It is esp. used as a prefix to verbs or nouns and other parts of speech derived from verbs , to express `` division `` , `` distinction `` , `` distribution `` , `` arrangement `` , `` order `` , `` opposition `` , or `` deliberation `` (cf. {vi-ûbhid} , {-ziS} , {-dhA} , {-rudh} , {-car} , with their nominal derivatives)

 .{veda}1{veda}1 úm. (fr. ú1. {vid} , -q.v.) knowledge , true or sacred knowledge or lore , knowledge of ritual îRV. îAitBr.
 .; N. of certain celebrated works which constitute the basis of the first period of the Hindu1 religion (these works were primarily three , viz. 1. the R2ig-veda , 2. the Yajur-veda [of which there are , however , two divisions , - {taittirIya-saMhitA} , {vAjasaneyi-saMhitA}] , 3. the Sa1ma-veda [1015,2]
 .; these three works are sometimes called collectively {trayI} , `` the triple Vidya1 "" or `` threefold knowledge "" , but the R2ig-veda is really the only original work of the three , and much the most ancient [the oldest of its hymns being assigned by some who rely on certain astronomical calculations to a period between 4000 and 2500 úB. úC. , before the settlement of the A1ryans in India
 .; and by others who adopt a different reckoning to a period between 1400 and 1000 B3. úC. , when the A1ryans had settled down in the Panja1b]
 .; subsequently a fourth Veda was added , called the Atharva-veda , which was probably not completely accepted till after Manu , as his law-book often speaks of the three Vedas-calling them {trayam@brahma@sanAtanam} , `` the triple eternal Veda "" , but only once [xi , 33] mentions the revelation made to Atharvan and An3giras , without , however , calling it by the later name of Atharva-veda
 .; each of the four Vedas has two distinct parts , viz. 1. Mantra , úi.e. words of prayer and adoration often addressed either to fire or to some form of the sun or to some form of the air , sky , wind &c. , and praying for health , wealth , long life , cattle , offspring , victory , and even forgiveness of sins , and 2. Bra1hman2a , consisting of Vidhi and Artha-va1da , i. e. directions for the detail of the ceremonies at which the Mantras were to be used and explanations of the legends &c. connected with the Mantras [see {brAhmaNa} , {vidhi}] , both these portions being termed {zruti} , revelation orally communicated by the Deity , and heard but not composed or written down by men [cf. I. îW. 24

&c.] , although it is certain that both Mantras and Bra1hman2as were compositions spread over a considerable period , much of the latter being comparatively modern
.; as the Vedas are properly three , so the Mantras are properly of three forms , 1. R2ic , which are verses of praise in metre , and intended for loud recitation
.; 2. Yajus , which are in prose , and intended for recitation in a lower tone at sacrifices
.; 3. Sa1man , which are in metre , and intended for chanting at the Soma or Moon-plant ceremonies , the Mantras of the fourth or Atharva-veda having no special name
.; but it must be borne in mind that the Yajur and Sa1ma-veda hymns , especially the latter , besides their own Mantras , borrow largely from the R2ig-veda
.; the Yajur-veda and Sa1ma-veda being in fact not so much collections of prayers and hymns as special prayer- and hymn-books intended as manuals for the Adhvaryu and Udga1tr2i priests respectively [see {yajur-veda} , {sAma-veda}]
.; the Atharva-veda , on the other hand , is , like the R2ig-veda , a real collection of original hymns mixed up with incantations , borrowing little from the R2ig and having no direct relation to sacrifices , but supposed by mere recitation to produce long life , to cure diseases , to effect the ruin of enemies &c.
.; each of the four Vedas seems to have passed through numerous S3a1kha1s or schools , giving rise to various recensions of the text , though the R2ig-veda is only preserved in the S3a1kala recension , while a second recension , that of the Bha1shkalas , is only known by name
.; a tradition makes Vya1sa the compiler and arranger of the Vedas in their present form: they each have an Index or Anukraman2i1 [q.v.] , the principal work of this kind being the general Index or Sarva7nukraman2i1 [q.v.]
.; out of the Bra1hman2a portion of the Veda grew two other departments of Vedic literature , sometimes included under the general name Veda , viz. the strings of aphoristic rules , called Su1tras [q.v.] , and the mystical treatises on the nature of God and the relation of soul and matter , called Upanishad [q.v.] , which were appended to the A1ran2yakas [q.v.] , and became the real Veda of thinking Hindu1s , leading to the Dars3anas or systems of philosophy
.; in the later literature the name of `` fifth Veda '' is accorded to the Itiha1sas or legendary epic poems and to the Pura1n2as , and certain secondary Vedas or Upa-vedas [q.v.] are enumerated
.; the Veda7n3gas or works serving as limbs [for preserving the integrity] of the Veda are explained under {vedA7Gga} below: the only other works included under the head of Veda being the Paris3isht2as , which supply rules for the ritual omitted in the Su1tras
.; in the Br2ihad-a1ran2yaka Upanishad the Vedas are represented as the breathings of Brahma1 , while in some of the Pura1n2as the four Vedas are said to have issued out of the four mouths of the four-faced Brahma1 and in the Vishn2u-Pura1n2a the Veda and Vishn2u are identified) iRTL. 7 &c. iW. 5 ; 24 &c.

rather than Brahma1 and S3iva - with the supreme Being , and are exclusively devoted to his worship ; they have become separated into four principal and some minor sects , as follow: 1. the Ra1ma7nujas , founded by Ra1ma7nuja , who is said to have lived for 120 years [from 878 , col. 1 , and in iRTL. p. 119 &c. ; one peculiarity of his sect is the scrupulous preparation and privacy of three meals ; 2. the Ma1dhvas

, founded by a Kanarese Bra1hman named Madhva , whose chief doctrines are described at p. 782 , col. 3 , and in iRTL. p. 130 &c. ; 3. the Vallabhas , founded by Vallabha7ca1rya , whose chief doctrines are described at p. 928 , col. 3 , and in iRTL. p. 134 &c. ; 4. a sect in Bengal founded by Caitanya [q.v.] who was regarded by his followers as an incarnation of Kr2ishn2a ; his chief doctrine was the duty of {bhakti} , or love for that god which was to be so strong that no caste-feelings could exist with it [see iRTL. p. 140 &c.] Of the minor Vaishn2ava sects those founded by Nimba7rka or Nimba7ditya [iRTL. 146] and by Ra1ma7nanda [iRTL. 147] and by Sva1mi-Na1ra1yan2a [iRTL. 148] are
