BOOK VIII

TO THE EMPEROR DOMITIANUS, CAESAR, AUGUSTUS,
CONQUEROR OF GERMANY AND DACIA, VALERIUS
MARTIALIS SENDS GREETING<sup>1</sup>

OF a truth all my little books, Sire, to which you have given fame, that is, life, are your suppliants, and I think will, for this reason, be read. This one, however, which is marked the eighth of my works, enjoys more frequently the opportunity of showing loyalty. Accordingly I had less occasion for the labour of invention, for which the subject-matter formed a substitute; that, however, I have here and there attempted to diversify by some intermixture of pleasantry, so that every verse should not heap upon your divine modesty its meed of praise which would more easily weary you than satiate me. And although epigrams have been written in such a style, even by men the most austere and of the highest position, as apparently to have aimed at the verbal licence of mimes, yet I have not allowed these to speak with their usual playfulness. As part of my book—and that the greater and better—is attached to the Majesty of your sacred name, it should remember that it is unfitting to approach the temple save cleansed by religious purification.<sup>2</sup> That readers

ut custoditurum me lecturi sciant, in ipso libelli huius limine profiteri brevissimo placuit epigrammate.

I

LAURIGEROS domini, liber, intrature penates disce verecundo sanctius ore loqui.
nuda recede Venus; non est tuus iste libellus:
tu mihi, tu Pallas Caesariana, veni.

II

FASTORUM genitor parensque Ianus victorem modo cum videret Histri, tot vultus sibi non satis putavit optavitque oculos habere plures, et lingua pariter locutus omni 5
terrarum domino deoque rerum promisit Pyliam quater senectam.
addas, Iane pater, tuam rogamus.

III

“QUINQUE satis fuerant: nam sex septemve libelli est nimium: quid adhuc ludere, Musa, iuvat?
sit pudor et finis: iam plus nihil addere nobis fama potest: teritur noster ubique liber;
et cum rupta situ Messallae saxa iacebunt 5
altaque cum Licini marmora pulvis erunt,

<sup>2</sup> The god Janus presided over the year and the public records. He was represented with two faces turned in opposite ways, i.e. towards the past and the future; or with four to represent the four seasons.

BOOK VIII. 1-III

may know I shall regard this obligation, I have determined to make my profession on the very threshold of this little book by a very brief epigram.

I

THOU, my book, who art purposed to enter my Master's laurel-wreathed<sup>1</sup> abode, learn to speak more reverently in modest speech. Undraped Venus, stand back: this little book is not thine; do thou come to me, thou, Pallas, patron of Caesar.

II

WHEN Janus, begetter and parent of our annals,<sup>2</sup> of late saw Hister's conqueror, he deemed his many faces were not enough for him, and wished to possess more eyes; and, speaking alike with every tongue, he promised the Lord of Earth and God of the Universe a Pylian old age<sup>3</sup> four times over. Add, Father Janus, we entreat, your own.

III

"FIVE were sufficient; for six or seven books are too much: why do you want, Muse, to frolic still? Let there be some stint and an end: now nothing more can Fame give me; my book is thumbed everywhere; and when Messalla's<sup>4</sup> pavements shall lie shivered by decay, and Licinus'<sup>5</sup> towering marble

<sup>3</sup> Nestor's.

<sup>4</sup> M. Valerius Messalla Corvinus, the patron of Tibullus: cf. x. ii. 9. He repaired the Via Latina: cf. Tib. i. vii. 57. Or "saxa" may perhaps refer to his tomb.

<sup>5</sup> A rich freedman of Augustus (cf. Juv. i. 109), who had a magnificent tomb.

cui coma et unguento sordida vestis erat : 10 “Tunc potes dulcis, ingrata, relinquere nugas?
dic mihi, quid melius desidiosus ages?
an iuvat ad tragicos soccum transferre coturnos aspera vel paribus bella tonare modis, praelegat ut tumidus rauca te voce magister, 15
oderit et grandis virgo bonusque puer?
scribant ista graves nimium nimiumque severi,
quos media miseros nocte lucerna videt.
at tu Romanos lepido sale tingue libellos :
adgnoscat mores vita legatque suos. 20
angusta cantare licet videaris avena, dum tua multorum vincat avena tubas.”

IV

QUANTUS, io, Latias mundi conventus ad aras suscipit et solvit pro duce vota suo !
non sunt haec hominum, Germanice, gaudia tantum, sed faciunt ipsi nunc, puto, sacra dei.

shall be dust, yet me shall lips read, and many a sojourner shall carry my poems with him to his fatherland." I ended; when thus replied the ninth of the Sisters,<sup>1</sup> her hair and vesture stained with unguent: "Can you, ungrateful man, resign your pleasant trifles? Tell me, what better thing when idle will you do? Wish you to adapt your comic shoe to the tragic buskin, or in even-footed measures<sup>2</sup> to thunder of rough wars, that a pompous pedagogue may dictate you in hoarse tones, and tall girl and honest boy hate you? Let those themes be written by men grave overmuch, and overmuch austere, whom at midnight their lamp marks at their wretched toil. But do you dip your little Roman books in sprightly wit; let Life recognize and read of her own manners. To a thin pipe you may appear to sing, if only your pipe outblow the trump of many."

IV

Ho! How great a concourse of the world at Latin altars makes and pays their vows<sup>3</sup> for their Chief! These are not the joys of men only, Germanicus: nay, the very gods now, I ween, offer sacrifice.

V

WHILE you give rings to girls, Macer, you have ceased, Macer, to possess rings yourself.<sup>4</sup>

THAN old Auctus' antiques nothing is more odious—I prefer drinking vessels moulded from Saguntine clay—when he prates of the crazy pedigrees of his silver plate, and by his chattering makes the wine vapid. “These are cups that once belonged to Laomedon’s table: to win these Apollo by his harp-playing built the walls of Troy. With this mixing-bowl fierce Rhoetus joined battle with the Lapithae:<sup>1</sup> you see the workmanship is dented by the fight. These two goblets are valuable because of aged Nestor: the dove is burnished by the rubbing of the Pylian thumb. This is the tankard in which the grandson of Aeacus<sup>2</sup> ordered a fuller draught and stronger wine be mixed for his friends. In this bowl most beautiful Dido pledged Bitias when her banquet was given to the Phrygian hero.”<sup>3</sup> When you have much admired these ancient chasings, in Priam’s cups you will drink Astyanax.<sup>4</sup>

VII

Is this your pleading of causes, is this eloquence, Cinna, in ten hours, Cinna, to say nine words? And just now in loud tones you asked for four water-clocks!<sup>5</sup> Oh, what store of silence, Cinna, you possess!

VIII

long ages, albeit pious incense invokes thee, prayers salute thee first, to thee the consul's joyous purple, to thee every magistrate pays court, yet this thou countest more—it has been thy fortune, Janus, in thine own month to see our god<sup>1</sup> returning home!

IX

HYLAS, when blear-eyed, Quintus, was willing lately to pay you three-quarters of his debt; now he is one-eyed he is willing to give half. Take it at once: brief is the opportunity for gain; if he become blind, Hylas won't pay you a penny.

X

BASSUS has bought a cloak for ten thousand sesterces, a Tyrian of the best colour. He has made a bargain. "Did he buy so cheap?" you ask. Aye, he is not going to pay.

XI

THAT thou hast come to thy city Rhine knows already, for he too hears the voices of thy people: Sarmatian tribes as well, and Hister and the Getae, the very shout of our new-found gladness has af-fear'd. While in the sacred Circus applause long sustained revered thee, no man perceived the steeds had four times been started. No chief has Rome so loved, nor thee so much, Caesar, as now; thee too, albeit she would, she cannot now love more.

XVII

I HAVE pleaded your case, Sextus, for an agreed fee of two thousand sesterces. What is the reason you have sent me one thousand? "You set out none of the facts," you remark, "and by you my case was ruined." You owe me all the more, Sextus; I blushed.

Thou mightest have withdrawn Cyllarus<sup>4</sup> from Leda's constellation ; freely will Castor now yield his steed to thee. Why stayest thou eager Titan ? Already Xanthus and Aethon<sup>5</sup> look for the reins ; Memnon's kindly Mother<sup>6</sup> wakes. Yet the slow stars yield not to glowing light, and the moon longs to see Ausonia's Chief. SAY, Toga, welcome gift to me of my eloquent friend, of what flock wouldst thou be the fame and glory? Did the Apulian herbage of Spartan Phalanthus flourish for thy sake, where Galaesus <sup>2</sup> floods the tilth with Calabrian waters? or did Tartessian Baetis, nurse of Hiberian flocks, wash thee too on the back of a Spanish sheep? <sup>3</sup> or has thy wool counted the mouths of many-cleft Timavus, whereof trusty Cyl-larus, <sup>4</sup> now amid the stars, once drank? <sup>1</sup> Phryxus' ram with the golden fleece : cf. vi. iii. 6.

I could not more prize proud Babylon's painted tapestry embroidered by Semiramis' needle; no more should I admire myself in gold of Athamas, if thou, Phryxus, wert to give me the ram of Aeolus' son.<sup>1</sup> Oh, what laughter will my worn cloak excite seen together with this toga from the Palatine!<sup>2</sup>

HE who writes distichs wishes, I imagine, to please by brevity. What is the use of brevity, tell me, if it constitute a book?

XXX

WHAT now entertains as a spectacle in Caesar's Arena was in Brutus' days their chiefest glory.<sup>3</sup> You see how the hand grasps the flame and relishes its punishment, and bravely lords it amid the astonished fire! His own spectator is he, and he admires his right hand's noble death; in the full sacrifice that hand delights. Had not, against its will, that penalty been denied it, his left hand—fiercer still—was ready to pass to the sated hearth. I care not, after such a feat, to learn what was its crime before: enough for me to have known the prowess of the hand I saw.

XXXI

'Tis not a pretty sort of confession, Dento, you make about yourself, who, after you have married a wife, ask for paternal rights.<sup>4</sup> Cease at last with suppliant petitions to weary our Master, and, though late, return from the city to your own country.

GLIDING down through the still air, a winsome dove fluttered into Aretulla's very bosom as she sat. Chance might have played the freak had not the bird stayed, all unguarded, and refused to take the flight permitted to it. If a loving sister may hope for happier things, and prayers avail to move the Master of the World, belike from Sardinia's shores this bird came to thee, the exile's messenger, to herald thy brother's return.

FROM your praetor's crown, Paulus, you send me a leaf and require this to be called a bowl.<sup>1</sup> With this film your platform<sup>2</sup> was lately coated, and the pale stream of red saffron<sup>3</sup> washed it away. Or rather was it a flake—I think, belonging to the leg of your couch—scraped off by the nail of a cunning slave? It can from a distance feel the fluttering of a gnat, and be wafted by the wing of the very smallest butterfly; it floats in air, kept up by the heat of a tiny lamp, and, splashed with wine even lightly sprinkled, it dissolves. With such a layer is coated on the Kalends of January the nut<sup>4</sup> which a shabby client brings as a gift together with small coin. Pliant

Egyptian beans grow with a less slender filament, of thicker mould are lily leaves that fall beneath the overpowering sun; nor does the spider dart about a web so slender, nor the pendulous silkworm ply a work so light. Denser stands the chalk on old Fabulla's face, denser swells the bubble in tumbled water, and stronger is the bladder-net that confines knotted locks, and the Batavian pomade<sup>1</sup> that transforms Latin tresses. With skin like this is clothed the chick in a swan's egg, such are the patches that rest on a crescent-plastered<sup>2</sup> brow. Eastern work. How small a part of the Palatine hall<sup>1</sup> would Egypt's toil achieve! Nothing so grand the eye of day sees in all the world. You would believe the seven hills uprose all together; Ossa with Thessalian Pelion atop was not so high;<sup>2</sup> Heaven it so pierces that, hidden amid the lustrous stars, its peak echoes sunlit to the thunder in the cloud below, and is sated with Phoebus' mystic power ere Circe<sup>3</sup> views her sire's springing face. And yet, Augustus, this palace that with its pinnacle touches the stars, though level with Heaven, is less than its lord.

TITULLUS, I warn you, live your life: ever this comes late; though you begin under a pedagogue, 'tis late. But you, wretched Titullus, do not live even in old age, but wear out every threshold at levees, and sweat at daybreak beslavered with the kisses of the town; and in the three Forums, mud-bespattered in front of all the Equestrian statues, and the Temple of Mars, and the Colossus<sup>2</sup> of Augustus, you hurry ever from the third to the fifth hours.<sup>3</sup> Plunder, hoard, rob, possess: you must resign it all. Let your proud money-chest be yellow with crowded coins, an hundred pages of debts due on the Kalends be opened, your heir will swear you have left nothing. And even when you are laid out on bier or stone, while, stuffed with papyrus, your pyre is growing high, he will in insolence kiss the weeping eunuchs; and your mourning son, whether you wish it or not, will the first night sleep with your favourite.

WHOSE labour is in the bowl? was it of artist Mys or of Myron? Is this Mentor's hand, or, Polyclitus, thine?<sup>1</sup> No darkness gives it a dull leaden hue, nor is it a cloudy mass that shrinks from assaying fires. True amber is less radiant than its yellow ore, and the fine frosted silver surpasses snow-white ivory. The workmanship yields not to the material: even so the moon rounds her orb when she shines in fullness with all her light. There stands a he-goat pranked in the Aeolian fleece of Theban Phryxus<sup>2</sup>; by such his sister would more gladly have been borne; such a goat no Cinyphian barber<sup>3</sup> would deform, and thou thyself, Lyaeus, wouldst consent to his cropping thine own vine.<sup>4</sup> A Love in gold, two-winged, loads the back of the beast; the pipe of Pallas sounds from his tender lips; in such wise the dolphin, blithe with the burden of Methymnaean Arion,<sup>5</sup> bore him, no unmelodious freight, o'er tranquil seas. Let no hand from the master's crowd of slaves, only thy hand, Cestus, first fill this peerless gift for me with fitting nectar; Cestus, the banquet's pride, mix thou the Setine: the very boy, the very goat, methinks, is athirst. Let the letters of Istantius Rufus'<sup>6</sup> name assign their number to our measures of wine,<sup>7</sup> for he was the source to me of so proud a gift. If Telethusa come,

LOUD as is heard the roar through Massylian wilds, oft as the woodland riots with countless lion-hordes, what time the pale shepherd recalls to his Punic stead the startled bulls and flock dismayed, so great a terror roared but now on Ausonia's sand. Who but would deem it a herd? 'Twas a single beast, but one whose laws even the very lions would tremble at, to whom marble-dight Numidia would assign a crown. Oh, what glory, what dignity did not the tawny cloud of his curved mane, when it stood erect, shed upon his neck! How that broad breast became mighty spears, and how great joy he won by his noble death!<sup>1</sup> Whence came, Libya, so blest an honour to thy woods? Had he come down from Cybele's yoke?<sup>2</sup> Or rather, did thy brother, Germanicus, or thy sire himself, send down this beast from Hercules' star?<sup>3</sup>

ALTHOUGH our grandsires' age yields to our own times, and Rome has waxed greater in company with her chief, you wonder divine Maro's genius is seen no more, and that no man with such a trump as his blows loud of war. Let there be many a Maecenas, many a Maro, Flaccus, will not fail, and even your fields will give you a Virgil. Tityrus,<sup>4</sup> sick at heart, had lost his lands nigh ill-starred Cremona, and was weeping for his plundered sheep: the Tuscan knight smiled, and dispelled malignant poverty, and bade it go in hurried

"Take wealth, and be greatest of bards: you," he said, "may love even my Alexis."<sup>1</sup> That boy most fair was standing by his master's board, pouring the dark Falernian with hand marble-fair, and offered the beaker tasted first by his rosy lips, lips that might tempt Jove himself. Plump Galatea<sup>2</sup> fell away from the inspired bard and Thestylis<sup>2</sup> with her cheeks burnt red by harvest; at once "Italy" he conceived, and "Arms and the man,"<sup>3</sup> he who but now in song untrained had with effort wept for a gnat.<sup>4</sup> Why should I speak of Variuses and Marsuses, and tell the names of poets enriched, whom 'twere a long task to number? <sup>1</sup> The son of Mercury, patron of thieves, and himself the typical thief.

Don't despise the man, he is thievishness itself; Autolycus'<sup>1</sup> hand was not so sharp. When he is your guest remember to watch him carefully: then he runs amok and, though one-eyed, sees with either. Cups and dessert-spoons the anxious servants lose, and there lurks many a napkin in his warm bosom; nor is he ignorant how to withdraw by stealth even the mantle slipt from your elbow, and often he goes away clad in two cloaks; and the cunning thief does not blush to rob a sleeping home-born slave of his lamp, although it is alight. If he has seized nothing, then with crafty skill he circumvents his slave and filches his very own slippers!

THAT you may demand, Clytus, and exact a present, you are born eight times in a single year, and only three or four Kalends, I think, you do not keep as birthdays. Smoother though your face be than the dry beach's wave-worn pebbles, blacker your hair than a mulberry ripe to fall, though you surpass feathers in fluttering softness, or a lump of newly curdled milk, and though such a rounded fullness swells a breast as the virgin bride keeps for her spouse, yet you seem to us, Clytus, already old; for who would believe so many birthdays were Priam's or Nestor's? Let there be at length some decent limit and measure to your rapine. But if you still play with us, and a single birth in one year is now not sufficient for you, I shall regard you, Clytus, as not having been born even once.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> "To regard a person as not born" was a common phrase to express that the person alluded to was a nobody: cf. iv. lxxxiii. 4; x. xxvii. 4; Petr. 58.

LXVI

To Augustus bring, ye Camenae, pious incense and victims on behalf of your Silius. Lo! by a son's consulship Caesar, our chief and only ward, bids the twice six axes return, and the door of the poet sire resound to the lictor's noble staff.<sup>3</sup> Yet this remains for his joy to wish for, the blessed purple of a third consul.<sup>4</sup> Though to Pompeius the senate, to his son-in-law<sup>5</sup> Caesar, gave sacred honours, and peaceful Janus thrice enrolled their names,<sup>6</sup> yet thus would Silius rather reckon repeated consulships.

<sup>1</sup> M. hopes that Silius' second son (who, however, died shortly afterwards) may become consul, three consulships thus falling to one house. The father was consul A.D. 68: VII. lxiii. 9.

What should the Gaul do? how could he move? The huge master had a single tiny slave, so thin that he could barely carry the smallest lantern: chance came to the rescue of the wretched man, and brought aid. Four branded slaves were carrying a common corpse—the pauper's burying-ground receives a thousand such—these slaves the weak attendant besought in a low voice to shift the lifeless body wherever they wished. ALL the female friends you have are either old crones or ugly, and fouler than old crones. These, as your companions, you conduct and drag about with you through parties, colonnades, theatres. In this way, Fabulla, you are lovely, in this way young.

LXXX

THOU restorest to us, Caesar, the wonders of our honoured grandsires' age, and lettest not the times of old die, now that the ancient fashions of the Latin arena are renewed and valour fights with more natural hand.<sup>3</sup> So also for the old-world fanes is kept their honour while thou art Governor, and the Cot<sup>4</sup> under a Jove so worshipped keeps its sanctity;<sup>5</sup> so, while thou dost found the new, thou bringest back, Augustus, the former things: what is, and what was, are owed to thee!

<sup>4</sup> The Cot (Casa Romuli) was a straw-thatched cottage on the Palatine, and was revered as the legendary dwelling of the Founder of Rome: cf. Virg. Aen. viii. 654.

NOT by the mystic rites of Dindymene, nor by the bull,<sup>1</sup> the spouse of Nile's heifer, in a word by no gods and goddesses does Gellia swear, but by her pearls. These she hugs, these she kisses passionately, these she calls her brothers, these she calls her sisters, these she loves more ardently than her two sons. If by any chance the unhappy woman should lose them, she says she would not live even an hour. Ah, how usefully now, Papirianus, would the hand of Annaeus Serenus be employed!<sup>2</sup>

LXXXII

WHILE the throng offers to you, Augustus, its querulous petitions, the reason why we too offer to our Master a few poems, is because we know that a god can have leisure at once for business and for the Muses, and that even this wreath of song pleases you. Bear with your bards, Augustus: we are your treasured pride, we are your earlier<sup>3</sup> care, and your delight. Not alone does the oak<sup>4</sup> beseech you, or Phoebus' laurel;<sup>5</sup> let there be made a civic crown for you of ivy<sup>6</sup> as well!

GREETING, my Toranius, dearest brother. The epigram which is supernumerary to my pages I have written to Stertinius,<sup>1</sup> a most illustrious man,<sup>2</sup> who wished to place my bust in his library. Concerning whom I thought I ought to write to you, that you might not be ignorant who was the Avitus there addressed. Farewell, and get ready your hospitality.

Famed, though against thy will, as a bard of sublime invention, to whom death long hence shall pay thy fitting meed, let this short stanza abide, I pray thee, beneath that bust of me, which thou addest, Avitus, to those of not ignoble men :

“Lo! he am I whose light verse yields to none ;
Reader, thy love, not awe, methinks I've won.
Let greater men strike greater notes : I earn Enough if my small themes oft to thy hands return.”

<sup>2</sup> Acidalia was a name of Venus from a fountain in Boeotia. She was also called Cytherea from Cythera, an island off the coast of Laconia.

XII

THIS spot of earth, which now lies wholly open, and is being covered with marble and with gold, knew our lord's infant years.<sup>2</sup> O blessed spot! Here had stood the house august that made real to the world what Rhodes, what duteous Crete<sup>3</sup> made real to the starry heaven. Cybele's priests guarded Jove with their rattling arms, such arms as Phrygians, but half men, could wield; <sup>4</sup> but thee the Sire of the gods safeguarded, and for thee, Caesar, thunderbolt and aegis stood for spear and buckler.

<sup>3</sup> i.e. the birth of a god. Pallas (Pind. Ol. vii. 35) was said to have sprung from the head of Zeus at Rhodes. But some commentators think Poseidon is referred to. Zeus or Jupiter was born in Crete.

Who, portraying in a bust Imperial features, has in Latin marble surpassed Phidian ivory? This is the aspect of a world, this the countenance of Jove in calm: so thunders that god when he thunders in cloudless skies. Not a crown alone has Pallas granted thee, Carus; our master's effigy which thou dost worship has she given.

As often as we have glanced at your Hyllus while he is serving wine, 'tis with a somewhat troubled eye you regard us, Afer. What, what offence, I ask you, is it to gaze on a gentle cup-bearer? We look upon the sun, stars, temples, gods. Am I to turn away my face as if a Gorgon offered me the cup, and were assaulting my eyes and my face? Fierce was Alcides, and 'twas allowed to gaze on Hylas: Mercury is allowed to sport along with Ganymede. If you do not wish your guest to gaze on your youthful servants, Afer, you should invite Phineuses and Oedipuses.<sup>2</sup>

XLVII

OF Democrituses, Zenos, and enigmatic Platos, and of every philosopher shown, dirty and hirsute, on a bust, you prate as if you were successor and heir of Pythagoras; and before your chin hangs a beard certainly no less than theirs. Ma ciò che tardi si senti agli ircosi, e turpemente ai pelosi, tu volontieri lo comporti rigido nelle effeminate coscie. You, who know the origins of the schools and their arguments, tell me this: what dogma, Pannychus, is it to be a pathic?

XLVIII

SEEING that you swore, Garricus, by your sacred rites and by your head, that I was heir to a quarter of your estate, I believed you—for who would willingly damn his own wishes?—and I kept warm my hope by continual presents, among which I sent you a Laurentian boar of unusual weight: you would imagine it came from Aetolian Calydon.<sup>1</sup> But you at once invited both people and Senate; a bilious Rome is still belching my boar. I myself—who could believe it?—was not added even as your last guest, aye, and not even a rib was given me or tail sent me. Concerning that quarter-estate of yours, what should I expect, Garricus? Not a twelfth of my own boar came to me!

XLIX

THIS is that toga much sung of in my poems, which my reader has heard of to the full, and loves.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> i.e. it was as huge as the boar slain by Meleager: cf. VII. xxvii. 2. <sup>2</sup> cf. VIII. xxviii.

Partheniana fuit quondam, memorabile vatis munus : in hac ibam conspiciendus eques, dum nova, dum nitida fulgebat splendida lana,                     5 dumque erat auctoris nomine digna sui :
 nunc anus et tremulo vix accipienda tribuli,
 quam possis niveam dicere iure tuo.
 quid non longa dies, quid non consumitis anni ?
 haec toga iam non est Partheniana, mea est.                     10

INGENIUM mihi, Gaure, probas sic esse pusillum, carmina quod faciam quae brevitate placent.
 confiteor. sed tu bis senis grandia libris qui scribis Priami proelia, magnus homo es ?
 nos facimus Bruti puerum, nos Langona vivum :                     5 tu magnus luteum, Gaure, Giganta facis.

LI

QUOD semper superos invito fratre rogasti, hoc, Lucane, tibi contigit, ante mori.
 invidet ille tibi ; Stygias nam Tullus ad umbras optabat, quamvis sit minor, ire prior.
 tu colis Elysios nemorisque habitator amoeni                     5 esse tuo primum nunc sine fratre cupis ;
 et si iam nitidis alternus venit ab astris pro Polluce, mones Castora ne redeat.

<sup>1</sup> Parthenius (himself a poet : cf. XI. i.) was Domitian's secretary, his name being derived from παρθένος (virgin), on which M. plays. The cloak was once young and unspotted : now it is old.

Parthenian was it once, a bard's memorable gift:<sup>1</sup> in this I went conspicuous as a knight, while it was new, while it brightly shone with glossy wool, and while it was worthy of its giver's name. Now it is an old crone, and one scarcely to be accepted by a doddering pauper, which you may without contradiction call "snowy."<sup>2</sup> What does not length of days, what do ye not consume, ye years? This toga is no longer Parthenian: it is mine.<sup>3</sup>

L

You prove to me, Gaurus, that my genius is in this way a puny one, because I make poems that please by their brevity. I confess it. But you, who in twice six books write of Priam's wars in grand style, are you a great man? I make Brutus' boy,<sup>4</sup> I make Langon live: you, great man as you are, Gaurus, make a giant of clay.

LI

WHAT thou didst alway crave of the High Gods, though thy brother said nay, this has fallen to thee, Lucanus—the earlier death. He envies thee; for Tullus longed, though younger than thou, to go before thee to the Stygian shades. Thou dwellest in Elysian fields, and, denizen of that pleasant grove, now for the first time desirest to be without thy brother; and, if Castor<sup>5</sup> has now come alternate from the lustrous stars in Pollux' stead, thou dost counsel him not to return again.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Another punctuation is a comma after astris and none after Polluce. Alternus would then refer to Pollux, and not Castor.

ON Kinsmen's Day,<sup>1</sup> when many a fowl is despatched, while I was preparing to send fieldfares to Stella, while also to you, Flaccus,<sup>2</sup> there came to my mind a big and burdensome crowd, of which each one thinks himself the chief, and my particular friend. SPENDOPHORUS goes, his master's armour-bearer, to Libyan cities: get ready the shafts, Cupid, to give the boy—those wherewith thou dost pierce youths and soft girls; yet in his tender hand let there be a smooth spear too. Cuirass and shield and helm I leave to thee; that he may plunge amid the war unscathed let him go bare; by no javelin, by no sword or arrow was Parthenopæus<sup>3</sup> hurt when he was not disguised by a casque. Whoever shall be pierced by this boy shall perish of love—oh, happy he, over whoever so fair a fate impends! NOTHING is worn smoother than Hedylyus' mantles: not the handles of antique Corinthian vases, nor a shank polished by a ten-years-worn fetter, nor the scarred neck of a broken-winded mule, nor the ruts that intersect the Flaminian Way, nor the pebbles that shine on the sea beach, nor a hoe polished by a Tuscan vineyard, nor the shiny toga of a defunct pauper, nor the ramshackle wheel of a lazy<sup>1</sup> carrier, nor a bison's flank scraped by its cage, nor the tusk, now aged, of a fierce boar. Then, sated with the view, he had tables and round covered table-tops<sup>1</sup> laid bare, and must needs have their high-hung glistening ivory supports brought down; and, after four measurements of a tortoise-shell couch for six, he said with a sigh that it was too small for his citrus-wood table. He took counsel of his nose whether the bronzes smelt of Corinth,<sup>2</sup> and condemned even your statuery, Polyclitus;<sup>3</sup> and, complaining that the crystal vases were disfigured by a small piece of glass, he put his seal on ten murrine<sup>4</sup> articles, and set them aside. He weighed antique tankards, and any cups made precious by Mentor's<sup>5</sup> handiwork, and counted the emeralds set in chased gold, and every larger pearl that tinkles from a snow-white ear. It seems to feel who was its creator and lord; so green it is, and with its boughs it climbs high heaven. Ofttimes under this tree sported Fauns<sup>5</sup> flown with wine, and a late-blown pipe startled the still house; and, while o'er lonely fields she fled by night from Pan, oft under these leaves the rustic Dryad<sup>6</sup> nestled hid. And fragrant has the dwelling been when Lyaeus held revel, and more luxuriant grown the tree's shade from spilth of wine, and the blushing flower has been scattered down from last night's wreath, and none could claim his own roses. son-in-law and father-in-law<sup>1</sup> were clashing in dreadful war, and the weeping earth was drenched with civil carnage. Why do you now cry "O manners!" why now "O times!" What is it displeases you, Caecilianus? No savagery of captains is here, no frenzy of the sword: we may enjoy unbroken peace and pleasure. 'Tis not our "manners" that make your "times" despicable to you, but your own manners, Caecilianus, make them so.

LXXI

A LION, the renown of Massylian hills, and the husband of the fleecy flock, have allied themselves in wondrous confidence. You may yourself see them: they are stalled in one pen, and each with the other takes his social meal; they relish not the breed of the woods, nor harmless herbs, but a young lamb sates their friendly hunger. What was the merit of the terror of Nemea, what of the carrier of Helle,<sup>2</sup> that they should glow, the tall sky's lustrous signs? If both sheep and wild beasts could win by merit to heaven, this ram, this lion were worthy to become stars.

THOU Appian Way, which revered Caesar in the guise of Hercules<sup>2</sup> hallows, chiefest glory of Ausonian ways, if thou desirest to know the deeds of the ancient Alcides, learn them. The Libyan he subdued, the golden apples he won; he ungirt the Amazonian targeteer of her Scythian girdle; he crowned the spoil of the lion's skin with Arcadia's boar; he freed the woods from the brazen-hoofed hind, the sky from the Stympalian birds; from the Stygian flood he returned with its hound; the teeming hydra he let no more grow stronger by death; he laved in the Tuscan stream Hesperian oxen. These things wrought the lesser Alcides; hear what that greater<sup>3</sup> did, whom men worship at the sixth stone from Alba's height. He redeemed the Palatine held by an evil power;<sup>4</sup> his first wars he waged, a boy, for his own Jove;<sup>5</sup> albeit alone he already held the reins of Julian power, he gave them up, and in a world that had been his own

<sup>2</sup> This book is not the first edition, which may have been published in 95, but an enlarged edition published in 98 after Book XI. M. afterwards issued a selection from Books X. and XI.: cf. XII. v. 1-2.

BOOK X

I

IF I seem too big a book and long, with my colophon delayed, read a few epigrams: I shall be a little book. Often a page of mine ends with a small poem: make me as short for yourself as you like.<sup>1</sup>

II

Too hurried before, the composition of my tenth book has made me now recall the work that had slipped from my hands.<sup>2</sup> You will read some things you know, but polished lately by the file; the greater part will be new; reader, be kind to both, reader, who are my wealth; for when Rome had given you to me, she said: "We have nothing greater to give you. By him will you escape unthankful Lethe's sluggish stream, and will in your better part survive. Messalla's marble the wild-fig sunders, and boldly the mule-driver laughs at Crispus' steeds broken in two.<sup>3</sup> But writings thefts do not injure, and time befriends them, and alone these monuments know not death."

<sup>1</sup> M. is M. Val. Messalla Corvinus, the patron of the poet Tibullus: cf. VIII. iii. 5. The Crispus is probably C. Passienus Crispus of the time of Claudius, and stepfather of Nero.

THE scurrilities of home-born slaves, low railing, and the foul insults of a hawker's tongue, which the broker of shattered Vatinian glasses<sup>1</sup> would reject as the price of a sulphur match, a certain skulking poet scatters abroad, and would have them appear as mine. Do you believe this, Priscus? that a parrot speaks with the voice of a quail, and Canus<sup>2</sup> longs to be a bagpipe-player? Far from poems of mine be black repute, poems which lustrous fame uplifts on pinions white. Why should I toil to be known so evilly when stillness can cost me nothing?

IV

You, who read of Oedipus and Thyestes neath a darkened sun, of Colchian witches and Scyllas—of what do you read but monsters? What will the rape of Hylas avail you, what Parthenopaeus and Attis, what the sleeper Endymion? or the boy stript of his gliding wings? or Hermaphroditus who hates the amorous waters? Why does the vain twaddle of a wretched sheet attract you? Read this of which Life can say: "'Tis my own." Not here will you find Centaurs, not Gorgons and Harpies: 'tis of man my page smacks. But you do not wish, Mamurra, to recognize your own manners, or to know yourself. Read the Origins of Callimachus.<sup>3</sup>

THIS little book, not learned enough, nor very strict in tone, yet not all unrefined, go, my Thalia, and carry to eloquent Pliny: <sup>1</sup> short is your labour, when you have crossed the Subura, in breasting the steep path. <sup>2</sup> There you will at once notice Orpheus, spray-sprinkled, crowning his drenched audience, <sup>3</sup> and the wild beasts marvelling at his song, and the Monarch's bird <sup>4</sup> that bore to the Thunderer the ravished Phrygian; there stands the modest dwelling of your own Pedo, <sup>5</sup> its frieze graven with eagle of lesser wing. But take heed you give no drunken knock on Eloquence's door at a time that is not yours; all the day he devotes to serious study, while he prepares for the ears of the Hundred Court <sup>6</sup> that which time and posterity may compare even with Arpinum's pages. <sup>7</sup> Safer will you go at the time of the late-kindled lamps; that hour is yours when Lyaeus is in revel, when the rose is queen, when locks are drenched. Then let even unbending Catos read me.

THAT Celtiberian Salo draws me to gold-bearing shores, that I fain would see on the hillside the roofs of my native land, you are the cause, Manius, dear to me from my ingenuous years, and wooed with boyhood's friendship; than whom none else in Hiberia's land is more sweet to me, and of genuine love more worthy. At your side could I have welcomed the sun-parched Carthaginian's Gaetulian huts and the hospitality of Scythian steeds. If your heart be as mine, if you have a mutual love for me, then, in whatever place, for us twain it will be Rome.

XXI

WHY, I ask, do you, Sextus, like writing what hardly Modestus himself, and hardly Claranus,<sup>1</sup> could understand? Your books do not require a reader, but an Apollo;<sup>2</sup> in your judgment Cinna<sup>3</sup> was greater than Maro. On these terms let your books be praised by all means; let my poems, Sextus, please commentators—so as to do without commentators.

Now in his placid age happy Antonius Primus reckons fifteen Olympiads gone,<sup>1</sup> and he looks back upon past days and the vista of his years, and fears not Lethe's wave now drawing nigh. ## BOOK X. xxx-xxxii

Ocean's surface is ruffled by a gentle breeze; yet is not the sea-floor still, but a slumberous swell bears on the gaudy shallop with the assisting air, as from the fluttering of a girl's purple fan, when she shuns the heat, there comes refreshing cool. The line seeks not its prey in the distant sea, but the fish, descried from above, draws down the cord cast from bed or couch. If ever Nereus feel the power of Aeolus,<sup>1</sup> the table, safe-supplied from its own store, laughs at the storm; the fishpond feeds turbot and home-reared bass; to its master's call swims the dainty lamprey; the usher summons a favourite gurnard, and, bidden to appear, aged mullets put forth their heads. But when dost thou, Rome, permit to enjoy those delights? How many days of Fornia does the year put to the credit of one tied to city business? O happy porters and bailiffs! Those delights are procured for your masters, they belong to you!

XXXI

You sold a slave yesterday for twelve hundred sesterces, Calliodorus, that you might dine well once. You have not dined well:<sup>2</sup> a four-pound mullet which you bought was the ornament and chief dish of your dinner. A man may cry, "This is not a fish, not a fish, you profligate: 'tis a man; a man, Calliodorus, is what you eat."

LET all young wives read Sulpicia, who wish to please their lords alone; let all husbands read Sulpicia, who wish to please their brides alone. She claims not as her theme the frenzy of the Colchian dame,<sup>1</sup> nor does she recount Thyestes' dreadful feast;<sup>2</sup> Scylla and Byblis she does not believe ever were; but she describes pure and honest love, toyings, endearments, and raillery. He who shall weigh well her poems will say no maid was so roguish, will say no maid was so modest. Such—I would believe—were Egeria's<sup>3</sup> pleasantries in Numa's dripping grot. With her as your school-mate, or with her as your teacher, you would have been more learned, Sappho, and have been chaste; but coy Phaon, had he seen her with Sappho and by her side, would have loved Sulpicia. at an easy price, but at one which would satisfy a crock of Falernian or Setine, dear to its own cellars. Why you do not come to Rome after such an interval this is, I think, your reason: you shun drinking your own wines.

XXXVII

Most conscientious student of law and of just statutes, who with your truthful tongue rule the Latin forum, if you have any commission, Maternus, to the Spanish ocean for your townsman and old comrade—or<sup>1</sup> do you think it better on Laurentum's shore to pull up ugly frogs and thin needle-fish,<sup>2</sup> than to return to its own rocks the captive mullet which shall seem to you of less than three pounds? and to dine on a tasteless Sicilian lobster set at the top of the table, and on fish which with a smooth coating a small shell covers,<sup>3</sup> than on oysters that do not envy the shell-fish of Baiae, and which slaves devour, unforbid by their master? Here with shouts you will drive into your toils a stinking vixen, and the foul quarry will bite your hounds; there the net, scarce drawn just now from the deep that teems with fish, will, all dripping, enmesh my own hares. While I speak, see, your fisherman comes home with empty creel, your huntsman is at hand, exulting in a badger caught! all your dinner by the sea comes from the city market. If you have any commission to the Spanish ocean—

THE letter of my eloquent friend has brought me a welcome pledge of love, the staid gift of an Italian toga, which not Fabricius,<sup>1</sup> but Apicius would have been glad to wear, glad too Maecenas, Caesar's knight. Less prized would it have been if another sent it: 'tis not the victim slain by every hand that wins favour. By you 'tis sent and comes; if I could not love your gift, Marcus, I could love at least my own name.<sup>2</sup> But more than the gift, and more welcome than the name itself, is the attention and judgment of a learned man.

GALLA formerly demanded of me twenty thousand sesterces, and I allow she was not too dear. A year goes by: "You will give ten thousand?" she said; she appeared to me to be demanding more than before. Then after six months, when she demanded two thousand, I offered a thousand: she would not accept them. Two, or perhaps three kalends had passed, and voluntarily she herself asked for four gold pieces:<sup>2</sup> I did not give them. She bade me send her a hundred sesterces, but this sum, too, seemed to me stiff. A starveling allowance of a hundred farthings allied me with a patron: this she wanted; I said I had given them to my slave. Could she come down to lower depths? She achieved this. Galla offers me her favours for nothing, offers of her own accord: I decline.

LXXVI

DOES this, Fortune, seem to you to be fair? Here is a citizen, not of Syria or Parthia, no knight from Cappadocian slave-stands, but home-born, one of the crowd of Remus and of Numa, a friend pleasant, honest, blameless, learned in either tongue, whose one fault—and that a great one—is that he is a poet: 'tis Maevius,<sup>3</sup> who shivers in a black cowl. Incitatus, the mule-driver, shines in scarlet.

<sup>2</sup> The aureolus was a gold coin worth 25 denarii, intrinsically about a pound of British money. Four, in terms of sesterces, would be 400.

a fruitful country-house. That land is dear to me wherein small means make me rich, and a slender store is luxury. The soil is maintained<sup>1</sup> here, there it maintains you; here your hearth is scarcely warm with its grudging fire, with a mighty blaze it shines there. Here hunger is dear and the market makes you bankrupt, there stands a table covered with its own country's wealth. Here four togas or more grow threadbare in a summer, there during four autumns one covers me. Go to, now! and pay court to great men, when a place can afford you, Avitus, whatever a friend does not afford!

XCVII

WHILE the lightly-heaped pyre was being laid with papyrus for the flame,<sup>2</sup> while his weeping wife was buying myrrh and casia, when now the grave, when now the bier, when now the anointer was ready, Numa wrote me down his heir, and—got well!

XCVIII

WHEN an attendant more voluptuous than the cupbearer of Ida<sup>3</sup> pours out my Caecuban, one than whom your daughter or wife, or mother or sister, is no smarter as she reclines at table, do you wish me instead to look at your lamps, or at your antique table of citrus-wood and its ivory legs? Nevertheless, that I may not be suspected by you at your table, produce for me from the throng in your rough farmstead some short-haired, unkempt, clownish, puny fellows, sons of a malodorous swineherd. This jealousy of yours will betray you! You cannot, Publius, possess such morals and such servants at once.

Go, fellow wayfarer of my Flavus; go, little book, over the wide sea—but when the wave befriends you—and, on easy course and with breezes all your own, seek the heights of Spanish Tarraco. From there the wheel will carry you, and, rapidly borne, you will perchance at the fifth stage see high-set Bilbilis and your Salo. Ask you what is my charge to you? That you greet, even as you are on the way, my comrades—few are they, but old ones, and last seen by me now thirty and four winters back—and now and then remind my Flavus that he procure for me at a wholesome price some retreat, pleasant and not hard to keep up, which may make a lazy man of your begetter. This is my charge. Already the skipper calls in blustering tones, and is blaming the delay, and a fairer wind has opened the harbour. <sup>1</sup> The pilleum, or cap of liberty worn by manumitted slaves (cf. II. lxviii. 4) was also generally worn at the Saturnalia. It was a symbol of licence. Thus, on the death of Nero, the common people assumed it, and ran about the whole city: Suet. Nero lvii.

clad<sup>1</sup> Rome, allow me, I wot, to trifle in verse un-toilsome. You have smiled: I may then, I am not forbidden. Ye pallid cares, far hence away! whatever comes to my mind let me speak without wrinkled meditation. Blend, boy, cups half and half, such as Pythagoras<sup>2</sup> offered Nero; blend them, thou, Dindymus,<sup>3</sup> and that more oft; nothing sober can I do: as I drink a fifteen-poets power will bear me up. Give me kisses now, and by Catullus's measure; if they be as many as he said, I will give thee a Sparrow of Catullus.<sup>4</sup>

VII

Now at least you will not say, Paula, to your dolt of a husband, every time you want to go to a lover at a distance, "Caesar bade me come in the morning to his Alban villa, Caesar bade me come to Circeii." Now such a manœuvre is off. 'Tis lawful for you to be a Penelope under Nerva as chief, but your itch and inveterate bent forbid you. Unfortunate woman, what will you do? Will you pretend the sickness of a friend? Your husband in person will cling to his dame's skirts, and will go with you to brother and mother and father. What fraud then would your ingenuity devise? Another wanton would perhaps say she is hysterical, and wished to sit in Sinuessa's baths. How much better is your practice whenever you have a mind to stray! You, Paula, prefer to tell your husband the truth!

<sup>1</sup> "A leaf of rue" seems to have been proverbial for a narrow space : Petr. 37, 58 ; cf. also XI. xxxi. 17.

XVIII

You have given me, Lupus, a suburban farm, but I have a bigger farm in my window. A farm can you call this, style this a farm, wherein a plant of rue<sup>1</sup> forms a grove of Diana, which the wing of a shrill cicala covers, which an ant eats up in a single day; for which a shut rose's petal would be a canopy; wherein grass is no more found than a leaf for Cosmus' perfumes or green pepper; wherein a cucumber cannot lie straight, nor a snake harbour its whole length? The garden gives short commons to a single caterpillar; a gnat, when it has consumed the willow, expires, and a mole is my ditcher and ploughman. No mushroom can swell, no figs can split, or violets expand. My borders a mouse ravages, and is feared by the tenant as much as a Calydonian boar, and my crop, lifted by the claws of flying Procne,<sup>2</sup> lies in a swallow's nest; and, though he stands shorn of his sickle and his appurtenances, there is no room by half for Priapus. My harvest, when gathered, hardly fills a snail-shell, and we store the must in a pitch-sealed nut. You have made a mistake, Lupus, but only by one letter; for when you gave me a fee I would you had given me a feed.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Lupus gave a praedium (land), and M. wanted a prandium (lunch), the difference being the letter n. "Fee" in law means an estate in land that descends to the holder's heir; here used in the sense of landed property.

<sup>3</sup> These lines are historically interesting as giving the explanation attributed to Octavius of the origin of the civil war between him and Antony, namely, pique on the part of Fulvia, Antony's wife, at the rejection by Octavius of her advances. Montaigne (iii. 12) refers to them as showing for how small causes great emperors will go to war.

The scene between Fulvia and Octavius was depicted on a

Do you ask why I am loth to marry you, Galla? You are a blue-stocking. My manhood often commits a solecism.<sup>1</sup>

READ six wanton verses of Caesar Augustus, you spiteful fellow, who with a sour face read words of Latin :

“ Because Antony handles Glaphyra,<sup>2</sup> Fulvia has appointed this penalty for me, that I, too, should handle her. I to handle Fulvia? What if Manius were to implore me to treat him as a Ganymede? Am I to do it? I trow not, if I be wise. ‘ Either handle me or let us fight,’ she says. And what that my person is dearer to me than my very life? Let the trumpets sound.”<sup>3</sup>

You justify for certain my sprightly little books, Augustus, who know how to speak with Roman bluntness.<sup>4</sup>

XXI

LYDIA is as widely developed as the rump of a bronze equestrian statue, as the swift hoop that resounds with its tinkling rings,<sup>5</sup> as the wheel so often cameo by Arellius, probably the painter mentioned by Pliny, N.H. xxxv. 37, as having outraged his art by depicting prostitutes. Fulvia is represented as sitting nude upon a bed, and holding Octavius by the arm. He is in full armour, and is beckoning to two soldiers in the rear. The cameo has been reproduced in a rare book published at the Vatican Press in 1786, and entitled “ Monumens de la vie privée des douze Césars d’après une suite de pierres gravées sur leur règne.”

<sup>1</sup> A very obscure line, which may mean "so often struck by the acrobat in his flight." The nature of the petaurum has never been clearly known; sometimes it seems to be a kind of springboard or seesaw, sometimes a wheel suspended in the air: cf. II. lxxxvi. 7. The performance was dangerous: Fest. xiv. s.v. Petaurista, quoting Arist. Fr. 234.

struck from the extended springboard,<sup>1</sup> as a worn-out shoe drenched by muddy water, as the wide-meshed net that lies in wait for wandering fieldfares, as an awning that does not belly to the wind<sup>2</sup> in Pompey's theatre, as a bracelet that has slipped from the arm of a consumptive catamite, as a pillow widowed of its Leuconian stuffing,<sup>3</sup> as the aged breeches of a pauper Briton, and as the foul throat of a pelican<sup>4</sup> of Ravenna. This woman I am said to have embraced in a marine fishpond: I don't know; I think I embraced the fishpond itself.

XXII

THAT with your hard mouth you rub the soft lips of white-cheeked Galaesus, that you consort with a naked Ganymede, 'tis too much—who denies it?—but let that be enough; at least refrain from waking passions with lascivious hand. Towards beardless boys this is a greater sinner than your yard, and your fingers create and hasten manhood. Thence comes a goatish odour, and quick-springing hair, and a beard, a wonder to mothers, and baths in broad day are displeasing. Nature has separated the male: one part has been produced for girls, one for men. Use your own part.

<sup>4</sup> Described by Pliny, N.H. x. 66. By "throat" M. means the large pouch under the mandibles (the alterius uteri genus of Pliny's description), where the pelican stores its catch of fish previously to consumption.

SILA is ready to marry me on any terms, but on no terms am I willing to take Sila to wife. Yet, when she urged me: "You shall bring me, as bride's dower, in gold a million sesterces," I said: "What can be smaller than that? And I will have no marital relations with you even on the wedding-night, nor shall my bed be the same as yours; and I will embrace my mistress, and you shall not forbid me, and, if bidden, you shall send me your own maid. Before your eyes an attendant shall give me wanton kisses, whether he is my own or yours. You shall dine with me, but you shall recline so apart from me that my robe is not touched by yours. Kisses you shall give me but rarely, and you shall not give them uninvited; and you shall not give them like a bride, but like an aged mother. If you can suffer that, if there be nothing you refuse to endure—you will find a man, Sila, who is willing to marry you!"

You are a man of iron if you can show any amorous power, Flaccus, when your mistress prays you for six helpings of fish-pickle, or asks for two slices of tunny, or a skinny lizard-fish, and does not think herself worth a whole bunch of grapes—a woman to whom her maid delightedly carries anchovy sauce in a dark earthenware platter, to be immediately gulped down; or, who, when she has hardened her brow and laid aside all shame, solicits five greasy skins to make a small mantle. But let my mistress demand of me a pound of nard,<sup>1</sup> or emeralds, or a pair of sardonyxes, and not look at any but prime silk from the Tuscan street, or let her beg a hundred gold coins just as if they were pence. WHENEVER you have passed the threshold of a placarded cubicle, whether it be a boy or a girl who has smiled on you, you are not satisfied with a door and a curtain and a bolt, and you require that greater secrecy should be provided for you. No one is of a modesty so tender and so anxious, Cantharus, who is either a — or a —.<sup>2</sup>

THERE is not an hour comes amiss to you, Phyllis, for plundering me in my infatuation : with such cunning do you rob me. Now your lying maid laments because a mirror has been left behind, or a jewel drops from your finger, or a stone from your ear ; at one time silks lost by theft may be a means of profit, at another there is shown to me an empty casket of Cosmus' perfume ; now a crumbling jar of dark Falernian is asked for that a chattering wise-woman may exorcise your dreams ;<sup>1</sup> now, to induce me to buy, either a huge bass or a two-pound mullet, a rich woman friend has proposed a dinner at your house. WHEN you see that I am desirous, and perceive that I am on the stretch, Telesphorus, you ask a big price. Imagine I wish to refuse it: can I? And unless I swear when I say "I will give it," you withdraw those charms that give you much licence with me. What if a barber, when his drawn razor is over my head, should then ask me for his liberty and for wealth? I will promise it; for it is not a barber who asks on that occasion, a highwayman asks; a thing imperious is fear: but when his razor is safe in its crooked case, I will break the barber's shanks and his hands to boot. Il velo è tessuto per la sposa, di già la vergine è preparata, di già la nuova maritata toserà<sup>3</sup> i tuoi ragazzi. Essa darà una volta da pedicare all' avido marito mentre teme le prime ferite della nuova lancia; la nutrice e la madre vieteranno che ciò si faccia troppo sovente, e diranno "questa ti è moglie, non ragazzo." Oh, quanti furori e quanti stenti se il c—no sarà a te cosa insolita! Dunque consegnati qual novizio ad una Suburana maestra. Quella ti farà uomo; una vergine insegna ciò malamente.

you are keeping a kiss for your bride. A head shrouded in a cowl will not free you, nor a litter defended with head and curtain; nor will a sedan, though oftener closed, protect you: through any chink the kisser will enter. Not even the very consul's office, not the tribunate, nor the six fasces, nor the lordly rod of the clamorous lictor,<sup>1</sup> will drive off the kisser: you may be sitting on a high tribunal, and from curule chair be declaring the laws to the nations, the kisser will climb up to that place and to that. When you are fevered he will kiss you, and when you are in tears; he will give a kiss to you when you are yawning, and when you are swimming; he will give it when you are in the jakes. Remedy for the evil is this alone: make a friend of a man you don't want to kiss.<sup>2</sup>

XCIX

WHENEVER you get up from your chair—I have often noticed it ere now—your unhappy garments, Lesbia, treat you indecently. ### VALERIUS MARTIALIS TO HIS PRISCUS SENDS GREETING

I KNOW that I ought to offer some plea in defence of a most obstinate three-years' indolence; yet no such plea could have secured an acquittal even amid those City pursuits in which we more easily succeed in appearing troublesome than dutiful;<sup>1</sup> much less in this provincial solitude, where, unless we study even immoderately, retirement is at once without solace and without excuse. Hear, then, my reasons. Of these this is the most important and first of all: I miss that audience of my fellow-citizens to which I had grown accustomed, and seem to myself a pleader in a strange court; for whatever is popular in my small books my hearer inspired. That subtlety of judgment, that inspiration of the subject, the libraries, theatres, meeting-places, where pleasure is a student without knowing it—to sum up all, those things which fastidiously I deserted I regret, like one desolate. Added to this is the back-biting of my fellow-townsmen, and envy ousting judgment, and one or other evilly disposed persons—a host in a tiny place—a circumstance against which it is difficult every day to keep a good stomach; do not wonder therefore that occupations have been cast aside in repugnance which I used to follow with ardour. Yet, not to deny you anything on your arriving from the City and claiming it—and I am not shewing you any fitting thanks if I do only what I can—I have enjoined on myself a task that I used to allow myself as a pleasure, and have devoted a very few days to study that I might greet your ears, my most friendly hearer, with their due feast of welcome.<sup>1</sup> I would wish you not to think it a trouble to weigh with care and to scrutinise those efforts that in your hands alone are in no danger, and—what is most difficult for you—to judge my trifling effusions with especial impartiality, so that, if you decide it should go, I may not transmit to Rome a book, not merely written in Spain, but Spanish.

<sup>1</sup> The cena adventoria was a dinner given to one arriving from abroad. The phrase here represents a book of epigrams which was handed to Terentius Priscus on his arrival in Spain in the winter of 101, and immediately forwarded to Rome. This book, having been written paucissimis diebus, is probably the brevis libellus of XII. i. 3, and not Book XII. as we have it, which was probably an enlarged edition, perhaps compiled even after Martial's death, and which

I

WHILE the nets are idle, and your barking Molossian hounds, and the wood is at rest, now you have found no boar, you will be able, Priscus, to bestow your leisure on my small volume.<sup>2</sup> The hour is neither summer's nor is it lost to you wholly.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Studious men used to read or write in the intervals of the chase: Plin. Ep. i. 6; v. 18.

<sup>3</sup> "It will take you less time to read, and the time will be well spent." A Roman hour, being a twelfth of the time between sunrise and sunset, was shorter in winter.

You that lately used to be sent from the City to the provinces, ho! you will now go to Rome, O foreign book, from the people of gold-bearing Tagus and of rugged Salo, native streams that a great land makes mine. Yet you will not be a stranger, nor can you now be called a visitor, whose many brothers the lofty house of Remus holds. Of your own right make for the reverend threshold of the new temple where a fane has been restored to the Pierian choir.<sup>2</sup> Or, if you prefer, you will walk through the entrance to the Subura; there stands the high hall of my consul; eloquent Stella inhabits a house crowned with bay.<sup>3</sup>—illustrious Stella, who thirsts for the stream of his Ianthis;<sup>4</sup> a fount of Castaly there proudly wells with its glassy torrent, whereof the Nine Dames oft, they say, have drunk. He will give you to people and senate and knight to be read, nor with eyes overtearless will he himself read you through. Why do you require a title? Let two or three verses be read: all will cry that you, O book, are mine.

But I, whom you compel to break off my slumber in the middle, and to bear and endure the morning mud, what do I look for? When my protruding foot gapes out of a broken shoe, and a sudden downpour of heavy rain falls, and my home-born slave, who has taken away my cloak, does not appear when I bawl for him, a slave approaches my frozen ear and "Lætorius asks you to dine with him," he says. For twenty sesterces a head? Not I: I prefer starvation to getting a dinner as reward, while you get a province, and to our performing the same services and not earning the same recompense.

I DRINK cups containing two measures; you, Cinna, drink cups holding eleven. And do you then complain, Cinna, that we don't drink the same wine?<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> It was a vulgar habit of some hosts to give their guests inferior food or wine to what the host and his particular friends ate or drank: cf. vi. xi. 2; Plin. Ep. ii. vi. 2. See on the subject generally Juv. v. In the epigram in the text the host excuses himself: "You cannot expect the best wine if you drink so much."

HERMOGENES tantus mapparum, Pontice, fur est quantus nummorum vix, puto, Massa fuit ;
 tu licet observes dextram teneasque sinistram, inveniet mappam qua ratione trahat :
 cervinus gelidum sorbet sic halitus anguem ; 5
 casuras alte sic rapit Iris aquas.
 nuper cum Myrino peteretur missio laeso, subduxit mappas quattuor Hermogenes ;
 cretatam praetor cum vellet mittere mappam, praetori mappam surpuit Hermogenes. 10
 attulerat mappam nemo dum furta timentur ;
 mantele a mensa surpuit Hermogenes.
 hoc quoque si derit, medios discingere lectos mensarumque pedes non timet Hermogenes.
 quamvis non modico caleant spectacula sole, 15
 vela reducuntur cum venit Hermogenes.
 festinant trepidi substringere carbasa nautae,
 ad portum quotiens paruit Hermogenes.
 linigeri fugiunt calvi sistrataque turba, inter adorantes cum stetit Hermogenes. 20
 ad cenam Hermogenes mappam non attulit umquam, a cena semper rettulit Hermogenes.

<sup>1</sup> Hermes was the thief among the gods : cf. Hor. Od. i. x. 7 ; accordingly M. invents the name "Sprung of Hermes."

<sup>3</sup> Probably Baebius Massa, a mountebank of Nero's : Schol. on Juv. i. 35. He was, on the accusation of the younger Pliny, condemned A.D. 93 for embezzlement when proconsul of Hispania Baetica.

HERMOGENES<sup>1</sup> is as great a thief, Ponticus, of napkins<sup>2</sup> as I hardly imagine even Massa<sup>3</sup> was of money. You may watch his right hand and hold his left,<sup>4</sup> he will discover some method of withdrawing a napkin. So a stag's breath sucks up a clammy snake,<sup>5</sup> so Iris<sup>6</sup> plucks up the waters that will afterwards fall from on high. Of late when a discharge was sought for wounded Myrinus, Hermogenes filched four napkins;<sup>7</sup> when the praetor wanted to throw his white napkin,<sup>8</sup> Hermogenes pilfered his napkin from the praetor. When no one had brought a napkin, in fear of theft, Hermogenes pilfered the table-cloth from off the table. If this, too, is not to be found, Hermogenes is not afraid to strip the valance from round the couches and the feet of the tables. Although the arena is burning under an immoderate sun, the awning is drawn back when Hermogenes arrives. Sailors in a panic hurry to brail up their canvas whenever Hermogenes has appeared at the port. Linen-clad, bald priests and the company with the timbrels<sup>9</sup> fly when Hermogenes has taken his stand among the worshippers. To a dinner Hermogenes has never brought a napkin: from a dinner Hermogenes has always carried a napkin home.

<sup>5</sup> According to Pliny (N.H. viii. 50) stags with their breath drew serpents out of their holes: cf. also Lucr. vi. 765.

<sup>7</sup> Handkerchiefs were waved when a discharge or quarter was wished by the spectators for a gladiator: cf. Lib. Spect. xxix. 3.

<sup>9</sup> The priests and worshippers of Isis. The priests and initiates wore linen, and their heads were shaved: Juv. vi. 533.

There went along a three-legged truckle-bed and a two-legged table, and, alongside a lantern and bowl of cornel, a cracked chamberpot was making water through its broken side; the neck of a flagon was lying under a brazier green with verdigris; that there were salted gudgeons, too, or worthless sprats, the obscene stench of a jug confessed—such a stench as a whiff of a marine fish-pond would scarcely equal. Nor was there wanting a section of Tolosan cheese, nor a four-year-old chaplet of black pennyroyal, and ropes shorn of their garlic and onions, nor your mother's pot full of foul resin, the depilatory of dames under the walls. Why do you look for a house and scoff at rent-collectors when you can lodge for nothing, O Vacerra? This procession of your traps befits Beggars' bridge.

But let her sell it: how precious is a good kiss! This she sells, I say, and for no small plunder too; she asks for either a pound of Cosmian unguent, or four times two gold coins of the new mintage, that her kisses may not be silent ones or grudgingly given, that she may not with shut lips deny their approach. Yet this one thing she does graciously; Aegle, who refuses to give a kiss, a single kiss, for nothing, does not refuse to — for nothing.

LVII

Do you ask why I often resort to my small fields in arid Nomentum, and the unkempt household of my villa? Neither for thought, Sparsus, nor for quiet is there any place in the city for a poor man. Schoolmasters in the morning do not let you live; before daybreak, bakers; the hammers of the copper-smiths all day. On this side the money-changer idly rattles on his dirty table Nero's coins,<sup>1</sup> on that the hammerer of Spanish gold-dust<sup>2</sup> beats his well-worn stone with burnished mallet; and Bellona's raving throng does not rest, nor the canting shipwrecked seaman with his swathed body,<sup>3</sup> nor the Jew taught by his mother to beg, nor the blear-eyed huckster of sulphur wares. He who can count the losses lazy sleep must bear will say how many brass pots and pans city hands clash when the eclipsed moon is being assailed by the Colchian magic-wheel.<sup>4</sup> You, Sparsus, know nothing of these things, and cannot know, luxurious as you are in your

To grow pale on one's birthday lest Sabellus lack warm water; and, that Alauda may drink his wine strained, anxiously to pass the turbid Caecuban through the bag; and to go to and fro among one's tables; to receive these and those guests, and all through the dinner to be getting up, treading on marble colder than ice<sup>4</sup>—what reason is there why one should suffer and endure these things of one's own accord, which, if your lord and master<sup>5</sup> bade you, you would refuse?

You are afraid, Ligurra, I should write verses on you, and some short and lively poem, and you long to be thought a man that justifies such fear. But vain is your fear, and your longing is vain. To escape Menogenes in the warm baths and about the baths is impossible, try what artifice you will. He will grab the warm hand-ball with right and left, that he may be able often to score to your account the balls he catches.<sup>2</sup> He picks up and will restore to you the flaccid bladder-ball from the dust, even if he has already bathed, is already in his dinner slippers. If you take your towels, he will speak of them as whiter than snow, although they are dirtier than an infant's bib. While you are arranging with a comb your scanty hairs, he will say these are Achilles' locks that you have ordered. He will with his own hands bring you the dregs from the bottom of the smoky wine-jar,<sup>3</sup> and he wipes the moisture on your brow. Everything he will praise, will admire everything, until, having endured to the end a thousand boredoms, you say "Come and dine."

FABIANUS, who derided hernia, whom of late all lewd fellows dreaded,<sup>4</sup> when he inveighed against in a triangle: cf. iv. xix. 7. M. scores his own catches to Martial. But the meaning of l. 4 is very uncertain.

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps to be used as an emetic before dinner: cf. Sen. Ad Helv. x. 3; or as a detergent of the skin. The line may, however, mean "will put up with the dregs for himself."

I WAS writing an epic; you began to write one: I left off, that my poems should not stand in rivalry with yours. My Thalia shifted to tragic buskins: you also fitted on yourself the long train of tragedy. I struck the strings of a lyre practised by the Calabrian Muses:<sup>1</sup> you, ambitious man, snatch from me the new quill.<sup>2</sup> I venture satire: you strain to be a Lucilius.<sup>3</sup> I sport with light elegies: you, too, sport with the same thing. What lesser art can there be? I begin to model epigrams: in this quarter, too, my fame is already sought after by you. CASEUS Etruscae signatus imagine Lunae praestabit pueris prandia mille tuis.

XXXI.—Caseus Vestinus

SI sine carne voles ientacula sumere frugi, haec tibi Vestino de grege massa venit.

XXXII.—Caseus Fumosus

NON quemcumque focum nec fumum caseus omnem, sed Velabrensem qui bibit, ille sapit.

XXXIII.—Casei Trebulani

TREBULA nos genuit; commendat gratia duplex, sive levi flamma sive domamur aqua.

XXXIV.—Bulbi

CUM sit anus coniunx et sint tibi mortua membra, nil aliud bulbis quam satur esse potes.

XXXV.—Lucanicae

FILIA Picenae venio Lucanica porcae:
pultibus hinc niveis grata corona datur.

<sup>1</sup> Cheeses were made very large at Luna: Plin. N.H. xi. 97, who says they were made of a thousand pounds' weight.

<sup>2</sup> Vestinian cheese was a favourite with the Romans. The Vestini were in central Italy, between the Apennines and the Adriatic.

<sup>4</sup> A town in the Sabine country: cf. v. lxxi. 1. The

XXX.—Cheese from Luna

CHEESE, stamped with the crest of Etruscan Luna, will afford your slaves a thousand lunches.<sup>1</sup>

XXXI.—A Vestinian Cheese

IF you wish without meat to take a frugal breakfast, this lump comes to you from a Vestinian<sup>2</sup> flock.

XXXII.—Smoked Cheese

It is not every heat, or every smoke that a cheese imbibes; but that which has imbibed Velabran<sup>3</sup> has flavour.

XXXIII.—Cheese from Trebula

TREBULA<sup>4</sup> gave us birth; a double excellence recommends us; we are tamed by a moderate fire or by water.

XXXIV.—Bulbs

SINCE your wife is an old woman, and your members are nerveless, you can do nothing but satisfy your hunger with bulbs.<sup>5</sup>

XXXV.—Lucanian Sausages

DAUGHTER of a Picenian sow,<sup>6</sup> here I come, a Lucanian sausage; with me you may put a toothsome garnish round white pottage.

cheese was good to eat, whether toasted, or moistened in water.

<sup>5</sup> Bulbs were eaten as aphrodisiacs: cf. III. lxxv. 3; Athen. ii. 64.

<sup>6</sup> cf. IV. xlvi. 8; v. lxxviii. 9. According to Apicius (ii. 4) the sausage was compounded of minced pork flavoured with pepper, cumin, savory, rue, parsley, and bay-leaves. It was called in Low Latin salsicia, whence the word sausage.

XXXVI.—Cistella Olivarum

HAEC quae Picenis venit subducta trapetis inchoat atque eadem finit oliva dapes.

XXXVII.—Mala Citrea

AUT Corcyraei sunt haec de frondibus horti, aut haec Massyli poma draconis erant.

XXXVIII.—Colustrum

SUBRIPUIT pastor quae nondum stantibus haedis de primo matrum lacte colustra damus.

XXXIX.—Haedus

LASCIVUM pecus et viridi non utile Baccho det poenas; nocuit iam tener ille deo.

XL.—Ova

CANDIDA si croceos circumfluit unda vitellos,
Hesperius scombri temperet ova liquor.

XLI.—Porcellus Lactans

LACTE mero pastum pigrae mihi matris alumnum

BOOK XIII. XXXVI—XLI

XXXVI.—A Small Box of Olives

THESE olives which have reached you, withdrawn from the oil presses of Picenum,<sup>1</sup> begin and also end our repasts.

XXXVII.—Citrons

THESE were either from the branches of Corcyra's garden, or they were apples, the Massylian dragon's charge.<sup>2</sup>

XXXVIII.—Beestings

BEESTINGS,<sup>3</sup> whereof the shepherd has robbed the kids while not yet able to stand, I give you from the first milk of the dams.

XXXIX.—A Kid

LET the wanton beast, and one of no service to the green vine, pay the penalty; though young, it has already injured the god.<sup>4</sup>

XL.—Eggs

IF a white liquid surround the saffron-coloured yolks, let the sauce<sup>5</sup> of Spanish mackerel season the eggs.

XLI.—A Sucking Pig

LET a rich man set before me the nursling, fed on milk alone, of a lazy mother, and let him eat of an Aetolian boar.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> According to Pliny (N.H. xv. 14) a kind of African apple, or rather berry, of two kinds, one white, the other red. At Verona grew a variety called lanata from having a down like a peach.

XLII.—Pomegranates and Tuber-apples

I do not give you tuber-apples<sup>1</sup> and pomegranates from Libyan boughs, but from my Nomentan trees.

XLIII.—The Same

CULLED from suburban boughs are sent you pomegranates and home-grown tuber-apples.<sup>2</sup> What do you want with Libyans?

XLIV.—Sow's Paps

YOU would think it not yet a dish of udder, so full-flowing is the dug, and so does the pap swell with living milk.<sup>3</sup>

XLV.—Fowls

IF I possessed guinea-fowls and pheasants you should receive them; but now receive the birds of the farmyard.

XLVI.—Early Peaches

OF little worth should we peaches have been on the branches of our mother tree; now on adoptive boughs we peaches are prized.<sup>4</sup>

story how Domitian on the day before his murder, being offered some tuber-apples, commanded their being kept for the morrow, "si modo uti licuerit."

<sup>3</sup> The thing sent is apparently the udder cooked, which is so full of milk it seems alive.

<sup>4</sup> Friedländer explains of peaches grafted on an apricot (malum praecox) tree; cf. Calp. ii. 42, of peaches grafted on a plum tree.

THE EPIGRAMS OF MARTIAL

XLVII.—Panes Picentini

PICENTINA Ceres niveo sic nectare crescit ut levis accepta spongea turget aqua.

XLVIII.—Boleti

ARGENTUM atque aurum facilest laenamque togamque mittere ; boletos mittere difficilest.

XLIX.—Ficedulae

CUM me ficus alat, cum pascar dulcibus uvis, cur potius nomen non dedit uva mihi ?

L.—Terrae Tubera

RUMPIMUS altricem tenero quae vertice terram tubera, boletis poma secunda sumus.

LI.—Turdorum Decuria

TEXTA rosis fortasse tibi vel divite nardo, at mihi de turdis facta corona placet.

LII.—Anates

TOTA quidem ponatur anas, sed pectore tantum et cervice sapit : cetera redde coco.

---

<sup>1</sup> According to Pliny (N.H. xviii. 27) Picenian bread was made of spelt (alica), steeped for nine days, then mixed with raisin juice, and kneaded into the shape of a spool of wool (in speciem tractae), and then baked. He adds that it was not fit to eat till it had been moistened with milk mixed with honey (mulsum).

<sup>2</sup> Either because they grow only at certain seasons (Friedländer), or because they are so precious that one prefers to eat them oneself.

BOOK XIII. XLVII-LII

XLVII.—Picenian Loaves

THE bread of Picenum grows big with its white nectar as a light sponge swells when it has taken in water.<sup>1</sup>

XLVIII.—Mushrooms

SILVER and gold, and a mantle, and a toga it is easy to send ; to send mushrooms is difficult.<sup>2</sup>

XLIX.—Beccaficos

SEEING that figs nourish me, seeing that I am fed on sweet grapes, why did not the grape rather give me my name ?<sup>3</sup>

L.—Truffles

WE truffles<sup>4</sup> that burst through the nurturing soil with our soft heads are of earth's apples second to mushrooms.

LI.—A Decade of Fieldfares

A CIRCLET woven of roses or rich spikenard perhaps pleases you, but one made of fieldfares<sup>5</sup> pleases me.

LII.—Ducks

LET a duck certainly be served up whole ; but it is tasty only in the breast and neck : the rest return to the cook.

<sup>3</sup> "Why am I not called uedula?"

<sup>4</sup> In Greek ῥῥνα. See Athen. ii. 60 and Plin. xix. 11. They grow of their own accord, particularly in dry and sandy soil. Pliny calls them "callosities of the earth" (terrae callum). Juvenal (v. 115) refers to the fable (rejected by Plutarch: Quaest. Conv. iv. 2) that truffles were produced by thunderstorms.

<sup>5</sup> Fieldfares were often strung round a hoop: cf. iii. xlvii. 10.

LIII.—Turtures

CUM pinguis mihi turtur erit, lactuca, valebis ;
et cocleas tibi habe. perdere nolo famem.

LIV.—Perna

CERRETANA mihi fiat vel missa licebit de Menapis : lauti de petasone vorent.

LV.—Petaso

MUSTEUS est : propera, caros nec differ amicos.
nam mihi cum vetulo sit petasone nihil.

LVI.—Volva

TE fortasse magis capiat de virgine porca ;
me materna gravi de sue volva capit.

LVII.—Colocasia

NILIACUM ridebis holus lanasque sequaces, inproba cum morsu fila manuque trahes.

LVIII.—Iecur Anserinum

<sup>5</sup> cf. VIII. XXXIII. 13. Pliny (N.H. xxi. 51) says it is “ caule

BOOK XIII. LIII—LVIII

LIII.—Turtle-doves

WHEN I shall have a fat turtle-dove, good-bye, lettuce; and keep the snails for yourself. I don't want to spoil my appetite.<sup>1</sup>

LIV.—Gammon of Bacon

LET me have Cerretanian<sup>2</sup> gammon served to me, or it may be sent from the Menapians<sup>3</sup>; let gourmets devour ham.

LV.—Ham

It is freshly cured: make haste, and do not put off your dear friends; for let me have nothing to do with an old ham.

LVI.—Womb

You perhaps the womb of a virgin pig may allure more: the maternal womb of a pregnant sow allures me.<sup>4</sup>

LVII.—Egyptian Beans

You will scoff at this vegetable from Nile and its tenacious threads when with teeth and hands you draw out its stubborn fibres.<sup>5</sup>

LVIII.—Goose's Liver

SEE how the liver is swollen bigger than a big goose! In wonder you will say: "Where, I ask, did this grow?"<sup>6</sup> araneoso in mandendo," i.e. like spider's webs. Athenaeus (iii. 2) gives a long description of it from Theophrastus.

<sup>6</sup> Geese were fattened on figs by gourmets: Hor. Sat. ii. viii. 88; and their livers grew to a great size: Juv. v. 114. See generally Athen. ix. 32. The practice is recalled by the word fegato, Italian for liver.

THE EPIGRAMS OF MARTIAL

LIX.—Glires

TOTA mihi dormitur hiemps et pinguior illo tempore sum quo me nil nisi somnus alit.

LX.—Cuniculi

GAUDET in effossis habitare cuniculus antris.
monstravit tacitas hostibus ille vias.

LXI.—Attagenae

INTER sapes fertur alitum primus
Ionicarum gustus attagenarum.

LXII.—Gallinae Altiles

PASCITUR et dulci facilis gallina farina, pascitur et tenebris. ingeniosa gula est.

LXIII.—Capones

NE nimis exhausto macresceret inguine gallus,

<sup>1</sup> cf. III. lviii. 36. Dormice were kept in pens (gliraria), and, for purposes of fattening, even in casks: Varr. R.R. iii 15. They were fattened on beech-nuts: Plin. N.H. xvi. 7.

<sup>3</sup> So, according to Pliny, N.H. x. lxxviii., who says the attagen was formerly a rare bird, but in his day was found in Gaul and Spain and in the Alps.

LIX.—Dormice

ALL my winter is passed in sleep, and I am fatter at that season during which nothing but sleep nourishes me.<sup>1</sup>

LX.—Rabbits

A RABBIT delights in dwelling in burrowed holes: he taught foes the art of secret paths.<sup>2</sup>

LXI.—Heathcocks

OF all flavours of fowls the most tasty is said to be that of Ionian<sup>3</sup> heathcocks.

LXII.—Fatted Fowls

THE hen is easily fattened on sweetened meal; it fattens, too, on the dark.<sup>4</sup> Ingenious is gluttony!

LXIII.—Capons

THAT the cock might not grow thin by over indulgence, he has been gelded. Now he will be to me a Gaul.<sup>5</sup>

LXIV.—The Same

IN vain the hen submits to her sterile husband. This bird it beseemed to have been the bird of Mother Cybele.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>2</sup> M. plays on the meanings of gallus, viz. a cock, a Gaul, or a priest of Cybele. See next epigram.

<sup>3</sup> Whose priests were called Galli: cf. II. xlv. 2; VIII. lxxv. 16.

LXV.—Perdices

PONITUR Ausoniis avis haec rarissima mensis :
hanc in piscina ludere saepe soles.

LXVI.—Columbinae

NE violes teneras periuro dente columbas,

LXVII.—Palumbi

INGUINA torquati tardant hebetantque palumbi :
non edat hanc volucrem qui cupit esse salax.

LXVIII.—Galbuli

GALBINA<sup>1</sup> decipitur calamis et retibus ales,

<sup>1</sup> No explanation of this epigram is known.

<sup>3</sup> The identity of the bird, here called witwall, is very obscure. It is generally supposed to be the same as the Υκρεπος, or vireo, and has been variously identified with the

LXV.—Partridges

THIS bird is very rarely served on Italian tables : one often sees it playing in the fishpond.<sup>1</sup>

LXVI.—Doves

Do not violate with profane tooth tender doves, if the rites of the goddess of Cnidos<sup>2</sup> have been entrusted to you.

LXVII.—Wood-pigeons

RINGDOVES check and blunt the manly powers : let not him eat this bird who wishes to be lickerish.

LXVIII.—Witwalls

THE green bird<sup>3</sup> is beguiled by canes<sup>4</sup> and nets at the season when the young grape is swelling with juice yet immature.

LXIX.—Cattæ

UMBRIA has never supplied us with Pannonian cattæ ; these are the gifts Pudens prefers to send to his lord.<sup>5</sup>

LXX.—Peacocks

Dost thou admire it, oft as it spreads its spangled wings, and hast the heart, unfeeling man, to deliver this bird to a cruel cook ?

golden oriole (O. galbula), the greenfinch, and the green woodpecker.

<sup>5</sup> P., who came from Umbria, preferred to send these birds, which he had reared in Umbria, as a present to his patron, rather than birds of his native country. The cattæ is unknown.

THE EPIGRAMS OF MARTIAL

LXXI.—Phoenicopteri

DAT mihi pinna rubens nomen, sed lingua gulosis nostra sapit. quid si garrula lingua foret?

LXXII.—Phasiani

ARGOA primum sum transportata carina:
ante mihi notum nil nisi Phasis erat.

LXXIII.—Numidicae

ANSERE Romano quamvis satur Hannibal esset, ipse suas numquam barbarus edit aves.

LXXIV.—Anseres

HAEC servavit avis Tarpeia templa Tonantis.
miraris? nondum fecerat illa deus.

LXXV.—Grues

TURBABIS versus nec littera tota volabit, unam perdidideris si Palamedis avem.

LXXVI.—Rusticulae

RUSTICA sim an perdix quid refert, si sapor idem est?
carior est perdix. sic sapit illa magis.

---

<sup>1</sup> This may be an allusion to Aesopus, the tragic actor, who served up a dish consisting only of singing birds: Plin. N.H. x. 72. Housman, however, thinks that garrula = telltale, and that the bird could say how impure the mouths were that fed on it.

<sup>2</sup> A river of the Colchians from which the Argonauts are said to have brought the pheasant (the Phasian bird).

<sup>3</sup> Because luxury had not at that time introduced them into Italy. As to Numidicae, cf. III. lviii. 15.

LXXI.—Flamingoes

My ruddy wing gives me a name, but my tongue is a delicacy to gluttons. What if my tongue were to speak? <sup>1</sup>

LXXII.—Pheasants

I WAS transported first by Argo's keel; ere that Phasis <sup>2</sup> was all I knew.

LXXIII.—Guinea-fowls

ALTHOUGH Hannibal ate his fill of Roman geese, yet the barbarian never ate the birds of his own land. <sup>3</sup>

LXXIV.—Geese

THIS bird saved the Thunderer's Tarpeian fane. Do you wonder? a god had not yet built it. <sup>4</sup>

LXXV.—Cranes

You will disorder the lines, and the letter will not fly complete if you make away with a single bird of Palamedes. <sup>5</sup>

LXXVI.—Woodcock

WHETHER I am woodcock or partridge, what does it matter if the flavour be the same? A partridge is dearer. 'Tis thus it has better flavour. <sup>6</sup>

<sup>4</sup> The cackling of geese saved the Capitol B.C. 390 from a night attack by the Gauls. Now it can run no risk. Domitian rebuilt the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, which had been twice burnt: Suet. Dom. v; IX. iii. 7.

<sup>5</sup> P. is said to have copied the shape of the letters he invented from the order of the flight of cranes. In IX. xiii. 7 the letter is  $\Upsilon = V$ . M. is probably playing on two meanings of versus (line). See also Luc. v. 716, which M. had in mind.

<sup>6</sup> cf. Magis illa juvant quae pluris emuntur, Juv. xi. 16.

THE EPIGRAMS OF MARTIAL

LXXVII.—Cycni

DULCIA defecta modulatur carmina lingua cantator cycnus funeris ipse sui.

LXXVIII.—Porphyrones

NOMEN habet magni volucris tam parva gigantis?
et nomen prasini Porphyrionis habet.

LXXIX.—Mulli Vivi

SPIRAT in advecto sed iam piger aequore nullus languescit. vivum da mare : fortis erit.

LXXX.—Muraenae

QUAE natat in Siculo grandis muraena profundo, non valet exustam mergere sole cutem.

LXXXI.—Rhombi

QUAMVIS lata gerat patella rhombum, rhombus latior est tamen patella.

<sup>2</sup> The porphyrion is unknown. It was a bird with a long and narrow neck, and long legs. The beak and legs were red. So Pliny, N.H. x. lxxiii. and xi. lxxix. It is distinguished from the pelican in Arist. Av. 881. According to Athen. (ix. 40) it came from Libya, and was also a domestic bird.

LXXVII.—Swans

THE swan gives forth its sweet measured song with failing tongue, itself the minstrel of its own death.<sup>1</sup>

LXXVIII.—Porphyrians

HAS so small a bird<sup>2</sup> the name of a great giant? It has, too, the name of Porphyri<sup>3</sup> of the Green.<sup>4</sup>

LXXIX.—Live Mulletts

THE mullet breathes in the sea-water brought with him, but, already torpid, he begins to languish. Give him the fresh sea; he will be strong.<sup>5</sup>

LXXX.—Lampreys

THE big lamprey that swims in the Sicilian deep sea has not the strength to plunge when its skin is scorched by the sun.<sup>6</sup>

LXXXI.—Turbots

HOWEVER wide is the dish that bears the turbot, yet the turbot is wider than the dish.

<sup>1</sup> According to Friedländer fish were brought alive to table in glass vessels and boiled before the eyes of the guests, who observed the changing hues of the dying fish: cf. Sen. Quaest. iii. 17, who observes that it sounds like a fable that the eyes were fed before the throat.

<sup>6</sup> According to Arist. (H.A. VIII. iii. 4) turtles, when their shells were scorched by the sun, were unable to sink, and so were caught; see also Plin. N.H. ix. 12. M. says the same thing of the lamprey. Such animals were called πλωται or flutae: Macrob. Sat. iii. 15. The best lampreys came from the Straits of Messena: ibid.

<sup>3</sup> A river in Campania near Minturnae. Marica was its tutelary nymph who had a grove near it: Hor. Od. III. xvii. 7.

<sup>4</sup> The scarus is really unknown. It was a favourite fish, brought originally, according to Pliny (N.H. ix. 29), by Tiberius from the Carpathian Sea, and planted by Optatus, praefectus classis, in the sea between Ostia and Campania. It was preserved for the first five years. Athenaeus (vii. 113) gives a description.

LXXXII.—Oysters

DRUNKEN with the water of Baiae's Lucrine,<sup>1</sup> have I, a shell-fish, just arrived. Now, luxurious that I am, I thirst for the noble pickle.<sup>2</sup>

LXXXIII.—Prawns

CERULEAN Liris,<sup>3</sup> which Marica's wood guards, is fond of us: from hence we prawns come in greatest numbers.

LXXXIV.—Sea-bream

OF this sea-bream,<sup>4</sup> which has come lean from the sea-waves, the entrails are good eating; as to the rest it has poor flavour.

LXXXV.—Coracinus

YOU of all fish are scrambled for, Coracinus,<sup>5</sup> in the markets of Nile; to Alexandria's gourmets no fish has renown surpassing yours.

LXXXVI.—Sea-urchins

ALTHOUGH that sea-urchin may prick your fingers with its sharp shell, yet, when it lays aside its husk, it will be soft.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> An unknown but valued fish peculiar to the Nile: Plin. N.H. xxxii. 19, who says it was not caught in winter except on the same few days: N.H. ix. 24. See also Athen. vii. 81, who says it was so called from its continually moving the pupils of its eyes (κόραι). It was regarded as in every way superior to the mullus: Athen. iii. 93.

<sup>6</sup> It was eaten with vinegar and honey sauce, parsley, and mint: Athen. iii. 41. Athenaeus (loc. cit.) tells the story of a Spartan who at a dinner bit a sea-urchin, shell and all, in ignorance and cursed the viand (φάγημα μιάρδν), adding he would not be beaten by it, but would never eat another.

<sup>1</sup> cf. v. xxiii. 5. Pliny (ix. 60) says that luxury had made the fish as precious as pearls. Travellers speak of a hill still standing at Tarentum of the debris of the murex.

<sup>3</sup> A small fish, ordinarily little esteemed, but common in the lagoons of Venice. Inferior to a blenny; Diog. L. ii. 67. Juv. (xi. 37) treats the price of a gobius as an insignificant sum, as compared with the price of a mullus.

<sup>4</sup> The most prized lupi were called lanati or lanei from the whiteness and softness of their flesh: Plin. N.H. ix. 28. The lupus may have been the bass, one name of which is the sea-wolf, from its rapaciousness (Grk. λάβραξ); cf. the proverb λάβραχες Μιλήσιοι of greedy persons; and generally Athen. vii. 86.

ON this side of me dice are counted by double sixes: on this other the piece of hostile colour is taken by twin foemen.<sup>5</sup>

XVIII.—Nuts

NUTS appear a small stake, and one not ruinous; yet often has that stake made prize of boys' buttocks.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> i.e. his fraud does not succeed. The turricula appears to have been made with internal grooves to prevent cheating.

<sup>2</sup> The epigram is on a gaming-table suitable both for the game "of the twelve lines" (similar to backgammon) and the game of "robbers" (like chess or draughts): cf. VII. lxxii. 8. In the first game the highest throw appears to have been two sixes: cf. (of three dice) Aesch. Ag. 33. In the second game a piece was taken by being hemmed in by two opposing "robbers": cf. Ep. xx.

<sup>3</sup> When they gamble, whereas they ought to be in school: cf. v. lxxxiv. 1, 2. But Gronovius' comment is, "Videtur potius turpe aliquid ac nefandum significari."

<sup>1</sup> Libraria marks it as for the use of the librarius, containing all that he needed.      <sup>2</sup> cf. Ep. xvii.

XIX.—A Case for Writing Materials

HAVING won the case<sup>1</sup> in the raffle, remember to equip it with pens: we have given you all else, do you provide the slighter things.

XX.—Draught Pieces

IF you play the war-game of robbers in ambush, these glass pieces will be your soldiers and their enemies.<sup>2</sup>

XXI.—A Style-case

THIS style-case, fitted with its proper iron styles,<sup>3</sup> shall be for you: if you give it to your boy, it will be no slight gift.

XXII.—A Toothpick

MASTICK<sup>4</sup> is better; but if pointed wood be not forthcoming, a quill can relieve your teeth.

XXIII.—An Earpick

IF your ear is troubled with a persistent itching, I give you an instrument appropriate to such vagaries.

XXIV.—A Gold Hairpin

THAT your moistened hair may not soil your bright silks, let a pin fix and hold up your knotted locks.

XXV.—Combs

WHAT will be the use, when it will find here no hair, of this many-toothed piece of box which is given you?

<sup>1</sup> Ladies wore false hair, much of which came from Germany, or from German captives. This hair was dyed with sapo, consisting of goats' fat and beechwood ashes (Plin. N.H. xxviii. 51) in the form of balls. See next epigram, and cf. spuma Batava in VIII. xxxiii. 20.

XXVI.—Soap

THE spume of the Chatti turns to flame Teutonic locks: you can be smarter with the hair of a captive slave.<sup>1</sup>

XXVII.—Soap-balls from Mattiacum

IF white-haired you are set on dyeing your aged locks, accept—why be hairless?—these balls from Mattiacum.<sup>2</sup>

XXVIII.—A Sunshade

ACCEPT a sunshade to subdue the overpowering heat; even though there be a wind,<sup>3</sup> your own awning will cover you.

XXIX.—A Broad-brimmed Hat

I WILL be a spectator with you in Pompey's theatre, for blasts of wind are apt to deny the people an awning.<sup>4</sup>

XXX.—Hunting-spears

THEY will counter boars, and will wait for the lion's rush; they will pierce bears if the hand be but firm enough.

XXXI.—A Hunting-knife

IF you lament that your hunting spear with its long blade has been struck down, this short weapon will closely engage a huge boar.

<sup>3</sup> cf. I. xlix. 12. Salo was the river of Bilbilis, M.'s birth-place.

XXXII.—A Belt and Sword

A SOLDIER'S decoration<sup>1</sup> is this, and it will be a sign of a prized honour,<sup>2</sup> a weapon worthy to gird a tribune's side.

XXXIII.—A Dagger

THIS dagger, which a narrow circle marks with its rounded groove, Salo dipt<sup>3</sup> while it was hissing in his chilling waters.

XXXIV.—A Sickle

ME our Captain's assured peace has bent to serve quiet uses: the husbandman's am I now, the soldier's was I aforetime.

XXXV.—A Small Axe

WHEN a melancholy auction for payment of debts was held, this was bought for four hundred thousand sesterces.<sup>4</sup>

XXXVI.—A Barber's Implements

THESE instruments are suitable for the cutting of your hair; this one<sup>5</sup> is serviceable to long nails, that<sup>6</sup> to your cheeks.

XXXVII.—A Bookcase

UNLESS you provide me<sup>7</sup> with choice books I will let in moths and savage bookworms.

<sup>4</sup> The price is meant to be absurd. The securicula was a child's ornament or toy: cf. Plaut. Rud. 1159. Such things were also hung round children's necks as amulets, or as proofs of identity.      <sup>5</sup> Cultellus.      <sup>6</sup> Novacula.

<sup>7</sup> The scrinium was a circular case (Ov. Trist. i. i. 106) for holding books and papers.

<sup>1</sup> Candles were made of rope or rush dipped in wax, tallow, or pitch : Varr. De Ling. Lat. v. 119 ; Plin. N.H. xvi. 70. A candle was a poor man's light ; hence it is called a "handmaid" of the rich man's lamp : cf. Juv. iii. 287.

XXXVIII.—Bundles of Pens

THE land of Memphis supplies reeds handy for writing: let your roof be thatched with the reeds from other marshes.

XXXIX.—A Bedroom Lamp

I AM a lamp, privy to the pleasures of your couch: you may do what you will, I shall be silent.

XL.—A Candle<sup>1</sup>

THE lot has given you the lamp's handmaid, which is awake and dispels complete darkness.

XLI.—A Lamp with many Wicks

ALTHOUGH I illumine whole entertainments with my flames, and carry so many wicks,<sup>2</sup> I am called a single lamp.

XLII.—A Taper

THIS taper will afford you light by night, for your lamp has been stolen from your slave.

XLIII.—A Corinthian<sup>3</sup> Candelabrum

CANDLES gave me my name of old; the oil-lamp had no knowledge of our thrifty sires.

XLIV.—A Wooden Candelabrum

You see I am wood; unless you guard the light, a great lamp will be made of your candelabrum.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> According to Pliny (N.H. xxxiv. 3), there were three kinds of aes Corinthium, one in which silver was the principal ingredient, another in which gold, and a third with equal proportions of gold and silver.

<sup>4</sup> The wicks will set fire to the wood.

<sup>1</sup> The word would not go into the metre. Myrobalanum is described by Pliny (N.H. xii. 46) as the fruit of a tree found in the Thebais and in Arabia with a leaf like that of a heliotrope, the fruit being of the size of a filbert. From it was extracted an oil used in compounding unguent. The Encyclopaedia calls the tree the horse-radish tree (Moringa pterygosperma), the oil being oil of ben used by perfumers.

<sup>2</sup> Spuma nitri was prized, and prescribed by doctors in pills or pastilles: Plin. N.H. xxxi. 46 (3); and balls of it were given as presents: Stat. Silv. iv. ix. 37. It was found

LXXXII.—Brooms

THE palm-tree testifies that brooms were once in demand,<sup>3</sup> but the crumb-collector has now given a rest to brooms.

LXXXIII.—An Ivory Scratcher

THIS hand<sup>4</sup> will protect your shoulder-blades when an irritating flea is biting you, or any insect fouler than a flea.

LXXXIV.—A Wooden Book-holder

To prevent your toga or cloak making your books frayed, this fir-wood will give long life to your paper.

LXXXV.—A Couch of Peacock-veined Citrus-wood

THE bird, most lovely with its painted plumage, gives its name to a couch;<sup>5</sup> it is now the bird of Juno, but once it was Argus.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Couches of citrus wood variegated by wavy lines, as on a peacock's tail, were valued: Plin. N.H. xiii. 30.

<sup>6</sup> Argus had a hundred eyes, of which two only slept at a time. Juno set him to watch Io, whom Jupiter had turned into a heifer. Argus was afterwards turned into a peacock with the eyes in the tail.

<sup>1</sup> The cocleare was a spoon with a point at one end, and smaller (cf. VIII. lxxi. 9, 10) than the ligula. The point was used to pick snails (cocleæ) or shellfish out of their shells; hence the name. Petr. 33 speaks of coclearia of “not less than half a pound” weight used for eating eggs, but then they were Trimalchio’s spoons. <sup>1</sup> The trilix was where every weft-thread was passed over one and then under three of the warp-threads, instead of over one and under the next in regular succession, as in ordinary weaving. The process is called twilling, and the fabric would be triple-twilled. Verg. speaks of a breastplate auro trilix : Aen. iii. 467 ; i.e. chain-mail.

BOOK XIV. CXLIII—CXLVIII

CXLIII.—Patavian Tunics

PADUAN garments of triple thread<sup>1</sup> use up many fleeces, and only a saw can sever the thick tunics.

CXLIV.—A Sponge

THIS sponge is given you by lot: it is useful for wiping tables when it lightly swells after the water has been squeezed out.

CXLV.—A Frieze Surtout

SUCH is my whiteness, the beauty of my wool is such, that you would choose to wear me even in the midst of harvest.<sup>2</sup>

CXLVI.—A Pillow

ANOINT your head with Cosmus' unguent, your pillow will smell of it: when your hair has lost the fragrance the feathers retain it.

CXLVII.—Frieze Coverlets<sup>3</sup>

YOUR coverlet of wool is bright with purple brocade. What is the use of it if an aged wife freeze you?

CXLVIII.—Blankets

THAT the sacking on your bare bed might not show, we sisters, knit together, have come to you.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Gausapum was woollen cloth having, like frieze, a thick nap on one side only, as distinguished from amphimallum, which had a nap on both. It was introduced into Rome in the time of the Elder Pliny's father: Plin. N.H. viii. lxxiii.

<sup>4</sup> The lodix was a small shaggy blanket. Sometimes two were sewed together to form a coverlet. The Emperor Augustus used it as a wrap for warmth in the open air: Suet. Aug. lxxxiii. Lodices came from Verona: cf. Ep. elii.

<sup>3</sup> Babylon was celebrated for embroidery in colour ; the art of many-threaded work (polymita) came from Alexandria : cf. Plin. N. H. viii. 74.

BOOK XIV. CXLIX-CLIV

CXLIX.—A Tucker

I SHRINK from big-breasted women : hand me over to some young girl, that my linen may enjoy a bosom of snow.

CL.—Damask<sup>1</sup> Coverlets

THIS present the land of Memphis makes you : now has the needle of Babylon been surpassed by the sley<sup>2</sup> of the Nile.<sup>3</sup>

CLI.—A Female Girdle

LONG enough am I now ; but if your shape should swell under its grateful burden, then shall I become to you a narrow girdle.

CLII.—A Square Woollen Rug

BLANKETS the country of elegant Catullus will send you : we are from the region of Helicaon.<sup>4</sup>

CLIII.—An Apron

LET a rich man give a tunic : I can gird you in front. Were I rich, I would give both gifts.

CLIV.—Amethyst-dyed Wool

DRUNKEN as I am with the blood of Sidon's shell-fish, I do not see why I am called sober wool.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>5</sup> "Amethyst" etymologically means "unintoxicated," either, as Pliny says (N.H. xxxvii. 40), because it did not approximate to the colour of wine, or because its possession was supposed to be an antidote against inebriety. There are similar Greek epigrams in Pal. Anth. ix. 748 and 752.

<sup>4</sup> Laconian purple was the finest produced in Europe, that of Tyre the finest in Asia : Plin. N.H. ix. 60. The latter was superior to the former.

<sup>5</sup> A town in Liguria, now Polenza. It was famed for its wool, which was black : Plin. N.H. viii. 73.

BOOK XIV. CLV-CLX

CLV.—White Wool

APULIA is renowned for the finest wool,<sup>1</sup> Parma for second quality; its sheep, third in rank, commend Altinum.<sup>2</sup>

CLVI.—Tyrian Wools

Us the shepherd gave to his Lacedaemonian mistress:<sup>3</sup> of less worth was the purple of her mother Leda.<sup>4</sup>

CLVII.—Wool from Pollentia<sup>5</sup>

THIS land is wont to supply not only wool that mourns with its black fleece: it supplies also its native chalices.

CLVIII.—The Same

MY wool is indeed sad in hue, but 'tis fit for close-clip attendants,<sup>6</sup> such as—but not from the first rank of slaves—the table summons.

CLIX.—Leuconian Bed-stuffing

Is the bed-girth<sup>7</sup> too near the feather pillow you crush down? Accept fleeces shorn for Leuconian<sup>8</sup> cloaks.

CLX.—Circensian Bed-stuffing

MARSH-REED chopped up is called Circensian<sup>9</sup> stuffing. This litter the poor man buys in lieu of Leuconian.

<sup>6</sup> The smarter attendants often had their hair long: cf. II. lvii. 5; III. lviii. 31.

<sup>8</sup> Leuconicum was a wool much used as a stuffing: cf. XI. xxi. 8 and lvi. 9. It came from the Leucones, a Gaulish people.

<sup>9</sup> So called because it was used in the circus on seats by the common people: cf. Sen. De Vit. Beat. xxv. 2.

<sup>1</sup> A city of Laconia. The feathers are called Amyclaeon because Jupiter appeared to Spartan Leda in the shape of a swan.

cf. Hor. Od. III. i. 21 for a similar idea.

BOOK XIV. CLXI-CLXVI

CLXI.—Feathers

Tired you may rest on feathers of Amyclae<sup>1</sup> which the swan's inner down has given you.

CLXII.—Hay

LET your rustling mattress swell with thefts from your mule: pale Care comes not to hard couches.<sup>2</sup>

CLXIII.—A Bell

GIVE up the ball: the bell of the warm baths is sounding. Do you go on playing? You want to go home after a bath in the Virgin water only.<sup>3</sup>

CLXIV.—A Quoit

WHILE the burnished weight of the Spartan quoit is flying, keep far off, ye boys: let that quoit be guilty only once.<sup>4</sup>

CLXV.—A Cithern

IT restored Eurydice to her bard; but he him-

CLXXI.—Βρούτου παιδίον Fictile

GLORIA tam parvi non est obscura sigilli :
istius pueri Brutus amator erat.

<sup>1</sup> garrula βγ.

<sup>2</sup> Rings were often strung round the orbit of a boy's hoop : see a picture taken from a sepulchral bas-relief at Tivoli reproduced in Rich's Dict. Ant. s.v. "Anulus." How the hoop was able to run is very obscure. Perhaps loose rings were supported in position by the clavis, or hook for trundling the hoop. Or perhaps the rings were attached to the inner circumference.

CLXVII.—A Quill for Playing the Lyre

THAT an angry blister may not arise on your chafed thumb, let an ivory quill<sup>1</sup> embellish your responsive lyre.

CLXVIII.—A Hoop

THE wheel must be fitted with a tyre: you give me a useful present; this to boys will be a hoop, but to me a tyre.

CLXIX.—The Same

WHY do noisy rings wander round the wide orbit? That the crowd that meets them may give way to tinkling hoops.<sup>2</sup>

CLXX.—A Golden Statue of Victory<sup>3</sup>

SHE is given without a drawn lot to him to whom Rhine has given a true victor's name. Ten times<sup>4</sup> pour Falernian, boy.

CLXXI.—A Clay Image of "Brutus' Boy"

THE renown of so small a statue<sup>5</sup> is not unknown. Of this boy was Brutus the lover.

<sup>3</sup> This, and the following, describe sigilla (statuettes), which were frequently given at the Saturnalia, i.e. on the last two days, which were called Sigillaria: cf. Aus. De Fer. Rom. v. 32 (Festa sigillorum nomine dicta colunt).

<sup>5</sup> cf. II. lxxvii. 4; IX. l. The statuette was by Strongylion, a Greek sculptor of the fifth century B.C.: Plin. N.H. xxxiv. 19 (21).

<sup>2</sup> Apollo, when playing at quoits with Hyacinthus, killed him by accident. From his blood sprang the hyacinth inscribed with the Greek αἰαί (alas): cf. Milton's "Sanguine flower inscribed with woe." The picture alluded to may be a copy of the one by Antidotus of the fourth century B.C., the original of which was transported to Rome by Augustus on the capture of Alexandria: Plin. N.H. xxxv. 40 (28).

CLXXII.—The Lizard-slayer in Corinthian Bronze

SPARE the lizard, treacherous boy, as it creeps up to you ; it longs to perish by your hands.<sup>1</sup>

FROM the hated quoit he turns his dying eyes, the Oebalian boy, the reproach and sorrow of Phoebus.<sup>2</sup>

CLXXIV.—A Marble Hermaphroditus

MALE, he entered the fount ;<sup>3</sup> he came forth both male and female : one part of him is his sire's, all else has he of his mother.

WHY of you, Ruler of Olympus, did Danae<sup>4</sup> receive her price, if Leda unbought was kind to you ?

CLXXVI.—A German Mask

I AM a freak of the potter, the mask of a red-haired Batavian. This face you deride a boy dreads.<sup>5</sup>

CLXXVII.—Hercules in Corinthian Bronze

THE infant throttles<sup>6</sup> the two serpents, nor does he glance on them. Already might the hydra<sup>7</sup> fear youthful hands.

<sup>6</sup> The Goddess Hera, jealous of Alcmena the mother of Hercules, sent two serpents to kill him in his cradle : cf. Verg. Aen. viii. 289.

<sup>7</sup> The Lernaean hydra, or water-snake, was one of the monsters slain by Hercules : cf. Spect. xxvii. 5 ; ix. ci. 9.

Saturnalicio lusit et ipse luto.

<sup>3</sup> The original was in the Porticus Pompeii, painted by Antiphilus, the rival of Apelles: Plin. N.H. xxxv. 37.

<sup>4</sup> As a bull J. would have escaped the hundred eyes of Argus set to watch Io: cf. lxxxv. 2.

CLXXVIII.—A Hercules in Clay

FRAGILE am I, but do not you, I charge you, despise my small statue: it shames not Alcides to bear my name.<sup>1</sup>

CLXXIX.—A Minerva in Silver

TELL me, gallant maid, whereas thou hast thy

“Caesar has it.”<sup>2</sup>

BETTER, most excellent Father of the Gods, couldst thou have been changed into a bull when Io was to thee a heifer.<sup>4</sup>

CLXXXI.—A Marble Leander

DARING Leander cried amid the swelling waters:
“Drown me, ye waves, when I am turning home.”<sup>5</sup>

CLXXXII.—A Clay Statuette of a Hunchback

'T WAS a drunken Prometheus,<sup>6</sup> I fancy, made for the earth this monster; he himself, too, played with Saturnalian clay.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>7</sup> The original Prometheus (ipse) made men out of clay (cf. x. xxxix. 4), and had a taste for making grotesque figures. Statuettes of dwarfs and monstrosities were doubtless often made, and given as presents at the Saturnalia, the taste for slaves of this type being common: cf. the Polyphemus and Scylla of vii. xxxviii.

CLXXXIV.—Homer in Parchment Handybooks

THE Iliad and the tale of Ulysses, foe to Priam's realm, both lie stored in many-folded skins.

CLXXXV.—Virgil's Gnat

RECEIVE, studious reader, the Gnat<sup>2</sup> of eloquent Maro; you need not then lay aside your nuts<sup>3</sup> to read "Arms and the Man."

CLXXXVI.—Virgil in Parchment

How short a parchment<sup>4</sup> has comprised the mighty Maro! The features of the man himself the first leaf bears.

CLXXXVII.—The Thais of Menander

WITH this first he lightly touched youth's wanton love, and Glyceria was not the mistress of his boyhood: 'twas Thais.<sup>5</sup>

CLXXXVIII.—Cicero in Parchment

IF this parchment shall be your travelling companion, imagine you are taking a long journey with Cicero.

<sup>4</sup> Parchment being very expensive, books were often copied in small characters: cf. exc.

<sup>1</sup> The first book of Propertius was published by him at the age of twenty. It was called Cynthia, and in some MSS. is headed "Monobiblos." But whether M. alludes to this is uncertain.

BOOK XIV. CLXXXIX—CXC

CLXXXIX.—Propertius in a Single Volume

CYNTHIA,<sup>1</sup> the theme of eloquent Propertius' youthful song, won from him fame; no less she herself bestowed.

CXC.—Titus Livius in Parchment

NARROWED into scanty skins is bulky Livy, the whole of whom my library does not contain.<sup>2</sup>

CXCI.—Sallust

HERE will be Crispus, first of Roman historians, as the judgment of learned men declares.

CXCII.—Ovid's "Metamorphoses" in Parchment

THIS bulk, that has been formed of many a leaf, contains the fifteen books of Naso's poems.

CXCIII.—Tibullus

WANTON Nemesis<sup>3</sup> fired her lover Tibullus, whom it pleased to be "of no account in his own house."

CXCIV.—Lucan

SOME are there that say I am no poet: but the bookseller that sells me thinks I am.

CXCV.—Catullus

As much great Verona owes to her Catullus as small Mantua owes to her Virgil.

<sup>3</sup> It was Delia of whom Tib. (I. v. 30) writes "At juvet in tota me nihil esse domo" Nemesis was his second love.

O FLAVIAN family, of how much glory has thy third heir robbed thee! Well nigh had it stood us in stead not to have possessed the twain!<sup>1</sup>

I.—Life in the Country

As you ask me what I do while staying in the country I reply shortly. At daybreak I pray to the gods; I visit my servants and afterwards my fields, and to my staff I assign their proper tasks. Then I read and call on Phoebus, and challenge the Muses. After this I rub my body with oil, and with mild gymnastics gladly brace myself, happy in my mind and free from moneylenders. I lunch, drink, sing, play, bathe, dine, go to bed. Provided my small lamp consume but little oil, such lucubrations as these night furnishes to the nocturnal Muses.

II.—Against Varus

VARUS happened to invite me lately to dinner: his appointments were rich, his dinner was scanty. The table is loaded with gold plate, not with meats; the attendants set before us much to please the eye, little to tickle the palate. Then I said: "I did not come to stuff my eyes, but my stomach; either provide your provender, Varus, or remove your property."

III.—Against Ponticus

PONTICUS, you run about among great lords, and have an eye for everything going; you pursue, indeed, great things, Ponticus; you are a great man. Ponticus, if you do anything, you do it without a witness, without a crowd round you; you don't make confidants of many, Ponticus; you are a cautious man. Ponticus, nature has fashioned you of remarkable beauty; you would have been worthy of Helen, Ponticus; you are a handsome man. Ponticus, with that voice of yours you might stir adamant; your voice is sweet-toned, Ponticus; you are a sweet man. Ponticus, this error deceives you too as it does other men. Would you have me tell you the truth, Ponticus? You are not a man at all.

XI.—To Scaevola

SCAEVOLA, you dine with everybody, no one with you; another man's cups you drain, no one drains yours. Either make return, or give over looking for invitations: it is a disgrace always to take and give nothing.<sup>1</sup>

XII.—To Auctus

You claim from us what you pay to no one, love; what you accord to no man you claim, Auctus, trust. You claim from us what you don't deserve, honour; it is wonderful that what you don't give you expect to be given you.

XIII.—On Filus

FILUS possesses cloaks, he surrounds his fingers with gold, but yet Filus is poorer than the poor.<sup>2</sup> Filus has Tyrian mantles, a thousand appointments, clients, but yet he is poorer than the poor. Filus has a hall furnished in royal style, but yet Filus is poorer than the poor. He hungers and thirsts while he is arrayed in jewels and gold; though he is clad in an embroidered robe he hungers and thirsts. His pallor and emaciation bespeak a load of hunger; his gold brooch says there is no load of hunger. The wretched man will then hire himself out in slavery for bread, but his gold amulet prevents him being a slave.<sup>3</sup> If, indeed, he assails any man with suppliant prayers, his silken garb is at hand to prevent him to the Lares, or Household Gods. It was gold in the case of children of free birth, leather in the case of children of freedmen. It enclosed an amulet (a phallus) against the evil eye; hence it was worn by a victorious general during a triumph: Macrob. Sat. i. 6.

XIX.—Against Turgidus

TILL nightfall you lunch, till nightfall, Turgidus, you dine, and with all sorts of wine day and night you reek. And, although you are careful of your person, you are unwilling to take a wife; your unwillingness says: "A chaste life pleases me." Turgidus, you lie; this is not a chaste life. Would you have me tell you what is a chaste life? Moderation.

XX.—Against Chloe

You are hot for a wanton Ganymede; you are every man's goods; even Hippolytuses<sup>1</sup> you make heavy with lust. In the meantime many an adulterer hangs about your threshold; you are exposed for sale to anyone: how popular is your taste! I should have wished to have called you Demophile,<sup>2</sup> had not your mother wished you should be Chloe: she is unwise and wise.<sup>3</sup>

XXI.—Against Lais

Lais, most beautiful of women, when I ask you what is the price of your favours, you at once require a great<sup>4</sup> talent. At such a cost, Lais, I do not buy repentance.<sup>5</sup>

XXII.—Against Macrinus

You used to deny, Macrinus, that men could become defunct through funguses: mushrooms made room for your heirs!<sup>6</sup>

<sup>5</sup> This is the answer said to have been made by Demosthenes to Lais, the Corinthian courtesan: Gell. i. 8. Perhaps the epigram is put in the mouth of D.

<sup>6</sup> The pun on leti and boleti can only be paraphrased.

INDEXES

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Apicius, M. Gabius, a noted gourmand of the time of Tiberius. According to Seneca (Ad Helv. x.) after spending in gluttony one hundred million sesterces (£800,000), he found himself oppressed by debt, looked into his accounts, and, discovering he had remaining only ten millions committed suicide.

Martial alludes to this (III. xxii.), giving the sums as sixty millions and ten respectively. Pliny (N.H. ix. 30) speaks of him as ad omne luxus ingenium mirus, and (N.H. x. 68) calls him nepotum omnium altissimus gurgis. Athenæus (i. 12) tells how that, hearing lobsters were very large in Libya, he set off at once, but finding from samples that they were of ordinary size, he returned without landing.

Apollinaris, Domitius, a learned friend of M. and a favourable critic of his epigrams (IV. lxxvi; VII. xxvi.). M. (x. xxx.) describes his villa at Formiæ. He is perhaps the A. alluded to by Pliny (Ep. ix. 13) as consul designatus in A.D. 97.

Auctus, Pomponius, a learned lawyer, and admirer of Martial, whose works he knew by heart, VII. ii.

Avitus, Stertinius, Consul A.D. 92. He placed a bust of M. in his library, of which M. writes (IX. Introd. Ep.) the inscription. M. addresses to him an epigram (x. xcvi.) on the charms of country life in Spain.

Baetis, the Guadalquivir, the principal river in Hispania Baetica, according to Pliny (iii. 3) the most fertile province in Spain. It flows past Corduba and Hispalis (Cordova and Seville) and falls into the Atlantic N. of Gades (Cadiz). The district was renowned for olives (XII. lxiii. 2; xii. xxviii. 1), which Martial thinks superior to those of Venafrum: vii. xxviii. 3; and Statius to Attic, Silv. II. vii. 29; whereas Pliny (xv. 3) thinks the olives of Venafrum superior to those of Baetica and Istria. The province of Baetica was also celebrated for its wool, to which the waters of the Baetis gave a golden hue, often alluded to by Martial.

Bilbilis, the second city of Hispania Tarraconensis, on the high road between Emerita and Caesar Augusta (Merida and Saragossa). Was a municipium in Imperial times. It stood on a rocky height surrounded by the Salo, a river famed for tempering iron. Its site is at or near Bambola, near Calatayud, a Moorish City built by Ayub, the nephew of Musa, the Governor of N.W. Africa at the time of the Arab invasion, who used the remains of Bilbilis as a quarry. Bilbilis was also the scene of a battle between A. Metellus and the insurgent Sertorius in B.C. 74.

Castricus, some friend of Martial, who is addressed in several

- epigrams. It would appear from VII. xlii. that he was a poet
- Cerialis*, a friend of Martial, whom the poet invites to dinner in two epigrams, X. xlviii. and XI. lii. He was a poet and imitator of Virgil, and wrote bucolics and a poem on the war of the Giants, XI. lii. 17, 18. Pliny (Ep. ii. 19) addresses one of his letters to him
- Claudia Rufina*, a lady of British birth, whose refinement Martial praises as equal to that of a Roman or a Greek, XI. liii. She may be the same as the Claudia that married Pudens, whose marriage the poet celebrates, IV. xiii.
- Crispinus*, a low upstart who came from Egypt and hawked salt fish in Rome, Juv. iv. 33. He was raised to the Senate by Nero, and was made a knight by Domitian. Juvenal calls him (i. 26) verna Canopi, and (iv. 31) purpureus seurra Pulati; and speaks of him as matutino sudans amomo, iv. 108. He was commander of the Emperor's body-guard (praefectus praetorio), an office summus equester gradus: Suet. Galb. 14. Martial alludes to him in two epigrams, VII. xcix. and VIII. xlviii.
- Decianus*, of Emerita, another friend of Martial. He was a Stoic, and is praised for not following the example of suicide, I. viii. His literary works conferred distinction on his birthplace, I. lxi. 10. Martial speaks of his learning, simplicity, and rectitude, I. xxxix.; and addresses to him the Introductory Epistle of his second book. In II. v. he is rallied on the distance M. has to go to call on him, and the difficulty of finding him at home
- Earinos*, the page of Domitian, on whose name M. plays in three epigrams, IX. xi.-xiii.; and whose dedication of his hair to Aesculapius M. celebrates, IX. xvi. and xvii.; see also IX. xxxvi. 3. Statius (Silv. III. iv.) has a long poem on the latter subject
- Entellus*, a freedman, Domitian's secretary a libellis (petitions). Was privy (with Parthenius) to the Emperor's assassination. M. praises his greenhouse, VIII. lxviii.
- Erotion*, a little slave girl, whose death M. laments in three of his finest epigrams, V. xxxiv. and xxxvii.; X. lxi. But in the second epigram mentioned the harmony of the poem is somewhat spoilt by the sarcastic touch at the end
- Etruseus, Claudius*, father and son. The father came originally as a slave from Smyrna, and was emancipated by Tiberius, in whose household he was. He was successively in the service of Caligula, Claudius, Nero, and Domitian, being under Nero the head of the Imperial treasury. By Domitian he was banished to Campania: Stat. Silv. III. iii. 164, who describes him as hospes, non exul. He married a rich wife, and lived to a great age. His son accompanied his father into exile. M. has epigrams on the father's exile and recall, VI. lxxxiii.; and on his death, VII. xl.; and on the son's baths, VI. xlii., which are also eulogised by Statius (Silv. I. v.) who also writes a lament on the father's death, Silv. III. iii.
- Faustinus, Julius*, a friend frequently addressed, and a poet whom M. (I. xxv.) advises to publish, and to whom (III. ii. 6) he sends his third book, and (IV. x.) his fourth. He had villas at Anxur (X. li.), Tibur (IV. lvii.) and Baiæ, the latter of which M. (III. lviii.) elaborately describes. M. appeals to him (VII. xii.) on the question of the unmalicious

- character of his epigrams. Nothing more is known of him
- Festus, a friend of the Emperor, who died of a cancer in the face, I. lxxviii. If he be the same as the Valerius Festus, spoken of by Pliny (Ep. iii. 7) as guilty per summum facinus of the murder in A.D. 69 of Piso the proconsul of Africa (see Tac. Hist. iv. 49) M. is hardly justified in speaking of his indignas fauces and pia ora. Tacitus, supra, describes him as sumptuosae adulescentiae, neque modica cupiens
- Flaccus, a native of Patavium, is addressed by Martial in many epigrams; he is a guest in X. xlvi., and in XII. lxxiv. Martial makes him a present of "dreadnought" glass. He appears to have been a poet, I. lxi. and lxxvi. Some commentators, on the strength of the two epigrams mentioned, have identified him with Valerius Flaccus, the epic poet of the Argonautica. But it is not certain that Valerius Flaccus was born at Patavium; Setia in Campania contends for the honour of being his birthplace, and the Vatican MS. has appended the words "Setinus Balbus." And Quintilian says (x. i. 90) multum in Valerio Flacco nuper amissum; consequently V. Flaccus must have died before A.D. 90 or 91, the probable date of Quintilian's great work, in which case none of Martial's last six books at least can refer to him. The notes to IX. iv. 2 and XI. lxxx. 3 should be corrected. It is noticeable also that Martial never refers—as might have been expected—to the Argonautica, as he does to the Punica of Silius.
- Frontinus, Sextus Julius, succeeded Petilius Cerealis, and was succeeded by Agricola, as Governor of Britain. Tacitus (Ag. 17) describes him as "a great man so far as he was permitted to be," i.e. by the Emperor's jealousy. He subdued the powerful and warlike Silures in South Wales in spite of the difficulties of the country (Tac. supra). In A.D. 97 he was curator aquarum, and in 98 Consul (according to M.) for the second time; but his name does not appear in the Fasti (Hoffm. Lex. Univ.). He had been Praetor Urbanus in 70 (Tac. Hist. iv. 39), an office he resigned to Domitian, not then Emperor. He wrote a treatise on the art of war called Strategemata, and a work on the Roman aqueducts, both of which are extant. He died in 106, saying in his will impensa monumenti supervacua est; memoria nostri durabit si vita meruimus
- Fronto, described by M. (I. iv.) as a distinguished lawyer and soldier. Perhaps the same as T. Catus Fronto, consul in 96, and alluded to by Pliny (Ep. iv. 9 and vi. 13) as an orator
- Fuscus, apparently a lawyer of some eminence and wealth whom Martial (VII. xxviii) begs to read and criticise his seventh book. He is not the Cornelius Fuscus who fell in the Dacian war, VI. lxxvi; and perhaps not the Fuscus whom M. courts in I. liv.
- Ianthis, or Violentilla, the wife of Stella the poet. Martial (VI. xxi.) as well as Statius (Silv. I. ii.) celebrates her marriage. The name is taken from iov, the Greek form of viola. Statius calls her Asteris
- Latinus, a celebrated mime, or comic actor. He was a favourite of Domitian, and a delator, Schol. on Juv. iv. 53. Martial writes an epigram (IX. xxviii) on his portrait. Suetonius (Dom. 15) tells a story how Latinus, when dining with Domitian before the murder of the latter, had disturbed the Emperor, who had been alarmed by various ominous occurrences, by reporting the fulfilment of a prophecy by Asclepiades, the astrologer, of the manner of his own death, i.e., being torn by dogs, whereas Domitian to prevent this had commanded him to be buried.

Licinianus was born like Martial at Bilbilis. He is spoken of highly by the poet as bringing glory to Spain, I. xlix and I. lxi. He is perhaps the Lucius mentioned in IV. iv. The epigram I. xlix seems to show he was a lawyer.

Licinus, was originally a Gaulish prisoner taken by Julius Caesar, who gave him his freedom, and made him his steward. Augustus appointed him, in B.C. 15, Governor of Gaul. By extortion during his government he acquired enormous wealth; and Juvenal (I. 109) couples him with Claudius' freedman Pallas as the typical rich man. The magnificence of his tomb on the Via Salaria (as of that of Messalla) was proverbial, VIII. iii. 5, 6

Lucanus, Cn. Domitius Curvius, the brother of Cn. Domitius Tullus. The two brothers were types of fraternal affection, I. xxxvi., and V. xxviii. 3, and Martial (IX. ii.) compares them to Castor and Pollux. He died before his brother, after having held high office under Nero and Domitian. Both are alluded to by Pliny, Ep. viii. 18

Lucanus, M. Annaeus, the poet of the Pharsalia, was the son of Lucius Annaeus Mela, the geographer, and the nephew of Seneca, the philosopher, and was born at Corduba in Spain. At first he was in favour with Nero, but afterwards, from the Emperor's jealousy of his literary ability, fell into disfavour, and was forbidden to recite in public. From pique he joined the Pisonian conspiracy of A.D. 65, and was offered a pardon if he would betray his fellow-conspirators. He denounced his own mother Atilla. But this did not save him, for he was forced by Nero to commit suicide by opening his veins in a bath: Tac. Ann. xv. 70. Martial, who regarded him as next to Virgil, laments his death in three epigrams, VII. xxi-xxiii.; as also does Statius, Silv. II. vii. His first work was on the death of Hector and Priam's recovery of the body, Stat. Silv. II. vii. 54; and his last the Pharsalia; but, according to Martial (X. lxiv.) he did not confine himself to grave subjects. Juvenal (vii. 79) says he was a rich man; and Tacitus (Ann. xvi. 17) that Nero was greedy for his wealth

Macer, a friend of Martial, and at one time curator of the Appian Way (X. xvii.), and afterwards proprætor of Dalmatia (X. lxxviii.). Martial in two epigrams (V. xxviii. 5, and X. lxxviii. 2) speaks of his honesty and uprightness. He is probably not the Macer who was Governor of Baetica (XII. xxviii.)

Marcella, a Spanish lady from Bilbilis, to whom M. addresses two epigrams, in one (XII. xxi.) praising her mind as truly Roman, and in the other (XII. xxxi.) acknowledging the gift of the country house she gave him when he returned to Spain. Some have supposed she was his wife

Marcellinus served in the Sarmatian campaign, VI. xxv., VII. lxxx; and in the Caucasus, IX. xlv. Martial sends him his seventh book, VII. lxxx.; and writes on his father's birthday, III. vi. He also warns him against over-rash valour: he should consider his father, as well as his Emperor, VI. xxv. That father is supposed to have been Faustinus. Marcellinus himself is called boni suboles sincera parentis, VI. xxv.

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Marsus, Domitius, a poet of the Augustan age, frequently mentioned by Martial, together with Pedo and Catullus, with whom he compares himself, v. v. 6; vii. xcix. 7. He wrote epics. Ov. Ex. P. iv. xvi. 5; and Martial alludes to an Amazonis (iv. xxix. 8) which, however, he regards as inferior to the satires of Persius. Marsus is chiefly distinguished for his epigrams, which were licentious and biting, one of his books being called cicuta (hemlock). An epitaph of his on Tibullus is extant.

Martialis, Julius, a friend for 33 years of the poet, by whom he is addressed in some of the finest epigrams, i. xv.; v. xx., x. xlvii, and xii. xxxiv. Martial also describes his villa on the Janiculum, iv. lxiv; and his library, vii. xvii. Paley identifies him with the Julius Martialis mentioned by Tacitus (Hist. i. 28 and 82) as tribunus legionis, when Otho was aspiring to the purple, and as being suspected of complicity with the plot. He appears to have been a good critic, vi. i; and Martial sends him his sixth book, ibid.; and he is probably also the Martialis to whom is sent the third book from Forum Cornelii, iii. v.

Maternus, a juriconsult, whom Martial describes as a fellow-townsmen of Bilbilis, and an old friend, x. xxxvii. 1, 3. In the same epigram M. compares the charm of life in Spain with life in a Roman villa.

Melior, Ate dius, a bon vicant of the time, called nitidus, iv. liv. 8. Martial praises him (viii. xxxviii) for his liberality to the Guild of Scribes in memory of his friend Blaesus; and both Martial (vi. xxviii and xxix), and Statius (Silv. ii. i.) have written on the death of his freedman Glaucias.

Messalla Corvinus, M. Valerius, the friend of Horace and patron of Tibullus. Was Consu B.C. 31 and Praefectus Urbi in 27. He was a patron of learning and the arts, and was himself a poet, a grammarian, historian, and orator. He took the side of Brutus and Cassius in the civil war, but was afterwards reconciled to Augustus. His tomb (alluded to by Martial, viii. lii. 5 and x. ii. 9) was, like that of Licinius, celebrated for its splendour.

Nomentum, now La Mentana, a town in the Sabine Country, 14½ Roman miles N.E. of Rome. Originally a Latin town, a colony from Alba, it was taken by Tarquinius Priscus, the fifth king of Rome. Martial, and also Seneca, had a house here, vi. xliii. 4, ix. xviii. 2; and here M. retired when he wanted quiet, xii. lvii. 27. Nomentum was celebrated for its wine, which, when it was old, M. praises, i. cv., and offers to his guests in x. xlviii. 19; but the poet in other respects depreciates his property, x. xciv. His fields, he says (vii. xxxi. 8) "produced nothing but himself."

Ovidius, Q., Martial's friend and neighbour at Nomentum. He had accompanied Caesonius Maximus into exile when the former was banished by Nero, for which Martial (vii. xlv. and xlv.) praises him. In his old age he accompanied a friend to Britain, apparently in fulfillment of a promise, or from affection, x. xlv. Martial writes two epigrams (ix. lii. and liii) on his birthday.

Paris, a mime or comic actor, for whom Martial writes an epitaph (xi. xiii). He had great influence at Court, and was the darling of the Roman people. Domitian, on suspicion of his intrigue with

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

- the Empress Domitia, caused him to be murdered on the Flaminian Way
- Parthenius*, a freedman, and Secretary or chamberlain to Domitian. Though he had been privy to the murder of that Emperor, the mildness of Nerva retained him for a time in his place, but was unable to protect him against the infuriated praetorians who put him to death with nameless indignities in A.D. 97. He seems to have been something of a poet, XI. i. 6; XII. xi. 2. and is constantly flattered by Martial, to whom he gave the celebrated toga described in VIII. xxviii.
- Paulus*, some rich acquaintance of Martial, apparently a lawyer, VII. lxxii. Martial quizzes him on the tenuity of the bowl Paulus had sent him, VIII. xxxiii.; and on his greed, IX. lxxxv.; and satirises his adulation of great men, although he is himself consul, X. x.; and his false antiques and equally false friends, XII. lxxix.; and complains of the trouble of calling upon him at a distance only to find him "not at home," v. xxii. He seems to have been a man of wit, v. xxviii. 6
- Pedo*, Albinovanus, a poet and epigrammatist of the Augustan age, and a friend of Ovid, who addresses him in one of the Epistles from the Pontus: Ep. ex P. IV. x.; and alludes to his poem on the exploits of Theseus. Martial compares himself with him and with Marsus and Catullus, v. v. 6
- Plinius*, Caius Caecilius, Secundus, the nephew and adopted son of the historian, born A.D. 61 or 62, probably at Comum. An orator, advocate and man of letters. He studied under Quintilian, and practised before the Centumviral Court, and filled several offices, being Consul in 100 (in which year he delivered his Panegyric on Trajan), and Propraetor of Pontica in 103. His works consist of the Panegyric on Trajan above mentioned, and ten books of Epistles, of which the tenth consists of letters to Trajan and the Emperor's replies, two of which (97 and 98) are especially interesting by their allusion to the Christians. He was one of the most learned men of the age. Martial addressed an epigram (X. xix.) to him; but the Secundus alluded to in VII. lxxxiv. (where the note should be corrected) chronology shows not to be the same
- Primus, Marcus Antonius*, was born at Tolosa in Gaul (IX. xcix. 3), took a leading part in the Civil war that made Vespasian Emperor, and was the first to enter Rome after the second battle of Bedriacum against the Vitellians. He bore the nickname in his youth of Beccus (beak of a cock, gallus); and Suetonius (Vit. 28) mentions the prophecy that Vitellius would fall into the hands Gallicani hominis. He perhaps gave Martial a toga (X. lxxiii. 2), and he admired his poetry, IX. xcix. 1. M. calls him Tolosae gloria, IX. xcix. 3; and in a fine epigram congratulates him on his well-spent life, X. xxiii.; and in another praises his portrait as a youth, X. xxxii. But Tacitus gives a different account of his character. "Though an offender against the laws, and condemned for forgery in the time of Nero, amongst the other evils of war, he had recovered his place in the order of senators. Though he had been appointed by Galba to the command of the seventh legion, he was believed to have written to Otho, offering himself as an adherent to his party. When the fortunes of Vitellius were tottering he attached himself to the party of Vespasian, and brought to it a great accession of strength. He was

- energetic in action, ready of tongue, a master of the art of sowing the seeds of suspicion against other men, influential in discords and seditious, a plunderer, a briber, in peace most vile, in war not to be despised," Hist. ii. 86. "He had a ready audacity," Ann. xiv. 40; and "glibness of speech, and skill and influence in soothing the common herd," Hist. iii. 10. "He was of an arrogance impatient of an equal, much more of a superior," Hist. iv. 80; "success in the case of such a character laid bare his avarice, his insolence, and his other hidden vices," Hist. iii. 49
- Priscus, Terentius*, a fellow-countryman of Martial, to whom he dedicates, on Priscus' return to Spain, the twelfth book. In XII. lxiii. he addresses Saturn on the same subject. Martial calls him (XII. iv.) his Mæcenas. In VIII. xlv. he celebrates Priscus' return from Sicily; and in another epigram (XII. xiv.) warns him against the danger of too reckless hunting
- Proculus, G. Julius*, a friend of Martial, to whom he sends (I. lxx.) his first book, and whose recovery from illness he commemorates, XI. xxxvi.
- Pudens, Aulus*, of Sassina in Umbria, a friend of Martial, and a centurion. He served in Pannonia. Martial celebrates his marriage with Claudia, IV. xlii.; and prays (VI. lviii. 10) that he may return from his campaigns with primipilar rank and the rank of a knight. It may be inferred from I. xxxi. 3, as compared with V. xviii. 1, that he attained the former honour at least
- Quintianus*, some rich friend of M. (V. xviii. 9) to whom M. says that, being poor, he will only send his books. In I. lii. M. appeals to him against a plagiarist
- Quintilianus, M. Fabius*, was born at Calagurris (Calahorra) in Spain. He was the most celebrated of Roman rhetoricians. Educated at Rome, he returned to Spain, and came back with Galba in 68. He practised at the Bar, but is chiefly known as a teacher of eloquence, the younger Pliny (Ep. ii. 14; vi. 6) being one of his pupils. He held the chair of rhetoric founded by Vespasian; and was granted by Domitian the insignia of a consul, to which Juvenal (vii. 197) may perhaps sarcastically allude. After twenty years' tenure of the chair he retired about 89 A.D., and in two years had completed the work for which he is principally known, the Institutiones Oratoriae in twelve books. He advised Martial to take up a profession, II. xc.
- Rabirius*, the architect of Domitian's palace, VII. lvi. Martial has an epigram on the death of R.'s parents, and praises his filial piety, X. lxxi.
- Regulus, M. Aquilius*, a celebrated advocate. He was a delator under Nero and Domitian, and attained great wealth. He is disliked by Pliny, but is flattered by Martial, who praises his character (I. cxi.). Pliny ridicules even his oratorical power (Ep. iv. 7), and his extravagant grief for the death of his son. "a boy of a quick but inscrutable disposition, who yet might have followed the right, had he not been like his father," Ep. iv. 2. M. congratulates him in two epigrams (I. xii. and lxxxii.) on his escape from death. Pliny describes him as "rich, factious, courted by many, feared by more; and fear is generally stronger than love," Ep. i. 5;

and remarks his chastened attitude after Domitian's death, "under whom he had committed no smaller infamies than under Nero, but more covert ones," ibid. Pliny also (Ep. ii. 20) tells a story of his legacy-hunting even in the case of his enemy's wife

Rufus, Camonius, of Bononia, a friend of M. He died at the age of 20 in Cappadocia, vi. lxxxv. M. alludes in two epigrams (ix. lxxiv. and lxxvi.) to his portrait as a child, and writes an epigram (vi. lxxxv.) on his death

Rufus, Canius, of Gades, a poet (i. lxi. 9) and friend of Martial, who alludes (i. lxxix.; iii. xx.) to his geniality, and to his versatility as an author. He married the accomplished Theophila, on whom M. (vii. lxxix.) writes an epigram

Rufus, Instantius, a friend of M., to whom he presented the famous cup elaborately described in viii. li. M. speaks of his sincerity, viii. lxxiii. 1. Perhaps he may be identified with the proconsul of Baetica mentioned in xii. xcviil. 5

Sabinus, Caesius, of Sassina in Umbria, where he built a temple to the Nymph of the Lake, ix. lviii. M. sends him (vii. xcviil. 13) his seventh book, and on another occasion a wreath of roses, ix. lx.

Scorpus, a famous charioteer on whose death Martial writes two epitaphs, x. i. and liii.; and of whose immense earnings he speaks, iv. lxxvii.; x. lxxiv.; and gilt statue, v. xxv.

Seneca, L. Annæus, the Stoic philosopher, was born at Corduba in Spain, i. lxi. 7. He was the brother of Annaeus Mela, the geographer, and of Gallio of the New Testament, and uncle of Lucan the poet. He was banished by the Emperor Claudius, but was afterwards tutor to Nero, whose quinquennium, or first five years of good government, was attributed to his teaching. He, however, stained his reputation by condoning Nero's murder of his mother Agrippina. He was implicated in the conspiracy of Piso in A.D. 65, and, together with his wife, committed suicide, Tac. Ann. xv. 63. He was a man of great wealth

Severus, a critic to whom Martial submits his poems, v. lxxx.; xi. lvii. As in the last epigram he is called doctus, he may have been himself a poet. In ii. vi. M. chaffs him for his hurried reading of Martial's slender volume, although he professed to be a great admirer of his poems. There is also an epigram (vii. xxxviii.) on two hideous slaves of his; and Martial frequently addresses him. In vii. xlix. he sends him a gift of eggs and apples from the country. It is not certain whether this Severus is identical with the younger son of Silius, for whom the poet (viii. lxxvi.) solicits the consulship; and whose death (ix. lxxxvi.) he laments

Silius, C., surnamed Italicus, orator, lawyer, and poet, was born about A.D. 25. Pliny (Ep. iii. 7) gives an account of his life. He was consul in 68, the last of Nero's consuls, and proconsul of Asia, where he served with distinction. He lost his younger son, for whom Martial solicits (viii. lxxvi.) the consulship, and whose death he laments, ix. lxxxvi.; but left the elder a consular. In later life he retired to Campania, where he possessed many villas, including Cicero's house at Puteoli and Virgil's house at Naples, xi. xlviil. and xlix. These villas were richly furnished with books, statues, and busts, among which he especially venerated that of Virgil, whose birthday he kept more religiously than his own, and whose tomb he regarded as a temple. He committed suicide by voluntary starvation in his seventy-sixth year because of an incurable cancer. As a poet Martial (VII. lxiii.) calls him immortal, but Pliny says that his works showed more scholarly care than genius. He is known by his Punica, an epic on the second Punic war in seventeen books, of which Prof. Mackail says: "His Punic War may fairly contend for the distinction of being the worst epic ever written . . . its author the most striking instance in Latin literature of the incorrigible amateur . . . without any inventive or constructive power of his own. Silius copies with tasteless pedantry all the outworn traditions of the heroic epic." He is only once referred to in the fifth century; then he fell into complete oblivion till he was discovered in the fifteenth

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Stella, L. Arruntius, of Patavium, a patron and friend of Martial and Statius, who dedicates to him the first book of the Silvae. Both Martial (VI. xxi.) and Statius (Silv. i. 2) write epithalamia on Stella's marriage with Violentilla, whom M. calls Ianthis, and Statius Asteris. Stella gave games to celebrate the conclusion of the Sarmatian war, VIII. lxxviii.; and was consul A.D. 101; an honour for which M. (IX. xliii.) had solicited Apollo. Statius (Silv. i. ii. 177) also says that he was a quindecimvir librorum sibyllinorum. He was also a poet. M. alludes to his Columba, a poem on the death of Ianthis' pet dove, I. vii. 1; VII. xiv. 5; and writes several epigrams (e.g. VI. xlvii.) on a spring in Stella's house

Sulpicia, a poetess of the time, of whom nothing is known, X. xxxv. She was the wife of Calenus, X. xxxviii. She is mentioned by Ausonius and by Sidonius Apolli-naris; and a satirical poem on the expulsion by Domitian of the philosophers from Rome is commonly attributed to her. Paley ascribes to her the poems often contained in the editions of Tibullus

Sura, Licinius, of Hispania Tarraconensis, held offices under Nerva and Trajan, being under the latter three times consul. Martial speaks (VII. xlvii. 1) of his learning, and (VI. lxiv. 13) appreciation of M.'s poems, and in the first epigram, one of the best, of his unexpected recovery from severe illness. He would seem to have been a natural philosopher, for Pliny (Ep. iv. xxx.) consults him as to the unexplained ebb and flow of a spring. On his death Trajan gave him a public funeral, and built baths in his memory. He is perhaps the Sura of I. xlix. 40, but this Sura may be Palfurius Sura, who was removed from the Senate by Vespasian, became a Stoic, was a delator under Domitian, and was after his death condemned by the Senate, Schol. in Juv. iv. 53

Tullus, Cn. Domitius Curvius, the brother of Lucanus (q.v.). He held high office under Vespasian and Domitian. He was a rich man like his brother, and Pliny (Ep. viii. 18) speaks of the disappointment of the captatores when his will was opened, and says of the two brothers that it seemed ordained by fate that they should be enriched even against the will of the donors. He had played upon the expectations of legacy-hunters (se captandum praebuisset) during his life, and by his will left his property to his relations, thus showing himself longe melior morte quam vita. He was a cripple, unable even to brush his own teeth, complaining that "he daily licked the fingers of his slaves," Pliny, l.c. Pliny speaks of the devotion of his wife

Vestinus, perhaps the Lucius V. described by Tacitus (Hist. iv. 53) as equestris ordinis virum, sed auctoritate famaue inter proceres, to whom Vespasian gave the duty of restoring the Capitol; and perhaps also the son of the consul Vestinus who, being marked for death by Nero, committed suicide by opening his veins in a bath (Tac. Ann. xv. 69). Martial praises him (iv. lxxiii.) for dividing his property amongst his friends when he was on the point of death. Paley suggests that his motive was to avoid making the Emperor his heir, or joint heir; and cites the example of Agricola (Tac. Ag. 43), who had made Domitian joint heir with his own wife and daughter

Zoilus, an anonymous person frequently attacked by M., and to whom is attributed every vice. He had been a slave (III. xxix.) and a runaway one (XI. liv.), and had afterwards become a knight (III. xxix.) It is not improbable that M. borrowed the name from the original Zoilus, a grammarian of Amphipolis who flourished in the time of Philip of Macedon and Alexander the Great, and whose name, because of his attacks on Homer, Plato, and others, became one synonymous with malignant criticism, Ov. Rem. Am. 366. He was called κυῶν ῥητορικός, and ὀμηρομάστιξ, and remains, in the words of Swinburne (Cont. of Shak. II.) "eternally alive (or in Browning's characteristically audacious phrase) 'immortally immerded.'" Aelian (V.H. xi. 10) reports a remark of his that he always spoke evilly of men because he could not do them evil
