PREFACE

THIS volume was intended to appear in 1914. The delay occasioned by the war, while it has doubtless enabled improvements to be made in detail, has at the same time made it hard to observe a meticulous consistency.

Such as it is, the hope may be permitted that the book will be found helpful as an introduction to the Alexandrine literature. The scholar will readily understand that the limitations of this series compelled us to partial statement where full discussion was desirable; he will understand, too, that to secure even such statement as we could attempt, we had to study the severest compression. In particular, it may be explained that, to satisfy the limits required for publication, a very considerable amount of work had to be ruthlessly jettisoned. At the same time the translators most cordially and gratefully acknowledge that the Editors of the series have done their utmost, by an unusual concession in the matter of notes, to render the volume useful.

To enumerate the names of the scholars who have at one time or another given us advice on special points might seem to exaggerate the importance of the book. But, while the translators are alone responsible for their final decisions, they gratefully remember among those who have aided them: the Astronomer Royal, Sir Frank Dyson; Mr. W. T. Vesey; Mr. E. W. Maunder; the Astronomer Royal for Scotland, Professor Sampson; Professor Cossar Ewart; Professor E. T. Whittaker; Mr. F. J. M. Stratton, D.S.O.; Dr. T. G. Smyly; Professor A. S. Hunt; Professor Burnet; Professor Arthur Platt; Professor Phillimore; and among the younger men qui olim memorabuntur, Mr. E. P. Dickie, M.C., and Messrs. A. and N. Porteous for help in revising the proofs.

To the firm of Messrs. R. & R. Clark we owe our cordial thanks. Mr. William Maxwell has shown a warm personal interest in the progress of the work which is in accordance with the best traditions of Scottish printing. To Messrs. Clark's accomplished Reader we desire to offer no merely formal acknowledgement of the vigilance and scholarship by which the book has been materially improved.

INTRODUCTION

1. THE LIFE OF CALLIMACHUS

OUR authorities for the life of Callimachus are a notice in Suidas s.v. Καλλίμαχος and various references in other authors.

Suidas says: "Callimachus, son of Battus and Mesatma, of Cyrene, grammarian, pupil of Hermocrates of Iasos, the grammarian [an authority upon accents, Gr. Lat. iv. 530 f. Keil], married the daughter of Euphrates of Syracuse. His sister's son was Callimachus the younger, who wrote an epic, On Islands. So diligent was he that he wrote poems in every metre and also wrote a great number of works in prose. The books written by him amount in all to more than eight hundred. He lived in the times of Ptolemy Philadelphus [reigned 285–247 B.C.]. Before his introduction to that king he taught grammar in Eleusis, a hamlet of Alexandria. He survived to the time of Ptolemy, surnamed Euergetes, and Olympiad 127 [an error, see below], in the second year of which Ptolemy Euergetes began to reign."

Suidas gives also a notice of his nephew: "Callimachus of Cyrene, epic poet, nephew of the preceding son of Stasenor and Megatima, sister of Callimachus." From this Hemsterhys conjectured that in the first notice also Megatima should be read for Mesatma.

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

The most probable date on the whole for the birth of Callimachus is circ. 310 B.C. We learn from Vit. Arat. i. that Callimachus, both in his epigrams and also ἐν τοῖς πρὸς Πραξιφάνην, referred to Aratus as older than himself. But as they were fellow-students at Athens the difference of age is not likely to have been considerable: we may put the birth of Aratus in 315, that of Callimachus in 310.

Callimachus claimed to be descended from Battus, the founder of Cyrene (Pind. P. iv., v., Hdt. iv. 155 ff.): Strabo xvii. 837 λέγεται δὲ ἡ Κυρήνη κτίσμα Βάττου· πρόγονον δὲ τοῦτον ἑαυτοῦ φάσκει Καλλίμαχος. In any case he belonged to a family of some eminence, and we learn from himself that his grandfather had distinguished himself in military affairs (Epigr. xxiii.).

While still a young man he was, along with Aratus, a pupil of Praxiphanes the Peripatetic philosopher (author of treatises On Poetry, On History, etc.), in Athens (Vit. Arat. i., iv., and the Latin Vit. Arat.) probably circ. 287–281.

Subsequently, as Suidas tells us, he was a teacher in Eleusis, a suburb of Alexandria; afterwards he was introduced to the court of Ptolemy Philadelphus, in whose service he continued—apart from occasional excursions—till his death circ. 235 B.C.

The statement in Suidas that Callimachus παρέτεινε μέχρι τοῦ Εὐεργέτου κληθέντος Πτολεμαίου [came to the throne in 247], ὀλυμπιάδος δὲ ρκζ', ἧς κατὰ τὸ δεύτερον ἔτος [271 B.C.] ὁ Εὐεργέτης Πτολεμαῖος ἤρξατο τῆς βασιλείας is manifestly wrong. Merkel proposed to read ρλγ', i.e. 247. Kaibel makes a more elaborate conjecture, reading <ἤκμασε δὲ ἐπὶ τῆς ὀλυμπιάδος ρκζ'> καὶ παρέτεινε . . . ὀλυμπιάδος δὲ ρλγ', ἧς κτλ., i.e. his

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

“floruit” was in Ol. 127 and he survived to the time of Ptolemy Euergetes, Ol. 133. No passage in his works implying a later date than Ol. 133, that was assumed as the date of his death.

But we read in Suidas s.v. Ἀριστοφάνης Βυζάντιος . . . μαθητῆς Καλλιμάχου καὶ Ζηνοδότου· ἀλλὰ τοῦ μὲν νέος, τοῦ δὲ παῖς ἤκουσε. The natural interpretation here (though some would take the last sentence as a chiasmus) is to understand the first τοῦ as Callimachus, the second as Zenodotus; and hence it is sought to be inferred that Callimachus survived Zenodotus, whose death is put circ. 245-235.

Among the more distinguished pupils of Callimachus were Eratosthenes of Cyrene, Aristophanes of Byzantium, and Apollonius, a native of Alexandria or of Naucratis, but from his sojourn in Rhodes called “the Rhodian.” With the last named Callimachus had a quarrel which, purely literary in its origin, developed into a bitter personal feud, and led to Apollonius withdrawing from Alexandria to Rhodes. In the view of Callimachus the day of the Homeric type of epic was past. That spacious type of poetry must now give place to a poetry more expressive of the genius of the age, the short and highly polished poem, in which the recondite learning of the time should find expression. Apollonius, on the other hand, in his Argonautica sought to continue the Homeric tradition. We are not concerned here to decide the dispute, but we can appreciate the two points of view. To Callimachus it may well have seemed that the long epic, written in the traditional epic language with its set phrases and formulae, could hardly be other than a weak and artificial echo of Homer: it could be no expression of the living culture of Alexandria: it could have no originality, nothing individual (Callim. Ep. xxx.). To Apollonius, on the other hand, it might seem that for Callimachus romance was dead; and to him, who deserves to be called the first of the romantics, Callimachus might appear even more truly

The idle singer of an empty day, lifeless and "wooden" and uninspired: cf. A.P. xi. 275.

The true inwardness of the quarrel may not have been apparent to their contemporaries or even to themselves, and it may have seemed to be merely a question of the Small Book v. the Big Book. Athen. ii. 72 A tells us ὅτι Καλλίμαχος ὁ γραμματικὸς τὸ μέγα βιβλίον ἴσον ἔλεγεν εἶναι τῷ μεγάλῳ κακῷ, "that a big book is a big evil." Even if we accept the modern explanation that this refers merely to a papyrus-roll (βιβλίον) of inconvenient size we have the evidence of Callimachus himself in Hymn. Apoll. 105 ff.: "Spake Envy privily in the ear of Apollo: 'I admire not the poet who singeth not songs in number as the sea.' Apollo spurned Envy with his foot, and spake thus: 'Great is the stream of the Assyrian river, but much filth of earth and much refuse it carries on its waters. And not of every water do the Melissae carry to Deo, but of the trickling stream that springs from a holy fountain, pure and undefiled, the very crown of waters.'" It might be fanciful to equate the λύματα (schol. Hymn i. 17 λύματα· καθάρματα) and καθαρῆ of this passage with the κάθαρμα of Apollonius' epigram; but in any case the schol. on this passage says expressly: ἐγκαλεῖ διὰ τούτων τοὺς σκώπτοντας αὐτὸν μὴ δύνασθαι ποιῆσαι

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

μέγα ποίημα, ὅθεν ἠναγκάσθη ποιῆσαι τὴν Ἐκάλην. Some have supposed that Apollon. Argon. iii. 932 ff. ἀκλειῆς ὅδε μάντις ὃς οὐδ' ὄσα παῖδες ἴσασιν οἶδε νόῳ φράσασθαι κτλ. was a second edition insertion intended to refer to those words of Callimachus, the crow being Callimachus, Mopsus being Apollonius himself.

Doubtless Callimachus attributed the attitude of Apollonius to envy; he says of himself: ὁ δ' ἤκεισεν κρέσσονα βασκανίης, Epigr. xxiii. 4, cf. Hymn. Apoll. 105; and he wrote a poem called Ibis, "of studied obscurity and abuse on one Ibis, an enemy of Callimachus: this was Apollonius, who wrote the Argonautica" (Suidas s.v. Καλλίμαχος), which served as the model for Ovid's poem of the same name: Ovid, Ibis, 53 ff. "Postmodo, si perges, in te mihi liber iambus Tincta Lycambeo sanguine tela dabit. Nunc, quo Battiades inimicum devovet Ibin, Hoc ego devoveo teque tuosque modo. Utque ille, historiis involvam carmina caecis: Non soleam quamvis hoc genus ipse sequi. Illius ambages imitatus in Ibide dicar Oblitus moris iudicii que mei."

To understand the allusion in applying the name Ibis to Apollonius we have only to read the description of the bird in Strabo xvii. 823, where he is speaking of the botany and zoology of Egypt: "Tamest of all is the Ibis, which is like a stork in shape and size, and is of two colours, one storklike [the white or Sacred Ibis], the other all black [the Glossy Ibis]. Every crossing (τρίδος) in Alexandria is full of them, in some respects usefully, in others not usefully. Usefully, because they pick up all sorts of vermin and the offal (ἀποκαθάρματα) in the butchers' shops and fish-shops (ὀψοπώλια). They are detrimental, because they are omnivorous and unclean (παμφάγον καὶ ἀκάθαρτον) and are with difficulty prevented from polluting in every way what is clean and what is not theirs (τῶν ἀλλοτρίων)."

Callimachus, as we have seen, abhorred the common path (E. xxx. 1 f.), and loved the pure spring (H. Apoll. 110 f.). So his professed disciple Propertius iii. 1. 1 ff. says: "Callimachi Manes . . . Primus ego ingredior puro de fonte sacerdos Itala per graios orgia ferre choros. . . . Non datur ad Musas currere lata via . . . opus hoc de monte Sororum Detulit intacta pagina nostra via." To Callimachus Apollonius was a treader in the beaten track, a feeder upon the unclean. Himself he would not have poetry to be

"Like a broad highway or a populous street

Or like some roadside pool, which no nice art
Has guarded that the cattle may not beat
And foul it with a multitude of feet."

2. CALLIMACHUS AND THE ALEXANDRINE LIBRARY

The statement, so unreservedly made in many works on Greek literature, that Callimachus succeeded Zenodotus as librarian of the Alexandrian library, would scarcely concern us here were it not that one observes in some recent writing remarks on the position of Callimachus among his contemporaries which proceed on the assumption that the librarianship of Callimachus is an ascertained fact.

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

The genesis of the statement is briefly this. In 1819 F. Osann discovered in a Plautine MS. in Rome a scholium which professed to be based on a note by one Caecius on the Plutus of Aristophanes. Osann communicated the beginning of this scholium to Meineke, who published it in his Quaest. Scen. Spec. iii. p. 3.

A complete copy of the scholium was published by F. Ritschl in his Die alexandrinischen Bibliotheken, Breslau, 1838, pp. 3-4. The MS. in which it occurs is in the library of the Collegio Romano and is a fifteenth-century parchment codex of Plautus in 4to, designated 4.C.39, containing fifteen plays. The scholium occurs on the page where the Poenulus ends and the Mostellaria begins. It runs thus:

“Ex Caecio in commento comoediarum Aristophanis poetae in pluto quam possumus opulentiam nuncupare. Alexander aetolus et Lycophron chalcidensis et Zenodotus ephestius impulsu Regis ptolemaei philadelphi cognomento, qui mirum in modum favebat ingeniis et famae doctorum hominum, graecae artis poeticos libros in unum collegerunt et in ordinem redegerunt; Alexander tragoedias, Lycophron comoedias, Zenodotus vero Homeri poemata et reliquorum illustrium poetarum. Nam Rex ille philosophis affertissimus et caeteris omnibus autoribus claris disquisitis impensa regiae munificentiae ubique terrarum quantum valuit voluminibus opera demetrii phalerii phzxa senum duas bibliothecas fecit, alteram extra Regiam, alteram autem in Regia. In exteriori autem fuerunt milia voluminum quadraginta duo et octingenta. In Regia autem bibliotheca voluminum quidem commixtorum volumina quadringenta milia, simplicium autem et digestorum milia nonaginta, sicuti refert Callimachus aulicus Regius bibliothecarius qui etiam singulis voluminibus titulos inscripsit. Fuit praeterea qui idem asseveret eratosthenes non ita multo post eiusdem custos bibliothecae. hec autem fuerunt omnium gentium ac linguarum quae habere potuit docta volumina quae summa diligentia Rex ille in suam linguam fecit ab optimis interpretibus converti. Ceterum pisistratus sparsam prius homeri poesim ante ptolemaeum philadelphum annis ducentis et eo etiam amplius sollerti cura in ea quae nunc extant redegit volumina usus ad hoc opus divinum industria quattuor celeberrimorum et eruditissimorum hominum videlicet Concyli Onomacriti athenieñ, Zopyri heracleotae et Orphei crotoniatae. Nam carptim prius Homerus et non nisi difficillime legebatur. Quum etiam post pisistrati curam et ptolemaei diligentiam aristarchus adhuc exactius in homeri elimandam collectionem vigilavit. Heliodorus multa aliter nugatur quae longo convitio cecius reprehendit. Nam ol' LXXII duobus doctis viris a pisistrato huic negotio praepositis dicit homerum ita fuisse compositum. Qui quidem zenodoti et aristarchi industria omnibus praelatam comprobant, quod constat fuisse falsissimum. Quippe cum inter pisistratum et Zenodotum fuerint anni supra ducentos. Aristarchus autem quattuor annis minor fuerit ipso et Zenodoto atque ptolemaeo."

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

The unknown Caecius or Cecius W. Dindorf (Rhein. Mus., 1830, iv. p. 232) proposed to identify with John Tzetzes.

In 1839 J. A. Cramer published at Oxford his Anecdota graeca e codd. manuscriptis Bibliothecae Regiae Parisiensis. The first of the Anecdota (vol. i. p. 3 ff.) is a short anonymous treatise Περὶ κωμωδίας from cod. 2677, "written apparently in the sixteenth century" according to the Paris catalogue: but Cramer notes that "Catalogi autem confector indicare neglexit, interesse quaedam vacua folia inter caetera quae Codice insunt et opusculum nostrum, quod diversa prorsus manu scriptum videtur et aliquantum recentiori: ut aliunde crediderim in unum volumen cum prioribus coaluisse." Cramer does not quite accept the identification of Cecius = Tzetzes.

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

The relative portion of this treatise is as follows: ἰστέον ὅτι Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Αἰτωλὸς καὶ Λυκόφρων ὁ Χαλκιδεὺς ὑπὸ Πτολεμαίου τοῦ Φιλαδέλφου προτραπέντες τὰς σκηνικὰς διώρθωσαν βίβλους. Λυκόφρων μὲν τὰς τῆς κωμῳδίας, Ἀλέξανδρος δὲ τὰς τῆς τραγῳδίας, ἀλλὰ δὴ καὶ τὰς σατυρικὰς. ὁ γὰρ Πτολεμαῖος, φιλολογώτατος ὢν, διὰ Δημητρίου τοῦ Φαληρέως καὶ ἑτέρων ἔλλογίμων ἀνδρῶν, δαπάναις βασιλικαῖς ἀπανταχόθεν τὰς βίβλους εἰς Ἀλεξανδρείαν συνήθροισεν, καὶ δυσὶ βιβλιοθήκαις ταύτας ἐπέθετο. ὦν τῆς ἐκτὸς μὲν ἀριθμὸς τετρακισμῦριαι δισχίλιαι ὀκτακόσμαι, τῆς δὲ τῶν ἀνακτόρων ἐντὸς συμμιγῶν μὲν βιβλῶν ἀριθμὸς τεσσαράκοντα μυριάδες, ἀμιγῶν δὲ καὶ ἀπλῶν μυριάδες ἑννέα· ὦν τοὺς πίνακας ὕστερον Καλλιμάχος ἐπεγράψατο. Ἐρατοσθένει δὲ ἠλικιώτῃ Καλλιμάχου παρὰ τοῦ βασιλέως τὸ τοιοῦτον ἐνεπιστεύθη βιβλιοφυλάκιον. (An edition of this anonymous treatise corrected from various MSS. was published by Studemund, Philologus, xlv. (1886).)

Next in the Rhein. Mus. vi. (1847) H. Keil published from a MS. at Milan, "cod. Ambrosianus C 222 sup. 4. mai. bombycinus, saec. xiii., qui olim Georgii Merulae fuit" the Prolegomena to Aristophanes of John Tzetzes. The superscription βίβλος Ἀριστοφάνους Τζέτζην φορέουσ' ὑποφήτην is followed by two versions of the Prolegomena, the similarity of which to the scholium Plautinum completely confirms Dindorf's conjecture. The relative passages in the two versions are as follows :

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

- I. "Alexander the Ætolian and Lycophron the Chalcidian encouraged by royal bounties revised (διωρθώσαντο) for Ptolemy Philadelphus the scenic books—I mean the books of Comedy, Tragedy, and Satyric dramas—there being with them and helping in the correction such a librarian of so great a library—Eratosthenes, ὃν βίβλων τοὺς πίνακας Καλλίμαχος ἀπεγράψατο. Alexander corrected the Tragic, Lycophron the Comical. νεανίαί ἦσαν Καλλίμαχος καὶ Ἐρατοσθένης. These revised the scenic books, as the Aristarchuses and Zenodotuses looked over those of the poets."
- II. The second version, after a similar reference to the founding of the library, proceeds to mention the number of books in the two libraries, "whereof the number in the outside library was 42,800; in that within the Court and Palace the number of 'mixed' books was 400,000, of 'simple and unmixed' books 90,000, ὡς ὁ Καλλίμαχος νεανίσκος ὢν τῆς αὐλῆς ὑστέρως μετὰ τὴν ἀνόρθωσιν τοὺς πίνακας αὐτῶν ἀπεγράψατο. Eratosthenes, his contemporary, was entrusted by the king with such a great library. ἀλλὰ τὰ Καλλιμάχου καὶ τοῦ Ἐρατοσθένους μετὰ βραχὺν τινα χρόνον ἐγένετο τῆς συναγωγῆς τῶν βίβλων, ὡς

ἔφην, καὶ διορθώσεως, καὶ ἐπ' αὐτοῦ τοῦ
Πτολεμαίου τοῦ Φιλαδέλφου.”

Thus the Plautine scholium alone names Callimachus as librarian, and even the phrase “aulicus Regius bibliothecarius” does not necessarily imply that he was Chief Librarian. The words, in fact seem rather to be merely a loose translation of the statement in the second version of Tzetzes.

The Prolegomena of Tzetzes can be consulted conveniently in the Appendix to Nauck's edition of the Lexicon Vindobonense, St. Petersburg, 1867, or in Kaibel, Comicorum Gr. Frag. (Berlin 1899), p. 18 ff.

3. WORKS

It will be convenient to divide these into two groups.

A. Works mentioned by Suidas s.v. Καλλίμαχος.

His list does not profess to be complete: “among his books are also these.” The list runs as follows: 1. The Coming of Io. 2. Semele. 3. Settlements of Argos. 4. Arcadia. 5. Glaucus. 6. Hopes (Ἐλπίδες). Nothing is known of any of these. They may not have been independent works at all, but merely subsections of the Aitia or other works mentioned below.

Suidas then mentions 7. Satyric dramas. 8. Tragedies. 9. Comedies. 10. Lyrics (μέλη). 11. Ibis (see above).

Then follows a list of works presumably in prose:

12. Museum. This, of which nothing is known,

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

may have been a sub-title of the Pinaces. 13. Tables of all those who were eminent in any kind of literature and of their writings (Πίνακες τῶν ἐν πάσῃ παιδείᾳ διαλαμψάντων καὶ ὧν συνέγραψαν) in 120 books. 14. Table and register of dramatic poets chronologically, from the earliest times (Πίναξ καὶ ἀναγραφὴ τῶν κατὰ χρόνους καὶ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς γενομένων διδασκάλων).

No. 14 is doubtless only a sub-title of No. 13. These tables were a catalogue of the books in the larger Alexandrian Library, i.e. part of the Bryceion near the Museum. Besides giving a list of an author's works, this catalogue contained a biographical sketch of each author. It would seem that the authors were distributed in at least eight classes: Epic and other non-dramatic poets; Dramatic poets; Legislation (this was Pinax No. 3; Athen. 585 B, νόμον συσσιτικόν. . . ἀνέγραψε δ' αὐτὸν Καλλίμαχος ἐν τῷ τρίτῳ πίνακι τῶν Νόμων); Philosophy (Diog. Laert. viii. 86; Athen. 252 C); History (Athen. ii. 70 B); Oratory (Athen. 669 E Καλλίμαχος ἐν τῇ τῶν Ῥητορικῶν ἀναγραφῇ); Miscellaneous (τῶν παντοδαπῶν, Athen. 244 A). The Pinaces gave also the opening words of each book and the number of lines it contained (Athen. 244 A, 585 B; Harpocrat. s.v. Ἴων).

15. Table of the Glosses and Compositions of Democritus (Πίναξ τῶν Δημοκρίτου γλωσσῶν καὶ συνταγμάτων). 16. Local Month-names (Μηνῶν προσηγορίαι κατὰ ἔθνος καὶ πόλεις). 17. Foundations of Islands and Cities and changes of name (Κτίσεις νήσων καὶ πόλεων καὶ μετονομασίαι). Known only from Suidas. 18. On the Rivers in Europe. A sub-title of No. 23. 19. On strange and marvellous things in Peloponnesus and Italy. A sub-title of

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

No. 24. 20. Περὶ μετονομασίας ἰχθύων. 21. Περὶ ἀνέμων. Probably sub-titles of the Ἑθ. Ὀνομ. (see below). 22. On Birds (Περὶ ὀρνέων). This, cited by Athen. 388 D as Περὶ ὀρνίθων, may have been a sub-title of the Ἑθ. Ὀνομ. (see below). 23. On the Rivers of the World (Περὶ τῶν ἐν τῇ οἰκουμένη ποταμῶν). 24. Collection of marvels in all the earth according to localities (Θαυμάτων τῶν εἰς ἅπασαν τὴν γῆν κατὰ τόπους συναγωγῆ). This was used by Antigonus of Carystus.

B. Works not mentioned in Suidas' list but known of from other sources.

25. Aetia. 26. Hecale. 27. On Games (Περὶ ἀγώνων). 28. Galatea. 29. Iambi. 30. Γραφεῖον. 31. Epigrams. 32. The Lock of Berenice (Βερενίκης πλόκαμος) = Catullus lxvi. 33. Six Hymns. 34. Elegy on Sosibios. 35. Ἀρσινόης γάμος, inferred from fr. 196. 36. Branchos. 37. Περὶ λογάδων. 38. Customs of Barbarians. 39. On the Nymphs. 40. Ἑθνικαὶ Ὀνομασίαι, or local nomenclature, Athen. 329 A (= fr. 38). To this belonged probably not only the Περὶ μετονομασίας (κατονομασίας?) ἰχθύων (No. 20), but also the Περὶ ἀνέμων (No. 21), the Περὶ ὀρνέων, No. 22 above, and the Μηνῶν προσηγορίαι, No. 16 above. 41. On the Rivers of Asia (schol. Ap. Rh. i. 1165). A sub-title of No. 23 above. 42. Πρὸς Πραξιφάνη, Vit. Arati i. 43. Ὑπομνήματα ἱστορικά.

4. THE MSS. OF THE HYMNS

All the extant MSS. descend from a Byzantine sylloge which contained the Hymns of Homer,

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS

Callimachus, Orpheus, and Proclus. A MS. containing this collection was brought from Constantinople to Venice in 1423 by Ioannes Aurispa (Sandys, Hist. Class. Schol. ii. 36). Neither this MS. nor any immediate copy of it survives, but from it are derived all existing MSS. of the Hymns of Callimachus.

These MSS. are now divided into three families :

E, best represented by m (Schneider S) = Matritensis Bibl. Nat. N 24, written by Constantine Lascaris at Milan in 1464 (1454 Schn.), containing Musaeus' Hero and Leander, Orpheus' Argonautica and Hymns, the Hymns of Homer and Callimachus, and a collection of ancient epigrams.

q (Schneider Q) = Mutinensis Bibl. Estensis iii. E 11, written by Georgius Valla of Piacenza, who died in 1499 (Sandys ii. 133). Of this MS. Schneider had only an imperfect collation, which he regrets, "nam codex inter meliores est et proxime accedere videtur ad codicis E [i.e. Parisinus 2763] bonitatem."

p = Parisinus suppl. Gr. 1095 (page lost which contained iii. 66-145) olim S. Petri Perusinus (library of S. Pierre de Pérouse (Perugia)).

d (Schneider D) = Laurentianus 32, 45. The part of this MS. which contained Callimachus is now lost, having been torn out to be printed in the editio princeps of Janus Lascaris, Florence 1494, which now represents the lost MS.

Other MSS. of the E-family are Schneider's V, i.e. the MS. from which in 1489 Angelus Politianus published his Latin version of the Bath of Pallas (Hymn v.).

Also Schneider's E, i.e. Parisinus 2763, written in the fifteenth century, and containing Orpheus' Argonautica and Hymns, the Hymns of Callimachus with marginal scholia, Homeric Hymns, Moschus' Amor Fugitivus (Ἔρως Δραπέτης), Musaeus' Hero and Leander, Hesiod's Works and Days, Shield, and Theogony, Theocritus' Idylls. This is the only MS. which places the Bath of Pallas after the Hymn to Demeter.

A, best represented by a(Schneider A) = Vaticanus 1691, fifteenth century, containing Apollonius Rhodius' Argonautica with scholia, Orpheus' Argonautica and Hymns, and the Hymns of Callimachus ; also by Vaticanus 36 (Schneider B), fifteenth century ; Venetus Marcianus 480 (Schneider C), which belonged to Cardinal Bessarion and was written by Joannes Rhosus ; Urbinas 145 (Schneider K), end of fifteenth century.

F, represented by r = Athous Laurae 587 (in the Laura monastery on M. Athos), fourteenth century.

f (Schneider F) = Ambrosianus B 98, fifteenth century, containing Apollonius' Argonautica with scholl., Homer's Batrachom., Herodotus' Life of Homer, Hom. Hymns, and Callimachus' Hymns, etc.

INTRODUCTION TO CALLIMACHUS'S HYMNS

I

As a literary form the Callimachean Hymn is the descendant of the Homeric. That Callimachus wrote his Hymns with a practical purpose, to be recited on real occasions of public or semi-public ceremony, is a very general assumption of modern scholarship. Thus Susemihl, Geschichte d. griech. Litt. in d. Alexandrinerzeit, i. 358: "Sie waren ohne Zweifel bestimmt bei festlichen Gelegenheiten declamirt zu werden"; and to the same effect Couat, La Poésie alexandrine, p. 198: "Les allusions directes qui s'y trouvent prouvent qu'ils étaient composés pour une récitation publique, en vue de circonstances déterminées. Ils ont le plus souvent pour objet de célébrer dans une fête religieuse, sous le nom d'une divinité, la grandeur du prince et la gloire de son règne." As to the truth of the assumption one may be permitted to be sceptical, and our scepticism is rather increased by the poverty of the arguments adduced in its favour, and the diversity of the theories advanced as to the particular festival contemplated in a given Hymn. It is, moreover, to be remembered that a poem not intended for ceremonial performance may be none the less alive and pertinent to real events. It is difficult to see how Tennyson's Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington would gain either in poetic merit or in historical value if we knew it to have been actually performed in the Abbey; and it would be a matter rather of personal curiosity than of literary interest to discover that Mr. Bridges' Elegy on a Lady was sung by a choir of maidens at a real funeral.

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

II.—HYMN I. TO ZEUS

After announcing his theme—the praise of Zeus—the poet refers to the rival claims of Crete and Arcadia to be the birthplace of Zeus. The Arcadian claim is preferred—Cretans are always liars (1-9). Zeus was born in Arcadia (10-33), thence he was conveyed by Neda to the Cretan cave, where he was cradled by Adrasteia, attended by the Dictæan Meliæ, suckled by the she-goat Amaltheia, and fed on honey by the Panacrian bees, while the Curetes danced round him to protect him from Cronus (33-53). The mention of the Dictæan Meliæ implies that the cave is on Dicte (cf. Arat. 33), not on Ida. The cult of the Idaean cave seems to have superseded that of Dicte, from perhaps 800 B.C. (cf. A. B. Cook, Zeus, i. 150). Zeus speedily exhibits precocious powers, and his elder brothers ungrudgingly yield to him the sovereignty of Heaven (53-59). His supremacy is due to his own prowess, not, as the old poets fabled, to the casting of lots (60-67). Zeus has all the attributes of the supreme king. The king of birds is his messenger, the kings of men derive their power from him, ἐκ δὲ Διὸς βασιλῆες = Hesiod, Th. 96, they are his peculiar care, above all Ptolemy (67-91). The Hymn ends with the χαίρετισμα, which is the Prayer proper (92-97).

As to the date and destination of the poem, the idea of Richter that it was written for the accession of Ptolemy Philadelphus in 285 B.C. is rejected on the ground that the poem in no way suggests a coronation hymn. A conjecture which finds more favour is that lines 58 f., which tell of the elevation of Zeus over his older brothers, allude to the circumstances of Ptolemy's accession. Ptolemy Soter left five sons of whom Philadelphus was the youngest (Justin. xvi. 2. 7). There is no reason to suppose that they accepted Ptolemy's elevation with equanimity, nor was their fate such as to make any reference to them a happy one. Recovery of the Egyptian throne was doubtless the ultimate objective of the stormy career of Ptolemy Ceraunus, who left Egypt for the court of Lysimachus of Thrace, where with Arsinoë II. he compassed the death of the crown prince Agathocles; went thence to Seleucus whom he accompanied to Corupedion (281 B.C.) where Lysimachus fell; next assassinated Seleucus and became king of Thrace, but shortly after (280 B.C.) fell in a battle with the Gauls (Justin. xxiv. 3. 4). His brother Meleagrus who succeeded him was almost immediately deposed. As for the remaining brothers, Pausan. i. 7. 1, after mentioning the marriage of Philadelphus to Arsinoë II., says: δεύτερα δὲ ἀδελφὸν ἀπέκτεωεν Ἀργαῖον ἐπιβουλεύοντα ὡς λέγεται . . . ἀπέκτεινε δὲ καὶ ἄλλον ἀδελφὸν γεγονότα ἐξ Εὐρυδίκης, Κυπρίους ἀφιστάντα αἰσθόμενος. It is argued, then, that the Hymn belongs to a time when his brothers had not yet made any move against Philadelphus. But it is difficult to assert that there was any time after the elevation of Ptolemy when their hostility was not obvious. Clearly, too, the reference, if reference there be, may just as well be an admonition, reproving their hostile attitude by appealing to the example of Zeus and his brothers. Wilamowitz, Textgeschichte d. griech. Bukol. p. 55, who thinks it undeniable that lines 58 f. allude to Ptolemy's succession, considers that the poem is dated by the absence of any reference to the marriage of Ptolemy and Arsinoë II. Couat dated it 280-275. Kaibel on certain metrical grounds put it later than III., V., VI., but earlier than II. and IV.

The preference given to the Arcadian tradition regarding Zeus is made by E. Maass, Hermes xxv. (1890), the basis of a theory of the destination of the poem. We have to do, he says, with a contamination of an originally purely Arcadian (Peloponnesian) saga with an originally purely Cretan saga in such manner that the Arcadian (Peloponnesian) is preferred. Now in the time of Battus II., circ. 570, we hear of a large accession of colonists from all parts of Greece to Cyrene (Herod. iv. 159), and in the time of Battus III. troubles, doubtless due to this immigration, caused the Cyreneans to apply to Delphi. On the advice of the oracle they asked Mantinea in Arcadia for a commissioner to arrange their affairs. The Mantineans sent Demonax as καταρτιστήρ, who distributed the population in three phylae: 1. Theraeans and perioeci. 2. Peloponnesians and Cretans. 3. All islanders (νησιῶται) (Herod iv. 161). Maass argues that the Peloponnesian-Cretan contamination of the Zeus tradition arose in the 2nd Cyrenean phyle, and for a symposium of private persons belonging to that phyle the Hymn was written. Maass' theory is entirely unnecessary. Everything points to the original Greek settlers of Cyrene having come from the Peloponnesus (Arcadia-Taenarus), partly direct, partly by way of Crete. Thus from the first the Cyrenean settlement would have been precisely of the type which Maass desiderates and finds in the later 2nd phyle.

III.—HYMN II. TO APOLLO

As to the destination of this Hymn, Couat, p. 235, Susemihl i. p. 361, Maass, Hermes xxv. (1890), agree that it was written for the Carnean festival of Apollo at Cyrene. Maass, it is true, is somewhat troubled by the "Delian" palm. But he gravely conjectures that a scion of the Delian tree was grown in Cyrene and he appeals to Hehn, Kulturpflanzen, p. 224, to show that the palm is easily transplanted. Most readers will probably feel with Malten (Kyrene, p. 52, n. 1) that the conjecture is "zu gesucht!" We entirely agree with Malten—though not quite on the same grounds—that "obwohl er also von den kyrenäischen Karneen handelt, hat Kallimachos seinen Hymnus so wenig als ein sacrales Gedicht für Kyrene gedichtet wie Goethe die Walpurgisnacht für den Brocken."

The speaker throughout is the poet, and the occasion imagined is the epiphany of the God. To-day Apollo is to visit his temple. Ere yet the God veritably comes, we perceive the signs of his approach in the quivering of the holy laurel, in the trembling of the shrine. It is time for the profane to withdraw. Apollo is at the gate—the Delian palm bows to do him homage, the cry of the swan, Apollo's sacred bird, is heard on high. Let the doors of themselves roll back! Let the young men declare his praise with voice and harp! To see Apollo is not given unto all: it is the proof and promise of the Elect. That proof and that promise shall be ours. Now Apollo is present in his temple—let the youths sing his praise: so shall their days be long in the land which Apollo gave unto their fathers (1-15). Now the youths raise their song in honour of Apollo. Be silent, all ye faithful, and hearken to that Paean which wins Thetis from her mourning and stays the tears of Niobe—whose monumental grief still proclaims the sorrow and the sin of envy, of war with Heaven. Against Heaven, against my king: against my king, against Apollo! But they who sing the praise of Apollo shall have their reward (16-29). Rich in gold is Apollo, ever beautiful and ever young, his unshorn locks shed dews of healing wheresoever he goes. He is the pattern and patron of the Archer, the Poet, the Prophet, the Physician, nay he is the Pastoral God (Nomios) as well, ever since upon earth he did such service for Admetus. Lastly, he is the Founder of Cities, ever since as a child of four years he built the Altar of Horns in Delos (29-64). Under his guidance was Cyrene founded (65 ff.). Lines 65-96 are occupied with the story of Cyrene, 97-104 with the origin of the cry Hie Paean. Finally 105-113 contain the remarkable parable of Envy.

The schol. on v. 106 says: "In these words he rebukes those who jeered at him as not being able to write a big poem: which taunt drove him to write the Hecale." It is generally assumed that Phthonos represents Apollonius Rhodius and Apollo perhaps Ptolemy. There is a striking parallel to v. 106 in Apoll. Rh. iii. 932 f. ἀκλειῆς ὄδε μάντις, ὃς οὐδ' ὄσα παῖδες ἴσασι | οἶδε νόῳ φράσσασθαι. But into the thorny chronology of the quarrel of Callimachus and Apollonius we cannot here enter. We can only say dogmatically that there is no real difficulty in the syntax of οὐδ' ὄσα: that the construction intended is ὄσα πάντος δέδει, not ἐστὶ or the like: that πάντος is the sea, not the Euxine, as Mr. Smiley, Hermathena xxxix. (1913), following Voss, conjectures: and the "Assyrian river" is, as the schol. says, the Euphrates, not a river—Halys or Iris—in Leucosyria (Smiley, l.c.).

For the student who is interested in the relations of Callimachus and Apollonius we append a list of passages in which he may find, as he pleases, coincidence or "versteckte Kritik": Call. H. i. 15=A. i. 129; H. ii. 79=A. i. 431; H. ii. 96=A. ii. 711 f.; H. ii. 106=A. iii. 932 f.; H. iii. 45=A. iii. 881; H. iii. 108=A. i. 997; H. iii. 176=A. iii. 1344; H. iii. 182=A. iv. 961; Call. Hec. i. 1. 12=A. iv. 217; Hec. i. 2. 11=A. i. 177; Hec. 4=A. i. 972; Hec. 5=A. i. 1116; Hec. 6=A. iii. 277; Hec. 19=A. iii. 1226; Call. fr. incert. 9(a)=A. iv. 1717; 9(b)=A. ii. 1094; 21=A. iv. 1323; 64=A. i. 738; 65=A. i. 1309; 112=A. iv. 1614.

As to the date of the poem it is agreed that it must belong to a period when Egypt and Cyrene were friendly, say 258–247 B.C. In vv. 26 and 27 Callimachus speaks of "my king" in the singular. Now we know from official documents that from 267/6 to 260/259 Ptolemy had as co-regent a son named Ptolemy. It is pretty generally agreed that this son was none other than the future Euergetes (Ptolemy III.), the reason for the disappearance of his name from 260/259 being that by his betrothal to Berenice, daughter of Magas, he became virtual king of Cyrene (see introd. and notes to the Lock of Berenice). If this is right, then the Hymn cannot be earlier than 258 B.C. Malten (Kyrene, p. 51) says that if the war between Ptolemy and Cyrene, of which Polyæn. viii. 70 speaks, is rightly placed by Niese in 250–247, then the poem cannot be later than 250. The words ἡμετέροις βασιλευσὶ v. 68 are much disputed. Who are "our kings"? It seems natural to understand the Battiadae, to whom as a matter of fact the promise was made (oracles in Herod. iv. 155, 157 and Diodor. viii. 29), and so the words are understood by Maass and Studniczka. On the other hand it is pointed out that the Battiad rule came to an end with the fall of Arcesilas IV. somewhat between 460 and 450 B.C. Hence it is more usually supposed that the reference is to the Ptolemies generally or more particularly to Philadelphus as king of Egypt and Euergetes as king in Cyrene.

The schol. on v. 26 has βασιλῆι] τῷ Πτολεμαίῳ τῷ Εὐεργέτῃ· διὰ δὲ τὸ φιλόλογον αὐτὸν εἶναι ὡς θεὸν τιμᾶ. This is accepted by Studniczka who, proceeding on the equation Apollo=Ptolemy, thinks the king referred to must be young, i.e. not Philadelphus but Euergetes. But Studniczka goes farther. He holds that the scene of Cyrene's lion-slaying was originally Thessaly and that tradition was accepted by Callimachus in the Hymn to Artemis 206-8: between that Hymn and the Hymn to Apollo a new version arose which transferred the scene to Libya: this was an invention of Callimachus intended to represent Cyrene as Berenice, daughter of Magas: the lion is Demetrius ὁ καλὸς whom Berenice slew: and the date of the poem is 247 when Cyrene was united to Egypt by the marriage of Euergetes and Berenice.

IV.—CYRENE

1. The legend of the nymph Cyrene was told in the Eoëae of Hesiod (schol. Pind. P. ix. 6=Hes. fr. 149) from whom Pindar tells the story in P. ix. Cyrene, daughter of Hypseus, is seen by Apollo struggling with a lion near Mount Pelion. In accordance with the prophecy of Cheiron Apollo carries her to Libya where she becomes mother of Aristaeus and eponym of the city of Cyrene. According to Acesandrus of Cyrene the king of Libya at the time was Eurypylus, whose land was being ravaged by a lion. Eurypylus offered his kingdom as a reward for slaying the lion. Cyrene, having performed the feat, received the kingdom. She bore two sons, Autuchus and Aristaeus (schol. Apoll. Rh. ii. 498). According to Phylarchus she came to Libya μετὰ πλείονων. When her company were sent out to hunt she went with them, slew the lion and received the kingdom. She bare to Apollo two sons, Autuchus and Aristaeus. Autuchus remained in Libya, Aristaeus went to Ceos (schol. Apoll. Rh. l.c.). Apollonius's account in ii. 500 ff. does not mention the slaying of the lion. To Nonnus she is essentially the lion-slayer (λεοντοφόνος) 27, 263; 25, 181; 45, 21; 46, 238, etc.

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

2. The story of the foundation of Cyrene is told in Pindar, P. iv., Herod. iv. 145 ff., Lycophron 886 ff., Apoll. Rh. iv. 1232 ff. The Argonauts on their way home were driven by the wind into the Syrtes, from which they carried their ship overland for twelve days and nights to Lake Tritonis. From this they found no outlet to the sea, till Triton appeared to them, in guise of Eurypylyus, son of Poseidon, who, in return for the gift of a tripod, presented Euphemus with a clod of earth and showed them the way out. The clod, which was the earnest of the possession of Libya, fell overboard and landed at Thera. Medea declared that (1) had Euphemus taken the clod home to Taenarus in Laconia, then, in the course of the great migrations from the Peloponnesus in the fourth generation, his descendants would have colonized Libya; (2) as it is, Euphemus will go with the Argonauts to Lemnus where in wedlock with a Lemnian wife he will beget descendants who will come to Thera, whence Battus will lead a colony to Libya and so in the seventeenth generation fulfil Medea's prophecy.

The fulfilment came about in this way. The descendants of Euphemus were driven from Lemnos by the Pelasgians, and came to Laconia where they settled on Taygetus. On the ground of their ancestry they were admitted to citizenship at Sparta, but when they aspired to the kingship they were thrown into prison, from which they escaped again to Taygetus. At this time Theras (see H. ii. 74 n.) was preparing to lead a colony to Calliste (Thera), and he took with him a party of the Euphemid refugees. Finally, by order of the Delphic oracle (for details see Herod. iv. 150 ff.), Battus sets out for Libya with a party of colonists. They reach Plateia, an island off the coast of Cyrenaica, where they stay for two years. Things going badly with them, they consult Delphi and learn that they must proceed to Libya itself. They cross to the mainland and settle for six years in Aziris (Azilis), τὸν νάπαι κάλλισται συγκληίουσι (Herod. iv. 157, cf. Callim. H. ii. 89). In the seventh year the Libyans conduct them westward, passing Irasa by night, until they reach the κρήνη Ἀπόλλωνος where they settle.

Here was the "Hill of Myrtles," from which Apollo and Cyrene watched the Theraeans dancing with the Libyan women—the Myrtussa of Callimachus ii. 91, the Μυρτώσιον αἶπος of Apoll. Rh. ii. 505. Smith and Porcher, Discoveries at Cyrene (1864), record an inscription (No. 13) found near the temple of Apollo at Cyrene which is dedicated Ἀπόλλωνι Μυρτώω, and they remark (p. 27) on the abundance of myrtles in the place at the present day. Here, too, was the imagined scene of the slaying of the lion by Cyrene (cf. Malten, Kyrene, p. 56).

V.—HYMN III. TO ARTEMIS

According to Susemihl (i. 360) the one thing certain about the date of this Hymn is that it was written after 277 B.C., because lines 251-258 presuppose the invasion of Asia Minor by the Gauls in 278/7 B.C., and their raid upon the Ionian towns (Pausan. x. 32. 4), when according to the dubious story of the Rhodian Cleitophon Ephesus was betrayed to them (Plut. Parall. 15, Müller, F.H.G. iv. 367). The assumption is a common one, but without the slightest foundation. Callimachus refers to the burning of the temple of Artemis at Ephesus by the Cimmerians under Lygdamis in the seventh century (Strabo i. 61, Herod. i. 15). To see in this a covert allusion to the Celts as Couat and others do is a perfectly gratuitous extravagance.

Gercke, Rhein. Mus. xlii. (1887), p. 273 ff., sees in v. 130 ff. an allusion to the two Arsinoës who are the εὐνάτερες and γαλόω: εὐνάτερες because Philadelphus, the husband of Arsinoë I., and Ceraunus, the husband of Arsinoë II.,

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

were (half) brothers, and γαλόφ because Arsinoë I. was the wife while Arsinoë II. was the sister of Philadelphus. This would date the Hymn previous to the repudiation of Arsinoë I. and Philadelphus's marriage to Arsinoë II. Couat, on the other hand, holding that it was written for the festival of Artemis at Ephesus, dates it between 258 and 248 B.C.

E. Maass, Hermes xxv. (1890), propounds a theory for which there is absolutely nothing to be said, namely, that it was written for the Artemis festival of the Third Phyle at Cyrene, which, as we have seen, was made up of the Νησιῶται. It is enough to say here that there is not an atom of evidence that the Third Phyle had anything to do with Artemis, and the "surprising fact" from which his theory starts, namely, that Artemis is attended by a choir of Ocean nymphs, is of all things the least surprising. In Homer, Od. vi. 105, Artemis is attended by the nymphs, and though they are there said to be daughters of Zeus, the far more fundamental doctrine is that the nymphs are daughters of Ocean. They are the female counterpart of the Rivers (Ποταμοί)—see Hesiod, Theog. 337 ff., whose doctrine is followed by Callimachus in Hymn i. 35 f. And if the choir of Artemis here needs such a desperate apology, how shall we apologize for Apollonius who (iii. 881 ff.) like Callimachus makes her attended by the nymphs of Amnisus, who are at any rate grand-daughters of Oceanus?

Maass holds that the poem must belong to a time when Alexandria and Cyrene were friendly, thus at earliest circ. 260 B.C. Kaibel on metrical grounds would put it earlier than any of the Hymns except vi. The early date for which Gercke argued is accepted by Studniczka, who thinks the humble rôle assigned to Cyrene in this Hymn implies a time when Alexandria and Cyrene were on such unfriendly terms that a court poet could not well occupy himself with the latter.

The lines referring to Cyrene have been the subject of much dispute: καὶ μὴν Κυρήνην ἐταρίσσαο, τῇ ποτ' ἔδωκας | αὐτῇ θηρητῆρε δῶω κύνε, τοῖς ἐνὶ κούρη | Ὑψηῖς παρὰ τύμβον Ἰώλκιον

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

ἔμμορ' ἀέθλου (206-8). The "Iolcian tomb," according to the schol., is the tomb of Pelias. Studniczka follows Spanheim in thinking that ἔμμορ' ἀέθλου refers to Cyrene's slaying of the lion. Meineke thought the reference was to a hunting contest at the funeral games of Pelias. Malten, Kyrene, p. 53, says, "Daß der τύμβος Ἰώλκιος, wo Kyrene an Wettspielen teilnimmt (ἔμμορε, sie ist also nicht die einzige, die dort wettkämpft!), ein Hinweis auf die Grabspiele zu Ehren des Pelias sei, ist eine aus der Natur der Sache ergebende Folgerung Meinekes und Vahlens. Daß in Wettspielen, an denen mehrere beteiligt sind, kein Löwenkampf figurieren kann, ist ebenso natürlich. Also besteht Kyrenes Kunst hier in einem Wettlauf inbinnen (τοῖς ἐνι) ihrer Hunde. Darüber kann man sich wundern, aber die Worte besagen dies und nichts anderes." But, apart from the fact that the freak race suggested receives no sort of support from such expressions as Hor. Ep. i. 18. 50 f. cum valeas et vel cursu superare canem, not even Malten's authority can compel us to assign an impossible meaning (1) to τοῖς ἐνι, (2) to ἔμμορε, and (3) to ἀέθλου. ἔμμορ' ἀέθλου means "won the prize," and only on that assumption is τοῖς ἐνι, "with which," perfectly natural Greek. Whether the contest was part of the funeral games of Pelias is of course a totally different question.

VI.—HYMN IV. TO DELOS

For dating this Hymn we have the references in the prophecy of Apollo to the extent of the dominion of Ptolemy Philadelphus (165-170) and to the Gauls (171-188).

Apollo, prophesying of Philadelphus, says, "beneath whose crown shall come—not loth to be ruled by a Macedonian—both continents and the lands which are set in the sea, far as where the limit of the earth is and again whence his swift horses carry the sun." We are immediately reminded of the more detailed account of Ptolemy's dominion in the xviii Idyll of Theocritus, the Ἐγκώμιον εἰς Πτολεμαῖον, where we read, 86 ff. :

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

καὶ μὴν Φοινίκας ἀποτέμενεται Ἀραβίας τε καὶ Συρίας Διβύας τε κελαινῶν τ' Αἰθιοπῆων.
Παμφίλοισί τε πᾶσι καὶ αἰχμηταῖς Κιλικεσσι σαμαίνει, Δυκίοις τε φιλοπτολέμοισί τε Καρσί, καὶ νάσοις Κυκλάδεσσιν, ἐπεὶ οἱ νᾶες ἀρισταὶ
πόντον ἐπιπλώοντι, θάλασσα δὲ πᾶσα καὶ αἶα, καὶ ποταμοὶ κελάδοντες ἀνάσσονται Πτολεμαίῳ.

Into the question of the mutual relations of Theocritus and Callimachus we cannot here enter. Theocritus in his Encomium speaks of Arsinoë II. as still alive, which dates the poem before 270 B.C. Wilamowitz puts it during the First Syrian War—"als der Krieg gegen Syrien, der 274 begonnen hat, guten Fortgang nahm, aber noch im Gange war" (Textgeschichte d. gr. Bukol. p. 152). If we assume the year 271 B.C., the year in which that war ended, as the date of the Hymn to Delos, the dominion of Philadelphus at that date would sufficiently justify the words of Callimachus. It included, outside Egypt, Coele Syria (recovered about 280), Lycia, Caria, Miletus, the island of Cyprus, and the Cyclades.

The reference to the Gallic invasion (see notes on the passage) would suit the supposed date very well. The schol. on v. 175 says: "Brennus, the king of the Gauls, gathered together the Celts and went against Pytho, wishing to plunder the treasures of the god. But when they approached, Apollo destroyed most of them by hail. A few survived, and one Antigonus, a friend of Ptolemy Philadelphus, procured them to serve him as mercenaries, Ptolemy wanting such an army at the moment. But they were equally eager to plunder his treasures. Knowing this he arrested them and brought them to the so-called Sebennyitic mouth of the Nile where he drowned them. This is the 'common struggle' which he prophesies." Some regard the Antigonus mentioned above as the king of Macedon, others as merely a recruiting agent. The account of the incident in Paus. i. 7. 2 is: "When Ptolemy was preparing to repel the aggression of Magas he procured mercenaries, among them four thousand Gauls. Finding that these were plotting to seize Egypt, he conducted them over the river to a desert island, where they perished by each other's hands and by hunger."

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

It should be remembered, further, that from 308 B.C. there existed the Confederation of the Islanders—Tò Κοινὸν τῶν Νησιωτῶν—under the protectorate of Egypt and having its headquarters at Delos. See Dittenberger, Orient. gr. Inscr. Nos. 25, 40, 67, Syll.<sup>2</sup> Nos. 202, 209, 223, 224, 471, 588. The president of the Confederation (νησιάρχος) was nominated not by the Islands but by Egypt.

VII.—V. THE BATH OF PALLAS

No one has detected in this poem any reference to contemporary events. It shares with Hymn vi. the peculiarity of being written in the Doric dialect, while it alone forsakes the heroic for the elegiac metre. On Kaibel's metrical theory it would come third in date, after vi. and iii. As to its destination, Susemihl holds that it was written to the order of the Argives for a festival of Pallas in that city. That is the view also of F. Spiro, "Prolog und Epilog in Lykophrons Alexandra," Hermes xxiii. (1888) p. 194 ff., who holds further that it belongs to a period when such commissions were necessary for Callimachus, the period which he pictures in Epigrams xxviii., xxxiv., xlvii., when he was living as a poor schoolmaster in Eleusis, before his introduction to the Alexandrian court. He regards v. 56, μῦθος δ' οὐκ ἐμὸς ἀλλ' ἐτέρων,<sup>a</sup> as the announcement by the poet of an artistic dogma which he was afterwards to express in less simple language in the Aitia: βροντᾶν δ' οὐκ ἐμὸν ἀλλὰ Διὸς, frag. incert. 146 (490). In v. 140 ff. he detects a "versteckte Kritik" of Lycophron, Alex. 1474 σώζων παλαιὰν Βεβρύκων παγκληρίαν, which the Hymn therefore according to Spiro presupposes.

It was the custom, we are told by the schol. on v. 1, for the women of Argos on an appointed day to carry the image of Athena and the shield of Diomedes to the river Inachus and there to wash them. The image is the Palladium carried off from Troy by Odysseus and Diomedes

<sup>a</sup> "I cannot tell how the truth may be; I say the tale as 'twas said to me," Scott, Lay of the Last Minstrel, ii. 22.

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYMNS

and by the latter brought to Argos. The shield of Diomede was dedicated by him in Athena's temple, cf. Pausan. ii. 24. 2, who mentions a temple of Athena Oxyderces on the Acropolis at Argos dedicated by Diomede in memory of the day when Athena took the mist from his eyes that he might discern God and man (Il. v. 127 f.).

For the widespread custom of annually bathing the holy image we have to compare the Athenian Plynteria (Xen. Hell. i. 4. 12, Plut. Alc. 34), also Pausan. ii. 10. 4 where, speaking of the temple of Aphrodite at Sicyon, he says ἐσίασι μὲν δὴ ἐς αὐτὸ γυνή τε νεωκόρος . . . καὶ παρθένος ἱερωσύνην ἐπέτειον ἔχουσα' λουτροφόρον τὴν παρθένον ὀνομάζουσι. See further Ovid, Fast. iv. 336 ff., Ammian. Marc. xxiii. 3, Tac. Germ. 40, and for the significance of the practice Mannhardt, Baumkultus chapter vii., Antike Wald u. Feldkulte, chapter v.

VIII.—HYMN VI. TO DEMETER

Nothing can be determined as to the date of this Hymn. On Kaibel's metrical theory it is the oldest of all. The schol. on v. 1 says: "Ptolemy Philadelphus among other imitations of Athenian customs which he established in Alexandria, instituted the Procession of the Basket (τὴν τοῦ καλάθου πρόοδον). For it was the custom in Athens that on a fixed day a basket should be borne upon a carriage in honour of Athena." The details of this Athenian celebration are entirely unknown, but it may be supposed that it followed more or less closely the model of the Athenian Thesmophoria. In that and in similar festivals there are three essential moments: Anodos (or Cathodos), Nesteia, Calligeneia, as they were called in the Thesmophoria. All that can be clearly distinguished here is that the Basket with its mystic contents is carried in procession to the temple of the goddess, attended by women, some of whom being uninitiated—these, if we may infer from the Athenian Thesmophoria, include the unmarried women—go but part of the way, while access to the temple is confined to the initiated (v. 118 ff.); and, further, that the procession takes place after sunset (v. 7).

CALLIMACHUS'S HYMNS

I.—TO ZEUS

AT libations to Zeus what else should rather be sung than the god himself, mighty for ever, king for evermore, router of the Pelagonians, dealer of justice to the sons of Heaven?

How shall we sing of him—as lord of Dicte<sup>a</sup> or of Lycaeum<sup>b</sup>? My soul is all in doubt, since debated is his birth. O Zeus, some say that thou wert born on the hills of Ida<sup>a</sup>; others, O Zeus, say in Arcadia; did these or those, O Father, lie? “Cretans are ever liars.”<sup>c</sup> Yea, a tomb,<sup>d</sup> O Lord, for thee the Cretans builded; but thou didst not die, for thou art for ever.

The explanation given by Athenodorus of Eretria ap. Ptolem. Hephaest. in Photii Bibl. p. 150 Bekk. is that Thetis and Medea, having a dispute as to which of them was the fairer, entrusted the decision to Idomeneus of Crete. He decided in favour of Thetis, whereon Medea said, “Cretans are always liars” and cursed them that they should never speak the truth. The schol. on the present passage says that Idomeneus divided the spoils of Troy unfairly.

<sup>a</sup> The Cretan legend was that Zeus was a prince who was slain by a wild boar and buried in Crete. His tomb was variously localized and the tradition of “the tomb of Zeus” attaches to several places even in modern times, especially to Mount Iuktas. See A. B. Cook, Zeus, vol. i. p. 157 ff.

HYMN I

In Parrhasia<sup>a</sup> it was that Rhea bare thee, where was a hill sheltered with thickest brush. Thence is the place holy, and no fourfooted<sup>b</sup> thing that hath need of Eileithyia<sup>c</sup> nor any woman approacheth thereto, but the Apidanians<sup>d</sup> call it the primeval childbed of Rhea. There when thy mother had laid thee down from her mighty lap, straightway she sought a stream of water, wherewith she might purge her of the soilure of birth and wash thy body therein.

But mighty Ladon<sup>e</sup> flowed not yet, nor Erymanthus,<sup>e</sup> clearest of rivers; waterless was all Arcadia; yet was it anon to be called well-watered. For at that time when Rhea loosed her girdle, full many a hollow oak did watery Iaon<sup>e</sup> bear aloft, and many a wain did Melas<sup>f</sup> carry and many a serpent above Carnion,<sup>g</sup> wet though it now be, cast its lair; and a man would fare on foot over Crathis<sup>h</sup> and many-pebbled Metope,<sup>i</sup> athirst: while that abundant water lay beneath his feet.

And holden in distress the lady Rhea said, "Dear

Strabo 386 has "Ὠλενος, παρ' ὄν ποταμὸς μέγας Μέλας where it has been proposed to read παρ' ὄν <Πείρος> and to omit Μέλας. M. T. Smiley, in Classical Qu. v. (1911) p. 89 f., suggests that the Styx is meant, which supplies the waterfall near Nonacris in North Arcadia and later becomes a tributary of the Crathis (Paus. viii. 18. 4). When Leake discovered the waterfall in 1806 the natives did not know the name Styx for it but called it the Black Water (Mavro nero) or the Dragon Water. The name Πείρος in any case suggests a connexion with the underworld.

Earth, give birth thou also! thy birthpangs are light." So spake the goddess, and lifting her great arm aloft she smote the mountain with her staff; and it was greatly rent in twain for her and poured forth a mighty flood. Therein, O Lord, she cleansed thy body; and swaddled thee, and gave thee to Neda<sup>a</sup> to carry within the Cretan covert, that thou mightst be reared secretly: Neda, eldest of the nymphs who then were about her bed, earliest birth after Styx<sup>b</sup> and Philyra.<sup>c</sup> And no idle favour did the goddess repay her, but named that stream Neda<sup>d</sup>; which, I ween, in great flood by the very city of the Cauconians,<sup>e</sup> which is called Lepreion,<sup>f</sup> mingles its stream with Nereus,<sup>g</sup> and its primeval water do the son's sons of the Bear,<sup>h</sup> Lycaon's daughter, drink.

hands, thy might and that strength <sup>a</sup> which thou hast set beside thy throne. And the most excellent of birds <sup>b</sup> didst thou make the messenger of thy signs; favourable to my friends be the signs thou showest! And thou didst choose that which is most excellent among men—not thou the skilled in ships, nor the wielder of the shield, nor the minstrel: these didst thou straightway renounce to lesser gods, other cares to others. But thou didst choose the rulers of cities themselves, beneath whose hand is the lord of the soil, the skilled in spearmanship, the oarsman, yea, all things that are: what is there that is not under the ruler's sway? Thus, smiths, we say, belong to Hephaestus; to Ares, warriors; to Artemis of the Tunic,<sup>c</sup> huntsmen; to Phoebus they that know well the strains of the lyre. But from Zeus come kings; for nothing is diviner than the kings of Zeus. Wherefore thou didst choose them for thine own lot, and gavest them cities to guard. And thou didst seat thyself in the high places of the cities, watching who rule their people with crooked judgements, and who rule otherwise. And thou hast bestowed upon them wealth and prosperity abundantly; unto all, but not in equal measure. One may well judge by our Ruler,<sup>d</sup> for he hath clean outstripped all others. At evening he accomplisheth that whereon he thinketh in the morning; yea, at evening the greatest things, but the lesser soon as he thinketh on them. But the others accomplish some things in a year, and some things not in one; of others, again, thou thyself dost utterly frustrate the accomplishing and thwartest their desire.

Hail! greatly hail! most high Son of Cronus,

II.—TO APOLLO

How the laurel branch of Apollo trembles! how trembles all the shrine! Away, away, he that is sinful! Now surely Phoebus knocketh at the door with his beautiful foot. See'st thou not? the Delian palm<sup>a</sup> nods pleasantly of a sudden and the swan<sup>b</sup> in the air sings sweetly. Of yourselves now ye bolts be pushed back, pushed back of yourselves, ye bars! The god is no longer far away. And ye, young men, prepare ye for song and for the dance.

Not unto everyone doth Apollo appear, but unto him that is good. Whoso hath seen Apollo, he is great; whoso hath not seen him, he is of low estate. We shall see thee, O Archer, and we shall never be lowly. Let not the youths keep silent lyre or noiseless step, when Apollo visits<sup>c</sup> his shrine, if they think to accomplish marriage and to cut the locks of age,<sup>d</sup> and if the wall is to stand upon its old founda-(ἐπιδημεῖν), sometimes absent (ἀποδημεῖν), and when they are present the oracles are true, when absent false." Cf. Pind. P. iv. 5 οὐκ ἀποδάμου Ἀπόλλωνος τυχόντος. The Delphians celebrated the seventh day of the month Bysios—the birthday of Apollo—when he was supposed to revisit his temple, and the seventh of the holy month (Attic Anthesterion) was celebrated by the Delians when Apollo was supposed to return to Delos from the land of the Hyperboreans. tions. Well done the youths, for that the shell<sup>a</sup> is no longer idle.

Be hushed, ye that hear, at the song to Apollo; yea, hushed is even the sea when the minstrels celebrate the lyre or the bow, the weapons of Lycorean Phoebus.<sup>b</sup> Neither doth Thetis his mother wail her dirge for Achilles, when she hears Hië<sup>c</sup> Paeëon, Hië Paeëon.

Yea, the tearful rock defers its pain, the wet stone that is set in Phrygia, a marble rock like a woman<sup>d</sup> open-mouthed in some sorrowful utterance. Say ye Hië! Hië! an ill thing it is to strive with the Blessed Ones. He who fights with the Blessed Ones would fight with my King<sup>e</sup>; he who fights with my King, would fight even with Apollo. Apollo will honour the choir, since it sings according to his heart; for Apollo hath power, for that he sitteth on the right hand of Zeus. Nor will the choir sing of Phoebus for one day only. He is a copious theme of song; who would not readily sing of Phoebus?

Golden is the tunic of Apollo and golden his mantle, his lyre and his Lyctian<sup>f</sup> bow and his quiver: golden too are his sandals; for rich in gold is Apollo, rich also in possessions: by Pytho mightst thou guess. And ever beautiful is he and ever

Apollo and Artemis respectively, because she boasted over their mother Leto, who had but two children. Niobe was turned into a stone, and this was identified with a rude rock figure on Mount Sipylos near Smyrna which is still to be seen. The water running down the face of the rock was supposed to be Niobe's tears—ἐνθα λίθος περ εὐόσα θεῶν ἐκ κήδεα πέσσει, Hom. l.c. 617, cf. "Phrygium silicem," Stat. S. v. 3. 87.

young: never on the girl cheeks of Apollo hath come so much as the down of manhood. His locks distil fragrant oils upon the ground; not oil of fat do the locks of Apollo distil but very Healing of All.<sup>a</sup> And in whatsoever city those dewes fall upon the ground, in that city all things are free from harm.

None is so abundant in skill as Apollo. To him belongs the archer, to him the minstrel; for unto Apollo is given in keeping alike archery and song. His are the lots of the diviner and his the seers; and from Phoebus do leeches know the deferring of death.

Phoebus and Nomius<sup>b</sup> we call him, ever since the time when by Amphrysus<sup>c</sup> he tended the yoke-mares, fired with love of young Admetus.<sup>d</sup> Lightly would the herd of cattle wax larger, nor would the she-goats of the flock lack young, whereon as they feed Apollo casts his eye; nor without milk would the ewes be nor barren, but all would have lambs at foot; and she that bare one would soon be the mother of twins.

And Phoebus it is that men follow when they map out cities.<sup>e</sup> For Phoebus evermore delights in the founding of cities, and Phoebus himself doth weave their foundations. Four years of age was Phoebus when he framed his first foundations in fair Ortygia<sup>f</sup> near the round lake.<sup>g</sup>

From Sparta the sixth<sup>h</sup> generation of the sons of Oedipus brought thee to their colony of Thera; and from Thera lusty Aristoteles<sup>i</sup> set thee by the Asbystian<sup>j</sup> land, and builded thee a shrine exceeding beautiful, and in the city established a yearly festival wherein many a bull, O Lord, falls on his haunches for the last time. Hie, Hie, Carneius! Lord of many prayers,—thine altars wear flowers in spring, even all the pied flowers which the Hours lead forth when Zephyrus

Greatly, indeed, did Phoebus rejoice as the belted warriors of Enyo danced with the yellow-haired Libyan women, when the appointed season of the Carnean feast came round. But not yet could the Dorians approach the fountains of Cyre,<sup>a</sup> but dwelt in Azilis<sup>b</sup> thick with wooded dells. These did the Lord himself behold and showed them to his bride<sup>c</sup> as he stood on horned Myrtussa<sup>d</sup> where the daughter of Hypseus slew the lion that harried the kine of Eurypylus.<sup>e</sup> No other dance more divine hath Apollo beheld, nor to any city hath he given so many blessings as he hath given to Cyrene, remembering his rape of old. Nor, again, is there any other god whom the sons of Battus have honoured above Phoebus.

Hië, Hië, Paeëon, we hear—since this refrain did the Delphian folk first invent, what time thou didst display the archery of thy golden bow. As thou wert going down to Pytho, there met thee a beast unearthly, a dread snake.<sup>f</sup> And him thou didst slay, shooting swift arrows one upon the other; and the folk cried “Hië, Hië, Paeëon, shoot an arrow!” A helper<sup>g</sup> from the first thy mother bare thee, and ever since that is thy praise.

Spake Envy<sup>h</sup> privily in the ear of Apollo: “I kingdom to anyone who should slay the lion which was ravaging his land. Cyrene slew the lion and so won the kingdom (Acesandros of Cyrene in schol. Apoll. Rh. ii. 498).

<sup>f</sup> In Strabo 422 Python is a man, surnamed Draco. Pytho was popularly derived from the fact that the slain snake rotted (πύθω) there.

<sup>g</sup> Callimachus seems to adopt the old derivation of ἀοσοσητήρ from βσσα (voice). Thus ἀοσοσητήρ = βσηθβος. For ἐξέτι cf. H. iv. 275.

III.—TO ARTEMIS

ARTEMIS we hymn—no light thing is it for singers to forget her—whose study is the bow and the shooting of hares and the spacious dance and sport upon the mountains; beginning with the time when sitting on her father's knees—still a little maid—she spake these words to her sire: "Give me to keep my maidenhood, Father, for ever: and give me to be of many names, that Phoebus may not vie with me. And give me arrows and a bow—stay, Father, I ask thee not for quiver or for mighty bow: for me the Cyclopes will straightway fashion arrows and fashion for me a well-bent bow. But give me to be the Bringer of Light<sup>a</sup> and give me to gird me in a tunic<sup>b</sup> with embroidered border reaching to the knee, that I may slay wild beasts. And give me sixty daughters of Oceanus for my choir—all nine years old, all maidens yet ungirdled; and give me for handmaidens twenty nymphs of Amnisus<sup>c</sup> who shall tend well my buskins, and, when I shoot no more at lynx or stag, shall tend my swift hounds. And give to me all mountains; and for city, assign me any, even whatsoever thou wilt: for seldom is it that Artemis goes down to the town. On the mountains will I dwell and the cities of men I will visit only when women vexed by the sharp pangs of childbirth call me to their aid<sup>a</sup>—even in the hour when I was born the Fates ordained that I should be their helper, forasmuch as my mother suffered no pain either when she gave me birth or when she carried me in her womb, but without travail put me from her body.” So spake the child and would have touched her father’s beard, but many a hand did she reach forth in vain, that she might touch it. And her father smiled and bowed assent. And as he caressed her, he said: “When goddesses bear me children like this, little need I heed the wrath of jealous Hera. Take, child, all that thou askest, heartily. Yea, and other things therewith yet greater will thy father give thee. Three times ten cities and towers more than one will I vouchsafe thee—three times ten cities that shall not know to glorify any other god but to glorify thee only and be called of Artemis; and many cities will I give thee to share with others, both inland cities and islands; and in them all shall be altars and groves of Artemis. And thou shalt be Watcher over Streets<sup>b</sup> and Harbours.<sup>c</sup>” So he spake and bent his head to confirm his words. And the maiden fared unto the white mountain of Crete leafy with woods; thence unto Oceanus; and she chose many nymphs all nine years old, all maidens yet ungirdled. And the river Caeratus<sup>d</sup> was glad exceedingly, and glad was Tethys that they were sending their daughters to be hand-maidens to the daughter of Leto.

<sup>c</sup> It is hard to determine the sense of ἀμβολαδῖς. The schol. says ἐκ διαδοχῆς, i.e. in succession or alternately. The same difficulty attaches to ἀμβλήδην and ἀμβολάδην,

And straightway she went to visit the Cyclopes. Them she found in the isle of Lipara—Lipara in later days, but at that time its name was Meligunis—at the anvils of Hephaestus, standing round a molten mass of iron. For a great work was being hastened on: they fashioned a horse-trough for Poseidon. And the nymphs were affrighted when they saw the terrible monsters like unto the crags of Ossa: all had single eyes beneath their brows, like a shield of fourfold hide for size, glaring terribly from under; and when they heard the din of the anvil echoing loudly, and the great blast of the bellows and the heavy groaning of the Cyclopes themselves. For Aetna cried aloud, and Trinacia<sup>a</sup> cried, the seat of the Sicanians, cried too their neighbour Italy, and Cynos<sup>b</sup> therewithal uttered a mighty noise, when they lifted their hammers above their shoulders and smote with rhythmic swing<sup>c</sup> the bronze glowing from the furnace or iron, labouring greatly. Wherefore the daughters of Oceanus could not untroubled look upon them face to face nor endure the din in their ears. No shame to them! on those not even the daughters of the Blessed look without shuddering, though long past childhood's years. But when any of the maidens doth disobedience to her mother, the mother calls the Cyclopes to her child—Arges or Steropes; and from within the house comes Hermes, which the scholiasts interpret usually as either = ἀπό προομιίου or as = "by spurts" (e.g. Pind. N. x. 62, where among other explanations in the scholia one is οὐκ ἐφεξῆς, i.e. not continuously). The combination of ἀμβολάδην with ζείω in Hom. Il. xxi. 364, Herod. iv. 181 might suggest that here too ἀμβολαδῆς should be taken with ζείοντα in the sense of "sputtering," but the order of words is against that.

Very similar is the birthday-gift proper, the δόσις γενέθλιος or γενέθλια· τὰ ἐπὶ τῇ πρώτῃ ἡμέρᾳ δῶρα (Hesych.). Phoebe gave the oracle at Delphi as a birthday gift to Phoebus. More usually ὀπτήρια = ἀνακαλυπτήρια, gifts given to the bride by the bridegroom on

But thou, Maiden, even earlier, while yet but three years old, when Leto came bearing thee in her arms at the bidding of Hephaestus that he might give thee handsel<sup>b</sup> and Brontes<sup>c</sup> set thee on his stout knees—thou didst pluck the shaggy hair of his great breast and tear it out by force. And even unto this day the mid part of his breast remains hairless, even as when mange settles on a man's temples and eats away the hair.

Therefore right boldly didst thou address them then: "Cyclopes, for me too fashion ye a Cydonian<sup>d</sup> bow and arrows and a hollow casket for my shafts; for I also am a child of Leto, even as Apollo. And if I with my bow shall slay some wild creature or monstrous beast, that shall the Cyclopes eat." So didst thou speak and they fulfilled thy words. Straightway didst thou array thee, O Goddess, and speedily again thou didst go to get thee hounds; and thou camest to the Arcadian fold of Pan. And he was cutting up the flesh of a lynx of Maenalus<sup>e</sup> that his bitches might eat it for food. And to thee the Bearded<sup>f</sup> God gave two dogs black-and-

Thence departing (and thy hounds sped with thee) thou didst find by the base of the Parrhasian hill deer gambolling—a mighty herd. They always herded by the banks of the black-pebbled Anaurus—larger than bulls, and from their horns shone gold. And thou wert suddenly amazed and saidst to thine own heart: “This would be a first capture worthy of Artemis.” Five were they in all; and four thou didst take by speed of foot—without chase of dogs—to draw thy swift car. But one escaped over the river Celadon, by devising of Hera, that it might be in the after days a labour for Heracles,<sup>g</sup> and the Ceryneian hill received her.

Artemis, Lady of Maidenhood, Slayer of Tityus, golden were thine arms and golden thy belt, and a golden car didst thou yoke, and golden bridles, goddess, didst thou put on thy deer. And where first did thy horned team begin to carry thee? To Thracian Haemus, whence comes the hurricane of Boreas bringing evil breath of frost to cloakless men. And where didst thou cut the pine and from what flame didst thou kindle it? It was on Mysian Olympus, and thou didst put in it the breath of flame unquenchable, which thy Father's bolts distil. And how often goddess, didst thou make trial of thy silver bow? First at an elm, and next at an oak didst thou shoot, and third again at a wild beast. But the fourth time—not long was it ere thou didst shoot <sup>[dart]</sup> at the city of unjust men, those who to one another and those who towards strangers wrought many deeds of sin, froward men, on whom thou wilt impress thy grievous wrath. On their cattle plague feeds, on their tilth feeds frost, and the old men cut their hair in mourning over their sons, and their wives either are smitten and die in childbirth, or, if they escape, bear births whereof none stands on upright ankle. But on whomsoever thou lookest smiling and gracious, for them the tilth bears the corn-ear abundantly, and abundantly prospers the fourfooted breed, and abundant waxes their prosperity: neither do they go to the tomb, save when they carry thither the aged. Nor does faction wound their race—faction which ravages even well-established houses: but brother's wife and husband's sister set their chairs around one board.<sup>a</sup> Lady, of that number be whosoever is a true friend of mine, and of that number may I be myself, O Queen, and may song be my study for ever. Marriage of Leto ; therein thy name shall often-times be sung ; therein shall Apollo be and therein all thy labours, and therein thy hounds and thy bow and thy chariots, which lightly carry thee in thy splendour, when thou drivest to the house of Zeus. There in the entrance meet thee Hermes and Apollo : Hermes, the Lord of Blessing,<sup>a</sup> takes thy weapons, Apollo takes whatsoever wild beast thou bringest. Yea, so Apollo did before strong Alcides<sup>b</sup> came, but now Phoebus hath this task no longer ; in such wise the Anvil of Tiryns<sup>c</sup> stands ever before the gates, waiting to see if thou wilt come home with some fat morsel. And all the gods laugh at him with laughter unceasing and most of all his own wife's mother<sup>d</sup> when he brings from the car a great bull or a wild boar, carrying it by the hind foot struggling. With this cunning speech, goddess, doth he admonish thee : "Shoot at the evil wild beasts that mortals may call thee their helper even as they call me. Leave deer and hares to feed upon the hills. What harm could deer or hares do ? It is boars which ravage the tilth of men and boars which ravage the plants ; and oxen are a great bane to men : shoot also at those." <sup>a</sup> When Heracles was passing through the land of the Dryopes, being in want of food for his young son Hyllus, he unyoked and slaughtered one of the oxen of Theiodamas, king of the Dryopes, whom he found at the plough. War ensued between the Dryopes and Heracles, and the Dryopes were defeated, and Hylas, son of Theiodamas, was taken as a hostage by Heracles (Apollodor. ii. 7. 7, Apoll. And thyself thou enterest thy Father's house, and all alike bid thee to a seat; but thou sittest beside Apollo.

And the fair-haired wife<sup>d</sup> of Cephalus, son of Deioneus, O Lady, thou madest thy fellow in the chase; and fair Anticleia,<sup>e</sup> they say, thou didst love even as thine own eyes. These were the first who wore gallant bow and arrow-holding quivers on their shoulders; their right shoulders bore the quiver strap,<sup>f</sup> and always the right breast showed bare. Further thou didst greatly commend swift-footed Atalanta,<sup>g</sup> the slayer of boars, daughter of Arcadian Iasius, and taught her hunting with dogs and good archery. They that were called to hunt the boar of Calydon find no fault with her; for the tokens of victory came into Arcadia which still holds the tusks of the beast. Nor do I deem that Hylaeus<sup>h</sup> and foolish Rhoecus, for all their hate, in Hades slight her archery. For not destined to return again to Scythia was either he or any other of those whose wagons stood in the Caystrian<sup>c</sup> plain; for thy shafts are ever more set as a defence before Ephesus.

O Lady of Munychia,<sup>d</sup> Watcher of Harbours, hail, Lady of Pherae<sup>e</sup>! Let none disparage Artemis. For Oeneus<sup>f</sup> dishonoured her altar and no pleasant struggles came upon his city. Nor let any contend with her in shooting of stags or in archery. For the son<sup>g</sup> of Atreus vaunted him not that he suffered small requital. Neither let any woo the Maiden; for not Otus, nor Orion wooed her to their own good. Nor let any shun the yearly dance; for not tearless to Hippo<sup>h</sup> was her refusal to dance around the altar. Hail, great Queen, and graciously greet my song.

IV.—TO DELOS

WHAT time or when, O my soul, wilt thou sing of holy Delos, nurse of Apollo? Surely all the Cyclades, most holy of the isles that lie in the sea, are goodly theme of song. But Delos would win the foremost guerdon from the Muses, since she it was that bathed Apollo, the lord of minstrels, and swaddled him, and was the first to accept him for a god. Even as the Muses abhor him who sings not of Pimpleia<sup>a</sup> so Phoebus abhors him who forgets Delos. To Delos now will I give her share of song, so that Cynthian<sup>b</sup> Apollo may praise me for taking thought of his dear nurse.

Wind-swept and stern is she set in the sea, and, wave-beaten as she is, is fitter haunt for gulls than course for horses. The sea, rolling greatly round her, casts off on her much spindrift of the Icarian<sup>c</sup> water. Wherefore also sea-roaming fishermen have made her their home. But none need grudge that she be named among the first, whensoever unto Oceanus and unto Titan Tethys the islands gather and she ever leads the way.<sup>d</sup> Behind her footsteps follow Phoenician Cynus,<sup>e</sup> no mean isle, and who fell into it when his father and he attempted to fly from Crete with artificial wings to escape the wrath of Minos. (Strabo 639, Diodor. iv. 77.)

HYMN IV

Abantian Macris<sup>a</sup> of the Ellopians, and delectable Sardo,<sup>b</sup> and the isle<sup>c</sup> whereto Cypris first swam from the water and which for fee<sup>d</sup> of her landing she keeps safe. They are strong by reason of sheltering towers, but Delos is strong by aid of Apollo. What defence is there more steadfast? Walls and stones may fall before the blast of Strymonian<sup>e</sup> Boreas; but a god is unshaken for ever. Delos beloved, such is the champion that encompasses thee about!

Now if songs full many circle about thee, with what song shall I entwine thee? What is that which is pleasing unto thee to hear? Is it the tale how at the very first the mighty god<sup>f</sup> smote the mountains with the three-forked sword which the Telchines<sup>g</sup> fashioned for him, and wrought the islands in the sea, and from their lowest foundations lifted them all as with a lever and rolled them into the sea? And them in the depths he rooted from their foundations that they might forget the mainland. But no constraint afflicted thee, but free upon the open sea thou didst float; and thy name of old was Asteria,<sup>h</sup> since like a star thou didst leap from heaven into the deep moat, fleeing wedlock with Zeus. Until then golden Leto consorted not with thee: then thou wert still Asteria and wert not yet called Delos. Oft-times did sailors coming from the town of fair-haired Troezen<sup>i</sup> unto Ephyra<sup>j</sup> within the Saronic gulf descry thee, and on their way back from Ephyra saw thee no more there, but thou hadst run to the swift straits of the narrow Euripus with its sounding stream. And the same day, turning thy back on the waters of the sea of Chalcis, thou didst swim to the Sunian headland of the Athenians or to Chios or to the wave-washed breast of the Maiden's Isle,<sup>a</sup> not yet called Samos—where the nymphs of Mycalessos,<sup>b</sup> neighbours of Ancaeus, entertained thee.

But when thou gavest thy soil to be the birth-place of Apollo, seafaring men gave thee this name in exchange, since no more didst thou float<sup>c</sup> obscure (ἄδηλος) upon the water, but amid the waves of the Aegean sea didst plant the roots of thy feet.

And thou didst not tremble before the anger of Hera, who murmured terribly against all child-bearing women that bare children to Zeus, but especially against Leto, for that she only was to bear to Zeus a son<sup>d</sup> dearer even than Ares. Wherefore also she herself kept watch within the sky, angered in her heart greatly and beyond telling, and she prevented Leto who was holden in the pangs of child-birth. And she had two look-outs set to keep watch upon the earth. The space of the continent did bold Arès watch, sitting armed on the high top of Thracian Haemus, and his horses were stalled by the seven-chambered cave<sup>e</sup> of Boreas. And the other kept watch over the far-flung islands, even the daughter <sup>a</sup> of Thaumás seated on Mimas,<sup>b</sup> whither she had sped. There they sat and threatened all the cities which Leto approached and prevented them from receiving her. Fled Arcadia, fled Auge's <sup>c</sup> holy hill Parthenium, fled after her aged Pheneius,<sup>d</sup> fled all the land of Pelops that lies beside the Isthmus, save only Aegialos <sup>e</sup> and Argos. For on those ways she set not her feet, since Inachus<sup>f</sup> belonged unto Hera. And the earth-born nymph Melia <sup>l</sup> wheeled about thereat and ceased from the dance and her cheek paled as she panted for her coeval oak, when she saw the locks of Helicon tremble. Goddesses mine, ye Muses, say did the oaks come into being at the same time as the Nymphs? The nymphs rejoice when the rain makes the oaks to grow; and again the Nymphs weep when there are no longer leaves upon the oaks. And Apollo, yet in his mother's womb, was and spake in vain: "Ye nymphs of Thessaly, offspring of a river,<sup>a</sup> tell your sire to hush his great stream. Entwine your hands about his beard and entreat him that the children of Zeus be born in his waters. Phthiotian Peneius, why dost thou now vie with the winds? O sire, thou dost not bstride a racing horse. Are thy feet always thus swift, or are they swift only for me, and hast thou to-day been suddenly made to fly?" But he heard her not. O Pelion, bridal chamber of Philyra,<sup>b</sup> do thou stay, O stay, since on thy hills even the wild lionesses oftentimes lay down their ~~travail of untimely birth.~~"<sup>c</sup> Then shedding tears, Peneius answered her: "Leto, Necessity is a great goddess. It is not I who refuse, O Lady, thy travail; for I know of others who have washed the soilure of birth in me—but Hera hath largely threatened me. Behold what manner of watcher keeps vigil on the mountain top, who would lightly drag me forth from the depths. What shall I devise? Or is it a pleasant thing to thee that Peneius should perish? Let my destined day take its course. I will endure for thy sake, even if I must wander evermore with ebbing flood and thirsty, and alone be called of least honour among rivers. Here am I! What needeth more? Do thou but call upon Eileithyia." He spake and stayed his great stream. And the hills of Ossa trembled and the plain of Crannon, and the windswept skirts of Pindus, and all Thessaly danced for fear: such echoing din rang from his shield. And even as when the mount of Aetna smoulders with fire and all its secret depths are shaken as the giant under earth, even Briares, shifts to his other shoulder,<sup>a</sup> and with the tongs of Hephaestus roar furnaces and handiwork withal; and firewrought basins and tripods ring terribly as they fall one upon the other: such in that hour was the rattle of the fair-rounded shield. So she spake and after much toil came unto the isles of the sea. But they received her not when she came—not the Echinades<sup>c</sup> with their smooth anchorage for ships, nor Cercyra which is of all other islands most hospitable; since Iris on lofty Mimas<sup>d</sup> was wroth with them all and utterly prevented them. And at her rebuke they fled all together, every one that she came to, along the waters. Then she came by hearsay only; but already beside the temple behold the ranks of the foemen, and already beside my tripods the swords and cruel belts and hateful shields, which shall cause an evil journey to the foolish tribe of the Galatians. Of these shields some shall be my guerdon; others, when they have seen the wearers perish amid fire, shall be set by the banks of Nile<sup>a</sup> to be the prizes of a king who laboured much. O Ptolemy who art to be, these prophecies I declare for thee. Greatly shalt thou praise in all the days to be him that prophesied while yet in his mother's womb. But mark thou, mother: there is to be seen in the water a tiny island, wandering over the seas. Her feet abide not in one place, but on the tide she swims even as a stalk of asphodel, where the South wind or the East wind blows, whithersoever the sea carries her. Thither do thou carry me. For she shall welcome thy coming."

When he had spoken thus much, the other islands in the sea ran away. But thou, Asteria, lover of song, didst come down from Euboea to visit the round Cyclades—not long ago, but still behind thee trailed the sea-weed of Geraestus . . . since thy heart<sup>b</sup> was kindled, seeing the unhappy lady in the grievous pangs of birth: "Hera, do to me what thou wilt. For I heed not thy threats. Cross, cross over, Leto, unto me."

They became rebellious and attempted to make themselves masters of Egypt. Ptolemy enticed them into a desert island formed by the branches of the Nile, where he left them to die by famine and mutual slaughter (Paus. i. 7. 2). See Bouché-Leclercq, Histoire des Lagides, i. p. 167; Mahaffy, The Empire of the Ptolemies, p. 124 ff. The date of the revolt of Magas is round about 278 B.C., and thus about the same date as the Gallic attack on Delphi.

So didst thou speak, and she gladly ceased from her grievous wandering and sat by the stream of Inopus,<sup>a</sup> which the earth sends forth in deepest flood at the season when the Nile comes down in full torrent from the Aethiopian steep. And she loosed her girdle and leaned back her shoulders against the trunk of a palm-tree,<sup>b</sup> oppressed by grievous distress, and the sweat poured over her flesh like rain. And she spake in her weakness: "Why, child, dost thou weigh down thy mother? There, dear child, is thine island floating on the sea. Be born, be born, my child, and gently issue from the womb." O Spouse of Zeus, Lady of heavy anger, thou wert not to be for long without tidings thereof: so swift a messenger hastened to thee. And, still breathing heavily, she spake—and her speech was mingled with fear: "Honoured Hera, of goddesses most excellent far, thine am I, all things are thine, and thou sittest authentic queen of Olympus, and we fear no other female hand; and thou, O Queen, wilt know who is the cause of thine anger. Leto is undoing her girdle within an island. All the others spurned her and received her not; but Asteria called her by name as she was passing by—Asteria, that evil scum of the sea: thou knowest it thyself. But, dear Lady,—for thou canst—defend thy servants, who tread the earth at thy behest."

So she spake and seated her beside the golden throne, even as a hunting hound of Artemis, which, when it hath ceased from the swift chase, sitteth by her feet, and its ears are erect, ever ready to receive the call of the goddess. Like thereto the daughter of Thaumias sat beside the throne. And she never forgetteth her seat, not even when sleep lays upon her his forgetful wing, but there by the edge of the great throne with head a little bent aslant she sleeps. Never does she unloose her girdle or her swift hunting-boots lest her mistress give her some sudden command. And Hera was grievously angered and spake to her: "So now, O shameful creatures of Zeus, may ye all wed in secret and bring forth in darkness, not even where the poor mill-women bring forth in difficult labour, but where the seals of the sea bring forth, amid the desolate rocks. But against Asteria am I no wise angered for this sin, nor can I do to her so unkindly as I should—for very wrongly has she done a favour to Leto. Howbeit I honour her exceedingly for that she did not desecrate my bed, but instead of Zeus preferred the sea."

She spake: and with music the swans,<sup>a</sup> the gods' own minstrels, left Maconian Pactolus and circled seven times round Delos, and sang over the bed of child-birth, the Muses' birds, most musical of all birds that fly. Hence that child in after days strung the lyre with just so many strings—seven strings, since seven times the swans sang over the pangs of birth. No eighth time sang they: ere that the child leapt forth and the nymphs of Delos, offspring of an ancient river, sang with far-sounding voice the holy chant of Eileithyia. And straightway the brazen sky echoed back the far-reaching chant and Hera grudged it not, because Zeus had taken away her anger. In that hour, O Delos, all thy foundations became of gold: with gold thy round lake<sup>b</sup> flowed all day, and golden foliage thy natal olive-tree put forth and with gold flowed coiled Inopus in deep flood.

HYMN IV

And thou thyself didst take up the child from the golden earth and lay him in thy lap and thou spakest saying: "O mighty and of many altars and many cities, bounteous Earth! rich continents and ye islands set around lo! I am as thou see'st—hard of tillage; yet from me shall Apollo be called 'of Delos,' and none other among all lands shall be so beloved by any other god: not Cerchnis<sup>a</sup> so loved by Poseidon, Lord of Lechaeum, not Cyllene's hill<sup>b</sup> by Hermes, not Crete by Zeus, as I by Apollo; and I shall no more be a wandering isle." Thus didst thou speak and the child drew the sweet breast.

Wherefore from that day thou art famed as the most holy of islands, nurse of Apollo's youth. On thee treads not Enyo nor Hades nor the horses of Ares; but every year tithes of first-fruits are sent to thee: to thee all cities lead up choirs, both those cities which have cast their lots toward the East and those toward the West and those in the South, and the peoples which have their homes above the Northern shore, a very long-lived race.<sup>c</sup> These<sup>d</sup> first bring thee cornstalks and holy sheaves of corn-ears, which the Pelasgians of Dodona, who tions are ὑπέρ + βόρα, hill, "the people over the hills," or i. q. Περφερέες, Herod. iv. 33, cf. Hesych. περφερέες· θεωροί.

<sup>d</sup> The version of Callimachus is that the offerings come from the Hyperboreans to Dodona, thence to Malis, then to Euboea, then to Delos. Herodotus says the offerings came from the Hyperboreans to Scythia, then from tribe to tribe till they reached the head of the Adriatic, thence to Dodona, then to Malis, to Carystus in Euboea, then to Andros, then to Tenos, and thence to Delos. Pausanias, i. 31. 2, says the Hyperboreans gave them to the Arimaspi, they to the Issedones, then the Scythians carried them to Sinope, then they passed through Greece to Prasiae in Attica, and were then carried by the Athenians to Delos.

<sup>a</sup> The famous Δωδωναῖον χαλκεῖον (Suid. s.v., Steph. Byz. s.v. Δωδώνη, cf. Strabo, vii. fr. 3) is discussed by A. B. Cook, "The Gong at Dodona" in J.H.S. xxii. (1902) p. 5 ff., who thinks the various allusions may be harmonized if we assume that the original "gong" was the row of resonant tripods round the sacred enclosure, and that later (say 4th century B.C.) these were replaced by a more elaborate gong consisting of two pillars, on one of which was mounted the figure of a boy holding a whip formed of three chains tipped couch upon the ground, servants of the caldron<sup>a</sup> which is never silent—far first receive, as these offerings enter their country from afar. Next they come to the Holy town and mountains of the Malian land; and thence they sail across to the goodly Lelantian plain<sup>b</sup> of the Abantes; and then not long is the voyage from Euboea, since thy havens are nigh thereto. The first to bring thee these offerings from the fair-haired Arimaspi<sup>c</sup> were Upis and Loxo and happy Hecarge, daughters of Boreas, and those who then were the best of the young men. And they returned not home again, but a happy fate was theirs, and they shall never be without their glory. Verily the girls of Delos, when the sweet-sounding marriage hymn affrights the maidens' quarters, bring offerings of their maiden hair to the maidens, while the boys offer to the young men the first harvest of the down upon their cheeks.

Asteria, island of incense, around and about thee the isles have made a circle and set themselves about thee as a choir. Not silent art thou nor noiseless when Hesperus of the curling locks looks down on thee, but ringing evermore with sound. The men sing the song of the old man of Lycia—the very song which the seer Olen<sup>d</sup> brought thee from Xanthos: the maidens of the choir beat with their feet the steadfast ground. Then, too, is the holy image laden with buttons which, when moved by the wind, beat upon a bronze λέβης mounted upon the other pillar. Cf. Callim. fr. 111.

Having escaped the cruel bellowing and the wild son<sup>a</sup> of Pasiphaë<sup>b</sup> and the coiled habitation of the crooked labyrinth, about thine altar, O lady, they raised the music of the lute and danced the round dance, and Theseus led the choir. Hence the ever-living offerings of the Pilgrim Ship<sup>c</sup> do the sons<sup>d</sup> of Cecrops send to Phoebus, the gear of that vessel.

Asteria of many altars and many prayers, what merchant mariner of the Aegean passes by thee with speeding ship? Never do such mighty winds as that blow upon him, but though need urges the swiftest voyage that may be, yet they speedily furl their sails and go not on board again, ere they have circled thy great altar buffeted with blows and bitten the sacred trunk of the olive, their hands tied behind their backs.<sup>e</sup> These things did the nymph of Delos devise for sport and laughter to young Apollo.

O happy hearth of islands, hail to thyself! Hail also to Apollo and to her<sup>f</sup> whom Leto bare!

V.—ON THE BATH OF PALLAS

ALL ye that are companions of the Bath of Pallas, come forth, come forth! I heard but now the snorting of the sacred steeds, and the goddess is ready to go. Haste ye now, O fair-haired daughters of Pelagus, haste! Never did Athena wash her mighty arms before she drave the dust from the flanks of her horses—not even when, her armour all defiled with filth, she returned from the battle of the lawless Giants; but far first she loosed from the car her horses' necks, and in the springs of Oceanus washed the flecks of sweat and from their mouths that champed the bit cleansed the clotted foam.

O come, daughters of Achaea, and bring not perfume nor alabasters (I hear the voice of the axle-naves!); bring not, ye companions of the Bath, for Pallas perfume nor alabasters<sup>a</sup> (for Athena loves not mixed unguents), neither bring ye a mirror. Always her face is fair, and, even when the Phrygian<sup>b</sup> judged the strife on Ida, the great goddess looked not into orichalc<sup>c</sup> nor into the transparent eddy of Simois, nor did Hera. But Cypris took the shining bronze and often altered and again altered the same lock.<sup>a</sup> But Pallas, after running twice sixty double courses, even as beside the Eurotas the Lacedaemonian Stars,<sup>b</sup> took and skilfully anointed her with simple unguents, the birth of her own tree. And, O maidens, the red blush arose on her, as the colour of the morning rose or seed of pomegranate. Wherefore now also bring ye only the manly olive oil, wherewith Castor and wherewith Heracles anoint themselves. And bring her a comb all of gold, that she may comb her hair, when she hath anointed her glossy tresses.

Come forth, Athena! A company pleasing to thy heart awaits thee, the maiden daughters of Acestor's mighty sons.<sup>c</sup> And therewithal, O Athena, is borne the shield of Diomedes, since this is the Argive custom which in olden days Eumedes<sup>d</sup> taught them: a priest who found favour with thee: who on a time, when he knew that the people were plotting and planning death for him, fled with thy holy image and dwelt on the Creion hill—dwelt on the hill of Creion and established thee, O goddess, on the rugged rocks, whose name is now the Pallatid rocks.

Come forth, Athena, Sacker of Cities, golden-helmeted, who rejoicest in the din of horse and etc. ; their identification with the constellation Gemini was comparatively late.

<sup>c</sup> 'Ακεστοριδᾶν has been unjustly suspected. It is quite correct and is a mere etymological variant for 'Αρεστοριδᾶν, since ἀκέσασθαι = ἀρέσασθαι. See Hesych. s.vv.

<sup>d</sup> "Once when the Heracleidae came against the Orestidae, Eumedes, priest of Athena, was suspected by the Argives of wishing to betray the Palladium to the Heracleidae. Eumedes, being afraid, took the Palladium and came to the hill called Creion" (schol.).

To-day, ye water-carriers, dip not your pitchers—to-day, O Argos, drink ye from the fountains and not from the river; to-day, ye handmaidens, carry your pitchers to Physadeia,<sup>a</sup> or Amymone,<sup>b</sup> daughter of Danaus. For, mingling his waters with gold and with flowers, Inachus will come from his pastoral hills, bringing fair water for the Bath of Athena. But beware, O Pelasgian, lest even unwittingly thou behold the Queen. Whoso shall behold Pallas, Keeper of Cities, naked, shall look on Argos for this the last time. Lady Athena, do thou come forth, and meanwhile I shall say somewhat unto these. The story is not mine but told by others.

Maidens, one nymph of old in Thebes did Athena love much, yea beyond all her companions, even the mother of Teiresias, and was never apart from her. But when she drave her steeds towards ancient Thespieae or towards Coroneia or to Haliartus, passing through the tilled fields of the Boeotians—or toward Coroneia where her fragrant grove and altars are set by the river Curalius—often did the goddess set the nymph upon her car and there was no dalliance of nymphs nor sweet ordering of dance, where Chariclo<sup>c</sup> did not lead.

Yet even her did many tears await in the after days, albeit she was a comrade pleasing to the heart of Athena. One day those twain undid the buckles of their robes beside the fair-flowing Fountain of the Horse on Helicon and bathed; and noontide quiet held all the hill. Those two were bathing and it was the noontide hour and a great quiet held that hill. Only Teiresias, on whose cheek the dawn was just darkening, still ranged with his hounds the holy place. And, athirst beyond telling, he came unto the flowing fountain, wretched man! and unwillingly saw that which is not lawful to be seen. And Athena was angered, yet said to him: "What god, O son of Everes, led thee on this grievous way? hence shalt thou never more take back thine eyes!"

She spake and night seized the eyes of the youth. And he stood speechless; for pain glued his knees and helplessness stayed his voice. But the nymph cried: "What hast thou done to my boy, lady? Is such the friendship of you goddesses? Thou hast taken away the eyes of my son. Foolish child! thou hast seen the breast and body of Athena, but the sun thou shalt not see again. O me unhappy! O hill, O Helicon, where I may no more come, surely a great price for little hast thou exacted. Losing a few gazelles and deer, thou hast taken the eyes of my child."

Therewith the mother clasped her beloved child in both her arms and, wailing the heavy plaint of the mournful nightingale, led him away. And the goddess Athena pitied her comrade and spake to her and said: "Noble lady, take back all the words that thou hast spoken in anger. It is not I that made thy child blind. For no sweet thing is it for Athena to snatch away the eyes of children. But the laws of Cronus order thus: Whosoever shall behold any of the immortals, when the god himself chooses not, at a heavy price shall he behold. Noble lady, the thing that is done can no more be taken back; since thus the thread of the Fates span when thou didst bear him at the first; but now, O son of Everes, take thou the issue which is due to thee. How many burnt offerings shall the daughter of Cadmus<sup>a</sup> burn in the days to come? how many Aristaeus?—praying that they might see their only son, the young Actaeon,<sup>b</sup> blind. And yet he shall be companion of the chase to great Artemis. But him neither the chase nor comradeship in archery on the hills shall save in that hour, when, albeit unwillingly, he shall behold the beauteous bath of the goddess. Nay, his own dogs shall then devour their former lord. And his mother shall gather the bones of her son, ranging over all the thickets. Happiest of women shall she call thee and of happy fate, for that thou didst receive thy son home from the hills—blind. Therefore, O comrade, lament not; for to this thy son—for thy sake—shall remain many other honours from me. For I will make him a seer to be sung of men hereafter, yea, more excellent far than any other. He shall know the birds—which is of good omen among all the countless birds that fly and what birds are of ill-omened flight. Many oracles shall he utter to the Boeotians and many unto Cadmus, and to the mighty sons of Labdacus in later days. Also will I give him a great staff which shall guide his feet as he hath need, and I will give him a long term of life. And he only,<sup>c</sup> when he dies, pieces by his own dogs because he had seen Artemis bathing in Parthenius in the Gargaphian valley. So she spake and bowed her head; and that word is fulfilled over which Pallas bows; since to Athena only among his daughters hath Zeus granted that she should win all things that belong to her sire, O companions of the Bath, and no mother bare that goddess, but the head of Zeus. The head of Zeus bows not in falsehood, and in falsehood his daughter hath no part.

Now comes Athena in very deed. O maidens, whose task it is, receive ye the goddess with pious greeting and with prayer, and with the voice of thanksgiving. Hail, goddess, and have thou Inachian Argos in thy keeping! Hail when thou drivest forth thy steeds, and home again mayst thou drive them with joy, and do thou preserve all the estate of the Danaans.

the ground beside the fountain Callichorus,<sup>a</sup> parched and without drinking, and didst not eat nor wash.

Nay, nay, let us not speak of that which brought the tear to Deo<sup>b</sup>! Better to tell how she gave to cities pleasing ordinances; better to tell how she was the first to cut straw and holy sheaves of corn-ears and put in oxen to tread them, what time Triptolemus<sup>c</sup> was taught the good craft; better to tell—a warning to men that they avoid transgression—how [she made the son of Triopas hateful and pitiful]<sup>d</sup> to see.

Not yet in the land of Cnidus,<sup>e</sup> but still in holy Dotium<sup>f</sup> dwelt the Pelasgians and unto thyself they made a fair grove abounding in trees; hardly would an arrow have passed through them. Therein was pine, and therein were mighty elms, and therein were pear-trees, and therein were fair sweet-apples; and from the ditches gushed up water as it were of amber. And the goddess loved the place to madness, even as Eleusis, as Triopum,<sup>g</sup> as Enna.<sup>h</sup>

But when their favouring fortune became wroth with the Triopidae, then the worse counsel took hold of Erysichthon.<sup>i</sup> He hastened with twenty attendants, all in their prime, all men-giants able to lift a whole city, arming them both with double axes and with hatchets, and they rushed shameless into the grove of Demeter. Now there was a poplar, a great tree reaching to the sky, and thereby the nymphs were wont to sport at noontide. This poplar was smitten first and cried a woeful cry to the others. Demeter marked that her holy tree was in pain, and she was angered and said: "Who cuts down my fair trees?" Straightway she likened her to Nicippe, whom the city had appointed to be her public priestess, and in her hand she grasped her fillets and her poppy, and from her shoulder hung her key.<sup>a</sup> And she spake to soothe the wicked and shameless man and said: "My child, who cuttest down the trees which are dedicated to the gods, stay, my child, child of thy parents' many prayers, cease and turn back thine attendants, lest the lady Demeter be angered, whose holy place thou makest desolate." But with a look more fierce than that wherewith a lioness looks on the hunter on the hills of Tmarus<sup>b</sup>—a lioness with new-born cubs,<sup>c</sup> whose eye they say is of all most terrible—he said: "Give back, lest I fix my great axe in thy flesh! These trees shall make my tight dwelling wherein evermore I shall hold pleasing banquets enough for my companions." So spake the youth and Nemesis<sup>d</sup> recorded his evil speech. And Demeter was angered beyond telling and put on her goddess shape. Her steps touched the earth, but her head reached unto Olympus.<sup>e</sup> And they, half-dead when they beheld the lady goddess, rushed suddenly away, leaving the bronze axes in the trees. And she left the others alone—for they followed by constraint beneath their master's hand—but she answered their angry king: "Yea, yea, build thy house, dog, dog,<sup>f</sup> that thou art, wherein thou shalt hold festival; for frequent banquets shall be thine hereafter." So much she said and devised evil things for Erysichthon. Straightway she sent on him a cruel and evil hunger—a burning hunger and a strong—and he was tormented by a grievous disease. Wretched man, as much as he ate, so much did he desire again. Twenty prepared the banquet for him, and twelve drew wine. For whatsoever things vex Demeter, vex also Dionysus; for Dionysus shares the anger of Demeter. His parents for shame sent him not to common feast or banquet, and all manner of excuse was devised. The sons of Ormenus<sup>a</sup> came to bid him to the games of Itonian Athene.<sup>b</sup> Then his mother refused the bidding: "He is not at home; for yesterday he is gone unto Crannon to demand a debt of a hundred oxen." Polyxo<sup>c</sup> came, mother of Actorion—for she was preparing a marriage for her child—inviting both Triopas and his son. But the lady, heavy-hearted, answered with tears: "Triopas will come, but Erysichthon a boar wounded on Pindus of fair glens and he hath lain abed for nine days." Poor child-loving mother, what falsehood didst thou not tell? One was giving a feast: "Erysichthon is abroad." One was bringing home a bride: "A quoit hath struck Erysichthon," or "he hath had a fall from his car," or "he is counting his flocks on Othrys."<sup>d</sup> Then he within the house, an all-day banqueter, ate all things beyond reckoning. But his evil belly leaped all the more as he ate, and all the eatables poured, in vain and thanklessly, as it were into the depths of the sea. than these he wasted to the very sinews: only sinews and bones had the poor man left. His mother wept, and greatly groaned his two sisters, and the breast that suckled him and the ten handmaidens over and over. And Triopas himself laid hands on his grey hairs, calling on Poseidon, who heeded not, with such words as these: "False father, behold this the third generation of thy sons—if I am son of thee and of Canace,<sup>a</sup> daughter of Aeolus, and this hapless child is mine. Would that he had been smitten by Apollo and that my hands had buried him! But now he sits an accursed glutton before mine eyes.<sup>b</sup> Either do thou remove from him his cruel disease or take and feed him thyself; for my tables are already exhausted. Desolate are my folds and empty my byres of four-footed beasts; for already the cooks<sup>c</sup> have said me "no."

But even the mules they loosed from the great wains and he ate the heifer that his mother was feeding for Hestia<sup>d</sup> and the racing horse and the war charger, and the cat at which the little vermin trembled.

So long as there were stores in the house of Triopas, only the chambers of the house were aware of the evil thing; but when his teeth dried up the rich house, then the king's son sat at the crossways,<sup>e</sup> begging for crusts and the cast out refuse of the

Hence the proverb ἀφ' Ἐστίας ἀρχεσθαι, which sometimes approaches the sense of τὴν ἀφ' ἱερῶν κινεῖν, indicating a last desperate move, or something thorough-going (cf. Germ. "von Hause aus." Plato, Euthyphr. 3 A, etc.).

<sup>e</sup> There seems to be a reference to the disposal of rubbish at the crossways, Aesch. Cho. 97 with schol., and offerings made to Hecate there, Aristoph. Plut. 594 with schol. Harpocr. s.v. ὄξυθύμια. It seems possible that Hecate's name Eucoline is a euphemism for Acoline (ἀκολος).

HYMN VI

feast. O Demeter, never may that man be my friend who is hateful to thee, nor ever may he share party-wall with me; ill neighbours I abhor.

Sing, ye maidens, and ye mothers, say with them: "Demeter, greatly hail! Lady of much bounty, of many measures of corn." And as the four white-haired horses convey the Basket, so unto us will the great goddess of wide dominion come bringing white spring and white harvest and winter and autumn, and keep us to another year. And as unsandalled and with hair unbound we walk the city, so shall we have foot and head unharmed for ever. And as the van-bearers bear vans<sup>a</sup> full of gold, so may we get gold unstinted. Far as the City Chambers let the uninitiated follow, but the initiated even unto the very shrine of the goddess—as many as are under sixty years. But those that are heavy<sup>b</sup> and she that stretches her hand to Eileithyia and she that is in pain—sufficient it is that they go so far as their knees are able. And to them Deo shall give all things to overflowing, even as if they came unto her temple.

Hail, goddess, and save this people in harmony and in prosperity, and in the fields bring us all pleasant things! Feed our kine, bring us flocks, bring us the corn-ear, bring us harvest! and nurse peace, that he who sows may also reap. Be gracious, O thrice-prayed for, great Queen of goddesses!

<sup>a</sup> λίκνα, skull-shaped baskets, used for offering first-fruits to the gods (cf. Hesych. s.v. λείκνα), also for winnowing corn and for cradles. Equivalent to Latin vannus, whence our "van" and "fán."

<sup>b</sup> βαρεία has the ambiguous sense of heavy with age (Soph. O.T. 17) or heavy with child—Lat. gravida.

EPIGRAMS

I.

A stranger from Atarneus<sup>a</sup> thus asked Pittacus<sup>b</sup> of Mytilene, the son of Hyrrhas<sup>c</sup>: “Reverend Father, two marriages invite me. One lady is my equal in wealth and blood: the other is above my station. Which is better? Come advise me whether of those I should lead to the altar.”

So he spake: and Pittacus lifted up his staff, the old man’s weapon, and said: “Lo! these yonder shall tell thee all.” Now these were boys who at a wide crossing were spinning their swift tops with blows of the lash. “Follow their tracks,” saith he. And the stranger stood by them: and they were saying: “Keep your own rank!<sup>d</sup>” When the stranger heard the words, he laid to heart the saying of the boys and spared to grasp at the greater estate. Now, was called Hyrrhadius as son of Hyrrhas. But it is very likely that Ἰρραδίου is right here.

<sup>a</sup> The phrase τὴν κατὰ σαυτὸν ἔλα = “drive your own line,” or “path” was a proverb. Suidas s. v., who gives not quite a correct rendering (“Seem to be what you are”), says some attributed it to the Pythian oracle, some to Solon, some to Chilon. It is hinted at by Aesch. Prom. v. 887 ff., where schol. A attributes it to Pittacus. It is imitated Aristoph. Clouds 25 ἔλαυε τὸν σαυτοῦ δρόμον. A. Hauvette—“c’est-à-dire pousse la toupie qui est à ta portée, à ta hauteur”—quite misunderstands the phrase.

<sup>b</sup> On a nautilus shell dedicated to Arsinoë Aphrodite of Zephyrium (cf. epigr. of Poseidippus in Athen. vii. 318) by Selenaëa, daughter of Cleinias, who, we may suppose, on the way from Smyrna to Egypt had obtained the shell at Iulis in Ceos. For Zephyrium cf. Steph. Byz. s.v. ἔστι καὶ ἄκρα τῆς Αἰγύπτου ἀφ' ἧς ἡ Ἀφροδίτη καὶ Ἄρσινόη Ζεφυρίτις ὡς Καλλιμαχος. See W. Deonna, Rev. Arch. 1917, Rev. de l'histoire d. relig. 80 (1919).

The epigram is quoted by Athenaeus apropos of Aristotle's description (fr. 316) of the nautilus: "The so-called nautilus (i.e. sailor) is not a polypus but resembles the polypus in the matter of tentacles. It has a testaceous back. In emerging from the water it keeps the shell atop so as not to carry

An old shell am I, O Lady of Zephyrium,<sup>c</sup> but now, Cypris, I am thine, a first offering from Selenaea: I the nautilus that used to sail upon the sea, if there were wind, stretching my sail on my own forestays, if Calm,<sup>d</sup> that bright goddess, prevailed, rowing strongly with my feet—so that my name befits my deed!—till I fell on the shores of Iulis, that I might become thy admired toy, Arsinoë, and that in my chambers may water. Then it turns over and floats on the surface, holding erect two tentacles which have a membrane between them, similar to the skinny web seen between the toes of fowls. Other two tentacles it lets down into the sea to serve as rudders. When frightened by the approach of anything it draws in its feet, fills itself with sea water and submerges quickly.” This is the Argonaut or Paper nautilus.

<sup>c</sup> Arsinoë II. Philadelphus, who died, as we now know from a new fragment of the Mendes stele, in July 270 B.C., received divine honours and had, among others, a temple at Zephyrium, a promontory between Alexandria and the Canopic mouth of the Nile, dedicated by Callicrates (Poseidippus ap. Athen. vii. 318) ὁ ναύαρχος, where she was worshipped as Arsinoë Aphrodite (Strabo 800), i.e. Aphrodite as patroness of sea-faring (Ἐσπλοία, Πελαγία).

<sup>d</sup> Galenaia, or Galene, a Nereid (Hes. Th. 244), was the goddess of Calm, cf. Eurip. Hel. 1457; Paus. ii. 1. 8. But the word is frequently used in the sense of the “calm sea,” e.g. Hom. Od. vii. 319 ἐλώωσι γαλήνην; which justifies us in taking νιν here to be the sea; cf. νήεσσιν ἐρέσσειται . . . ὕδωρ A.P. iv. 3<sup>b</sup>, 30.

<sup>a</sup> It seems best to take σύντομος as short of stature, cf. Ovid, Amor. ii. 7. 59 f. “Ossa tegit tumulus, tumulus pro corpore magnus, Quo lapis exiguus par sibi carmen habet”; but some understand it as short of speech or swift of foot. The interpretations are various:

1. The deceased was small of stature, the monument was small, so that the inscription, though of the shortest, was yet too long to be written in one line (Wilamowitz).

2. The Planudean gives the epigram as one of several εἰς ἀγωνιστάς. Hence Meineke reads ὑπ’ ἐμοί, δόλιχον (i.e. the long race) in the sense “Theris lies under me (the tombstone), <victor> in the long race.” Stadtmüller reads ἐπόνει δόλιχον.

I hate the cyclic poem, nor do I take pleasure in the road which carries many to and fro. I abhor, too, the roaming lover, and I drink not from every well<sup>d</sup>; I loathe all common things. Lysanias, thou art, yea, fair, fair: but ere Echo has quite said the word, says someone, "He is another's."

Echo is the companion of Pan, Eros, etc. (Plut. Qu. Symp. viii. 711 ε) and mother of Iynx, the Love Charmer (Callim. ap. schol. Theocrit. ii. 17). Her function is to repeat the last word or words of a sentence—here καλός. Cf. Ovid, Metam. iii. 368 "tamen haec in fine loquendi Ingeminat voces auditaque verba reportat," and ib. 380 "dixerat, Equis adest, et Adest responderat Echo." The repeated καλός as part of the lover's language occurs as early as Pind. P. ii. 72 καλός τοι πίθων (pet name for πίθηκος) παρά παισιν ἀεί καλός, and Attic vases frequently exhibit such forms as ὁ παῖς ναιχι καλός, καλός νεανίας, ὁ παῖς καλός, ναιχι καλός, Δωρόθεος καλός, ναιχι καλός.

The punctuation after Ἦχώ was first proposed by E. Petersen in 1875. The old punctuation, after σαφῶς, gave the words ἄλλος ἔχει to Echo. <sup>d</sup> Cf. Theogn. 959 ff.

How excellent was the charm<sup>d</sup> that Polyphemus discovered for the lover. By Earth, the Cyclops was no fool! The Muses, O Philippus, reduce<sup>e</sup> the swollen wound of love. Surely the poet’s skill is sovereign remedy for all ill. Methinks hunger, too, hath this good and this alone in regard to evil: it drives away the disease of love. We have both remedies against thee, remorseless Love: “There, boy; have thy wings cut, little boy! We fear thee not a jot; for we have in store both charms for thy cruel hurt.”

Panemos occurs in the calendar of Boeotia, Corinth, Ephesus, etc., and Loios (Homoloios in Thessaly) is also widely found. In the Alexandrian calendar in the time of the Ptolemies Panemos = June, Loios = July, approximately.

Εὐμαθίην ἡτείτο διδούς ἐμέ Σῖμος ὁ Μίκκου

<sup>a</sup> With this epigram should be compared the inscription found at Kufit in 1883, now in the Cairo museum (Dittenberger, Orient. Graec. Inscr. Select. No. 69): Θεοῖς μεγάλοις Σαμοθράξι Ἀπολλώνιος Σωσιβίου Θηραῖος ἡγεμῶν τῶν ἔξω τάξεων σωθεῖς ἐγὼ μεγάλων κινδύνων ἐκπλεύσας ἐκ τῆς Ἐρυθρᾶς θαλάσσης εὐχὴν.

The epigram is a series of puns, based on the ambiguous sense of ἅλς as meaning either "sea" or "salt." As the sailor saved from the sea and its storms would dedicate an offering—a model perhaps of his ship—to the gods of Samothrace, so Eudemos, having escaped the storms of debt by frugal living, dedicates his salt-cellar because he is saved from salt.

<sup>b</sup> The Cabeiri, Herodot. ii. 51. Their worship reached its highest point under the Diadochi, when Samothrace became an asylum, e.g. for Arsinoë Philadelphos, for Perseus of Macedon (Gnaeus Octavius προσορμισάμενος τῇ Σαμοθράκῃ τὴν μὲν ἀσυλλαν παρέιχε τῷ Περσεῖ διὰ τοὺς θεοὺς, Plut. Aemil. 26). Juv. iii. 144 "iures licet et Samothracum Et nostrorum aras." Hence "pii Samothraces," Statius, A. i. 832. As gods who protected sailors, Apoll. Rh. i. 915 ff., Theophr. Char. 25, Diodor. iv. 43. 1.

<sup>c</sup> (1) Bentley's idea that v. 4 referred to the letter Τ, which Pythagoras of Samos is said to have used to denote the divergence of the paths of virtue and vice (Persius, Sat. iii. 56), and that the mask of Dionysus was set up beside a representation of that letter in a boys' school, has long been exploded.

(2) Since Bernhardy (1822) compared Aelian, N.A. vii. 48 and Plin. N.H. viii. 58, it has been seen that the reference is to the Samian Διόνυσος κεχηνώς or Gaping Dionysus. Pliny, who gives the fuller account, says that one Elpis of Samos landed in Africa and near the shore he saw a lion gaping threateningly (hiatu minaci). Elpis got up a tree, meanwhile invoking father Liber (i.e. Dionysus). The lion made no attempt to pursue, but lay down before the tree and seemed to solicit pity. Elpis then discovered that the threatening gape was due to a bone which had got stuck in the beast's jaws and that the poor animal was perishing of hunger. At last he ventured to descend from the tree and remove the bone. The lion showed its gratitude by supplying him with game during his stay on the shore. For which cause Elpis consecrated a temple in Samos to father Liber, which from that circumstance the Greeks called the temple of κεχηνώς Διόνυσος. The epigram is now interpreted to mean that a schoolboy, in fulfilment of a vow, set up in the school a mask or bust of Διόνυσος κεχηνώς, in which his gape was so exaggerated, either intentionally (Bergk) or through lack of skill on the part of the artist—"the best he could make or pay for" (Kaibel)—as to be "twice that of the Samian Δ. κ." Here Dionysus listens to the boys repeating ad nauseam ἱερὸς ὁ πλόκαμος—i.e. reading the Bacchae of Euripides, the quotation (Bacch. 494) being used to denote the play as we might use "Arma virumque" to indicate the Aeneid.

(3) G. Kaibel in Hermes xxxi. (1896) disputes the use of δνειαρ for δνειρον. Comparing (with Benndorf) the similar epigram of Asclepiades in A.P. vi. 308, of which the last distich is κάμῃ χάριν Μούσαις τὸν κωμικὸν ὦδε Χάρητα | πρεσβύτην θορύβῳ θήκατο παιδαρίων, he emends Χάρητα to χαρέντα and thus makes the “comic old man” enjoy the din of the school. He thus reaches the conclusion that ὄνειαρ has here its ordinary epic sense. Dionysus says he finds his “pleasure” in the recitation of the line, whether it be in the Bacchæe as a whole or the particular scene from which the line is taken or in the fact that the boys have still to read the play.

(4) But in answer to Kaibel it has to be said: (1) The use of ὄνειαρ=dream is sufficiently attested by A.P. vii. 42. 1 where it is probably intended to be a quotation of Suid. s.v. ὄνειαρ, Eustath. Hom. Od. 1877. 64, etc. (2) If ὄνειαρ means “pleasure” there is no point in τοῦμόν . . . ἐμοί. The poet must have written ἐμόν (or τοῦμόν) or ἐμοί but not both. On the other hand the combination τοῦμόν . . . ἐμοί is an essential thing in the proverb; thus Plato, Rep. 563 D, Callim. Ep.

But that would be utterly out of place, and we are expressly told it was ὁ τραγικός Διώνυσος. The mask was an ordinary mask of Dionysus. What is meant is that he is so weary of the "damnable iteration" (Shakespeare) of the schoolroom that he yawns more widely than the Gaping Dionysus himself. It is needless to illustrate this use of κέχηγνα (Latin oscito) to express boredom, e.g. Aristoph. Ach. 30.

THE FRAGMENTS

AITIA

INTRODUCTION

THE Aitia was an elegiac poem in four books. The title Aitia, i.e. Causes, corresponds to the Latin Origines, the name of a work of M. Porcius Cato ("Senex historias scribere instituit. Earum sunt libri septem. Primus continet res gestas populi Romani, secundus et tertius unde quaeque civitas orta sit Italica. Ob quam rem omnes Origines videtur appellasse" C. Nepos, Cato iii.). It is probable that Cato modelled his work upon the Aitia of Callimachus. Among the writings which Suidas ascribes to Callimachus is one On the wonderful and paradoxical things in the Peloponnesus and Italy. It cannot be a coincidence that Cato "in iisdem exposuit quae in Italia Hispanisque aut fierent aut viderentur admiranda." Attempts, like that of O. Schneider, to reconstruct the detailed plan of the work are rather futile. All that can safely be said is that the Aitia treated in a series of elegiac episodes all sorts of aetiological legends connected with Greek history, customs, and rites. The setting of the work was given in the form of a dream in which the poet imagined himself to be carried by the Muses from Libya to Helicon, where in answer to his questions they instructed him in all manner of legendary lore. The idea is borrowed by the Roman Callimachus, Propertius iv. 3. 1 "Visus eram molli recubans Heliconis in umbra," etc.; cf. iii. 26. 31 f. "Tu satius memorem Musis (Μούσαις μεμελημένον) imitere Philetam Et non inflati somnia Callimachi."

TESTIMONIES

1. Callimachus is the cause—the scapegoat, the sport, the wooden mind—who wrote the Causes of Callimachus.<sup>a</sup>

2. O greatly renowned Dream of the wise son of Battos, surely thou wert of horn, not of ivory.<sup>b</sup> For thou didst reveal to us such things as hitherto we mortals have not known, both about the immortals and about the demigods, what time thou didst carry him away from Libya to Helicon and didst take and set him in the midst of the Pierides. And they in answer to his questions told him the Causes, both touching the primeval heroes and touching the blessed gods.

3. Here you will not find Centaurs nor Gorgons and Harpies: our pages savour of humanity. But <sup>b</sup> The reference is to the famous passage in Odyssey xix. 562 ff. where Penelope says: "Two Gates there be of Phantom Dreams, these fashioned of horn and those of ivory. Now the Dreams which come through sawn ivory they deceive (ἐλεφαρονται) men with words without fulfilment; but those which come forth through the polished horns bring true fulfilment (κραλνουσι) for the mortal who beholds them"; cf. Verg. Aen. vi. 894 ff., Hor. Od. iii. 27. 41, Stat. Silv. v. 3. 288.

The identification of this fragment as the work of Callimachus is established by the coincidences with extant fragments, as noted below. country. In his new home Pollis scrupulously celebrated the festivals of his native Athens. On this particular occasion the festival celebrated was that of the Aiora, which was instituted (Hygin. Astron. ii. 4) in connexion with the epidemic of suicide among the women of Attica after Erigone, daughter of Icarius, hanged herself: "qualis Marathonide silva Flebilis Erigone caesi prope funera patris Questibus absumptis tristem iam solvere nodum Coeperat et fortes ramos moritura ligabat," Stat. Th. xi. 644 ff.; cf. Silv. v. 3. 74 ff. Among the guests of Pollis was a merchant Theogenes from the little island of Icos (Strabo 436), one of the Magnesian islands. Him Callimachus questions about the cult of Peleus in Icos and the relations of that island with Thessaly.

At the Choes it was the custom that each guest should drink by himself: καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς Χουσίσι· εὐωχοῦνται μὲν γὰρ κατ' ἰδίαν, Athen. vii. 276 c. The aetiological legend was that, when the matricide Orestes came to Athens during the celebration of a public festival, Demophon or Pandion, king of Athens, wishing to be hospitable but unwilling for religious reasons that an unpurified murderer should eat and drink with others, ordered a pitcher (χοῦς) of wine to be given to each guest separately. THE subject of this fragment is the story of Linos. According to Pausan. i. 43 Psamathe, daughter of Crotopus, king of Argos, became mother of Linos by Apollo. In fear of her father she exposed the child who was killed by her father's dogs. Apollo sent Poine to punish the Argives. Poine carried away the children from their mothers, until she was slain by Coroebus. A second plague came upon Argos, and Coroebus went voluntarily to Delphi to atone for the slaying of Poine. The Pythia forbade him to return to Argos, and told him to take a tripod from the temple, and, wherever he should let it fall, there to build a temple to Apollo and to dwell there. He dropped the tripod near Geraneaia in the Megarid, where he founded the town of Tripodisci. His grave was in the agora at Megara, cf. A.P. vii. 154.

Conon 19 (Phot. Bibl. p. 133 f. Bekker) gives a somewhat different account, according to which Linos was reared as his own child by the shepherd to whom he was given. When he was torn to pieces by the dogs, the secret of his birth became known to Crotopus, who condemned his daughter to death. In anger Apollo sent a plague upon Argos. When the Argives consulted the Delphic oracle they were told that they must propitiate Psamathe and Linos. So they honoured them in other ways and sent women and maidens to lament (θρηνεῖν) Linos. These mingling lamentations with prayers bewailed the fate of Psamathe and Linos and themselves. Thus arose the Linos-song. "And they named a month Lamb-month (Ἀρνείος) because Linos had been reared with the lambs (ἀρνες) and they hold a sacrifice and a Lamb-

As the plague did not cease, Crotopus in accordance with an oracle left Argos and founded a city in the Megarid which he called Tripodiscion and there dwelt. Cf. Ovid, Ibis, 573 ff. ; Stat. Theb. i. 562 ff., Silv. v. 5. 55.

story of Phalaris, tyrant of Agrigentum, and the brazen bull invented by Perillus is familiar to everyone. Callimachus represents Phalaris as imitating Busiris, king of Egypt. The legend was that when Egypt had suffered from drought for nine years, Thrasius of Cyprus, a seer, told the king that the drought would cease if he would sacrifice a stranger every year to Zeus. Busiris took his advice and began the series by sacrificing Thrasius himself. Ovid, Ars amat. i. 647 ff., follows Callimachus closely: "Dicitur Aegyptos caruisse iuvantibus arva Imbribus atque annos sicca fuisse novem, Cum Thrasius Busirin adit monstratque piari Hospitis effuso sanguine posse Iovem. Illi Busiris: 'fies Iovis hostia primus,' Inquit, 'et Aegypto tu dabis hospes aquam.' Et Phalaris tauro violenti membra Perilli Torruit: infelix imbuat auctor opus. Iustus uterque fuit, etc." Cf. Trist. iii. 11. 39 ff., especially 48: "Mugiet et veri vox erit illa bovis" (cf. Plutarch. l.c.) and 51 f.: "'poenae mirande repertor, Ipse tuum praesens imbue,' dixit, 'opus.'"

Briefly the story is this. Acontius, a handsome youth of Ceos, saw Cydippe with her nurse at the yearly festival at Delos. Falling in love at sight, he followed her to the temple of Artemis, where he threw in the way of

The attendant handed the apple to Cydippe who read the inscription and, realizing the oath by which she was unintentionally binding herself, threw it away. The father of Cydippe arranged a different marriage for his daughter; but always when the time for the marriage arrived, Cydippe was seized by a mysterious illness. Three times this happened, but the fourth time the father went to Delphi to consult Apollo, and learnt that the whole mystery was due to the oath by which his daughter had unwittingly bound herself. So faith was kept with the goddess, and her fellows straightway sang their comrade's marriage hymn, deferred no longer. Then I deem, Acontius, that for that night, wherein thou didst touch her maiden girdle, thou wouldst not have accepted either the ankle of Iphicles<sup>b</sup> who ran upon the corn-ears nor the possessions of Midas<sup>c</sup> of Celaenae. And my verdict would be attested by all who are not ignorant of the stern god. And from that marriage a great name was destined to arise. For, O Cean, your clan, the Acontiadae, still dwell, numerous and honoured, at Iulis.<sup>d</sup> And this thy passion we heard from old Xenomedes,<sup>e</sup> who once enshrined all the island in a mythological history: beginning with the tale of how it was inhabited by the Corycian<sup>f</sup> nymphs whom a great lion drove from Parnassus: wherefore also they <sup>c</sup> Our chief authorities for the legend referred to here are Pindar, Paeans, iv. 42 ff., Bacchylides i., Ovid, Ibis and scholia. The story in outline is that the Telchines, mythical craftsmen and wizards, provoked the wrath of the gods. So Zeus and Poseidon "sent the land and all the host of the people into the depths of Tartarus" (Pind. l.c.), but spared Dexithea and her sisters, daughters of Damon (here called Demonax), because they had entertained Zeus and Apollo. Macelo in the Ibis scholia is called sister of Dexithea, not mother. Dexithea became mother of Euxantius by Minos of Crete. See Jebb, Bacchylides, pp. 443 ff.

The phrase is a ritualistic one, e.g. we know from extant tablets that a usual form of inquiry at the oracle at Dodona was "A. asks . . . whether if he do so and so, it will be for him λώιον καὶ ἄμεινον." The antique nature of the word is noticed by Lucian, Lexiphant. 21 ἦ δ' ὅς καὶ ἀμηγέπη καὶ λῶσσε.

THE LOCK OF BERENICE

OUR knowledge of this poem is derived mainly from the translation by Catullus, who in his 65th poem tells Ortalus that, his brother's death having made it impossible for him to write poetry, he is sending him a translation from Callimachus :

Sed tamen in tantis maeroribus, Ortale, mitto
Haec expressa tibi carmina Battiadae.

The translation referred to may well be the 66th poem of our editions, the Coma Berenices. We have small means of judging whether the poem is a strict translation or only a paraphrase.

Berenice was the daughter of Magas, King of Cyrene, who was a son of Berenice I., wife of Ptolemy I. Though long betrothed to Ptolemy III., she does not appear to have actually become his wife till after his accession to the throne of Egypt (which was at latest in 246 B.C.); cf. Callim. lxvi. 11 "novo auctus hymenaeo." About the time that Ptolemy III. came to the throne his sister Berenice, daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus, who had become the wife of Antiochus II. of Syria, was murdered, as was Antiochus himself, by Laodice, the divorced wife of Antiochus, who caused her own son Seleucus II. Callinicus to be proclaimed king. Thus broke out the Λαοδίκειος πόλεμος (CIG. 2905) or Third Syrian War.

On the departure of her husband for the war Berenice vowed to the gods for his safety a lock of her hair, which upon his return was dedicated in the temple of Arsinoë Aphrodite at Zephyrium. The lock mysteriously disappeared. Thereupon Conon, the court astronomer, pretended to identify it with the delicate group of stars, thenceforth known as Coma Berenices, lying within the circle formed by Ursa Major, Boötes, Virgo, and Leo; cf. Catull. lxvi. 65 ff. "Virginis et saevi contingens namque Leonis Lumina, Callisto iuncta Lycaoniae, Vertor in occasum, tardum dux ante Booten, qui vix sero alto mergitur Oceano"; cf. Hygin. Astron. ii. 24, Hesych. s.v. Βερενίκης πλόκαμος. The title of the poem is conjectural and the fragments are assigned to it on the evidence of Catullus.

The text is that of Muretus but it is quite uncertain whether the words of the schol. are a continuous quotation. Catullus lxvi. 7 ff. <sup>a</sup> The epithet used by Callimachus was probably μεγάθυμος, less likely μεγαλόψυχος. Hygin. Astron. ii. 24 says that Callimachus called her great-souled (magnanima) because when her father Ptolemy (sic) was terrified by a multitude of enemies and sought safety in flight, Berenice, being accustomed to riding, mounted a horse, rallied the rest of the army, slew several of the enemy, and put the rest to flight. He mentions, too, Callimachus and others as saying that she kept horses and sent them to the Olympic games. But the epithet "great-souled" has reference

ΒΡΑΓΧΟΣ

BRANCHUS, son of a Delphian Smicrus and a Milesian mother, was beloved of Apollo (in one version he was Apollo's son) who gave him the gift of prophecy. He founded at Didyma or Didymi near Miletus a temple of Apollo with cult similar to that of the Delphic oracle. Its oracle was consulted by Croesus (Herod. i. 46), who dedicated offerings in the temple (Herod. i. 92, v. 36), by the Cumaeans (Herod. i. 157), and Necos, king of Egypt,

The obscure word ἐλειήτης is derived according to the E.M. "either from ἐλη=heat, which is called ἐλη, with the addition of iota, or from ἐλος=marsh, because before being made a constellation they dwelt in marshes." The reference, in any case, of ἐλειήταο and certainly of Catullus's "saevi" is to the heat at the time when the sun enters Leo in July, cf. Arat. 150 f.

The temple was pillaged and burnt by the Persians in 494 B.C. (Herod. vi. 19, Strabo 634), but was rebuilt on a scale so huge that it remained unroofed (Strabo l.c.). The remains have been excavated in modern times by Haussoullier and later by Wiegand.

And Callimachus has composed a whole poem, "Branchus," in the (choriambic)<sup>a</sup> pentameter: e.g. "Góds who are wéll wóthy of sóng, Phoébus and Zeús, Dídyma's áncient fóunders."

<sup>a</sup> Hephaestion in this chapter explains that a choriambic line may consist of pure choriambes or be combined with iambs: as a general rule, when the line is catalectic, it ends in an iambic clausula (κατάκλεις), i.e. in an amphibrach (∪ - ∪) or bacchius (∪ - -), the last syllable being indifferent (ἀδιάφορος = anceps).

ΕΠΙΓΡΑΜΜΑΤΑ

THE following fragments are quoted by various writers from the Epigrams of Callimachus. There is some ground for supposing that Callimachus published a separate volume under this title. Thus Suidas s.v. Ἀρχίβιος, Ἀπολλωνίου, γραμματικός. Τῶν Καλλιμάχου Ἐπιγραμμάτων ἐξήγησιν seems to imply such a volume. Cf. Plin. Ep. iv. 3. And Suid. s.v. Μαρίας tells us that Marianus, among other iambic paraphrases of the poets (Theocritus, Apollonius, Aratus, etc.), wrote "a paraphrase of Callimachus's Hecale, Hymns, Aitia, and Epigrams in 6810 iambics." Incidentally it may be noted that Suidas says the paraphrase of Aratus (our text, including the Dissemeiae, gives 1154 lines) occupied 1140 iambics.

Bentley was probably right in combining the two fragments as one.

EPIGRAMS

1 (70)

Blame himself wrote upon the walls: "Cronus<sup>a</sup> is wise." Behold the crows upon the roof are croaking, "What is a Co-nex Sentence?" and "What is the proof of Immortality?"

<sup>a</sup> The reference is to Diodorus of Iasos, one of the later philosophers of the Megaric school. The nickname Cronus—indicating an "old foggy"—is said to have been applied in the first instance to his teacher Apollonius of Cyrene and from him applied to his pupil; Strabo 658 and 638, cf. Diog. Laert. l.c., who says that in the presence of Ptolemy Soter certain dialectical questions were put to him by Stilpon, and being unable to answer them offhand, ὑπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως τὰ τε ἄλλα ἐπετιμήθη καὶ δὴ καὶ Κρόνος ἤκουσεν ἐν σκώμματος μέρει. His doctrines, the epigram implies, were so current that the very crows upon the roof discussed them. κοῖα συνῆπται, i.e. ποῖά ἐστιν ἀξιώματα συνημμένα, refers to the classification of sentences or propositions ("profata" or "proloquia" (Varro), "pronuntiata" (Cicero)) into simple (ἀπλᾶ), adjunct (συνημμένα), and complex (συμπεπλεγμένα). If one says "γράφει," the absence of the subject makes this what the Stoics called a κατηγορημα; if one says γράφει Σωκράτης, we have an ἀξίωμα because it is now complete in itself (αὐτοτελές), Diog. Laert. vii. 63, cf. Aulus Gellius xvi. 8. 4 "redimus igitur necessario ad Graecos libros. ex quibus accepimus ἀξίωμα esse his verbis: λεκτὸν αὐτοτελές

The argument for Immortality was connected with Diodorus' denial of the possibility of motion. "That which moves, moves either in the place where it is or in the place where it is not. Neither of these is possible; therefore nothing moves. But if nothing moves, it follows that nothing perishes. For, by the same reasoning as before, since a living creature does not die in the time in which it lives nor in the time in which it does not live, it does not die at all. Therefore we shall always be alive and shall be born again" (αὐθι γενησόμεθα). Sext. Empir. Adv. math. i. 309.

<sup>a</sup> The restoration of this epigram is a good example of Bentley's genius. The Scopadae were a distinguished Thessalian family who had their seat at Crannon and Pharsalus. Scopas II. in whose honour Simonides of Ceos, son of Leoprepes (Paus. vi. 9. 9), wrote an epinicion, lost his life by the sudden fall of his house at Pharsalus or Crannon during a banquet. Cf. <sup>b</sup> Archilochus of Paros circ. 650 B.C., famous for the bitterness of his lampoons or iambi. The Ambrosian grammarian derives iambus from lōs = poison, hence the quotation. There is a very similar anonymous epigram A.P. ix. 185 Ἀρχιλόχου τάδε μέτρα καὶ ἠχήμεντες λαμβοί, θυμοῦ καὶ φοβερῆς λὸς ἐπεσβολῆς. The same comparison of Archilochus to a mad dog underlies Hor. A.P. 79 "Archilochum proprio rabies armavit iambo."

HECALE

THE story of Hecale is told by Plutarch, Theseus ch. 14: "Theseus, wishing to be actively employed, and at the same time to win the favour of the people, went out against the Marathonian bull, which was causing no small annoyance to the inhabitants of the Tetrapolis, and he overcame the bull and drove it through the city to exhibit it, after which he sacrificed it to Apollo Delphinus. Hecale and the legend of her reception and entertainment (of Theseus) seem to be not quite without some portion of truth. For the demes round about used to meet and hold a Hecalesian festival in honour of Zeus Hecalus, and honoured Hecale, whom they called by the pet name Hecaline, because when she entertained Theseus, who at the time was quite young, she addressed him as an old woman would and greeted him with that sort of pet names. When Theseus was setting out to the contest she vowed in his behalf to offer a sacrifice to Zeus if he came back safe. She died, however, before his return, and received the above mentioned honours, in return for her hospitality, by order of Theseus, as Philochorus relates." Cf. Steph. Byz. s.v. 'Εκάλη· δῆμος τῆς Λεοντίδος φυλῆς. ὁ δημότης 'Εκάλιος· τὰ τοπικὰ 'Εκάληθεν, 'Εκάληνδε· καὶ 'Εκάλιος Ζεύς. Hesych. s.v. 'Εκάλειος Ζεύς· ὄν 'Εκάλη ἰδρύσατο.

It is obvious from the fragments that Hecale was represented as very old and very poor, and in both regards she became proverbial. Priapea, xii. 1 ff. (Baehrens, Poet. Lat. Min. i. p. 61) "quaedam annosior Hectoris parente Cumaeae soror, ut puto, Sibyllae, Aequalis tibi, quam domum revertens Theseus repperit in rogo iacentem." Ovid, Rem. Amor. 747 f. "Cur nemo est Hecalen, nulla est quae ceperit Iron? Nempe quod alter egens, altera pauper erat." Statius, Th. xii. 582 "nec fudit vanos anus hospita fletus." Julian, Ep. 41 οὐδὲ τῆς Ἐκάλης ὁ Θησεὺς τοῦ δέλπνου τὸ λιτὸν ἀπηξίωσεν, ἀλλ' ἦδει καὶ μικροῖς ἐς τὸ ἀναγκαῖον ἀρκεῖσθαι.

It may be inferred further that the poem contained references to the birth of Theseus. The story was that Aegeus, king of Athens, being childless, consulted the oracle at Delphi. To interpret the oracle which he received he went to consult Pittheus of Troezen. Here he became father of Theseus by Aethra, daughter of Pittheus. Leaving Troezen before the birth of Theseus, Aegeus hid his sword and shoes under a rock, telling Aethra that if and when their son was able to raise the rock and remove the sword and shoes, she was to send him to Athens with these tokens of recognition. This duly took place and Theseus was recognized as the son of Theseus (Plut. Thes. 3 ff.).

THE RAINER FRAGMENTS OF THE HECALE

THESE important additions to our knowledge of the Hecale are preserved on a piece of a wooden tablet now in the papyri collection of the Archduke Rainer in the Royal Library at Vienna, and were first published by Prof. Theodor Gomperz in vol. vi. of the Mitteilungen aus d. Sammlung d. Papyr. Erzherzog Rainer, Vienna, May 1893 (printed separately).

On the reverse side of the tablet are written two columns from the Phoenissae of Euripides. From the amount of the Phoenissae which is missing between these two columns it would seem that about three-fifths of the board have been lost by the breakage. That nothing is lost at the top is proved by the fact that the upper border is marked by two indented lines. Traces of a similar marking appear also at the side ends. The general character of the tablet and its contents—"a wooden tablet inscribed with part of a messenger's speech from one of the three most read dramas of Euripides and a part, rich in mythological allusions, of one of the most celebrated works of Callimachus"—leaves no doubt that it was intended for school use.

For these and other details the reader is referred to T. Gomperz, Hellenica, vol. ii., Leipzig, 1912, p. 273 f., "Aus der Hecale des Kallimachos," where in an Excursus J. Zingerle discusses palaeographical details. The character of the writing, according to Wessely, assigns the tablet to the 4th century A.D. Two different hands are distinguished, one of which wrote Columns I. and IV., the other Columns II. and III. From the nature of the subject matter, as well as certain palaeographical indications, Zingerle concludes that the columns were not written in their present order. Thus Column I. was written after Columns II. and III. and is a palimpsest.

The identification of the fragments was first made by Dr. W. Weinberger, who was associated with Dr. Zingerle in the examination of the tablet.

Clearest of all is the identification of Column IV. Of this v. 12 was already known from schol. Aristoph. Frogs, 1297, where it is assigned to Callimachus, and Suidas s.v. ιμαίων, where it is assigned to the Hecale. Moreover γάλακι = γάλακτι v. 3, λύχρα v. 11, and a large part of v. 13 were already attested as belonging to Callimachus (fr. 551, 255, 278) by Herodian, Et. Magn., and schol. Apoll. Rhod. respectively.

As to Column I., internal evidence alone would be sufficient to refer it to the Hecale—the reference to Theseus and the Marathonian bull, etc., but, further, v. 6, apart from the first word, was already known from Suidas s.v. ἀστυρον, where it is assigned to Callimachus (fr. 288), and had already been referred to the Hecale. Also, the end of v. 14 occurs, with the addition of two more words, in Suidas s.v. στόβρησι, and had already been referred by Ruhnken and others to the Hecale (fr. anon. 59).

The identification of Columns II. and III. does not rest on any ancient citation. But the general character of the style, the nature of the contents—the story of Erichthonius, which is the subject of Column II., is known from a scholium on Iliad ii. 547 to have been treated in the Hecale, and in one form of the story a crow played a prominent part, which apparently is the theme of Col. III.—and the context in which they appear, leave no doubt as to the source of the fragments.

TESTIMONIES

1. This <sup>a</sup> is the chiselled work of Callimachus ; for on it, indeed, he shook out every reef of the Muses. It sings the cabin of hospitable Hecale and the toils that Marathon imposed on Theseus. His young strength of hand may it be thine to win, Marcellus, and equal praise of glorious life !

2. In these words <sup>b</sup> he rebukes those who jeered at him as not being able to write a big poem : which taunt drove him to write the Hecale.

3. Hecale, the heroine, on whom also Callimachus wrote a poem : she who called (καλεῖν) all to her. The ancients called her by the pet name of Hecaline. And they offered sacrifice to her on account of her having entertained Theseus.

4. Such as the hospitable woman who was of old Marcellus 43-23 B.C., nephew of Augustus, whose early death was much lamented ; Verg. Aen. vi. 884.

And when they beheld it, they all trembled before him and shrank from looking face to face on the great man and the monstrous beast, until Theseus called to them from afar: "Have courage and abide, and let the swiftest go unto the city to bear a message to my father Aegeus—so shall he relieve him from many cares:—'Lo! Theseus is at hand, bringing alive the bull from watery Marathon.'" So spake he, and, when they heard, they all shouted "Iē Paieon" and abode there. <sup>a</sup> The reference is to the birth of Erichthonius, son of Athena and Hephaestus. Athena wished to rear him secretly. She therefore "shut him up in a chest (κίστη) and gave him to the daughters of Cecrops, Agraulus, Pandorus, and Herse, with orders not to open the chest until she herself came. Having gone to Pellene she was bringing a hill in order to make a bulwark (ἔρυμα) in front of encircled him about, while the women crowned him with garlands.

But Pallas laid him, the ancient seed of Hephaestus within the chest,<sup>a</sup> until she set a rock in Acte (Attica) for the sons of Cecrops: a birth mysterious and secret, whose lineage I neither knew nor learnt, but they themselves [i.e. the daughters of Cecrops] declared, according to report among the primeval birds, that Earth bare him to Hephaestus. Then she, that she might lay a bulwark for the land which she had newly obtained by vote of Zeus and the twelve other immortals and the witness of the Snake, the Acropolis, when two of Cecrops' daughters opened the chest and beheld two serpents with Erichthonius. As Athena was bringing the hill which is now called Lycabettus, a crow (κορώνη) met her and told her that Erichthonius was discovered. Athena, when she heard it, threw down the hill where it now is, and she told the crow that, for her bad news, she must never enter the Acropolis" (Amelesagoras ap. Antig. Caryst. Hist. Mirab. c. xii., cf. Apollodor. iii. 14, Ovid, Met. ii. 551 ff., Hygin. Fab. 166). The reference in v. 10 f. is to the story of the contest between Athena and Poseidon for possession of Attica. Poseidon smote a rock on the Acropolis and produced a salt pool (θάλασσα). Then Athena, calling Cecrops to witness her possession (κατάληψις), produced an olive. Finally Zeus appointed the twelve gods as arbiters who decided in favour of Athena, Κέκροπος μαρτυρήσαντος ὅτι πρώτη τὴν ἐλαίαν ἐφύτευσεν, Apollodor. iii. 14. 1. Cecrops is called here the Snake, because he was represented as having the lower part of his body in snake form, in sign of his being earth-born: Κέκροψ αὐτόχθων, συμφυῆς ἔχων σῶμα ἀνδρὸς καὶ δράκοντος, τῆς Ἀττικῆς ἐβασίλευσε πρῶτος (Apollodor. l.c.). The speaker appears to be the crow.

<sup>b</sup> The reference of the opening lines is to the turning of the raven's plumage from white to black as a punishment for the news which it brought to Apollo regarding Coronis who, being with child by Apollo, sinned with Ischys, son of Elatos (Pind. P. iii. 8 ff.). The first of these Suidas tells us was the olive ripened on the tree; cf. Hesych. s.v. γεργέριμος, Athen. l.c., Suid. s.v. δρυπεπής, etc. As to πίτυρις Athen. l.c. says that according to Philemon the πίτυρις is the φαυλία olive; which, according to Hesych. s.v., is "the κότινος (wild olive), or simply a species of olive." As to the λευκή and its treatment, see Geopon. ix. 30, Cato, Agricult. 117, 118. It is quite clear that these olives were crushed before being pickled. On the other hand the κολυμβάς, which Suidas says is the φθινοπωρίς, is not crushed, Geopon. ix. 33. Pollux (vi. 45), too, enumerates four sorts, apparently, δρυπετεῖς ἐλαῖαι, ἀλμάδες, νηκτίδες, κοτινάδες. It is tempting to find four sorts corresponding to these in Callimachus, i.e. γεργέριμος = δρυπ., λευκή = ἀλμ., φθινοπωρίς = νηκτ., πῖτυρις = κοτ. It may or it may not (Maass, Hermes, xxiv. (1889), p. 523) be significant that Nonnus connects the phrase εἰν ἀλι νήχ. φθιν. with Molorcus, not Hecale. If, however, we do take λευκή φθιν. together, should we compare Cato, Agricult. 118 "oleam albam quam secundum vindemiam uti voles, sic condito"?

INTRODUCTION

THAT Callimachus was the author of a poetic work entitled Iambi—though it is not included in the list of his works by Suidas—was known from various citations referring to Καλλίμαχος ἐν Ἰάμβοις or ἐν Χωλιάμβοις. Our knowledge of this work is now considerably increased by the discovery of the Oxyrhynchus Papyri 1011 (ed. A. S. Hunt, 1910) and 1363 (ed. B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt, 1915). The latter, it is true, extends but to thirty lines, none of which is preserved entire, and nearly all of which are beyond restoration. Yet even so it is able to confirm an ingenious conjecture of Bentley (see Iamb. 5 (86) below). But the former preserves for us a considerable fragment of the Iambi, and, though large portions of it are in a state of hopeless mutilation, we are able to gain from it some knowledge of the nature and method of the work.

Metrically, the Papyrus makes it clear that the work was written not only in Iambic Trimeters and Choliambic (Scazon) Trimeters but also in Trochaic Tetrameters—not apparently in Trochaic Tetrameters Scazon (i.e. ending in — | — instead of — ∪ | —), which were sometimes written by Hipponax (Diog. Laert. i. 84). As to Callimachus' management of those metres we learn various details, e.g. that in his Choliambics he did not permit a spondee in the 5th foot but did allow an anapaest in the 2nd and 4th; and that he frequently neglected the caesura in his Trochaic Tetrameters.

As to the contents of Papyrus 1011, it preserves for us the opening lines of the Iambi and proves the truth of what was previously only a conjecture, that Callimachus appears in the character of the New Hipponax or Hipponax redivivus who returns from Hades not to pursue his quarrel with Bupalus, but to sing a new song.

Two episodes are preserved in sufficient completeness to give us quite a good idea of the style and character of the work—the episode of the Cup of Bathycles and that of the Quarrel of the Olive and the Laurel. The latter explains itself, but a word of explanation is perhaps necessary in regard to the first.

Diogenes Laertius i. 27 ff. gives us, in his life of Thales, various versions of the legend. Certain Ionian youths bought from some fishermen of Miletus their "shot" (βόλος). A tripod being fished up, a dispute ensued, until the Milesians sent to Delphi to consult Apollo, who declared the tripod to belong to "him who is first of all in wisdom." So it was given to Thales, who passed it on to another, and he to a third, and so on until it came to Solon, who declared that "the god was first in wisdom" and sent the tripod to Delphi. "A different version of the story," says Diogenes Laertius, "is given by Callimachus in his Iambi, which he took from Maeandrius of Miletus (author of Μιλησιακά, a work on the antiquities of Miletus). According to this version Bathycles, an Arcadian, left a cup (φιάλη) with instructions that it be given τῶν σοφῶν τῷ ὀνηϊστῷ. It was presented to Thales, and in the course of its circuit to Thales again. He sent it to Apollo at Didymi with the dedication, according to Callimachus: Θαλῆς με τῷ μεδεῦντι Νειλέω δῆμον | δίδωσι, τούτο δὲ λαβὼν ἀριστεῖον. The prose inscription is: Θαλῆς Ἐξαμύου Μιλήσιος Ἀπόλλωνι Δελφινίῳ Ἑλλήνων ἀριστεῖον δὲ λαβὼν. The son of Bathycles who carried round the cup was called Thyrion, according to Eleusis, On Achilles, etc." Diogenes gives other versions of the story. According to one, the prize was a golden cup presented by Croesus; according to another it was a tripod offered by the Argives; or it was a tripod belonging to a ship of Periander, which was wrecked on its way to Miletus, the tripod being recovered by some fishermen; or, finally, it was a tripod wrought by Hephaestus and given by him as a wedding-present to Pelops, from whom it passed to Menelaus. When Paris carried off Helen, he took the tripod also, but Helen threw it into the sea off Cos, prophesying that it would be a bone of contention. So it came to pass afterwards that some men of Lebedos bought the draught of some Coan fishermen, who, when they fished up the tripod, refused to fulfil their bargain. The Lebedeans appealed to their metropolis Miletus, which declared war on Cos. After many on both sides had fallen, an oracle told them to "give it to the wisest." Both parties agreed to give it to Thales who, after circulating it, dedicated it to Apollo at Didymi.

<sup>a</sup> Callimachus is a Hipponax redivivus, who comes from Hades where things are proverbially cheap (see note on Epigr. xv. 6). Hipponax of Ephesus circ. 550 B.C., famous iambographer and reputed inventor of the choliambic metre. Especial objects of his satire were the sculptors Bupalus and Athenis of Clazomenae, whither he had retired when Athenagoras became tyrant of Ephesus.

<sup>b</sup> The restoration assumes that Hipponax redivivus expresses amazement at the crowd of shades on the hither bank of Acheron, whom Charon has to ferry over to the ripa ulterior. A "Delphian sacrifice" was proverbial, cf. Paroem. Gr. Gaisford, p. 130: "If you sacrifice at Delphi, you will eat no meat yourself: Of those who spend much and get no benefit; since sacrificers at Delphi, on account of the number of the guests, got nothing to eat themselves." The reference of 111 f. is unknown.

One Bathycles an Arcadian—I will not lead you, Sir, by a long [path of words]; for I myself have no great leisure to tarry hard by the stream of Acheron—was [one of the rich from of old] and he had all those things wherewith the gods know to [perfect their favours] to men.

Some here, some there he set the spindles; for a string held them ready for the maidens to twirl.

He<sup>a</sup> sailed to Miletus; for the victory fell to Thales,<sup>b</sup> who was a man of clever mind in general and who was said to have mapped out the little stars of the Wain<sup>c</sup> by which the Phoenicians sail. And the prelunar<sup>d</sup> visitor by happy luck found the old man in the temple of Apollo of Didymi<sup>e</sup> scratching the ground with a cane and drawing the figure which Add (according to present Editor) Hymn i. 93. The reading seems to be confirmed by the oracle given to the Milesians: τίς σοφίη πάντων πρῶτος, τοῦτου τρίποδ' αὐδῶ (Diog. Laert. i. 28).

<sup>a</sup> Euphorbus was a Trojan slain by Menelaus (Hom. Il. xvii. 59) of whom Pythagoras of Samos declared himself to be a reincarnation, Diog. Laert. viii. 4 f., Aul. Gell. iv. 11. 14. The mathematical achievements here attributed to Pythagoras are referred to with such brevity that the meaning is exceedingly obscure. The figure which Thales is found drawing appears to be the describing of a circle about a right-angled triangle, which was attributed to Thales or Pythagoras (Diog. Laert. i. 24), in other words the demon-the Phrygian Euphorbus<sup>a</sup> discovered: who first of men drew triangles and scalenes and the seven-length circle and who bade men abstain from eating living things:<sup>b</sup> and his teaching was hearkened to, not by all but by some misguided men.<sup>c</sup>

To him he spake thus: “. . . that cup of solid gold my father enjoined me to give to him who is stration of the theorem that “the angle in a semicircle is a right angle.” The words τρίγωνα καὶ σκαληνά—the καὶ which was suspect in Diog. Laert.’s σκαληνά καὶ τρίγωνα and Diodorus’s τρίγωνα καὶ σκαληνά is now confirmed by the Papyrus—can apparently mean only “triangles and scalene triangles.” Dr. T. G. Smyly of Trinity College, Dublin, suggests that there may be a reference to the theorem that “the sum of the angles of a triangle is two right angles,” which, according to Geminus, was proved first for equilateral, next for isosceles, and lastly for scalene triangles (the most difficult case); or to the theorem that “the square on the hypotenuse of a right-angled triangle is equal to the sum of the squares on the sides.” Such triangles must, if the sides are commensurable, be scalene. Were it not for the context it would be tempting, as Professor E. T. Whittaker suggests, to take the phrase to refer to triangular numbers and scalene numbers, especially in view of the arithmetical bent of Pythagoras; and it is, of course, possible that Callimachus has confused numbers with geometrical figures. What is meant by κύκλος ἑπταμήκης remains an unsolved problem. The interesting suggestion is made by Dr. Smyly that there may be a reference to the distances of the seven planets and the original form of the theory of the “harmony of the spheres” (see Heath, Aristarchus of Samos, p. 107 ff.).

<sup>b</sup> According to some Pythagoras enjoined abstention from all animal food—ἐμψύχων ἀπέχεσθαι Onesicritus ap. Strabon. 716, Porphyry. De abstin. 7 who quotes Eudoxus as saying that he refused even to associate with butchers (μάγειροι) and hunters. According, however, to Aristoxenus he limited his abstinence to the ploughing ox and the ram (Diog. Laert. viii. 20, Aul. Gell. iv. 11).

<sup>1</sup> [κήπι]τάξ is Wilamow.'s suggestion, cf. Ait. i. 1. 9. But the sense κατ' ἐπίταγμα is not very appropriate here. Hesych. s.v. ἐπιζάξ, etc.) in the sense of “finally,” which might be read here. The sense would be very nearly that of εἰσάπαξ, which Hunt suggests.

<sup>2</sup> ἀπήμ[υνε] is very doubtful; ἀπήν[τησε] would be better, but the accusative is then a difficulty.

<sup>6</sup> κ[αθεῖσ]ε was suggested by Wilamowitz. Hunt says λ might be read for κ. Possibly λ[όχευσ]ε.

while been muttering such things, as they sit chattering together: 'Who discovered the laurel? 'Twas the earth that gave her birth, as she gave birth to the ilex, the oak, the galingale, or other shrub. Who discovered the olive? Pallas when she contended with the Dweller among Seaweed for Acte, and the ancient man, a snake in his lower parts, acted as judge.<sup>a</sup> That is one fall against the Laurel. Who of the ever-living ones honours the Olive, who the Laurel? Apollo honours the Laurel, Pallas the Olive which she herself discovered. This bout is even, for I distinguish not between gods.

What is the Laurel's fruit? For what shall I use it? Eat it not nor drink it nor use it to anoint. The Olive's fruit pleases in many ways: inwardly<sup>b</sup> it is a mouthful as they call a snack; with the oil in it, it is the preserved olive which Theseus also enjoyed. - I count this the second fall against the Laurel. Whose is the leaf that suppliant's extend? The Olive's. Three falls against the Laurel!' Oh! the endless babblers, how they chatter! Shameless crow, how does thy lip not ache? 'Whose trunk do the Delians preserve? The Olive's which gave a seat to Leto.'<sup>c</sup>

<sup>b</sup> If ἔσω is right, we should expect ἀν δὲ κτλ. to refer to an external application. Hence Hunt thinks that κο]λυμβ . . . etc. refers to the famous dive of Theseus told in Bacchylid. xvi. and suggests ἐσ[τίν] κολυμβᾶν ἦν ἐπᾶλτο. The reading in the text takes the reference to be to the κολυμβᾶς ἐλάλα which Hecale served to Theseus (see Hecale, fr. 54 with note). The objections are that (1) this reading provides no antithesis to ἔσω, (2) ἐπαύρε would naturally take a genitive. For ἐνθεσιν see Hesych. s.v., Telecleid. and Pherecrat. ap. Athen. vi. 268.

<sup>c</sup> There were three holy trees at Delos, all connected with the birth of Apollo—the palm, the laurel, the olive: cf.

<sup>c</sup> Euhemerus of Messana in Sicily was a friend of Cassander (311–297) at whose request he undertook various journeys to the far south. He wrote a work entitled Ἱερὰ ἀναγραφή in which he pretended to have reached an island Panchaea in the Indian Ocean where he found a temple of Triphylian Zeus in which was a pillar whereon Zeus had recorded the deeds of himself and his predecessors Uranus and Cronus, showing that all three were originally human kings. The “rationalizing” of Euhemerus has given rise to the modern term “Euhemerism.”

Arnold, Empedocles on Aetna, "The Adriatic breaks in a warm bay Among the green Illyrian hills . . . And there, they say, two bright and aged snakes, Who once were Cadmus and Harmonia, Bask in the glens," etc. "If the "stone" is not here="tomb," it must refer to the δύο πέτραι (Dion. Per. 395), λίθοι ([Scylax] 24 f., Geog. Gr. Min. i. p. 31), two rocks in or off Illyria called the rocks of Cadmus and Harmonia. Dion. Per. l.c. clearly distinguishes the tomb (390) from the two rocks (395). Cf. Athen. 462 B, Ovid, M. iv. 563 ff.

<sup>c</sup> The 12th labour of Heracles was to bring from Hades Cerberus whose mother was Echidna. Cerberus had three dog's heads, the tail of a serpent, and on his back all manner of snake heads (Apollodor. ii. 122). Whose guest Heracles became, is a matter of conjecture; possibly the king of Troezen, where he ascended from Hades (Apollodor. ii. 126).

Thus Hesych. s.v. κήξ, ὁ λάρος κατὰ Ἀπίωνα (time of Augustus to Claudius, successor of Theon as head of the Alexandrine School). λέγεται δὲ καὶ καύηξ, τινὲς δὲ καὶ αἴθουαν ἀποδιδόασιν, οἱ δὲ κέπφον, οἱ δὲ διαφέροντα ἀλλήλων. *Schol. <sup>a</sup> According to Bentley τῶν . . . λοφιαί is a paraphrase of λόφουρα, i.e. bushy-tailed. It must be said that in this case αἰεὶ is strange, and λοφιαί, which should refer to the mane or neck, if we must here refer it to the hair of the tail, is awkward, in spite of λόφουρα. It seems at least possible that λοφιαί here means "necks," and that the ms. τετράφαται is right: i.e. "animals whose necks are always bruised," i.e. beasts of burden, έρπετὰ λόφουρα. It is not necessary to give λοφιή the sense of λόφος in λόφουρος, and this rendering gives meaning to αἰεὶ. Bentley supposes <sup>b</sup> The antecedent to εικαλήν might be κριθήν or άλφιτου άκτηήν. What is meant is whole meal unbolted (άσηστος) and "having everything in it" (Athen. 114 E), as opposed to κριθής καθαρώς ήσσημένα πάντα (Athen. 111 F). Probably from the Hecale.

INTRODUCTION

THE PHAENOMENA
OF ARATUS

THE PHENOMENA
OF ARATUS

INTRODUCTION

1. THE LIFE OF ARATUS

Authorities.—Suidas s.v. "Αρατος and four ancient Vitae. (A. Westermann, Biographoi, Brunswick, 1845, p. 52 ff.)

Vita I., first published by Petrus Victorius with other Greek commentaries on Aratus, Florence, 1567; then by Dionysius Petavius in Uranologium, Lutet. Paris. 1630, p. 268 ff.

This life, once supposed to be by Achilles Tatius, author of the romance of Leucippe and Cleitophon (circ. fourth cent. A.D.), is shown by E. Maass, Aratea, Berlin, 1892, p. 16, to be by one Achilles, a grammarian, who lived towards the end of the second or beginning of the third cent. A.D. It is printed in Buhle ii. p. 429 ff.; Maass, Comment. in Arati Reliquias p. 76 ff.

Vita II., first published by Iriarte in Catal. bibl. Matrit. i. p. 201 from cod. Matritensis lxi. written by Constantinus Lascaris in A.D. 1465. This ms., which has also Vita IV., divides Aratus into four books (1) 1-450, (2) 451-732, (3) 733-818, (4) 819-end. Maass suspects that this Life is the work of Sporos of Nicaea (circ. A.D. 200), who commented on Aratus (Leont. Περὶ κατασκευῆς Ἀρατείας σφαιρας ὡς φησι Σπόρος ὁ ὑπομνηματιστής; cf. schol. Arat. 541, 1091). It is printed in Buhle ii. p. 442 ff.; Maass, Comment. in Arat. Reliq. p. 323 f.

Vita III., first ed. by Ruhnken from cod. Baroccianus in Ernesti's edition of Callimachus i. p. 590; then by Iriarte from cod. Matritensis lxvii. in Catal. bibl. Matrit. p. 239. This life is also given in cod. Vindobonensis.

ARATUS

This, which is the best Life, is expressly attributed in cod. Mediolan. C 263 to Theon (Θέωνος Ἀλεξανδρέως γένος Ἀράτου) and Maass has shown that this ascription is correct (Analecta Eratosth. Berlin, 1883, in Kiessling u. Wilamowitz, Philol. Untersuch. vi.). There exists a translation of this in bad Latin (ed. Breysig, Erfurt, 1870) which occasionally fills up gaps in the Greek text. Buhle ii. 444 ff.

Vita IV., first published by Aldus Manutius, and thenceforth the Vita usually prefixed to editions of Aratus (e.g. Buhle, Bekker). It is the most worthless of the Vitae. Maass, Comment. in Arat. Reliq. p. 324 ff.

There is so much similarity between the Vitae that they may be assumed to be all derived ultimately from the same original Life, possibly that of the Stoic Boëthus of Sidon (circ. 150 B.C.) who wrote upon Aratus (Vita II.) in at least four books (Geminus Isag. 14 ὅθεν καὶ Βόηθος ὁ φιλόσοφος ἐν τῷ τετάρτῳ βιβλίῳ τῆς Ἀράτου ἐξηγήσεως κτλ., Cicero, De divin. i. 8. 13 "Atque his rerum praesensionibus Prognostica tua referta sunt. Quis igitur elicere causas praesensionum potest? Etsi video Boëthum Stoicum esse conatum, qui hactenus aliquid egit, ut earum rationem rerum explicaret, quae in mari caelove fierent." Cf. schol. Arat. 1091).

Aratus of Soli in Cilicia—as distinct from Soli in Cyprus—was the son of Athenodorus and Letophila (Lenodora, Vita IV.). His family was one of some distinction in war and in other fields (Vita II.). He was an older contemporary of Callimachus (Vita I. μέμνηται γοῦν αὐτοῦ καὶ Καλλίμαχος ὡς πρεσβυτέρου οὐ μόνον ἐν τοῖς ἐπιγράμμασιν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τοῖς πρὸς Πραξιφάνην, πάνυ ἐπαινῶν αὐτὸν ὡς πολυμαθῆ καὶ ἀριστον ποιητὴν; the relation is reversed in Vita IV. γηραιῷ δὲ τῷ Κυρηναίῳ ἐπεβάλετο, παρ' οὗ καὶ ἐπιγράμματος ἠξιώθη), and his birth may be put about 315 B.C.

He was a pupil (ἀκουστής), Suidas says, of the grammarian Menecrates of Ephesus and of the philosophers Timon and Menedemus.

Menecrates was author of an Ἔργα or poem on agriculture, apparently in the manner of Hesiod (E. M. s.v. ἡθμός. Cf. Varro, R. R. i. 1. 9 "easdem res etiam quidam versibus, ut Hesiodus Ascræus, Menecrates Ephesius," and iii. 16. 18; Pliny N. H. Ind. viii. and xi. ; and xi. § 17). From Varro, R. R. iii. 16. 18 and the last two references in Pliny it appears that he was an authority upon bees and the flowers on which they fed (schol. Nicand. Alex. 172). It appears from schol. Eurip. Rhes. 529 that he also wrote on astronomy (Diels, Poet. Philos. Fr. p. 171). We may fairly assume that it was at Ephesus and in his earliest years that Aratus was his pupil.

INTRODUCTION

Timon of Phlius (Life by Diog. Laert. ix. 12), sceptic, philosopher, and sillographist, lived circ. 320—circ. 230 B.C. Accidentally making the acquaintance of Pyrrho, he went to Elis and became his disciple. Afterwards he made his living as a peripatetic teacher in the towns about the Hellespont and Propontis, and finally settled in Athens—some time after 276—where he spent the rest of his life, with the exception of a short sojourn in Thebes.

Two statements in Diog. Laert. l.c. are of interest for Aratus: (a) § 110 ἐγνώσθη (sc. Τιμων) δὲ καὶ Ἀντιγόνη τῷ βασιλεῖ καὶ Πτολεμαίῳ τῷ Φιλαδέλφῳ, ὡς αὐτὸς ἐν τοῖς ἰάμβοις αὐτοῦ μαρτυρεῖ. (b) § 113 φασὶ δὲ καὶ Ἀρατον πυνθέσθαι αὐτοῦ πῶς τὴν Ὀμήρου ποιήσιν ἀσφαλῶς κτήσαιοτο; τὸν δὲ εἰπεῖν, Εἰ τοῖς ἀρχαίοις ἀντιγράφοις ἐντυγχάνοι καὶ μὴ τοῖς ἤδη διωρθωμένοις.

It would not be relevant to discuss here the question whether Timon personally visited the court of Philadelphus, though some colour is given to that view by the jesting reference by Timon to the Museum which is preserved in Athen. i. 22 D. That Timon visited the Macedonian Court is more generally accepted, in which case the conversation between Timon and Aratus will have taken place there circ. 276 B.C., the rash emendation, against which Aratus is warned, referring to the recent edition of Zenodotus.

The third teacher of Aratus mentioned by Suidas is Menedemus of Eretria (Life by Diog. Laert. ii. 18), founder of the Eretrian School of philosophy, who died some time not long after 278, at the age of seventy-four (Diog. Laert. l.c. 18). Diog. Laert. l.c. 10 says: ἠσπάζετο (sc. Μενέδημος) δὲ καὶ Ἄρατον καὶ Λυκόφρονα τὸν τῆς τραγῳδίας ποιητὴν καὶ τὸν Ῥόδιον Ἀναγόραν. This would seem clearly to belong to the time when Aratus was studying in Athens, to which period also would belong his acquaintance with Callimachus, with the stoic philosopher Persaeus (Vita IV. probably wrongly says Persaeus was his teacher), with Praxiphanes the Peripatetic (Susemihl i. 144 ff. who puts his association with Aratus and Callimachus circ. 291-287).

The VIIIth Idyll of Theocritus, the scene of which is laid in Cos, introduces an Aratus (98 ff.) as one apparently of the group of poets whose central figure was Philetas of Cos. It has been very generally assumed that this Aratus to whom Theocritus also addresses Idyll VI. is the author of the Phaenomena (so too the schol.). Against the identification it is pointed out (1) that the name Aratus was a common one in Cos, occurring on coins<sup>a</sup> and in inscriptions<sup>b</sup> of this period. (2) That in Theocritus Ἄρατος has the first syllable short, whereas Ἄρατος of the Phaenomena has always in Greek the first syllable long.

Of those who accept the identification some put the Coan sojourn of Aratus before his residence in Athens (Susemihl i. 286), others put it after (Croiset v. 225).

At some date, probably circ. 291, Aratus came to Athens where he made the acquaintance of his somewhat younger contemporary Callimachus, and with him apparently attended the lectures of the peripatetic philosopher Praxiphanes, but afterwards attached himself to Zeno of Citium, founder of the Stoic School of philosophy.

At this time too he made the acquaintance, as we have seen, of Menedemus. Zeno was on friendly terms with Antigonus Gonatas who may have become acquainted with Aratus in Athens. It is likely then that it was at the request of Antigonus himself that Aratus went to the Macedonian court along with his fellow students Persaeus and Philonides soon after Antigonus became king of all Macedonia in 276 B.C. It has been suggested that the occasion was the marriage of Antigonus with Phila, daughter of Seleucus and Stratonice, and it was then probably that Aratus produced his Hymn to Pan in honour of Antigonus' victory over the Celts at Lysimacheia in 277 B.C., allusion being made to the panic fear which had seized the enemy in that battle.

The Macedonian court was then the home of an active literary circle.

Here Aratus wrote at the instigation of Antigonus his Phaenomena, following the prose work of Eudoxus which bore the same name (Vita III. τῶν Εὐδόξου Φαινομένων) or was (Vita I.) entitled Κάτοπτρον.<sup>a</sup> This must have been between 276-274, because in the latter year this literary circle was broken up by the invasion of Pyrrhus, and it was not till 272 that Antigonus was restored.

The legend that Aratus and Nicander of Colophon were contemporaries and that at the request of Antigonus Aratus wrote the Phaenomena, though he had no astronomical attainments while he knew about medicine: that Nicander, on the other hand, who knew astronomy, wrote by request of Antigonus the Theriaca and Alexipharmaca, is ridiculed on chronological grounds by Vita I. and Vita IV. It is alluded to by Cicero, De oratore i. 69, cf. G. Knaack in Hermes xxiii. (1888), p. 313.

Upon the invasion of Pyrrhus, Aratus went to the Court of Antiochus I. (Soter), son of Seleucus, where he lived for some time and where he completed an edition of the Odyssey of Homer. It appears that Antiochus wished him to edit the Iliad as well, but this apparently he did not do. Subsequently Aratus returned to the court of Antigonus at Pella, where he died at some date previous to the death of Antigonus (who died 240-239 B.C.).

A monument was erected to him at Soli and his portrait appears on coins of that town.<sup>b</sup>

2. THE MSS.

1. The two oldest mss. of the Phaenomena are :

M = Marcianus 476, containing Aratus (no life or title) with scholia and prefaces, and Lycophron with scholia. This ms. was written for his own use by Nicetas diaconus whom Maass identifies with the distinguished Bishop of Serrhai (Seres) in the eleventh century. It belonged to the library of Cardinal Bessarion and contains some annotations by him. Maass distinguishes a second hand (about thirteenth cent.) and a third, and lastly Bessarion himself (fifteenth cent.). This is both the oldest and best ms. of Aratus and represents, in all probability, the recension of Theon of Alexandria (fourth cent. A.D.) father of Hypatia and the last known member of the Alexandrian Museum, a distinguished philosopher and mathematician, author of commentaries on Aratus, Euclid, and Ptolemy. Theon's choice of readings was influenced by his apologetic tendency in favour of Aratus which led him to adopt the conjectures of Attalus of Rhodes and possibly to make conjectures of his own with a similar purpose. Some variants noted by Nicetas from another ms. may, as Maass thinks, represent the text of Sporus.

V = Vaticanus 1307 (no life, title 'Αράτου Φαινόμενα supplied by a later hand), containing Lycophron with scholl. and Aratus with scholl. The similarity of writing shows that this ms. was written about the same date as M. The two mss. agree closely even in minutiae. Bekker believed V to be the older of the two, but Maass, from a comparison of the scholia and on the ground that V is in general more corrupt than M, decides in favour of M and holds that V is derived either from M or from the archetype of M.

2. Later mss. These, dating from the thirteenth to the fifteenth century, are of two classes.

(a) Interpolated mss., i.e. containing the interpolated lines of Maximus Planudes, a monk of Constantinople (fourteenth cent.). His interpolations, intended to bring Aratus into conformity with the Almagest or Megale

INTRODUCTION

Syntaxis of Claudius Ptolemaeus (2nd cent. A.D.), consist of 16 lines to follow Phaen. v. 480, 10 lines to follow v. 501, 14 lines to follow v. 514 (printed in Bekker's edition Berlin 1828).

These are: Barberinus i. 43, saec. xv.; Bodleianus inter Baroccianos 78, saec. xv.; Bodleianus inter Baroccianos 109, saec. xv.; Laurentianus xxviii. 37, written at Florence in 1464 by Joannes Scutariotes and once belonging to Angelo Poliziano, the famous humanist (1454-1494); Vindobonensis 127 (Lambecius) 341 (Nessel). v. Buhle ii. p. 377, Groddeck, Epist. Crit. in Arati Phaen., etc. The Planudean recension is of no independent value.

(b) Non-interpolated mss.—Maass mentions (1) with scholia: Casanatensis G V 5, saec. xiv.; Vaticanus, 1910, s. xiii. vel xiv.; Vaticanus, 1692, s. xiii. vel xiv.; Vaticanus 121, s. xv.; Vaticanus 199, s. xv.; Marcianus 480, s. xv.; Ambrosianus C 32, sup. s. xv.; Ambrosianus H 42, sup. s. xv.; Parisinus 2841, s. xiii.; Parisinus 2726, s. xv.; Parisinus 2403, s. xiii. vel xiv.; Parisinus 2842; written 1475; Butlerianus Brit. Mus. Add. mss. 11886, s. xv. vel xvi.; Burneianus Brit. Mus. 63, s. xv.; Mosquensis (scholia printed in Buhle i. p. 269 ff.).

(2) Without scholia: Laurentianus xxxi. 32, s. xv.; Palatinus (inter Vaticanos) 137, s. xv.; Neapolitanus bibl. nat. ii. F 37, s. xv.; Marcianus 465, s. xv.; Marcianus 317, s. xv.; Parisinus 2728, s. xv.; Parisinus 2860, s. xv.; Parisinus 2843, s. xv.; Palatinus 40, s. xiv.; Rhedigeranus 35, s. xv.

Some of these have an independent value. Maass selects for his apparatus criticus two which he holds are not derived from M or V, though, like these, they derive from the recension of Theon; Parisinus 2403 (A) and Parisinus 2728 (C).

It is to be added that vv. 1-9, 10-12, 778-817, 822-891 of the Phaenomena are preserved in the Eclogae of Joannes Stobaeus (sixth century).

ARATUS

3. THE SCHOLIA

The Scholia imply in general the same text as the Marcianus. Mainly, no doubt, they are founded on the commentary of Theon, but they contain also notes from the commentary of Sporos (schol. Arat. 541, 1091) and others.

4. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Editio princeps. — Aldine, Venice, October 1499 (in Astronomi veteres, with scholl. and Latin version, along with the Aratea of Cicero, Germanicus, and Avienus; the Astronomica of Firmicus and Manilius; Procli diadochi Sphaera with version by T. Linacre).

This was followed by a close succession of editions of Aratus either separately or along with kindred works (detailed account in edn. of J. T. Buhle i. xv. ff.); Gr. and Lat. with preface by Phil. Melanchthon, Wittenberg, 1521; another (?) Basel, 1523; Ceporinus, Basel, 1534; I. Mycillus, Basel, 1535; in Sphaera atque astrorum coelestium ratio, natura et motus, Basel, 1536; with Cicero's Aratea supplemented from Vergil, Germanicus, and Avienus, Joachim Perionius, Paris, 1540 (rep. Basel, 1540); c. scholl., Ceporini, Cologne, 1543; ap. Henr. Petri, Basel, 1547; ap. Guil. Morelium, Paris, 1559, 1595; Arati Phaen. Latinis versibus reddita a Nicolao Aleno, Essexiano Anglo, Paris, 1561; H. Stephanus (in Poet. Graec. principes heroici carminis), Paris, 1566 (a new recension of the text, which became the vulgate).

In 1567 appeared the editio princeps of the Greek commentators on Aratus (Hipparchus and Achilles [Tatius] with the scholl. and Life of Aratus), by Petrus Victorius, Florentiae, In offic. Juntarum, Bernardi filiorum.

In 1600 Hügeianus Grotius (Huig van Groot, 1583–1645) published his Syntagma Arateorum, Opus Antiquitatis et Astronomiae studiosis utilissimum, Ex Offic. Plantiniana, ap. Christoph. Raphelengium, Acad. Lugd. Batav. Typogr. In the epist. dedicatory, dated from The Hague VII. Cal. August. M.D., he refers with pardonable pride to his youth. The Syntagma contains Aratus, Cicero's

INTRODUCTION

Aratea with the lacunae supplied in the same metre by Grotius, the Aratea of Germanicus, for which he used a ms. from the library of Jacobus Susius (Suys) of Grysenoordt; plates of the constellations from that ms.; notes on Aratus, Cicero, and Germanicus; and Avienus with short marginal notes. Grotius' references to mss. are very vague—"manuscriptus," "alii codices," etc.; Buhle says he used codex Palatinus—presumably Palatinus 40.

Aratus was included in the Poet. Gr. veteres carminis her. scriptores of Jacob. Lectius, Aureliae Allobrogum 1606; also in a collection of (mainly) astronomical works, Lyons, 1608. Other edd. are E. Schedius, Gustrou, 1631; John Fell, afterwards Bishop of Oxford, Oxford, 1672 (text mainly founded on Morel); A. M. Bandini, Florence, 1765 (with Italian verse trans. by A. M. Salvini). Buhle's judgement of Bandini is worth quoting: "In Arati editione textum Grotianum cum omnibus vitiis et mendis repetiit, ut adeo labores, de quibus conqueritur, non nisi mendaciis fingendis, quibus Florentinae ecclesiae Subdecano imponeret, contineantur. . . . Qui tandem factum est, ut putidissimus homo celeberrimae Italiae bibliothecae praeficeretur?"

The first volume of the edition of Io. Theophilus Buhle appeared at Leipzig (Weidmann) in 1793 (the preface is dated Göttingen, 21st Feb. 1793). The mss. on which he relies are Barberinps, Rhedigeranus, Mosquensis, and the Augustanus Eclogarum Stobaei for the lines quoted by the latter from Aratus. Vol. i. contains Life of Aratus (iv.); Hypothesis; the Phaen. and Diosem. with Latin prose version facing the text and the scholia vulgata at the foot of the page; Leontius De Sphaer. Aratea; "scholia Theonis" from cod. Mosquensis; and lastly critical animadversions. Vol. ii. (same place and publisher) appeared in 1801 and contains the Aratea of Cicero, Germanicus (with scholl.), Avienus; notes on these; ep. crit. of G. E. Groddeck. Lives of Aratus I., II., III. and the notice in Suidas; with an essay on the life and writings of Aratus and his Latin interpreters.

ARATUS

Editions subsequent to Buhle are : F. C. Matthiä, Frankfort-on-Main, 1817 ; J. H. Voss (with German verse trans.), Heidelberg, 1824 ; Phil. Buttmann (critical notes), Berlin 1826 (founded on codd. Mosq., Vratislav. Barberin. Vindob, Palatin. and Bekker's collations of mss. in France and Italy) ; I. Bekker, Berlin, 1828 (with scholl.). Bekker's text is founded on Paris. Reg. 2403, Paris. Reg. 2726, Paris. Reg. 2728, Paris. Reg. 2841, Paris. Reg. 2842, Paris. Reg. 2843, Paris. Reg. 2860, Vaticanus 1307, Vaticanus 1910, Casanatensis O. Finally E. Maass, Berlin, 1893 : the standard critical edition.

Translations.—Besides those mentioned above, there are translations in French by Halma, Paris, 1823 ; in English by John Lamb, D.D., Master of Corp. Christ. Coll. Camb., London, 1848 (rhymed verse) ; by E. Poste, London, 1880.

Recent literature on Aratus includes : E. Maass, Aratea, Berlin, 1892, and Commentariorum in Aratum Reliquiae, Berlin, 1898 ; E. Bethe, Aratillustrationen, 1893<sup>a</sup> ; G. ## INTRODUCTION TO THE PHAENOMENA

I.

EUDOXUS of Cnidus, on whose prose work Aratus based his poem, lived circa 390–337 B.C. He was a pupil of Plato and a very distinguished mathematician. Proclus attributes to him the Fifth Book of Euclid's Elements, and among other achievements he is said to have solved the so-called "Delian problem"<sup>a</sup> and to have determined the volume of the pyramid and the cone by the method of exhaustion. According to Hipparchus i. 2. 2, "two books on the phenomena [i.e. the starry sphere] are attributed to Eudoxus, which, with very few exceptions, are in almost all points concordant. One of his books is entitled Enoptron, the other Phaenomena; it is on the latter that Aratus bases his poem."

Hipparchus, whose three books of commentary "on the Phaenomena of Aratus and Eudoxus" we possess, belonged to Nicaea in Bithynia and lived circa 190–120 B.C. His most famous achievement is his discovery of the Precession of the Equinoxes.

The poem of Aratus found many commentators, the most careful of whom, in the opinion of Hipparchus, was Attalus of Rhodes: ἐξήγησιν μὲν οὖν τῶν Ἀράτου Φαινομένων καὶ ἄλλοι πλείονες συντετάχασιν· ἐπιμελέστατα δὲ δοκεῖ πάντων Ἀτταλὸς ὁ καθ' ἡμᾶς μαθηματικὸς τὸν περὶ αὐτῶν πεποιήσθαι λόγον (Hipp. i. 1. 3). Besides the commentary of Hipparchus we possess the Introduction of Geminus of Rhodes (first century B.C.), that of Achilles (circa A.D. 200), and lastly, the work of Leontius (circa A.D. 600 (?)) περὶ κατασκευῆς Ἀρατελοῦ σφαίρας.

II.

Out of many the following testimonia may be quoted. Hipparchus i. 1. 7 ἡ γὰρ τῶν ποιημάτων χάρις ἀξιοπιστίαν τινα τοῖς λεγομένοις περιτίθησιν [cf. Pind. O. i. 30]. καὶ πάντες σχεδὸν οἱ τὸν ποιητὴν τοῦτον ἐξηγούμενοι προστίθενται τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ λεγομένοις.

Dionysius Thrax (Vita III. p. 59 W.): συναγορεύει δὲ αὐτῷ [i.e. Hipparchus] καὶ Διονύσιος ἐν τῷ “περὶ συγκρίσεως Ἀράτου καὶ Ὀμήρου” περὶ τῶν μαθηματικῶν, ὅσπερ γέ φησιν· “οὐ τίθεμεν αὐτὸν ἱατρὸν εἶναι γράψαντα τὰς ἱατρικὰς δυνάμεις, οὐδὲ μαθηματικὸν θήσομεν οὐδὲν ξένον εἰπόντα τῶν Εὐδόξου.”

Leontius (Buhle i. 257 f.): ἰστέον δὲ ὅτι τὰ περὶ τῶν ἄστρον τῷ Ἀράτῳ εἰρημένα οὐ πάνυ καλῶς εἴρηται, ὡς ἔστιν ἐκ τε τῶν Ἰππάρχῳ καὶ Πτολεμαίῳ συντεταγμένων περὶ τούτων μαθεῖν. αἴτιον δὲ πρῶτον μὲν, ἐπεὶ καὶ τὰ Εὐδόξου, οἷς μάλιστα ἠκολούθησεν ὁ Ἄρατος, οὐ λαν ὀρθῶς εἴληπται, ἐπειτα δὲ ὅτι καὶ οὐ πρὸς τὸ ἀκριβές, ὡς φησι Σπύρος ὁ ὑπομνηματιστής [commentator], ἀλλὰ τὸ χρήσιμον τοῖς ναυτιλλομένοις ταῦτα οὕτω διαγέγραπται.

Cicero, De re publ. 14: “Dicebat enim Gallus sphaerae illius alterius solidae atque plenae vetus esse inventum, et eam a Thalete Milesio primum esse tornatam, post autem ab Eudoxo Cnidio . . . eandem illam astris stellisque quae caelo inhaerent esse descriptam; cuius omnem ornatum et descriptionem sumptam ab Eudoxo multis annis post non astrologiae [i.e. astronomy], sed poetica quadam facultate versibus Aratum extulisse.”

Cicero, De orat. i. 15: “si constat inter doctos hominem ignarum astrologiae ornatissimis atque optimis versibus Aratum de caelo stellisque dixisse.”

Theon, i.e. Vita III. p. 59 W.: ὅθεν τινὲς . . . ἔδοξαν μὴ μαθηματικὸν εἶναι τὸν Ἄρατον· ὑπέλαβον γὰρ μηδὲν ἕτερον τῶν Εὐδόξου Φαινομένων ποιήσαντα αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ σύγγραμμα θεῖναι . . . βιάζονται δ' οὐ μετρῶς· ἦν γὰρ καὶ τὸ εἰδέναι μεταφράσαι ἐμπειρίας μαθηματικῆς· εὐρήσομεν δὲ αὐτὸν καὶ ἐπιμελέστερον τὰ πλείστα τοῦ Εὐδόξου ἐπιστάμενον.

III.

Among Roman writers Aratus attracted much attention and his influence upon Lucretius and Vergil need only be mentioned. His poem was translated by Cicero in his early youth (“admodum adolescentulus,” De nat. d. ii. 41 ; cf. Ad Attic. ii. 1. 11 (June 60 B.C.) “prognostica mea cum oratiunculis propediem expecta” ; as Cicero was then forty-six years of age, this would seem to imply that at first he had translated only the Phaenomena so-called, i.e. 1-732).

ARATUS

Of his translation we possess some 670 lines. Some part at least of the poem was translated by P. Terentius Varro (82-37 B.C.), surnamed Atacinus from the river Atax in his native Gallia Narbonensis, who "nomen est adsecutus interpres operis alieni," Quintil. Inst. x. 1. 87 (he translated also the Argonautica of Apoll. Rhod.). Some fragments are preserved by Servius on Verg. G. i. 375, 397. We have also some 857 lines of the translation of Germanicus Caesar (15 B.C.-A.D. 19), the nephew of Tiberius. We possess further the paraphrase in 1878 lines by Rufus Festus Avienus (proconsul of Africa A.D. 366). The Astronomica of Manilius (under Tiberius) also owes much to Aratus.

IV.

After the Prooemium (1-8) Aratus mentions the Axis of the stellar sphere terminating in the North and South Poles (21-26). He now proceeds to enumerate the constellations.

A. 26-318

The Northern constellations, i.e. those North of the Zodiac but including the zodiacal signs themselves. His method is to start with the Bears and to work Southward to the Zodiac, then return to the Bears and again work South to the Zodiac, proceeding round the Pole from East to West. Thus 1 and 2. The Bears, Ursa Minor and Ursa Major, also known as The Wains. The modern derivation of ἄμυξα is ἄμυα + ἄξων, and something of the sort seems to be alluded to by Aratus in v. 27. 3. Draco. Hipparchus i. 4. 2 ff. objects that the leading stars in Ursa Minor are nearly parallel with the tail of Draco, so that it is incorrect to say with Eudoxus and Aratus that Ursa Minor is in the coil of Draco; incorrect, too, to say with Aratus 47 that the Bears are on either side of the coil, when they are really on either side of his tail. More interesting is the remark of Hipparchus i. 4. 4 ff. that Aratus should have said not right temple, but left temple. He adds an important remark: "To say, as Attalus does, that Aratus conceives the head of Draco to be turned the other way and not turned towards the inside of the sphere, is quite unpalusible. For all the constellations are formed with reference to our point of view and turned towards us, except when one of them is in profile (κατάγραφον). This is made clear by Aratus repeatedly; for whenever he mentions the right or left portion of a constellation, his statement agrees with this assumption." Hipparchus seems to imply that Draco is not conceived in profile (as he usually is in star-maps) and he holds that not the right temple but the left ( $\gamma$  Draconis) is in a straight line with the tongue of Draco and the end of the tail of the Great Bear. It may be noted that German. 53 and Avien. 162 follow Aratus in saying right temple.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PHAENOMENA

☞ 4. Engonasin, the Phantom on his knees, who, according to the later interpretation, represents Hercules at the moment when he slew the Dragon which guarded the apples of the Hesperides. Hipparchus i. 4. 9 points out that Eudoxus and Aratus are guilty of an oversight in saying that Engonasin has his right foot on the head of Draco (69 f.), whereas it should be his left. Attalus attempted to exculpate Aratus by reading μέσσου δ' ἐφύπερθε καρήνου δεξιτεροῦ, i.e. on the middle of the right side of Draco's head—which Attalus imagines to be turned away from us (ἔξω τοῦ κόσμου). But it is shown by Hipparchus that this assumption (see above) is contrary to the practice of Aratus. Moreover it is more an oversight (παράγραμμα) than an error (ἀμάρτημα) on the part of Aratus, as is shown by his other references to Engonasin 270 ff., 612 ff., 591 ff. Hipparchus is here clearly right. Heracles has his club in his right hand: the advanced knee must therefore be the left. So he is described in [Eratosth.] Catast. 4 and Hyginus, Astr. s.v. Engonasin, German. 68; but Avienus 192 follows Aratus in saying right foot. It is to be said, further, that the confusion of right and left is not only extremely natural but is also as a matter of fact extremely common in ancient accounts of the constellations. Moreover, many mss. of Germanicus actually represent Engonasin as Hercules with the lion's skin over his right arm, his club in his left, the left leg bent to the ground, the right advanced. (Boll, Sphaera, p. 102.)

5. The (Northern) Crown, Corona Borealis, said to be the crown of Ariadne, daughter of Minos, set among the stars by Dionysus: "Ariadneae caelestia dona Coronae," Manil. v. 21; "Coronam Gnosida," Ovid, F. iii. 459.

6. Ophiuchus, Serpentarius, Anguitenens, the figure of a man holding in his hands a serpent (Anguis, Serpens). He was sometimes identified with Asclepius; [Eratosth.], Cat. i. 6.

7. Scorpio, the Eighth Sign of the Zodiac.

8. The Claws of Scorpio, the Seventh Sign of the Zodiac; also known as Ζυγός, Libra, the Balance, the sign which the Sun enters at the Autumnal Equinox.

9. Arctophylax or Boötes with his brightest star Arcturus.

10. Virgo, the Maiden, the Sixth Sign of the Zodiac, identified with Dikē (Justice) or Astraea. In token of rustic simplicity she carries in her hand a corn-ear—represented by the bright star Spica ( $\alpha$  Virginis). Usually this is said to be carried in her left hand [Eratosth.] Cat. i. 9; German. 95. Protrygeter, Vindemitor, a star on the right wing of Virgo; [Eratosth.] l.c., Hygin. s.v. Virgo. This line 138 is given by ACM, but it is not translated by German. 141 nor Avien. 353. The schol. on 137 mentions protrygeter, but it is not clear whether he read it.

11. Gemini, the Twins, Castor and Pollux, Third Sign of the Zodiac.

12. Cancer, the Crab, Fourth Sign of the Zodiac.

13. Leo, the Lion, Fifth Sign of the Zodiac.

14. Auriga, the Charioteer, including the Goat, Capella ( $\alpha$  Aurigae) and the Kids, Haedi ( $\eta$ ,  $\xi$  Aurigae).

15. Taurus, the Bull, the Second Sign of the Zodiac, including the Hyades.

16. Cepheus. 17. Cassiopeia. 18. Andromeda. 19. Equus, Pegasus.

20. Aries, the Ram, First Sign of the Zodiac. 21.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PHAENOMENA

Deltoton (i.e.  $\Delta$ -shaped) or Trigonon, Triangulum. 22. Pisces, the Fishes, Twelfth sign of the Zodiac. 23. Perseus. 24. Pleiades in the constellation of Taurus, here treated separately on account of their importance as seasonal signs. 25. Lyra, the Lyre.

26. The Bird, the Swan (opp. to Iovis ales = Aquila, Manil. i. 350).

27. Aquarius, the Water-Carrier, Eleventh Sign of the Zodiac.

28. Capricorn, the Goat, Tenth Sign of the Zodiac.

29. Sagittarius, the Archer, Ninth Sign of the Zodiac.

30. Sagitta, the Arrow. 31. Aquila, the Eagle. 32. Delphinus, the Dolphin.

This ends the Northern constellations: Haec sunt Aquilonia signa (Manil. i. 379).

B

CONSTELLATIONS SOUTH OF THE ECLIPTIC

1. Orion. 2. Canis Major, the Dog, including Sirius (a Canis Majoris). 3. Lepus, the Hare. 4. Argo. 5. Cetus, the Whale. 6. Eridanus, the River. 7. Piscis Australis, the Southern Fish. 8. Hydor, Water. 9. Ara, the Altar. 10. Centaurus, the Centaur, often confused with the other Centaur, Sagittarius. 11. Therium, Bestia, the Wolf. 12. Hydra. 13. Crater, the Cup. 14. Corvus, the Raven. 15. Procyon.

This ends the Fixed Stars.

C

Next Aratus refers to the Five Planets which he declines to discuss. He does not name them but he means, of course, Saturn or Cronus, Jupiter or Zeus, Mars or Ares, Venus or Aphrodite, Mercury or Hermes.

D

Aratus next describes the Circles of the Celestial Sphere (454-461).

1. Gala, the Galaxy or Milky Way, a Great Circle of the Celestial Sphere.

2. The Tropic of Cancer, an imaginary circle  $23\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$  North of the Equator, marking the extreme Northern limit of the Sun's annual path.

3. The Tropic of Capricorn, an imaginary circle  $23\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$  South of the Equator, marking the extreme Southern limit of the Sun's annual path.

4. The Equator, a Great Circle of the Celestial Sphere, its plane being perpendicular to the axis of the Celestial Sphere. It is called ισημερινὸς κύκλος, or the Equinoctial, because when the Ecliptic or annual path of the Sun cuts it (1) when the Sun enters Aries (circa March 21), and again (2) when the Sun enters Libra (circa September 23), day and night are equal all over the globe.

5. The Zodiac, used sometimes generally in the sense of the Ecliptic, a Great Circle of the Celestial Sphere, representing the apparent annual path of the Sun among the stars. The plane of the Ecliptic is inclined to the plane of the Equator at an angle of (roughly)  $23\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ . This so-called "obliquity of the Ecliptic" is what causes variation in the length of day and night at different seasons and in different latitudes. When the Zodiac is used more strictly, it means the belt of sky extending some 6 to 12 degrees on either side of the Ecliptic and comprehending the so-called zodiacal signs or constellations. In the Ecliptic lie the apparent paths of the Sun, Moon, and chief planets, and it gets its name from the fact that the Moon must be in or near the plane of the Ecliptic when an eclipse takes place.

E. 559-732

Aratus next deals with the συνανατολαί and ἀντικαταδύσεις of the constellations, i.e. what stars rise with a given zodiacal sign or set when the zodiacal sign is rising. The order in which he enumerates the signs of the Zodiac is from the Summer Solstice onward : Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces, Aries, Taurus, Gemini.

376

INTRODUCTION TO THE PHAENOMENA

Since in modern editions of the Classics statements about the rising and setting of stars are notoriously untrustworthy, it seems desirable to explain what exactly is meant by the rising and setting of a star. The early Greek writers on the matter distinguish the real or imperceptible rising and setting from the apparent or perceptible rising and setting. We thus have : (A) Real Risings and Settings. (1) The true Cosmical Rising, i.e. Star and Sun rise together (the star, though above the horizon, being invisible on account of its proximity to the Sun). (2) The true Cosmical Setting, i.e. the Star sets as the Sun rises (the star again being invisible because before it actually reaches the W. horizon it is obscured by the light of the rising Sun). (3) The true Acronychal Rising, i.e. the Star rises as the Sun sets (again the star is invisible as it emerges from the E. horizon because the light of the departed Sun still illuminates the sky). (4) The true Acronychal Setting, i.e. Star and Sun set together (the Star being therefore invisible).

But corresponding to these we have : (B) The Perceptible Risings and Settings which are of more practical importance. And these are : (1) The Heliacal rising, i.e. the first visible appearance of a star on the E. horizon before sunrise. The star is just sufficiently in advance of the Sun to be visible for a moment. (2) The Heliacal Setting, i.e. the last visible setting of a star in the evening (next night it will have reached the West while there is still too much light for it to be seen). (3) The (apparent) Acronychal Rising, i.e. the last visible rising of a star in the evening (next night it will have risen while there is still too much light for its emergence above the E. horizon to be seen). (4) The (apparent) Cosmical Setting, i.e. the first visible setting of a star in the morning (the previous night it does not quite succeed in reaching the West before sunrise ; every morning thereafter the interval between its setting and sunrise increases).

ARATUS

The Rising of a Star normally means its Heliacal Rising; the Setting of a Star its Cosmical Setting.

Hipparchus ii. 1. 1 ff. remarks that Aratus in treating the signs of the Zodiac is concerned with the actual constellations, not with the ideal divisions of the Zodiac, and is therefore bound to be relatively inaccurate, since those constellations are sometimes less, sometimes larger than the twelfth part (δωδεκατημόριον) which they are supposed to occupy. Some of them, moreover, do not lie wholly in the Zodiac but considerably North of it, e.g. Leo and the more northerly of the two Fishes. He notes further (ii. 1. 15) that Aratus in his division of the Zodiac begins with the solstitial and equinoctial points, and so makes those points the beginnings of the signs, while Eudoxus makes those points the middle of the signs, the solstices occurring in the middle of Cancer and Capricorn, the equinoxes in the middle of Aries and Libra.

F

The Weather Signs, it is now generally agreed, are an integral part of the poem. The separate title given by some grammarians to this part of the poem is Διοσημῖαι or Διοσημείαι, not Διοσημεία. For διοσημία in the sense of some significant phenomenon of the weather cf. Aristoph. Ach. 170 f. λέγω δ' ὑμῖν ὅτι | διοσημία 'στὶ καὶ ῥανὶς βέβληκέ με, Plut. Mor. 419 E σύγχυσιν μεγάλην περὶ τὸν ἀέρα καὶ διοσημίας πολλὰς γενέσθαι, Poll. viii. 124 ἀνίστατο δὲ τὰ δικαστήρια εἰ γένοιτο διοσημία · ἐξηγηταὶ δὲ ἐκαλοῦντο οἱ τὰ περὶ τῶν διοσημιῶν καὶ τὰ τῶν ἄλλων ἱερῶν διδάσκοντες. Cf. Suid. s.v. διοσημία and Diodor. v. 40, speaking of the Etruscans: γράμματα δὲ καὶ φυσιολογίαν καὶ θεολογίαν ἐξεπόνθησαν ἐπὶ πλέον, καὶ τὰ περὶ τὴν κεραυνοσκοπίαν μάλιστα πάντων ἀνθρώπων ἐξεργάσαντο · διὸ καὶ μέχρι τῶν νῦν χρόνων οἱ τῆς οἰκουμένης σχεδὸν ὅλης ἡγούμενοι θαυμάζουσι τε τοὺς ἄνδρας καὶ κατὰ τὰς ἐν τοῖς κεραυνοῖς διοσημίας τοῦτοις ἐξηγηταῖς χρῶνται.

A vexed question is the relation of the Weather Signs to the little work Περὶ σημείων which passes under the name of Theophrastus. On the one hand Maass (Introd. 378 to his edition, p. xxv) thinks that both are based upon an original written in Ionic. On the other hand Kaibel ("Aratea" in Hermes xxix. (1894)) is of opinion that the Περὶ σημεῶν was written after the publication of the poem of Aratus and that the work shows indications of disarrangement due to subsequent additions from Aratus and other sources. As these additions agree in style and language with the rest of the work Kaibel holds that they were made by the author himself.

The details of the Metonic Cycle referred to in 752 ff. cannot be discussed here, but a few words must be said. The problem is to find a cycle which will contain a whole number of solar years and at the same time a whole number of synodical months. Meton found that 235 lunations amount practically to nineteen solar years. He therefore made a Cycle of 6940 days, made up of nineteen years with seven intercalated months. The chief relevant texts are Theophr. Περὶ σημ. 4, Diod. xii. 36, Geminus 37 D (Petav.). The words of Aratus 754 ff. have been the subject of much controversy. They appear to refer to the Metonic Calendar as distinguished from the Metonic Cycle. In his Parapegma<sup>a</sup> or Calendar the first phenomenon seems to have been the rise of Orion's Belt, then the rest of Orion, up to his foot; then Sirius; and all the other stars, whether governing terrestrial things mainly (the stars of Zeus) or mainly nautical affairs (the stars of Poseidon). But Ideler i. 327 thinks the reference is to the first and last phenomena recorded in the Metonic Calendar. E. Müller supposed the Belt of Orion to denote the beginning, while Sirius denoted the end of the stellar year.

ARATUS : PHAENOMENA

FROM Zeus let us begin; <sup>a</sup> him do we mortals never leave unnamed; full of Zeus are all the streets and all the market-places of men; full is the sea and the havens thereof; always we all have need of Zeus. For we are also his offspring; <sup>b</sup> and he in his kindness unto men giveth favourable signs and wakeneth the people to work, reminding them of livelihood. He tells what time the soil is best for the labour of the ox and for the mattock, and what time the seasons are favourable both for the planting of trees and for casting all manner of seeds. For himself it was who set the signs in heaven, <sup>c</sup> and marked out the constellations, and for the year devised what stars chiefly should give to men right signs of the seasons, to the end that all things might grow unfailingly. Wherefore him do men ever worship first and last. Hail, O Father, mighty marvel, mighty blessing unto men. Hail to thee and to the Elder Race <sup>d</sup>! Hail, ye Muses, right kindly, every one! But for me, too, in answer to my prayer direct all my lay, even as is meet, to tell the stars.

They, <sup>e</sup> all alike, many though they be and other star in other path, are drawn across the heavens always through all time continually. But the Axis shifts not a whit, but unchanging is for ever fixed, and in the midst it holds the earth in equipoise, and wheels the heaven itself around.

On either side the Axis ends in two Poles, but thereof the one is not seen, whereas the other faces us in the north high above the ocean.<sup>a</sup> Encompassing it two Bears<sup>b</sup> wheel together—wherefore they are also called the Wains. Now they ever hold their heads each toward the flank of the other, and are borne along always shoulder-wise, turned alternate on their shoulders.<sup>c</sup> If, indeed, the tale be true, from Crete they by the will of mighty Zeus entered up into heaven, for that when in olden days he played as a child in fragrant Dicton,<sup>d</sup> near the hill of Ida, they set him in a cave and nurtured him for the space of a year, what time the Dictæan Curetes were deceiving Cronus. Now the one men call by name Cynosura and the other Helice. It is by Helice that the Achæans on the sea divine which way to steer their ships, but in the other the Phœnicians put their trust when they cross the sea.<sup>e</sup> But Helice,<sup>f</sup> appearing large at earliest night, is bright and easy to mark; but the other is small, yet better for sailors: for in a smaller orbit wheel all her stars. By her guidance, then, the men of Sidon<sup>g</sup> steer the straightest course.

Δίκτη πλησίον (τῆς Πράσου), οὐχ ὡς Ἄρατος “ ὄρεος σχεδὸν Ἰδαίοιο.” καὶ γὰρ χιλίους ἢ Δίκτη τῆς Ἰδῆς ἀπέχει (Strabo 478). Zenodotus of Mallos understood δίκτον as = δίκταμνον, the plant “dittany,” hence the epithet “fragrant” (schol.).

At latitude  $x^\circ$  a star  $x^\circ$  from Pole would just touch the horizon at its lowest point. The head of Draco lies between  $33^\circ$  and  $39^\circ$  from the Pole ( $34\frac{1}{2}^\circ - 37^\circ$ , Hipparch. i. 4. 8), and hence about lat.  $37^\circ$  it would just touch the horizon at its lowest point, i.e. it lies within the

PHAENOMENA

Between them, as it were the branch of a river, circles in wondrous way the Dragon,<sup>a</sup> winding infinite around and about; on either side of his coil are borne along the Bears, that shun evermore the blue sea.<sup>b</sup> Now towards the one he stretches the end of his tail, but with the coil he intercepts the Lesser Bear.<sup>c</sup> The tip of his tail ends by the head of Helice, but in the coil Cynosura has her head. For his coil circles past her very head and comes near her feet, but again, turning back, runs upward. Not one lone star shines on his head, but on his brows are two stars lit, and two in his eyes, and one beneath is set upon the chin-point of the dread monster. Aslant is his head, and he seems most like as if he were nodding to the tip of the tail of Helice; his mouth and right<sup>d</sup> temple straight confront the end of her tail. That head wheels near where the limits of setting and rising blend.<sup>e</sup>

Right there in its orbit wheels a Phantom form,<sup>f</sup> like to a man that strives at a task. That sign no circle of perpetual visibility (ὁ ἀεὶ φανερός κύκλος); cf. Hipparch. l.c., who refutes Attalus who said it lay somewhat south of this. In other words, a star so situated that it rises nearly due North will set nearly due North, and the interval between setting and rising will be very short: setting and rising blend; cf. Scott's Last Expedition (Smith, Elder & Co., 1913), chap. ix. April 23, "The long mild twilight which like a silver clasp unites to-day with yesterday; when morning and evening sit together hand in hand beneath the starless sky of midnight." Homer's remarks upon the Laestrygonæ, Od. x. 82 ff., especially ἐγγὺς γὰρ νυκτός τε καὶ ἡματός εἰσι κέλευθοι, point, as Crates rightly saw (schol. Arat. 62), to a people of the Far North.

PHAENOMENA

man knows how to read clearly, nor on what task he is bent, but men simply call him On His Knees.<sup>a</sup> Now that Phantom, that toils on his knees, seems to sit on bended knee, and from both his shoulders his hands are upraised and stretch, one this way, one that, a fathom's length. Over the middle of the head of the crooked Dragon, he has the tip of his right foot.<sup>b</sup>

Here too that Crown,<sup>c</sup> which glorious Dionysus set to be memorial of the dead Ariadne, wheels beneath the back of the toil-spent Phantom.

To the Phantom's back the Crown is near, but by his head mark near at hand the head of Ophiuchus,<sup>d</sup> and then from it you can trace the starlit Ophiuchus himself: so brightly set beneath his head appear his gleaming shoulders. They would be clear to mark even at the midmonth moon, but his hands are not at all so bright; for faint runs the gleam of stars along on this side and on that. Yet they too can be seen, for they are not feeble. Both firmly clutch the Serpent,<sup>e</sup> which encircles the waist of Ophiuchus, but he, stedfast with both his feet well set, tramples a huge monster, even the Scorpion,<sup>f</sup> standing upright on his eye and breast. Now the Serpent is wreathed about his two hands—a little above his right hand, but in many folds high above his left.

Toward the Crown leans the Serpent's jaw, but beneath his coiling form seek thou for the mighty Claws <sup>a</sup>; they are scant of light and nowise brilliant.

Behind Helice, like to one that drives, is borne along Arctophylax whom men also call Boötes, <sup>b</sup> since he seems to lay hand on the wain-like Bear. Very bright is he all; but beneath his belt wheels a star, bright beyond the others, Arcturus himself.

Beneath both feet of Boötes mark the Maiden, <sup>c</sup> who in her hands bears the gleaming Ear of Corn. <sup>d</sup> Whether she be daughter of Astraeus, who, men say, was of old the father of the stars, or child of other sire, untroubled be her course! But another tale is current among men, how of old she dwelt on earth and met men face to face, nor ever disdained in olden time the tribes of men and women, but mingling with them took her seat, immortal though she was. Her men called Justice; but she assembling the elders, it might be in the market-place or in the wide-wayed streets, uttered her voice, ever urging on them judgements kinder to the people. Not yet in that age had men knowledge of hateful strife, or carping contention, or din of battle, but a simple life they lived. Far from them was the cruel sea and not yet from afar did ships bring their livelihood, but the oxen and the plough and Justice herself, queen of the peoples, giver of things just, abundantly supplied their every need. Even so long as the earth still nurtured the Golden Race, she had her dwelling on earth. But with the Silver Race only a little and no longer with utter readiness did she mingle, for that she yearned for the ways of the men of old. Yet in that Silver Age was she still upon the earth; but from the echoing hills at eventide she came alone, nor spake to any man in gentle words. But when she had filled the great heights with gathering crowds, then would she with threats rebuke their evil ways, and declare that never more at their prayer would she reveal her face to man. "Behold what manner of race the fathers of the Golden Age<sup>a</sup> left behind them! Far meaner than themselves! but ye will breed a viler progeny<sup>b</sup>! Verily wars and cruel bloodshed shall be unto men and grievous woe shall be laid upon them." Even so she spake and sought the hills and left the people all gazing towards her still. But when they, too, were dead, and when, more ruinous than they which went before, the Race of Bronze was born, who were the first to forge the sword of the highwayman, and the first to eat of the flesh of the ploughing-ox, then verily did Justice loathe that race of men and fly heavenward and took up that abode, where even now in the night time the Maiden is seen of men, established near to far-seen Boötes.

Above both her shoulders at her right wing wheels a star, whereof the name is the Vintager<sup>c</sup>—of such size and with such brightness set, as the star that shines beneath the tail of the Great Bear. what stars beyond them model all her form. Such stars are borne along, beautiful and great, one in front of her forefeet, one on her flank, and one beneath her hind knees.<sup>a</sup> But all singly one here, one there, are wheeled along without a name.

Beneath the head of Helice are the Twins<sup>b</sup>; beneath her waist is the Crab<sup>c</sup>; beneath her hind feet the Lion<sup>d</sup> brightly shines. There is the Sun's hottest summer path. Then the fields are seen bereft of corn-ears, when first the Sun comes together with the Lion.<sup>e</sup> Then the roaring Etesian<sup>f</sup> winds fall swooping on the vasty deep, and voyaging is no longer seasonable for oars. Then let broad-beamed ships be my choice, and let steersmen hold the helm into the wind.

But if it be thy wish to mark Charioteer<sup>g</sup> and his stars, and if the fame has come to thee of the Goat<sup>h</sup> herself and the Kids,<sup>i</sup> who often on the darkening deep have seen men storm-tossed, thou wilt find him in all his might, leaning forward at the left hand of the Twins. Over against him wheels the top of Helice's head, but on his left shoulder is set the holy Goat, that, as legend tells, gave the breast to Zeus. Her the interpreters of Zeus call the Olenian when the Dog-Star rises, which is as nearly as possible thirty days after the summer solstice. At that date, according to Aratus, the Sun is in the beginning of Leo. The sun, therefore, at this (the summer) solstice occupies the beginning of the Crab (Cancer)."

<sup>f</sup> The Etesian or trade-winds which blow every year in the Mediterranean during the summer, mostly from the North, begin at the rising of the Dog-Star, being preceded by the prodromi which, also from the North, begin eight days before the rising of the Dog-Star. The Etesian winds blow for some fifty days.

<sup>a</sup> Amalthea: Olenian as being on the arm (ὠλένη) of Auriga or as daughter of Olenus or from Olenus or Olene in Achaia (Strabo 387, who quotes Aratus). Cf. "Nascitur Oleniae signum pluviale Capellae," Ovid, F. v. 113, "Oleniae sidus pluviale Capellae," Ovid, M. iii. 594.

<sup>b</sup> The participle πεπτηώς occurs five times in Aratus, here of Taurus, 318 of the bright stars in the Dolphin, 324 of Orion, 353 of Andromeda, 369 of certain nameless stars. The mss. of Homer confuse the perfect participle active of πίπτω with that of πτήσσω (Leaf on Il. xxi. 503). There seems reason to think that in some cases, e.g. 324, Aratus treated πεπτηώς as from πίτνημι, πετάννυμι, in the sense of "extended," "spread."

PHAENOMENA

Goat.<sup>a</sup> Large is she and bright, but there at the wrist of the Charioteer faintly gleam the Kids.

At the feet of Charioteer seek for the crouching<sup>b</sup> horned Bull.<sup>c</sup> Very lifelike are his signs; so clear defined his head: not by other sign would one mark the head of an ox, since in such wise those very stars, wheeling on either side, fashion it. Oft-spoken is their name and not all unheard-of are the Hyades.<sup>d</sup> Broadcast are they on the forehead of the Bull. One star occupies the tip of his left horn and the right foot of the Charioteer, who is close by. Together they are carried in their course, but ever earlier is the Bull than the Charioteer to set beneath the West,<sup>e</sup> albeit they fare together at their rising.<sup>f</sup>

Nor all unnamed shall rest the hapless family of Iasid Cepheus.<sup>g</sup> For their name, too, has come unto heaven, for that they were near akin to Zeus.<sup>h</sup> Cepheus himself is set behind the Bear Cynosura, like to one that stretches out both his hands. From her tail-tip to both his feet stretches a measure equal to that from foot to foot.<sup>i</sup> But a little aside

<sup>e</sup> ἐρέρη may refer to West, as here, and 279, 659, or to East, 571, 617, 726, always according to the context.

<sup>f</sup> The Bull sets sooner because he is farther South than Auriga (schol.). For criticism of this passage cf. Hipparch. i. 5. 14 ff.

<sup>g</sup> Cepheus, King of Aethiopia, father of Andromeda by Cassiopeia. He was descended from Io whose father, according to one version, was Jasus, son of Argos (Apollod. ii. 5).

<sup>i</sup> Hipparchus i. 2. 12 says that this remark, in which Aratus agrees with Eudoxus, is not true, the distance between the feet of Cepheus being less than that from either foot to the tip of Cynosura's tail.

from his belt look to find the first coil of the mighty Dragon.

Eastward his hapless wife, Cassiopeia,<sup>a</sup> gleaming when by night the moon is full, wheels with her scanty stars. For few and alternate stars adorn her, which expressly mark her form with lines of light. Like the key<sup>b</sup> of a twofold door barred within, wherewith men striking shoot back the bolts, so singly set shine her stars. But from her shoulders so faint she stretches a fathom's length. Thou would'st say she was sorrowing over her daughter.<sup>c</sup>

For there, too, wheels that woeful form of Andromeda, enstarred beneath her mother. Thou hast not to wait<sup>d</sup> for a night, I ween, whereon to see her more distinct! So bright is her head and so clearly marked are both the shoulders, the tips of her feet and all her belt. Yet even there she is racked, with arms stretched far apart, and even in Heaven bonds are her portion. Uplifted and outspread there for all time are those hands of hers.

Beneath her head is spread the huge Horse,<sup>e</sup> touching her with his lower belly. One common star gleams on the Horse's navel and the crown of her head. Three other separate stars, large and bright, at equal distance set on flank and shoulders, trace a square<sup>f</sup> upon the Horse. His head is not so brightly aspect as that presented by the bars of a folding-door, where one half-door acts as door-post to the other and vice versa. If these two bars were secured by a drop-bar passing through the two, the resemblance would be clearer still.

marked, nor his neck, though it be long. But the farthest star on his blazing nostril could fitly rival the former four, that invest him with such splendour. Nor is he four-footed. Parted at the navel, with only half a body, wheels in heaven the sacred Horse.<sup>a</sup> He it was, men say, that brought down from lofty Helicon the bright water of bounteous Hippocrene.<sup>b</sup> For not yet on Helicon's summit trickled the fountain's springs, but the Horse smote it and straightway the gushing water was shed abroad at the stamp of his forefoot, and herdsmen were the first to call that stream the fountain of the Horse. From the rock the water wells and never shalt thou see it far from the men of Thespieae; but the Horse himself circles in the heaven of Zeus and is there for thee to behold.

There too are the most swift courses of the Ram,<sup>c</sup> who, pursued through the longest circuit, runs not a whit slower than the Bear Cynosura—himself weak and starless as on a moonlit night, but yet by the belt of Andromeda thou canst trace him out. For a little below her is he set. Midway he treads the mighty heavens, where wheel the tips of the Scorpion's Claws and the Belt of Orion.

There is also another sign, fashioned near, below Andromeda, Deltoton,<sup>d</sup> drawn with three sides, whereof two appear equal but the third is less, yet very easy to find, for beyond many is it endowed with stars. Southward a little from Deltoton are the stars of the Ram.

<sup>c</sup> The Ram, Aries, situated on the Equator, which is a Great Circle of the celestial globe, completes his circuit of the heavens in the same time that Ursa Minor completes her smaller circle.

<sup>a</sup> Pisces. Hipparchus i. 6. 8 f. points out that not both but only one of the Fishes is south of the Ram. The schol. takes Aratus to mean south of Triangulum.

<sup>b</sup> a Piscium, the knot of the band of stars joining the tails of the two Fishes.

PHAENOMENA

Still farther in front of the Ram and still in the vestibule of the South are the Fishes.<sup>a</sup> Ever one is higher than the other, and louder hears the fresh rush of the North wind. From both there stretch, as it were, chains, whereby their tails on either side are joined. The meeting chains are knit by a single beautiful and great star, which is called the Knot of Tails.<sup>b</sup> Let the left shoulder of Andromeda be thy guide to the northern Fish, for it is very near.

Her two feet will guide thee to her bridegroom, Perseus,<sup>c</sup> over whose shoulder they are for ever carried. But he moves in the North a taller form than the others. His right hand is stretched toward the throne of the mother<sup>d</sup> of his bride, and, as if pursuing that which lies before his feet, he greatly strides, dust-stained, in the heaven of Zeus.

Near<sup>e</sup> his left thigh move the Pleiades, all in a cluster, but small is the space that holds them and singly they dimly shine. Seven are they in the songs of men, albeit only six are visible to the eyes.<sup>f</sup> Yet not a star, I ween, has perished from the sky unmarked since the earliest memory of man, but even so the tale is told. Those seven are called by name Halcyone, Merope, Celaeno, Electra, Sterope, Taygete, and queenly Maia. Small and dim are they all alike, but widely famed they wheel in heaven at morn and eventide, by the will of Zeus,

<sup>f</sup> The missing Pleiad is sometimes said to be Merope, sometimes Electra. Hipparch. i. 6. 14 says that by looking carefully on a clear moonless night seven stars can be seen.

Yonder, too, is the tiny Tortoise,<sup>b</sup> which, while still beside his cradle, Hermes pierced for strings and bade it be called the Lyre: and he brought it into heaven and set it in front of the unknown Phantom.<sup>c</sup> That Croucher on his Knees comes near the Lyre with his left knee, but the top of the Bird's head wheels on the other side, and between the Bird's head and the Phantom's knee is enstarred the Lyre.

For verily in heaven there is outspread a glittering Bird.<sup>d</sup> Wreathed in mist is the Bird, but yet the parts above him are rough with stars, not very large, yet not obscure. Like a bird in joyous flight, with fair weather it glides to the west, with the tip of its right wing outstretched towards the right hand of Cepheus, and by its left wing is hung in the heavens the prancing Horse.

Round the prancing Horse range the two Fishes. By the Horse's head is stretched the right hand of Hydrochous.<sup>e</sup> He is behind Aegoceros,<sup>f</sup> who is set in front and further down, where the mighty Sun turns.<sup>g</sup> In that month use not the open sea<sup>h</sup> lest thou be engulfed in the waves. ing swoop of the South winds when the Sun joins Aegoceros, and then is the frost from heaven hard on the benumbed sailor. Not but that throughout the year's length the sea ever grows dark beneath the keels, and, like to diving seagulls, we often sit, spying out the deep from our ship with faces turned to the shore; but ever farther back the shores are swept by the waves and only a thin plank staves off Death.<sup>a</sup>

But even in the previous month,<sup>b</sup> storm-tossed at sea, when the Sun scorches the Bow and the Wielder<sup>c</sup> of the Bow, trust no longer in the night but put to shore in the evening. Of that season and that month let the rising of Scorpion at the close of night be a sign to thee. For verily his great Bow does the Bowman draw close by the Scorpion's sting, and a little in front stands the Scorpion at his rising, but the Archer<sup>c</sup> rises right after him. Then, too, at the close of night Cynosura's head runs very high, but Orion just before the dawn wholly sets and Cepheus from hand to waist.<sup>d</sup>

Further up there is another Arrow<sup>e</sup> shot—alone without a bow. By it is the Bird<sup>f</sup> outspread nearer the North, but hard at hand another bird<sup>g</sup> tosses in storm, of smaller size but cruel in its rising from the sea when the night is waning, and men call it the Eagle (Storm-bird).<sup>h</sup> bright stars and body wreathed in mist, but four brilliants adorn him, set side by side in pairs.

Now these constellations lie between the North and the Sun's wandering path,<sup>a</sup> but others many in number rise beneath between the South and the Sun's course.

Aslant beneath the fore-body<sup>b</sup> of the Bull is set the great Orion. Let none who pass him spread out on high on a cloudless night imagine that, gazing on the heavens, one shall see other stars more fair.

Such a guardian, too, beneath his towering back is seen to stand on his hind legs, the Dog<sup>c</sup> star-enwrought, yet not clearly marked in all his form, but right by his belly he shows dark. The tip of his terrible jaw is marked by a star that keenest of all blazes with a searing flame and him men call Seirius.<sup>d</sup> When he rises with the Sun,<sup>e</sup> no longer do the trees deceive him by the feeble freshness of their leaves. For easily with his keen glance he pierces their ranks, and to some he gives strength but of others he blights the bark utterly. Of him too at his setting<sup>f</sup> are we aware, but the other stars of the Dog are set round with fainter light to mark his legs.

Beneath both feet of Orion is the Hare<sup>g</sup> pursued continually through all time, while Seirius behind is for ever borne as in pursuit. Close behind he rises and as he sets he eyes the setting Hare.

hauled stern-foremost. For not hers is the proper course of a ship in motion, but she is borne backwards, reversed even as real ships, when already the sailors turn the stern to the land as they enter the haven, and every one back-paddles the ship, but she rushing sternward lays hold of the shore. Even so is the Argo of Jason borne along stern-foremost. Partly in mist is she borne along, and starless from her prow even to the mast,<sup>a</sup> but the hull is wholly wreathed in light. Loosed is her Rudder and is set beneath the hind feet of the Dog, as he runs in front.

Andromeda, though she cowers<sup>b</sup> a good way off, is pressed by the rush of the mighty Monster<sup>c</sup> of the Sea. For her path lies under the blast of Thracian Boreas, but the South wind drives against her, beneath the Ram and the Pair of Fishes, the hateful Monster, Cetus, set as he is a little above the Starry River.<sup>d</sup>

For alone are those poor remains of Eridanus,<sup>e</sup> River of many tears, also borne beneath the feet of the Gods. He winds beneath Orion's left foot, but the Shackles, wherewith the Fishes' tails are held, reach from their tails and join together, and behind the neck of Cetus they mingle their path and fare together. They end in a single star of Cetus, set where meet his spine and head.

Other stars,<sup>f</sup> mean in size and feeble in splendour, him; 'poor remains,' because Eridanus was partly burnt up. Aratus is the first to call the River Eridanus.

<sup>f</sup> Stars lying between Argo and Cetus and the Hare, which were not grouped as a constellation and given a special name. Hipparch. i. 8. 2 f. says the "nameless stars" really lie between the River and the Helm of Argo.

<sup>a</sup> Hipparch. i. 8. 8 ff. discusses 367-385. As against Attalus who accused Aratus of redundancy and obscurity, Hipparchus thinks Aratus has given a masterly exposition (κεκρατημένως ἀποδεωκέναι) of what was in his mind, namely, 410 wheel between the Rudder of Argo and Cetus, and beneath the grey Hare's sides they are set without a name. For they are not set like the limbs of a fashioned figure, such as, many in number, fare in order along their constant paths, as the years are fulfilled—stars, which someone of the men that are no more noted and marked how to group in figures and call all by a single name. For it had passed his skill to know each single star or name them one by one. Many are they on every hand and of many the magnitudes and colours are the same, while all go circling round. Wherefore he deemed fit to group the stars in companies, so that in order, set each by other, they might form figures. Hence the constellations got their names, and now no longer does any star rise a marvel from beneath the horizon. Now the other stars are grouped in clear figures and brightly shine, but those beneath the hunted Hare are all clad in mist and nameless in their course.<sup>a</sup>

Below Aegoceros before the blasts of the South wind swims a Fish, facing Cetus, alone and apart from the former Fishes; and him men call the Southern Fish.<sup>b</sup>

Other stars, sparsely set beneath Hydrochoüs,<sup>c</sup> hang on high between Cetus in the heavens and the Fish, dim and nameless, and near them on the right hand of bright Hydrochoüs, like some sprinkled drops of water lightly shed on this side and on that, other stars wheel bright-eyed though weak. But among them are borne two of more lustrous form, that he who first grouped the stars in constellations decided to group and name only those stars which spatially belonged together, neglecting those which did not naturally form a group or figure.

not far apart and yet not near: one beneath both feet of Hydrochoüs, a goodly star and bright, the other beneath the tail of dark-blue Cetus. This cluster as a whole men call The Water. But others low beneath the forefeet of the Archer (Centaur),<sup>a</sup> turned in a circled ring,<sup>b</sup> go wheeling round the sky.

Below the fiery sting of the dread monster, Scorpion, and near the South is hung the Altar.<sup>c</sup> Brief is the space thou wilt behold it above the horizon: for it rises over against Arcturus.<sup>d</sup> High runs the path of Arcturus, but sooner passes the Altar to the western sea. But that Altar even beyond aught else hath ancient Night, weeping the woe of men, set to be a mighty sign of storm at sea. For ships in trouble pain her heart, and other signs in other quarters she kindles in sorrow for mariners, storm-buffed at sea. Wherefore I bid thee pray, when in the open sea, that that constellation wrapt in clouds appear not amidst the others in the heavens, herself unclouded and resplendent but banked above with billowing clouds, as often it is beset when the autumn wind drives them back. For often Night herself reveals this sign, also, for the South Wind in her kindness to toiling sailors. If they heed her favouring signs and

"Neve sinisterior pressam rota ducat ad Aram," Ovid, M. ii. 139.

<sup>d</sup> i.e., according to the interpretation of Hipparchus and Attalus, the Altar is as far from the South Pole (νότιος πόλος, ἀφανῆς πόλος) as Arcturus is from the visible Pole (ὁ ἀεὶ φανερός πόλος). This, says Hipparchus, is not true, as Arcturus is 59° from the North Pole, while α, the bright star in the middle of the Altar, is only 46° from the South Pole (Hipparch. i. 8. 14 f.).

<sup>b</sup> i.e. when the shoulder of the Centaur culminates (μεσουρανεῖ). Hipparch. i. 8. 19 ff. complains that Aratus does not specify which shoulder, which is not a matter of indifference, as they would not both culminate at the same time.

PHAENOMENA

quickly lighten their craft and set all in order, on a sudden lo! their task is easier : but if from on high a dread gust of wind smite their ship, all unforeseen, and throw in turmoil all the sails, sometimes they make their voyage all beneath the waves, but at other times, if they win by their prayers Zeus to their aid, and the might of the north wind pass in lightning, after much toil they yet again see each other on the ship. But at this sign fear the South Wind, until thou see'st<sup>a</sup> the North Wind come with lightning. But if the shoulder of Centaur is as far from the western as from the eastern sea,<sup>b</sup> and a faint mist veils it, while behind Night kindles like signs of storm upon the gleaming Altar, thou must not look for the South, but bethink thee of an East Wind.

The constellation of Centaur<sup>c</sup> thou wilt find beneath two others. For part in human form lies beneath Scorpio, but the rest, a horse's trunk and tail, are beneath the Claws.<sup>d</sup> He ever seems to stretch his right hand<sup>e</sup> towards the round Altar, but through his hand is drawn and firmly grasped another sign—the Beast,<sup>f</sup> for so men of old have named it.

<sup>f</sup> Fera or the Wolf. Manilius i. 440 confuses the Beast with the Cetus of Andromeda. The Centaur was represented as holding in his left a thyrsus with a Hare hung upon it, in his right a Therium, of what nature the ancients did not define; cf. Cic. Arat. 211 “Hic dextram porgens quadrupes qua vasta tenetur | Quam nemo certo donavit nomine Graium.” Frequently the Beast is confused with the Hare, but in later times it is generally known as the Wolf. Cf. Another constellation trails beyond,<sup>a</sup> which men call the Hydra. Like a living creature it winds afar its coiling form. Its head comes beneath the middle of the Crab, its coil beneath the body of the Lion, and its tail hangs above the Centaur himself. Midway on its coiling form is set the Crater,<sup>b</sup> and at the tip the figure of a Raven<sup>c</sup> that seems to peck at the coil.

There, too, by the Hydra beneath the Twins brightly shines Procyon.<sup>d</sup>

All these constellations thou canst mark as the seasons pass, each returning at its appointed time: for all are unchangingly and firmly fixed<sup>e</sup> in the heavens to be the ornaments of the passing night.

But of quite a different class are those five other orbs,<sup>f</sup> that intermingle with them and wheel wandering on every side of the twelve figures of the Zodiac. No longer with the others as thy guide couldst thou mark where lies the path of those, since all pursue a shifty course, and long are the periods of their revolution and far distant lies the goal of their conjunction.<sup>g</sup> When I come to them my daring fails, but mine be the power to tell of the orbits of the Fixed Stars and Signs in heaven.

These orbits<sup>h</sup> lie like rings, four in number, chief in interest and in profit, if thou wouldst mark the

there is a general reversion of nature to the position at the beginning of the period, a so-called ἀποκατάστασις. Then the planets moving in different orbits and with different speeds complete their orbits together (Plato, Timaeus 39).

<sup>h</sup> The four rings are the Great Circles of the Equator and the Ecliptic and the smaller circles of the Tropic of Cancer and the Tropic of Capricorn. Thus in size the Equator is equal to the Ecliptic, while the two Tropics are equal to one another.

measures of the waning and the waxing of the Seasons. On all are set beacon lights, many in number, all every way closely penned together. The circles are immovable,<sup>a</sup> and fitted each to other, but in size two are matched with two.

If ever on a clear night, when Night in the heavens shows to men all her stars in their brightness and no star is borne faintly gleaming at the mid-month moon, but they all sharply pierce the darkness—if in such an hour wonder rises in thy heart to mark on every side the heaven cleft by a broad belt,<sup>b</sup> or if someone at thy side point out that circle set with brilliants—that is what men call the Milky Way. A match for it in colour thou wilt find no circle wheel, but in size two of the four belts are as large, but the other two are far inferior.

Of the lesser circles one<sup>c</sup> is nigh to Boreas at his coming, and on it are borne both the heads of the Twins and the knees of the stedfast Charioteer, and above him are the left shoulder and shin of Perseus.<sup>d</sup> It crosses Andromeda's right arm above the elbow.<sup>e</sup> Above it is set her palm, nearer the north, and southward leans her elbow. The hoofs of the Horse, the head and neck of the Bird<sup>f</sup> and Ophiuchus' bright shoulders<sup>g</sup> wheel along this circle in their course. The Maiden<sup>h</sup> is borne a little to the South and does not touch the Belt, but on it are the Lion and the Crab. Thereon are they both established side by side, but the circle cuts the Lion beneath breast and belly lengthwise to the loins, and the Crab it cuts clean through by the shell where thou canst see him most clearly cut, as he stands upright with his eyes on either side of the Belt. The circle is divided, as well as may be, into eight parts, whereof five in the daytime wheel on high above the earth and three beneath the horizon.<sup>a</sup> In it is the Turning-point of the Sun in summer.<sup>b</sup> This circle is set round the Crab in the North.

But there is another circle<sup>c</sup> to match in the South. It cuts through the middle of Aegoceros, the feet of Hydrochoüs, and the tail of the sea-monster, Cetus, and on it is the Hare. It claims no great share of the Dog, but only the space that he occupies with his feet. In it is Argo and the mighty back of the Centaur, the sting of Scorpio, and the Bow of the bright Archer. This circle the sun passes last as he is southward borne from the bright north, and here is the Turning-point of the sun in winter.<sup>d</sup> *Three parts of eight of his course are above and five below the horizon.

Between the Tropics a Belt,<sup>e</sup> peer of the grey Milky Way, undergirds the earth and with imaginary line bisects the sphere. In it the days are equal to the nights<sup>f</sup> both at the waning of the summer and the waxing of the spring. The sign appointed for it is the Ram<sup>g</sup> and the knees of the Bull—the Ram being borne lengthwise through it, but of the Bull just the visible bend of the knees. In it are the Belt of the well-starred Orion and the coil of the gleaming Hydra: in it, too, the dim-lit Crater and the Crow and the scanty-starred Claws and the knees of Ophiuchus are borne. But it has no share in the Eagle, but near it flies <sup>a</sup> the mighty messenger of Zeus. Facing the Eagle wheel the head and neck of the Horse.

These three Belts <sup>b</sup> are parallel, and at right angles to the Axis which they surround and which is the centre of them all, but the fourth <sup>c</sup> aslant is fixed athwart the Tropics: they on opposite sides of the Equator support it at either limit, but the Equator bisects it. Not otherwise would a man skilled in the handicraft of Athena join the whirling Belts, wheeling them all around, so many and so great like rings, just as the Belts in the heavens, clasped by the transverse circle, hasten from dawn to night throughout all time. The three Belts <sup>d</sup> rise and set all parallel but ever single and the same is the point where in due order each rises or sets at East or West. But the fourth circle passes over as much water of ocean <sup>e</sup> as rolls between the rising of Aegoceros, and the rising of the Crab: as much as it occupies in rising, so much it occupies in setting. As long as is the ray cast to heaven from the glance of the eye, six times as long a line would subtend this Belt. Each ray, measured of equal length, intercepts two constellations. <sup>f</sup> This circle is called the Belt of the Zodiac.

is the radius of the sphere, and six lines of that length will give the inscribed regular hexagon. Each of those sides will subtend an arc of the sphere containing two signs of the Zodiac. Bisect each side, and each half side will correspond to one sign. This method of describing the Zodiac is what

PHAENOMENA

In it is the Crab; after the Crab the Lion and beneath him the Maiden; after the Maiden the Claws and the Scorpion himself and the Archer and Aegoceros, and after Aegoceros Hydrochoüs. Beneath him are enstarred the Two Fishes and after them the Ram and next the Bull and the Twins. In them, twelve in all, has the sun his course as he leads on the whole year, and as he fares around this belt, all the fruitful seasons have their growth.

Half this Belt is set below the hollow of the horizon, and half is above the earth. Every night six constellations of this circle's twelve set and as many rise; as long is each night ever stretched as half the belt rises above the earth from the fall of night.<sup>a</sup>

Not useless were it for one who seeks for signs of coming day to mark when each sign of the Zodiac rises. For ever with one of them the sun himself rises. One could best search out those constellations by looking on themselves, but if they be dark with clouds or rise hidden behind a hill, get thee fixed signs for their coming. Ocean himself will give thee signs at either horn—the East or the West—in the many constellations that wheel about him, when from below he sends forth each rising sign.

Not very faint are the wheeling constellations that are set about Ocean at East or West, when the Crab Vergil refers to in Ecl. iii. 40 ff. “In medio duo signa, Conon et—quis fuit alter Descripsit radio totum qui gentibus orbem, Tempora quae messor, quae curvus arator haberet?” Our “ray” is, of course, derived from radius.

<sup>a</sup> The Zodiac is a Great Circle and therefore is bisected by any other Great Circle, e.g. the horizon. Now day lasts while the Sun is above the horizon. When the Sun is setting a half circle of the Zodiac has risen since his rising, i.e. six zodiacal signs.

rises, some setting in the West and others rising in the East. The Crown sets and the Southern Fish as far as its back. Half the setting Crown is visible in the sky but half already sinks beneath the verge. Of Engonasin, backward turned,<sup>a</sup> the waist is still visible but his upper parts are borne in night. The rise of the Crab brings down from knee to shoulder the wretched Ophiuchus and Ophis to the neck. No longer great on both sides of the horizon is Arctophylax but only the lesser portion is visible, while the greater part is wrapt in night. For with four signs<sup>b</sup> of the Zodiac Boötes sets and is received in the bosom of ocean; and when he is sated with the light he takes till past midnight in the loosing of his oxen,<sup>c</sup> in the season when he sets with the sinking sun. Those nights are named after his late setting. So these stars are setting, but another, facing them, no dim star, even Orion with glittering belt and shining shoulders and trusting in the might of his sword, and bringing all the River,<sup>d</sup> rises from the other horn, the East.

At the coming of the Lion those constellations wholly set, which were setting when the Crab rose, and with them sets the Eagle. But the Phantom

PHAENOMENA

On His Knees sinks all save knee and left foot beneath the stormy ocean. Up rises the Hydra's head and the bright-eyed Hare and Procyon and the forefeet of the flaming Dog.

Not few, either, are the constellations which the Maiden at her rising sends beneath the verge of earth. Then set the Cyllenian Lyre, the Dolphin and the shapely Arrow. With them the wing-tips of the Bird<sup>a</sup> up to her very tail and the farthest reaches of the River are overshadowed. The head of the Horse<sup>b</sup> sets, sets too his neck. The Hydra rises higher as far as Crater, and before her the Dog brings up his hind feet, dragging behind him the stern of Argo of many stars. And she rises above the earth, cleft right at the mast, just when the whole of the Maiden has risen.

Nor can the rising Claws, though faintly shining, pass unremarked, when at a bound<sup>c</sup> the mighty sign of Boötes rises, jewelled with Arcturus.<sup>d</sup> Aloft is risen all of Argo, but the Hydra, shed as she is afar over the heavens, will lack her tail. The Claws bring only the right leg as far as the thigh of that Phantom that is ever On his Knees, ever crouching by the Lyre—that Phantom, unknown among the figures of the heavens, whom we often see both rise and set on the selfsame night. Of him only the leg is visible at the rising of both the Claws: he himself head-downward<sup>e</sup> on the other side awaits the rising Scorpion and the Drawer of the Bow.<sup>f</sup> For they bring him:

PHAENOMENA

Scorpion brings his waist and all aforesaid ; the Bow his left hand and head. Even so in three portions is he all brought up piecemeal above the horizon. Half the Crown and the tip of the Centaur's tail are upraised with the rising Claws. Then is the Horse setting after his vanished head, and dragged below is the tail-tip of the Bird,<sup>a</sup> already set. The head of Andromeda is setting and against her is brought by the misty South the mighty terror, Cetus, but over against him in the North Cepheus with mighty hand upraised warns him back. Cetus, neck downward, sets to his neck, and Cepheus with head and hand and shoulder.

The winding River<sup>b</sup> will straightway sink in fair flowing ocean at the coming of Scorpion, whose rising puts to flight even the mighty Orion. Thy pardon, Artemis, we crave ! There is a tale told by the men of old, who said that stout Orion laid hands upon her robe, what time in Chios he was smiting with his strong club all manner of beasts, as a service of the hunt to that King Oenopion. But she forthwith rent in twain the surrounding hills of the island and roused against him another kind of beast—even the Scorpion, who proving mightier wounded him, mighty though he was, and slew him, for that he had vexed Artemis. Wherefore, too, men say that at the rising of the Scorpion in the East Orion flees at the Western verge. Nor does what was left of Andromeda and of Cetus fail to mark his rise but in full career they too flee. In that hour the belt of Cepheus grazes earth as he dips his upper parts in the sea, but the rest he may not—his feet and knees and loins, for the Bears themselves forbid. The hapless Cassiopeia herself too hastes after the figure of her child.<sup>a</sup> No longer in seemly wise does she shine upon her throne, feet and knees withal, but she headlong plunges like a diver, parted at the knees; for not scatheless was she to rival Doris and Panope.<sup>b</sup> So she is borne towards the West, but other signs in the East the vault of heaven brings from below, the remaining half of the Crown<sup>c</sup> and the tail of the Hydra, and uplifts the body and head of the Centaur and the Beast that the Centaur holds in his right hand. But the fore-feet of the Centaur-Knight<sup>d</sup> await the rising of the Bow.

At the coming of the Bow up rises the coil of the Serpent and the body of Ophiuchus. Their heads the rising of the Scorpion himself brings and raises even the hands of Ophiuchus and the foremost coil of the star-bespangled Serpent. Then emerge from below some parts of Engonasin, who ever rises feet-foremost,<sup>e</sup> to wit, his legs, waist, all his breast, his shoulder with his right hand; but his other hand and his head arise with the rising Bow and the Archer. With them the Lyre of Hermes and Cepheus to his breast drive up from the Eastern Ocean, what time all the rays of the mighty Dog are sinking and all of Orion setting, yea, all the Hare, which the Dog pursues in an unending race. But not yet depart the Kids of the Charioteer and the Arm-borne (Olenian) Goat<sup>f</sup>; by his great hand they shine, and are eminent beyond all his other limbs in raising storms, when they fare with the sun.

His head, hand and waist set at the rising of Aegoceros<sup>a</sup>: from waist to foot he sets at the rising of the Archer. Nor do Perseus and the end of the stern of jewelled Argo remain on high, but Perseus sets all save his knee and right foot and Argo is gone save her curved stern. She sinks wholly at the rising of Aegoceros, when Procyon sets too, and there rise the Bird<sup>b</sup> and the Eagle and the gems of the winged Arrow and the sacred Altar, that is established in the South.

When Hydrochoüs<sup>c</sup> is just risen, up wheel the feet and head of the Horse. But opposite the Horse starry Night draws the Centaur, tail-first, beneath the horizon, but cannot yet engulf his head and his broad shoulders, breast and all. But she sinks beneath the verge the coiling neck and all the brow of the gleaming Hydra. Yet many a coil of the Hydra remains, but Night engulfs her wholly with the Centaur, when the Fishes rise; with the Fishes the Fish<sup>d</sup> which is placed beneath azure Aegoceros rises—not completely but part awaits another sign of the Zodiac. So the weary hands and knees and shoulders of Andromeda are parted—stretched some below and others above the horizon, when the Two Fishes are newly risen from the ocean. Her right side the Fishes bring, but the left the rising Ram.<sup>e</sup> When the latter rises, the Altar is seen setting in the West, while in the East may be seen rising as much as the head and shoulders of Perseus.

As to his belt itself disputed might it be whether it rises as the Ram ceases to rise or at the rising of the Bull,<sup>a</sup> with whom he rises wholly. Nor lags behind the Charioteer at the rising of the Bull, for close are set their courses. But not with that sign does he rise completely, but the Twins<sup>b</sup> bring him wholly up. The Kids and the sole of the Charioteer's left foot and the Goat herself journey with the Bull, what time the neck and tail of Cetus, leviathan of the sky, rise from below. Now Arctophylax is beginning to set with the first of those four<sup>c</sup> constellations of the Zodiac that see him sink wholly, save his never setting left hand that rises by the Great Bear.

Let Ophiuchus setting from both feet even to his knees be a sign of the rising of the Twins in the East. Then no longer is aught of Cetus beneath the verge, but thou shalt see him all. Then, too, can the sailor on the open sea mark the first bend of the River<sup>d</sup> rising from the deep, as he watches for Orion himself to see if he might give him any hint of the measure of the night or of his voyage. For on every hand signs in multitude do the gods reveal to man.

Markest thou not? Whenever the Moon with WEATHER month; and ever with varying phase she tells the date of the dawn that comes round.

Those twelve signs of the Zodiac are sufficient to tell the limits of the night. But they to mark the great year—the season to plough and sow the fallow field and the season to plant the tree—are already revealed of Zeus and set on every side. Yea, and on the sea, too, many a sailor has marked the coming of the stormy tempest, remembering either dread Arcturus<sup>a</sup> or other stars that draw from ocean in the morning twilight or at the first fall of night. For verily through them all the Sun passes in yearly course, as he drives his mighty furrow, and now to one, now to another he draws near, now as he rises and anon as he sets, and ever another star looks upon another morn.

This thou too knowest, for celebrated by all now are the nineteen cycles<sup>b</sup> of the bright Sun—thou knowest all the stars wheeled aloft by Night from Orion's belt to the last of Orion and his bold hound, the stars of Poseidon, the stars of Zeus, which, if marked, display fit signs of the seasons. Wherefore to them give careful heed and if ever thy trust is in a ship, be it thine to watch what signs in the heavens are labouring under stormy winds or squall at sea. Small is the trouble and thousandfold the reward of his heedfulness who ever takes care. First he himself is safer, and well, too, he profits another by his warning, when a storm is rushing near.

For oft, too, beneath a calm night the sailor occido vehementior"; cf. Hor. C. iii. 1. 27 f. "saevus Arcturi cadentis Impetus." shortens sail for fear of the morning sea. Sometimes the storm comes on the third day, sometimes on the fifth, but sometimes the evil comes all unforeseen. For not yet do we mortals know all from Zeus, but much still remains hidden, whereof, what he will, even hereafter will he reveal; for openly he aids the race of men, manifesting himself on every side and showing signs on every hand. Some messages the Moon will convey with orb half-full as she waxes or wanes, others when full: others the Sun by warnings at dawn and again at the edge of night, and other hints from other source can be drawn for day and night.

Scan first the horns on either side the Moon.<sup>a</sup> For with varying hue from time to time the evening paints her and of different shape are her horns at different times as the Moon is waxing—one form on the third day and other on the fourth. From them thou canst learn touching the month that is begun. If she is slender and clear about the third day,<sup>b</sup> she heralds calm: if slender and very ruddy, wind<sup>c</sup>; but if thick and with blunted horns she show but a feeble light on the third and fourth night, her beams are blunted by the South wind or imminent rain. If on the third night neither horn nod forward or lean backward, if vertical they curve their tips on either side, winds from the West will follow that night. But if still with vertical crescent she bring the fourth day too, she gives warning of gathering storm.<sup>d</sup>

If her upper horn nod forward,<sup>a</sup> expect thou the North wind, but if it lean backward, the South. But when on the third day a complete halo, blushing red, encircles her, she foretells storm and, the fierier her blush, the fiercer the tempest.

Scan her when full and when half-formed on either side of full, as she waxes from or wanes again to crescent form, and from her hue forecast each month. When quite bright her hue, forecast fair weather; when ruddy, expect the rushing wind; when dark stained with spots, look out for rain. But not for every day is appointed a separate sign,<sup>b</sup> but the signs of the third and fourth day betoken the weather up to the half Moon; those of the half Moon up to full Moon; and in turn the signs of the full Moon up to the waning half Moon; the signs of the half Moon are followed by those of the fourth day from the end of the waning month, and they in their turn by those of the third day of the new month. But if halos<sup>c</sup> encircle all the Moon, set triple or double about her or only single—with the single ring, expect wind or calm<sup>d</sup>; when the ring is broken, wind<sup>e</sup>; when faint and fading, calm;

two rings girding the Moon forebode storm; a triple halo would bring a greater storm, and greater still, if black, and more furious still, if the rings are broken. Such warnings for the month thou canst learn from the Moon.

To the Sun's <sup>a</sup> march at East and West give heed. His hints give even more pertinent warning both at setting, and when he comes from below the verge. May not his orb, whenever thou desirest a fair day, be variegated when first his arrows strike the earth, and may he wear no mark at all but shine stainless altogether.<sup>b</sup> If again thus all pure he be in the hour when the oxen are loosed, and set cloudless in the evening with gentle beam, he will still be at the coming dawn attended with fair weather.<sup>c</sup> But not so, when he rises with seemingly hollow disk, nor when his beams part to strike or North or South, while his centre is bright. But then in truth he journeys either through rain or through wind.<sup>d</sup>

Scan closely, if his beams allow thee, the Sun himself, for scanning him is best, to see if either some blush run over him, as often he shows a blush or here or there, when he fares through trailing clouds, or if haply he is darkened. Let the dark stain be sign to thee of coming rain, and every blush be sign of wind. But if he is draped both black and red at once, he will bring rain and will strain beneath the wind.<sup>a</sup> But if the rays of the rising or setting Sun converge and crowd on one spot, or if he go from night to dawn, or from dawn to night, closely beset with clouds, those days will run in company with rushing rain. Nor be thou heedless of rain, what time before him rises a thin mist, after which the Sun himself ascends with scanty beams.<sup>b</sup> But when a broad belt of mist seems to melt and widen before the rising Sun and anon narrows to less, fair will be his course, and fair too, if in the season of winter his hue wax wan at eventide.<sup>c</sup> But for to-morrow's rain face the setting Sun and scan the clouds. Sun <sup>a</sup>: nor are the fields unwetted on that day, when before the dawn, as the Sun delays to shine, reddish clouds appear here or there.<sup>b</sup> Be not heedless either of wind or rain <sup>c</sup> to come, when, while the Sun is still below the verge, his precursor beams shine shadowy in the dawn. The more those beams are borne in shadow, the surer sign they give of rain, but if but faint the dusk that veils his beams, like a soft mist of vapour, that veil of dusk portends wind. Nor are dark halos <sup>d</sup> near the Sun signs of fair weather: when nearer the Sun and dark without relief, they portend greater storms: if there are two rings, they will herald tempests fiercer still.

Mark as the Sun is rising or setting, whether the clouds, called parhelia,<sup>e</sup> blush (on South or North or both), nor make the observation in careless mood. For when on both <sup>f</sup> sides at once those clouds gird the Sun, low down upon the horizon, there is no lingering of the storm that comes from Zeus. But if only one shine purple to the North, from the North will it bring the blast; if in the South, from the South; or down pour the pattering raindrops.<sup>g</sup>

With even greater care mark those signals when in the West, for from the West the warnings are given ever with equal and unfailling certainty.

Watch, too, the Manger.<sup>a</sup> Like a faint mist in the North it plays the guide beneath Cancer. Around it are borne two faintly gleaming stars, not far apart nor very near but distant to the view a cubit's length, one on the North, while the other looks towards the South. They are called the Asses, and between them is the Manger.<sup>b</sup> On a sudden, when all the sky is clear, the Manger wholly disappears, while the stars that go on either side seem nearer drawn to one another: not slight then is the storm with which the fields are deluged. If the Manger darken<sup>c</sup> and both stars remain unaltered, they herald rain. But if the Ass to the North of the Manger shine feebly through a faint mist, while the Southern Ass is gleaming bright, expect wind from the South: but if in turn the Southern Ass is cloudy and the Northern bright, watch for the North wind.

A sign of wind be the swelling sea,<sup>d</sup> the far sounding beach, the sea-crag when in calm they echo, and the moaning of the mountain crests.

When, too, the heron<sup>e</sup> in disordered flight comes landward from the sea with many a scream, he is precursor of the gale at sea. Anon, too, the stormy petrels when they flit in calm, move in companies to face the coming winds. Oft before a gale the wild ducks or sea-wheeling gulls beat their wings on the shore, or a cloud is lengthwise resting on the mountain peaks.<sup>a</sup> Marked, too, ere now as sign of wind have been the withered petals, the down of the white thistle,<sup>b</sup> when they abundant float, some in front and others behind, on the surface of the silent sea.

From the quarter whence come the peals of summer thunder<sup>c</sup> and the lightning flash, thence expect the onset of the gale. When through the dark night shooting stars<sup>d</sup> fly thick and their track behind is white, expect a wind coming in the same path. If other shooting stars confront them and others from other quarters dart, then be on thy guard for winds from every quarter—winds, which beyond all else are hard to judge, and blow beyond man's power to predict.

But when from East and South the lightnings flash,<sup>e</sup> and again from the West and anon from the North, verily then the sailor on the sea fears to be caught at once by the waves beneath and the rain from heaven. For such lightnings herald rain. Often before the coming rain fleece-like clouds<sup>f</sup> appear or testines <sup>a</sup> (earthworms). Tame fowl <sup>b</sup> with father Chanticleer well preen their plumes and cluck aloud with voice like noise of water dripping upon water.

Ere now, too, the generations of crows <sup>c</sup> and tribes of jackdaws have been a sign of rain to come from Zeus, when they appear in flocks and screech like hawks. Crows, too, imitate with their note the heavy splash of clashing rain, or after twice croaking deeply they raise a loud whirring with frequent flapping of their wings, and ducks <sup>d</sup> of the homestead and jackdaws which haunt the roof seek cover under the eaves and clap their wings, or seaward flies the heron with shrill screams.

Slight not aught of these things when on thy guard for rain, and heed the warning, if beyond their wont the midges <sup>e</sup> sting and are fain for blood, or if on a misty night snuff gather on the nozzle of the lamp, <sup>f</sup> or if in winter's season the flame of the lamp now rise steadily and anon sparks fly fast from it, like light bubbles, or if on the light itself there dart quivering rays, or if in height of summer the island birds are borne in crowding companies. Be not heedless of the pot<sup>a</sup> or tripod on the fire, if many sparks encircle it, nor heedless when in the ashes of blazing coal<sup>b</sup> there gleam spots like millet seed, but scan those too when seeking signs of rain.

But if a misty cloud<sup>c</sup> be stretched along the base of a high hill, while the upper peaks shine clear, very bright will be the sky. Fair weather, too, shalt thou have, when by the sea-verge is seen a cloud low on the ground, never reaching a height, but penned there like a flat reef of rock.

Seek in calm for signs of storms, and in storm for signs of calm. Scan well the Manger,<sup>d</sup> whereby wheels the Crab, when first it is freed of every covering cloud. For its clearing marks the waning tempest.

bethink them of the roost,<sup>a</sup> full of voice. One would think them glad, seeing how they caw now in shrill screams, now with frequent flight around the foliage of the tree, now on the tree, whereon they roost, and anon they wheel and clap their wings. Cranes,<sup>b</sup> too, before a gentle calm will wing their way steadily onward in one track, all in a company, and in fair weather will be borne in no disordered flight.

But when the clear light from the stars is dimmed, though no thronging clouds veil, nor other darkness hide nor Moon obscure, but the stars on a sudden thus causelessly wax wan, hold that no more for sign of calm but look for storm. Foul weather, too, will come, when of the clouds some are stationary,<sup>c</sup> but others passing by and others following after.

Sure signs of storm are geese<sup>d</sup> hastening with many a cackle to their food, the nine-generation crow cawing at night,<sup>e</sup> the jackdaw chattering late, the chaffinch<sup>f</sup> piping in the dawn, waterfowl all fleeing inward from the sea,<sup>g</sup> the wren<sup>h</sup> or the robin retreating into hollow clefts, and tribes of jackdaws returning late to roost from dry feeding-grounds. bees <sup>a</sup> go not far afield to cull wax, but wheel hard by their honey and their stores, nor do cranes <sup>b</sup> on high in long lines wing their steady onward course, but wheel and double in their flight. Look, too, for foul weather, when in windless calm airy gossamers <sup>c</sup> are flying, and when the rays of the lamp are wan and flickering, or when in fair weather fire and torches <sup>d</sup> are hard to kindle. Why recount all the warning hints that come to men? The unsightly clotting of the ash <sup>e</sup> is sign of snow: the ring of spots like millet <sup>f</sup> seed around the blazing wick of the lamp betokens snow; but sign of hail <sup>g</sup> are live coals, when they outward brightly shine, but in their centre appears, as it were, a hazy mist within the glowing fire.

Nor are holm-oaks, <sup>h</sup> laden with acorns, and the dark mastich <sup>i</sup> untried. With frequent glance on every side the miller ever peers, anxious lest the summer slip from his hand. Holm-oaks with moderate crops of frequent acorns will tell of heavy storm to come. Pray that they may not be exceedingly heavy laden, but only that far from drought the cornfields flourish even as they.

Thrice <sup>a</sup> the mastich buds and thrice wax ripe its berries. Each crop in turn brings a sign for the sowing. For men divide the sowing season into three—early, middle, late. The first crop of mastich heralds the first of grain; the second the middle; the latest the last of all. The richest crop that the teaming mastich bears will hint of the wealthiest harvest from the plough: the meanest crop foretells scanty grain, and average mastich heralds average corn. Likewise the stalk of the squill <sup>b</sup> flowers thrice to give hint of corresponding harvest. All the hints the farmer marked in the mastich crop, the same he learns from the white blossom of the squill.

But when in autumn frequent swarms of wasps <sup>c</sup> crowd on every side, one can foretell the winter-storm to come even before the Pleiads are wester-

The reference is to the time when in the morning they are near the Western horizon, precisely as in Theocritus vii. 53 ἑσπερίοις Ἐρίφοις means when the Kids are in the West in the morning. The setting of the Pleiades marked the beginning of Winter; here early Winter comes before they set. The statements in the Calendars of late Greek and Roman writers have to be used with the greatest caution.

In seasonable flight of thronging cranes <sup>b</sup> rejoices the seasonable farmer: in untimely flight the untimely ploughman. For ever so the winters follow the cranes: early winters, when their flight is early and in flocks: when they fly late and not in flocks, but over a longer period in small bands, the later farming benefits by the delay of winter.

If oxen and sheep <sup>c</sup> after the heavy-laden Autumn dig the ground and stretch their heads to face the North wind, verily the Pleiads at their setting will bring a stormy winter. Pray that their digging be not excessive, for then is the winter exceedingly severe and a foe both to tree and tilth. the birds, when they come in moderate flocks with promise of a season of plenteous milk. For thus do we poor, changeful mortals win in divers ways our livelihood, and all are ready to mark the warnings at their feet and adopt them for the moment.

Sheep warn the shepherd of coming storm when they rush to pasture in haste beyond their wont, but some behind the flock, now rams, now lambs, sport by the way with butting horns, when some here, some there, they bound aloft, the sillier young with four feet off the ground, the horned elders with two, or when the shepherd moves an unwilling flock, though it be evening when he drives them to their pens, while ever and anon they pluck the grass, though urged by many a stone.

From oxen too the ploughman and the neat-herd learn of the stirring of the storm. When oxen lick <sup>a</sup> with their tongue around the hooves of their fore-feet or in their stalls stretch themselves on their right side,<sup>b</sup> the old ploughman expects the sowing to be delayed. When with ceaseless lowing the kine collect as they wend at eventide to their stalls, the heifers reluctant to leave the meadow pasture-land give warning that anon they will not feed in stormless weather. Not fair weather do the goats betide when greedy for prickly holm-oak, and the sows rage furiously over their bedding.<sup>c</sup>

When a solitary wolf<sup>a</sup> howls loud, or when, as if he sought for shelter, recking little of farmer men, he descends to the cultivated lands near to men to seek a lair there, expect a storm when the third dawn comes round. So, too, by the previous signs thou canst forecast the winds or storm or rain to come on the self-same day or on the morrow or it may be on the third morn.

Mice,<sup>b</sup> too, as sign of storm, whenever with louder squeaking than their wont they gambolled and seemed to dance in fair weather, were not unmarked by the weather-seers of old. Nor were dogs. The dog<sup>c</sup> with both his paws digs when he suspects the coming of a storm, and then too those mice turn prophets. And landward comes the crab, when the storm is about to burst.

Mice in the daytime toss straw and are fain to build a nest when Zeus shows signs of rain.

Make light of none of these warnings. Good rule it is to look for sign confirming sign. When two point the same way, forecast with hope; when three, with confidence. Thou canst always add the signs of the passing season, comparing whether at rising or at setting of a star the day dawn such as the calendar would herald. It would profit much to mark the last four days of the old and the first four of the new month.<sup>d</sup> They hold the terms of

I. THE LIFE OF LYCOPHRON

OUR authorities for the life of Lycophron are a notice in Suidas s.v. Λυκόφρων, and a Life by Tzetzes prefixed to his commentary (Westermann, Biogr. p. 142), and some scattered references in other authors. The information which these give us is of the scantiest kind, and in the matter of dates we have to depend on various inferences.

Lycophron was a native of Chalcis in Euboea; son of Socles (possibly the Socles of Athen. xi. 473 A) and the adoptive son of the historian Lycus of Rhegium, of whom Suidas s.v. Λύκος says: "Also called Butheras, of Rhegium, historian, father of Lycophron the tragedian; flourished in the time of the Diadochi and was plotted against by Demetrius of Phalerum. He wrote a history of Libya, and on Sicily."

The date of Lycophron's birth may be put about 330–325 B.C. His earlier years seem to have been spent in Chalcis and Athens, possibly also in Rhegium, and his literary activity was devoted to the writing of tragedies.

In those early years he naturally came in contact with Menedemus (died soon after 278 B.C.) of Eretria, founder of the Eretrian or Neo-Megarian School of Philosophy (Life in Diog. Laert. ii. chap. 17); cf. Diog. Laert. ii. 132. Menedemus was fond of entertaining and held symposia both of poets and musicians. Ἡσπάζετο δὲ καὶ Ἄρατον καὶ Λυκόφρονα τὸν τῆς τραγωδίας ποιητὴν καὶ τὸν Ῥόδιον Ἀνταγόραν (epic poet: some lines of his to Eros preserved in Diog. Laert. iv. 26 f.). To this period must belong the Menedemus of Lycophron, which was a satyric

(i.e. "When after a scanty meal the little cup circles among them moderately and for desert the studious guests have improving conversation").

Athen. ii. 55 D "Lycophron of Chalcis in a satyric drama which he wrote in mockery (ἐπι καταμωκῆσει) on Menedemus the philosopher, from whom was named the sect (αἵρεσις) of the Eretrics, making fun of the banquets of the philosophers says καὶ δημόκοινος . . . συμπότης" (see below). Athen. x. 419 f., after an amusing description from the Life of Menedemus by Antigonus of Carystus of the banquets of Menedemus, adds: "Lycophron of Chalcis, too, bears witness with regard to these, having written a satyric play Menedemus (γράφας σατύρους Μενέδημον), in which Silenus says to the satyrs :

παῖδες κρατίστου πατρὸς ἐξωλέστατοι, ἐγὼ μὲν ὑμῖν, ὡς ὄρατε, στρηνιῶ·
δεῖπνον γὰρ οὔτ' ἐν Καρίᾳ, μὰ τοὺς θεοὺς, οὔτ' ἐν Ῥόδῳ τοιοῦτον οὔτ' ἐν Λυδίᾳ κατέχω δεδειπνηκώς. "Ἀπολλὼν ὡς καλόν.

(fr. 1 Nauck)

(i.e. "Cursed children of most excellent father, I, as you see, wax riotous. For not in Caria, by the gods, nor in Rhodes, nor in Lydia, do I remember to have dined so well! Apollo! what a feast!"); and again :

ἀλλὰ κυλίκιον
ὑδαρὲς ὁ παῖς περιήγε τοῦ πεντωβόλου,

INTRODUCTION

(i.e. "But the boy carried round a watery cup of five-obol wine, slightly turned; and the accursed hangman lupine danced on abundantly—the boon-companion of poor men and the dining-room").

He goes on to say that discussions were carried on over their wine (ζητήσεις ἦσαν παρὰ πότον),

*τράγημα γὰρ
ὁ σωφρονιστῆς πᾶσιν ἐν μέσῳ λόγος.*

(fr. 3 Nauck)

(i.e. "For dessert improving conversation").

It is related, too, that their meetings were often so prolonged that

*ὁ τὴν ἔω καλῶν
κατέλαβεν ὄρνις, τοῖσι δ' οὐδέπω κόρος.*

(fr. 4 Nauck)

(i.e. "Chanticleer, calling the dawn, surprised them still unsatisfied").

It was inevitable that Lycophron should be attracted by the brilliant literary society then flourishing in Alexandria. Thither accordingly he went, at what date we do not precisely know. But we have seen that Suidas, in his notice of Lycus, mentions the enmity which existed between that historian and Demetrius of Phalerum. Demetrius apparently enjoyed great influence with Ptolemy I., whom he advised to put the crown of Egypt past the son of Berenice. That son came to the throne as Ptolemy II. Philadelphus in 285 B.C. on the abdication of his father, and, after the death of the latter in 283 B.C., he put Demetrius under ward μέχρι τι δόξει περὶ αὐτοῦ. Shortly afterwards Demetrius was bitten in his sleep by an asp and died (Diog. Laert. v. 78). The removal of his adoptive father's enemy would open the way for Lycophron to go to the court of Ptolemy, and we shall probably be sufficiently near the truth if we suppose that he went to Alexandria circ. 285–283 B.C.

Here Lycophron was entrusted with the arrangement of the Comic Poets in the royal library, and it was then doubtless that he wrote his treatise Περὶ κωμῶδίας: Athen.

How long Lycophron remained in Alexandria, or whether he died there, we have no knowledge. Nor do we know anything of the circumstances of his death beyond what we gather from Ovid, Ibis 531 f., who seems to imply that he was killed by an arrow :

Utque cothurnatum cecidisse Lycophrona narrant,

2. WORKS

The notice in Suidas s.v. Λυκόφρων after mentioning his parentage proceeds: "Grammarians and maker of tragedies. At any rate he is one of the seven who were called the Pleias. His tragedies are Aeolus, Andromeda, Aletes (Wanderer), Aeolides,<sup>a</sup> Elephenor, Heracles, Hiketæ (Suppliants), Hippolytus, Cassandreis, Laios, Marathonii, Nauplius, Oedipus α' β', Orphanus (Orphan), Pentheus, Pelopidae, Symmachi (Allies), Telegonus, Chrysippus. Of these the Nauplius is a revised version (διασκευή). He also wrote the play called Alexandra, the obscure poem (τὸ σκοτεινὸν ποίημα)."

The Πλειάς was the name given by the later Alexandrine scholars to the seven most eminent tragic poets of the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus. The list is variously given. Schol. A Hephaest. p. 140 Consbr. gives Homer the younger (son of Andromachus and Myro), Sositheus, Lycophron, Alexander (Aetolus), Philicus (Philiscus), Dionysiadès. Here some name is wanting. Choeroboscus, Hephaest. p. 236 Consbr., gives the last three as Aeantiades, Sosiphanes, Philicus, but mentions that for Aeantiades and Sosiphanes some give Dionysiadès (Strabo xiv. 675) and Euphronius.

According to Tzetzes in Lyc. pp. 262 and 270 (Müller) Lycophron wrote in all either 64 or 46 tragedies. The list in Suidas, apparently extracted from a more complete list, is in a roughly alphabetical order. It need only be noticed further that some of the titles suggest Lycophron's tendency to use the less familiar myths, while the Cassandreis apparently dealt with the fortunes of the people of Cassandreia = Potidaea (Strabo vii. 330) on the isthmus of Pallene, and was thus founded on contemporary history.

<sup>a</sup> Αἰθαλιδῆς O. Iahn, Philol. xxviii. 6.

INTRODUCTION

Besides the fragments of the Menedemus quoted above we have four lines from the Pelopidae preserved in J. Stobaeus, Floril. 119. 13 Λυκόφρονος ἐκ Πελοπιδῶν· ἀλλ' ἠνίκ' ἂν μὲν ἦ πρόσω τὸ καθανεῖν,

 "Αἰδῆς ποθεῖται τοῖς δεδυστυχηκόσιν·
 ὅταν δ' ἐφέρπη κῦμα λίσθιον βίου, τὸ ζῆν ποθοῦμεν· οὐ γὰρ ἔστ' αὐτοῦ κόρος.
 (fr. 5 Nauck)

While death is far away
 Sad hearts are fain to die ;
 But when the latest wave
 Of life draws nigh,
 We fain would live, for life
 Knows no satiety.

The date of the Alexandra has been the subject of much dispute.

It is argued, on the one hand, that it belongs to the early or Chalcis-Athens period of Lycophron's life because (1) it shows no trace of Attic or Sicilian comedy, while it is full of echoes of tragic, lyric, and iambic poets ; (2) it shows no special knowledge of Egyptian geography nor any trace of his special relation to the Ptolemaic court. Thus Alexandra 576 Triton = Nile, while in 848 Asbystes = Nile. Wilamowitz held that Callim. fr. 13 (from the Aitia i.) ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἀσβυστία· ὅλη τε Τρίτωνος ἐφ' ὕδασι Ἀσβύσταο is meant as a tacit correction of this. (But it is quite in Lycophron's manner to use either Triton or Asbystes indifferently to mean Libyan.) On these grounds it is argued that the Alexandra as a whole may be dated as early as 295 B.C.

As against this it is urged (1) that Lycophron would scarcely have been included in the Pleias, if on coming to Alexandria he had ceased to write tragedy. (2) The enormous number of tragedies ascribed to him implies a prolonged activity in that kind.

But two passages in the Alexandra cause special difficulty: vv. 1226-1280 and 1446-1450.

The first of these passages raised difficulties in the mind of the schol. Marc. (Theon?) v. 1226 f. ἐντεῦθεν περὶ Ῥωμαίων λέγει καὶ Λυκόφρωνος ἑτέρου νομοστέον εἶναι τὸ πόλημα, οὐ τοῦ γράψαντος τὴν τραγωδίαν· συνήθης γὰρ ὢν τῷ Φιλαδέλφῳ οὐκ ἂν περὶ Ῥωμαίων διελέγετο (cf. Tzetz. ad loc. περὶ Ῥωμαίων ἐντεῦθεν διαλαμβάνει. τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ τοῦ σχολίου γέλοια· φασὶ γὰρ Λυκόφρωνος ἑτέρου εἶναι τὸ πόλημα . . . διελέγετο), i.e. Lycophron at the court of the Ptolemies would not have referred to the Romans as holding "the sceptre and monarchy of earth and sea" (1229).

But apart from the position of Lycophron as a court poet, a further difficulty was raised by C. J. Fox (1749-1806), in his correspondence with Gilbert Wakefield (1756-1801). Fox pointed out that a Greek poet of Lycophron's time, i.e. before the First Punic War (264-241 B.C.), could not have referred to the power of Rome in the terms of 1226 ff. and 1446 ff. which also apparently refer to Rome.

R. P. Knight to Dr. Parr, Whitehall, Jan. 22: "Fox and I have been lately reading Lycophron, and having been both startled with the distinctness of some predictions of events which happened long after the age when he is supposed to have flourished, we have had some correspondence upon the subject, but without any other effect than increasing our perplexity. The Testimonium Veterum, published with Potter's edition, is strong in support of the authenticity of this poem, and of its being written by one of the Pleiades, as they are called; yet in v. 1226 et seq. there is a distinct prediction of the universality of the Roman Empire; and in v. 446, as distinct a one of the fall of the Macedonian monarchy μεθ' ἕκτην γενεάν (sic) from Alexander, who is clearly described. Perseus, indeed, was not the sixth king of Macedonia from Alexander, but, nevertheless, he was the sixth in the line of descent of his own family from that conqueror, which is more in point. Cannot you prove that Lycophron was a Jew or Atheist who conversed with some inspired persons of that nation? What a triumph would it be for Revelation! for, except the prophecies of Isaiah concerning Cyrus, there are none in the sacred volume half so unequivocal; and the merely human testimony (the only one which infidels will admit) in support of the prophecies of Isaiah, is weak indeed when compared with that in support of Lycophron" (Parr's Works vii. p. 304).

INTRODUCTION

Niebuhr<sup>a</sup> assumed that the Alexandra was the work of a later poet who wrote after the First Punic war. In general scholars have inclined to one or other theory: that the passages in question are later interpolations, or that the Alexandra as a whole is the work of a later poet.

The reference in 1435 ff. is exceedingly obscure. According to Wilamowitz the lines refer to Alexander the Great. The Argives who must bow themselves before him are the Persians, who are in 1442 designated by the word δμαιοι as brothers of Alexander;  $\varphi$  1446 is, according to Wilamowitz, Alexander. He translates μεθ' ἑκτην γένναν ἀσθαλων ἐμὸς as "mihi post sex generationes cognatus," and he reckons the six generations backwards from Cassandra thus: Cassandra—Priam—Laomedon—Ilos—Tros—Dardanus—Zeus, whose son was Perseus, ancestor of the Argeads and the Persians, Hdt. vii. 150. Hence he concludes that ἀσθαλων ἐμὸς must be either the Persian people generally, or a definite Persian. He himself decides for Artabazos, father of Barsine, whose son (Heracles) by Alexander was put to death by Polyperchon in 309 B. C. (L. 801 ff.).

Holzinger<sup>b</sup> takes the reference in 1435 ff. to be to Pyrrhus (αἰθων, 1439). The wolf of Galadra is Demetrius Poliorketes. The sons of Cassander, who as sons of Thessalonice are Argeads, were compelled to give up the throne of Macedonia to Demetrius. The blood-relation of Cassandra is Fabricius, who is the εἰς τις παλαιότης 1447. Holzinger takes μεθ' ἑκτην γένναν—most improbably—to mean “after six crops,” in reference to the six years' duration of the campaign of Pyrrhus in Italy. Holzinger puts the date of the Alexandra about 274 B.C.

William N. Bates in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology vi. (Boston, 1895) discusses “The Date of Lycophron” p. 75 f. This discussion appears to be entirely without value, but his conclusion may be quoted: Lycophron “was born between 325 and 320, wrote his Alexandra about 295, was appointed to arrange the comedies in the Alexandrian library in 285–284” (this is based on the assumption that the Alexandra was imitated in the βωμοὶς of Dosiades written 285–270 (Wilamowitz), 292–290 (Susemihl)); “about 280 he was flourishing as a tragic poet, and continued as such down to the date of his death, which must have occurred before the year 250, and probably shortly before the year 265.”

The problem of the Alexandra is discussed by P. Corssen, “Ist die Alexandra dem Tragiker Lykophron abzusprechen?” Rhein. Mus. lxxviii., 1913, pp. 321–335.

He agrees with Sudhaus that the Lion 1439 is Alexander the Great and that the Ἀργεῖοι 1443 = Πέρσαι (cf. Herodot. vii. 150); but he does not agree with him in identifying ἀθαλμῶν ἐμὸς 1446 with T. Quinctius Flamininus, who defeated Philip V. of Macedon at Cynoscephalae in 197 B.C.

To that identification he objects that (1) σκύλων ἀπαρχάς κτλ. 1450 would in that case be meaningless, as the Romans got no immediate profit from the war with Philip; (2) the victory of Flamininus, in alliance with the Achaeans and actively supported by the Aetolians, the fruits of which fell to the Greeks, the ancient enemies of Troy, could in no sense be regarded as a revenge for the destruction of Troy.

Corssen's own view is briefly as follows: The struggle is between Asia and Europe, which have nothing in common (1283 f.). In this struggle the two great events are the destruction of Troy by Agamemnon and the expedition of Xerxes against Greece. According to Herodotus it was in the destruction of Troy that the Persians found the ground of their hostility to Greece. Accordingly, to the sack of Troy by Agamemnon 1369 ff. corresponds the expedition of Xerxes 1412 ff. The long struggle between Asia and Europe is ended by Alexander the Great 1439 ff., who as successor to Agamemnon leads the hosts of Europe against Asia.

The leading idea in the poet's mind is not of "reconciliation" either between Rome and Macedon or between Rome and Greece—but of the equating justice of Fate. What Troy lost in the East is balanced by the success of Troy's descendants—the Romans—in the West, and this is expressed in 1226 ff.

Here arises the difficulty of the words γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης σκῆπτρα καὶ μοναρχίαν.

Now if by μοναρχία we understand world-dominion, then that could not be predicated of the Romans even after the battle of Cynoscephalae, in view of the fact that the power of Syria and Egypt was still unshaken. World-dominion could not be predicated before the battle of Pydna in 168 B.C.

The poet of the Alexandra knows nothing of the extent of the Roman dominion as at the beginning of the second century B.C. The limits of the Roman kingdom known to him must be assumed to coincide with the limits of the kingdom of Aeneas as described in 1238 ff., together with the extensions made through the struggle of the Romans with the sixth successor of Alexander the Great (1450).

From the conquest of the Persians by Alexander the poet passes to Pyrrhus and the Romans.

The Lion of 1440 is clearly a definite person and, as the ancient scholia recognized, must be Alexander the Great, who is a Thesprotian, i.e. an Epeirote, on his mother's side, and a Chalastræan, i.e. a Macedonian, (Strabo vii. 330. 20) on the father's side, and is moreover a descendant of Aeacus and Dardanus (1440) through his mother: ἡ δὲ Ὀλυμπιάς ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ εἰς Πύρρον τὸν Ἀχιλλέως καὶ Ἐλενον τὸν Πριάμου τὸ γένος τὸ ἀνέκαθεν ἀνέφερεν, ὡς φησι Θεόπομπος καὶ Πύρανδρος. ἀναφέρεται δὲ ὁ Πύρρος εἰς Αἰακόν, ὁ δὲ Ἐλενος εἰς Δάρδανον (schol. Lycophr.).

LYCOPHRON

Now if the Lion is Alexander, the Wolf of Galadra (a Macedonian town, according to Steph. Byz.) must be dicinguishd from him. The explanation of the expression is no longer apparent, but the Wolf must embody the whole nation which, finally, was conquered by the Romans.

The six generations must be represented by the kings of Macedon. Including Alexander, we get Pyrrhus in the sixth place, thus : Alexander, died 323 ; Philip Arrhidaeus, died 317 ; Cassander, died 297 ; his three sons 297-295 ; Demetrius Poliorcetes 294-288 ; Pyrrhus. The fact that Pyrrhus immediately lost the throne of Macedon does not prevent the poet from seeing in him the heir of Alexander who, turning against the descendants of the Trojans, renews the old struggle. The "wrestler" (1447) is, like the Wolf of Galadra, not an individual but the whole people.

When the poet says that the Romans came into collision with Pyrrhus by sea and by land, that is not in the strict sense true. But Pyrrhus suffered from Rome's allies, the Carthaginians, a heavy defeat at sea, which benefited Rome as well, and the Romans themselves, through the Greek towns of South Italy, won importance at sea, so that the expression γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης σκῆπτρα καὶ μοναρχίαν referring to the successes won in the Tarentine War, is not entirely without justification. But the term μοναρχία is to be understood in the light of the historical idea which underlies the whole poem ; i.e. the Persians handed over the sceptre of their old dominion, for which Asia and Europe had fought from of old, to the Wolf of Galadra. Pyrrhus loses the sceptre to the Romans, and thus the old dominion, which was taken from Priam by Agamemnon, reverts again to the Trojans.

With Pyrrhus the Romans made neither peace nor treaty. Pyrrhus gave up the struggle and went back home. But before Tarentum fell, the astute Ptolemy, rightly recognizing the importance of the Roman victory, hastened to conclude an alliance with them. The Romans on their side sent an embassy in 273 B.C. to Alexandria, which was honoured by Ptolemy with valuable gifts, which, however, the ambassador handed over to the state. (Dio Cassius fr. 41, Livy, Perioch. xiv.) The personal object to be supplied with εἰς διαλλαγὰς μολῶν is, accordingly, not the defeated party. After his victory the Roman will conclude agreements and be celebrated as the most honourable friend.

INTRODUCTION

On this interpretation the prophecies of Cassandra do not go beyond the poet's own time, and his glorification of the Romans does not stand in contradiction to the policy of his royal master.

Thus the statement of Suidas that the author of the Alexandra was Lycophron the tragic poet is confirmed. Nor is there good ground for doubting his statement that Lycophron of Chalcis, son of Socles, was adopted by Lycus of Rhegium. Beloch, holding that Suidas has confused two different Lycophrons—(1) of Chalcis, son of Socles, author of the Alexandra, (2) son of the historian Lycus of Rhegium, the tragic poet at the Court of Ptolemy Philadelphus—found support for this theory (1) in Suidas s.v. Λύκος where Lycus is called the father of the tragic Lycophron, (2) in the 'Tzetzes' Life where it is said :
ὁ Λυκόφρων οὕτως τῷ μὲν γένει Χαλκιδεὺς ἦν υἱὸς Σωκλέους ἢ Λύκου τοῦ ἱστοριογράφου κατὰ τινάς.

This, Corsen says, is merely a wilful perversion of the tradition, induced by the surprise which the Scholiast expresses that a court poet of Philadelphus should have expressed himself in praise of the Romans. But just this surprise shows what the tradition was.

To the objection that, if the author of the Alexandra were the adoptive son of Lycus, he would not have passed over the works of his adoptive father and confined himself exclusively to Timæus, Corsen replies by an endeavour to show that in his account of the fortunes of Diomedes and his companions (615 ff.) Lycophron does in fact follow Lycus in opposition to Timæus.

Corsen's conclusion is that external evidence and the results of an analysis of the poem agree excellently, and thereby the abstruse poem of Lycophron obtains the importance of a historical document which strikingly reflects the great impression which the victory of the Roman arms over the Hellenistic king made upon his contemporaries.

3. MANUSCRIPTS

The critical recension of E. Scheer (Berlin, 1881) is based on the following mss. :

Class I.—A = Marcianus 476 (Venetus lxx. 3). This, which is by far the best ms. of Lycophron, belongs to the eleventh century and bears to have been written by one Nicetas a deacon. After the Argument there is a marginal note : κάνταῦθα συνήθροισα λέξικου λέξεις | νικήτας οὐλάχιστος τῶν διακόνων. Scheer, Rhein. Mus. xxxiv., identified this Nicetas with the distinguished bishop of Serrhai (Seres) in the eleventh century.

The ms. extends to sixty-five folia, sixty-two of which are written upon. Foll. 2–30<sup>v</sup> contain Aratus with the scholia; fol. 31<sup>r</sup> to the middle of fol. 62 contain Lycophron's Alexandra with scholia and two paraphrases—an older (P) and a more recent (p).

V = Vaticanus 1307. This is a copy of a copy (X) of A and it is occasionally useful as A has suffered alteration by two later hands A<sup>2</sup>, A<sup>3</sup>, subsequent to the time when the copy (X) was made. V itself has suffered similar interpolation, but it is not often that A and V have suffered in the same passage.

B = Coislinianus 345 belonging to the tenth century. It is so called as belonging to the collection of Henri Charles du Cambout de Coislin (1664–1732), Bishop of Metz, now in the Bibl. Nat., Paris. This MS. contains a number of Lexica and amongst them from p. 225 to p. 253 λέξεις ἀλεξάνδρας καὶ ὑπόθεσις.

At the end is τέλος σὺν θεῶ τοῦ λεξικοῦ λυκόφρονος ?

The reason of it being included among Lexica is that the lines are broken up into sections to each of which is appended the interpretation of paraphrase P. Thus v. 1 488

“The ms.,” says Scheer, “which is most elegantly written, has in fol. 225<sup>r</sup> 35 lines, of which 7 contain the Argument μαντευομένην . . . ἅπαντα ; the other pages have 36 lines each, except the last, which has 27 lines. The lemmata are marked off from the paraphrase by two points usually and small spaces : rarely by a colon, very rarely by a comma. Much more often the scribe has forgotten to distinguish the lemmata from the paraphrase ; at other times he has omitted the paraphrase or the lemma or both : finally he has repeatedly confused the sequence of the sections of lines. The ms. is so full of errors that I have seen no ms. of Lycophron—except Par. 2840—so corrupt.”

Class II.—C=Parisinus 2723. The subscription states that the ms. was finished in June 1282. Foll. 1-76 contain the Alexandra of Lycophron with the commentary of Isaac Tzetzes. The colour of the ink shows that the scribe took many various readings from the ms. which he was copying and afterwards wrote between the lines and in the margin and even inserted in the text (C<sup>2</sup>) other readings from a second ms., from which also he inserted interlinear scholia, the greater part of which was not derived from the commentary of Tzetzes. There are also a few corrections by a third hand (C<sup>3</sup>).

D=Parisinus 2403, thirteenth century. The ms. consists of 308 folia, of which foll. 58-99 contain the Alexandra with the commentary of Tzetzes. There are many interlinear scholia mostly from the commentary of Tzetzes, also variae lectiones mostly inserted by the original copyist, very few added later (D<sup>2</sup>).

E=Palatinus graecus 218, fourteenth century. Foll. 9-65 contain the Alexandra with the commentary of Tzetzes and many variae lectiones copied by the scribe along with the text and occasional corrections by another hand (E<sup>2</sup>).

LYCOPHRON

4. THE PARAPHRASES

We have two paraphrases of the Alexandra :

P, the older, composed by some Byzantine grammarian and based on an ancient body of scholia, is best preserved in B, on which, accordingly, Scheer bases his recension, using as subsidiary aids A and Vaticanus 117, a fourteenth century ms. containing the Alexandra with the commentary of Tzetzes (foll. 30-113), both of which give P in a less perfect form.

p, a later paraphrase of uncertain date based upon P. Scheer's recension is based on A with the subsidiary aid of V.

5. THE SCHOLIA

The scholia of Lycophron are very excellent and are probably ultimately based on the commentary of Theon, son of Artemidorus, a grammarian of the time of Augustus and Tiberius, who wrote commentaries on Theocritus, Apollonius, Callimachus, Nicander, and Lycophron, as well as on some of the older classical poets. Cf. Steph. Byz. s.v. Κύτινα πόλις Θεσσαλίας, ὡς Θέων ἐν ὑπομνήματι Λυκόφρονος. So id. s.v. Αἰνεία . . . Θέων ὑπομνηματίζων τὸν Λυκόφρονα.

The ancient scholia are best represented by Marcianus 476; also Vaticanus 1307—a grandchild as we have seen of Marcianus 476—and Neopolitanus, Bibl. Nat. ii. D 4, a thirteenth-century ms. wrongly inscribed Ἰσαακίου τοῦ Τζέτζου σχόλια εἰς Λυκόφρονα, the scholia being in the main the ancient scholia, only some gaps due to injury to the original ms. having been filled up with the scholia of Tzetzes in the fifteenth century.

In addition to the ancient scholia we have further the commentary of Tzetzes (twelfth century): εἰς τὸν Λυκόφρονα σχόλια Ἰσαακίου γραμματικοῦ τοῦ Τζέτζου.

This commentary is in all mss. ascribed to Isaac Tzetzes; so also in John Tzetzes' commentary on the Works and Days of Hesiod (p. 10 Gaisford). But there is extant a letter in Parisinus 2565 Bibl. Reg. (No. xx.) of

INTRODUCTION

John Tzetzes to one Basilius, who had apparently, after Isaac's death, inquired of John whether it were true that he and not Isaac was the real author of the commentary on Lycophron. The letter runs thus: "To the First Secretary of the Patriarch (of Constantinople), Basilius of Achrida (town on lake of same name near Monastir) who had found in the title of John Tzetzes on Lycophron the name of Isaac Tzetzes. Pheidias, the famous sculptor, doing a favour by the law of friendship to Agoracritus, a painter by profession, but an unskilful one, having with great sculptural skill made the image of Zeus and Nemesis at Rhâmnus, ascribed it to him, inscribing on it ΑΓΟΡΑΚΡΙΤΟΥ ΠΑΡΙΟΥ, and by means of that inscription made up to him for his lack of skill. If, then, Pheidias by the law of friendship did not hesitate in a matter of the highest moment to do a favour to a man unskilful in his art, am I to be behind him in regard to my brother, a carpenter, in Pindar's phrase, of deft hymns and incomparably dearer to me than Agoracritus was to Pheidias, inasmuch as brotherhood is a more compelling bond of affection than friendship? In this spirit both Pheidias and I ordered our inscriptions. But neither Pheidias of old suffered, nor has Tzetzes now suffered, from mental derangement or lethargy so as to reach such a pitch of madness as to forget his own name as some have suspected." So, too, in Chil. ix. 298 John Tzetzes refers to the commentary as his own work: ἐν δὲ τοῖς εἰς Λυκόφρονα ἐμοὶ ἐξηγηθεῖσι καὶ περὶ τούτου ἔγραψα τότε τοῦ Ζωῦλλου.

Scheer is of opinion that the commentary was in the first place composed by John Tzetzes, who handed it over for revision and publication to his brother Isaac, who for his trouble received the credit of authorship. This would account for the numerous inconsistencies and contradictions of the commentary. Collaboration is implied by the words: οὕτως ἡμῖν τοῖς Τζετζίοις [τ. Τζ. is lacking in a (Par. 2723)] δοκεῖ ἔχειν (Tzet. ad Lycophr. 17). Moreover, Scheer points out that in Tzet. Lycophr. 1226 occur the words Ἰωάννης δὲ ὁ φιλόπουνός φησιν εἶναι †βαίου. This had been taken to mean Ἰωάννης Φιλόπουνος, a proper name. But Scheer takes these words to refer to John Tzetzes, and he points out that these words occur only in Parisinus 2723 (a) which may be taken to represent the commentary as first published by Isaac, while they have disappeared in the mss. which represent subsequent revisions by John, of which there were several.

The chief mss. which contain the Tzetzes commentary are classified thus :

Class I. — a = Parisinus 2723, representing the commentary as originally published by Isaac Tzetzes.

Class II.—Representing revisions by John Tzetzes, and including: Parisinus 2403; Vaticanus 1306; Palatinus 18; Ambrosianus 222 (this last representing the final recension by John Tzetzes).

The commentary of Tzetzes is based on a corpus of scholia similar to that contained in the Marcianus, with additions from other sources (discussed by Scheer ii. pp. xiv. ff.).

And the centipede fair-faced stork-hued daughters of Phalacra<sup>b</sup> smote maiden-slaying Thetis<sup>c</sup> with their blades, over Calydnae<sup>d</sup> showing their white wings, their stern-ornaments, their sails outspread by the northern blasts of flaming stormwind: then Alexandra<sup>e</sup> opened her inspired Bacchic lips on the high Hill of Doom<sup>f</sup> that was founded by the wandering cow and thus began to speak:

Alas! hapless nurse<sup>g</sup> of mine burnt even aforetime by the warlike pineships of the lion<sup>h</sup> that was begotten in three evenings, whom of old Triton's hound of jagged teeth devoured with his jaws. But he, a living carver of the monster's liver, seething in steam of cauldron on a flameless hearth, shed to ground the bristles of his head; he the slayer of his children,<sup>i</sup> the destroyer of my fatherland; who smote his second mother<sup>j</sup> invulnerable with grievous shaft upon the breast; who, too, in the midst of the race-course seized in his arms the body of his wrestler

<sup>h</sup> Heracles. For his birth cf. Apollod. ii. 61 Ζεύς . . . τὴν μίαν τριπλασιάσας νύκτα. When Laomedon refused to pay Poseidon and Apollo for building the walls of Troy, a sea-monster appeared to which an oracle required that Hesione, daughter of Laomedon, should be exposed. Heracles entered the belly of the monster (Triton's hound) and cut its inside to pieces. Laomedon had promised to give Heracles the horses of Tros as a reward for slaying the monster and when he broke his word, Heracles burnt Troy.

<sup>d</sup> Iphigeneia became priestess of Artemis Taurica in the Crimea, where she had to sacrifice Greeks who came there.

And he<sup>j</sup> lamenting shall pace the Scythian land for some five years yearning for his bride.<sup>k</sup> And they,<sup>l</sup> beside the altar of the primal prophet, Cronus, who devours the callow young with their mother,<sup>m</sup> binding themselves by the yoke of a second oath,<sup>n</sup> shall take in their arms the strong oar, invoking him who saved them in their former woes, even <sup>m</sup> Hom. Il. ii. 308 ff. At the altar of Zeus in Aulis a snake devoured a sparrow with her brood of eight. Calchas interprets the omen to mean that the war against Troy will last nine years, and that the city will be taken in the tenth.

<sup>n</sup> The earlier oath was taken by the suitors of Helen, who swore to her father, Tyndareus, to support the successful suitor.

Bacchus, the Overthrower, to whom, the bull-god, one day in the shrine beside the cavern of Delphinus the Gainful god, the lord <sup>a</sup> of a thousand ships, a city-sacking host, shall make secret sacrifice. And in unlooked-for requital of his offerings the god of Phigaleia, the lusty Torch-god, <sup>b</sup> shall stay the lion <sup>c</sup> from his banquet, entangling his foot in withes, so that he destroy not utterly the cornfield of men, nor lay it waste with tooth and devouring jaws.

Long since I see the coil of trailing woes dragging in the brine and hissing against my fatherland dread threats and fiery ruin.

Would that in sea-girt Issa <sup>d</sup> Cadmus <sup>e</sup> had never begotten thee to be the guide of the foemen, fourth <sup>f</sup> in descent from unhappy Atlas, even thee, Prylis, who didst help to overthrow thine own kindred, <sup>g</sup> prophet most sure of best fortune <sup>h</sup>! And would that my father <sup>i</sup> had not spurned the nightly terrors of the oracles of Aesacus and that for the sake of my fatherland he had made away with the two in one doom, ashing their bodies with Lemnian fire. <sup>j</sup> So had not such a flood of woes overwhelmed the land.

That woe, O my poor heart, that woe shall wound thee as a crowning sorrow, when the dusky, sworded, bright-eyed eagle<sup>a</sup> shall rage, with his wings marking out the land—the track traced by banded crooked steps—and, crying with his mouth his dissonant and chilly cry, shall carry aloft the dearest nursling<sup>b</sup> of all thy brothers, dearest to thee and to his sire the Lord of Ptoön,<sup>c</sup> and, bloodying his body with talon and beak, shall stain with gore the land, both swamp and plain, a ploughman cleaving a smooth furrow in the earth. endure to do upon his body a female robe,<sup>a</sup> handling the noisy shuttle at the loom, and shall be the last to set his foot in the land of the foe, cowering, O brother,<sup>b</sup> even in his sleep before thy spear.

O Fate, what a pillar of our house shalt thou destroy, withdrawing her mainstay from my unhappy fatherland! But not with impunity, not without bitter toil and sorrow shall the pirate Dorian host laugh exulting in the doom of the fallen; but by the sterns running life's last lap shall they be burnt<sup>c</sup> along with the ships of pine, calling full often to Zeus the Lord of Flight to ward off bitter fate from them who perish. In that day nor trench nor defence of naval station nor stake-terraced palisade nor cornice shall avail nor battlements. But, like bees, confused with smoke and rush of flame and hurling of brands, many a diver shall leap from deck to sternpeak and prowpeak and benched seats and stain with blood the alien dust.

And many chieftains, and many that bore away the choicest of the spoils won by Hellas and gloried in their birth, shall thy mighty hands destroy, filled full with blood and eager for battle. But not the less sorrow shall I bear, bewailing, yea, all my life long, thy burial. For pitiful, pitiful shall that day be for mine eyes and crown of all my woes that Time, wheeling the moon's orb, shall be said to bring to pass.

<sup>a</sup> Candaon here = Hephaestus, who gave the sword to Peleus, he to Neoptolemus. This seems to refer the lines to the sacrifice of Polyxena. Otherwise it would be natural to refer ἦν to Iphigeneia. ὄρκιον σχάσας: cf. * Acamas, son of Theseus. Theseus was son of Aegeus (really of Poseidon) and Aethra, daughter of Pittheus of Troezen. Aegeus hid his sword and shoes under a rock to serve as tokens by which their son might make himself known to his father when he grew up. Before the Trojan war Acamas went to Troy with Diomedes to demand back Helen. Here, by Laodice, daughter of Priam, he had a son Munitus who was reared by his grandmother Aethra, who was then in Troy in attendance on Helen. When Troy was taken, Aethra gave up Munitus to Acamas, while Laodice was swallowed by the earth near the tomb of Ilus. Munitus afterwards died by the bite of a snake in Thrace.

stung by the ravages of the gluttonous sea-monster, gave to mariners to expose the three daughters of Phoenodamas that they should be devoured by ravenous wild beasts, there far off where they came to the land of the Laestrygonians in the West, where dwells always abundant desolation. And those daughters in their turn built a great shrine for the Zerynthian <sup>a</sup> mother of the wrestler, <sup>b</sup> as a gift to the goddess, for as much as they had escaped from doom and lonely dwelling. Of these one <sup>c</sup> the river Crimisus, in the likeness of a dog, took to be his bride: and she to the half-beast god bears a noble whelp, <sup>d</sup> settler and founder of three places. <sup>e</sup> That whelp shall guide the bastard <sup>f</sup> scion of Anchises and bring him to the farthest bounds of the three-necked island, <sup>g</sup> voyaging from Dardanian places. And thou alone shalt groan for long, bewailing and lamenting unceasingly the unhappy overthrow of her towers. And all thy people, clad in the sable garb of the suppliant, squalid and unkempt, shall drag out a sorrowful life, and the unshorn hair of their heads shall deck their backs, keeping the memory of ancient woes. <sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> In connexion with Heracles and his carrying off of the oxen of Geryon, legend told that Heracles, seeing a seer (here called Calchas) sitting under a fig-tree, asked him how many figs were on the tree. "Ten bushels and one fig," said the seer. When Heracles vainly tried to put the odd fig into the tenth bushel, the seer mocked him and Heracles killed him with his fist.

And calling on my master and husband,<sup>e</sup> who hears no more, I shall follow his track on wings of the wind. But a whelp,<sup>f</sup> seeking vengeance for his father's blood, shall with his own hand plunge his sword in the entrails of the viper, with evil healing the evil pollution of his race.

So many are the woes, hard to bear, which they shall suffer who are to lay waste my fatherland.

For what has the unhappy mother<sup>e</sup> of Prometheus in common with the nurse<sup>f</sup> of Sarpedon? Whom the sea<sup>g</sup> of Helle and the Clashing Rocks and Salmydessus and the inhospitable<sup>h</sup> wave, neighbour to the Scythians, sunder with strong cliffs and Tanais<sup>i</sup> divides with his streams—Tanais who, undefiled,<sup>j</sup> cleaves the middle of the lake<sup>k</sup> which is most dear to Maeotian men who mourn their chilblained feet.

My curse, first, upon the Carnite<sup>l</sup> sailor hounds! the merchant wolves who carried off from Lerne the ox-eyed girl, the bull-maiden, to bring to the lord of Memphis a fatal bride, and raised the beacon of hatred for the two continents. For afterwards the Curetes,<sup>m</sup> Idaean boars, seeking to avenge the <sup>l</sup> The quarrel between Asia and Europe (Herod. i. 1 ff.) began with the carrying off of Io, daughter of Inachus king of Argos (Lerne), by the Phoenicians (Carna or Carnos is the port of Arados, Strabo 753). Io was turned into a cow by Zeus, hence "bull-maiden." She became wife of Telegonus, king of Egypt (Apollod. ii. 9), who is here "lord of Memphis"; or, if Io is here equated with Isis, the lord of Memphis will be Osiris.

<sup>m</sup> The Cretans (Curetes) carried off Europa, daughter of Phoenix, from Phoenicia (Sarapta or Sarepta, town on coast of Phoenicia) to become wife of Asterus, king of Crete. The "bull-formed vessel" rationalizes the myth that Zeus in form of a bull carried Europa to Crete to become his bride.

<sup>a</sup> The Cretans sent an army to the Troad under Teucer and Scamandrus, who received an oracle bidding them settle "wherever the earth-born (γηγενεῖς) should attack them." This happened at Hamaxitos, where the "earth-born" proved to be a plague of field-mice which devoured the leathern parts of their armour. So they abode there (Strabo 604). Arisba, daughter of Teucer, became wife of Dardanus, and thus ancestress of Cassandra.

And second<sup>c</sup> they sent the Atracian<sup>d</sup> wolves to steal for their leader of the single sandal<sup>e</sup> the fleece<sup>f</sup> that was protected by the watching dragon's ward. He came to Libyan Cytaea<sup>g</sup> and put to sleep with simples that four-nostrilled snake, and handled the curved plough of the fire-breathing bulls,<sup>h</sup> and had his own body cut to pieces in a caldron<sup>i</sup> and, not joyfully, seized the hide of the ram. Yet the mother<sup>a</sup> of Epimetheus shall not yield, but in return for all shall send a single giant<sup>b</sup> of the seed of Perseus, who shall walk over the sea on foot and sail over the earth,<sup>c</sup> smiting the dry land with the oar. And the shrines of Laphria Mamerse<sup>d</sup> shall be consumed with fire together with their defence of wooden walls,<sup>e</sup> and shall blame for their hurt the prater of oracles, the false prophesying lackey<sup>f</sup> of Pluto. By his unapproachable host every fruit-bearing oak and wild tree flourishing on the mountain shall be devoured, stripping off its double covering of bark,<sup>g</sup> and every flowing torrent shall be dried up,<sup>h</sup> as they slake with open mouth their black thirst. And they shall raise overhead clouds of arrows hurtling from afar, whose shadow shall obscure the sun, like a Cimmerian darkness<sup>i</sup> dimming the sun. And blooming for a brief space, as a Locrian rose,<sup>j</sup> and burning all things like withered ear of corn, he shall in his turn taste of homeward flight<sup>k</sup>, glancing fearfully towards the oaken bulwark hard at hand, even as a girl in the dusky twilight frightened by a brazen sword.

And many contests and slaughters in between shall solve the struggles of men, contending for dread empire, now on land, now on the plough-turned backs of earth, until a tawny lion<sup>k</sup>—sprung from Aeacus and from Dardanus, Thesprotian at once and Chalastræan—shall lull to rest the grievous tumult, and, overturning on its face all the house of his kindred, shall compel the chiefs of the Argives to cower and fawn upon the wolf-leader of Galadra, and to hand over the sceptre of the ancient monarchy. With him, after six generations, my kinsman, an unique wrestler, shall join battle by sea and land and come to terms, and shall be celebrated among his friends as most excellent, when he has received the first fruits of the spear-won spoils.

Why, unhappy, do I call to the unheeding rocks, to the deaf wave, and to the awful glades, twanging the idle noise of my lips? For Lepsieus<sup>a</sup> has taken credit from me, daubing with rumour of falsity my words and the true prophetic wisdom of my oracles, for that he was robbed of the bridal which he sought to win.<sup>b</sup> Yet will he make my oracles true.  Polysperchon (Polyperchon), one of the generals of Alexander the Great, who in 319 B.C. was nominated by Antipater as his successor in Macedonia (in preference to his own son Cassander). In 316 he was driven from his kingdom by Cassander. In 315 Antigonus appointed him commander of the Peloponnesus and Greece was declared free. A peace was concluded in 311 by which Greece fell to Cassander, while Polyperchon was confined to some towns in Peloponnesus. Later he was induced by Antigonus to support the claim to the throne of Macedonia of Heracles, s. of Alexander and Barsine. He accordingly invaded Macedonia but accepted the proposal of Cassander to divide the kingdom of Macedonia, with an independent army and dominion in Peloponnesus. Thereupon he assassinated Heracles (309 B.C.). He is the "Tymphaean dragon" of I. 801

INDEX

- Polyxo, mt. of Actorion, C. vi. 78
- Pontus Euxeinos: the expression κακόξεινος κλυδών, L. 1286, refers to the old name of the Black Sea, πόντος άξεινος. The name is said to have been changed to εΰξεινος either after the voyage of the Argonauts, or after Heracles' expedition against the Amazons or after the foundation of the Milesian colonies. Pind. P. iv. 203, has ἐπ' Ἀξεινού στόμα (he is speaking of the Argonauts), but N. iv. 49 Εΰξεινω πελάγει
- Porceus, one of the two snakes (Porceus and Chariboea) which came from Calydnae and killed Laocoön and one of his two sons. The story was told by Arctinus in his Iliupersis, L. 347
- Poseidon, C. iii. 50, iv. 101, 271, vi. 98, helps Apollo to build walls of Troy, L. 522, 617; carries off Pelops, L. 157; destroys Locrian Aias, L. 390 ff.; f. of Proteus, L. 125; Cycnus, L. 237; Theseus, L. 1324; cult-names, Aegaeon, L. 135; Amoebeus, L. 617; Amphibaeus, L. 749; Enipeus, L. 722; Hippegetes, L. 767; Melanthus, L. 767; Naumedon, L. 157; Prophantus, L. 522; Phemius, L. 1324; Lord of Cromna, L. 522
- Poseidon, the stars of, A. 756. The scholiast's interpretation seems to be correct: "The stars of Poseidon are those which show forth storms and fair weather; the stars of Zeus are those which indicate weather suitable for agriculture." Cf. Avien. 1377 ff.: "Hic est fons, unde et deduxit tempora lunae Navita cum longum facili rate curreret aequor, Et cum ruris amans telluri farra parenti Crederet; ingenti petat haec indagine semper Seu qui vela salo, seu qui dat semina terrae"
- Poseidon, Cape of Poseidon near Poseidonia (Paestum). L. 722
- Potamus, Flumen, The River, S. constellation, A. 358, 589, 600, 624, 728; also called Eridanus,
- A. 360. Cicero calls it Eridanus ("Eridanum cernes . . . funestum magnis cum viribus amnem") and adopts the legend that it represents the tears of Phaëthon's sisters; Germanicus, 361, calls it Amnis and follows the same legend; Avienus, 780, calls it Flumen but refers to the Ausonians of old who call it Eridanus and to the Phaëthon legend.
- Practis, unknown place in Epirus. Some take it to mean Acrocercaunium. Holzinger thinks Practis = avenger = Erinys and that Elephenor built a shrine to her, beside which he built his city
