are frequently identical with the Mantras of the R2ig-veda , the Yajur-veda being only a sort of sacrificial prayer-book for ihe Adhvaryu priests formed out of the R2ig-veda , which had to be dissected and rearranged with additional texts for sacrificial purposes ; the most characteristic feature of the Yajur-veda is its division into two distinct collections of texts , the Taittiri1ya-sam2hita1 and the Va1jasaneyi-sam2hita1 , ^ q.v. ; the former of which is also called Kr2ishn2a , úi.e. ` Black " , because in it the Sam2hita1 and Bra1hmana portions are confused ; and the latter S3ukla , úi.e. ` White " , because in this , which is thought the more recent of the two recensions , the Sam2hita1 is cleared from confusion with its Brahman2a and is as it were white or orderly ; the order of sacrifices , however , of both recensions is similar , two of the principal being the Dars3a-pu1rn2a-ma1sa or sacrifice to be performed at new and full moon , and the As3va-medha or horse-sacrifice ; cf. îIW. 6 ; 245 , ún. 2) îBr.

.; Varun2a is one of the oldest of the Vedic gods , and is commonly thought to correspond to the $ of the Greeks , although of a more spiritual conception

.; he is often regarded as the supreme deity , being then styled ṛ king of the gods ṛ or ṛ king of both gods and men ṛ or ṛ king of the universe ṛ

.; no other deity has such grand attributes and functions assigned to him

.; he is described as fashioning and upholding heaven and earth , as possessing extraordinary power and wisdom called {mAyA} , assending his spies or messengers throughout both worlds , as numbering the very winkings of men's eyes , as hating falsehood , as seizing transgressors with his {pAza} or noose , as inflicting diseases , especially dropsy , as pardoning sin , as the guardian of immortality

.; he is also invoked in the Veda together with Indra , and in later Vedic literature together with Agni , with Yama , and with Vishn2u

.; in îRV. iv , 1 , 2 , he is even called the brother of Agni

.; though not generally regarded in the Veda as a god of the ocean , yet he is often connected with the waters , especially the waters of the atmosphere or firmament , and in one place [îRV. vii , 64 , 2] is called with Mitra , {sindhu-pati} , ṛ lord of the sea or of rivers ṛ

.; hence in the later mythology he became a kind of Neptune , and is there best known in his character of god of the ocean
