was steryng anywhere,
 And lat hem slepen that abedde were

But Pandarus, that wel koude ech a deel
 The olde daunce, and every point ther-
 inne, 695

Whan that he sey that alle thyng was wel
 He thought he wolde upon his werk bi-
 gynne,

And gan the stuwe doore al softe unpynne,
 And stille as stoon, withouten lenger lette,
 By Troilus adown right he hym sette 700

And, shortly to the point right for to gon,
 Of al this werk he tolde hym word and
 ende,

And seyde "Make the redy right anon, For thow shalt into hevене blisse wende "
 "Now, blisful Venus, thow me grace
 sende!" 705

Quod Troilus, "For nevere yet no nede Hadde ich er now, ne halvendel the drede "

Quod Pandarus, "Ne drede the nevere a
 deel,

For it shal be right as thow wolt desire,
 So thryve I, this nyght shal I make it
 weel, 710

Or casten al the gruwel in the fire "
 "Yet, blisful Venus, this nyght thow me enspire,"

Quod Troilus, "As wys as I the serve,
 And evere bet and bet shal, til I sterve

"And if ich hadde, O Venus ful of myrthe, Aspectes badde of Mars or of Saturne, 715
 Or thow combust or let were in my birthe, Thy fader prey al thilke harm disturne
 Of grace, and that I glad ayein may turne, For love of hym thow lovedest in the
 shawe, 720

I meene Adoun, that with the boor was
 slawe

"O Jove ek, for the love of faire Europe, The which in forme of bole away thow
fette,

Now help! O Mars, thow with thi bloddy cope,

For love of Cipris, thow me nought ne
lette! 725

O Phebus, thynk whan Dane hireselven
shette

Under the bark, and laurer wax for drede, Yet for hire love, O help now at this nede!

"Mercurie, for the love of Hierse eke, For which Pallas was with Aglawros wroth, 730

Now help! and ek Diane, I the biseke,
That this viage be nought to the looth
O fatal sustren, which, er any cloth Me shapen was, my destine me sponne,
So helpeth to this werk that is bygonne!"

Quod Pandarus, "Thow vrecched mouses
herte, 736

Artow agast so that she wol the bite?
Why, don this furred cloke upon thy sherte,
And folwe me, for I wol have the write But bid, and lat me gon biforn a lite" 740
And with that word he gan undon a trappe,
And Troilus he brought in by the lappe

The sterne wynd so loude gan to route
That no wight oother noise myghte heere, And they that layen at the dore with-
oute, 745

Ful sikerly they slepten alle yfere,
And Pandarus, with a ful sobre cheere, Goth to the dore anon, withouten lette,
There as they laye, and softlyt it shette

And as he com ayeynward pryvely, 750 His nece awook, and axed, "Who goth
there?"

"My dere nece," quod he, "it am I Ne wondreth nought, ne have of it no fere"
And ner he com, and seyde hire in hire
ere,

"No word, for love of God, I yow biseche!
Lat no wight risen and heren of oure
speche' 756

"What! which wey be ye comen, benedicite?"

Quod she, "and how thus unwist of hem
alle?"

"Here at this secre trappe-dore," quod he Quod tho Criseyde, "Lat me som wight
calle!" 760

"I! God forbede that it sholde falle," Quod Pandarus, "that ye swich folye
wroughte!

They myghte demen thyng they nevere er
thoughte

"It is nought good a slepyng hound to wake, Ne yeve a wight a cause to devyne 765 Youre wommen slepen alle, I undertake,
So that, for hem, the hous men myghte
myne,

And slepen wollen til the sonne shyne
And whan my tale brought is to an ende, Unwist, right as I com, so wol I wende 770

"Now, nece myn, ye shul wel understonde," Quod he, "so as ye wommen demen alle,
That for to holde in love a man in honde,
And hym hire lief and deere herte calle,
And maken hym an howve above a calle,
I meene, as love another in this while, 776
She doth hireself a shame, and hym a gyle

"Now, wherby that I telle yow al this Ye woot youreself, as wel as any wight, How that youre love al fully graunted is To Troilus, the worthieste knyght, 781 Oon of this world, and therto trouthe yplight,

That, but it were on hym along, ye nolde Hym nevere falsen while ye lyven sholde

"Now stant it thus, that sith I fro yow
wente, 785

This Troilus, right platly for to seyn,
Is thorough a goter, by a pryve wente,
Into my chaumbre come in al this reyn, Unwist of every manere wight, certeyn, Save of myself, as wisly have I joye, 790
And by that feith I shal Priam of Troie

"And he is come in swich peyne and dis-
tresse

That, but he be al fully wood by this,
He sodeynly mot falle into wodnesse,
But if God helpe, and cause whi this is, 795 He seith hym told is of a frend of his,

How that ye sholde loven oon that hatte Horaste,
 For sorwe of which this nyght shal ben his
 laste "

Criseyde, which that al this wonder herde, Gan sodeynly aboute hire herte colde, 800
 And with a sik she sorwfully answerde,
 "Allas! I wende, whoso tales tolde, My deere herte wolde me nought holde
 So lightly fals! Allas! conceytes wronge, What harm they don, for now lyve I to
 longe! 805

"Horaste! allas, and falsen Troilus?
 I knowe hym nought, God helpe me so,"
 quod she

"Allas, what wikked spirit tolde hym
 thus?

Now certes, em, tomorwe, and I hym se,
 I shal therof as ful excusen me, 810
 As evere dide womman, if hym like "
 And with that word she gan ful soore sike

"O God!" quod she, "so worldly selynesse, Which clerkes callen fals felicitee, Imedled is with many a bitternesse! 815 Ful unghyssous than is, God woot," quod
 she,

"Conducoun of veyn prosperitee, For either joies comen nought yfeere,
 Or elles no wight hath hem alwey here

"O brotel wele of mannes joie unstable! 820 With what wight so thow be, or how thow
 pleye,

Either he woot that thow, joie, art muable,
 Or woot it nought, it mot ben oon of tweye
 Now if he woot it nought, how may he seye
 That he hath verray joie and selynesse, 825
 That is of ignoraunce ay in derknesse?"

"Now if he woot that joie is transitorie, As every joie of worldly thyng mot flee,
 Than every tyme he that hath in memorie, The drede of lesyng maketh hym that
 he 830

May in no perfit selynesse be,
 And if to lese his joie he sette a myte,
 Than semeth it that joie is worth ful lite

"Wherefore I wol diffyne in thus matere,

That trewely, for aught I kan espie, 835
 Ther is no verray weele in this world heere
 But O thow wikked serpent, jalousie, Thow mysbyleved and envyous folie,
 Why hastow Troilus mad to me untriste,
 That nevere yet agylt hym, that I wiste?"

Quod Pandarus, "Thus fallen is thus
 cas —" 841

"Why, uncle myn," quod she, "who tolde hym this?"

Why doth my deere herte thus, allas?"

"Ye woot, ye, nece myn," quod he, "what
 is

I hope al shal be wel that is amys, 845 For ye may quenche al thus, if that yow
 leste

And doth right so, for I holde it the beste "

"So shal I do to-morwe, ywys," quod she,
 And God toform, so that it shal suffice "

"To-morwe? allas, that were a fair!" quod
 he 850

"Nay, nay, it may nat stonden in this wise
 For, nece myn, thus writen clerkes wise,
 That peril is with drecchyng in ydrawe, Nay, swiche abodes ben nought worth an hawe 854

"Nece, alle thyng hath tyme, I dar avowe,
 For whan a chaumbre afire is, or an halle, Wel more nede is, it sodeynly rescowe Than to dispute and axe amonges alle
 How this candele in the strawe is falle
 A, benedicite! for al among that fare 860
 The harm is don, and fare-wel feldefare!

"And nece myn, ne take it naught agrief,
 If that ye suffre hym al nyght in this wo, God help me so, ye hadde hym nevere hef, —

That dar I seyn, now ther is but we two 865
 But wel I woot that ye wol nat do so, Ye ben to fyes to doon so gret folie,
 To putte his hf al nyght in jupertie "

"Hadde I hym nevere hef? by God, I
 weene

Ye hadde nevere thyng so hef!" quod
 she 870

"Now by my thrift," quod he, "that shal be seene!"

For syn ye make this ensauple of me,
 If ich al nyght wolde hym in sorwe se,
 For al the tresour in the town of Troie,
 I bidde God I nevere mote have joie 875

“Now loke thanne, if ye that ben his love Shul putte his lif al night in jupertie For thyng of nought, now, by that God
 above,
 Naught only this delay comth of folhe,
 But of maluce, if that I shal naught he 880 What' platly, and ye suffre hym in de-
 stresse, Ye ney ther bounte don ne gentilesse ”

Quod tho Criseyde, “Wol ye don o thyng,
 And ye therwith shal stynte al his disese?
 Have heere, and bereth hym this blewe
 ryng, 885
 For ther is nothyng myghte hym bettre please,
 Save I myself, ne more hys herte apese,
 And sey my deere herte, that his sorwe Is causeles, that shal be sene to-morwe ”

“A ryng?” quod he, “ye, haselwodes shaken! 890
 Ye, nece myn, that ryng moste han a stoon
 That myhte dede men alyve maken, And swich a ryng trowe I that ye have non Discrecioun out of youre hed is gon, That fele I now,” quod he, “and that is
 routhe 895
 O tyme lost, wel maistow corsen slouthe!

“Woot ye not wel that noble and heigh
 corage
 Ne sorweth nought, ne stynteth ek, for lite?
 But if a fool were in a jalous rage,
 I nolde setten at his sorwe a myte, 900
 But feffe hym with a fewe wordes white Another day, whan that I myghte hym
 fynde,
 But this thyng stant al in another kynde

“This is so gentil and so tendre of herte, That with his deth he wol his sorwes
 wreke, 905
 For trusteth wel, how sore that hym
 smerte,
 He wol to yow no jalous wordes speke
 And forth, nece, er that his herte breke,

So speke youreself to hym of this matere,
 For with o word ye may his herte stere 910

“Now have I told what peril he is inne,
 And his comyng unwist is to every wight, Ne, parde, harm may ther be non, ne
 synne,
 I wol myself be with yow al this nyght
 Ye knowe ek how it is youre owen knyght,
 And that bi right ye moste upon hym
 triste, 916
 And I al prest to fecche hym whan yow
 liste ”

This accident so pitous was to here,
 And ek so like a sooth, at prime face,
 And Troilus hire knyght to hir so deere, 920
 His prive comyng, and the siker place, That, though that she did hym as thanne
 a grace,
 Considered alle thynges as they stooode,
 No wonder is, syn she did al for goode

Criseyde answerde, “As wisly God at reste My soule brynge, as me is for hym wo! 925
 And, em, iwis, fayn wolde I don the beste, If that ich hadde grace to do so But whether that ye dwelle or for hym go
 I am, til God me bettre mynde sende, 930
 At dulcarnoun, right at my wittes ende ”

Quod Pandarus, “Yee, nece, wol ye here?
 Dulcarnoun called is ‘flemyng of wrecches’ It semeth hard, for wrecches wol nought lere,
 For verray slouthe or other wilfull tecches, This seyde by hem that ben nought worth two fecches 936
 But ye ben wis, and that we han on honde Nis neither hard, ne skilful to withstonde ”

“Than em,” quod she, “doth herof as yow list
 But er he com, I wl up first arise, 940
 And, for the love of God, syn al my trist
 Is on yow two, and ye ben bothe wise,
 So werketh now in so discret a wise
 That I honour may have, and he plesaunce, For I am here al in youre governaunce ” 945

“That is wel seyde,” quod he, “my nece
 deere

Ther good thrift on that wise gentil herte!
 But liggeth stille, and taketh hym right
 here,
 It nedeth nought no ferther for hym
 sterte 949
 And ech of yow ese otheres sorwes smerte,
 For love of God, and Venus, I the herye, For soone hope I we shul ben alle merye "

This Troilus ful soone on knees hym sette Ful sobrelly, right be hyre beddes hed,
 And in his beste wyse his lady grette 955
 But, Lord, so she wex sodeynliche red!
 Ne though men sholde smyten of hire hed,
 She kouthe nought a word aright out
 brynge
 So sodeynly, for his sodeyn comyng

But Pandarus, that so wel koude feele 960
 In every thyng, to pleye anon bigan, And seyde, "Neece, se how this lord kan knele!
 Now, for youre trouthe, se this gentil
 man!"
 And with that word he for a quysshenn ran,
 And seyde, "Kneleth now, while that yow
 leste, 965
 There God youre hertes bryngge soone at
 reste!"

Kan I naught seyn, for she bad hym nought
 rise,
 If sorwe it putte out of hire remembrance,
 Or elles that she took it in the wise
 Of dewete, as for his observaunce, 970 But wel fynde I she dede hym this ples-
 aunce,
 That she hym kiste, although she siked sore,
 And bad hym sitte adown withouten more

Quod Pandarus, "Now wol ye wel bigynne
 Now doth hym sitte, goode nece deere, 975 Upon youre beddes syde al ther withunne, That ech of yow the bet may other heere "
 And with that word he drow hym to the
 feere,
 And took a light, and fond his contenance,
 As for to looke upon an old romaunce 980 Criseyde, that was Troilus lady right,
 And cler stood on a ground of sikernesse,

Al thoughte she hire servant and hu
 knyght
 Ne sholde of right non untrouthe in hu
 gesse,
 Yet natheles, considered his distresse, 98
 And that love is in cause of swich folie, Thus to hym spak she of his jalousie

"Lo, herte myn, as wolde the excellence Of love, ayeins the which that no man ma Ne oughte ek goodly make resistance, 98
 And ek bycause I felte wel and say Youre grete trouthe and servise every day And that youre herte al myn was, soth t
 seyne,
 This drof me for to rewe upon youre peyn

"And youre goodnesse have I founde alwe
 yit, 99
 Of which, my deere herte and al my knyght
 I thonke it yow, as fer as I have wit, Al kan I nought as muche as it were right And I, emforth my connyng and my might Have and ay shal, how sore that me smerte Ben to yow trewe and hool with al myn
 herte, 100

"And dredeles, that shal be founde at preve
 But, herte myn, what al this is to seyne Shal wel be told, so that ye nought yow
 greve,
 Though I to yow right on youreself com
 pleyne 100
 For therwith mene I fynaly the peyne That halt youre herte and myn in hevyn
 nesse
 Fully to slen, and every wrong redresse

"My goode myn, noot I for-why ne how That jalousie, allas! that wikked wyvere, Thus causeles is copen into yow 101
 The harm of which I wolde fayn delyvere Allas, that he, al hool, or of hym slyvere, Shuld han his refut in so digne a place, Ther Jove hym soone out of youre hert
 arace! 101

"But O, thow Jove, O auctour of nature,
 Is this an honour to thū deyte,
 That folk ungitif suffren hire injure,
 And who that gitif is, al quyt goth he?
 O, were it leful for to pleyne on the, 102

That undeserved suffrest jalouse,
Of that I wolde upon the pleyne and crie!

"Ek al my wo is thus, that folk now usen To seyn right thus, 'Ye, jalouse is love!'
And wolde a busshel venym al excusen, 1025
For that o greyn of love is on it shove
But that woot heighe God that sit above
If it be likkere love, or hate, or grame,
And after that, it oughte bere his name

"But certeyn is, som manere jalouse 1030 Is excusable more than som, iwys,
As whan cause is, and som swich fantasie With piete so wel repressed is That it unnethe doth or seyth amys,
But goodly drynketh up al his distresse,
And that excuse I, for the gentlesse 1036

"And som so ful of furie is and despit That it sourmounteth his repressioun
But, herte myn, ye be nat in that plit, That thonke I God, for which youre pas-
sioun 1040

I wol nought calle it but illusioun,
Of habundaunce of love and besy cure,
That doth youre herte this disese endure

"Of which I am right sory, but nought
wroth,
But, for my devour and youre hertes reste, Wherso yow list, by ordal or by oth, 1046
By sort, or in what wise so yow leste,
For love of God, lat preve it for the beste,
And if that I be giltif, do me deye!
Alas, what myght I more don or seye?"

With that a fewe brighte teris newe 1051 Owt of hire eighen fille, and thus she seyde,
"Now God, thow woost, in thought ne dede untrew

To Troilus was nevere yet Criseyde" With that here heed down in the bed she leyde, 1055
And with the sheete it wreigh, and sighte
soore,
And held hire pees, nought o word spak she more

But now help God to quenchen al this
sorwe!
So hope I that he shal, for he best may

For I have seyn, of a ful misty morwe 1060 Folowen ful ofte a myrie someris day,
And after wynter foloweth grene May Men sen alday, and reden ek in stories,
That after sharpe shoures ben victories

This Troilus, whan he hire wordes
herde, 1065
Have ye no care, hym liste nought to slepe,
For it thought hym no strokes of a yerde
To heere or seen Criseyde, his lady, wepe
But wel he felt aboute his herte crepe,
For everi tere which that Criseyde asterte, The crampe of deth, to streyne hym by the
herte 1071

And in his mynde he gan the tyme aorse
That he com there, and that he was born
For now is wikke turned into worse,
And al that labour he hath don byforn, 1075 He wende it lost, he thoughte he nas but lorn

"O Pandarus," thoughte he, "allas, thi wile Serveth of nought, so weylaway the while!"

And therwithal he heng adown the heed,
And fil on knees, and sorwfully he sighte What myghte he seyn? He felte he nas but deed, 1081

For wroth was she that sholde his sorwes
lighte

But natheles, whan that he speken myghte, Than seyde he thus, "God woot that of this game,

Whan al is wist, than am I nought to blame" 1086

Therwith the sorwe so his herte shette,
That from his eyen fil ther nought a tere,
And every spirit his vigour in knette, So they astoned or oppressed were The felying of his sorwe, or of his fere, 1090
Or of aught elles, fled was out of towne,
And down he fel al soodeynly a-swowne

This was no ltel sorwe for to se,
But al was hust, and Pandare up as faste,
"O nece, pes, or we be lost!" quod he, 1095
"Beth naught agast!" but certeyn, at the
laste,

For this or that, he into bed hym caste,

And seyde, "O thef, is this a mannes herte?"

And of he rente al to his bare sherte,

And seyde, "Neece, but ye helpe us now, Allas, youre owen Troilus is lorn!" 1101

"Iwis, so wolde I, and I wiste how, Ful fayn!" quod she, "Allas, that I was born!"

"Yee, nece, wol ye pullen out the thorn That stiketh in his herte," quod Pandare, 1105

"Sey 'al foryeve,' and stynt is al this fare!"

"Ye, that to me," quod she, "ful levere were Than al the good the sonne aboute gooth"

And therewithal she swor hym in his ere, "Iwys, my deere herte, I am nought wroth, 1110

Have here my trouthe!" and many an other oth,

"Now speke to me, for it am I, Criseyde!" But al for nought, yit myght he nought abreyde

Therwith his pous and paumes of his hondes

They gan to frote, and wete his temples tweyne, 1115

And to deliveren hym fro bitter bondes, She ofte hym kaste, and shortly for to seyne, Hym to revoken she did al hire payne And at the laste, he gan his breth to drawe, And of his swough sone after that adawe,

And gan bet mynde and reson to hym take, 1121

But wonder soore he was abayst, iwys And with a sik, whan he gan bet awake, He seyde, "O mercy, God, what thyng is this?"

'Why do ye with youreselven thus amys?' Quod tho Criseyde, "Is this a mannes game? 1126

What, Troilus, wol ye do thus for shame?"

And therewithal hire arm over hym she leyde,

And al foryaf, and ofte tyme hym keste He thonked hire, and to hire spak, and seyde 1130

As fil to purpos for his hertes reste, And she to that answerde hym as hire leste,

And with hire goodly wordes hym disporte She gan, and ofte his sorwes to comforte

Quod Pandarus, "For aught I kan asprien, 1135

This light, nor I, ne serven here of nought Light is nought good for sike folkes yen! But, for the love of God, syn ye ben brought

In thus good plit, lat now no hevvy thought Ben hangyng in the hertes of yow tweye"— And bar the candele to the chymeneye 1141

Soone after this, though it no nede were, Whan she swiche othes as hire leste devyse Hadde of hym take, hire thoughte tho no fere,

Ne cause ek non, to bidde hym thennes rise 1145

Yet lasse thyng than othes may suffice In many a cas, for every wyght, I gesse, That loveth wel, meneth but gentlesse

But in effect she wolde wit anon Of what man, and ek wheer, and also why 1150

He jalous was, syn ther was cause non, And ek the sygne that he took it by, She badde hym that to telle hire bisily, Or elles, certeyn, she bar hym on honde That this was don of mallice, hire to fonde.

Withouten more, shortly for to seyne, 1156 He most obeye unto his lady neste, And for the lasse harm, he moste feyne He seyde hire, whan she was at swich a feste,

She myght on hym han loked at the leste,— Noot I nought what, al deere ynough a rysshe, 1161

As he that nedes most a cause fisshe

And she answerde, "Swete, al were it so,

What harm was that, syn I non yvel mene?"

For, by that God that bought us bothe two, 1165

In alle thyng is myn entente cleene

Swiche argumentes ne ben naught worth a beene

Wol ye the childissh jalous contrefete?
Now were it worth that ye were ybete "

Tho Troilus gan sorwfully to sike, 1170 Lest she be wroth, hym thoughte his herte
deyde,

And seyde, "Allas, upon my sorwes sike Have mercy, swete herte myn, Criseyde!
And if that in tho wordes that I seyde Be any wrong, I wol no more trespass Doth what yow list, I am al in youre
grace " 1176

And she answerde, "Of gilt misericorde!
That is to seyn, that I foryeve al this And evere more on this nyght yow recorde, And beth wel war ye do namore
amys " 1180

"Nay, dere herte myn," quod he, "iwys!"
"And now," quod she, "that I have don yow smerte, Foryeve it me, myn owene swete herte "

This Troilus, with blisse of that supprised, Putte al in Goddes hand, as he that
mente 1185

Nothing but wel, and sodeynly avysed,
He hire in armes faste to hym hente
And Pandarus, with a ful good entente, Leyde hym to slepe, and seyde, "If ye be
wise,

Swouneth nought now, lest more folk arise!" 1190

What myghte or may the sely larke seye, Whan that the sperhawk hath it in his foot?

I kan namore, but of thise ilke tweye, —
To whom this tale sucre be or soot — Though that I tarie a yer, somtyme I moot, 1195

After myn auctour, tellen hire gladnesse,
As wel as I have told hire hevynesse

Criseyde, which that felte hire thus itake,
As writen clerkes in hire bokes olde,
Right as an aspes leef she gan to quake, Whan she hym felte hire in his armes
folde 1201

But Troilus, al hool of cares colde,

Gan thanken tho the blisful goddes sevene Thus sondry peynes bryngen folk to
hevene

This Troilus in armes gan hire streyne, And seyde, "O swete, as evere mot I
gon, 1206
Now be ye kaught, now is ther but we
tweyne!"

Now yeldeth yow, for other bote is non!"
To that Criseyde answerde thus anon, "Ne hadde I er now, my swete herte
deere, 1210
Ben yold, ywis, I were now nought heere!"

O, sooth is seyde, that heled for to be As of a fevre, or other gret siknesse, Men moste drynke, as men may ofte se, Ful bittre drynke, and for to han glad-
nesse, 1215

Men drynken ofte peyne and gret distresse,
I mene it here, as for this aventure, That thorough a peyne hath founden al his cure

And now swetnesse semeth more swete,
That bitternesse assaied was byforn, 1220
For out of wo in blisse now they flete, Non swich they felten syn that they were born

Now is this bet than bothe two be lorn For love of God, take every womman
heede 1224

To werken thus, if it comth to the neede

Criseyde, al quyt from every drede and tene, As she that juste cause hadde hym to
triste,

Made hym swich feste, it joye was to seene,

Whan she his trouthe and clene entente
wiste, 1229

And as aboute a tree, with many a twiste, Bytrent and writh the swote wodebynde, Gan ech of hem in armes other wynde

And as the newe abaysed nyghtyngale, That stynteth first whan she bygynneth to
syng,

Whan that she hereth any herde tale, 1235
Or in the hegges any wyght stryng,
And after siker doth hire vois out ryng,

Right so Criseyde, whan hire drede stente, Opned hire herte, and tolde hym hire entente 1239

And right as he that seth his deth yshapen,
And dyen mot, in ought that he may gesse,
And sodeynly rescous doth hym escapen,
And from his deth is brought in sykernesse,
For al this world, in swych present gladnesse

Was Troilus, and hath his lady swete 1245
With worse hap God lat us nevere mete'

Hire armes smale, hire streghte bak and
softe,

Hire sydes longe, fleshly, smothe, and
white

He gan to stroke, and good thrift bad ful
ofte

Hire snowisshe throte, hire brestes rounde and lite 1250

Thus in this hevene he gan hym to delite,
And therwithal a thousand tyme hire kiste,
That what to don, for joie unnethe he wiste

Than seyde he thus, "O Love, O Charite!
Thi moder ek, Citherea the swete, 1255 After thiself next hered be she,
Venus mene I, the wel-willy planete!
And next that, Imeneus, I the grete,
For nevere man was to yow goddes holde As I, which ye han brought fro cares
colde 1260

"Benigne Love, thow holy bond of thynges, Whoso wol grace, and list the nought honouren,

Lo, his desir wol fe withouten wynges
For noldestow of bownte hem socouren That serven best and most alwey labouren, Yet were al lost, that dar I wel seyn certes, 1266

But if thi grace passed oure desertes

"And for thow me, that leest koude dis-
serve

Of hem that noumbred ben unto thi grace, Hast holpen, ther I likly was to sterve,
And me bistowed in so heigh a place 1271
That thilke boundes may no blisse pace,
I kan namore, but laude and reverence Be to thy bounte and thyn excellence!"

And therwithal Criseyde anon he kuste, 1275
Of which certain she felte no disese And thus seyde he, "Now wolde God I
wiste,

Myn herte swete, how I yow myght plesel What man," quod he, "was evere thus at
ese 1279

As I, on which the faireste and the beste That evere I say, deyneth hire herte reste?"

"Here may men seen that mercy passeth
right,

Th'experience of that is felt in me,
That am unworthis to so swete a wight
But herte myn, of youre benignite, 1285
So thynketh, though that I unworthis be, Yet mot I nede amenden in som wyse, Right thorgh the vertu of youre heigh
servyse

"And for the love of God, my lady deere, Syn God hath wrought me for I shall yow
serve, — 1290

As thus I mene, he wol ye be my steere,
To do me lyve, if that yow liste, or sterve, —
So techeth me how that I may disserve Youre thonk, so that I thorough myn ignoraunce, Ne do no thng that yow be displeas-
aunce 1295

"For certes, fresshe wommanliche wif, Thus dar I seye, that trouth and diligence,
That shal ye fynden in me al my lif, N'y wol nat, certain, breken youre defence,
And if I do, present or in absence, 1300
For love of God, lat sle me with the dede, If that it like unto youre wommanhede"

"Iwys," quod she, "myn owen hertes list,
My ground of ese, and al myn herte deere, Gramercy, for on that is al my trist! 1305
But lat us falle away fro this matere,
For it suffiseth, this that seyd is heere,
And at o word, withouten repentaunce, Welcome, my knyght, my pees, my suffisauce!"

Of hire delht, or joies oon the leeste, 1310
Were impossible to my wit to seye,
But juggeth ye that han ben at the feste
Of swich gladnesse, if that hem liste playe'

I kan namore, but thus thise ilke tweye, That nyght, bitwixen drede and siker-
nesse, 1315
Felten in love the grete worthynesse

O blisful nyght, of hem so longe isought, How blithe unto hem bothe two thow
weere!

Why nad I swich oon with my soule
ybought,

Ye, or the leeste joi that was there? 1320 Awey, thow foule daunger and thow feere,
And lat hem in this hevne blisse dwelle,
That is so heigh that al ne kan I telle!

But soth is, though I kan nat tellen al,
As kan myn auctour, of his excellence, 1325
Yet have I seyde, and God toforn, and shal
In every thyng, al holy his sentence,
And if that ich, at Loves reverence,
Have any word in eched for the beste, Doth therwithal right as youreselven
leste 1330

For myne wordes, heere and every part,
I speke hem alle under correccioun Of yow that felyng han in loves art,
And putte it al in youre discrecioun To encesse or maken dymynucioun 1335
Of my langage, and that I yow biseche
But now to purpos of my rather speche

Thise ilke two, that ben in armes laft, So loth to hem asonder gon it were,
That ech from other wenden ben braft,
Or elles, lo, thus was hir mooste feere, 1341 That al this thyng but nyce dremes were,
For which ful ofte ech of hem seyde, "O
swete,

Clippe ich yow thus, or elles I it meete?"

And Lord! so he gan goodly on hire
se, 1345

That nevere his look ne bleynte from hire
face,

And seyde, "O deere herte, may it be That it be soth, that ye ben in this place?"

"Yee, herte myn, God thank I of his
grace,"

Quod tho Criseyde, and therwithal hym
kiste, 1350

That where his spirit was, for joi he nyste

This Troilus ful ofte hire eyen two Gan for to kisse, and seyde, "O eyen clere, It weren ye that wroughte me swich wo, Ye humble nettes of my lady deere! 1355 Though ther be mercy writen in youre
cheere,

God woot, the text ful hard is, soth, to
fynde!

How koude ye withouten bond me bynde?"

Therwith he gan hire faste in armes take,
And wel an hondred tymes gan he
syke, 1360

Naught swiche sorwfull sikes as men make For wo, or elles when that folk ben sike, But esy sykes, swiche as ben to like,
That shewed his affeccioun withinne, Of swiche sikis koude he nought bi-lynne 1365

Soone after this they spake of sondry
thynges,

As fel to purpos of this aventure,
And pleyng entreachungen hire rynges,
Of whiche I kan nought tellen no scripture, But wel I woot, a broche, gold and asure, 1370

In which a ruby set was lik an herte, Criseyde hym yaf, and stak it on his sherte

Lord, trowe ye a coveytous or a wrecche,
That blameth love, and halt of it despit, That of the pens that he kan moker and krecche 1375

Was evere yit yyeven hym swich delit

As is in love, in o poynt, in som plit?

Nay, douteles, for also God me save,

So perfit joi may no nygard have

They wol seyn "yis," but Lord! so that they
lye, 1380

Tho besy wrecches, ful of wo and drede!

Thei callen love a woodnesse or folie,

But it shall falle hem as I shal yow rede,

They shal forgon the white and ek the rede,

And lyve in wo, ther God yeve hem mes-
chaunce, 1385

And every lovare in his trouthe avaunce!

As wolde God tho wrecches that dispise Servise of love hadde erys also longe

As hadde Mida, ful of coveytise,

And therto dronken hadde as hoot and
stronge 1390

As Crassus dide for his affectis wronge,
To techen hem that they ben in the vice,
And loveres nought, although they holde hem nyce

Thise ilke two, of whom that I yow
seye, 1394

Whan that hire hertes wel assured were,
Tho gonne they to speken and to pleye,
And ek rehercen how, and whan, and where Thei knewe hem first, and every wo and
feere

That passed was, but al swich hevynesse, I thank it God, was torned to glad-
nesse 1400

And evere mo, when that hem fel to speke
Of any wo of swich a tyme agoon,
With kissing al that tale sholde breke,
And fallen in a newe joye anoon, And didnen al hire myght, syn they were
oon, 1405

For to recoveren blisse and ben at ease,
And passed wo with joie contrepaise

Resoun wol nought that I speke of slep,
For it acordeth nought to my matere God woot, they took of that ful litel kep! 1410

But lest this nyght, that was to hem so
deere,

Ne sholde in veyn escape in no manere,
It was byset in joie and busynesse Of al that souneth into gentlesse

But whan the cok, comune astrologer, 1415 Gan on his brest to bete and after crowe,
And Lucyfer, the dayes messenger, Gan for to rise, and out hire bemes throwe,
And estward roos, to hym that koude it
knowe,

Fortuna Major, that anoon Criseyde, 1420
With herte soor, to Troilus thus seyde

"Myn hertes hf, my trist, and my ples-
aunce,

That I was born, allas, what me is wo,
That day of us moot make disseverance!
For tyme it is to ryse and hennes go, 1425
Or ellis I am lost for evere mo!

O nyght, allas! why nyltow over us hove,
As longe as whan Almena lay by Jove?

"O blake nyght, as folk in bokes rede That shapen art by God this world to hide 1430

At certeyn tymes wyth thi derke wede,
That under that men myghte in reste abide, Wel oughten bestes pleyne, and folk the chide,

That there as day wyth labour wolde us
breste,

That thow thus fleest, and deynest us nought reste 1435

"Thow doost, allas, to shortly thyn office, Thow rakle nyght, ther God, maker of
kynde,

The, for thyn haste and thyn unkynde vice,
So faste ay to oure hemysperie bynde, That nevere more under the ground thow
wynde! 1440

For now, for thow so hest out of Troie, Have I forgon thus hastli my joie!"

This Troilus, that with the wordes felte,
As thoughte hym tho, for pietous distresse,
The bloody tens from his herte melte, 1445
As he that nevere yet swich hevynesse Assayed hadde, out of so gret gladnesse, Gan therwithal Criseyde, his lady deere,
In armes streyne, and seyde in this manere

"O cruel day, accusour of the joie 1450 That nyght and love han stole and faste iwryen,

Acorsed be thi comyng into Troie,
For every bore hath oon of thi bryghte yen!
Envyous day, what list the so to spren?

What hastow lost, why sekestow this
place, 1455

Ther God thi light so quenche, for his
grace?

"Allas! what have thise lovers the agylt, Dispitous day? Thyn be the peyne of
helle!

For many a lovee hastow slayn, and wilt, Thy pouryng in wol nowher lat hem
dwelle 1460

What profrestow thi light here for to selle?
Go selle it hem that smale selys grave,

We wol the nought, us nedeth no day
have "

And ek the sonne, Titan, gan he chide, And seyde, "O fool, wel may men the dispise, 1465

That hast the dawying al nyght by thi
syde,

And suffrest hire so soone up fro the rise,
For to disese loveris in this wyse

What! holde youre bed ther, thow, and ek thi Morwe! 1469

I bidde God, so yeve yow bothe sorwe!"

Therwith ful soore he syghte, and thus he
seyde

"My lady right, and of my wele or wo
The welle and roote, O goodly myn, Criseyde,

And shal I rise, allas, and shal I so?

Now fele I that myn herte moot a-two 1475
For how sholde I my lif an heure save, Syn that with yow is al the lyf ich have?

"What shal I don? For, certes, I not how, Ne whan, allas! I shal the tyme see

That in this pit I may ben eft with
yow 1480

And of my lif, God woot how that shal be, Syn that desir right now so biteth me,

That I am ded anon, but I retourne How sholde I longe, allas, fro yow so-journe?

"But natheles, myn owen lady bright, 1485 Yit were it so that I wiste outrely

That I, youre humble servant and youre
knyght,

Were in youre herte iset as fermely

As ye in myn, the which thyng, trewely, Me levere were than thise worldes

tweyne, 1490
Yet sholde I bet enduren al my peyne "

To that Criseyde answerde right anon,
And with a sik she seyde, "O herte deere,

The game, ywys, so ferforth now is gon, That first shal Phebus fallen fro his
spere, 1495

And everich egle ben the dowves feere,
And everi roche out of his place sterte,

Er Troilus out of Criseydes herte

"Ye ben so depe in-with myn herte grave, That, though I wolde it torne out of my
thought, 1500

As wisly verray God my soule save,
To dyen in the peyne, I koude nought
And, for the love of God that us hath
wrought,

Lat in youre brayn non other fantasie
So crepe, that it cause me to dye! 1505

"And that ye me wolde han as faste in
mynde

As I have yow, that wolde I yow biseche,
And if I wiste sothly that to fynde,

God myghte nought a poynt my joies eche 1509

But herte myn, withouten more speche, Beth to me trewe, or ellis were it routhe,
For I am thyn, by God and by my trouthe!

"Beth glad, forthy, and lyve in sikernesse!
Thus seyde I nevere er this, ne shal to mo,

And if to yow it were a gret gladnesse 1515
To torne ayeyn soone after that ye go,

As fayn wolde I as ye that it were so,
As wisly God myn herte brynge at reste!"

And hym in armes tok, and ofte keste

Agayns his wil, sith it mot nedes be, 1520
Thus Troilus up ros, and faste hym cledde,
And in his armes took his lady free

An hondred tyme, and on his wey hym
spedde,

And with swiche voys as though his herte
bledde,

He seyde, "Farewel, dere herte swete, 1525 Ther God us graunte sownde and soone to
mete!"

To which no word for sorwe she answerde,
So soore gan his partyng hire distreyne,

And Troilus unto his paleys ferde,
As wo-bygon as she was, soth to seyne 1530

So harde hym wrong of sharp desir the
peyne,

For to ben eft there he was in plesaunce,
That it may nevere out of his remem-
braunce

Returned to his real paleys soone,
He softe into his bed gan for to slynke, 1535

To slepe longe, as he was wont to doone.

But al for nought, he may wel ligge and wynke,

But slep ne may ther in his herte synke, Thynkyng how she, for whom desir hym brende,

A thousand fold was worth more than he
wende 1540

And in his thought gan up and down to wynde

Hire wordes alle, and every countenance,
And fermely impressen in his mynde
The leeste point that to him was plesaunce,
And verraylich, of thulke remembraunce, Desir al newe hym brende, and lust to brede 1548

Gan more than erst, and yet took he non
hede

Criseyde also, right in the same wyse,
Of Troilus gan in hire herte shette His worthynesse, his lust, his dedes
wise, 1550

His gentillesse, and how she with hym
mette,

Thonkyng Love he so wel hire bisette, Desyryng eft to han hire herte deere In swich a plit, she dorste make hym
cheere

Pandare, o-morwe which that comen
was 1555

Unto his nece, and gan hire faire grete, Seyde, "Al this nyght so reyned it, allas,
That al my drede is that ye, nece swete, Han hitel laiser had to slepe and mete Al nyght," quod he, "hath reyn so do me
wake, 1560

That som of us, I trowe, hire hedes ake"

And ner he com, and seyde, "How stant it
now

This mury morwe? Nece, how kan ye
fare?"

Criseyde answerde, "Nevere the bet for
yow,

Fox that ye ben! God yeve youre herte kare! 1565

God help me so, ye caused al this fare, Trowe I," quod she, "for al youre wordes
white

O, whoso seeth yow, knoweth yow ful lte."

With that she gan hire face for to wrye
With the shete, and wax for shame al
reed,

And Pandarus gan under for to prie, 1571
And seyde, "Nece, if that I shal be ded, Have here a swerd and smyteth of myn hed!"

With that his arm al sodeynly he thriste Under hire nekke, and at the laste hire lyste 1575

I passe al that which chargeth nought to
seye

What! God foryaf his deth, and she al so Foryaf, and with here uncle gan to pleye, For other cause was ther noon than so But of this thing right to the effect to
go, 1580

Whan tyme was, hom to here hous she
wente,

And Pandarus hath fully his entente

Now torne we ayeyn to Troilus, That resteles ful longe abedde lay,
And pryvely sente after Pandarus, 1585 To hym to com in al the haste he may He com anon, nought ones seyde he nay,
And Troilus ful sobrely he grette,
And down upon his beddes syde hym sette

This Troilus, with al th'affecciou 1590
Of frendes love that herte may devyse,
To Pandarus on knowes fil adown,
And er that he wolde of the place arise,
He gan hym thonken in his beste wise An hondred sythe, and gan the tyme
blesse 1595

That he was born, to bryngre hym fro destresse

He seyde, "O frend of frendes the alder-
beste

That evere was, the sothe for to telle, Thow hast in hevene ybrought my soule at
reste

Fro Flegētoun, the fery flood of helle, 1600 That, though I myght a thousand tymes
selle,

Upon a day, my hf in thi servise,
It myghte naught a mootte in that suffice.

"The sonne, which that al the world may se,

Saugh nevere yet my lif, that dar I
leye, 1605

So myl fair and goodly as is she Whos I am al, and shal, tyl that I deye
And that I thus am hires dar I seve, That thanked be the heighe worthynesse Of Love, and ek thi kynde bysynesse 1610

"Thus hastow me no litel thing yvive, For which to the obliged be for ay My lif, and whi' For thorough thyn help I
lyve,

Or elles ded hadde I ben many a day "
And with that word down in his bed he
lay, 1615
And Pandarus ful sobrelly hym herde Til al was seyde, and than he thus answerde

"My deere frend, if I have don for the
In any cas, God wot, it is me hef,
And am as glad as man may of it be, 1620 God help me so, but tak it nat a-grief
That I shal seyn, be war of this meschief, That, there as thow now brought art in thy
blisse,
That thow thuself ne cause it nat to misse

"For of fortunes sharpe adversitee 1625
The worste kynde of infortune is this,
A man to han ben in prosperitee,
And it remembren, whan it passed is Th'art wis ynough, forthu do nat amys Be naught to rakel, theigh thow sitte warne, 1630
For if thow be, certeyn, it wol the harme

"Thow art at ese, and hold the wel therinne, For also seur as reed is every fir,
As gret a craft is kepe wel as wyne Bridle alwey wel thi speche and thi
desir, 1635
For worldly joiel halt nought but by a wir
That preveth wel it brest al day so ofte, Forthu nede is to werken with it softe "

Quod Troilus, "I hope, and God toforn, My deere frend, that I shal so me
beere, 1640

That in my gylt ther shal nothyng be lorn, N'y nyl nought rakel as for to greven heere

God woot, of this thow woldest litel
care " 1645

The gan he telle hym of his glade nyght,
And wherof first his herte dred, and how,
And seyde, ' Frend, as I am trewe knyght,
And by that feyth I shal to God and yow,
I hadde it nevere half so hote as now, 1650
And ay the more that desir me biteth
To love hire best, the more it me deliteth

I not myself naught wisly what it is,
But now I feele a newe qualitee, Yee, al another than I dide er this " 1655 Pandare answerd, and seyde thus, that "he That ones may in hevene blisse be,
He feleth other weyes, dar I leye, Than thilke tyme he first herde of it seye "

This is o word for al, this Troilus 1660
Was nevere ful to speke of this matere,
And for to preisen unto Pandarus
The bounte of his righte lady deere,
And Pandarus to thanke and maken cheere This tale was ay span-newe to by-
gynne, 1665
Til that the nyght departed hem atwynne

Soon after this, for that Fortune it wolde, Icomen was the blisful tyme swete That Troilus was warned that he sholde, There he was erst, Criseyde his lady
mete, 1670
For which he felte his herte in joiel fiete,
And fethefully gan alle the goddes herie,
And lat se now if that he kan be mere!

And holden was the forme and al the wise
Of hire comyng, and eek of his also, 1675 As it was erst, which nedeth nought de-vyse

But playnly to th'effect right for to go,
In joiel and suerte Pandarus hem two Abedde brought, whan that hem bothe
leste,
And thus they ben in quyete and in
reste 1680

Nought nedeth it to yow, syn they ben met,

A thousand fold, thus nedeth nought en-quere

Agon was every sorwe and every feere, 1685 And bothe, ywys, they hadde, and so they
wende,

As muche joie as herte may comprende

This is no litel thyng of for to seye,
This passeth every wit for to devyse,
For ech of hem gan otheres lust obeye 1690 Felicite, which that thise clerkes wise Comenden so, ne may nought here suffice,
This joie may nought writen be with inke, This passeth al that herte may bythynke 1694

But cruel day, so wailaway the stounde!
Gan for t'aproche, as they by sygnes knewe,
For which hem thoughte feelen dethus wownde

So wo was hem that changen gan hire hewe,
And day they gonnen to despise al newe, Callyng it traitour, envyous, and worse,
And bitterly the dayes light thei corse 1701

Quod Troilus, "Allas, now am I war
That Prous and tho swifte steedes thre, Which that drawn forth the sonnes char, Han gon som bi-path in dsprit of me, 1705 That maketh it so soone day to be,
And, for the sonne hym hasteth thus to rise,

Ne shal I nevere don hum sacrifice "

But nedes day departe hem moste soone, And whan hire speche don was and hire
cheere, 1710

They twynne anon, as they were wont to
doone,

And setten tyme of metyng eft yfeere
And many a nyght they wroughte in this
manere,

And thus Fortune a tyme ledde in joie Criseyde, and ek this kynges some of Troie 1715

In suffisaunce, in blisse, and in singynges,
This Troilus gan al his lif to lede
He spendeth, jousteth, maketh festeynges,
He yeveth frely ofte, and chaungeth wede, And held aboute hym alwey, out of
drede, 1720

A world of folk, as com hym wel of kynde,
The freshest and the beste he koude fynde,

That swich a vois was of hym and a stevene Thorughout the world, of honour and largesse, 1724

That it up rong unto the yate of hevene
And, as in love, he was in swich gladnesse,
That in his herte he demed, as I gesse,
That ther nys lovere in this world at ese
So wel as he, and thus gan love hym plese

The goodlihedde or beaute which that
kynde 1730

In any other lady hadde yset Kan nought the montance of a knotte un-
bynde,

Aboute his herte, of al Criseydes net
He was so narwe ymasked and yknet,
That it undon on any manere syde, 1735 That nyl naught ben, for aught that may bitide

And by the hond ful ofte he wolde take This Pandarus, and into gardyn lede, And swich a feste and swich a proces make Hym of Criseyde, and of hire woman-
hede, 1740
And of hire beaute, that, withouten drede,
It was an hevene his wordes for to here,
And thanne he wolde syng in this manere

"Love, that of erthe and se hath govern-
aunce,

Love, that his hestes hath in hevenes
hye, 1745

Love, that with an holsom alliaunce Halt pepes joyned, as hym lest hem gye, Love, that knetteth lawe of compaignie,
And couples doth in vertu for to dwelle, Bynd this acord, that I have told and
telle 1750

"That that the world with feith, which that is stable,

Diverseth so his stowndes concordynge,
That elementz that ben so discordable Holden a bond perpetuely duryng, That Phebus mote his rosy day forth bryngre, 1755
And that the mone hath lordshupe over the nyghtes, —

Al this doth Love, ay heried be his myghtes!

"That that the se, that gredy is to flowen, Constreyneth to a certeyn ende so His flodes that so fierly they ne growen
To drenchen erthe and al for evere mo, 1761
And if that Love aught lete his bridel go, Al that now loveth asondre sholde lepe, And lost were al that Love halt now to-hepe

"So wolde God, that auctour is of
kynde, 1765
That with his bond Love of his vertu liste
To cerclen hertes alle, and faste bynde, That from his bond no wight the wey out
wiste,
And hertes colde, hem wolde I that he twiste
To make hem love, and that hem liste av
rewe 1770
On hertes sore, and kepe hem that ben
trewe!" —

In alle nedes, for the townes werre,
He was, and ay, the first in armes dyght,
And certeynly, but if that bokes erre,
Save Ector most ydred of any wight, 1775
And thus encrees of hardynesse and myght Com hym of love, his ladies thank to
wynne,
That altered his spirit so withinne

In tyme of trewe, on haukyng wolde he ride,
Or elles honte boor, beer, or lyoun, 1780
The smale bestes leet he gon byside
And whan that he com ridyng into town, Ful ofte his lady from hire wyndow
down,
As fressh as faukoun comen out of muwe, Ful redy was hym goodly to saluwe 1785

And moost of love and vertu was his speche,
And in despit hadde alle wrecchednesse,
And douteles, no nede was hym biseche
To honouren hem that hadde worthynesse,
And esen hem that weren in destresse 1790
And glad was he if any wyght wel ferde,
That lovere was, v han he it wiste or herde

For, soth to seyne, he lost held every wyght,
But if he were in Loves heigh serwise,
I mene folk that oughte it ben of right 1795
And over al this, so wel koude he devyse
Of sentement, and in so unkouth wise, Al his array, that every lovere thoughte That al was wel, what so he seyde or
wroughte

And though that he be come of blood roial, 1800
Hym liste of pride at no wight for to chace, Benigne he was to ech in general,
For which he gat hym thank in every place Thus wolde Love, yheried be his grace, That Pride, Envyve, and Ire, and Avarice 1805
He gan to fie, and everich other vice

Thow lady bryght, the daughter to Dyone, Thy blynde and wynged sone ek, daun
Cupide,
Yee sustren nyne ek, that by Elicone
In hil Pernaso listen for t'abide, 1810
That ye thus fer han deyned me to gyde,
I kan namore, but syn that ye wol wende, Ye heried ben for ay withouten endel!

Thorough yow have I seyde fully in my song Th'effect and joie of Troilus servise, 1815 Al be that ther was som disese among,
As to myn auctour listeth to devise My thridde bok now ende ich in this wyse,
And Troilus in lust and in quiete Is with Criseyde, his owen herte swete 1820

BOOK IV

Incipit prohemium quarti libri

But al to litel, weylaway the whyle, Lasteth swich joie, ythonked be Fortune,
 That semeth trewest whan she wol bygyle,
 And kan to fooles so hire song entune,
 That she hem hent and blient, traitour comune!⁵ And whan a wight is from hire whiel ythrowe,
 Than laugheth she, and maketh hym the mowe

From Troilus she gan hire brighte face Away to writhe, and tok of hym non heede, But caste hym clene out of his lady grace,¹⁰
 And on hire whiel she sette up Diomedé, For which right now myn herte gynneth
 blede,
 And now my penne, allas! with which I
 write,
 Quaketh for drede of that I moste endite

For how Criseyde Troilus forsook,¹⁵
 Or at the leeste, how that she was unkynde, Moot hennesforth ben matere of my book,
 As writen folk thorough which it is in mynde Allas! that they sholde evere cause fynde To speke hire harm, and if they on hire lye,²⁰
 Iwis, hemself sholde han the vilanye

O ye Herynes, Nyghtes doughtren thre, That endeles compleignen evere in pyne, Megera, Alete, and ek Thesiphone, Thow cruel Mars ek, fader to Quyrnye,²⁵
 This ilke ferthe book me helpeth fyne,
 So that the losse of lyf and love yfeere
 Of Troilus be fully shewed heere

Explicit prohemium quarti libri

Incipit liber quartus

Laggyng in oost, as I have seyde er this,
 The Grekys stronge aboute Troie town,³⁰ Byfel that, whan that Phebus shynyng is Upon the brest of Hercules Iyoune, That Ector, with ful many a bold baroun,

Caste on a day with Grekes for to fighte, As he was wont, to greve hem what he myghte³⁵

Not I how longe or short it was bitwene This purpos and that day they fighten
 mente,

But on a day wel armed, brighte, and shene, Ector and many a worthi wight out wente,
 With spere in honde and bigge bowes bente,⁴⁰

And in the berd, withouten lenger lette, Hire fomen in the feld anon hem mette

The longe day, with speres sharpe igrounde,

With arwes, dartes, swerdes, maces felle, They fighte and bringen hors and man to grounde,⁴⁵

And with hire axes out the braynes quelle
 But in the laste shour, soth for to telle,
 The folk of Troie hemselven so mysledden That with the worse at nyght homward they fledden

At which day was taken Antenore,⁵⁰ Mauge Polydamas or Monesteeo, Santippe, Sarpedon, Polynestore, Polite, or ek the Trojan daun Rupheo,
 And other lasse folk as Pheuseo, So that, for harm, that day the folk of Troie⁵⁵

Dredde to lese a gret part of hire joie

Of Priamus was yeve, at Grekes requeste, A tyme of treme, and tho they gonnen
 trete,

Hire prisoners to chaungen, meste and
 leste,

And for the surplus yeven sommes grete⁶⁰
 This thing anon was couth in every strete, Bothe in th'assege, in town and everywhere,

And with the firste it com to Calkas ere

Whan Calkas knew this tretis sholde holde,
 In consistorie, among the Grekes soone⁶⁵

He gan in thringe forth with lordes olde, And sette hym there as he was wont to
 doone,
 And with a chaunged face hem bad a
 boone,
 For love of God, to don that reverence, To stynte noyse, and yeve hym audience 70

Than seyde he thus, "Lo, lordes myn ich was Troian, as it is knowen out of drede,
 And, if that yow remembre, I am Calkas,
 That alderfirst yaf comfort to youre nede And tolde wel how that ye shulden spede 75
 For dredeles, thourgh yow shal in a stownde Ben Troie ybrend, and beten down to grownde

"And in what forme, or in what manere
 wise,
 This town to shende, and al youre lust t'acheve,
 Ye han er this wel herd me yow devise
 This knowe ye, my lordes, as I leve 81
 And, for the Grekis weren me so leeve, I com myself, in my propre persone,
 To teche in this how yow was best to doone,

"Havyng unto my tresor ne my rente 85 Right no resport, to respect of youre ese Thus al my good I lefte and to yow wente, Wenying in this yow, lordes, for to plesse
 But al that los ne doth me no disese
 I vouchesauf, as wisely have I joie, 90
 For yow to lese al that I have in Troie,

"Save of a doughter that I lefte, allas!
 Slepynge at hom, whanne out of Troie I
 sterte
 O sterne, O cruel fader that I was!
 How myghte I have in that so hard an
 herte? 95
 Allas, I ne hadde ibrought hire in hire
 sherte!
 For sorwe of which I wol nought lyve to-
 morwe,
 But if ye lordes rewe upon my sorwe

"For, by that cause I say no tyme er now

Hire to delivere, ich holden have my
 pees, 100
 But now or nevere, if that it like yow,
 I may hire have right soone, douteles
 O help and grace! amonges al this prees, Rewe on this olde caytyf in destresse, Syn I thourgh yow have al this hevyn-
 nesse 105

"Ye have now kaught and fettered in prisoun Troians vnowe, and if youre willes be,
 My child with oon may han redempcioun,
 Now, for the love of God and of bounte,
 Oon of so fele, allas, so yive hym me! 110
 What nede were it this preiere for to werne, Syn ye shul bothe han folk and town as yerne"

"On peril of my lif, I shal nat lye, Appollo hath me told it feithfully,
 I have ek founde it be astronomye, 115
 By sort, and by augurye ek, trewely, And dar wel say, the tyme is faste by That fire and flambe on al the town shal
 sprede,
 And thus shal Troie torne to asshen dede

"For certein, Phebus and Neptunus
 bothe, 120
 That makeden the walles of the town,
 Ben with the folk of Troie alwey so wrothe,
 That they wol brynge it to confusioun, Right in despit of kyng Lameadoun Bycause he nolde payen hem here hire, 125
 The town of Troie shal ben set on-fire"

Tellyng his tale alwey, this olde greye, Humble in his speche, and in his lokyng
 eke,
 The salte ters from his eyen tweye Ful faste ronnen down by either cheke 130
 So longe he gan of socour hem biseke
 That, for to hele hym of his sorwes soore, They yave hym Antenor, withouten
 moore

But who was glad ynough but Calkas tho?
 And of this thyng ful soone his nedes
 leyde 135
 On hem that sholden for the tretis go,
 And hem for Antenor ful ofte preyde
 To bryngen hom kyng Toas and Criseyde

And whan Priam his save-garde sente, Th'embassadours to Troie streight they
wente 140

The cause itold of hire comyng, the olde Priam, the kyng, ful soone in general
Let her-upon his parlement to holde,
Of which th'effect rehercen yow I shal Th'embassadours ben answerd for fynal, 145 Th'eschaunge of prisoners and al this nede Hem liketh wel, and forth in they procede

This Troilus was present in the place, Whan axed was for Antenor Criseyde, For which ful soone chaungen gan his
face, 150
As he that with tho wordes wel neigh
deyde

But natheles he no word to it seyde, Lest men sholde his affeccoun espye,
With mannes herte he gan his sorves drye,

And ful of angwyssh and of grisly drede 155 Abod what lordes wolde unto it seve,
And if they wolde graunte, as God forbede, Th'eschaunge of hire, than thoughte he thynges tweye,

First, how to save hire honour, and what
weye

He myghte best th'eschaunge of hire with-
stonde, 160

Ful faste he caste how al this myghte
stonde

Love hym made al prest to don hire byde,
And rather dyen than she sholde go,
But resoun seyde hym, on that other syde,
"Withouten assent of hire ne do nat so, 165 Lest for thi werk she wolde be thy fo, And seyn that thorough thy medlynge is iblowe

Youre bother love, ther it was erst un-
knowe "

For which he gan deliberen, for the beste, That though the lordes wolde that she
wente, 170

He wolde lat hem graunte what hem leste, And telle his lady first what that they
mente,

And whan that she hadde seyde hym hire
entente,

Therafter wolde he werken also blyve, Theigh al the world ayeyn it wolde
stryve 175

Ector, which that wel the Grekes herde,
For Antenor how they wolde han Criseyde, Gan it withstonde, and sobrelly answerde
"Syres, she nys no prisonere," he seyde,
"I not on yow who that this charge
leyde, 180

But, on my part, ye may eftsone hem telle, We usen here no wommen for to selle "

The noyse of peple up sturte thanne at ones,
As breme as blase of straw iset on-fire,
For infortune it wolde, for the nones, 185
They sholden hire confusioun desire

"Ector," quod they, "what goost may yow enspyre,

This womman thus to shilde, and don us
leese

Daun Antenor — a wrong wey now ye
chese —

"That is so wys and ek so bold baroun? 190
And we han nede of folk, as men may se
He is ek oon the grettest of this town O Ector, lat tho fantasies be!
O kyng Priam," quod they, "thus sygge
we,

That al oure vois is to forgon Criseyde " 195
And to deliveren Antenor they preyde

O Juvenal, lord! trewe is thy sentence,
That hitel wyten folk what is to yerne
That they ne fynde in hire desir offence, For cloude of errour lat hem nat discerne 200

What best is And lo, here ensample as
yerne

This folk desiren now deliveraunce Of Antenor, that brought hem to mes-
chaunce

For he was after traitour to the town Of Troye, allas, they quytte hym out to rathe! 205

O nyce world, lo, thy discrecioun!
Criseyde, which that nevere dide hem
scathe,

Shal now no lenger in hire blisse bathe,
But Antenor, he shal com hom to towne,

And she shal out, thus seyden here and howne 210

For which delibered was by parlement,
For Antenor to yelden out Criseyde,
And it pronounced by the president, Although that Ector "nay" ful ofte preyde And fynaly, what wight that it with-
seyde, 215

It was for nought, it moste ben and sholde,
For substauce of the parlement it wolde

Departed out of parlement echone,
This Troilus, withouten wordes mo, Unto his chambre spedde hym faste
allone, 220

But if it were a man of his or two,
The which he bad out faste for to go, Bycause he wolde slepen, as he seyde,
And hastily upon his bed hym leyde

And as in wynter leues ben biraft, 225 Ech after other, til the tree be bare,
So that ther nys but bark and braunche
laft,

Lath Troilus, byraft of ech welfare, Ibounden in the blake bark of care,
Disposed wood out of his wit to breyde, So sore hym sat the chaungynge of Cri-
seyde 231

As rist hym up, and every dore he shette
And wyndow ek, and tho this sorwful
man

Upon his beddes syde adown hym sette, Ful lik a ded ymage, pale and wan, 235
And in his brest the heped wo bygan Out breste, and he to werken in this wise in his woodnesse, as I shal yow devyse

Right as the wyld boole bygynneth sprynge, Now her, now ther, idarted to the herte, 240
And of his deth roreth in compleynynge,
Right so gan he aboute the chaumbre sterte, Smytyng his brest ay with his fistes smerte,
His hed to the wal, his body to the grounde Ful ofte he swapte, hymselfen to con-
founde 245

His eyen two, for piete of hert,
Out stremeden as swifte welles tweye,
The hegh sobbes of his sorwes smerte

His specne nym refte, unnethes myghte he
seye,

"O deth, allas! why nyltow do me deye? 250 Acorsed be that day which that Nature Shop me to ben a lyves creature!"

But after, whan the furie and al the rage Which that his herte twiste and faste
threste, 254

By lengthe of tyme somewhat gan aswage,
Upon his bed he leyde hym down to reste.
But tho bygonne his teeris more out breste,
That wonder is the body may suffice
To half this wo, which that I yow devyse.

Than seyde he thus, "Fortune, allas the
while! 260

What have I don? What have I the agyt?
How myghtestow for rowthe me bygule?
Is ther no grace, and shal I thus be spilt?
Shal thus Criseyde away, for that thow wilt?

Allas! how maistow in thyn herte fynde 265
To ben to me thus cruwel and unlynde?

"Have I the nought honoured al my lyve,
As thow wel wost, above the goddes alle?
Whi wiltow me fro joie thus deprive?
O Troilus, what may men now the calle 270 But wrecche of wrecches, out of honour
falle

Into miserie, in which I wol bewalle Criseyde, allas! til that the breth me faille?

"Allas, Fortune! if that my lif in joie Displeed hadde unto thi foule envye, 275 Why ne haddestow my fader, kyng of Troye,

Byraft the lif, or don my bretheren dye, Or slayn myself, that thus compleyne and
crye,

I, combre-world, that may of nothyng
serve,
But evere dye and nevere fulli sterve? 280

"If that Criseyde allone were me laft, Nought roughte I whider thow woldest me steere,

And here, allas! than hastow me biraft
But everemore, lo, this is thi manere, To reve a wight that most is to hym
deere, 285

To preve in that thi gerful violence
Thus am I lost, ther helpeth no diffence

“O verrey lord, O Love! O god, allas!
That knowest best myn herte and al my
thought,

What shal my sorwful lif don in this cas, 290
If I forgo that I so deere have bought?
Syn ye Criseyde and me han fully brought Into youre grace, and bothe oure hertes seled,

How may ye suffre, allas! it be repeled?

“What shal I don? I shal, while I may
dure 295

On lyve in torment and in cruwel peyne,
This infortune or this disaventure, Allone as I was born, iwys, compleyne, Ne nevere wol I seen it shyne or reyne, But ende I wol, as Eddipe, in derk-
nesse 300

My sorwful lif, and dyen in distresse

“O wery goost, that errest to and fro, Why nyltow fleen out of the wofulleste Body that evere myghte on grounde go?
O soule, lurkyng in this wo, unneste, 305 Fle forth out of myn herte, and lat it
breste,

And folowe alwey Criseyde, thi lady dere Thi righte place is now no lenger here

“O woful eyen two, syn youre disport Was al to sen Criseydes eyen brighte, 310
What shal ye don but, for my discomfort, Stonden for naught, and wepen out youre
sighte,

Syn she is queynt, that wout was yow to lighte?

In vayn fro this forth have ich eyen tweye fourmed, syn youre vertu is aweye 315

“O my Criseyde, O lady sovereigne Of thilke woful soule that thus crieth,
Who shal now yeven comfort to my peyne?
Allas! no wight, but whan myn herte dieth, My spirt, which that so unto yow heth, 320

Receyve in gree, for that shal ay yow serve, Forthi no fors is, though the body sterve

‘O ye lovers, that heigh upon the whiel

Ben set of Fortune, in good aventure, God leve that ye fynde ay love of stel, 325
And longe mote youre lif in joi endure!
But whan ye comen by my sepulture, Remembreth that youre felawe resteth
there,

For I loved ek, though ich unworthi were “O oold, unholosom, and myslyved man, 330 Calkas I mene, allas! what eieth the,

To ben a Grek, syn thow art born Troian?
O Calkas, which that wolt my bane be,
In corsed tyme was thow born for me!
As wolde blisful Jove, for his joi, 335
That I the hadde, wher I wolde, in Troie!”

A thousand sikes, hotter than the gleede,
Out of his brest ech after other wente, Medled with pleyntes new, his wo to feede,

For which his woful teris nevere stente, 340
And shortly, so his peynes hym torente,
And wex so mat, that joi nor penaunce
He feleth non, but lith forth in a traunce.

Pandare, which that in the parlement Hadde herd what every lord and burgeys
seyde, 345

And how ful graunted was by oon assent
For Antenor to yelden so Criseyde, Gan wel neigh wood out of his wit to
breyde,

So that, for wo, he nyste what he mente,
But in a rees to Troilus he wente 350

A certeyn knyght, that for the tyme kepte
The chambre door, undide it hym anon,
And Pandare, that ful tendrehche wepte,
Into the derke chambre, as stille as ston, Toward the bed gan softly to gon, 355
So confus that he nyste what to seye,
For verray wo his wit was neigh aweye.

And with his chiere and lokyng al totorn,
For sorwe of this, and with his armes folden,

He stood this woful Troilus byforn, 360
And on his pitous face he gan byholden.
But, Lord, so ofte gan his herte colden, Seyng his frend in wo, whos hevynesse His herte slough, as thoughte hym, for destresse.

This woful wight, this Troilus, that felte 365

His frend Pandare ycomen hym to se, Gan as the snow ayeyn the sonne melte,
For which this sorwful Pandare, of pitee, Gan for to wepe as tendrelliche as he,
And specheles thus ben thise ilke tweve, 370
That neither myghte o word for sorwe seye

But at the laste this woful Troilus, Neigh ded for smert gan bresten out to rore,

And with a sorwful noise he seyde thus,
Among huse sobbes and his sikes sore 375
"Lo, Pandare, I am ded, withouten more Hastow nat herd at parlement," he seyde,
"For Antenor how lost is my Criseyde"

This Pandarus, ful ded and pale of hewe, Ful pitously answerde and seyde, "Yis! 380
As wisly were it fals as it is trewe, That I have herd, and woot al how it is O mercy, God, who wolde have trowed
this?"

Who wolde have wend that in so litel a throwe

Fortuneoure joie wold han overthrowe?

"For in this world ther is no creature, 386
As to my dom, that ever saw ruyn Straunger than this, thorough cas or avent-
ture

But who may al eschue, or al devyne Swich is this world! forthi I thus dif-
fyne, 390

Ne trust no wight to fynden in Fortune Ay propretee, hire yiftes ben comune

"But telle me thus, whi thow art now so mad To sorwen thus? Whi listow in this wise, Syn thi desir al holly hastow had, 395
So that, by right, it oughte ynough suffice?
But I, that never felte in my seryse
A frendly cheere, or loking of an eye, Lat me thus wepe and wailen til I deye

"And over al this, as thow wel woost thiselve, 400

This town is ful of ladys al aboute,
And, to my doom, fairer than swiche
twelve

As evere she was, shal I fynde in som route,

Yee, on or two, withouten any doute Forthi be glad, myn owen deere brother!
If she be lost, we shal recovere an other 406

"What! God forbede alwey that ech ples-
aunce

In o thyng were, and in non other wight!
If oon kan synge, an other kan wel daunce,
If this be goodly, she is glad and light, 410
And this is fair, and that can good aright Ech for his vertu holden is for deere, Both heroner and faucoun for ryvere

"And ek, as writ Zanzis, that was ful wys,
'The newe love out chaceth ofte the
olde,' 415

And upon newe cas lith newe avys Thenk ek, thi lif to saven artow holde Swich fir, by proces, shal of kynde colde,
For syn it is but casuel plesaunce, Som cas shal putte it out of remem-
braunce 420

"For also seur as day comth after nyght,
The newe love, labour, or oother wo,
Or elles selde seynge of a wight, Don olde affecciouns alle over-go And, for thi part, thow shalt have oon of
tho 425

T'abregge with thi bittre peynes smerte, Absence of hire shal dryve hire out of
herte"

These wordes seyde he for the nones
alle,

To help his frend, lest he for sorwe deyde,
For douteles, to don his wo to falle, 430 He roughte nought what unthrift that he
seyde

But Troilus, that neigh for sorwe deyde, Took litel heede of al that evere he mente, Oon ere it herde, at tothir out it wente

But at the laste he answerde, and seyde,
"Frend, 435

This lechecraft, or heeled thus to be,
Were wel sitting, if that I were a fend,
To traysen hire that trewe is unto me!
I pray God lat this conseil nevere ythe, But do me rather sterve anon-right
here, 440

Er I thus do as thow me woldest leere!

"She that I serve, iwis, what so thow seye,
To whom myn herte enhabit is by right, Shal han me holly hires til that I deye For, Pandarus, syn I have trouthe hire
 hight, 445
I wol nat ben untrewre for no wight,
But as hire man I wol ay lyve and sterve,
And nevere other creature serve

"And ther thow seist thow shalt as faire
 fynde
As she, lat be, make no comparisoun 450
To creature yformed here by kynde!
O leve Pandare, in conclusoun,
I wol nat ben of thyn opynoun, Touchyng al this, for which I the biseche, So hold thi pees, thow sleest me with thi
 speche! 455

"Thow biddest me I shulde love another Al fresshly newe, and lat Criseyde go!
It lith nat in my power, leeve brother,
And though I myght, I wolde nat do so But kanstow playen raket, to and fro, 460 Nettle in, dok out, now this, now that, Pandare,
Now foule falle hire for thi wo that care!

"Thow farest ek by me, thow Pandarus, As he that, whan a wight is wo bygon, He cometh to hym a paas, and seith right
 thus, 465
'Thynk nat on smert, and thow shalt fele
 non'
Thow moost me first transmewen in a ston,
And reve me my passiones alle, Er thow so lightly do my wo to falle

"The deth may wel out of my brest departate 470
The lif, so longe may this sorwe myne,
But fro my soule shal Criseydes darte Out nevere mo, but down with Prosper-
 pyne,
Whan I am ded, I wol go wone in pyne,
And ther I wol eternaly compleyne 475 My wo, and how that twynned be we
 tweyne

"Thow hast here made an argument, for
 fyn,
How that it sholde a lasse peyne be

Criseyde to forgon, for she was myn,
And lyved in ese and in felcite 480
Whi habbestow, that seydest thus to me That 'hym is wors that is fro wele ythrowe, Than he hadde erst noon of that wele
 yknowe?'

"But telle me now, syn that the thynketh so light
To changen so in love ay to and fro, 485
Whi hastow nat don bisily th. myght
To chaungen hire that doth the al thi wo?
Why nyltow lete hire fro thyn herte go?
Whi nyltow love an other lady swete,
That may thyn herte setten in quete? 490

"If thou hast had in love ay yet mys-
 chaunce,
And kanst it not out of thyn herte dryve,
I, that levede in lust and in plesaunce
With here, as muche as creature on lyve, How sholde I that foryete, and that so
 blyve? 495
O, where hastow ben hid so longe in muwe,
That kanst so wel and formaly arguwe?

"Nay, God wot, nought worth is al thi red,
For which, for what that evere may by-
 falle,
Withouten wordes mo, I wol be ded 500
O deth, that endere art of sorwes alle,
Com now, syn I so ofte after the calle,
For sely is that deth, soth for to seyne,
That, ofte ycleped, cometh and endeth
 peyne

"Wel wot I, whil my lyf was in quyete, 505 Er thow me slowe, I wolde have yeven hire,
But now thi comynge is to me so swete
That in this world I nothing so desire O deth, syn with this sorwe I am a-fyre, Thow other do me anocon in teers drenche, 510
Or with thi colde strok myn hete quenche

"Syn that thou sleest so fele in sondry
 wyse
Ayens hire wl, unpreyed, day and nyght,
Do me at my requeste this servise Delyvere now the world, so dostow
 right, 515
Of me, that am the wofulleste wyght

That evere was, for tyme is that I sterve, Syn in this world of right nought may I
serve "

This Troilus in teris gan distille,
As licour out of a lumbic ful faste, 520
And Pandarus gan holde his tunge stille,
And to the ground his eyen doun he caste
But natheles, thus thought he at the laste,
"What! parde, rather than my felawe deye, Yet shal I somewhat more unto hym
seye " 525

And seyde "Frend, syn thow hast swych distresse,

And syn thee list myn arguments to
blame,

Why nylt thyselfen helpen don redresse,
And with thy manhod letten al this grame?
Go ravisshe here ne kanstow nat for
shame! 530

And other lat here out of towne fare,
Or hold here stille, and leve thi nyce fare

"Artow in Troie, and hast non hardyment To take a woman which that loveth the,
And wolde hireselven ben of thyn assent?
Now is nat this a nyce vanitee? 536 Ris up anon, and lat this wepyng be,
And kuth thow art a man, for in this houre
I wol ben ded, or she shal bleven oure "

To this answerde hym Troilus ful softe, 540
And seyde, "Parde, leve brother deere, Al this have I myself yet thought ful ofte,
And more thyng than thow devycest here But whi this thyng is laft, thow shalt wel
here,

And whan thow me hast yeve an audience, 545
Therafter maystow telle al thi sentence

"First, syn thow woost this town hath al this werre

For ravysshyng of wommen so by myght,
It sholde nought be suffred me to erre,
As it stant now, ne don so gret unright 550
I sholde han also blame of every wight,
My fadres graunt if that I so withstoode, Syn she is chaunged for the townes goode

"I have ek thought, so it were hire assent,

To ave hire at my fader, of his grace, 555
Than thynke I, thus were hire accusement, Syn wel I woot I may hire nought purchace For syn my fader, in so heigh a place
As parlement, hath hire eschaunge enseled, He nyl for me his lettre be repeled 560

"Yet drede I moost hire herte to perturbe With violence, if I do swich a game,
For if I wolde it openly desturbe,
It mooste be disclaundre to hire name And me were levere ded than hire dif-
fame, 565

As nolde God but if I sholde have Hire honour levere than my lif to save!

"Thus am I lost, for aught that I kan see For certeyn is, syn that I am hire knyght, I mooste hire honour levere han than
me 570

In every cas, as loveure ought of right
Thus am I with desir and reson twight Desur for to destourben hire me redeth,
And reson nyl nat, so myn herte dredeth "

Thus wepyng that he koude nevere
cesse, 575
He seyde, "Allas! how shal I, wrecche
fare?"

For wel fele I alwey my love encesse,
And hope is lasse and lasse alway, Pandare Encessen ek the causes of my care
So wellaway, whi nyl myn herte breste?
For, as in love, ther is but litel reste " 581

Pandare answerde, "Frend, thow maist,
for me,

Don as the list, but hadde ich it so hote,
And thyn estat, she sholde go with me, Though al this town cride on this thyng by note 585

I nolde sette at al that noys a grotel For whan men han wel cryd, than wol they rowne,
Ek wonder last but nyne nyght nevere in towne

"Devyne not in resoun ay so depe Ne cortaisyly, but help thysel anon 590 Bet is that other than thyselfen wepe, And namely, syn ye two ben al on Ris up, for by myn hed, she shal not goon!

And rather be in blame a lite ffounde Than sterve here as a gnat, withouten
wounde 595

"It is no shame unto yow ne no vice,
Hire to witholden that ye love moost Peraunter, she myghte holde the for nyce,
To late hire go thus to the Grekis oost Think ek Fortune, as wel thiselven
woost, 600
Helpeth hardy man to his enprise,
And weyveth wrecches for hire cowardise

"And though thy lady wolde a lite hire
greve,
Thow shalt thyself thi pees hereafter make,
But as for me, certeyn, I kan nat leve 605 That she wolde it as now for yvel take Whi sholde thanne of ferd thyn herte quake?
Think ek how Paris hath, that is thi
brother,
A love, and whi shaltow nat have another?"

"And Troilus, o thyng I dar the swere, 610
That if Criseyde, which that is thi lief, Now loveth me as wel as thow dost here,
God help me so, she nyl nat take a-grief, Theigh thow do boote anon in this mes-chief
And if she wilneth fro the for to passe, 615 Thanne is she fals, so love hire wel the lasse

"Forthi tak herte, and thynk right as a
knyght,
Thorough love is broken al day every lawe Kith now somewhat thi corage and thi
myght,
Have mercy on thiself, for any awe 620 Lat nat this wrecched wo thyn herte gnawe,
But manly sette the world on six and
sevene,
And if thow deye a martyr, go to hevене!"

"I wol myself ben with the at this dede, Theigh ich and al my kyn, upon a stownde, 625
Shulle in a strete as dogges ligen dede, Thorough-girt with many a wid and blyd
wownde,

In every cas I wol a frend be ffounde
And if the list here sterven as a wrecche, Adieu, the devel spede hym that it
recche!" 630

This Troilus gan with the wordes quyken And seyde, "Frend, graunt mercy, and assente
But certeynly thow maist nat so me priken Ne peyne non ne may me so tormente,
That, for no cas, it is nat myn entente, 635
At shorte wordes, though I deyen sholde, To ravysse hire, but if hireself it wolde!"

"Whi, so mene I," quod Pandarus, "al this day
But telle me thanne, hastow hire wil assayed,
That sorwest thus?" And he answerde hym, "Nay" 640
"Wherof artow," quod Pandare, "thanne amayed,
That nost nat that she wol ben yvele ap-payed
To ravysse hire, syn thow hast nought ben there,
But if that Jove told it in thyn ere?"

"Forthi ris up, as nought ne were, anon, 645 And wassh thi face, and to the kyng thow
wende,
Or he may wondren whider thow art goon Thow most with wisdom hym and othere blende,
Or, upon cas, he may after the sende, Er thow be war, and shortly, brother
deere, 650
Be glad, and lat me werke in this matere

"For I shal shape it so, that sikerly Thow shalt this nyght som tyme, in som
manere,
Come speken with thi lady pryvely And by hire wordes ek, and by hire
cheere, 655
Thow shalt ful sone aperceyve and wel
here
Al hire entente, and of this cas the beste
And far now wel, for in this point I reste"
The swifte Fame, which that false thynges Egal reporteth lik the thynges trewe, 660

Was thoroughout Troie yfled with preste wynges

Fro man to man, and made this tale al
newe,

How Calkas doughter, with hire brighte
hewe,

At parlement, withouten wordes more,
Ygraunted was in chaunge of Antenore 665

The whiche tale anon-right as Criseyde Hadde herd, she, which that of hire fader roughte,

As in this cas, right nought, ne whan he
deyde,

Ful busily to Jupiter bisoughte Yeve hem meschaunce that this treis
broughte 670

But shortly, lest these tales sothe were,
She dorst at no wight asken it, for fere

As she that hadde hire herte and al hire
mynde

On Troilus iset so wonder faste, That al this world ne myghte hire love un-
bynde, 675

Ne Troilus out of hire herte caste, She wol ben his, while that hire lif may
laste

And thus she brenneth both in love and
drede,

So that she nyste what was best to reede

But as men seen in towne, and al
aboute, 680

That women usen frendes to visite,
So to Criseyde of women com a route,
For pitous jone, and wenden hire delite,
And with hire tales, deere ynough a myte, These women, which that in the cite
dwelle, 685

They sette hem down, and seyde as I shall
telle

Quod first that oon, "I am glad, trewely, Bycause of yow, that shal youre fader see" Another seyde, "Ywis, so nam nat I,
For al to litel hath she with us be" 690 Quod tho the thridde, "I hope, ywis, that
she

Shal bryngen us the pees on every syde, That, whan she goth, almyghty God hire gide!"

Tho wordes and tho wommanysse
thynges,

She herde hem right as though she thennes
were, 695

For, God it woot, hire herte on othir thyng
is

Although the body sat among hem there, Hire advertence is alwey elleswhere,
For Troilus ful faste hire soule soughte, Withouten wold, on hym alwey she
thoughte 700

These women, that thus wenden hire to
plese,

Aboute naught gonne alle hire tales spende Swich vanyte ne kan don hire non ese,
As she that al this mene while brende 704
Of other passoun than that they wende,
So that she felte almost hire herte dye
For wo and wery of that compaignie

For which no lenger myghte she restreyn Hir teeris, so they gonnen up to welle,
That yaven signes of the bittre peyne 710
In which hir spirit was, and moste dwelle, Remembryng hir, fro heven into which
helle

She fallen was, syn she forgoth the syghte
Of Troilus, and sorrowfully she sighte

And thilke foolles sittynge hire aboute 715 Wenden that she wepte and siked sore Bycause that she sholde out of that route Departe, and nevere pleye with hem more And they that hadde yknowen hire of yore

Seigh hire so wepe, and thoughte it kvnde-
nesse, 720
And ech of hem wepte eke for hire destresse

And busily they gonnen hire comforten Of thyng, God woot, on which she litel
thoughte,

And with hire tales wenden hire disporten,
And to be glad they often hire bysoughte But swich an ese therwith they hire
wroughte, 726

Right as a man is esed for to feele, For ache of hed, to clawen hym on his heele!

But after al this nyce vanyte

They toke hire leve, and hom they wenten
alle 730

Criseyde, ful of sorweful pite,
Into hire chambre up went out of the halle,
And on hire bed she gan for ded to falle,
In purpos nevere thennes for to rise,
And thus she wroughte, as I shal yow
devyse 735

Hire ownded heer, that sonnyssh was of
hewe,
She rente, and ek hire fyngeres longe and
smale
She wrong ful ofte, and bad God on hire
rewe,
And with the deth to doon boote on hire bale Hire hewe, whilom bright, that tho was pale, 740
Bar witnesse of hire wo and hire constreynthe,
And thus she spak, sobbyng in hire compleynte

"Allas!" quod she, "out of this regioun
I, woful wrecche and infortuned wight,
And born in corsed constellacioun, 745 Moot goon, and thus departen fro my
knyght

Wo worth, allas! that ilke dayes light On which I saugh hym first with eyen
tweyne,
That causeth me, and ich hym, al this
peyne!"

Therwith the teis from hire eyen two 750
Down fille, as shour in Aperil ful swithe, Hire white brest she bet, and for the wo
After the deth she cryed a thousand sithe, Syn he that wont hire wo was for to lithe, She moot forgon, for which disaven-
ture 755
She held hireself a forlost creature

She seyde, "How shal he don, and ich also?
How sholde I lyve, if that I from hym
twynne?"

O deere herte eke, that I love so,
Who shal that sorwe slen that ye ben
inne? 760

O Calkas, fader, thyn be al this synne!
O moder myn, that cleped were Argyve,

Wo worth that day that thow me bere on
lyve!

"To what fyn sholde I lyve and sorwen
thus?"

How sholde a fissh withouten water dure?
What is Criseyde worth, from Troilus? 766
How sholde a plaunte or lyves creature Lyve withouten his kynde noriture?
For which ful ofte a by-word here I seye,
That 'routeles moot grene soone deye' 770

"I shal doon thus, syn neither swerd ne darte

Dar I noon handle, for the crueltee, That ilke day that I from yow departe, If sorwe of that ny nat my bane be, Thanne shal no mete or drynke come in
me 775

Til I my soule out of my breste unshethe,
And thus myselven wol I don to deth

"And, Troilus, my clothes everychon Shul Blake ben in tokenyng, herte swete,
That I am as out of this world agon, 780
That wont was yow to setten in quiete,
And of myn ordre, ay til deth me mete,
The observance evere, in youre absence, Shal sorwe ben, compleynt, and abstynence

"Myn herte and ek the woful goost ther-
inne 785

Byquethe I, with youre spirit to compleyne Eternaly, for they shal nevere twynne For though in erthe ytwynned be we
tweyne,

Yet in the feld of pite, out of peyne,
That highte Elisos, shal we ben yfeere,
As Orpheus with Erudice, his fere 791

"Thus, herte myn, for Antenor, allas!
I soone shal be chaunged, as I wene But how shul ye don in this sorwful
cas,

How shal youre tendre herte this sus-
tene? 795

But, herte myn, foryete this sorwe and
tene,

And me also, for, sothly for to seye,
So ye wel fare, I recche naught to deye "

How myghte it evere yred ben or ysonge,

The pleynte that she made in hire de-
stresse? 800

I not, but, as for me, my litel tonge,
If I discryven wolde hire hevynesse,
It sholde make hire sorwe seme lesse Than that it was, and childisshly deface Hire heigh compleynte, and therefore ich it pace 805

Pandare, which that sent from Troilus Was to Criseyde — as ye han herd de-
vyse

That for the beste it was accorded thus,
And he ful glad to doon hym that
servyse —

Unto Criseyde, in a ful secree wise, 810
Ther as she lay in torment and in rage,
Com hire to telle al hoolly his message,

And fond that she hireselven gan to trete Ful pitously, for with hire saite teris Hire brest, hire face, ybathed was ful
wete 815

The myghty tresses of hire sonnysshe
heeris,

Unbroiden, hangen al aboute hire eeris,
Which yaf hym verray signal of martire Of deth, which that hire herte gan desire

Whan she hym saugh, she gan for sorwe
anon 820

Hire tery face atwixe hire armes hude,
For which thus Pandare is so wo-bygon That in the hous he myghte unnethe
abyde,

As he that pite felt on every syde For if Criseyde hadde erst compleyned
soore, 825

Tho gan she pleyne a thousand tymes
more

And in hire aspre pleynte thus she seyde “Pandare first of joies mo than two Was cause causyng unto me, Criseyde, That now transmewed ben in cruel wo 830
Wher shal I seye to yow welcom or no,
That alderfirst me broughte unto servyse Of love, allas! that endeth in swich wise?”

“Endeth thanne love in wo? Ye, or men leth! 834

And allas worldly blisse, as thynketh me

The ende of blisse ay sorwe it occupieth, And whoso troweth nat that it so be,
Lat hym upon me, woful wrecche, ysee, That myself hate, and ay my burthe acorse,

Felyng alwey, fro wikke I go to worse 840

“Whoso me seeth, he seeth sorwe al atonys,

Peyne, torment, pleynte, wo, distresse!
Out of my woful body harm ther noon is,
As angwisch, langour, cruel bitternesse, Anoy, smert, drede, fury, and ek sik-
nesse 845

I trowe, ywys, from hevene teeris reyne
For pite of myn aspre and cruel peyne ”

“And thow, my suster, ful of discomfourt,” Quod Pandarus, “what thynkestow to do?
Whi ne hastow to thyselven som resport?
Whi wiltow thus thyselif, allas, fordo? 851 Leaf al this werk, and tak now heede to That I shal seyn, and herkne of good en-
tente

This, which by me thi Troilus the sente ”

Tornede hire tho Criseyde, a wo makynge
So gret that it a deth was for to see 856 “Allas!” quod she, “what wordes may ye
brynge?”

What wol my deere herte seyn to me,
Which that I drede nevere mo to see?
Wol he han pleynte or teris, er I wende? 860
I have ynough, if he thereafter sende!”

She was right swich to seen in hire visage
As is that wight that men on beere byndc, Hire face, lik of Paradys the ymage, Hire face, in another kynde 865 The pleye, the laughter, men was wont to
fynde

In hire, and ek hire joies everichone, Ben fled, and thus lith now Criseyde allone

Aboute hire eyen two a purple ryng Bytrent, in sothfast tokenyng of hire
peyne, 870

That to biholde it was a dedly thyng,
For which Pandare myghte nat restreyn-
The teeris from his eighen for to reyne
But natheles, as he best myghte, he seyde From Troilus thise wordes to Criseyde 875

"Lo, nece, I trowe wel ye han herd al how The kyng with othere lordes, for the beste, Hath mad eschauge of Antenor and yow, That cause is of this sorwe and this un-
reste

But how this cas dooth Troilus moleste, 880
That may non erthely mannes tonge seye,
For verray wo his wit is al aweye

"For which we han so sorwed, he and I,
That into litel bothe it hadde us slawe,
But thorough my conseyl this day, finally,
He somewhat is fro wepyng now with-
drawe, 886

And semeth me that he desireth fawe
With yow to ben al nyght, for to devyse Remede in this, if ther were any wyse

"This, short and pleyn, th'effect of my message, 890

As ferforth as my wit kan comprehende,
For ye, that ben of torment in swich rage,
May to no long prologe as now entende
And hereupon ye may answere hym sende,
And, for the love of God, my nece deere,
So lef this wo er Troilus be here!" 896

"Gret is my wo," quod she, and sighte
soore,

As she that feleth dedly sharp distresse,
"But yit to me his sorwe is muchel more,
That love hym bet than he hymself, I
gesse 900

Allas! for me hath he swich hevynesse?
Kan he for me so pitously compleyne?
Iwis, this sorwe doubleth al my peyne

"Grevous to me, God woot, is for to twyne,"

Quod she, "but yet it harder is to me 905
To sen that sorwe which that he is mne, For wel woot I it wol my bane be,
And deye I wol in certeyn," tho quod she,
"But bid hym come, er deth, that thus me threteth,

Dryve out that goost which in myn herte beteth " 910

These wordes sey'd, she on hire armes two Fil gruf, and gan to wepen pitously Quod Pandarus, 'Allas! whi do ye so, Syn wel ye woot the tyme is faste by,

That he shal come? Aris up hastily, 915
That he yow nat bywopen thus ne fynde, But ye wole have hym wood out of his
mynde

"For wiste he that ye ferde in this manere
He wolde hymselfen sie, and if I wende To han this fare, he sholde nat come
here 920

For al the good that Pram may dispende
For to what fyn he wolde anon pretende,
That knowe ich wel, and forth yet I seye,
So lef this sorwe, or platly he wol deye

"And shapeth yow his sorwe for t'abregge, And nought encesse, leeve nece swete! 925
Beth rather to hym cause of flat than egge,
And with som wisdom ye his sorwe bete
What helpeth it to wepen ful a strete,
Or though ye bothe in salte teeris dreyn'te?
Bet is a tyme of cure ay than of pleynte 931

"I mene thus whan ich hym hider brynge, Syn ye be wise, and bothe of oon assent,
So shapeth how destourbe youre goyng,
Or come ayeyn, soon after ye be went 935
Women ben wise in short avysement,
And lat sen how youre wit shal now availle,
And what that I may helpe, it shal nat
faile "

"Go," quod Criseyde, "and uncle, trewely, I shal don al my myght me to restreyn 940
From wepyng in his sighte, and bisly, Hym for to glade I shal don al my peyne,
And in myn herte seken every veyne
If to this sore ther may be fonden salve,
It shal nat lakke, certeyn, on my halve " 945

Goth Pandarus, and Troilus he soughte, Til in a temple he fond hym al allone,
As he that of his lif no lenger roughte,
But to the pitouse goddes everichone Ful tendrely he preyed, and made his
mone, 950

To doon hym sone out of this world to pace,
For wel he thoughte ther was non other
grace

And shortly, al the sothe for to seye,
He was so fallen in desper that day,

That outrely he shop hym for to deve 955
 For right thus was his argument alway
 He seyde, he nas but lorn, so weylaway!
 "For al that comth, comth by necessitee Thus to ben lorn, it is my destinee

"For certeynly, thus wot I wel," he
 seyde, 960

"That forsight of divine purveyaunce Hath seyn alwey me to forgon Criseyde, Syn God seeth every thyng, out of dout-
 aunce,
 And hem disponyth, thorough his ordi-
 naunce,
 In hure merites sothly for to be, 965
 As they shul comen by predestyne

"But natheles, allas! whom shal I leeve"
 For ther ben grete clerkes many oon,
 That destyne thorough argumentes preve, And som men seyn that, nedely, ther is
 noon, 970
 But that fre chois is yeven us everychon
 O, weylaway! so sleighe arn clerles olde,
 That I not whos opynyoun I may holde

"For som men seyn, if God seth al biforn, Ne God may nat deceyved ben, parde, Than moot it fallen, theigh men hadde it
 sworn, 976
 That purveyaunce hath seyn before to be Wherefore I sey, that from eterne if he Hath wist byforn oure thought ek as oure
 dede,
 We han no fre chois, as thise clerkes rede

"For other thought, nor other dede
 also, 981
 Myghte nevere ben, but swich as purvey-
 aunce,

Which may nat ben deceyved nevere mo,
 Hath feled byforn, withouten ignoraunce
 For yf ther myghte ben a variaunce 985
 To writhen out fro Goddis purveyinge, Ther nere no prescience of thyng com-
 ynge,

"But it were rather an opynyoun Uncerteyn, and no stedfast forseynge
 And certes, that were an abusoun, 990 That God sholde han no parfit cler wyt-
 ynge

More than we men that han doutous wenynges
 But swich an errour upon God to gesse Were fals and foul, and wikked corednesse

"Ek this is an opynyoun of some 995 That han hire top ful heighe and smothe vshore

They seyn right thus, that thyng is nat to
 come

For that the prescience hath seyn byfore That it shal come, but they seyn that therfore

That it shal come, therfore the purvey-
 aunce 1000
 Woot it bytorn, withouten ignoraunce,

"And in this manere this necessite Retorneth in his part contrarie agayn
 For nedfully byhoveth it nat to bee
 That thilke thynges fallen in certayn 1005 That ben purveyed, but nedly, as they
 sayn, Byhoveth it that thynges whiche that falle,
 That they in certayn ben purveyed alle

"I mene as though I laboured me in this,
 To enqueren which thyng cause of which thyng be 1010
 As whether that the prescience of God is The certeyn cause of the necessite Of thynges that to comen ben, parde,
 Or if necessite of thyng comynges Be cause certeyn of the purveyinge 1015

"But now n'enforce I me nat in shewynges How the ordre of causes stant, but wel
 woot I

That it byhoveth that the byfallynge
 Of thynges wiste byforen certeynly Be necessarie, al seme it nat therby 1020 That prescience put fallynge necessaire To thyng to come, al falle it foule or faire.

"For if ther sitte a man yond on a see,
 Than by necessite bihoveth it That, certes, thyn opynyoun sooth be, 1025 That wenest or conjectest that he sit
 And further over now ayeynward yit, Lo, right so is it of the part contrarie, As thus, — nowe herkne, for I wol nat tarié

"I sey, that if the opynoun of the 1030
 Be soth, for that he sitte, than sey I this,
 That he mot siten by necessite, And thus necessite in eyther is For in hym nede of sittynge is, ywys, And in the nede of soth, and thus, for-sothe, 1035
 There mot necessite ben in yow bothe

"But thow mayst seyn, the man sit nat therefore,
 That thyn opynoun of his sittynge soth
 is,
 But rather, for the man sit ther byfore,
 Therefore is thyn opynoun soth, ywis 1040
 And I seye, though the cause of soth of this Comth of his sittynge, yet necessite Is entrechaunged both in hym and the

"Thus in this same wise, out of doutaunce,
 I may wel maken, as it semeth me, 1045
 My resonyng of Goddes purveyaunce And of the thynges that to comen be,
 By which resoun men may wel yse
 That thilke thynges that in erthe falle,
 That by necessite they comen alle 1050

"For although that, for thyng shal come,
 ywys,
 Therefore is it purveyed, certeynly, Nat that it comth for it purveyed is,
 Yet natheles, bihoveth it nedfully,
 That thing to come be purveyed, trewely,
 Or elles, thynges that purveyed be, 1055
 That they bitiden by necessite

"And this suffiseth right ynough, certeyn, For to destruye oure fre chois every del
 But now is this abusioun, to seyn 1060
 That fallynge of the thynges temporel Is cause of Goddes prescience eternal Now trewely, that is a fals sentence, That thyng to come sholde cause his prescience

"What myght I wene, and I hadde swich a thought, 1065
 But that God purveyeth thyng that is to
 come
 For that it is to come, and ellis nought?
 So myghte I wene that thynges alle and
 some,

That whilom ben byfalle and overcome, Ben cause of thilke sovereyne purvey-
 aunce 1070
 That forwoot al withouten ignoraunce

"And over al this, yet sey I more herto, That right as whan I wot ther is a thyng, Iwys, that thyng moot nedfully be so, Ek right so, whan I woot a thyng
 comyng, 1075
 So mot it come, and thus the bifallyng
 Of thynges that ben wist bifore the tyde,
 They mowe nat ben eschued on no syde"

Thanne seyde he thus, "Almyghty Jove in
 trone,
 That woost of al this thyng the sothfast-
 nesse, 1080
 Rewe on my sorwe, and do me deyen sone, Or bryng Criseyde and me fro this des-
 tresse!"
 And whil he was in al this hevynesse, Disputyng with hymself in this materc, Com Pandare in, and seyde as ye may
 here 1085

"O myghty God," quod Pandarus, "in
 trone,
 I! who say evere a wis man faren so?
 Whi, Troilus, what thinkestow to doone?
 Hastow swich lust to ben thyn owen fo?
 What, parde, yet is nat Criseyde ago! 1090 Whi list the so thyselv fordoon for drede, That in thyn hed thyne eyen semen dede?"

"Hastow nat lyved many a yer byforn Withouten hire, and ferd ful wel at ese?
 Artow for hire and for noon other born?
 Hath Kynde the wrought al only hire to plesse? 1095
 Lat be, and thyngk right thus in thi disese
 That, in the dees right as ther faller
 chaunces,
 Right so in love ther come and gon plesaunces

"And yet this is my wonder most of alle, 1100 Whi thow thus sorwest, syn thow nost nat yt, Touchyng hire goyng, how that it shal
 falle,
 Ne yif she kan hireself destourben it

Thow hast nat vet assayed al hire wtt
 A man may al bytyme his nekke beede 1103 Whan it shal of, and sorwen at the nede

“Forthi tak hede of that I shal the seve
 I have with hire vspoke, and longe ybe,
 So as accorded was bitwixe us tweye, And evere mo me thynketh thus, that
 she 1110

Hath somwhat in hire hertes privete, Wherwith she kan, if I shal right arede, Destourbe al this of which thow art in
 drede

“For which my counsel is, whan it is
 nyght,

Thow to hire go, and make of this an
 ende, 1115

And blisful Juno, thorough hire grete myght, Shal, as I hope, hire grace unto us sende Myn herte seyth, ‘Certeyn, she shal nat
 wende’

And forthi put thyn herte a while in reste, And hold thi purpos, for it is the
 beste” 1120

This Troilus answerd, and sighte soore “Thow seist right wel, and I wol don right
 so”

And what hym liste, he sevede unto it more And whan that it was tyme for to go, Ful pryvely hymself, withouten mo, 1125 Unto hire com, as he was wont to doone,
 And how they wroughte, I shal yow tellen
 soone

Soth is, that whan they gonnen first to mete,

So gan the peyne hire hertes for to twiste,
 That neyther of hem other myghte grete,
 But hem in armes toke, and after kiste 1131

The lasse woful of hem bothe nyste Wher that he was, ne myghte o word out
 brynge,

As I seyde erst, for wo and for sobbynge

Tho woful teeris that they leten falle 1135
 As bittre weren, out of teris kynde,

For peyne, as is ligne aloes or galle
 So bittre teeris weep nought, as I fynde, The woful Mirra thorough the bark and
 rynde,

That in this world ther nys so hard an
 herte, 1140
 That nolde han rewed on hire peynes
 smerte

But whan hire wofulle weri goostes tweyne Retourned hem ther as hem oughte to
 dwelle,

And that somwhat to wayken gan the
 peyne

By lengthe of pleynte, and ebben gan the welle 1145

Of hire teeris, and the herte unswelle,
 With broken vois, al hoors forshright,

Criseyde
 To Troilus these ilke wordes seyde

‘O Jove, I deye, and mercy I beseche!
 Help, Troilus!’ and therewithal hire face Upon his brest she leyde, and loste
 speche, 1151

Hire woful spirit from his propre place, Right with the word, alwey o poynt to pace

And thus she lith with hewes pale and
 grene,

That whilom fressh and fairest was to
 sene 1155

This Troilus, that on hire gan biholde, Clepyng hire name, — and she lay as for
 ded,

Withoute answer, and felte hire lymes
 colde,

Hire eyen throwen upward to hire hed, — This sorwful man kan now noon other red, 1160

But ofte tyme hire colde mowth he kiste Wher hym was wo, God and hymself it
 wiste!

He rist hym up, and long streight he hire
 leyde,

For signe of lif, for aught he kan or
 may,

Kan he non fynde in nothyng on Criseyde, 1165

For which his song ful ofte is “weylaway!”
 But whan he saugh that specheles she lay,
 With sorweful vois, and herte of blisse al
 bare,

He seyde how she was fro this world yfare

So after that he longe hadde hire com-pleynd, 1170
 His hondes wrong, and seyde that was to
 seye,
 And with his teeris salt hire brest byreyned,
 He gan tho teeris wypen of ful dreye,
 And pitously gan for the soule preye, And seyde, "O Lord, that set art in thi
 trone, 1175
 Rewe ek on me, for I shal folwe hire
 sone!"

She cold was, and withouten sentement, For aught he woot, for breth ne felte he
 non,
 And this was hym a pregnant argument That she was forth out of this world
 agon 1180
 And whan he say ther was non other woon
 He gan hire lymes dresse in swich manere As men don hem that shal ben layd on
 beere

And after this, with sterne and cruel herte, His swerd anon out of his shethe he twigte, 1185
 Hymself to slen, how sore that hym smerte,
 So that his soule hire soule folwen myghte Ther as the doom of Mynos wolde it dighte, Syn Love and cruel Fortune it ne wolde, That in this world he lenger lyven
 sholde 1190

Than seyde he thus, fulfilled of heigh des-dayn

"O cruel Jove, and thow, Fortune adverse, This al and som, that falsly have ye
 slayn

Criseyde, and syn ye may do me no werse, Fy on youre myght and werkes so dyverse! 1195

Thus cowardly ye shul me nevere wynne, Ther shal no deth me fro my lady twynne

"For I this world, syn ye have slayn hire
 thus,

Wol lete, and folwe hire spirit low or hye Shal nevere love seyn that Troilus 1200
 Dar nat, for fere, with his lady dye,
 For, certeyn, I wol beere hire compaignie
 But syn ye wol nat suffre us lyven here, Yet suffreth that oure soules ben yfere

"And thow, cite, which that I leve in wo, 1205
 And thow, Priam, and bretheren al yfeere
 And thow, my moder, farwel' for I go,
 And Atropos, make redy thow my beere
 And thow, Criseyde, o swete herte deere, Receyve now my spirit!" wolde he
 seye, 1210
 With swera at herte, al redy for to deye

But, as God wolde, of swough therwith sh'abreyde,
 And gan to sike, and "Troilus" she cride,
 And he answerde, "Lady myn, Criseyde, Lyve ye yet?" and leet his swerd down glide 1215

"Ye, herte myn, that thonked be Cipride!"
 Quod she, and therewithal she soore syghte,
 And he bigan to glade hire as he myghte,

Took hire in armes two, and kiste hire ofte,
 And hire to glade he did al his entente, 1220 For which hire goost, that flukered ay on lofte,

Into hire woful herte ayeyn it wente
 But at the laste, as that hire eye glente Asyde, anon she gan his swerd espie,
 As it lay bare, and gan for fere crye, 1225

And asked hym, whi he it hadde out drawe
 And Troilus anon the cause hire tolde, And how hymself therwith he wolde han
 slawe,

For which Criseyde upon hym gan biholde,
 And gan hym in hire armes faste folde, 1230 And seyde, "O mercy, God, lo, which a dede!"

Allas, how neigh we weren bothe dede!

"Than if I nadde spoken, as grace was, Ye wolde han slayn youreself anon?" quod
 she

"Yee, douteles", and she answerde, "Allas!
 For, by that ilke Lord that made me, 1236 I nolde a forlong way on lyve have be, After youre deth, to han ben crowned
 queene

Of al the lond the sonne on shyneth sheene

"But with this selve swerd, which that here 1240 Myselve I wolde han slawe," quod she tho.

'But hoo, for we han right ynough of this And lat us rise, and strenght to bedde go,
And there lat us speken of oure wo For, by the mortar which that I se brenne, 1245
Knowe I ful wel that day is nat far henne '

Whan they were in hire bed, in armes folde Naught was it lik tho nyghtes here-byforn
For pitously ech other gan byholde,
As there that hadden al hire blisse ylorne, Bywaylinge ay the day that they were born, 1251
Til at the laste this sorrowful wight, Criseyde, To Troilus thise ilke wordes seyde

"Lo, herte myn, wel woot ye this," quod
she,

"That if a wight alwey his wo com-
pleyne, 1255
And seketh nought how holpen for to be,
It nys but folie and encrees of peyne, And syn that here assembled be we tweyne
To fynde boote of wo that we ben inne,
It were al tyme soone to bygyne 1260

"I am a womman, as ful wel ye woot,
And as I am avysed sodeynly,
So wol I telle yow, whil it is hoot Me thynketh thus, that nouthur ye nor I Ought half this wo to maken, skilfully, 1265
For ther is art ynough for to redresse That yet is mys, and slen this hevynesse

"Soth is, the wo, the which that we ben
inne
For aught I woot, for nothyng ellis is But for the cause that we sholden
twyne 1270
Considered al, ther nys namore amys
But what is thanne a remede unto this,
But that we shape us soone for to meete?
This al and som, my deere herte sweete

"Now, that I shal wel bryngen it
aboute, 1275

To come ayeyn, soone after that I go, Therof am I no manere thyng in doute For, dredeles, withinne a wowke or two,
I shal ben here, and that it may be so
By alle right, and in a wordes fewe, 1280
I shal yow wel an heap of weyes shewe

For which I wol nat make long sermoun, For tyme ylost may nought recovered be,
But I wol gon to my conclusioun, And to the beste, in aught that I kan
see 1285
And, for the love of God, foryeve it me,
If I speke aught ayeyns youre hertes reste,
For trewely, I speke it for the beste,

"Makynge alwey a protestacioun, That now thise wordes, which that I shal
seye, 1290

Nis but to shewen yow my mocion
To fynde unto oure help the beste weye,
And taketh it non other wise, I preye
For in effect, what so ye me comaunde, That wol I don, for that is no demaunde 1295

"Now herketh this ye han wel under-
stonde,

My goyng graunted is by parlement
So ferforth that it may nat be withstonde For al this world, as by my jugement
And syn ther helpeth non avisement 1300
To letten it, lat it passe out of mynde,
And lat us shape a bettere wey to fynde

'The soth is this the twynnyng of us
tweyne

Wol us disese and cruelich ayoie, But hym byhoveth somtyme han a
peyne, 1305
That serveth Love, if that he wol have joye
And syn I shal no ferther out of Troie Than I may ride ayeyn on half a morwe, It oughte lesse causen us to sorwe,

"So as I shal not so ben hid in mewe, 1310 That day by day, myn owne herte deere, Syn wel ye woot that it is now a trewe, Ye shal ful wel al myn estat yheere
And er that trewe is doon, I shal ben heere, And thanne have ye both Antenore
ywonne 1315
And me also Beth glad now, if ye konne,

"And thenk right thus, 'Criseyde is now
agon

But what' she shal come hastiliche ayeyn!
And whanne, allas? By God, lo, right anon, Er dayes ten, this dar I sauffy seyn 1320

And than at erste shal we be so feyn,
So as we shal togideres evere dwelle, That al this world ne myghte oure blisse
telle

"I se that ofte tyme, there as we ben now,
'That for the beste, oure counseyl for to hide, 1325

Ye speke nat with me, nor I with yow
In fourtenyght, ne se yow go ne ride May ye naught ten dayes thanne abide,
For myn honour, in swich an aventure?
Iwys, ye mowen ellis lite endure! 1330

"Ye knowe ek how that al my kyn is
heere,

But if that onliche it my fader be,
And ek myn other thynge alle yfeere,
And nameliche, my deere herte, ye,
Whom that I nolde leven for to se 1335
For al this world, as wyd as it hath space, Or ellis se ich nevere Joves face!

"Whi trowe ye my fader in this wise Coveyeth so to se me, but for drede Lest in this town that folkes me despise 1340
Because of hym, for his unhappy dede?
What woot my fader what lif that I lede?
For if he wiste in Troie how wel I fare, Us neded for my wending nought to care

"Ye sen that every day ek, more and
more, 1340

Men trete of pees, and it supposid is That men the queene Eleyne shal restore,
And Grekis us restoren that is mys
So, though ther nere comfort non but this,
That men purposen pees on every syde, 1350 Ye may the bettre at ese of herte abyde

"For if that it be pees, myn herte deere,
The nature of the pees moot nedes dryve That men moost entrecomunen yfeere, And to and fro ek ride and gon as
blyve 1355

Alday as thukke as been fleen from an hyve,

And every wight han liberte to bleve
Whereas hym liste the bet, withouten leve

"And though so be that pees ther may be
non,

Yet hider, though ther nevere pees ne
were, 1360

I moste come, for whider sholde I gon,
Or how, meschaunce, sholde I dwelle there Among tho men of armes evere in feere?
For which, as wisly God my soule rede,
I kan nat sen wherof ye sholden drede 1365

"Have here another wey, if it so be That al this thyng ne may yow nat suffice
My fader, as ye knowen wel, parde, Is old, and elde is ful of coveytise, And I right now have founden al the gise, 1370

Withouten net, wherwith I shal hym hente
And herkeneth now, if that ye wol assente

"Lo, Troilus, men seyn that hard it is The wolf ful, and the wether hool to have,
This is to seyn, that men ful ofte, iwys, 1375 Mote spenden part the remenant for to
save

For ay with gold men may the herte grave
Of hym that set is upon coveytise,
And how I mene, I shal it yow devyse

"The moeble which that I have in this town 1380

Unto my fader shal I take, and seye,
That right for trust and for savacioun
It sent is from a frend of his or tweye,
The whiche frendes ferventliche hym
preye

To senden after more, and that in hie, 1385 Whil that this town stant thus in jupartie

"And that shal ben an huge quantite, — Thus shal I seyn, — but lest it folk espide,
This may be sent by no wight but by me
I shal ek shewen hym, yf pees bytyde, 1390
What frendes that ich have on every syde Towardes the court, to don the wrathe pace Of Priamus, and don hym stonde in grace

"So, what for o thyng and for other, swete, I shal hym so enchaunten with my sawes, 1395

That right in hevne his soule is, shal he meete

For al Appollo, or his clerkes lawes,
Or calkulyng, a vayleth nought thre hawes, Desir of gold shal so his soule blende,

That, as me lyst, I shal wel make an
ende 1400

" And yf he wolde ought by hys sort it preve, If that I lye in certayn I shal fonde Distorben hym, and plukke hym by the sleve,

Makyng his sort, and beren hym on
honde,

He hath not wel the goddes under-
stonde 1403

For goddes spcken in amphibologies,
And, for a sooth, they tellen twenty lyes

" Eke drede fond first goddes, I suppose, — Thus shal I seyn, — and that his coward
herte

Made hym amys the goddes text to glose, 1410

Whan he for fered out of Delphos sterte
And but I make hym soone to converte,
And don my red withinne a day or tweye,
I wol to yow oblige me to deye "

And troweliche, as writen wel I fynde, 1415 That al this thyng was seyde of good en-
tente,

And that hire herte trewe was and kynde Towardes hym, and spak right as she
mente,

And that she starf for wo neigh, whan she
wente,

And was in purpos evere to be trewe 1420 Thus writen they that of hire werkes
knewe

This Troilus, with herte and erys spradde, Herde al this thyng devysen to and fro,
And verrayliche him semed that he hadde
The selve wit, but yet to late hire go 1425
His herte mysforyaf hym evere mo
But fynaly, he gan his herte wreste To trusten hire, and took it for the beste

For which the grete furie of his penaunce Was queynt with hope, and therewith hem bitwene 1430

Rigan for joié th'amourouse daunce And as the briddes, whanne the sonne is shene,

Deliten in hire song in leves grene,
Right so the wordes that they spake yfeere

Delited hem, and made hire hertes
clere 1435

But natheles, the wending of Criseyde,
For al this world, may nat out of his mynde
For which ful ofte he pitously hire preyde That of hire heste he myghte hire trewe
fynde,

And seyde hire, " Certes, if ye be un-
kynde, 1440

And but ye come at day set into Troye, Ne shal I nevere have hele, honour, ne joye

" For also soth as sonne uprist o-morwe,
And God, so wisly thow me, woful wrecche,
To reste bryng out of this cruel sorwe, 1445
I wol myselfen sle if that ye drecche!
But of my deeth though litel be to recche,
Yet, er that ye me causen so to smerte, Dwelle rather here, myn owen swete herte.

" For trewely, myn owne lady deere, 1450 Tho sleghtes yet that I have herd yow stere

Ful shaply ben to faylen alle yfeere For thus men seyth, ' that on thenketh the
beere,

But al another thenketh his ledere ' Youre syre is wys, and seyde is, out or
drede 1455

' Men may the wise atrenne, and naught
atrede '

" It is ful hard to halten unespied Byfore a crepel, for he kan the craft, Youre fader is in sleight as Argus eyed,
For al be that his moebie is hym braft, 1460
His olde sleghte is yet so with hym laft, Ye shal nat blende hym for youre womman-
hede,

Ne feyne aright, and that is al my drede

" I not if pees shal evere mo bitide,
But pees or no, for earnest ne for game, 1465
I woot, syn Calkas on the Grekis syde Hath ones ben, and lost so foule his name,
He dar nomore come here ayeyn for shame;
For which that wey, for aught I kan espie,
To trusten on, nys but a fantasie 1470

" Ye shal ek sen, youre fader shal yow glose To ben a wif, and as he kan wel preche

He shal som Grek so preyse and wel alose, That ravysshyn he shal yow with his
speche,

Or do yow don by force as he shal
teche, 1475

And Troilus, of whom ye nyl han routhe, Shal causeles so sterven in his trouthe!

“And over al this, youre fader shal despise Us alle, and seyn this cite nys but lorn,
And that th'assege nevere shal aryse, 1480 For-why the Grekis han it alle sworn, Til we be slayn, and down oure walles torn And thus he shal yow with his wordes fere,
That ay drede I, that ye wol bleven there

“Ye shal ekseen so many a lusty knyght 1485 Among the Grekis, ful of worthynesse,
And ech of hem with herte, wit, and myght
To plesen yow don al his busynesse, That ye shul dullen of the rudenesse
Of us sely Troians, but if routhe 1490
Remorde yow, or vertu of youre trouthe

“And this to me so grevous is to thynke,
That for my brest it wol my soule rende, Ne dredeles, in me ther may nat synke
A good opynyoun, if that ye wende, 1495
For why youre fadres sleghte wol us
shende

And if ye gon, as I have told yow yore, So think I n'am but ded, withoute more

“For which, with humble, trewe, and pitous
herte,

A thousand tymes mercy I yow preye, 1500
So rueth on myn aspre peynes smerte,
And doth somewhat as that I shal yow seye,
And lat us stele away bitwixe us tweye,
And thynk that folie is, whan man may
chese,

For accident his substance ay to lese 1505

“I mene thus that syn we mowe er day Wel stele away, and ben togidere so,
What wit were it to putten in assay,
In cas ye sholden to youre fader go,
If that ye myghten come ayeyn or no? 1510
Thus mene I, that it were a gret fohe
To putte that sikernesse in iupertie

“And vulgarly to speken of substance

Of tresour, may we bothe with us lede Inough to lyve in honour and ples-
aunce, 1515

Til into tyme that we shal ben dede,
And thus we may eschuen al this drede
For everich other wev ye kan recorde, Myn herte, ywys, may therwith naught acorde

“And hardly, ne dredeth no poverte, 1520
For I have kyn and frendes elleswhere That, though we comen in oure bare sherte, Us sholde neyther lakken gold ne gere,
But ben honoured while we dwelten there And go we anon, for, as in myn en-
tente, 1525
This is the beste, if that ye wole assente”

Criseyde, with a sik, right in this wise, Answerde, “Ywys, my deere herte trewe,
We may wel stele awey, as ye devyse,
And fynden swich unthrifty weyes
newe, 1530

But afterward, ful soo e it wol us rewe
And helpe me God so at my mooste nede, As causeles ye suffren al this drede!

“For thilke day that I for chersynge Or drede of fader, or of other wight, 1535
Or for estat, delit, or for weddyng, Be fals to yow, my Troilus, my knyght, Saturnes daughter, Juno, thorough hire
myght,

As wood as Athamante do me dwelle Eternalich in Stix, the put of helle! 1540

“And this on every god celestial I swere it yow, and ek on ech goddess,
On every nympe and deite infernal,
On satyr and fawny more and lesse,
That halve goddess ben of wildernesse, 1545
And Atropos my thred of lif tobreaste,
If I be fals! now trowe me if yow leste!

“And thow, Symois, that as an arwe
clere

Thorough Troie rennest ay downward to the se,

Ber witnessse of this word that seyde is
here, 1550

That thilke day that ich untrewed be To Troilus, myn owene herte fre,

That thow retourne bakward to thi welle,
And I with body and soule synke in helle'

"But that ve speke, away thus for to go 1500
And leten alle youre frendes, God forbede, For any womman that ye sholden so'
And namelv syn Troie hath now swich nede
Of help And ek of o thyng taketh hede
If this were wist, my lif lay in balaunce, And youre honour, God shulde us fro
meschance! 1501

'And if so be that pees heere-after take,
As alday happeth after anger, game, Whi, Lord, the sorwe and wo ve wolden
make,
That ve ne dorste come ayejn for
shame! 1565

And er that ye juparten so youre name, Beth naught to hastif in this hote fare,
For hastif man ne wanteth nevere care

"What trowe ye the peple ek al aboute Wolde of it seye? It is ful light t'arede They wolden seye, and swere it, out of
doute, 1571
That love ne drof yow naught to don this
dede,

But lust voluptuous and coward drede
Thus were al lost, ywys, myn herte deere, Your honour, which that now shyneth so
clere 1575

"And also thynketh on myn honeste, That floureth yet, how foule I sholde it
shende,

And with what filthe it spotted sholde be,
If in this forme I sholde with yow wende Ne though I lyved unto the werldes
ende, 1580

My name sholde I nevere ayejnward
wynne
Thus were I lost, and that were routhe and
synne

"And forthi sle with resoun al this hete' Men seyn, 'the suffrant overcomith,'
parde,
Ek 'whose wol han lief, he lief moot lete' 1585

Thus maketh vertu of necessite By pacience, and thynk that lord is he

Of Fortune ay, that naught wole of hire
recche,
And she ne daunteth no wight but a wrecche

"And trusteth this, that certes, herte
swete, 1590

Er Phebus suster, Lucina the sheene,
The Leoun passe out of this Ariete,
I wol ben here, withouten any wene
I mene, as helpe me Juno, hevenes quene,
The tenthe day, but if that deth m'assaile,
I wol yow sen, withouten any faille" 1596

'And now, so this be soth," quod Troilus,
'I shal wel suffre unto the tenthe day, Syn that I se that nede it mot be thus
But, for the love of God, if it be may, 1600
So late us stelen privelech away,
For evere in oon, as for to lyve in reste, Myn herte seyth that it wol be the beste"

"O mercy, God, what lif is this?" quod she
"Allas, ye sle me thus for verray tene! 1605
I se wel now that ye mystrusten me,
For by youre wordes it is wel yseene
Now, for the love of Cinthia the sheene, Mistrust me nought thus causeles, for
routhe,
Syn to he trewe I have yow plight my
trouthe 1610

"And thynketh wel, that somtyme it is wit
To spende a tyme, a tyme for to wynne Ne, parde, lorn am I naught fro yow yit, Though that we ben a day or two atwynne.
Drif out the fantasies yow withunne, 1615
And trusteth me, and leveth ek youre sorwe, Or here my trouthe, I wol naught lyve tyl
morwe

"For if ye wiste how soore it doth me
smerte,
Ye wolde cesse of this, for, God, thow wost,
The pure spirit wepeth in myn herte 1620
To se yow wepen that I love most,
And that I mot gon to the Grekis oost Ye, nere it that I wiste remedie To come ayejn, right here I wolde dye!

"But certes, I am naught so nyce a
wight 1625

That I ne kan ymaginen a wey
 To come ayeyn that day that I have hight For who may holde a thing that wol awey?
 My fader naught, for al his queynte pley!
 And by my thrift, my wendingy out of Troie 1630
 Another day shal torne us alle to jore

"Forthi with al myn herte I yow biseke,
 If that yow list don ought for my preyere,
 And for that love which that I love yow eke,
 That er that I departe fro yow here, 1635
 That of so good a confort and a cheere
 I may yow sen, that ye may brynge at reste Myn herte, which that is o poynt to breste

"And overal this I prey yow," quod she tho,
 "Myn owene hertes sothfast suffisaunce, Syn I am thyn al hol, withouten mo, 1641
 That whil that I am absent, no plesaunce Of oother do me fro youre remembraunce
 For I am evere agast, forwhy men rede That love is thyng ay ful of busy drede 1645

"For in this world ther lyveth lady non, ff that ye were untrewre (as God defende!),
 That so bitraised were or wo-bigon
 As I, that alle trouthe in yow entende
 And douteles, if that ich other wende, 1650
 I ner but ded, and er ye cause fynde, For Goddes love, so beth me naught unlynde!"

To this answerde Troilus and seyde,
 "Now God, to whom ther nys no cause ywrye,
 Me glade, as wys I nevere unto Cri-
 seyde, 1655
 Syn thilke day I saugh hire first with ye,
 Was fals, ne nevere shal til that I dye
 At shorte wordes, wel ye may me leve
 I kan na more, it shal be founde at preve "

"Grant mercy, goode myn, wys!" quod
 she, 1660

"And blhsful Venus lat me nevere sterve Er I may stonde of plesaunce in degree To quyte hym wel, that so wel kan deserve And while that God my wit wol me con-
 serve,
 I shal so don, so trewe I have yow
 founde, 1665

That ay honour to me-ward shal rebounde

"For trusteth wel, that youre estat roial, Ne veyn delit, nor only worthnesse Of yow in werre or torney marcial, Ne pompe, array, nobleye, or ek rich-
 esse 1670
 Ne made me to rewre on youre destresse,
 But moral vertu, grounded upon trouthe, That was the cause I first hadde on yow
 routhe'

"Eke gentil herte and manhod that ye
 hadde,
 And that ye hadde, as me thoughte, in despit 1675
 Every thyng that souned into badde,
 As rudenesse and poeplshsh appetit,
 And that youre resoun bridled youre delit,
 This made, aboven every creature, That I was youre, and shal while I may
 dure 1680

"And this may lengthe of yeres naught fordo,
 Ne remuable Fortune deface
 But Juppter, that of his myght may do
 The sorwful to be glad, so yeve us grace,
 Or nyghtes ten, to meten in this place, 1685
 So that it may youre herte and myn suffuse!
 And fareth now wel, for tyme is that ye rise "

And after that they longe ypleyned hadde,
 And ofte ykist, and streite in armes folde,
 The day gan rise, and Troilus hym cladde,
 And rewfullich his lady gan by holde, 1691
 As he that felte dethes cares colde,
 And to hire grace he gan hym recomaunde Wher him was wo, this holde I no demaunde

For mannes hed ymagynen ne kan, 1695 N'entendement considere, ne tonge telle
 The cruele peynes of this sorwful man,
 That passen every torment down in helle For whan he saugh that she ne myghte
 dwelle,

Which that his soule out of his herte rente, 1700
 Withouten more, out of the chaumbre he wente

BOOK V

Incipit liber quintus

Aprochen gan the fatal destyne
 That Joves hath in disposicioun,
 And to yow, angry Parcas, sustren thre, Committeth, to don execucioun, For which Criseyde moste out of the
 town, 5
 And Troilus shal dwellen forth in pyne Til Lachesis his thred no lenger twyne

The gold-ytressed Phebus heighe on-lofte Thries hadde alle with his bemes clene
 The snowes molte, and Zepherus as ofte 10 Ibrought ayeyn the tendre leves grene, Syn that the sone of Ecuba the queene Bigan to love hire first for whom his sorwe Was al, that she departe sholde a-morwe

Ful redy was at prime Diomedé, 15 Criseyde unto the Grekis oost to lede, For sorwe of which she felt hire herte
 blede,
 As she that nyste what was best to rede
 And trewely, as men in bokes rede, Men wiste nevere womman han the care, 20
 Ne was so loth out of a town to fare

This Troilus, withouten reed or loore,
 As man that hath his joies ek forloore,
 Was waytyng on his lady evere more As she that was the sothfast crop and
 more 25
 Of al his lust or joies herebifore
 But Troilus, now far-wel al thi joie,
 For shaltow nevere sen hire eft in Troie!

Soth is that while he bood in this manere,
 He gan his wo ful manly for to hide, 30
 That wel unnethe it sene was in his chere,
 But at the yate ther she sholde out ride,
 With certeyn folk he hoved hire t'abide, So wo-bigon, al wolde he naught hym
 pleyne,
 That on his hors unnethe he sat for
 peyne 35

For ire he quook, so gan his herte gnawe, Whan Diomedé on horse gan hym dresse,

And seyde to hymself this ilke sawe
 "Allas!" quod he, "thus foul a wrecched-
 nesse,
 Whi suffre ich it? Whi nyl ich it redresse? 40
 Were it nat bet atones for to dye Than evere more in langour thus to drye?"

"Whi ny, I make atones riche and pore To have mough to doone, er that she go?
 Why nyl I brynge al Troie upon a roore? 45 Whi nyl I slien this Diomedé also?
 Why nyl I rather with a man or two Stele hire away? Whi wol I thus endure?
 Whi nyl I helpen to myn owen cure?"

But why he nolde don so fel a dede, 50
 That shal I seyn, and whi hym liste it spare
 He hadde in herte alweyes a manere drede Lest that Criseyde, in rumour of this fare, Sholde han ben slayn, lo, this was al his care
 And ellis, certeyn, as I seyde yore, 55
 He hadde it don, withouten wordes more.

Criseyde, whan she redy was to ride,
 Ful sorwfully she sighte, and seyde "allas!"
 But forth she moot, for aught that may bitide,
 And forth she rit ful sorwfully a pas 60
 Ther is non othre remedie in this cas What wonder is, though that hire sore
 smerte,
 Whan she forgoth hire owen swete herte?

This Troilus, in wise of curtevsie, With hauk on honde, and with an huge
 route 65
 Of knyghtes, rood and did hire companye, Passyng al the valeye fer withoute,
 And farther wolde han riden, out of doute, Ful fayn, and wo was hym to gon so sone, But torne he moste, and it was ek to done 70

And right with that was Antenor ycome
 Out of the Grekis oost, and every wight

Was of it glad, and seyde he was welcome
 And Troilus, al nere his herte light,
 He peyned hym with al his fulle myght 75
 Hym to withholde of wepyng atte leeste,
 And Antenor he kiste, and made feste

And therwithal he moste his leve take,
 And caste his eye upon hire pitously,
 And neer he rood, his cause for to make, 80
 To take hire by the honde al sobrelly
 And Lord! so she gan wepen tendrely!
 And he ful softe and sleightly gan hire
 seye,
 "Now holde youre day, and do me nat to
 deye "

With that his courser tordned he aboute 85
 With face pale, and unto Diomede
 No word he spak, ne non of al his route,
 Of which the sone of Tideus took hede,
 As he that koude more than the crede In swich a craft, and by the reyne hire
 hente, 90
 And Troilus to Troie homward he wente

This Diomede, that ledde hire by the bridel, Whan that he saugh the folk of Troie
 aweye,
 Thoughte, "Al my labour shal nat ben on
 ydel,
 If that I may, for somewhat shal I seye 95
 For at the werste it may yet shorteoure
 weye
 I have herd seyde ek tymes twyes twelve,
 'He is a fool that wole foryete hymselfe "'

But natheles, this thoughte he wel ynough,
 That "certeynlich I am aboute nought, 100
 If that I speke of love, or make it tough,
 For douteles, if she have in hire thought Hym that I gesse, he may nat ben ybrought
 So soon away, but I shal fynde a meene, That she naught wite as yet shal what I mene " 105

This Diomede, as he that koude his good, Whan this was don, gan fallen forth in
 speche
 Of this and that, and axed whi she stood In swich disese, and gan hire ek buseche,
 That if that he encesse myghte or eche 110

With any thyng hire ese, that she sholde Comaunde it hym, and seyde he don it wolde

For treweliche he swor hire, as a knyght, That ther nas thyng with which he myghte hire plesse,
 That he nolde don his peyne and al his
 myght 115
 To don it, for to don hire herte an ese, And preyede hire, she wolde hire sorwe apese,
 And seyde, "Iwis, we Grekis kan have joi To honouren yow, as wel as folk of Troie "

He seyde ek thus, "I woot yow thynketh
 straunge, — 120
 Ne wonder is, for it is to yow newe, — Th'aquayntaunce of these Troians to chaunge
 For folk of Grece, that ye nevere knewe
 But wolde nevere God but if as trewe
 A Grek ye sholde among us alle fynde 125
 As any Troian is, and ek as kynde

"And by the cause I swor yow right, lo,
 now,
 To ben youre frend, and helply, to my
 myght,
 And for that more aquayntaunce ek of yow Have ich had than another straunger
 wight, 130
 So fro this forth, I pray yow, day and
 nyght,
 Comaundeth me, how soore that me smerte,
 To don al that may like unto youre herte,

"And that ye me wolde as youre brother
 trete,
 And taketh naught my frendshipe in de-spit, 135
 And though youre sorwes be for thynges
 grete,
 Not I nat whi, but out of more respit, Myn herte hath for t'amende it gret delit
 And if I may youre harmes nat redresse, I am right sory for youre hevynesse 140

"For though ye Troians with us Grekes
 wrothe
 Han many a day ben, alwey yet, parde, O god of Love in soth we serven bothe

And, for the love of God, my lady fre, Whomso ye hate, as beth nat wroth with
me, 145

For trewely, ther kan no wyght yow serve,
That half so loth youre wratthe wold dis-
serve

"And nere it that we ben so neigh the tente Of Calcas, which that sen us bothe may,
I wolde of this yow telle al myn entente, 150
But this enseled til anothr day Yeve me youre hond, I am, and shal ben
ay,

God helpe me so, while that my lyf may
dure,
Your owene aboven every creature

"Thus seyde I nevere er now to womman
born, 155

For, God myn herte as wisly glade so,
I loved never womman here-biforn
As paramours, ne nevere shal no mo
And, for the love of God, beth nat my fo, Al kan I naught to yow, my lady deere, 160 Compleyne aright, for I am yet to leere

"And wondreth nought, myn owen lady
bright,

Though that I speke of love to yow thus
blyve,

For I have herd er this of many a wight, Hath loved thyng he nevere saugh his
lyve 165

Ek I am nat of power for to stryve Ayeyns the god of Love, but hym obeye
I wole alwey, and mercy I yow prey

"Ther ben so worthi knyghtes in this place,
And ye so fayr, that everich of hem alle 170 Wol peynten hym to stonden in youre grace
But myghte me so faire a grace falle,
That ye me for youre servant wolde calle,
So lowely ne so trewely yow serve Nil non of hem, as I shal, til I sterve" 175

Criseyde unto that purpos lite answerde,
As she that was with sorwe oppressed so That, in effect, she naught his tales herde But her and ther, now here a word or
two,
Hire thoughte hire sorwful herte brast
a-two, 180

For whan she gan hire fader fer espie, Wel neigh down of hire hors she gan to sye

But natheles she thonked Diomed
Of al his travaile and his goode cheere, And that hym list his frendshipe hire to bede, 185

And she accepteth it in good manere,
And wol do fayn that is hym lief and dere, And trusten hym she wolde, and wel she
myghte,
As seyde she, and from hire hors sh'alighte

Hire fader hath hire in his armes nome, 190
And twenty tyme he kiste his doughter
sweete,

And seyde, "O deere doughter myn, welcome!"

She seyde ek, she was fayn with hym to
mete,

And stood forth muwet, milde, and man-sueete

But here I leve hire with hire fader
dwelle, 195

And forth I wol of Troilus yow telle

To Troie is come this woful Troilus, In sorwe aboven alle sorwes smerte,
With feloun look and face dispitous

The sodeynly doun from his hors he
sterte, 200

And thorough his paleis, with a swollen
herte,

To chaumbre he wente, of nothyng took he
hede,

Ne non to hym dar speke a word for drede

And ther his sorwes that he spared hadde He yaf an issue large, and "deth!" he criede, 205

And in his throwes frenetik and madde
He corseth Jove, Appollo, and ek Cupide, He corseth Ceres, Bacus, and Cipride, His burthe, hymself, his fate, and ek
nature,

And, save his lady, every creature 210

To bedde he goth, and walweth ther and torneth

In furie, as doth he Ixion in helle,
And in this wise he neigh til day sojorneth
But tho bigan his herte a lite unswelle

Thorough teris, which that gonnen up to welle, 215
And pitously he cryde upon Criseyde, And to hymself right thus he spak, and
seyde

"Wner is myn owene lady, hef and deere?
Wher is hire white brest? wher is it, where?
Wher ben hire armes and hire eyen
cleere, 220

That yesternyght this tyme with me were?
Now may I wepe allone many a teere,
And graspe aboute I may, but in this place, Save a pilowe, I fynde naught t'enbrace

"How shal I do? whan shal she come
ayeyn? 225

I not, allas! whi lete ich hire to go
As wolde God, ich hadde as tho ben sleyn!
O herte myn, Criseyde, O swete fo!
O lady myn, that I love and na mo!
To whom for evermo myn herte I dowe, 230 Se how I dey, ye nyl me nat rescowe!

"Who seth yow now, my righte lode-sterre?
Who sit right now or stant in youre presence?"

Who kan conforten now youre hertes werre?

Now I am gon, whom yeve ye audience? 235 Who speketh for me right now in myn absence?

Allas, no wight, and that is al my care!
For wel woot I, as yvele as I ye fare

"How sholde I thus ten dayes ful endure, Whan I the firste nyght have al this
tene? 240

How shal she don ek, sorwful creature?
For tendernesse, how shal she ek sustene Swich wo for me? O pitous, pale, and
grene

Shal ben youre fresshe, wommanliche face
For langour, er ye torne unto this place" 245

And whan he fil in any slomberinges, Anon bygynne he sholde for to grone,
And dremen of the dredefulleste thynges That myghte ben, as, mete he were allone
In place horrible, makyng ay his mone, 250
Or meten that he was amonges alle His enemys, and in hire hondes falle

And therwithal his body sholde sterte,
And with the stert al sodeynliche awake, And swich a tremour fele aboute his
herte, 255

That of the fere his body sholde quake,
And therwithal he sholde a noyse make,
And seme as though he sholde falle depe From heighe o-lofte, and thanne he wolde
wepe,

And rewen on hymself so pitously, 260
That wonder was to here his fantasie Another tyme he sholde myghtly Conforte hymself, and sem it was folie,
So causeles swich drede for to drye,
And eft bygynne his aspre sorwes newe, 265 That every man myght on his sorwes
rewe

Who koude telle aright or ful discryve His wo, his pleynt, his langour, and his pyne?

Naught alle the men that han or ben on
lyve

Thow, redere, maist thiself ful wel de-vyne 270

That swich a wo my wit kan nat diffyne
On ydel for to write it sholde I swynke, Whan that my wit is wery it to thynke

On hevene yet the sterres weren seene, Although ful pale ywoxen was the moone,
And whiten gan the orisonte shene 275
Al estward, as it wont is for to doone,
And Phebus with his rosy carte soone Gan after that to dresse hym up to fare, Whan Troilus hath sent after Pandare 280

This Pandare, that of al the day bifrom Ne myghte han comen Troilus to se, Although he on his hed it hadde sworn,
For with the kyng Priam alday was he,
So that it lay nought in his libertee 285 Nowher to gon, — but on the morwe he
wente

To Troilus, whan that he for hym sente

For in his herte he koude wel devyne That Troilus al nyght for sorwe wook, And that he wolde telle hym of his pyne, 290

This knew he wel ynough, withoute book.

For which to chaumbre streght the way he took,

And Troilus tho sobrelch he grette,
And on the bed ful sone he gan hym sette

“My Pandarus,” quod Troilus, “the
sorwe 295

Which that I drye, I may na^t longe endure

I trowe I shal nat lyven til to morwe
For which I wolde always, on aventure, To the devysen of my sepulture The forme, and of my moeble thow dispone, 300

Right as the semeth best is for to done

“But of the fir and flaumbe funeral In which my body brennen shal to glede,
And of the feste and playes palestral
At my vigile, I prey the, tak good hede 305 That that be wel, and offre Mars my steede,

My swerd, myn helm, and, leve brother
deere,

Mysheld to Pallas yef, that shyneth cleere

“The poudre in which myn herte ybrend shal torne,

That preye I the thow take and it con-
serve 310

In a vessell that men clepeth an urne,
Of gold, and to my lady that I serve,
For love of whom thus pitouslich I sterve,
So yeve it hire, and do me this plesaunce, To preyen hire kepe it for a remem-
braunce 315

“For wele I fele, by my maladie,
And by my dremes now and yore ago,
Al certeynly that I mot nedes dye
The owle ek, which that hette Escaphilo, Hath after me shrigh al thise nyghtes
two 320

And, god Mercurye! of me now, woful
wrecche,

The soule gyde, and, whan the liste, it
fecche!”

Pandare answerde and seyde, “Troilus,
My deere frend, as I have told the yore,
That it is folye for to sorwen thus, 325
And causeles, for which I kan namore.

But whoso wil nought trowen reed ne loore,
I kan nat sen in hym no remedie,
But lat hym worthen with his fantasie

“But, Troilus, I prey the, tel me now 330
If that thow trowe, er this, that any wight Hath loved paramours as wel as thow?

Ye, God woot! and fro many a worthi
knyght

Hath his lady gon a fourtenyght,
And he nat yet made halvendel the fare 335
What nede is the to maken al this care?

“Syn day by day thow maist thiselven se
That from his love, or ellis from his wif,
A man mot twynnen of necessite,

Ye, though he love hire as his owene lif, 340
Yet nyl he with hymself thus maken strif
For wel thou woost, my leve brother deere,
That alwey frendes may nat ben yfeere

“How don this folk that seen hire loves wedded

By frendes myght, as it bitit ful ofte, 345
And sen hem in hire spouses bed ybedded?
God woot, they take it wisly, faire, and
softe,

Forwhi good hope halt up hire herte o-lofte
And, for they kan a tyme of sorwe endure, As tyme hem hurt, a tyme doth hem
cure 350

“So sholdestow endure, and laten slide
The tyme, and fonde to ben glad and light Ten dayes nys so longe nought t’abide
And syn she the to comen hath bihyght,
She nyl hire heste breken for no wight 355
For dred the nat that she nyl fynden weye
To come ayen, my lif that dorste I leye

“Thy swevenes ek and al swich fantasie Drif out, and lat hem faren to meschaunce,
For they procede of thi malencolie, 360

That doth the fele in slep al this penaunce
A straw for alle swevenes signifaunce!
God helpe me so, I counte hem nought a bene!

Ther woot no man aright what dremes mene

“For prestes of the temple tellen thus, 365
That dremes ben the revelaciouns

Of goddes, and as wel they telle, ywis
 That they ben infernals illusiouns, And leches seyn, that of complexiouns Proceden they, or fast, or glotonye 370
 Who woot in soth thus what thei signifie?

“Ek oother seyn that thorough impressiouns,

As if a wight hath faste a thyng in mynde,
 That therof comen swiche avysiouns,
 And other seyn, as they in bokes fynde, 375
 That after tymes of the yer, by kynde, Men dreme, and that th'effect goth by the
 moone

But leve no drem, for it is nought to doone

“Wel worthe of dremes ay thise olde wives,

And troweliche ek augurye of thise
 fowles, 380

For fere of which men wenen lese here
 lyves,

As ravens qualm, or shrichyng of thise
 owles

To trowen on it bothe fals and foul is Allas, allas, so noble a creature
 As is a man shal dreden swich ordure! 385

“For which with al myn herte I the biseche, Unto thiself that al this thow foryve,
 And ris now up withowten more speche, And lat us caste how forth may best be dryve

This tyme, and ek how fresshly we may
 lyve 390

Whan that she comth, the which shal be right soone

God helpe me so, the beste is thus to doone

“Ris, lat us speke of lusty lif in Troie That we han led, and forth the tyme dryve,
 And ek of tyme comyng us rejoie, 395
 That bryngen shal oure blisse now so blyve,
 And langour of thise twyes dayes fyve
 We shal therwith so foryete or oppresse, That wel unneth it don shal us duresse

“This town is ful of lordes al aboute, 400 And trowes lasten al this mene while Go we pleye us in som lusty route
 To Sarpedoun, nat hennes but a myle,
 And thus thow shalt the tyme wel bygile,

And dryve it forth unto that blisful
 morwe, 405
 That thow hire se, that cause is of thi
 sorwe

“Now ris, my deere brother Troilus, For certes, it non honour is to the
 To wepe, and in thi bedde to jouken thus For trowelich, of o thyng trust to me, 410
 If thow thus ligge a day, or two, or thre, The folk wol wene that thow, for cow-ardisse,

The feynest sik, and that thow darst nat
 rise!”

This Troilus answerde, “O brother deere,
 This knowen folk that han ysuffred peyne, That though he wepe and make sorwful
 cheere, 416

That feleth harm and smert in every veyne,
 No wonder is, and though ich evere pleyne,
 Or alwey wepe, I am no thyng to blame, Syn I have lost the cause of al my game 420

“But syn of fyn force I mot arise, I shal arise as soone as evere I may,
 And God, to whom myn herte I sacrifice,
 So sende us hastely the tenthe day!

For was ther nevere fowel so fayn of
 May 425

As I shal ben, whan that she comth in Troie,

That cause is of my torment and my joie

“But whider is thi reed,” quod Troilus, “That we may pleye us best in al this town?”

“By God, my conseil is,” quod Panda-rus 430

“To ride and pleye us with kyng Sarpedoun”

So longe of this they speken up and down, Til Troilus gan at the laste assente
 To rise, and forth to Sarpedoun they wente

This Sarpedoun, as he that honourable 435 Was evere his lyve, and ful of heigh larg-
 esse,

With al that myghte yserved ben on table,
 That deynte was, al coste it gret richesse, He fedde hem day by day, that swich noblesse.

As seyden bothe the mooste and ek the
leeste, 440
Was nevere er that day wist at any feste

Nor in this world ther is non instrument Delicious, thorough wynd or touche of corde,
As fer as any wight hath evere ywent,
That tonge telle or herte may recorde, 445
That at that feste it nas wel herde acorde, Ne of ladys ek so fair a compaignie On daunce, er tho, was nevere 1seye with 1e

But what availeth this to Troilus,
That for his sorwe nothyng of it roughte?
For evere in oon his herte pietous 451
Ful bisyly Criseyde, his lady, soughte On hire was evere al that his herte
thoughte,
Now this, now that, so faste ymagenynge,
That glade, 1wis, kan hym no festeynge

These ladies ek that at this feste ben, 456 Syn that he saugh his lady was aweye,
It was his sorwe upon hem for to sen,
Or for to here on instruments so pleye For she, that of his herte berth the
keye, 460
Was absent, lo, this was his fantasie,
That no wight sholde maken melodie

Nor ther nas houre in al the day or nyght, When he was there as no wight myghte hym heere,
That he ne seyde, "O lufsom lady
bryght, 465

How have ye faren syn that ye were here?
Welcome, ywis, myn owne lady deere!"
But weylaway, al this nas but a maze Fortune his howve entended bet to glaze!

The lettres ek that she of olde tyme 470
Hadde hym ysent, he wolde allone rede An hondred sithe atwixen noon and prime, Refiguryng hire shap, hire wommanhede, Withinne his herte, and every word or dede That passed was, and thus he drof t'an
ende 475
The ferthe day, and seyde he wolde wende

And seyde, "Leve brother Pandarus, Intendestow that we shal here bleve

Til Sarpedoun wol forth congeyen us?
Yet were it fairer that we toke oure
leve 480

For Goddes love, lat us now soone at eve Oure leve take, and homward lat us torne, For treweliche, I nyl nat thus sojourne "

Pandare answerde, "Be we comen hider To fecchen fir, and rennen hom ayein? 485
God help me so, I kan nat tellen whider
We myghte gon, if I shal sothly seyn, Ther any wight is of us more feyn Than Sarpedoun, and if we hennes hye Thus sodeynly, I holde it vilanye 490

"Syn that we seyden that we wolde bleve With hym a wowke, and now, thus sodeynly,

The ferthe day to take of hym owre leve,
He wolde wondren on it, trewely!
Lat us holde forth oure purpos fermely 495
And syn that ye bihighten hym to bide, Holde forward now, and after lat us ride "

Thus Pandarus, with alle peyne and wo, Made hym to dwelle, and at the wikes
ende,

Of Sarpedoun they toke hire leve tho, 500
And on hire wey they speden hem to
wende

Quod Troilus, "Now Lord me grace
sende,

That I may fynden, at myn hom-comynge Criseyde comen!" and therwith gan he synge

"Ye, haselwode!" thoughte this Pandare,
And to hymself ful softeliche he seyde, 505
"God woot, refreyden may this hote fare, Er Calkas sende Troilus Criseyde!"

But natheles, he japed thus, and pleyde, And swor, ywys, his herte hym wel bihighte, 510
She wolde come as soone as evere she
myghte

Whan they unto the paleys were ycomen
Of Troilus, they doun of hors alighte, And to the chambre hire wey than han they nomen

And into tyme that it gan to nyghte, 515
They spaken of Criseyde the bryghte,

And after this, whan that hem bothe leste,
They spedde hem fro the soper unto reste

On morwe, as soone as day bygan to clere,
This Troilus gan of his slep t'abrayde, 520
And to Pandare, his owen brother deere,
"For love of God," ful pitously he sayde,
"As go we sen the palais of Criseyde,
For syn we yet may have namore feste,
So lat us sen hire paleys atte leeste" 525

And therwithal, his meyne for to blende,
A cause he fond in towne for to go,
And to Criseydes hous they gonnen wende
But Lord! this sely Troilus was wo!
Hym thoughte his sorwful herte braste a-
two 530

For, whan he saugh hire dores spered alle, Wel neigh for sorwe adoun he gan to falle

Therwith, whan he was war and gan bi-
holde

How shet was every wyndow of the place, As frost, hym thoughte, his herte gan to
colde, 535

For which with chaunged dedlich pale face, Withouten word, he forthby gan to pace,
And, as God wolde, he gan so faste ride,
That no wight of his contenance espide

Than seide he thus, "O! paleys desolat, 540
O hous of houses whilom best ihight, O paleys empty and disconsolat, O thow lanterne of which queynt is the light,

O paleys, whilom day, that now art nyght, Wel oughtestow to falle, and I to dye, 545 Syn she is went that wont was us to gye!

"O paleys, whilom crowne of houses alle, Enlumyned with sonne of alle blisse!
O ryng, fro which the ruby is out falle, O cause of wo, that cause hast ben of lisse! 550

Yet, syn I may no bet, fayn wolde I kisse Thy colde dores, dorste I for this route, And farwel shryne, of which the seynt is
oute!"

Therwith he caste on Pandarus his ye, With chaunged face, and pitous to bi-
holde, 555

And whan he myghte his tyme ariht
aspie,

Ay as he rood, to Pandarus he tolde
His newe sorwe, and ek his joes olde,
So pitously and with so ded an hewe,
That every wight myghte on his sorwe
rewe 560

Fro thennesforth he rideth up and down,
And every thyng com hym to remem-
braunce

As he rood forby places of the town
In which he whilom hadde al his plesaunce "Lo, yonder saugh ich last my lady
daunce, 565

And in that temple, with hire eyen cleere,
Me kaughte first my righte lady dere

"And yonder have I herd ful lustyly My dere herte laugh, and yonder pleye Saugh ich hire ones ek ful blisfully 570
And yonder ones to me gan she seye,
'Now goode swete, love me wel, I preye,' And yond so goodly gan she me biholde,
That to the deth myn herte is to hire holde

"And at that corner, in the yonder hous, 575 Herde I myn alderlevest lady deere So wommanly, with vois melodious,
So syngen so wel, so goodly, and so clere,
That in my soule yet me thynketh ich
here

The blisful sown, and in that yonder place
My lady first me took unto hire grace" 581

Thanne thoughte he thus, "O blisful lord
Cupide,

Whan I the proces have in my memorie, How thow me hast wereyed on every
syde,

Men myght a book make of it, lik a storie 585

What nede is the to seke on me victorie, Syn I am thyn, and holly at thi wille?
What joi hastow thyn owen folk to spille?

"Wel hastow, lord, ywroke on me thyn ire, Thow myghty god, and dredefull for to
greve! 590

Now mercy, lord! thow woost wel I desire Thi grace moost of alle lustes leeve,
And lyve and dye I wol in thy byleve,

For which I n'axe in guerdoun but o bone, That thow Criseyde ayein me sende
sone 595

"Distreyne hire herte as faste to retorne, As thow doost myn to longen hire to see,
Than woot I wel that she nyl naught so-jorne

Now blisful lord, so cruel thow ne be Unto the blood of Troie, I preye the, 600
As Juno was unto the blood Thebane, For which the folk of Thebes caughte hire bane "

And after this he to the yates wente
Ther as Criseyde out rood a ful good paas, And up and down ther made he many a
wente, 605

And to hymself ful ofte he seyde, "Allas!
Fro hennes rood my blisse and my solas!
As wolde blisful God now, for his joie, I myghte hire sen ayein come into Troie!

"And to the yonder hille I gan hire gyde, 610 Allas, and ther I took of hire my leve!
And yond I saugh hire to hire fader ride,
For sorwe of which myn herte shal tocleve
And hider hom I com when it was eve, And here I dwelle out cast from alle
joie, 615
And shal, til I may sen hire eft in Troie "

And of hymself ymagened he ofte
To ben defet, and pale, and waxen lesse Than he was wont, and that men seyden
softe,

"What may it be? Who kan the sothe
gesse 620

Whi Troilus hath al this hevynesse?"
And al this nas but his malencolie,
That he hadde of hymself swich fantasie

Another tyme ymaginen he wolde That every wight that wente by the
weye 625
Hadde of hym routhe, and that they seyen
sholde,

"I am right sory Troilus wol deye "
And thus he drof a day yet forth or tweye,
As ye have herd, swich lif right gan he lede, As he that stood bitwixen hope and
drede 630

For which hym likede in his songes shewe Th'enesousoun of his wo, as he best myghte,
And made a song of wordes but a fewe, Somwhat his woful herte for to lighte And whan he was from every mannes
syghte, 635
With softe vois he of his lady deere, That absent was, gan synge as ye may
heere

Canticus Troili

"O sterre, of which I lost have al the light,
With herte soor wel oughte I to biwaille, That evere derk in torment, nyght by
nyght, 640
Toward my deth with wynd in steere I
saille,

For which the tenthe nyght, if that I faille
The gydyng of thi bemes bright an houre, My shyp and me Caribdis wol devoure "

This song whan he thus songen hadde,
soone 645

He fil ayein unto his sikes olde,
And every nyght, as was his wone to doone,
He stood the brighte moone to byholde,
And al his sorwe he to the moone tolde,
And seyde, "Ywis, whan thow art horned
newe, 650
I shal be glad, if al the world be trewe!

"I saugh thyn hornes olde ek by the morwe, Whan hennes rood my righte lady dere,
That cause is of my torment and my sorwe,
For which, O brighte Latona the clere, 655 For love of God, ren faste aboute thy
spere!

For whan thyne hornes newe g'vnen
sprynge,
Than shal she come that may my blisse
brynge "

The dayes moore, and lenger every nyght, Than they ben wont to be, hym thoughte
tho, 660

And that the sonne went his cours unright
By lenger weye than it was wont to do,
And seyde, "Ywis, me dredeth evere mo,
The sonnnes sone, Pheton, be on lyve, And that his fader carte amys he
dryve " 665

Upon the walles faste ek wolde he walke,
 And on the Grekis oost he wolde se,
 And to hymself right thus he wolde talke
 "Lo, yonder is myn owene lady free,
 Or ellis yonder, ther the tentes be 670 And thennes comth this eyr, that is so soote,

That in my soule I fele it doth me boote

"And hardly this wynd, that more and
 moore

Thus stoundemele encresseth in my face,
 Is of my ladys depe sikes soore 675
 I preve it thus, for in noon othere place Of al this town, save onliche in this space, Fele I no wynd that sowneth so lk peyne It seyth, 'Allas! whi twynned be we
 tweyne?'"

This longe tyme he dryveth forth right
 thus, 680

Til fully passed was the nynthe nyght,
 And ay bisyde hym was this Pandarus,
 That bisily did al his fulle myght Hym to conforte, and make his herte light, Yevyng hym hope alwey, the tenthe
 morwe 685

That she shal come, and stynten al his
 sorwe

Upon that other syde ek was Criseyde, With wommen fewe, among the Grekis
 stronge,

For which ful ofte a day "Allas!" she
 seyde,

"That I was born! Wel may myn herte
 longe 690

After my deth, for now lyve I to longe Allas! and I ne may it nat amende!
 For now is wors than evere yet I wende

"My fader nyl for nothyng do me grace To gon ayeyn, for naught I kan hym queme, 695

And if so be that I my terme pace,
 My Troilus shal in his herte deme
 That I am fals, and so it may wel seme Thus shal ich have unthouk on every side
 That I was born, so weilaway the tide! 700

"And if that I me putte in iupartie, To stele awe: by nyght, and it bifalle

That I be kaught, I shal be holde a spie, Or elles, lo, thus drede I moost of alle,
 If in the hondes of som wreche I falle, 705
 I nam but lost, al be myn herte trewe Now, myghty God, thow on my sorwe
 rewe!"

Ful pale ywoxen was hire brighte face, Hire lymes lene, as she that al the day Stood, whan she dorste, and loked on the
 place 710

Ther she was born, and ther she dwelt hadde ay,

And al the nyght wepyng, alas, she lay
 And thus despeired, out of alle cure,
 She ladde hire hf, this woful creature

Ful ofte a day she sighte ek for des-
 tresse, 715

And in hireself she wente ay purtrayinge
 Of Troilus the grete worthynesse,
 And al his goodly wordes recordyng Syn first that day hire love bigan to springe
 And thus she sette hire woful herte afire 720 Thorough remembraunce of that she gan desire

In al this world ther nys so cruel herte
 That hire hadde herd compleynen in hire
 sorwe,

That noide han wepen for hire peynes
 smerte,

So tenaely she wepte, bothe eve and
 morwe 725

Hire nedede no teris for to borwe!

And this was yet the werste of al hire
 peyne,

Ther was no wight to whom she dorste hire
 pleyne

Ful rewfully she loked upon Troie, Biheld the toures heigh and ek the halles
 "Allas!" quod she, "the plesance and the joie, 731

The which that now al tordned into galle is,
 Have ich had ofte withinne tho yonder
 walles!

O Troilus, what dostow now?" she seyde
 "Lord! wheyther thow yet thenke upon Criseyde? 735

"Allas, I ne hadde trowed on youre loore.

And went with yow, as ye me redde er this¹ Than hadde I now nat siked half so soore Who myghte have seyde that I hadde don
 amys

To stele away with swich oon as he ys? 740
 But al to late comth the letuarie, Whan men the cors unto the grave carie

“To late is now to speke of that matere Prudence, allas, oon of thyne eyen thre Me lakked alwey, er that I come here! 745 On tyme ypassed wel remembered me,
 And present tyme ek koud ich wel use,
 But future tyme, er I was in the snare, Koude I nat sen, that causeth now my
 care

“But natheles, o,tyde what bityde, 750
 I shal to-morwe at nyght, by est or west,
 Out of this oost stele on som manere syde,
 And gon with Troilus where as hym lest This purpos wol ich holde, and this is best No fors of wikked tonges janglerie, 755
 For evere on love han wrecches had envye

“For whoso wol of every word take hede, Or reulen hym by every wightes wit,
 Ne shal he nevere thryven, out of drede,
 For that that som men blamen evere
 yit, 760

Lo, other manere folk comenden it
 And as for me, for al swich variaunce, Felicite clepe I my suffisaunce

“For which, withouten any wordes mo, To Troie I wole, as for conclusioun” 765
 But God it wot, er fully monthes two,
 She was ful fer fro that entencioun!
 For bothe Troilus and Troie town
 Shal knotteles thoroughout hire herte slide,
 For she wol take a purpos for t'abyde 770

This Diomedé, of whom yow telle I gan, Goth now withinne hymself ay arguynge With al the sleghte, and al that evere he
 kan,

How he may best, with shortest tarynge,
 Into his net Criseydes herte brynge 775
 To this entent he koude nevere fyne,
 To fisshen hire, he leyde out hook and lyne

But natheles, wel in his herte he thoughte,

That she nas nat withoute a love in Troie, For nevere, sythen he hire thennes
 broughte, 780

Ne koude he sen hire laughe or maken joie
 He nyst how best hire herte for t'acoye “But for t'asay,” he seyde, “it naught ne greveth,

For he that naught n'asaieeth, naught n'acheveth”

Yet seide he to hymself upon a nyght, 785 “Now am I nat a fool, that woot wel
 how

Hire wo for love is of another wight,
 And hereupon to gon assaye hire now?

I may wel wite, it nyl nat ben my prow
 For wise folk in bookes it expresse, 790 ‘Men shal nat wowe a wight in hevynesse’

But whoso myghte wynnen swich a flour From hym for whom she morneth nyght
 and day,

He myghte seyn he were a conquerour”
 And right anon, as he that bold was ay, 795 Thoughte in his herte, “Hapçç how happe
 may,

Al sholde I dye, I wol hire herte seche!
 I shal namore lesen but my speche”

This Diomedé, as bokes us declare,
 Was in his nedes prest and corageous, 800
 With sterne vois and myghty lymes square, Hardy, testif, strong, and chivalrous Of dedes, lik his fader Tideus
 And som men seyn he was of tonge large,
 And hear he was of Calydoigne and Arge 805

Criseyde mene was of hire stature, Therto of shap, of face, and ek of cheere, Ther myghte ben no fairer creature
 And ofte tyme this was hire manere,
 To gon ytressed with hire heres clere 810 Doun by hire coler at hire bak byhynde, Which with a thred of gold she wolde
 bynde

And, save hire browes joyneden yfere, Ther nas no lak, in aught I kan espren
 But for to speken of hire eyen cleere, 815 Lo, trewely, they writen that hire syen,
 That Paradis stood formed in hire yen

And with hire riche beaute evere more Strof love in hire ay, which of hem was more

She sobre was, ek symple, and wys withal,
The best ynorissshed ek that myghte be, 821
And goodly of hire speche in general, Charitable, estatlich, lusty, and fre, Ne nevere mo ne lakked hire pite, Tendre-herted, slydyng of corage, 825
But trewely, I kan nat telle hire age

And Troilus wel woxen was in highte,
And complet formed by proporcioun So wel that kynde it nought amenden
myghte,
Yong, fressh, strong, and hardy as lyoun, Trewes as stiel in ech condicioun, 831
Oon of the beste entecched creature
That is, or shal, whil that the world may
dure

And certeynly in storye it is yfounde,
That Troilus was nevere unto no wight, 835
As in his tyme, in no degree secounde
In duryng don that longeth to a knyght Al myghte a geant passen hym of myght, His herte ay with the first and with the
beste Stood paregal, to durre don that hym
leste 840

But for to tellen forth of Diomede
It fel that after, on the tenthe day Syn that Criseyde out of the citee yede, This Diomede, as fressh as braunche in
May,
Com to the tente, ther as Calkas lay, 845 And feyned hym with Calkas han to
doone,
But what he mente, I shal yow tellen
soone

Criseyde, at shorte wordes for to telle, Welcomed hym, and down hym by hire
sette,
And he was ethe ynough to maken dwelle!
And after this, withouten longe lette, 851
The spices and the wyn men forth hem
fette,
And forth they speke of this and that yfeere,

As frendes don, of which som shal yw
heere

He gan first fallen of the werre in speche 855
Bitwixe hem and the folk of Troie town,
And of th'assege he gan hire ek biseche
To telle hym what was hire opynyoun Fro that demaunde he so descendeth down To axen hire, if that hire straunge thoughte The Grekis gise, and werkes that they
wroughte, 861

And whi hire fader tarieth so longe
To wedden hire unto som worthy wight Criseyde, that was in hire peynes stronge
For love of Troilus, hire owen knyght, 865 As ferforth as she konnyng hadde or myght, Answerde hym tho, but, as of his entente,
It semed nat she wiste what he mente

But natheles, this ilke Diomede Gan in hymself assure, and thus he
seyde 870

"If ich aright have taken of yow hede, Me thynketh thus, O lady myn, Criseyde,
That syn I first hond on youre bridel leyde, Whan ye out come of Troie by the morwe-Ne koude I nevere sen yow but in
sorwe 875

"Kan I nat seyn what may the cause be,
But if for love of som Troian it were,
The which right sore wolde athynken
me,
That ye for any wight that dwelleth there Sholden spille a quarter of a tere, 880
Or pitously youreselven so bigle, For dredeles, it is nought worth the while.

"The folk of Troie, as who seyth, alle and
some
In prisoun ben, as ye youreselven se, Nor thennes shal nat oon on-lyve come 885
For al the gold atwixen sonne and se Trusteth wel, and understondeth me, Ther shal nat oon to mercy gon on-lyve Al were he lord of worldes twies fyve!

"Swiche wreche on hem, for fecchyng of Eleyne, 890
Ther shal ben take, er that we hennes
wende,

That Manes, which that goddes ben of
peyne,
Shal ben agast that Grekes wol hem
shende

And men shul drede, unto the worldes ende, From hennesforth to rayvsshenn any
queene, 895

So cruel shal oure wreche on hem be seeche

“And but if Calkas lede us with ambages,
That is to seyn, with double wordes slye, Swiche as men clepen a word with two visages,

Ye shal wel knowen that I naught ne
lye, 900

And al this thyng right sen it with youre
ye,

And that anon, ye nyl nat trowe how sone
Now taketh hede, for it is for to doone

“What! wene ye youre wise fader wolde Han yeven Antenor for yow anon, 905

If he ne wiste that the cite sholde Destroied ben? Whi, nay, so mote I gon!
He knew ful wel ther shal nat scapen oon
That Troian is, and for the grete feere,
He dorste nat ye dwelte lenger there 910

“What wol ye more, lufsom lady deere?
Lat Troie and Troian fro youre herte pace!
Drif out that bittre hope, and make good
cheere,

And clepe ayeyn the beaute of youre face,
That ye with salte teris so deface 915
For Troie is brought in swich a jupartie, That it to save is now no remedie

“And thenketh wel, yeshal in Grekis fynde A moore parfit love, er it be nyght,
Than any Troian is, and more kynde, 920
And bet to serven yow wol don his myght
And if ye vouchesauf, my lady bright,
I wol ben he to serven yow myselve, Yee, levere than be lord of Greces twelve!”

And with that word he gan to waxen
red, 925

And in his speche a litel wight he quok,
And caste asyde a litle wight his hed, And stynte a while, and afterward he wok,
And sobrelche on hire he threw his lok,

And seyde, “I am, al be it yow no joiie, 930
As gentil man as any wight in Troie

For if my fader Tideus,” he seyde, “Ilyved hadde, ich hadde ben, er this,
Of Calydoyne and Arge a kyng, Criseyde!
And so hope I that I shal yet, iwis 935
But he was slayn, allas! the more harm is, Unhappily at Thebes al to rathe, Polymytes and many a man to scathe

“But herte myn, syn that I am youre
man,—

And ben the first of whom I seeche grace,— To serve yow as hertely as I kan, 941
And evere shal, whil I to lyve have space,
So, er that I departe out of this place,
Ye wol me graunte that I may to-morwe,
At bettre leyser, tellen yow my sorwe ” 945

What sholde I telle his wordes that he
seyde?

He spak inough, for o day at the meeste
It preveth wel, he spak so that Criseyde Graunted, on the morwe, at his requeste, For to speken with hym at the leeste, 950
So that he nolde speke of swich matere
And thus to hym she seyde, as ye may here,

As she that hadde hire herte on Troilus
So faste, that ther may it non arace,
And strangely she spak, and seyde thus 955 “O Diomedé, I love that ilke place Ther I was born, and Joves, for his grace, Delyvere it soone of al that doth it care!
God, for thy myght, so leve it wel to fare!

“That Grekis wolde hire wrath on Troie
wreke, 960

If that they myght, I knowe it wel, iwis
But it shal naught byfallen as ye speke,
And God toforn! and forther over this,
I woot my fader wys and redy is,
And that he me hath bought, as ye me
tolde, 965
So deere, I am the more unto hym holde

“That Grekis ben of heigh condicioun,
